INTRODUCTION

DEVOTION to the Sacred Heart of Jesus today ranks among the most appealing devotions in the liturgy. Its widespread popularity among the faithful, as well as the transcendent dignity of its object, gives to this devotion a place of high honor among the numerous devotions which the Spirit of God has raised up and fostered in the bosom of Holy Mother Church. Yet, it is a devotion of comparatively recent origin. Not until late in the seventeenth century did the Devotion to the Sacred Heart become firmly established in the Church. At that period God sent a holy priest, St. John Eudes, to be the Father, the Doctor and the Apostle of this sweet devotion and to be the Author of the liturgical worship of the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary.<sup>(1)</sup> Subsequently, he chose a holy Visitation nun, St. Margaret Mary Alacoque, to be the instrument in the hands of Divine Providence for the world-wide diffusion of this devotion and for the establishment in the universal Church of the Feast of the Sacred Heart. Today, devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus flourishes everywhere. Millions of Catholics find strength and comfort in its practice. The Church bestows rich blessings on all who participate therein and day by day more and more souls are drawn to share in the exercise of this beautiful and consoling devotion.

The book which is here presented in English dress was written in French by that great servant of God, St. John Eudes, to whose zeal and holiness and learning we owe the origins of the public worship of the Sacred Heart, and I deem it a high privilege to have the honor of introducing it to the reader.

(I). Pope Leo X111, in declaring the heroism of the virtues of Father Eudes by the Papal Decree (Jan. 6, 1903) which proclaimed him "Venerable," bestowed upon him the title of Doctor liturgici cultus SS. Cordium Jesu et Mariae," and Pope Pius X, in the Decree of Beatification (April 25) 1909) pronounced Father Eudes "Hujus suavissimae religionis, tam Pater . . . tam Doctor . . . tam denique Apostolus."

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

The task of rendering into lucid and idiomatic English the rich prose of St. John Eudes without sacrificing either the simplicity of his language, the peculiar flavor of his seventeenth-century French, or the unction of his literary style presents a problem before which any translator might reasonably hesitate.

Dom Richard Flower, however, has courageously faced and overcome the difficulties of his task. His translation is smooth and easy, unencumbered by such obvious gallicisms as mar many translations, too hurriedly made, of notable French works. At the same time his choice of words remains as faithful to the letter of his original as is compatible with clear and correct English.

The rhythmical and rimed translations of the Sequence of the Mass in honor of the Sacred Heart and the Hymns of the Divine Office (printed at the end of this book) have been done with grace and skill. They truly preserve and reflect the spirit of St. John Eudes' strong but sensitive Latin poetry.

Throughout the long history of Christian worship, the Holy Ghost has enkindled in the hearts of the faithful many beautiful forms of piety and devotion. Each one of them, in its own peculiar way, opens up fresh vistas into "the depth of the riches of the wisdom and of the knowledge of God."<sup>(2)</sup> Each taps fresh sources of spiritual nourishment within the boundless treasure of grace and light and love stored up for us in the mysteries of religion.

Every new insight into the dealings of God with man, every new vision of His "incomprehensible judgments," (3) every new revelation of His "unsearchable ways," (4) brings to the mind fresh floods of light, stirs the soul to new transports of praise and love, arouses in the heart a deeper sense of man's unworthiness, his coldness and ingratitude towards "the Giver of all good gifts." (5) Gradually each of these aspects of the goodness and mercy of God becomes the focus of particular acts of piety and a special devotion arises to urge the soul onward to still greater generosity in the service of our loving Master.

INTRODUCTION XV-

As a rule, it takes a long time for a new form of devotion to develop to the fulness of its beneficent power. Often it begins in some special insight of faith and fresh favor of love granted by the Holy Ghost to certain privileged souls. They perceive, in the light of God's wisdom and love, some new manifestation of His holy designs within this or that event of the life of Jesus Christ (whose special significance had hitherto passed unnoticed), or in some mystery of revealed truth (whose depths can never be plumbed), or in some word or deed recorded in the deposit of divine revelation (in which no one had previously noted this particular meaning and import). This fresh vision of the wisdom and love of God becomes for them a spur to some special devotion, appropriate to the grace and insight granted to them by the Holy Spirit. They begin to practise this new devotion in their private exercises of piety and find therein an increase of spiritual strength and courage, solace, comfort and love in the pursuit of Christian perfection.

Little by little the new devotion spreads. Other pious persons adopt its practice. It springs up here and there in various forms, not all of them alike and some of them, indeed, at times quite incompatible with others. And so it develops; while its object, aim and purpose become increasingly clear, its connection with some truth revealed by God more patently evident and its basis in Christian doctrine more firmly established. For, every devotion in the Church has some definite object and end; and all must rest upon the solid ground of dogmatic truth.

Only the revealed word of God, contained in the Holy Scriptures and Tradition, the deposit of Christian Faith which the Apostles bequeathed to the Church, can provide an adequate foundation for Christian worship. The extraordinary piety of individual souls, the holy inspirations which the Spirit of God so lavishly bestows upon all men, especially upon those who seek with all their hearts to reach the heights of Christian perfection, the special revelations which God vouchsafes to make from time to time to those chosen ones who are His special and particular friends, whether in the Person of our Blessed Lord Himself or through His holy Mother or His angels and His saints—even these exalted privileges and unusual signs of divine favor—cannot furnish a sufficient reason or provide an adequate motive for the establishment of a special devotion as a part of the public worship of the faithful, much as they may serve to initiate the process of its development, accelerate its progress or occasion its final acceptance and approval by the Church. But when some holy and learned man of God arises and gathers together the scattered traditions of past ages, sifts them out, studies their implications, finds their roots in the revealed word of God, and proceeds systematically to expound the theological justification for the special devotion in question, then the way is at last prepared for official action by the competent ecclesiastical authority. Once this official approval is granted, the hitherto private devotion becomes part of the public worship of the Church, an authorized liturgical cult.

The highest authority in this matter has always been, of course, that of the Supreme Head of the Church, our Holy Father the Pope. According to an ancient custom, however,--a custom which persisted well on into the eighteenth century in many countries, notably in France--the local Ordinary was wont to approve and sanction, for his own diocese, the introduction of new feasts into the liturgy. This widespread practice was supported both by the common opinion of learned theologians and the authority of many prelates, saints and doctors, while the Holy See allowed it to continue without protest. Subsequently, indeed, it became clearly established that such innovations could be sanctioned only by the supreme authority of the Vicar of Christ. Certain feasts, therefore, which had theretofore been authorized by episcopal decree alone afterwards received the approval and sanction of the Holy See and were thus officially given the standing which they had long enjoyed by established custom and practice and by the tacit approval of the Supreme Pontiff.

Today, it is universally recognized and acknowledged that the only competent authority for the adoption of new feasts into the Liturgy of the Church is the Pope. Normally the Holy Father acts in these matters through the medium of the Sacred Congregation of Rites which was established in the latter half of the sixteenth century. In the usual course of the exercise of this authority, a new feast is at first approved for certain definite localities--dioceses, missionary regions, religious orders or congregations, pious or charitable institutions. only later, when evidence is forthcoming that the faithful and the hierarchy earnestly desire and urgently plead for its extension to the universal Church, does the Holy See sanction its celebration throughout the whole world.

In its growth and development, the cult of the Sacred Heart of Jesus has followed the broad outlines of this historical pattern. From the earliest times the faithful looked upon the love of God, made abundantly manifest in the Incarnation of the Son of God and the Redemption of mankind upon the Cross, as the central element, the very core, of all Christian devotion. The spontaneous response which the Holy Ghost stirred up in the souls of pious persons in answer to that unspeakable, infinite, divine love expressed itself in an ardent love of the Christian soul for Jesus Christ and in the love of all Christians for one another and for all men for the love and sake of Christ. These two elements--the love of God for man and the reciprocal love of man for God--have always been present in the devotions of Christian people. They were destined to enter in a very special manner into the theory and practice of the worship of the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

Moreover, the metaphorical significance of the term "heart" as the figurative expression of "love" has been at all times a familiar notion in the history of Christian worship, as indeed it has been from time immemorial a commonly accepted figure of speech in the language and literature of men. "To give one's heart" has ever been synonymous with "to give one's love." Yet in the early centuries of Christian devotion there is no trace of the complicated symbolical meaning later perceived in the use of this term and there is no indication that the Heart of Jesus was especially revered as the symbol or the seat of the love of Jesus Christ either for His Heavenly Father or for mankind. This was to come only much later in history, when the sacred humanity of Christ began to be the object of particular homage.

Likewise, the faithful followers of Christ realized from very early times that the piercing of the sacred side of Jesus on the Cross by the lance of Longinus bore a deep and mysterious meaning, far beyond the mere physical act of a public executioner to assure himself that his victim is dead. For a long time, however, the mystic significance of this event was associated only with the origin of the Church of Christ. just as Eve, the spouse of Adam, had come forth from the side of her husband when God had cast a deep sleep upon him, so the Church, the Spouse of Christ, issued from His sacred wounded side when He had slept in death; for, from the sacred side of Jesus wounded by the lance there gushed forth blood and water, symbols of the origin of the Church of Christ and the fulness of redemption and grace which flowed from His Passion and death upon the souls of men ransomed by His Precious Blood and washed in the waters of Baptism. Thus too, the wounding of the heart referred to in the Song of Solomon-"vulnerasti cor meum,"(6)-was thought of in this context as the love of Jesus Christ for His Holy Spouse, the Church.

All these elements of traditional piety and devotion existed in some form or another in practically every period of Christian worship, but only in a scattered, disconnected and unrelated fashion. They had to await a much later period to be gathered together in that marvelous synthesis of doctrine and piety, the Devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus, which, in the words of Cardinal Pie, "is the very quintessence of Christianity and the substantial summary and compendium of all religion.(7)" It would be vain, therefore, as Dom Berliere aptly remarks, to seek any trace of the Devotion to the Sacred Heart in the early centuries of the Church.(8) The spiritual element of the love of God and the metaphorical significance of the heart, figuratively expressing love, were indeed there; but that does not constitute devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. There is as yet no mention of the union of that divine love of God with the burning love of soul of our Blessed Lord, expressed and symbolized in His Heart of flesh which beat within His sacred bosom and poured forth the last drop of Its Precious Blood upon the Cross for the salvation of men. Yet, in the perspective of history, all these profound insights and tender effusions of love which characterized the devotions of pious Christians in ages past foreshadowed the formal devotion to the Sacred Heart as we know and love and practise it today.

These early adumbrations of this tender devotion gave place a little later to a somewhat clearer light. This came with the origin and spread of devotion to the sacred wounds of our Blessed Lord, especially to the wound in His sacred side. Many holy souls found a rich source of grace and consolation in the Devotion to the Five Wounds. For, as St. Gregory the Great had said, "Just as the dove finds nourishment in hollow places, so the simple soul seeks in the wounds of Christ the food that makes it strong." (9) St. Bernard and St. Francis of Assisi did much to propagate this form of devotion to the sacred body of Christ and the holy nuns, St. Mechtilde and St. Gertrude- whose influence was so strong in developing the devotion to the Sacred Heart-made frequent reference in their writings to the salutary power of devotion to the wounds of Christ.

The wound made by the lance in the sacred side of Jesus gradually became the object of a special and very popular devotion. As we look back over the historical evolution of Christian worship, this may well be regarded as the first stage in the development of Devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. "Tardily, and as it were by a sudden enlightenment," says Dom Gougaud, "the thought of the Fathers of the Church was drawn towards the Wounded Heart of Jesus. Mediaeval contemplatives and masters of the spiritual life began timidly to turn thither their own devotion and to guide the devotion of chosen souls in this direction." (10) In the Middle Ages, mystics, theologians, directors of souls frequently and eloquently extol the merits and advantages of devotion to the wounded Heart of Jesus and record innumerable instances of great spiritual rewards granted to those who practise it.

From that period onward, devotion to the Sacred Heart became a favorite devotion for many privileged souls and their number steadily increased. Although its devotees were quite aware that the object of their devotion was the Sacred Heart of Jesus and although their homage and love were consciously directed to the Sacred Heart of Jesus, the practice of the devotion nevertheless most frequently appeared in connection with some other devotion, for instance, devotion to the Passion, the Five Wounds, the sacred body of Jesus pierced with the lance, or the Blessed Eucharist, from which it was not as yet clearly and definitely distinguished. Gradually, however, Devotion to the Sacred Heart developed still further in clarity and distinctness until, even before the lifetime of St. John Eudes, it had become known and was practised by many holy persons. St. Bonaventure, the holy nuns of Helfta, St. Mechtilde and St. Gertrude, the pious Carthusian monk, Lanspergius, the Venerable Abbot Louis of Blois and many others had shed great light upon the theory and practice of the devotion and St. John Eudes drew heavily upon their store of wisdom and piety in elaborating his doctrine and method of devotion to the Sacred Heart. Up to this time, however, it was still a private devotion with no special form of its own, no generally accepted mode of practice and no authorized method. Above all, no ecclesiastical authority had as yet given it formal and official approval. Its general character, although greatly clarified over the passing years, had not yet become quite definite and clear because nobody had accurately set forth in due theological form its proper, specific object, its distinctive end and purpose, its doctrinal foundation and the exact method of its practice.

It was the divinely appointed mission of St. John Eudes (for, as His Holiness, Pope Pius X has declared, St. John Eudes did not enter upon his work without divine inspiration) to inaugurate in the Church the public worship of the Sacred Heart. That mission could not have been accomplished, however, until he had first established the theological soundness of the devotion, defined its precise object, and provided a suitable liturgical Office and Mass for the proper celebration of the Feast of the Sacred Heart. These tasks he undertook with characteristic courage, zeal and learning. Moreover, the tireless energy he expended in propagating this most tender and salutary devotion not only resulted in spreading far and wide a clearer understanding of its aim and object but also deepened, developed, and spread its regular and formal practice among great multitudes of the faithful. At long last, the Devotion to the Sacred Heart was firmly established. To this great saint we owe the first public celebration of the Feast of the Sacred Heart in the liturgy of the Church. The heroic sanctity of his own personal life, his zeal for the establishment and propagation of his cherished devotion, his fruitful apostolate in its behalf, his great learning and piety, displayed both in the composition of his liturgical Offices and Masses in honor of the admirable Heart of Mary and the Sacred Heart of Jesus and in his enlightened exposition and defense of the doctrinal foundations of this form of devotion and worship gained for St. John Eudes the honors of the altar as well as high titles of praise and reverence from the Sovereign Pontiffs who declared him Venerable, Blessed and Saint.

it is popularly believed that Devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus originated with the revelations which our Blessed Lord granted to St. Margaret Mary Alacoque and that the Venerable Claude de la Colombière, St. Margaret Mary's spiritual director, was the first to preach that devotion to the people. But this is not true. What is true, however, is that the enormous importance of the mission which St. Margaret Mary received from our Lord Himself and the great zeal with which Father de la Colombière and many other priests of the Society of Jesus labored to fulfil the express desires of the Sacred Heart for spread of this devotion to the universal Church have unduly obscured the role of St. John Eudes as the Father, Doctor and Apostle of this beautiful devotion.

St. John Eudes had practised and preached devotion to the Sacred Heart for many years before Our Lord appeared to St. Margaret Mary. In fact, his zealous work had gone so far forth before that date, that the Office and Mass which he had composed in honor of the Sacred Heart received ecclesiastical approval some years before St. Margaret Mary entered the Convent of the Visitation, and the Feast of the Sacred Heart was publicly established and celebrated in several dioceses a year or so before the first of those marvelous apparitions of Our Lord to His holy and humble servant, St. Margaret Mary.

Nor was the character of the devotion, which St. John Eudes had preached, altered by the revelations made to this saintly nun. For, the Mass in honor of the Sacred Heart which St. John Eudes had composed and in which his teaching on the nature and purpose of devotion to the Sacred Heart is gloriously enshrined, was adopted for the celebration of the Feast prescribed by our Blessed Lord in one of His revelations to St. Margaret Mary and continued to be used even in convents of the Visitation Nuns for at least fifty years after the death of St. Margaret Mary.

XX11-

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

Although St. John Eudes has been honored by the supreme authority of the Holy See with the enviable titles of "Author of the Liturgical Worship of the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary" and "The Father, The Doctor and The Apostle of this devotion," surprisingly few persons are aware of the decisive part he played in establishing and propagating the now widespread Devotion to the Sacred Heart. Yet it was he who, inspired by the Holy Ghost, first thought of rendering public worship by a special liturgical Office and Mass to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. It was he who inaugurated many solemn festivals in honor of the Sacred Heart, first in the institutions conducted by the religious communities of which he was the founder, namely, The Congregation of Jesus and Mary (Eudist Fathers) and the Order of Our Lady of Charity (Good Shepherd Nuns), and subsequently, with the approval of the hierarchy, in various dioceses of Normandy and Brittany. It was he who composed the Office and Mass to which these bishops gave their whole-hearted approval. It was he who laid firm the theological foundations upon which Devotion to the Sacred Heart, like all devotions of the Church, remains so solidly grounded. It was he who expounded and defended the doctrine and practice of Devotion to the Sacred Heart against its earliest adversaries. It was he who labored all his life long with unflagging zeal and notable success to spread Devotion to the Sacred Heart by his preaching, through his writings, in his missions, by his personal exhortation and example and by the founding of pious confraternities whose members dedicated themselves in a special manner to the practice and propagation of the Devotion to the Sacred Heart. Upon these pious associations the Holy See showered its choicest favors and blessings, enriching the practice of the devotion cultivated by them with numerous and precious indulgences.

INTRODUCTION

XX111-

When all this labor of love had been accomplished and the ground so, well prepared for world-wide acceptance of this highly important devotion, our Blessed Lord appeared to the holy Visitation nun, St. Margaret Mary Alacoque, and confided to her the desires of His most Sacred Heart. Jesus Christ Himself picked this saintly religious to be the divinely appointed instrument for the diffusion of devotion to His Sacred Heart throughout the length and breadth of Christendom, to be the privileged depository of those heavenly promises made by our Blessed Lord Himself in favor of all who love and practise this devotion, to be the providential means of establishing the Feast of the Sacred Heart to be celebrated on the Friday following the Octave of the Feast of Corpus Christi throughout the universal Church.

By the time the extraordinary favors which the Sacred Heart of Jesus had bestowed upon St. Margaret Mary became generally known and the revelations and promises made to her were made public, St. John Eudes had passed to his eternal reward. His work had been accomplished and his labors ended. The Office and Mass he had composed in honor of the Sacred Heart was already incorporated into the liturgy and the soil had been prepared by his apostolic zeal for the diffusion throughout the whole world of the devotion he so ardently loved. From that time onward the mission of St. Margaret Mary became the decisive factor in the spread of devotion to the Sacred Heart. The saint herself did not live to see the fulfilment of that mission, but the efforts of all those who espoused the holy cause (especially the work of Father de la Colombière and many other priests of the Society of Jesus) were at last crowned with success and the Sacred Heart finally conquered the whole world.

In the fulness and fervor of our gratitude to our dear Lord for having disclosed the love of His most Sacred Heart by means of special revelations made to His servant, St. Margaret Mary Alacoque, it behooves us to remember with equal fulness and fervor of gratitude the less striking, though not less important, mission which He deigned to confide to the great saint to whose zeal and learning the Church owes the origin of the public worship of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, the demonstration of its doctrinal stability, the statement of its theological justification and the earliest diffusion of its practice. It is but just that due honor be paid to all whom God has chosen to be His instruments in the glorious work of establishing and propagating the worship and love of the Sacred Heart of His Divine Son. It cannot detract from the honor due to St. Margaret Mary to confess and proclaim with the Holy See the honor due to that other holy servant of God, St. John Eudes. We should join with St. Margaret Mary herself and with all those good priests who helped to further the explicit desires of the Sacred Heart and who, please God, are with her now in heaven, in gratefully acknowledging and rejoicing in the privilege which Jesus Christ our Lord has bestowed upon St. John Eudes in deigning to make use of his mind and heart, his tongue and pen, to set up in the Church and spread abroad the public worship of His most Sacred Heart.

XX1V-

From early childhood, St. John Eudes had cherished a tender devotion to our Blessed Lady, a devotion which grew more intense and deeper through all the years of his long life. Only in his young manhood, after reading St. Mechtilde and St. Gertrude, did he begin to practise Devotion to the Sacred Heart. In his early work, The Life and the Kingdom of Jesus, we find unmistakable traces of what was later to become the full picture of this devotion which was drawn with the bold firm strokes of his learned pen in the twelfth book of his monumental work, Le Cœur Admirable de la Très Sacré Mère de Dieu. It is this book which is here published in English translation.

Mary had led St. John Eudes to Jesus. And in Jesus he found Mary more glorious, more lovable, more admirable than ever. That is why, in the thoughts and affections of St. John Eudes Mother and Son are never separated. The love he praises in the most pure Heart of Mary is the love of Jesus Himself; and he sings with one single hymn, Ave, Cor Sanctissimum, the love of the admirable Heart of Mary and the love of the adorable Heart of Jesus. This does not indicate, as some have thought, a certain confusion in his mind regarding the Devotion to the Sacred Heart. On the contrary, it manifests a penetrating insight into the deepest meaning of the devotion and a profound appreciation of the mystery of sanctification, the mystery of that union in love which transforms the soul and makes it one with God. St. John Eudes was keenly aware of the infinite difference between the honor due to Mary, the Mother of God (in whom the love of Jesus, though shared in the plenitude of creaturely capacity, was still a gratuitous gift of God), and the supreme honor due to her Divine Sort (in whom the fulness of the Godhead dwells and whose love is God's subsistent and eternal love, in which Our Lady shares). Even while his thoughts were occupied with establishing the cult of the admirable Heart of Mary, his plans were maturing for the writing of his treatise and his meditations on the Sacred Heart of Jesus and for the composition of his Office and Mass in honor of the adorable Heart of our divine Lord.

Although the book he wrote on The Devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus is not now extant, and perhaps was never published, the section of his writings which is here presented in English contains the substance of his teaching on the subject. It is the first theological treatise ever written on Devotion to the Sacred Heart and, when read in conjunction with the Office and Mass of the Sacred Heart which St. John Eudes composed and with appropriate passages in the earlier sections of this same great work, Le Coeur Admirable, provides as profound and exact a study of the theology of the Sacred Heart as has ever been produced. Certain expressions which St. John Eudes uses to convey his ideas are no longer in current usage but the doctrine expounded in this work has stood the test of time. Many learned writers would have saved themselves much labor in developing the theory of the devotion to the Sacred Heart and not a few historians of the devotion would have been spared undue mistakes had they given more careful attention to this work.

For St. John Eudes, as for all Catholics, the ultimate object of all devotion is God, in the unity of His divine nature and in the Trinity of His Persons. But God sent His Only-begotten Son to redeem and save mankind from the penalty of sin. Through Jesus Christ our Lord and Saviour and through Him alone can we mortals have access to divinity. All the religious life of Christians is, therefore, centered in the Word of God made Flesh. Yet it extends to all Three Persons of the Blessed Trinity and, by participation, to all persons, places and things made holy unto God.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

The worship of the Incarnate Word embraces all that Jesus is in Himself—His divine nature and His sacred humanity—and to all He does in heaven, on earth and in hell, whilst the homage which is offered through any and every act of worship is directed to the Person of the Word. Whence, in virtue of the hypostatic union of the divine and human natures in Christ, every part and every perfection of the being and the life of Jesus Christ may be made the object of a special devotion provided only that it be not separated from the Person of the Incarnate Word. Jesus is adorable in Himself and in all the mysteries of His existence, in all the perfections of His divine and human natures, in His human soul, with all its powers, faculties and virtues, in His human body, with all its parts and organs, in all His thoughts and words and deeds. Above all, Jesus is adorable in the love He bears to His Heavenly Father, in the love He bestows upon His holy Mother and in the love He lavishes on all His creatures.

But Jesus is both God and Man. Being very God, He loves His Heavenly Father with an infinite and eternal love and He loves us, too, from all eternity with that uncreated love which moved Him to become Man to save us from perdition and to fill our souls with His divine life and love. Being very man, He loves us with all the fervor of His most perfect soul, a human love so tender and so strong, so ardent and so full, that no other human love could be conceived to be so great. The uncreated love of God, which is the principle and source of Christ's created human love and that human love itself, more powerful than any love mere man could ever cherish, reverberate within the Heart of Flesh which throbs within His sacred bosom and adds the human glow of purest passion and emotion to all that great torrent of love which flows from all eternity, through time and unto everlasting.

It is this immense and ineffable love of Jesus Christ in all its aspects and in all its phases which is the specific object of Devotion to the Sacred Heart.

St. John Eudes had gleaned from his prayerful study of Holy Writ many meanings given by the inspired writers to the word, heart. He found the word sometimes referred to the material,

INTRODUCTION

corporeal organ which we bear in our breasts; sometimes it was used to signify the memory, the understanding or the will; again, it meant the highest point of the soul, the apex mentis of patristic and mediaeval writers, the seat of contemplation or even the whole interior of man; finally, the Holy Ghost was referred to as the "new spirit" and the "new heart" which God would fain give to men and the Son of God Himself was called the Heart of the Eternal Father.

All these meanings St. John Eudes gathered up into one theory which embraced them all. For him, the Sacred Heart of Jesus was the synthesis of (a) the divine, uncreated love of Jesus Christ (i.e., the essential love of God, common to all Three Divine Persons of the Most Holy Trinity; the notional love of God, the reciprocal love of God the Father and God the Son from which the Holy Ghost proceeds; the personal love of God which is the Divine Person of the Holy Ghost Himself); (b) the human love of Jesus proceeding from His human will and affecting concomitantly all the higher powers of His soul; and (c) the sensible, passionate, emotional love of Jesus, symbolized by the Heart of Flesh, the seat of the emotions, and which St. John Eudes also regarded as the organ of the passions.

To designate this threefold object of the devotion to the Sacred Heart, St. John Eudes distinguished three Hearts in Jesus, namely, His divine Heart (indicating His uncreated love), His spiritual Heart (indicating the love of His soul, His human will and higher faculties), and His corporeal Heart (indicating the echo of love in the bodily organ which is its symbol and the seat of its emotional warmth). These expressions are no longer in use but they convey a doctrine which has not been altered with the ages. St. John Eudes hastens to add that these three Hearts are but one absolutely single Heart, filled with infinite love for the Holy Trinity and inconceivable charity for mankind; for, he says, the divine Heart of Jesus is the soul, the life and the heart of both His spiritual Heart and His corporeal Heart.

The aim and purpose of Devotion to the Sacred Heart are to inflame our hearts with a reciprocal love of Jesus and to stir up in our souls appropriate acts of adoration, thanksgiving, repentance and petition enlivened by that love. For, the Sacred Heart of Jesus is a "flaming furnace of love" which, like a burning fire, seeks to enkindle in our souls an ardent flame of love and to transform them with its consuming power. Father Bainvel has well said, "The whole Devotion to the Sacred Heart can be summed up in this: on the one side, a love which calls for love, a tender, overflowing love which calls for a proportionate love; on the other side, a love which answers the call of love, a love concerned not to fall too far short of the immense love which has anticipated and aroused it." This is the doctrine of St. John Eudes as may be clearly seen in the pages that follow. In this fashion he understood those powerful words of our Blessed Lord, "I am come to cast fire on the earth. And what will I, but that it be kindled." (11)

Every act of devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus must be enlivened by this all-pervading spirit of love. St. John Eudes sums up under four general headings the appropriate acts which constitute the practice of this devotion. First, to adore the Sacred Heart of Jesus. Secondly, to praise, bless, glorify and thank Him for His love. Thirdly, to ask pardon for our offenses against His great love and to make reparation for them. Fourthly, to love Him in return for all His love and beg Him to establish within our hearts the reign of His Holy love.

In the concluding words of that beautiful prayer, Ave, Cor Sanctissimum, composed by St. John Eudes and prescribed by him for daily recitation in the religious communities he founded, these acts, proper to the devotion to the Sacred Heart, are set forth with unusual fervor and unction. This prayer teaches us that the Sacred Heart must be adored, praised and glorified in all His manifestations of love. With our whole hearts, with our whole strength and with all our minds we must return this love. To Him we offer, dedicate, consecrate and immolate our hearts that He may wholly take and possess them, live and reign in them now and always, forever and forever.

The contemplation of the love of the Sacred Heart of Jesus for His Heavenly Father, for His Blessed Mother, for all members of His Church Triumphant, Suffering and Militant, constitutes the deepest foundation of devotion to the Sacred Heart. Upon this foundation St. (11). Luke 12, 49

INTRODUCTION XX1X

John Eudes builds the whole practice of the Devotion. From the contemplation of these great truths, he bids us pass to the consideration of what the love of God has done for each of us in particular by creating us, by redeeming us, by giving us the gift of divine grace and the promise of eternal reward. And, since that great love of the Sacred Heart of Jesus is especially manifest in the sufferings and death of Our Lord upon the Cross and in the Blessed Sacrament of the Eucharist, there exists a particularly cogent reason for practising the devotion to the Sacred Heart in and through devotion to the Passion of our Saviour and to the Most Holy Sacrament of the Altar.

The most striking characteristic of the teaching of St. John Eudes on Devotion to the Sacred Heart--as indeed of his whole teaching on the spiritual life--is that Christ is always its centre. Through Christ, with Christ, in Christ--per Ipsum, cum Ipso et in Ipso--all devotion and all piety achieves its end.

Since the Sacred Heart of Jesus is God's Love symbolically (though by no means merely metaphorically, figuratively or arbitrarily) expressed, all those acts which belong to strictly divine worship (Cultus patriæ) have first place in this devotion. For, God Himself is its object. But these acts, as such, are common to all forms of divine worship. In order to become part of a particular devotion they require to be specified by the formal aspect of the particular object which characterizes that devotion. In the Devotion to the Sacred Heart, this object is the love of the Word Made Flesh both for His Father in Heaven and for all men; and its end is to arouse in the hearts of all who practise it an ardent reciprocal love for Jesus Christ, the Incarnate Word of God. Thus all the particular acts appropriate to the practice of this devotion and to the achievement of its end and purpose must stem from the specific act which constitutes its proper act and marks it as a special and distinct devotion, namely, the act of love. The love of Jesus, symbolically expressed and most aptly conveyed by the phrase, "The Sacred Heart of Jesus," evokes a reciprocal love from the hearts of all men. All other acts which enter into the practice of this devotion flow from this, its proper act, and are instinct with the spirit which it breathes.

XXX-

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

In the teaching of St. John Eudes, this order and balance among the various acts which constitute the method and practice of Devotion to the Sacred Heart are admirably maintained. And, although the Devotion, as preached and taught by St. John Eudes, is suffused with the tenderest affection and unction, this is always controlled by strict theological reason and never becomes purely sentimental or emotional. The acts of dedication, immolation, consecration and reparation each has its proper place within that order. They all form part of the full practice of the Devotion to the Sacred Heart, each in its proper proportion. All are dependent upon, and subordinate to, the specific act proper to this particular devotion, the act of love for the Sacred Heart of Jesus, which in turn is incorporated within the whole body of those acts of religion which belong to divine worship in its strictest form. In a word, the doctrine of St. John Eudes is unequivocally Christocentric.

The influence which, since the Renaissance, has tended to make human thought and life in all its phases, even in its spiritual and religious aspects, a man-centered life, is entirely absent from the spirit of St. John Eudes. Christ for him has been, is and always shall be the Centre of our life, the focus of all our thoughts and words and deeds. "Christ yesterday, Christ today, Christ forever."

There are notable indications in the writings of scholars who are expert in the history and the theology of the Devotion to the Sacred Heart pointing towards a deeper and fuller understanding of the teaching of St. John Eudes. The contrasts which have at times been drawn between the devotion to the Sacred Heart as preached by St. John Eudes and as revealed to St. Margaret Mary Alacoque are being progressively revealed as historically and theologically indefensible. Please God, the time is not far off when the whole preaching and practice of the Devotion to the Sacred Heart will be consciously enlivened by the full theological spirit which St. John Eudes first*infused into the great synthesis of doctrine which he elaborated as the basis of the public worship of the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

CHAPTER I

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS A FURNACE OF BURNING LOVE FOR HIS ETERNAL FATHER

Innumerable reasons urge us to offer our worship and honor to the Sacred Heart of our most adorable Saviour with extraordinary devotion and reverence. All these reasons are embodied in the words of St. Bernardine of Siena, who calls this loving Heart: Fornacem ardentissimae caritatis ad inflammandum et incendendum orbem universum. "A furnace of ardent love to enkindle and inflame the whole universe." (1) Most certainly the admirable Heart of Jesus is a furnace of love for His Divine Father, for His Blessed Mother, and for His Church Triumphant, Militant and Suffering, and also for each one of us. This we shall see in the following chapters.

Let us consider, first of all, the most brilliant flames of this great furnace of love for the Eternal Father. What mind can conceive and what tongue express the tiniest spark of this illimitable flaming furnace of love for His Father? It is a love worthy of such a Father and of such a Son. It is a love that most perfectly equals the ineffable perfections of its beloved object. Here is a Son infinitely loving & a Father who is infinitely lovable, a God loving a God. Here is love in its very essence loving eternal love: a love that is boundless, incomprehensible, infinite, passing all limits, and loving in turn a love that is boundless, incomprehensible, infinite, and passing all limits.

(1). Sermon 514, de Passione Domini, P. 2, tit. 1. In the picture called Our Lady of Hearts St. John Eudes represented the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary by the emblem of 2 furnaces of love, whither his disciples go to light torches to enkindle the universe. It is really but a beautiful application of the words of Our Lord in St. Luke 12, 49: "I am come to cast fire on the earth. And what will I, but that it be kindled?"

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

In a word, the Sacred Heart of Jesus, whether considered in His divinity or in His humanity, is more ardently enkindled with love for His Father, loving Him infinitely more at any given moment, than all the hearts of angels and saints together can love Him throughout all eternity.

There is no greater love than to give one's life for the person one loves. The Son of God so loves His Father that He would be ready to sacrifice His own life again, as He sacrificed it upon the Cross, and to sacrifice it by suffering the same torments for the love of His Father (if such were God's holy will) that He suffered on Calvary. Since His love is boundless, He would be ready to lay down His life throughout the whole universe as He did upon Calvary. Since His love is eternal and infinite, He would be ready to make this sacrifice over and over again, if it were possible, and with infinite suffering.

"O Divine Father, Creator, Preserver, and Ruler of the whole world, there is no one so lovable as Thou. Thy manifold and infinite perfections, and the unspeakable blessings Thou hast in store for all Thy creatures, place upon them endless obligations to serve, honor and love Thee with all their strength. Yet there is no one in the whole world who is so little loved as Thou, no one who is so scorned and insulted by most of Thy creatures. Oderunt me et Patrem meum. 'They have hated both me and my Father' (2) Jesus Thy Son has said, 'without cause they have hated me. I have never done them any harm but have lavished on them all manner of good': Odio habuerunt me gratis. (3) I behold hell filled with an untold number of the damned, ceaselessly venting their multitudinous blasphemies against Thy divine majesty. I behold the earth filled with unbelievers, Jews, heretics, and false Christians who treat Thee as if Thou wert their archenemy.

"But two thoughts are my consolation and joy. The first is that Thy perfections and Thy splendors, O my God, are so admirable. Thou dost take so great a pleasure and so perfect a satisfaction in the infinite love of Thy Divine Son and in all that He hath suffered with that infinite love, to repair the injuries that Thy enemies have striven and still strive to do Thee, that they have not been able or ever will be able to detract the least iota from Thy glory and Thy felicity.

LOVE FOR HIS ETERNAL FATHER 3 -

"The second joyful thought is that Jesus, Thy Well-beloved Son, by His incomparable overflowing goodness willed to be our Head and chose us to be His members. He has associated us with Himself in His ineffable love for Thee. He has given us as a result the power to love Thee with the same love wherewith He loves Thee, with a love eternal, boundless, and infinite."

To understand this truth well, take note of three important facts. First, the love of the Son of God for His Heavenly Father, being eternal, does not pass away, but remains forever, stable and abiding. Secondly, the love of the Son of God for His Father fills all things by its immensity; consequently it abides in us and in our hearts: Intimo meo, intimior, as St. Augustine says. Thirdly, as the Father of Jesus has given us all things in giving us His Son--cum ipso omnia donavit (4)-the love of the Son of God for the Father belongs to us, and we can and must make use of it as a possession that is ours. On this basis, I can, with my Saviour, love His Divine Father and mine, with the same love wherewith He loves Him; with a love which I can put into practice, thus:

"O my Saviour, I give myself to Thee to unite myself to Thy eternal, boundless, and infinite love for Thy Almighty Father. O Adorable Father, I offer Thee all the eternal, boundless, and infinite love of Thy Son Jesus as a love which is mine. just as our lovable Saviour says to us: Sicut dilexit me Pater, et ego dilexi vos, 'As the Father hath loved me, I also love you,' (5) I may say to Thee: 'O Divine Father, I love Thee, even as Thy Son loveth Thee.'"

The Father's love for the Son is no less mine than the Son's love for the Father; therefore I can make use of it, thus.

"O Father of Jesus, I give myself to Thee to be united to Thy boundless and eternal love for Thy Beloved Son. O my Jesus, I offer Thee all the eternal, boundless, and infinite love of Thy Father, and I offer it to Thee as a love which is mine:' In this way, as our loving Redeemer says to us: 'I love you as my Father loveth me; I can say in turn to Him: 'I love Thee, my Saviour, as Thy Eternal Father loveth Thee.'"

O ineffable goodness! O wondrous love! What bliss for us that the Eternal Father gives us His Only-begotten Son, and with Him all things else! He gives Him to us not only to be our Redeemer, our Brother, and our Father, but also to be our Head. What a privilege to be members of the Son of God, to be one with Him, as the members are one with the Head, hence to have but one spirit, one heart, one love with Christ, and thus to be able to love His Divine Father, and our Father, with one and the same Heart and love!

It is, therefore, not surprising that, speaking of us to His Heavenly Father, Our Lord says: Dilexisti eos sicut et me dilexisti, "Thou hast loved them as Thou hast also loved me," (6) and He implores Him to love us always: Dilectio, qua dilexisti me, in ipsis sit. (7) If we love the Father as His Son loves Him, He loves us as He loves His Divine Son. He beholds us in His Son as members of Christ who are but one with the Son and love the Father with the same filial love. Truly He loves us with one and the same Heart and love wherewith He loves His Son.

Would that heaven and earth and all creatures might be changed into a pure flame of love for the Father of goodness and for the only Son of His divine delight, as St. Paul calls him: Transtulit nos in regnum Filii dilectionis suae! (8)

CHAPTER 2

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS A FURNACE OF ARDENT LOVE FOR HIS MOST HOLY MOTHER

NOTHING is easier than the proof of this truth. The ineffable graces with which our Saviour endowed His Blessed Mother clearly manifest that His love for her is a love without measure or limit. She is, after His Divine Father, the first and most worthy object of His love. He loves her incomparably more than all His angels, saints and other creatures together. The extraordinary favors with which He honored her and the wonderful privileges He conferred upon her, far beyond any other creature, are clear proofs of this truth. Let us examine these numerous and impressive privileges.

First of all, the Blessed Virgin is the only human being whom the Son of God chose from all eternity to elevate above all created things, to set on the highest throne of glory and grandeur, and to adorn with the most admirable of all dignities, the Motherhood of God.

Let us descend in spirit from eternity to the fulness of time, and we shall see this hallowed Virgin alone among the children of Adam in her preservation from original sin, through a very special privilege~ in testimony of which Holy Church celebrates annually throughout the world the Feast of her Immaculate Conception.

Not only did the love of God's Son for His most holy Mother preserve her from original sin, but over and above that, He filled her from the moment of her conception with such eminent grace that, according to several great theologians, it surpassed the grace of the chief of the Seraphim and of the greatest of all the saints even taken in its perfection. She alone among all the children of Adam enjoyed this privilege.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

Moreover, from the first moment of her existence, she possessed the privilege of the light of reason and faith, by which she began to know God, to adore Him, and to give herself to Him. In virtue of another privilege she alone began to love God from the initial moment of her life, and she loved Him more ardently than the most flaming of the Seraphim. She alone loved Him continuously, incessantly, throughout the whole course of her life. For this reason we say that her life was one single act of love from the first to the last moment, an act that was never interrupted.

She is the only creature who has always perfectly accomplished the first of the divine commandments: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with thy whole heart, with thy whole soul, and with all thy strength." (1) Hence several Doctors of the Church assert that her love was doubled with each hour, or even, according to some, with each moment. When a soul makes an act of love with his whole heart and according to the whole extent of the grace within him, his love becomes twice as great as it was before. The Blessed Virgin loved God continuously with all her heart and all her strength. If she had ten degrees of love at the first instant of her life, she had twenty at the second; if she had twenty at the second, she had forty at the third. Thus her love was doubled every moment or at least every hour throughout the course of her life. You can imagine, therefore, what a furnace and what fires of divine love inflamed that virginal heart in the last days of her abode upon earth.

Let us pass on to the consideration of the matchless privileges by which the Only Son of Mary enriched His holy Mother. According to several eminent Doctors, He gave to her alone the grace to merit, by her prayers and tears, the accomplishment of His Incarnation. She alone gave human flesh, from her own substance, to Him who was born from all eternity in the bosom of God of the substance of the Father. Yes, Mary gave a portion of her virginal substance and of her most pure blood to fashion the sacred humanity of the Son of God. In addition, she cooperated with the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost in the union which was formed of her substance with the Person of the Son of God. Thus she participated in the accomplishment of the mystery of the Incarnation, and consequently in the greatest miracle that God ever has or ever will or even ever can perform.

(I). Deut. 6, 5.

LOVE FOR HIS MOST HOLY MOTHER

There is another privilege that contributes to the matchless honor of Our Lady. The most pure blood and the virginal flesh which she offered for this mystery will remain united forever, by the hypostatic union, to the Person of the Incarnate Word. The virginal blood and the precious flesh of Mary are, therefore, to be adored in the humanity of the Son of God with the same adoration that is due to that very humanity itself, and they will be forever the object of the adoration of all the angels and saints. O incomparable privilege! O ineffable love of Jesus for His most holy Mother!

There are still other prerogatives. That loving Mother also gave the flesh and blood from which the adorable Heart of the Child Jesus was formed. The Sacred Heart of the Son of God received its nourishment and its increase from that same blood, during the nine months of its abode in the holy womb of the Blessed Virgin.

The incomparable Virgin is alone in occupying the place of father and mother in respect to the God-Man, and hence in having paternal and maternal authority over Him, and in receiving the honor of being obeyed by the Sovereign of the Universe, an honor that is greater than she would receive from the homage of all created beings.

She alone is Mother and Virgin together, and according to some holy Doctors she made the vow of virginity from the moment of her Immaculate Conception. She alone bore in her womb for nine months Him whom the Eternal Father embraces in His bosom for all eternity. She alone gave life to Him who is eternal life and who gives life to all living things.

Accompanied by St. Joseph, she abode with that adorable Saviour for the space of thirty years. O wondrous thing! Our divine Redeemer came upon earth to save mankind. Yet He set aside only three years and three months of His life for the work of preaching and instructing. The other thirty years He devoted to the ever-increasing sanctification of His holy Mother. What a wealth of graces and blessings He incessantly poured into the soul of His Blessed Mother! With what flames of heavenly fire did the divine Heart of Jesus enkindle ever

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

more and more the virgin Heart of His most worthy Mother, especially when those two Hearts were so close to each other and so firmly united, while she bore Him in her womb, nursed Him, and held Him in her arms; during the whole time that she lived with Him familiarly as a mother with her child, eating and drinking with Him, praying with Him, and hearing the divine words coming from His adorable lips as so many coals of fire ever enkindling more and more her most holy Heart with the sacred fire of divine love!

After this who can estimate how ardently the blessed Heart of the Mother of the Saviour was afire with love for God? Certainly there is great reason to believe that, if her Son had not miraculously preserved her until the decreed hour of death, she would have died of love, not only once, like St. Teresa, but a thousand times, since her love was immeasurably more than that of the great Carmelite mystic. From earliest childhood her love was sufficiently intense to have caused her death and, when her Beloved Son did call her, she died of love that He might give her, after His own, the happiest and most glorious life possible.

Let us repeat concerning the marvelous Virgin that she is the only one, after her Divine Son, to have been transported body and soul into heaven. In accordance with the tradition of Holy Church, Mary's Assumption is solemnly celebrated throughout the world. She alone is raised on high above all the choirs of angels and saints and sits at the right hand of her Son. She alone is crowned Queen of heaven and earth, of angels and men, the Sovereign Empress of the universe. She alone has all power over the Church Triumphant, Militant, and Suffering. In Jerusalem potestas mea.(2) She alone has more influence with her Divine Son Jesus than all the citizens of heaven together: Data est tibi omnis potestas in coelo et in terra, says St. Peter Damian.

There is yet another particular privilege, emphasized in these words of St. Anselm: Te, Domina, tacente, nullus orabit, nullus adjuvabit; te autem orante, omnes (nempe Sancti) or omnes adjuvabunt: "O my Queen, if thou prayest not for anyone or for anything, no (2). Eccles. 24, 15 one shall proffer help, but when thou prayest all the saints pray with thee, all the saints put forth their aid."

Is it not true then that here is a great number of privileges and advantages with which our Saviour has honored His most holy Mother? What has constrained Him to do so? The burning love with which His filial Heart is all on fire for her. Why does He love her so much?

1. She is His Mother, from whom He received a new being and a new life by the new birth which she gave Him on earth.

2. He loves her alone more than He loves all creatures together because she loves Him more than all created things.

3. He loves her most ardently because she cooperated with Him in the accomplishment of His great work of the Redemption of the world. Her cooperation was to, give Him a mortal body capable of suffering and of sustaining the torments of His Passion. She also imparted to Him the Precious Blood which He shed for us, and she offered that body, that blood, and that life as a sacrifice at the foot of the Cross.

As our Saviour's love for His Blessed Mother is so great, we must be obliged to love and serve her to the best of our ability. Let us then love her with her Son Jesus, and if we love them let us hate what they hate and love what they love. Let us have but one heart with them, a heart detesting what they detest, that is, sin, especially the sins against charity, humility and purity, and a heart that loves what they love, particularly the poor, all Christian virtues, and trials. O Mother of goodness, obtain for us these graces from Thy Son!

CHAPTER 3

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS HAS ENDOWED HIS BLESSED MOTHER WITH WONDROUS AUTHORITY AND POWER IN HEAVEN

LET US ADD to the foregoing privileges still another prerogative, the greatest of all. It is this: the Mother of God is eternally associated in heaven not only with the highest authority of the Eternal Father, His adorable paternity, but likewise she possesses the authority of the Mother of the Divine Son as on earth: Et erat subditus illis. (1) This is a greater glory for her than if she exercised power over a million worlds. Her Son infinitely surpasses her in glory, power and majesty; yet He will eternally look upon her and honor her as His real Mother. His place as Son of God, says St. Ambrose, did not dispense Him while on earth from the divine and natural obligation which He had like all other children of obeying His Mother, according to the words: Et erat subditus illis. This submission was to Him not a matter of shame but rather of honor and glory; it was voluntary and proceeded not from weakness but from filial devotion: Non utique infirmitatis, as this holy Father declares, est ista subjectio, sed pietatis.

Several eminent theologians are agreed that the Mother of the Saviour had actual authority over the person of her Son, whether it was by a right of nature or by virtue of His goodness and humility. The greatest of all names that one can bestow upon the Blessed Virgin, says the devout Gerson, is that of Mother of God, all the more because that character gives her authority and natural dominion over the Lord of the whole world: Quoniam per hoc habet veluti auctoritatem, et naturale dominium ad totius mundi Dominum. (2) One must not imagine that her Son, having given her this power on earth, would take it away from her now that she is reigning in heaven. His respect and love for her now are just as great as when He was on earth.

HIS BLESSED MOTHER'S POWER IN HEAVEN 11 -

It is only right, therefore, to believe that she is as powerful in heaven as she was on earth and that she still maintains there a measure of authority over her Divine Son. Eadem potestas est Matris et Filii, says Arnold Of Chartres; or as Richard of St. Lawrence puts it: Quae ab omnipotente Filio omnipotens facta est. The Son and the Mother, having but one and the same flesh, but one and the same heart and will, have also, in a certain way, but one and the same power.

Let us listen to the words of a worthy and learned prelate, George, Archbishop of Nicomedia. Addressing the glorious Virgin he says: "Nothing resists thy might, everything obeys thy imperium; He who is born of thee hath raised thee above all things; thy Creator makes thy glory His and deems Himself honored by those who honor thee; thy Son rejoices beholding the honor that we give thee, and as if He were paying off the obligations He hath to thee, He gladly grants thee whatsoever thou dost ask Him: Nihil, O Virgo, tuae resistit potentiae; tuam gloriam Filius putat esse propriam, et quasi exsolvens debitum, implet petitiones tuas." (3)

We know for certain, says St. Anselm, that the Blessed Virgin is so filled with grace and merit that she always obtains the fruition of her desires: Scimus beatam Virginem tanti esse meriti et gratiae apud Deum, ut nihil eorum, quae velit efficere, possit aliquatenus effectu carere. (4) It is impossible, says St. Germanus, Archbishop of Constantinople, that her prayers should not be heard, everywhere and in all things, because her Divine Son is always submissive to her behests: Non potest

Utrunque stupor, says St. Bernard, utrinque miraculum; miracles on both sides. Quod Deus feminae obtemperet, humilitas absque exemplo; et quod Deo femina principetur, sublimitas sine socio: "That God should obey a woman is humility unexampled, and that a woman should command God is an authority which has no like." Hence it is that St. Peter Damian is not afraid to say that our Blessed Lady appears in heaven, before the sacred altar of our reconciliation, non solum rogans sed imperans, "not only as a servant but as a mother who commands." (6) Roga Patrem, jube nato, jure Matris impera, sings the Church of Paris in one of its sequences: "When thou hast aught to ask of the Eternal Father, O holy Virgin, resort to prayer and supplication; but when it is a question of the Son, then thy maternal authority gives thee the right to utter a command."

If anyone should claim that here the creature is being put above the Creator, I would ask him whether Sacred Scripture raises Josue above God when it says that the sun stood still and God obeyed the voice of a man. (7) No, this is not putting the creature above the Creator; the fact is that the Son of God has such love and respect for His holy Mother that her prayer to Him is equal to a command.

The Blessed Virgin, says St. Albertus Magnus, (8) is able to entreat her Son for the salvation of her servants, and she is able to command Him with the authority of a Mother. This is the favor we ask of her, he adds, when we use the words: Monstra te esse Matrem. It is a frequent prayer of the Church, a prayer that is most pleasing to her and most profitable to our souls. It is as if we said to her: Most holy Mother of God, let us see the incomparable mercies with which thy motherly heart is filled on behalf of thy most unworthy children; show us the mighty power that thy most benign heart hath upon the most merciful Heart of thy beloved Son: Monstra te esse Matrem, sumat per te preces, qui pro nobis natus tulit esse tuus.

CHAPTER 4

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS WAS FILLED WITH BITTER SORROW AT THE SIGHT OF
HIS LOVING MOTHER'S ANGUISH
DURING HIS PASSION

As THE ADORABLE HEART of our Saviour was on fire with infinite love for His most holy Mother, the anguish which He bore in seeing her plunged into a sea of sorrow at the time of His Passion was beyond the power of human word or thought. The Blessed Virgin was the Mother of our Redeemer and she ever sustained in her heart an unceasing combat of love. She knew that it was God's will that her Beloved Son should suffer and die to save souls. Thus her most ardent love for that divine will and for the salvation of souls placed her in utter submission to the commands of God. Her incomparable motherly love for her dear Son, however, caused her unspeakable sorrow, in view of the torments that He was to suffer to redeem the world.

The saints teach that when the day of His Passion had come, in accordance with the loving obedience with which He always honored His holy Mother, and the goodness He always showed in consoling His friends in their affliction, He took leave of His dear Mother before the beginnings of His sufferings. To do all things out of obedience to the will of His Father and His Mother, since she had not a will different from the Father's, He asked permission of her to carry out what His Eternal Father had commanded Him. He told her that it was the will of the Father that she should accompany Him to the foot of the Cross and that, after His death, she should wrap His body in a shroud and place it in the tomb. The saints also teach that He commanded her what to do and where to remain until His resurrection.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

It is also possible that He revealed to her what He had to suffer, as much to prepare her as to encourage her to accompany Him in His sufferings. Because their interior sorrows were unutterable, they did not declare them to each other in words; their eyes met and their Hearts understood their mutual afflictions. The most perfect love of both and their entire conformity to the divine will did not permit any imperfection in their natural feelings. On the one hand, the Saviour being the Only Son of His beloved Mother felt very keenly her sorrows; but, on the other, being her God and willing to fortify her in the greatest sorrow ever borne by a human being, He consoled her by His divine words, which she heard and kept carefully in her Heart. He poured an abundance of new grace into her soul so that she might endure and overcome the exceedingly terrible sorrows prepared for her. These sorrows were so great that if it had been possible and fitting for her to suffer in place of her Son, it would have been easier for her to do so. Her torments would thus have been much more bearable than the sight of her Son's Passion. It would have been infinitely preferable for her to give her life for Him than to watch Him suffer such dreadful tortures. Since God had willed otherwise, she offered her Heart and Jesus gave His body, so that each should suffer what God had ordained. Mary had to suffer all the torments of her Son in her extremely sensitive Heart; Jesus had to endure in His body inexplicable torments and in His Heart the inconceivable sufferings of His holy Mother.

When He had taken leave of His Mother, the Saviour plunged Himself into the immense ocean of His sorrows, and His desolate Mother accompanied Him in spirit as she remained in constant prayer. Thus that sad day began for her with prayers, tears, inner agonies, and a most perfect submission to the divine will, as she uttered in the depths of her Heart what her Son said to His Father in the Garden of Olives: "Father, not my will but thine be done." (1) The night that our Redeemer was seized in the Garden of Olives, the Jews led Him, bound and manacled, first to the House of Annas, then to that of Caiphas, where, weary of mocking and insulting Him, they kept Him a prisoner until the next day.

(I) LUKE 22, 42.

HIS LOVING MOTHER'S ANGUISH

St. John the Evangelist also left the house of Caiphas, whether by in order from our Saviour or by some divine inspiration, and went to the house of the Blessed Virgin to inform her of what had taken place. Who, O my God, could express the grief and sorrow of the Mother of Jesus as His beloved disciple recounted what had happened since the opening events of the Passion? Surely the feelings and the griefs of them both were such that whatever one might say of them would be as naught compared with the reality. They conversed more with their hearts than with their tongues, more with tears than with words, particularly the Blessed Virgin, whose grief was so intense that she could give no outward expression to it. Later, when the time came to accompany her Only Son to Calvary, she set out at daybreak in silence, even as her Divine Son, her Lamb, took up His Cross without a word. She bathed the way with her tears and her Heart set up a thousand ardent sighs to heaven. Let the devout followers of this sorrowing Virgin henceforth gladly pursue a way whereby they can accompany her in her sorrows.

The Jews led the Saviour to the house of Pilate and Herod, with every sort of insult and shame, but His sad Mother could not see Him because of the multitude and the noise of the people, until that moment when Pilate, after the scourging and the crowning of thorns, showed Him to the populace. Then it was that she heard the voices of the rabble, the uproar of the city, the insults vomited forth against Her Son, the outrages done Him, the blasphemies flung at Him. Her heart underwent immeasurable suffering and her eyes streamed with tears: Deduc quasi torrentem lacrymas. (2) As she had placed all her love in Him, she desired His presence above all else, even though it must have afflicted her the most, for love can be so ardent that it endures much less the absence of the object loved than the pain caused by the beloved's presence, however great the pain.

In all this bitterness and anguish, passing all imagination, this innocent Mother aspired to the sight of her Divine Son. Finally she saw Him all torn from head to foot with whips. His sacred head was pierced with cruel thorns, His adorable face bruised, swollen, stained with blood and spittle. With a rope around His neck and His hands bound, He wore the scarlet robe of mockery. Well did He know that His sorrowful Mother was there; and she, too, knew full well that His divine majesty read the feelings of her Heart, which was pierced with sorrows not inferior to those He bore in his own body. There she heard the false testimony given against Him; she heard them prefer Barrabas, a thief and a murderer. She heard thousands of voices shouting in anger: Tolle, tolle, crucifige, crucifige! (3) She heard the cruel and unjust sentence pronounced against the Author of life. She saw upraised the Cross, on which they were to crucify Him; she saw Him bearing it on His shoulders and beginning His march to Calvary. She followed his blood-stained footsteps and washed the way with as many tears as He shed drops of blood; and she bore inwardly the burden of the Cross, as heavy upon her heart as upon His shoulders.

At last she reached Calvary, accompanied by the holy women who sought to console her. Like her gentle Lamb she was silent, suffering unspeakable agony, hearing the hammer-blows struck by the executioners on the nails fastening her Son to the Cross. As she was extremely weak from her night of watching, tears and fasting, when she saw Him whom she loved more deeply than herself raised on the Cross, without being able to relieve Him in any way, she fell into the arms of those accompanying her, as ordinarily happens under the stress of great and excessive sorrow. Then as her tears dried, she lay there, pale, trembling mightily. No other fragrant water could be found to throw upon her face but the tears of grief of those who were supporting her, until such time as her Son restored her strength that she might accompany Him unto death. (4)

Whereupon, shedding new streams of tears, she began to suffer a fresh martyrdom of sorrow at the sight of her Son and her God hanging upon the Cross. Nevertheless, this did not prevent her from performing, within her soul, the office of mediatrix between God and sinners, cooperating with their Redeemer in saving them, and offering to the Father for them His blood, His sufferings, and His death, with the most ardent desire for their eternal happiness. On the one hand, the unspeakable love that she bore her dear Child made her fear to behold Him expire and die; on the other, it filled her with sorrow that His torments were dragging on so long, only to end in His death. Although she wanted the Eternal Father to soften the rigor of His torments, she also wished to conform wholly to His every command. Thus divine love engendered in her Heart a combat between conflicting desires and feelings which, from this same love, caused her to suffer unspeakable sorrows.

(4). The fact mentioned here by St. John Eudes is reported by several authors, but the most reliable theologians reject it because they think it is in opposition to the perfect control of all the notions of sensibility which they unanimously recognize in Mary, and to the quasi-priestly role that she had to fulfil during the Passion of her divine, Son. Cf. Terrien: La Mère des hommes, 1, p. 200, note 5.

These sacred Lambs, divine and human, beheld and understood each other and communicated to each other their sorrows. It may be said with certainty that no one can understand their anguish except the two Hearts of Son and Mother who, loving each other perfectly, together suffered these cruel torments. Their mutual love being the measure of their sorrows, those who consider their excruciating pain are all the less able to understand it the further they are from comprehending the love of such a Son for such a Mother, and of such a Mother for such a Son.

The sorrows of the Blessed Virgin went on increasing. They were being renewed continually by new insults and torments inflicted on her Son by the Jews in their wrath. What sorrow when she heard Him utter these words: "My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken me?" (5) What sorrow to see gall and vinegar given Him to quench His burning thirst! What sorrow when she watched Him die on the gibbet between criminals! What sorrow to behold His Heart pierced with a lance! What sorrow when she received Him dead, taken down from the Cross and placed in her arms! What sorrow when the disciples took His holy body from her embrace to enclose it in the sepulchre! With what sorrow must she have returned home, there to await His resurrection! How gladly would the holy Virgin have suffered all the pains of her Son rather than witness His endurance!

It is a result which perfect charity produces in the hearts of those who strive to imitate their Divine Father and their good Mother that they bear with joy their own afflictions and keenly feel those of others. Thus it is easier for them to endure pain themselves than to see the loved ones suffering. That is what our Saviour did throughout the course of His life and particularly on the day of His Passion. Knowing that the traitor had sold Him for money, He showed far deeper concern over the lost soul of Judas (saying it would have been better for him if he had never been born rather than merit damnation), than over the torments that He had to suffer by betrayal.

He also showed to the weeping women who were following Him as He carried His cross on His shoulders, how the tribulations which they and the city of Jerusalem would have to suffer, were more painful to Him than all that He was undergoing. "Daughters of Jerusalem," He said to them, "weep not over me; but weep for yourselves, and for your children. For behold, the days shall come wherein they will say: Blessed are the barren, and the wombs that have never borne, and the paps that have not given suck." (6)

Even while He was fastened to the cross, forgetting His own torments, He made it clear that the trials of sinners were felt more by Him than His own sufferings, in that He prayed His Father to pardon them. From this we know that His love for His creatures rendered Him more sensitive to their afflictions than to His own.

The greatest torture that our Saviour suffered on the Cross, a torture more painful to Him than His own bodily sufferings, was to see His most holy Mother whom He loved more than all creatures together, overwhelmed with sorrow. She was of all mothers the most perfect, the faithful companion of His journeys and of all His labors, who, being immaculate, deserved not to suffer for any fault that she had committed. Her motherly love was greater than that of all angels and saints. She saw Him suffering torments that never had nor ever will have their like. How great is the agony of such a Mother, who sees before her eyes such a Son so unjustly tortured and agonizing in a sea of sorrows, without being able to help Him! Truly this cross was so huge and heavy that no human soul is capable of comprehending it. It was a cross which was reserved for the grace, the love~ and the heroic virtues of the Mother of God.

(6). Luke 23, 28-29.

HIS LOVING MOTHERS ANGUISH

The fact that she was the innocent Mother of God did not prevent her from suffering such great torture. On the contrary, her Son would not permit anyone, even those who were crucifying Him, to dare to offer her insult or cause her grief. Desiring to make her like unto Himself, whose love was the principal and first cause of His sufferings and His death, He also willed that His love for His Mother and her love for Him should be the cause of the martyrdom of His heart at the end of His life, just as at the beginning it had been the source of His joys and satisfaction.

The Son of God witnessed from His cross all the griefs and sorrows of the holy Heart of His Blessed Mother; He heard her sighs, He saw her tears and the loneliness in which she was to remain after His death. Each vision was a new torment and a new martyrdom for the divine Heart of Jesus. Thus everything was present that could afflict and crucify the most lovable Hearts of the Son and the Mother. Therefore, some authorities think that when the Saviour spoke from the Cross to His sorrowful Mother, He did not wish to call her Mother, so as not to cause her more pain. He spoke only words which showed that He had not forgotten her and that, in accordance with His Father's will, He was succoring her in her loneliness, giving her the beloved disciple to be her son, saying: Mulier, ecce filius tuus "Woman, behold thy son;" and to the disciple, "Behold thy Mother," Ecce Mater tua. (7) Henceforth, St. John remained bound to the service of the Queen of heaven, honoring her as his Mother and serving her as his Lady, esteeming the service to her as the greatest favor that he could receive in this world from his loving Master.

All sinners have a share in this grace of St. John, for he represented all human beings at the foot of the Cross and our Saviour beheld them all in him; so in speaking to him He was addressing all men in general and each soul in particular, saying, Ecce Mater tua---~'Behold thy Mother." I give you my Mother to be yours, and I give you to her as her children. What a precious gift! What an inestimable treasure! What an incomparable grace! What an obligation we have to our Saviour in His unspeakable goodness! What thanks we should render Him! He has given His Divine Father to be our Father; and (7). John, 19, 26-27.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

He gives us His most holy Mother to be our Mother, so that we shall have with Him but one and the same Father and Mother. We are not worthy to be the slaves of this great Queen, and lo! He makes us her children! What reverence and humility we must have for such a Mother! What zeal and affection in her service! What pains we must take to imitate her holy virtues, so that there will be some resemblance between Mother and children!

This gentle Mother received great consolation when she heard the voice of her Dear Son. At the hour of death any word whatsoever from one's child or dear friend lends great comfort and peculiar consolation. Since those two Sacred Hearts, the Hearts of such a Son and of such a Mother so well understood each other, the Blessed Virgin. accepted most readily St. John as her son, and in him all sinners in general, knowing well that that was the intention of her dying Son. He was shedding His blood for sinners, and their sins were the cause of His death. He desired in that last hour to remove from them any possible mistrust of Him, when they saw the great sufferings that they had caused Him by their sins. To that end He gave them His most valued treasure, a treasure most capable of influencing Him, His most holy Mother, so that by her mediation and protection they might have the confident assurance of being received and welcomed by His divine majesty. One cannot doubt, therefore, the inestimable love of the Mother of goodness for sinners, since, in that spiritual begetting at the foot of the Cross, she suffered unspeakable pain which was absent from the Virgin birth of her Son and her God.

All these things clearly show that the sorrows of the Mother and the sufferings of the Son culminate in immense graces, blessings, and favors for sinners. What an obligation we have, therefore, to honor, to love and to praise those two most lovable Hearts of Jesus and Mary; to employ our whole life in serving and glorifying them; and to endeavor to imprint on our hearts a perfect image of their most eminent virtues! It is impossible to please them if we follow any other path except the one they trod upon earth.

CHAPTER 5

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS A FURNACE OF LOVE FOR THE CHURCH TRIUMPHANT, MILITANT AND SUFFERING

IT IS CERTAINLY TRUE that this adorable Heart is a burning furnace of divine love, radiating its fire and game in all directions, in heaven, on earth, and even in hell: in heaven in the Church Triumphant, on earth in the Church Militant, and in purgatory in the Church Suffering, and to some degree even in the hell of the damned.

If we lift our eyes and hearts to heaven, to the Church Triumphant, what shall we see? We shall behold an innumerable army of saints, patriarchs, prophets, apostles, martyrs, confessors and virgins. What are all these saints? They are so many flames from the immense furnace of the divine Heart of Jesus. Is it not the love of that kind Heart which brought them into the world, enlightened them with the light of faith, and gave them strength to conquer the devil, the world and the flesh? Is it not the goodness of that amiable Heart which adorned them with all virtues, sanctified them in this world and glorified them in the other; which kindled in their hearts the love they bear to God, inspired their lips with His divine praises, which is the source of all that is great and holy and admirable in them? If then one celebrates during the course of the year so many feasts in honor of these same saints, what a solemnity is due to this divine Heart which is the principle of everything that is glorious and noble in all the saints!

Let us come down to earth and see what is most worthy and great in the Church Militant. It is the holy Sacraments—the Sacrament of Baptism by which we are made children of God; Confirmation, which gives us the Holy Spirit; Penance, which washes away our sins and restores us to God's favor; the Blessed Eucharist, which feeds our souls with the flesh and blood of the Son of God, making us live by His life; Matrimony, which forms children for God, to serve and honor Him on earth and to love and praise Him forever in heaven; Holy Orders, which gives to the Church priests who shall continue the functions of the great High Priest and thus cooperate with Him in the great work of the salvation of the world, so that they bear the name and the character of saviours in Holy Scripture: Ascendent salvatores in montem Sion; (1) and Extreme Unction, which at our departure from this world fortifies us against the enemies of our salvation, who at that last hour make their final endeavor to ruin us.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

The seven Sacraments are so many inexhaustible fountains of grace and holiness, which have their source in the immense ocean of the Sacred Heart of our Saviour; they are so many flames of a divine furnace from which proceed all spiritual blessings. But the brightest of those flames is the most Holy Eucharist. It is true that this great Sacrament is a compendium of all the wonders of the power, wisdom and goodness of God, but it is also true that it is one of the fruits of the incomparable Heart of Jesus and one of the flames of that wondrous furnace.

Since a solemn feast is celebrated by Holy Church in honor of the Blessed Sacrament, what a solemnity should also be kept in honor of His most Sacred Heart, which is the source of all that is great and rare and precious in this august Sacrament?

Let us, as it were, descend in spirit to purgatory, to the Church Suffering. What is purgatory? It is the awe-inspiring throne of divine justice, which metes out in this place punishments so terrible that St. Thomas says: Minima poena purgatorii excedit omnes poenas huius mundi. "The slightest pain suffered there surpasses all the sufferings of this world." (2) St. Augustine says the same thing as the Angelic Doctor (3). Nevertheless, the terrible justice of God does not hold such sway in purgatory that mercy has no part there. Mercy with justice has constituted purgatory, to open paradise, which would remain closed to the majority of men if purgatory did not exist, because it is a truth of our faith that nothing contaminated shall enter heaven: Nihil coinquinatum intrabit in regnum caelorum. (4) Thus a soul, even though it had but one venial sin on quitting the body, would never enter paradise unless the merciful Saviour had established purgatory to purify it. And so purgatory is a result of the goodness and charity of the most benign Heart of our Redeemer.

Let us descend still lower. Let us go in spirit into hell, since St. Chrysostom declares that not one of those who thus go there during this life to inspire themselves to the work of their salvation with fear and trembling shall descend there after death.

What is hell? It is a place of torment, according to the Holy Gospel: Locus tormentorum; (5) it is gehenna ignis; (6) supplicium aeternum; (7) "the pain of fire, an eternal punishment"; in short, it is the place of the vengeance and anger of God. But the infinite mercy of the Sacred Heart of Jesus is manifested there in three ways.

First, His goodness provides that the damned are not punished as much as they deserve; for sin deserves infinite punishment, seeing that it is an offense committed against a God who infinitely deserves to be served and obeyed, and against a God to whom we have infinite obligations. Sin deserves infinite punishment not only as to extent and duration, but also intensively as to the degree and quality of the punishment. Now, although the pains of the reprobate are infinite as to extent and duration, they are limited as to intensiveness and degree, seeing that Our Lord could increase them ever more and more. This He does not do because of the ineffable goodness of His most tender Heart.

Secondly, His justice has established a hell to punish the wicked who die in their sins, but His mercy too has fashioned it, says St. Chrysostom, to inspire the fear of God in the hearts of the good and to lead them to work out their salvation cum timore et tremore, (8) with fear and trembling.

Thirdly, the unparalleled goodness of our Saviour employs the fires of hell to enkindle in our hearts the fire of divine love. In what way? In this manner. If you had deserved punishment by fire, what an obligation you would have to love the person who delivered you from such a heavy penalty! How few persons there are on earth who have never committed a mortal sin! There are very few indeed. And what was the just desert of all those who offended God mortally even but once in their whole life? They have merited hell, but on them alone does it depend to be freed therefrom. To whom do they owe this obligation? To the immense charity of the most kind Heart of our Redeemer, which gives them infinite obligations to serve and to love Him. Acknowledge that the loving kindnesses of the amiable Heart of this divine Saviour are exceedingly admirable; that He uses even the fires of hell to draw us to love Him and hence to belong to the number of those who shall possess Him eternally.

And so this divine furnace, the adorable Heart of Jesus, diffuses everywhere its fiery flames, in heaven, on earth, and even in hell. O ineffable goodness! O wondrous love! O God of my heart, would that I possessed all the hearts that have ever been, are, and shall be, in heaven, on earth, and under the earth, to employ them in loving, praising and glorifying Thee unceasingly! O Jesus, only Son of God, only Son of Mary, I offer Thee the most loving Heart of Thy divine Mother which is more precious and pleasing to Thee than all hearts. O Mary, Mother of Jesus, I offer Thee the most adorable Heart of Thy Well-beloved Son, who is the life and love and joy of thy Heart.

(8) Eph. 6, 5.

CHAPTER 6

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS A FURNACE OF LOVE FOR EACH ONE OF US

To APPRECIATE this truth, let us consider the wondrous effects of the inconceivable goodness and the unspeakable love of the Sacred Heart towards us. Two of these effects which embody many more are here given.

The first is that of having delivered us from the abyss of evils into which sin had plunged us. By sin we were made enemies of God, the object of His wrath and curse, excommunicated from the Most Holy Trinity, anathematized by the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost, separated from the company of angels, banished from the home of our Heavenly Father; by sin we were driven from paradise, cast into hell, plunged into the devouring flames of eternal fire, subjected to the terrible tyranny of Satan, enslaved by demons, given over to their rage and fury, condemned to the rightful punishments of hell, and without hope of succor or relief.

Exceedingly terrible as are those evils there is yet one which exceeds them all. What is that but sin, which is the evil of evils and the sole cause of all the others on earth and in hell. What an evil is sin! To understand something of its malice, imagine all men who have lived, are now living, and will live upon earth; imagine that each of them possesses the holiness of a St. John the Baptist; imagine also all the angels of heaven as having taken mortal flesh and being joined to the multitude of men. Even if all these men and angels were to shed their blood to the last drop and suffer all the torments of hell for eternity, they would not be able to deliver us from the tiniest venial sin; they would not be able to render perfect and worthy satisfaction to God for the offense done Him, nor consequently to free us from the slightest evil we should have merited by that sin, nor give us that drop of water which the rich man craved so long ago.

If one venial sin is so great an evil, what of mortal sin? What is it to be the slave of that infernal monster, which is more hideous and terrible than all the monsters and dragons of earth and hell?

Such is the pit of evils into which we had been plunged, from which there was no hope of escape, since all human powers and all the forces of heaven and earth were powerless to deliver us. Yet it has transpired, by a boon which we cannot comprehend, that we were liberated! To whom do we owe this? To the most loving Heart of our adorable Redeemer. We were delivered from so many evils by the immeasurable goodness, the infinite mercy, and the matchless love of that divine Heart. What had we done, what service rendered, to constrain Him thereto? Nothing whatever. It was out of purest love that He honored us with such a favor. What did He do to obtain for us so great a blessing? He did and suffered all. The cost to Him was dear, His blood, His life, a thousand torments, and a most cruel and shameful death. What obligations we have to honor, praise, and love that most benign Heart in return for all these benefits!

Suppose a man is a bandit-gunman. He has robbed a wealthy merchant by violence. He is caught, imprisoned, tried, condemned to death, and there he is in the hands of the hangman who is putting the rope around his neck. The merchant arrives at that very moment. By dint of money, the entreaties of friends, and even by the offer of his own life for the culprit, he obtains a pardon for the criminal and sets him free. How great is the bandit's debt to his rescued

For our crimes we were condemned to the pains of hell. The only begotten Son of God, out of the inconceivably abundant goodness of His divine Heart, suffered a most atrocious and shameful death in order to deliver us. Try to estimate how indebted we are to that adorable Heart. An elephant will give itself entirely for the rest of its life to serve a man who had released it from a pit. What shall I give in return to Thee, my Saviour, and what shall I do for Thy love of me? Thou hast snatched me out of the frightful jaws of hell as often as ever I have fallen into them by sinning, or would have fallen if the charity of Thy dear Heart had not held me back. Does it take a dumb animal to teach me the lesson of gratitude which I owe Thee for Thy unspeakable mercies?

Such is the first effect, or rather the effect without number or measure of the tremendous love which the Sacred Heart of our Redeemer has manifested in delivering us from immeasurable evils. But it is not enough for him to have freed us from all those punishments; He would likewise shower us with inconceivable gifts. What a favor and fortune it is, not only to be snatched from hell but to be raised to heaven, to be made a citizen of paradise where there is a general exemption from all sorts of evils and where one possesses fully, entirely, unchangeably, eternally all sorts of boons! What a favor and a fortune to be associated with the angels, to be their companion, to be seated beside their throne, to live the angelic life, to be clothed with their glory, to enjoy their felicity, in short, to resemble the angels: Erunt aequales angelis Dei! ( 1 )

What extraordinary fortune to be ranked with the children of God, the heirs of the great God, the co-heirs of the Son of God: Videte qualem caritatem dedit nobis Pater, ut filii Dei nominemur et Simus!(2) What a remarkable privilege to be kings of an everlasting kingdom and to possess the same kingdom that the Father of Jesus has given to His Son: Sicut disposuit mihi Pater, et ego dispono vobis regnum! (3) What a blessed invitation to eat at the table of the King of heaven: Ut edatis et bibatis super mensam meam. (4) What a great joy to be clothed in the glorious royal robe of the King of kings: Caritatem quam dedisti mihi, dedi eis! ( 5 ) What a supreme favor to share the throne of the Sovereign Monarch of the universe: Qui vicerit, dabo ei sedere mecum in throno meo! ( 6 ) What an incomparable blessing to dwell quietly with our Saviour in the bosom and in the adorable Heart of His Divine Father: Pater, quos dedisti mihi, volo ut ubi sum ego, et illi sint mecum.<sup>7</sup> "Father, I will that where I am, they also whom thou hast given me may be with me." Where art Thou, my Saviour? In sinu Patris, "in the bosom of the Father," says St. John. (8)

What a fortune, moreover, to share all the good things that God possessed He who has God shall enjoy all the manifold glory, happiness and wealth of God: Amen dico vobis, super omnia bona sua constituet eum. (9) What a blessing to be wholly transformed into God, to be clothed, filled, penetrated with all the perfections of God, more perfectly than the iron in the midst of the furnace is penetrated by the qualities of the fire! Finally, what a blessing to be united to God: Sicut tu Pater in me, et ego in te, ita et ipsi in nobis unum sunt: divinae consortes naturae. "(10). What a privilege to be by grace and by participation what God is by nature and by essence!

What created mind can understand these surpassing gifts? Could all the tongues of men and angels express the least part of them? Is it not true what St. Paul says, that all those blessings are so great that "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, what things God hath prepared for them that love him:" Nec oculus vidit nec auris audivit, nec in car hominis ascendit quae praeparavit Deus diligentibus se. ( 1 1 )

Now, to whom do we owe all those blessings? To the boundless generosity and infinite love of the most kind Heart of our lovable Saviour. Hence, what honor, what praise, what thanksgiving we must render Him, and with what devotion we must celebrate the solemnity of that most august Heart! Suppose that the aforesaid merchant who was robbed not only delivered the gunman from the hands of the executioner and from the shameful death he was ready to suffer, but also gave him half of his goods. How would that criminal ever be able to repay such goodness?

Our divine Saviour has done more for us. Not only has He delivered us from eternal death and all the tortures accompanying it, but He has also heaped upon us a superabundance of unspeakable blessings. Indeed, He has given us all His blessings without reserve.

What shall we give Him in return? Quid retribuam Domino, pro omnibus quae retribuit mihi? (12) If we had the hearts of as many Seraphim as there are stars in the sky, atoms in the air, blades of grass on the earth, grains of sand and drops of water in the sea, and if we devoted them solely to love and glorify Him, it would be as nothing compared with the love He has for us and the obligations we have of consecrating our hearts to Him.

Yet what are we and the great majority of men doing? Is it not true that we treat this adorable Redeemer as ungratefully as if we had never received any boon from Him? Is it not true that we treat Him as if He had done us all the evil in the world? But is it not true that He has neglected nothing, that if it came even to all His glory and His own safety, He would not have been able to do more than He has done for love of us? Quid potui facere et non feci? "(13) If it were possible, He says to St. Bridget, that I should suffer all the torments of My Passion as many times as there are souls in hell, I would most gladly suffer them, for charity is as much aflame in my Heart now as it was then.

Even so, is it not still true that the majority of men on earth treat that loving Saviour as if He were their enemy? What insults, what crimes, what cruelty and abuse could they practise against Him that they do not already practise? In short, what more despicable thing could they do than to crucify Him every day? Yes, crucify Him; for anyone who mortally offends Him crucifies Him, rursus Christum crucifigentes, (14) and commits a greater crime than did the Jews, for they did not know Him.

Let us detest and recoil from such ingratitude and such abominable wickedness. Let us open our ears to the voice, or rather the voices of our Saviour. I say "voices," for all the evils from which He has delivered us and all the blessings without number that He has given us are so many voices crying out to us: Sic Deus dilexit nos.(15 )"God so loved us." Therefore let us love Him who so loves us. If a man of no account, the weakest and lowest of all men, should manifest some kindness towards us, we could not help loving him. Nay, if even a dumb animal, a mongrel, for instance, attaches itself to us and does us some slight service, we love it. Why then should we not love God who is our creator, our preserver, our ruler, our king, our most faithful friend, our most loving father, our treasure, our glory, our supreme good, our life, our heart, our all? He is all heart and soul and love for us.

"O my Saviour, I know not if I have yet begun to love Thee as I ought. Dixi,~ nunc coepi." (16) I now mean to love Thee with all my heart with all my soul, and with all my strength. I renounce forever all that is contrary to Thy holy love. Let me die a thousand deaths rather than ever offend Thee. I give Thee my heart; take full and absolute possession of it; destroy in it everything not pleasing to Thee, and rather destroy it itself than to allow it not to love Thee: aut amare Jesum meum, aut mori. But am I giving Thee anything in giving Thee my empty heart? O my Lord, if I had the hearts of as many Seraphim as Thy omnipotence could create, with what joy would I consecrate them all to Thee! I offer Thee the precious heart of Thy most worthy Mother, who has more love for Thee than all hearts that have been, are, or shall be. O Mother of Jesus, love Thy Adorable Son for me. O good Jesus, love Thy sweet Mother for me. O all ye citizens of the heavenly Jerusalem, love Jesus and Mary for me, and unite me with your great love, now and eternally.'

CHAPTER 7

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS A FURNACE OF LOVE FOR US IN THE BLESSED SACRAMENT

ST. BERNARD appropriately refers to the Blessed Sacrament of the Eucharist as "the Love of loves," Amor amorum. If we use the eyes of faith to contemplate the marvelous effects of our Saviour's ineffable goodness to us in this adorable mystery, we shall see eight flames of love issuing continually from this wondrous furnace.

The first flame is the inconceivable love of the Sacred Heart of Jesus which impelled Him to imprison Himself in this Sacrament and has constrained Him to abide there continuously night and day, for nearly two thousand years, to be always with us, so as to fulfil the promise of these words: Ecce ego vobiscum sum omnibus diebus, usque ad consummationem saeculi. "Behold I am with you all days, even to the consummation of the world." (1) He is the Good Shepherd who wishes always to be with His flock. He is the divine Physician who wishes always to be at the bedside of His patients. He is the Father full of affection who never leaves His children. He is the Friend most loyal and tender, whose delight it is to be with His friends: Deliciae meae esse cum filiis hominum. (2)

The second flame of this fiery furnace is the love of our Saviour's adorable Heart vibrating in great and significant actions on our behalf in this Sacrament. He is there adoring, praising and glorifying His Father unceasingly for us, to satisfy to the full our infinite obligations of adoring, praising and glorifying. He is there continually ally giving thanks to the Father for all the corporal and spiritual blessings, natural and supernatural, temporal and eternal, which He has ever given to us, which He gives at each moment, and plans to give us, provided we interpose no obstacle. He is there loving His Father for us, paying to the full our debts and obligations of loving Him. He is there offering His merits to satisfy His Father's justice and to pay Him on our behalf what we owe Him by reason of our sins. He is there continually praying to His Father for all our spiritual and temporal needs. Semper vivens ad interpellandum pro nobis. (3)

The third flame of this furnace is the infinite love of our dear Redeemer, who exercises His omnipotence so as to perform in this adorable Sacrament many stupendous miracles, changing bread into His body and wine into His blood, and performing several other wonders incomparably surpassing all those of Moses, of the prophets, and of the apostles, and even of our Saviour during His sojourn on earth. All those miracles were performed only in Judea, while these take place throughout the universe. The visible miracles were transitory and of short duration; the invisible have been continuous for more than nineteen hundred years and they will endure till the end of time. The former were effected on bodies separated from their souls and then restored to life, on sick persons who were healed, on water changed to wine, but the latter are effected on the adorable body of God, on His Precious Blood, and even on the glory and grandeur of His divinity, which is hidden in this Sacrament.

The fourth flame is indicated in the inspired words of St. Peter, the Prince of the Apostles:

Mixit Deus Filium suum benedicientem, vobis. "God hath sent his Son to bless you:" (4) This Adorable Son has come filled with love for you and with a most ardent desire to pour out His blessings upon those who honor Him and love Him as their Father. It is chiefly in this divine Sacrament that He showers His blessings upon those who open the way to His grace.

The fifth flame is His immense love which constrains Him to give to us all the treasures of grace and holiness which He acquired on earth. To us He does give them, indeed, in the Blessed Eucharist~ boons immeasurable and infinite, graces most abundant and special, provided we have the dispositions required for receiving them.

LOVE FOR US IN THE BLESSED SACRAMENT

The sixth flame is that burning love always impelling Him to enrich us with the gifts and graces which He acquired by His Precious Blood, and to give Himself to us without reserve in Holy Communion. He gives us His divinity, His humanity, His divine person, His adorable body, His Precious Blood, His holy soul, in short, all that He has and all that He is, as God and as man. Consequently, He will give us His Eternal Father and His Holy Spirit which are inseparable from Him, just as He will inspire us with devotion to His most holy Mother, who everywhere follows her divine Lamb, much more than do the holy virgins of whom it is said: Sequuntur Agnum quocumque ierit. (5)

The seventh flame is the incredible love of the Blessed Saviour in immolating Himself continually for us, a love that surpasses in every way the charity by which He was immolated on the altar of the Cross. There He sacrificed Himself on Calvary only; here He sacrifices Himself all over the world by means of the Blessed Eucharist. There He immolated Himself once only; here He sacrifices Himself thousands of times daily. It is true that the Sacrifice of the Cross was accomplished in a sea of sorrows and that it is accomplished here in an ocean of joy and felicity, but the Heart of our Redeemer is still, in our day, as flaming with love for us as it was then. Jesus is ready, if it were possible and necessary for our salvation, to undergo the same sufferings that He bore in His immolation on Calvary, as many times as He sacrifices Himself on the altars throughout the world because of His infinite love for us.

The eighth flame of this wonderful furnace of love consists of the love that our most benign Redeemer manifests to us when He gives men continual evidence of His goodness at a time when He receives from them nothing but the most furious hatred imaginable. At what moment does He thus manifest such love? At the time of the institution of this divine Sacrament, the last day of His life, the flight before His death. At that very moment men are not less moved with rage and fury against Him than the devils themselves; for what does He say? Haec est hora vestra, et potestas tenebrarum. (6)

"O my Saviour, on that first Holy Thursday evening, Thy thoughts were only of peace, charity, and good will for men, whereas the Jews thought only of malice and cruelty. Thou didst seek only to save them; they sought only to do away with Thee. Thy whole Heart and Thy whole mind were bent on breaking the chains that held them bound as the slaves of demons; and they would sell Thee, betray Thee and deliver Thee into the hands of Thy cruel enemies. Thou wast preoccupied with establishing an adorable Sacrament whereby always to abide with them, but they were striving to drive Thee from the world, to banish Thee from off the earth, and even to destroy Thee if they could but do so. Thou didst prepare for them on earth boundless graces and in heaven thrones magnificent and glorious crowns, if they were willing to render themselves worthy of them, but they were preparing for Thee ropes, lashes, thorns, nails, lances, crosses, spittle, revilings, blasphemies and all sorts of shameful outrageous cruelties. Thou didst set before them a most delectable feast of Thy own flesh and blood, and they gave Thee gall and vinegar to drink. Thou didst give them Thy holy and immaculate body and they bruised it by blows, they cut it with their lashes, they pierced it in a thousand places with thorns and nails, they covered it with wounds from head to foot, they dismembered it on the Cross, causing it to suffer the most atrocious tortures. Finally, my Saviour, Thou didst love them more than Thy own life and blood since Thou didst sacrifice them for Thy enemies. In return, they rent Thy soul from Thy body by violence.

"What goodness! what charity! what love flowing from Thy adorable Heart, O my Saviour! What ingratitude! what wickedness! what cruelty stemming from the heart of man!

"What happened then still happens today. Thy most loving Heart, O Jesus, dwells in this Sacrament, burning with love for us. It is there continually performing thousands of good deeds towards us. How do we repay Thee, O Lord? We repay Thee with ingratitude and injuries a thousandfold, in thought, word and deed, trampling under foot Thy divine commandments and those of the Church. Ungrateful wretches, our most gracious Saviour so loved us that, while He was on earth, He would have died a thousand deaths for love of us if He had not miraculously preserved His life. He is still ready to die a hundred thousand times for us if it were possible and necessary for our salvation. Let us then die, die of sorrow in beholding our sins; let us die of shame that we have so little love for Him; let us die a thousand deaths rather than ever offend Him again. O my Saviour, grant us this favor, we implore Thee! O Mother of Jesus, obtain for us this grace from thy Well-beloved Son!"

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS A FURNACE BURNING WITH LOVE FOR US IN HIS SACRED PASSION

THE ENTIRE EARTHLY LIFE Of our adorable Saviour was a continual exercise of charity and goodness towards us. But it was at the time of His Passion that He gave us the most remarkable proofs of His love. Then it was that out of the abundance of his charity, He suffered frightful torments to deliver us from the terrible punishments of hell and to win for us the everlasting joys of heaven. It was then that His adorable body was covered with wounds and bathed in His blood. His sacred head was pierced with sharp thorns, His hands and feet were transfixed with huge nails, His ears filled with blasphemies and curses, His lips moistened with gall and vinegar, and his soul forcibly and painfully wrenched from His body by the cruel Jews. At that time particularly His divine Heart was rent by countless painful, bleeding wounds. Indeed, one can count the wounds in the adorable Heart of Jesus. There are two kinds of wounds, resulting from two different causes.

The first cause of those most painful wounds in the Sacred Heart of our Redeemer is our sins. We read in the life of St. Catherine of Genoa that one day God let her see the horror of one tiny venial sin. She assures us that, although this vision lasted but a moment, she saw nevertheless an object so frightening that the blood froze in her veins and she swooned away in an agony that would have killed her if God had not preserved her to relate to others what she had seen. Wherefore she declared that if she were in the very depths of a sea of flaming fire and it were in her power to be set free, on con dition that she should once more behold such a spectacle, she would choose to remain rather than to escape. If the sight of the smallest venial sin brought this saint to such a pass, what must we think of the state to which our Saviour was reduced by seeing all the sins of the universe? He had them continually before His eyes, and His vision being infinitely more powerful than that of St. Catherine, He could behold infinitely more horror.

LOVE FOR US IN HIS SACRED PASSION

He saw the immeasurable insult and dishonor caused His Father by all sins; He saw the damnation of a countless number of souls resulting from those sins. As He had infinite love for His Father and His creatures, the sight of all those sins rent His Heart with countless wounds, such that if we were able to count all the sins of men, which are more numerous than the drops of water in the sea, we would then be able to count the wounds of the loving Heart of Jesus.

The second cause of His wounds is the infinite love of His Sacred Heart for all His children, and his constant vision of all the afflictions and sufferings that are to happen to them, especially all the torments that His holy martyrs are to suffer. When a mother watches her beloved child suffering, she feels the pain more keenly than the child. Our Saviour's love for us is so tremendous that if all the love of all parents were centered in a single heart, it would not represent even a spark of the love for us that burns in His Heart. Our pains and sorrows, ever present to His vision and seen most clearly and distinctly, were so many wounds bleeding in His paternal Heart: Vere nostros ipse tulit, et aegrotationes nostras portavit.(1) These wounds were so painful and deep that they would have caused His death a thousand times over, even immediately after His birth, if he had not miraculously preserved Himself, because during His whole earthly life His Sacred Heart was continually pierced by many mortal wounds of love.

Therefore we have the greatest obligations to honor the gracious Heart that sustained so many wounds for love of us. We have potent reasons to fear new sins, thus giving him occasion to lament over us: Super dolorem vulnerum meorum. "They have added to the

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

grief of my wounds." (2). We ought to fear lest we be of the number of those of whom St. Paul says that they crucify Him afresh: Rursus Christum crucifigentes! (3). With what affection should we embrace, and endure all our afflictions, out of love for Jesus, our Saviour, since He first bore them for love of us! Should they not be most sweet to us, since they have already passed through His most gentle and loving Heart? What a horror we should have of our sins that have caused so many wounds and such intense grief to the divine Heart of our Redeemed

We read in the life of St. Francis Borgia, of the Society of Jesus, that one day the saint was speaking in front of a crucifix to a great sinner whom he was exhorting to be converted, but could not soften the hard sinful heart. Suddenly the crucifix, or rather the Crucified Saviour, out of His wondrous and abundant goodness, spoke to the sinner and urged him to follow the advice of His servant. At the same time there issued blood from all His wounds. This was a sign that our Blessed Saviour was ready once again to shed His blood and to die for his salvation if need be. But in spite of such miraculous goodness, as the wretched man still remained adamant, there issued a stream of blood from the wound at His side, which gushed over him and Struck him dead on the spot. O God, what a fearful sight!

Let us learn from the foregoing example that it is not our Redeemer's fault if we are lost. There are hearts so hard that, even if Jesus Himself were to come down from heaven to preach to them and they were to see Him covered with wounds and bathed in His blood, they would still not be converted. O my God, let us not be one of them, but give us the grace to open our ears to the voice of all the sacred wounds of Thy body and Thy heart, which are so many mouths through which Thou dost call to us unceasingly: Redite, praevaricatores, ad cor. "Return, ye transgressors, to the heart," (4). which means to My heart that is all yours, since I have given it entirely to you. Return to that most loving Heart of your Father, which is full of love and mercy for you, which will receive you and welcome you home, heaping upon you all blessings. But redite, return without delay, completely, with all your affections. Leave sin, renounce hell, flee from all occasions of wickedness and embrace the practice of all virtues. Blessed are they who yield to that voice; cursed they who close their ears and harden their hearts like that unfortunate man just mentioned. Cor durum male habebit in novissimo: "A hard heart shall fear evil at the last." (5) Evil shall be the lot of the hard heart; it shall perish everlastingly; it shall abide in wrath forever, and shall suffer inconceivable and incomprehensible tortures eternally.

O my Saviour, I give Thee my heart; preserve it from this evil. O Mother of mercy, I give thee also my loving heart; do thou give it to thy Son, begging Him to rank it with the holy hearts that shall love the Son and the Mother forever!

(5). Eccl. 3, 27

CHAPTER 9

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS ONE WITH THE HEART OF THE FATHER AND THE HOLY GHOST; THE ADORABLE HEART OF BLESSED TRINITY IS A FURNACE OF BURNING LOVE FOR US

CHRISTIAN FAITH TEACHES that there are three Persons in the adorable mystery of the Holy Trinity; three Persons who have but one and the same divinity, one and the same power, wisdom, goodness, one and the same mind, will, and even one and the same heart. Thence it is that our Saviour, as God, has but one and the same Heart with the Father and the Holy Ghost; and as man, His humanly divine and divinely human Heart is but one also with the Heart of the Father and the Holy Ghost, by a unity of mind, love and will. Therefore to adore the Sacred Heart of Jesus is to adore the Heart of the Father, of the Son and of the Holy Ghost; to adore a Heart that is a burning furnace of love towards us. Into that furnace we must plunge so as to burn there forever. Unhappy they who shall be cast into the terrible furnace of eternal fire which is prepared for the devil and his angels, but blessed are they who shall be thrown into the eternal fire of divine love which enkindles the adorable Heart of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost for our sake. That we may stir ourselves to plunge in wholeheartedly, let us picture what that fire and that love are.

If you desire to learn the exact nature of the love of the paternal Heart of the divine Father of Jesus, listen to St. Paul: Proprio Filio non pepercit, sed pro nobis omnibus tradidit illum. "He that spared not even his own Son, but delivered him up for us all." (1) The Father sent His Only-begotten Son into this world to testify to us His love in a wondrous way. Before sending the Redeemer He knew full well how we would treat Him. He knew that, as Jesus must be born on earth to raise men up to heaven, His divine Mother would seek shelter for His birth and would find no place to lay His infant head. Non erat locus in diversorio. (2) He knew that, as soon as He was born, men would seek to slay Him, and that He would be compelled to flee and hide away in a foreign country. He knew that when He began to teach and preach the word of His Father they would regard Him as a mad man, they would repeatedly take up rocks to stone Him, and would lead Him into a high mountain to attempt to dash Him to destruction. He foresaw that they would bind and shackle Him like a thief, drag Him through the streets of Jerusalem like a criminal, subject Him to endless insults and torments and condemn Him to die the cruellest and most infamous death. After He had risen, they would endeavor to stifle any growing belief in His Resurrection. After He had established the Church and Sacraments to apply to souls the fruits of His Passion and death, even the majority of Christians would misuse these Sacraments, profane them and make them serve to their greater condemnation. Finally, He knew that in spite of His labor, sufferings, and death, too many souls would condemn His Precious Blood, making void and useless all that He accomplished for their salvation, because they would perish miserably. "Thou seest all these things, O adorable Father, and yet Thou dost not hesitate to send us Thy Well-beloved Son. Who hath constrained Thee to do this? It is the utterly incomprehensible love of Thy fatherly Heart for us. O Father of mercies, it seems almost as if Thou dost love us more than Thyself and Thy Son (Thy Son being but one with Thee). Seemingly, for love of us, Thou hatest Thy Son, hence Thyself (Thou being but one with Him). O exceeding, inconceivable goodness! O wondrous love! There is some thing of that infinite love of the loving Heart of the Eternal Father for us."

THE BLESSED TRINITY

(1). Rom. 8, 32.

(2). Luke 2, 7.

Would you now behold the incomprehensible love of the divine Heart of the Son of God? Hear Him speak: Sicut dilexit me Pater, et ego dilexi vos. "As the Father hath loved me, I also have loved you." (3) My Father so loves you that for love of you He hath surrendered me to death, the death of the Cross; and I so love you that for love of you I abandoned myself to the powers of darkness and to the wrath of my mortal enemies, the Jews: Haec est hora vestra et polestar tenebrarum. (4) O my Saviour, well may I say to Thee, with Thy faithful servant, St. Bonaventure, that Thou so lovest me that seemingly Thou dost hate Thyself for me: Domine, in tantum dilexisti me, ut te pro me odisse videaris. (5)

Let us come now to the love of the Holy Ghost, who is the Heart of the Father and the Son. When this divine Spirit formed the God-Man in the sacred womb of the Blessed Virgin Mary to give Him to us, did He know what we were to do? Did He know all the outrages and cruel deeds that men were to perpetrate against Him? Did He know that men would bend all their energies to destroy His wonderful masterpiece, the God-Man? Yes, He knew it well. Yet He did not hesitate to form Him in Mary's womb, to let Him be born for us, to appear in the form of a dove above His head during His Baptism in the waters of the Jordan, to make us recognize Him. He did not hesitate to lead His Son into the desert to do penance for our sins, to urge Him to preach the Holy Gospel and to proclaim to us the truths of heaven: Spiritus Domini super me; propter quod unxit me, evangelizare pauperibus misit me. (6) He did not hesitate to sacrifice Him on the Cross for our redemption: Per Spiritum sanctum semetipsum obtulit. (7) O love that hath no equal! O spirit of love and charity, bear with me when I say that seemingly Thou hast more love for man as sinner and culprit than for the God-Man who is the Holy of holies; for a slave of Satan than for the Only-begotten Son of God; for a firebrand of hell than for the King of heaven.

THE BLESSED TRINITY

O wonder without parallel! Who has thus bound Thee in a spell? Pardon me, O adorable Spirit, if I speak thus, but is it not true that the exceeding great love Thou hast for us seems to have cast a spell over Thee as well as over the Divine Father and His Only Son? How true is the saying, Amare et sapere vix Deo conceditur!

Even so do the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost love us: Sic Deus dilexit mundum; (8) even thus their divine Heart is a burning furnace of love for us.

What then shall we do to acknowledge such goodness? What dost Thou ask of us, O God? Do we not hear His voice calling to us, calling, calling, for so long? Fili, praebe cor tuum mihi: "My son, give me thy heart." (9)

An eminent prelate, John Zumarraga, first Archbishop of Mexico, in the Indies of America (New Spain), wrote to the Chapter of his Order, assembled at Toulouse in 1532. According to the report of Drexelius of the Society of Jesus, the Archbishop narrated that before the inhabitants of the city of Mexico were converted, they worshipped the devil through idols. He exercised such a cruel tyranny that he obliged them to slaughter each year twenty thousand little children, boys as well as girls, and to cut out the heart of each child to be sacrificed to Satan on a fire of red-hot coals as incense. If in Mexico City alone the hearts of more than twenty thousand young children were immolated to Satan, you can imagine how many were sacrificed to him every year throughout the whole kingdom of Mexico.

We worship a God who does not ask of us things so strange. True, He asks for our heart, but He has no desire that it be cut from our body. He is satisfied if we give Him our affections, especially love and hate: our love to love Him above all things, with all our strength; our hate to hate only sin. What is sweeter than to love infinite goodness from which we have received every kind of blessing? What is easier than to hate the most horrible thing in the world and the sole cause of all our evils? Surely, if we refuse to give our heart to the divine Saviour, who asks us constantly for

(9). Prov. 23, 26.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

it in a way so gentle and engaging, a heart moreover which belongs to Him for countless reasons, all those pagans who sacrificed to the devil the hearts of their dear children will rise up and condemn us on the day of judgment. We shall be utterly cast into confusion when the lawful King of our hearts points to the poor idol-worshippers and says to us: "Behold these people who have torn out their children's hearts of living flesh to offer them to Satan, and you have refused me the love of your hearts." We must not draw this reproach upon ourselves. Let us give our hearts wholly and irrevocably to Him who created them, who redeemed them, and has given to us His own Sacred Heart so many times.

One of the fathers of the Society of Jesus, in his history of the Crusades for the deliverance of the Holy Land, reports the following incident. In the year 1098, Geoffrey de la Tour, a nobleman from Limoges and one of the most valiant of the Christian knights, one day heard the roar of a lion, which sounded like a cry of pain.

Immediately he entered a near-by wood and ran to the spot from which the roaring came. There he saw a horrible sight. A huge serpent had wound its coils around the lion's body and legs, so that it was powerless to defend itself. The serpent was darting its venomous tongue, trying to strike the lion in a vital spot.

Geoffrey rushed forward with his sword and killed the snake without wounding the lion. The poor beast, finding itself freed and recognizing his deliverer, came to thank the knight, by fawning and licking his feet. From then on, the lion attached itself to the man who had saved its life. It followed him everywhere like a faithful dog, never harming anyone, but ready to turn on a man who might attack its master. But what is more wonderful is the sequel. When Geoffrey sailed to return to France after the Crusade, the captain of the ship would not allow the lion to come aboard, so the faithful beast, plunging into the sea, kept on swimming in the wake of the ship until its strength failed and it sank, thus showing that it preferred to drown rather than to be parted from its benefactor.

It should make us ashamed to have to learn the lesson of true gratitude from a wild animal. Must we Christians be taught by dumb beasts what we owe to God, our Sovereign Benefactor? O my

Saviour, Thou has freed me from the coils of the infernal serpent. Thou hast given Thy life to deliver me from the eternal death of hell, and enable me to enjoy everlasting happiness in heaven. Let me be all Thine; let me live only for Thee; let me follow Thee everywhere. May all the faculties of my soul be linked inviolably to Thy divine will. Let me have no thoughts but Thine; let me have no hate except for sin, no love but for Thee. Let me die many deaths rather than ever be separated from Thee.

CHAPTER 10

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS OUR TREASURE HOUSE

THE ADORABLE HEART of our Saviour has been considered as a flaming furnace of love for us. We shall now see, first of all, that this heart is a vast treasure house containing infinite riches; secondly, that this wealth is ours; thirdly, the sacred use that we should make of it.

The Sacred Heart of Jesus is indeed an incalculable treasure, containing in itself all the marvelous riches of heaven and earth, in nature, grace and glory, in all the angels and saints, in the Blessed Virgin Mary, in the Godhead, in the Most Holy Trinity, and in all the divine perfections. St. Chrysostom says that the Blessed Virgin is an infathomable abyss of the boundless perfections of the Godhead: Abyssus immensarum Dei perfectionum. (1) How much more is this true of the adorable Heart of Jesus?

Moreover, His Heart is a most precious treasure house containing all the merits of His life, all the fruits of His divine mysteries, all the graces merited by His toils and sufferings, all His infinitely perfect virtues, all the gifts of the Holy Ghost wherewith He was endowed: Requiescet super eum Spiritus Domini, Spiritus sapientiae et intellectus. (2) In short, everything great, rich, precious and admirable in Creator and creatures, is stored in that incomparable treasure.

To whom does this marvelous treasure belong? It belongs to all of us and to each one in particular, since it depends only on us to take possession of it. By what titles and deeds does this treasure belong to us? By the title and deed of a gift. But who has given it to us? The Father of Jesus has given it to us in giving us His Son; and

(2). Isa. 11,2

OUR TREASURE HOUSE

He gives Him to us unceasingly, for His gifts are not transitory. Sine poenitentia sunt dona Dei. (3) The Son of God has also given it to us, time and time again, in giving Himself to us, and He gives it to us ceaselessly in the Blessed Eucharist. The Holy Ghost imparts this treasure to us incessantly. The Blessed Virgin also gives it to us continually, since she has but one heart and one will with her Son, her will is bound up in every gift of His.

It is, therefore, a clear fact that the loving Heart of Jesus is wholly ours, our very own Heart. Each of us can say with St. Bernard: "The Heart of Jesus is my Heart. I speak this fearlessly. For if Jesus is my Head, then what belongs to the Head belongs to me. just as the eyes of my corporal head are truly my eyes, so the Heart of my spiritual Head is truly my Heart. What joy is mine! I am certain that my heart is one with Jesus." Cor Jesu meum est, audacter dicam: si enim caput meum Christus est, quomodo quod capitis mei est non meum est? Sicut ergo oculi capitis mei corporalis mei oculi vere sunt, ita et spiritualis Cor, Cor meum est. Bene ergo mihi, ego vere cum Jesu Cor habeo. (4)

What would be the use of possessing an object of great value if the owner let himself die of hunger, thirst and cold? Or suppose he went into bankruptcy while still keeping the treasure? Similarly, what shall this greatest of treasures, the Heart of Our Lord, be worth to us if we do not draw upon its resources? God has given us His Heart to be our riches and our wealth, to draw upon to satisfy our obligations and to pay all our debts.

What are those debts? They are endless, for we are in debt to God and men, to the Creator and to all creatures. We owe the Creator five tremendous tributes: 1. adoration together with honor, glory and praise; 2. love; 3. thanksgiving for all the blessings that we continually receive; 4. reparation for our sins; 5. the gift of ourselves, seeing we belong to Him. Add to this, prayer, an obligation which is based on two principles: first, our infinite poverty and need, since we are nothing and have nothing of ourselves; secondly, the fact that God is the supreme good and the source of all good, and that His infinite goodness inclines Him to pour out of His goodness upon us to an infinite degree. He wills, and justly so, that we ask Him for this in prayer.

Now, to pay all these debts, here is what must be done:

First, it is necessary to be in the state of grace. Secondly, when you celebrate Holy Mass (if you are a Priest) or when you assist at Mass (if a layman), but especially after Holy Communion, remember that you have the Sacred Heart there within your breast and the Three Divine Persons, Father, Son and Holy Ghost. Addressing yourself first to the Father, speak to Him, with all possible respect and humility:

"Holy Father, I owe Thee infinite honor, glory, love, adoration, praise, thanksgiving and satisfaction; I also owe to Thee myself for countless reasons. Of myself I have no means wherewith to pay all these debts, being nothing and having nothing. But here is the divine Heart of Thy Well-beloved Son that Thou hast given me, which I now offer to Thee to make satisfaction for my obligations to adore Thee, to honor, praise and glorify Thee, to love Thee, to give Thee thanks, to make amends for my sins, to give myself to Thee, and to implore Thee by this same Heart, to grant me all graces of which I stand in need. This is my treasure that Thou hast given me out of the excess of Thy goodness; be pleased to receive it, O Father of mercies, and graciously to reward Thyself by taking with Thine own hands from this sacred treasure the wherewithal fully to satisfy and pay all my debts."

After that make a similar offering to the Son of God, giving him that selfsame treasure, His own Heart as well as that of His most holy Mother, which is in a way but one with His, and which is more pleasing to Him than all the hearts of paradise.

Perform the same act with respect to the Holy Ghost.

Next, remember the infinite obligations that you have to the Mother of God, who gave you a Saviour with all the countless blessings that proceed from that marvelous gift and offer her the loving Heart of her Beloved Son, in thanksgiving for all the favors that you have received from that divine Mother. Offer her also that same

Heart in reparation, Over and above, for all your negligences, infidelities, and failures in gratitude towards her. This is but a direction which she herself gave to St. Mechtilde, who, being anxious about her negligences in Our Lady's service, was counselled by the latter to offer her the most holy Heart of her Dearest Son. The Blessed Virgin assured the saint that this offering would be much more pleasing to her than any other pious devotions and practices.'

In addition, remember that you are still indebted to your Guardian Angel, to all the other angels, to your Patron Saint and to all the other saints, for their prayers and for the manifold helps they have given you. Consider, and offer to them all in general and to each one in particular your great treasure, as an act of thanksgiving, to satisfy for your shortcomings and to contribute to their accidental glory and joy.

Remember that you are also under obligations to your neighbor. You owe charity to all men, even your enemies; help to the poor, according to your ability; respect and obedience to your superiors, and the like. To satisfy all these obligations offer our Saviour His divine Heart to make up for the shortcomings of which you are guilty; ask Him to repay them for you and to give you all the graces necessary in the future to fulfil perfectly your obligations to your neighbor.

In the books of St. Mechtilde I find that when the saint was asked to implore Our Lord to grant a certain person a humble, pure and charitable heart, she acceded to his request and received this heavenly answer: "Let him seek in my Heart everything he desires and needs; and let him ask for them as a little child would confidently ask his father for anything he wants. When he desires purity of heart, let him have recourse to my innocence; when he desires humility, let him draw up from the deep well of my most humble Heart; there too let him drink in my love together with my holy converse, confidently taking to himself everything that is good and holy in that Heart, since I have given it wholly to my children." (6) (5). Saint John Eudes does not mention where he obtained this fact. It was perhaps taken from a passage of the Lime de la Grâce spéciale, p. X, chap. 46.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

This is the boundless and inexhaustible treasure that our Most Gracious Jesus has given us, in which we may confidently find everything that we need, so long as we possess that divine treasure in its richness. If we should lose it through sin, what a dreadful loss it would be! I am certain that if we fully understood it, we would realize that we would never sufficiently deplore such a great misfortune even though we were to live until the Day of Judgment and spend our time in weeping floods of tears and blood. If all the angels and saints were to descend from heaven to console us, they could never wipe away our tears. Heu! quid perdidit, qui Deum amisit, exclaims St. Augustine. "Alas! what hath he lost who hath lost God?" Heu! quid perdidit, qui Cor Jesu amisit: Alas! what hath he lost who hath lost the Heart of Christ, his Saviour? Who can understand the magnitude of that loss? Who can express it? Who can worthily deplore it?

Yet, after losing that infinite treasure, so many many times, you, O foolish man, are little affected by the deprivation. What sorrow should be yours! What tears of blood you should shed! How horrified you should be at your sins that have caused so dreadful a disaster! What fear of backsliding! How necessary to seek all the means possible to keep yourself from it! What would one not lose rather than to lose the loving Heart of our Redeemer! That gone, all is gone. Let us prefer to lose everything, our earthly goods, our friends, our health, even our life, rather than to lose the Heart of Jésus! O my Saviour, grant us that grace! Mother of Jesus~ obtain it from thy Dear Soul

CHAPTER II

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS LOVES US AS HIS FATHER LOVES HIM. WHAT WE SHOULD DO IN ORDER TO LOVE HIM

WE HAVE OUTLINED in the foregoing chapters numerous wonderful effects of the burning love of the Sacred Heart of our Saviour for mankind. But there is one effect of love that excels all the rest. It is expressed in the marvelous words rising from His divine Heart and spoken by His adorable lips: Sicut dilexit me Pater, et ego dilexi vos: "As the Father hath loved me, I also have loved you." (1)

Let us pause here a moment; let us weigh these words well: "I love you." How sweet are these words falling from the lips of the sovereign Lord of the universe! How encouraging, how helpful, how consoling! "I love you," our divine Saviour says to us. If an earthly ruler were to pay a visit to the house of the lowliest of his subjects and say to him: "I have come here expressly to assure you that I love you and that I shall let you feel the effects of love," what joy it would be for that poor man! Suppose an angel from heaven or a saint or the Queen of saints were to appear in a church thronged with Christians and were to proclaim in a voice that all could hear, to one member of the congregation "I love you; my Heart belongs to you." What transports of delight would thrill that privileged soul! Would he not die of joy? But here is much more than that. Here is the King of kings, the Holy of holies, the Only Son of God, the only Son of Mary, who has purposely come down here below from heaven to say to us: Ego dilexi vos. Ego, I who am the Creator of all things, I who rule the whole universe, I who possess all the treasures
(1). John 15, 9.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

of heaven and earth, I who do whatsoever I will and I whose will none can resist, I love you. O my Saviour, what a rapturous word is this! Would it not be favor enough if Thou didst say to us: "I sometimes think of you; I look down upon you once a year; I have certain beneficial plans made for you?" But this is not sufficient for Thee. Thou dost wish to assure us of Thy love and affection for us, who are naught; for us, mere worms; for us, miserable sinners, who have so often offended Thee; for us who have so many times deserved hell: Ego dilexi vos.

But how does this adorable Saviour love us? Listen again to His sacred words: Sicut dilexit me Pater. I love you "as my Father hath loved me." I love you with the same Heart and the same love as that wherewith I am loved by my Father. Now what is that love wherewith the Divine Father loves His Son? It is a love possessing four great qualities, which are found in the love of the Heart of Jesus for us.

First of all, the love of the Father for His Son is infinite, that is, without bounds, limits, or measure; a love incomprehensible and inexplicable; a love as great as the very nature of the Eternal Father. Measure, if you can, the extent and the magnitude of that divine nature, and then you will measure the magnitude of that adorable Father's love for His Son; at the same time you will measure the greatness and the extent of the love of the Son of God for us, since He loves us with the same love as that wherewith His Father loves Him.

Secondly, the Father's love for His Son is an everlasting love filling all the spaces of eternity. the Eternal Father has never been without that love for His Son; He loves Him continuously, without intermission, and He will love Him eternally. O my Saviour, how it fills me with joy to see Thee loved as Thou dost deserve! The perfidious us Jews, the devils and the damned hate Thee, but Thou art no less lovable, and the Adorable Father loves Thee more in a single moment than all those wretches could hate Thee in a thousand eternities, if that were possible.

Now, as the Father loves His Only-begotten Son with an everlasting love, the Son of God also loves us with an everlasting love. This means that all the spaces of eternity before and after are filled with the love that He has for us. Hence, is it not true that if we had existed from all eternity, we should have been bound to love that gracious Saviour from all eternity? If we had a thousand years, ten thousand, a hundred thousand, yes, even an eternity to live on earth, should we not be bound to spend them in loving Him who loves us with an everlasting love? Actually, we have at most a few decades to exist on this earth, yet we waste them loving the world, the degradation and the trifles of earth. Ah, how guilty we are to have such ingratitude!

OUR LOVE FOR HIM

As our third reflection, we must remember that the love of the Divine Father for His Son is a tremendous love filling heaven and earth and even hell; in heaven, the Father loves this Son with the hearts of all the angels and all the saints; on earth their mutual love embraces all the hearts that belong to Him on earth; in hell, the Eternal Father loves His Cherished Son who, with the other Divine Persons, is present there, manifesting the same omnipotence as in heaven.

Similarly, our Saviour loves us with an immense love filling heaven, earth and hell; heaven, for He inspires all its citizens to love us as themselves; He makes them sharers in the love He bears us, and He loves us through them. He loves the earth in three ways: 1. He loves us wherever He has being on earth; 2. He creates, preserves and rules all things in the universe for love of us. This thought prompted St. Augustine to utter these beautiful words: Coelum et terra, et omnia quae in eis sunt, non cessant mihi dicere ut amem Deum meum: "Heaven and earth and all things on earth and in heaven cease not to bid me love my God." 3. He prohibits all dwellers on earth, under pain of eternal damnation, to do harm, either to our goods, our reputation, our person or anything belonging to us; and He commands them to love us as themselves.

The boundless love of our Redeemer fills heaven and earth, and likewise hell; for He kindled the devouring fires of hell to inflame our hearts with divine love. We are impelled to love Him, when we consider that by our sins we deserved eternal torments if our Saviour had not delivered us by His death on the Cross. O my God, Thou dost love us everywhere, and we, ingrates, everywhere offend Thee.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

Let it be so no more, but make us love and bless Thee everywhere: In omni loco dominationis ejus benedic anima mea Domino. (2)

In the fourth place, I could demonstrate to you further that, as the love of the Eternal Father for His Eternal Son is love in its essence, since He loves Him with His whole being, so also the love of the Son of God for us is love in its essence, since He is all heart and all love towards us and loves us with all His being. In other words, everything in Jesus, His divinity, His humanity, His soul, His body, His blood, all His thoughts, words, actions, privations, humiliations, sufferings, in short, everything that He is, has, and all His potentiality is bound up in loving us.

Here, I must mention one effect of His love that surpasses all the others. Louis Bail, a doctor of sacred theology, presents this fact in his learned and devotional work, Affective Theology(3) and states that he found it in four passages of St. Bridget's writings approved by three Popes and two General Councils. Our divine Lord and His holy Mother revealed to St. Bridget that, while on the Cross, He suffered such keen, piercing, violent and terrible pains that His adorable Heart was rent, broken, and shattered: Cor meum crepuit prae violentia passionis. "My heart," says the adorable Saviour to the saint, "was utterly filled with pain, all the more because 'it was of a most fine and delicate nature; the pain went from my Heart into my nerves, from my nerves back to my Heart: it kept on increasing so that my death-agony was prolonged while I was thus immersed in suffering, I opened my eyes and saw my dearest Mother overcome by a sea of anguish and tears, which pained me more than my own sufferings; I also saw my friends overwhelmed with sorrow. With this torture my Heart was actually rent by the force and fury of the pain; and then it was that my soul went forth from my body." (4)

Those are the words of our Saviour to St. Bridget. In a later revelation He said: "There are few persons who can imagine with what pain I remained fastened to the wood of the Cross, my Heart being (2). Ps. 102, 22.

broken and shattered by its violence: quando Cor meum crepuit."(5) Let us now listen to the Blessed Virgin who revealed on two occasions to the same saint that, as the death of her Son drew near, His Sacred Heart was rent by the violence of the pain: Cum Cor prae violentia dolorum rumperetur.' (6)

I also find a similar reference in the tenth exercise of the Intimations of Divine Holiness of St. Gertrude, where she thus addresses our Redeemer: Deificatum Cor tuum in morte pro me rupit amor. "Thy divine Heart was rent and broken in Thy dying, by the excess of Thy love for me. This made Thee suffer such violent tortures for love of me that Thy adorable Heart was broken by the force of the pain; so that I may say that Thou didst die of pain and love for me. This can be repeated by each one of us with equal truth."(7)

O Almighty God, who hath ever heard Of such a death? O sinful man. wilt thou not open thy eyes to behold the love Thy Saviour has for thee? O heart of man, wilt thou not be touched by such burning love? Wilt thou not surrender? not be converted? Wilt thou not love one who hath such love for thee? Filii hominum usquequo gravi corde? (8)

How long will thy heart remain buried in the mud and slime of earth, in the mists and vanities of this world? Wouldst thou not love Him who is wholehearted in His love for thee and who, if thou wouldst but love Him, promises to give thee an eternal realm? That is all He demands of thee; for after saying, "I love you as my Father hath loved me," He adds: Manete in dilectione mea: "Abide in my love. If you keep my commandments, you shall abide in my love: as I also have kept my Father's commandments and do abide in his love."(9) Then He again says to us: Haec locutus sum vobis, ut gaudium meum in vobis sit, et gaudium vestrum impleatur. (10) "These things I have spoken to you that my joy may be in you, and your joy may be filled."

Wouldst thou, therefore, give great joy to thy Saviour and so act that thy heart may be always joyful and glad, thus beginning thy paradise on earth? Then love thy precious Saviour above all things, and thy neighbor as thyself. That is all that thou hast to do. O Jesus, I give Thee my whole heart. O Mother of Jesus, to thee also I give it entire, with all the hearts of my brothers and sisters in Christ; offer them, I beg, to thy Son, praying Him to take full, entire and eternal possession of them.

O Creator, I owe Thee my body and soul, because Thou hast given me Thy body and soul, Thy life and Thy very self. What do I owe Thee, and what shall I give Thee in return for all those priceless gifts? If I had millions of lives and gave them to Thee a million times over, each hour, that would be as nothing. Since I am so indebted to Thee that I cannot ever requite Thee, come Thyself as executor of my estate and take all that I have. I offer Thee all the faculties of my soul, all the feelings of my body, all my members, my whole heart, sacrificing myself entirely to Thy adorable will. I ask not for eyes except to contemplate what Thou dost will me to contemplate, nor for ears except to hear Thy divine words and to obey Thee. Let my tongue be torn from my mouth if I use it but to bless Thee; let my heart burst asunder rather than fail to love Thee. May I lose my memory, if it be not to remember Thee; and may my mind fail in all things, if it be not to know and to admire Thee. May my hands be cut off, if I use them not in Thy service. I ask not for feet except to seek and follow Thee. I will always exercise my will as Thou wouldst have me. Thy good pleasure is my sole desire. Do with me what Thou wilt, since for my sake Thou hast done with Thyself more than I would have dared to wish or to desire. I surrender myself entirely into the hands of God, my Eternal Father, who dost desire my welfare more than I do myself, who alone knows what is best for me and alone can obtain it for me.

CHAPTER 12

BEAUTIFUL WORDS ON THE LOVE OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS, TAKEN FROM THE THIRTY SIXTH CHAPTER OF CHRISTIAN WELFARE(1)

"THOSE WHO HAVE WRITTEN on the devotion to Jesus Incarnate, living and dying for the salvation of all men, esteem it above all others, and assuredly with good reason. No matter what has already been said and might be said to demonstrate the excellence and the holiness of such devotion, it will never be praised according to its merits. Therefore, if you desire to be completely washed of your sins, delivered from all your vices and filled with virtue, cultivate a constant devotion to the person of your adorable Saviour. Lift up your heart and mind as often as possible, and plunge them into the loving Heart of Jesus, into that truly divine Heart, since, according to the Apostle, «in him dwelleth all the fulness. of the Godhead corporeally,»(2) and we are all able through this same Heart to have access to the Heavenly Father.

"Acquire the habit of recollecting your spirit within you, to draw it at the same time into the Heart of Him who has said: 'Come to me, all you that labor and are burdened, and I will refresh you.'"(3)

"In fact, in the Heart of Jesus are to be found all virtues in their highest perfection. You will find there mercy, justice, peace, grace,

(1). St. John Eudes attributes the authorship of this work to Lanspergius, the saintly Carthusian Of Cologne. the book was written by Dom Dominic, a Carthusian of Treves. eternal salvation, the source of life, perfect consolation, and that true light which lighteneth every man, particularly him who, in his needs and sorrows, comes there seeking help.

"Finally, you may draw from the Sacred Heart all that your soul desires and you will never win salvation or grace except from that source. It is a furnace of divine love, intensely burning with the fire of the Holy Ghost, which purifies, inflames and transforms into itself all those desiring to be united with this most loving Heart. It is in the adorable Heart that are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge." (4) Therefore cling to it in such a manner that neither place nor company nor circumstance can prevent you from running to it as to a place of refuge where you will find only love and faithfulness, with the certainty that when all the hearts of men deceive and forsake you, and even though they fail in their response to you, the precious Heart of Jesus will never deceive nor abandon you. It is too faithful to commit an act of cowardice; it has too much love for you not to remember you; and the sufferings it endured for you will not permit it to overlook anything to achieve your salvation.

"If you wish to walk with safety in the heavenly Way and enter by the true door, seek none other than this loving Saviour. Rest assured that you will never ascend to the knowledge of His divinity except by way of His sacred humanity, using His Cross as a prop to uphold your steps and sustain your weakness.

"If you wish to acquire even greater spiritual possessions, without much effort on your part, surrender yourself entirely to Him and He will surrender Himself to you. Offer Him all your good works in union with His excellence. Enter into partnership with Him in loving trust. He will be pleased with the exchange. In uniting your merits to His, you will have everything in common, and He will share with you His immense treasures. O profitable exchange! O unparalleled interchange! What man would not willingly give a small piece of copper for a large mass of gold? Who would not exchange a pebble for a precious stone? You will be able to effect this spiritual exchange if you join all your words, all your actions, all your thoughts and all your sufferings to those of Jesus. Thus, for instance, you will be able to say to Him: 'O my God and my Saviour, I offer Thee the slumber that I am about to take in union with that which Thou didst take while upon earth.' Or, when you receive some insult, say: 'O my adorable Saviour, I offer Thee this injury which I have just received, and I join it willingly to all the insults which Thou hast suffered on my behalf.'

"In this manner, your merits, although very small in themselves, joined to the infinite merits of your Redeemer, will be made more noble and will be absorbed in His, and, as it were, changed into them, as a drop of water is transformed when it falls into wine."

CHAPTER 13

THOUGHTS OF THE SERAPHIC SAINT BONAVENTURE ON THE LOVE OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

THE SERAPHIC Doctor, St. Bonaventure, aflame with the love of Our Lord, says that the divine Heart is the gate of paradise, the joy of the elect, the beatitude of the angels, the treasure of divine knowledge and of eternal charity. The excessive love of that beloved Redeemer urged Him to open His divine side to give us His Heart and to make us dwell in its august sanctuary. Therefore the saint declares that he wishes to make his dwelling place in the Sacred Heart, to find there his repose and his delight. Whereupon he exclaims: (1) "Certainly, my Lord Jesus, even if Thou shouldst hate me, I should still have to love Thee, because Thou art my God. How much more must I do so, seeing that Thou dost love me so and dost pursue me to heap upon me Thy benefits? Thou hast such love for me that it would seem that Thou dost hate Thyself out of consideration for me.

"Didst Thou not consent, Thou Judge of the universe, to be judged and to suffer a most infamous and cruel death for love of me? O my God, what more couldst Thou have done for me? Certainly, Thou dost wish me to be surrendered unto Thee, since Thou hast given Thyself up to me. What constrained Thee to this sacrifice, O my God? Only Thy very great goodness and Thy immense charity, in order to enkindle us with Thy divine love. O sole desire of my heart! O sweetness and serenity of my mind! O flame in this brazier of my breast! O light and brightness of my eyes! O my soul! O my life! O inmost recesses of my heart! O my joy and jubilation! Why am I not wholly transformed into love? Why is there anything in me but love? Thy love, O my Saviour, surrounds me on all sides, and yet I know not what love means.

"O Most Sweet Jesus, how wonderful is Thy love for men which will not suffer Thee to be separated from them! Is it not that love which, before Thou didst ascend into heaven, gave us the power to retain Thee, so long as We would, on our altars? Thou gavest us that power before going to meet death so that we might not fear losing Thee. Why didst Thou wish so to do, since Thou hadst the intent of sending us Thy Holy Spirit? Why didst Thou wish to abide always with man? Thou didst desire it to incorporate us in Thee, and to nourish us with Thy Precious Blood, so that being inebriated with Thy love we should have but one heart and one soul with Thee.

"O, wondrous and inestimable power of love! It causes God to come down to earth and raises man to heaven. It unites God and man so closely that it makes God man and man God. The temporal becomes eternal, the immortal becomes mortal, and the mortal is made immortal. It causes the enemy of God to become His friend, and His slave to be adopted as His son.

"O love, what shall I render unto Thee who hast made me all divine? I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me. O love, Thy virtue is indescribable, Thou who transformest slime into God! What is more powerful than Thou? What is more gentle? what more pleasing? what more noble? O excellent love, that changest earth into heaven and makest me to form but one with my beloved! O desirable love, that dost intoxicate celestial lovers with sovereign delights! O my soul, if the voice of thy beloved makes thee melt into love for Him, why art thou not utterly inflamed and consumed when thou dost enter by the sacred wound of His side into the burning furnace of His loving Heart?"

SEVERAL WONDERFUL THINGS ABOUT THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS, RELATED IN THE LIFE OF SISTER MARGARET OF THE BLESSED SACRAMENT, A CARMELITE NUN OF BEAUNE(1)

"The SON OF GOD teaches that His members dwell in Him and He in them, that He is the true Aaron who bears the name of His people engraved in precious stones upon His breast, and carries them in the depths of His Heart out of His abundant love for them. We must not be surprised that He revealed to Sister Margaret of Beaune that He had placed her in the sanctuary where He universally receives all His chosen ones. When He chose to elevate her more and more in His grace, He drew her into His Sacred Heart where all those who love Him are to dwell everlastingly. He is a Father to whom all His children are dearer than the apple of His eye and He covers them under the shadow of His wings. His infinite charity for souls is pictured in countless ways, such as the beloved disciple resting against His Heart at the Last Supper, and the repose of the blessed in Abraham's bosom. He is a Shepherd, says the Prophet, who carries His lambs in His arms, holding them close to His breast. Hence the favor shown to Sister Margaret when, wishing to make her share in His heavenly delights, He lifted her into ecstasy and took her into His Heart.

"We have seen that God granted her holy conversation with the saints and angels and then raised her up to His throne in heaven.

(1). The author of the life, which appeared in 1655, is Father Amelotte, a priest of the Oratory.

Then He brought her still higher and, uniting her even more closely to Himself, He opened His own Heart and hid her in its Holy of holies.

"Thus He revealed His Heart as a vast and boundless furnace of love in which He enclosed her for days and nights. There were transfused so many graces at their source that her progress in perfection seemed greater in a single day than it had ever been for whole years at a stretch. That divine Heart, searing like a hot fire, consumed her imperfections. She was plunged into the abyss of charity so ardent that the heat issued forth and was felt outside of her body. The love of Jesus carried her away with such impetuosity that she was seen raised above the earth, fair and shining as a Seraph. At times she was bathed with love as in a fountain of sanctity. At other times she appeared to be tinged with innocence itself, and was fragrant with purity.

"She noted the twofold movement of dilation and compression of the Heart of Jesus, experienced by other Saints,(2) and understood that the Sacred Heart contracted as if to encompass the Holy Spirit, to love its Divine Father in His own name, to offer itself to Him as sacrifice, to humble itself before His majesty, to enter into His divine life, to unite itself to His adorable perfections, and to render Him all due homage. She understood that the Sacred Heart expanded to shed abroad its Spirit in all His members and to communicate to His Mystical Body, the Church, all the power of its vital warmth.

"She sensed in that loving Heart an endless, shoreless ocean of love for God His Father, a possession and an enjoyment of His divine goodness, a repose in His infinite bliss, a calm and peace passing all understanding, an incomprehensible treasure of all the virtues, which shone forth in a beauty, a nobleness, an expanse, and a splendor so great and inexplicable that there was enough to fill an infinite number of worlds thousands and thousands of times more vast than our planet.

(2) On the heart-beats of the Heart of Jesus, cf. St. Gertrudes Herald of Divine Love, Book 111, chap. 51; Book IV, chaps. 4 and 24. Also St. Mechtilde's Le Livre de la Grâce spéciale, Part 1, chaps. 5 and 20; Part V, ch. 32.

"Nevertheless, amid so much wealth and happiness, she saw that that divine Heart had been submerged, as it were, in the very depths of pain and bitterness. It had been stricken down, heavy with sadness, on account of the sins of men whose gall and venom it had been obliged to taste. Unless it had been sustained by the Uncreated Word, it would have succumbed under the weight of our crimes.

"Despite the throbbings and the swoons occasioned by the constant horror of our sins, with all the struggles it had endured against the pains of death, she recognized in that most gracious Heart an unutterable transport of love for those who had caused it so many evils. As He fought against the apprehension of death, the strength and generosity of His love repulsed the spirits and the humors(3) which had drawn towards the center of His body, and caused it to break out in a sweat of blood(4).

"She saw that wondrous Heart as a sacred palace where were born and nourished all the affections of the Saviour, His desires, His loyalties, His joys, and His sorrows. But among all those inexhaustible treasures of virtue and holiness, it was chiefly in the love, purity of heart, and innocence that she was allowed to share.

"Her lower faculties had been so consumed by the possession that God was assuming over her daily more and more, that she took little nourishment. She found in the Sacred Heart of Jesus a supernatural substitute which sustained her without eating and restored her strength more nobly than vital forces would have done. Sometimes it seemed to her that there flowed from that Heart through her

(3). The humors in old physiology are the four fluids: blood, phlegm, choler (yellow bile) and melancholy (black bile) conceived as entering into the constitution of the body and determining, by their relative proportion, a person's health and temperament, [Eng. Tr.]

(4). It is interesting to compare this passage on the sweat of blood with another taken from ancient Devotions to the Sacred Heart of Jesus by Carthusian Monks of the XIV-XVII Centuries, Ref. London, 1926, P. 97: "In time of great suffering, the blood is concentrated in the heart in order to strengthen the principal member-hence the exterior parts of the body become pale-but in this exceptional case (Our Lord's), strength of mind so forcibly overcame natural weakness that it refused this aid, and sent back the blood to the outside as a sign of its readiness to be spilt without waiting for the hand of the executioner to shed it by force." [Eng. Tr.]

THOUGHTS OF SISTER MARGARET

whole body a sacred liquid, now in the form of very sweet oil, now like purest milk, now like a balm filled with celestial fragrance, now like a pleasant manna fortifying not only body but producing marvelous effects in her soul as well.

"Worldly-minded people are far from understanding how a girl dwelling on earth could be hidden in the Heart of the Saviour. But the children of light, who feed on the life of the spirit, will readily conceive that it was not a transport of the body but only of the soul, and that her access to His Heart was a loving plan to associate her more closely with His innocence and His other virtues.

"Although the Son of God does not grant such special graces to every soul, it is conceivable nevertheless that there are many who, in the dark night of faith, enter as truly into His Heart and His affections as several saints who have been granted the luminous entrance perceptible to the intellect. Each of us has to raise himself humbly by the ordinary way of the Church, which is the way of faith. When we seek to love or adore God, to acquire a real sorrow for our sins, to sacrifice ourselves to the Eternal Father, we have no better way than to enter in spirit into the Heart of the Son of God. We must clothe ourselves with His holy dispositions, loving God in Him and with Him, detesting sin as He detests it, and uniting ourselves by faith with His perpetual sacrifice."

The author of the life of Sister Margaret of Beaune reports all the above details and enlarges on other points which I omit, because I wish to set forth only those that chiefly concern the adorable Heart of our Saviour. To Him be infinite honor, praise and glory, for all the graces, favors and blessings which His most benign and most generous Heart has dispensed and will dispense on earth and in heaven, in all hearts that love and shall love Him forever!

CHAPTER 15

A PIOUS AND LOVING EXERCISE ON THE SORROWS OF THE HEART OF JESUS AND OF THE HOLY HEART OF HIS BLESSED MOTHER

O GOOD JESUS, Lamb without spot, who didst suffer so many torments on Thy Cross, while beholding the virgin Heart of Thy dearest Mother plunged into an ocean of sorrows, teach me, I beg Thee, to accompany Thee in Thy sufferings and to feel Thy afflictions.

What a sorrowful sight to see those two Hearts of Jesus and Mary, two Hearts so holy, so innocent, so full of graces and perfections, so enkindled with divine love, so closely united to each other, and so compassionate towards each other! The holy Heart of the Mother of Jesus feels most keenly the terrible torments of her Son; the Only Son of Mary is wholly convulsed by the incomparable sufferings of His Mother. Jesus, the innocent Lamb, and Mary, His immaculate Mother, call to each other; the one weeps for the other, receiving no consolation; and the purer and more ardent their mutual love is, the more their sorrows penetrate and pierce.

O heart of stone! why dost thou not melt with sorrow and tears seeing that thou art the cause of the unutterable sorrows of that spotless Mother and that most gentle Lamb of God? What have they done to suffer so many afflictions? O wretched sinner, it is you and your abominable sins that are the executioners of those most holy and innocent Hearts. O Hearts most kind, pardon me and exercise upon me the vengeance which I deserve. Since creatures obey you, command them all to punish me as I deserve. Send me your sorrows and sufferings, so that, as I have been the cause of them, I may succor you in your weeping and pain. O Jesus, love of my heart,

A PIOUS AND LOVING EXERCISE      67 -

O Mary, consolation of my soul, perfect image of Thy Son, stamp upon my heart a great aversion to the pleasures of this life, which thou hast spent in suffering. I am thine, belonging to thy house and thy service, although I am unworthy. Let me take no pleasure in this world except where thou dost find it. Grant that I may always bear thy sorrows in my soul, putting my glory and delight in being crucified with Jesus and Mary.

O most holy Virgin, how are all thy joys changed into sorrows? If they had been like those of the world, it would have been fitting that they should have suffered these changes. But, O Queen of angels, thou hast never taken pleasure except in divine things. God alone possessed thy Heart and nothing was able to satisfy thee but what proceeded from Him and led to Him. Thou hast had the joy of seeing thyself a Mother, the Mother of God; of bearing Him in thy sacred womb; of seeing Him resting on thy sacred bosom; of waiting on Him with thy most pure hands; of offering Him in the temple to His Eternal Father; and of seeing Him recognized and adored by Simeon the Just and holy Anna the Prophetess. All thy satisfactions, throughout the thirty years of thy life with Him, were divine, inward and spiritual. They were the jubilant, spiritual and interior delights with which thy most holy soul, enkindled with love for Jesus, thy Son and thy God, was raised and transported into His divine majesty. Thy holy heart, transformed and united to Him, received therefrom favors greater than all the ranks of heaven, since thy love exceeded that of all the Seraphim. O Lady and Queen of angels, what can one find in satisfactions so pure and holy, in joys so spiritual and heavenly, that could turn into sorrows? Can it be that the wretchedness and the servitude of the poor children of Eve exiled and banished from paradise, in whose sin thou hast never had part, have reached even to thee? Hath that exile, then, not yet ceased to be for thee a land of sorrows and a Vale of tears?

O poor sinner, who would persuade yourself to find pleasure in this life which has only false and deceitful pleasures. Behold the sufferings of the King and Queen of heaven, and perish with Confusion at the sight of your own disordered life and your aversion for crosses. The whole life of Jesus, who is innocence itself, is one continual suffering; the whole life of Mary, who is all holy and immaculate, is a perpetual Cross; and you, wretched sinner, deserving hell a thousand times over, you seek pleasure and comfort

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

O Queen of angels, in all the years of the hidden life with thy Son Jesus, thou didst await the sorrows which were prophesied by holy Simeon, sorrows without parallel, since the magnitude of thy love was the measure of thy sorrow. When the time of the Passion of that loving Saviour had come, He took leave of thee to go forth to suffer, letting thee know that it was the will of His Father that thou shouldst accompany Him to the foot of the Cross and that thy Heart should be pierced with the sword of sorrow. St. John gave thee the warning, when he saw the time come for the divine Lamb to be sacrificed. Thou didst leave thy house to bathe Jerusalem's streets with thy tears. Thou didst find thy Son in the midst of an innumerable pack of human wolves and lions, howling and roaring at Him, shouting like madmen: Tolle, tolle, crucifige, crucifige(1) Thou didst see Him, now no longer adored by kings, but held up to the people as a false king, blasphemed, dishonored, condemned to death, shouldering His Cross, led to Calvary, whither thou didst follow Him, bathed in thy tears and overwhelmed with sorrow.

Thou didst hear the blows of the hammer as He was being fastened to the Cross: they pierced thy Heart. Thou didst suffer unspeakable tortures, awaiting that dire hour of the Crucifixion. Thou didst see Him lifted up, while so many shouts and blasphemies were hurled at Him by the evil tongues of the Jews that thy blood congealed in thy veins. Thou didst spend these sad hours at the foot of the Cross, hearing the awful insults heaped by these wretches upon thy Lamb and seeing the frightful tortures which they made Him suffer, until at last thou didst see Him expire under such obloquy and suffering.

Whereupon they restored Him to thy loving arms, that thou mightest wrap His body in a shroud and bury Him and, just as thou hadst given Him at birth the first attentions, thou mightest now perform for Him the last rites; but with sorrows so heavy and anguish so sharp and desolation so penetrating to thy Mother's Heart that, if we are to comprehend anything of them, we should have first to comprehend the degree of thy well-nigh infinite love for thy Son. A thing distressed thee. Wherever thou didst turn thou didst see only reasons for sorrow and tears. Thy Mother's Heart was rent the more with wounds bleeding and innumerable because thy Dear Jesus was also being wounded in Heart and body. It is true that thy faith was not diminished and that thy obedience kept thy Heart perfectly resigned to the divine will, but thou didst not cease to suffer inconceivable pain, even as thy beloved Son, in spite of His most perfect submission to all the commands of His Divine Father. Lastly, no heart with a lesser love than thine will ever be able to comprehend what thou didst suffer at that time.

When thy faithful servants and thy true friends consider these things, they give way to tears and are filled up with sorrow at seeing thy divine consolations changed into such cruel sufferings, thy most holy innocence falling prey to such inhuman sorrows. If they could only be torn asunder and consumed to console thee, most willingly would they suffer it. What a martyrdom of blood for the Heart of thy divine Lamb, the Only Son of God and thy Son, in seeing so clearly all the sorrows Penetrating thy Heart, the desolation in which thou art, the anguish necessarily caused by Thy absence, and the fact that thou canst neither speak to Him nor He to thee, because no words can be found capable of appeasing such great sorrows!

O Father of mercies and God of all consolation what are those two Hearts that Thou art keeping thus crucified? Why dost Thou not succor Thy Only Son and Thy loving daughter? Why dost Thou not break the law that Thou hast made that one shall not sacrifice in the same day on Thy altar the Lamb and its Mother? And yet here, in one and the same day, at the selfsame hour, on the same Cross and with the same nails, Thou dost keep fastened the Only Son of sorrowing Mary and the virgin Heart of His most innocent Mother. Can it be that Thou dost care for the dumb animals, unwilling that the mothers should be sacrificed on the day they suffer the loss of their lambs, more than Thou dost for this most pure Virgin, grieving over the sorrows and the death of her divine Lamb? Thou dost will that she should have no other executioner of her martyrdom than her tender love for her Only Son. Nevertheless, in the midst of such cruel tortures, the sight of the sufferings of His most worthy Mother were known to her Beloved Son even as He filled the cup of her affliction and torture. Immortal praise and blessing, O my God, for the incomprehensible love that Thou hast for sinners! Thanksgiving, infinite and eternal, for all the works of that divine love!

O Jesus, Only Son of God, Only Son of Mary, divine light of my soul, I beseech Thee, for the infinite love Thou hast for me, to enlighten my mind with Thy holy truths, to drive from my heart the desire for the consolations of this life, and to instill into it the desire to suffer for love of Thee. Thy love was the cause of Thy torments. Thy love for Thy holy Mother and her love for Thee were for her the source of a torrent of tribulations. How great my blindness when I fancy I can please Thee by walking in any other way! How long, O love, shall I be thus blinded and deceived? How long shall this earthy man refuse to enter into Thy divine plans? Why do I want life if not to employ it for Thee, as did Thy most holy Mother, since Thou hast given Thy life for me on the Cross? What more vivid enlightenment do I desire or need? O divine wisdom, let Thy heavenly light everywhere be my guide; let the strength of Thy love possess me utterly and work in my soul the transformation it operates in hearts obedient to it. I surrender myself, I offer myself, I give myself all to Thee; may it be with a heart pure and entire, O Lord. Take from me the pleasure I find in earthly things, that I may find my pleasure only in loving Thee and suffering with Thee.

O God of my heart, I adore Thee and render Thee infinite thanks for turning to my advantage those sufferings which Thou endurest in being confronted with those of Thy holy Mother, giving her to me as Lady and Mother, and showing that Thou lovest me so much that Thou desirest her to love me as her son in place of Thee. As my heavenly Mother she will have compassion on me in my need and will succor me, help me, protect, keep and govern me as her child. Perhaps Thou hast not found, O my Redeemer, any greater consolation for Thy most holy Mother than to give her evil and sinful children to Thyself that she may use her power and charity to obtain their conversion and salvation. Blessed and praised be Thou forever that Thou hast willed that nothing should perish, but that all things should be used to cure my ills and to shower me with true blessings. Therefore, O good Physician, do not allow me, in the midst of such great remedies, to remain without relief. Receive me as Thine own and make me a worthy servant and a faithful child of this great Queen and kindly Mother.

O most holy Mother of God, remember that the pains which thou didst not suffer in the virgin birth of thy Only Son thou now dost suffer doubly at the foot of the Cross, in the spiritual birth whereby all sinners become thy children. I have cost thee so much, receive me as thy son. I am infinitely unworthy of it; perform for me, O most holy Virgin, the office of Mother, protecting me, succoring and guiding me in all things, and obtaining for me the grace of Thy Son, so that I, worthless and miserable child, may not be lost. O citizens of heaven, blessed and holy fruit of the spiritual maternity and the mother's Heart of this most pure Virgin, pray that she will always be a most kind Mother to me, and obtain for me from Jesus faithfully to serve and love the Son and the Mother in this world, and to be reckoned among those who shall bless and love them eternally in the other. Amen.

EXERCISES OF LOVE AND DEVOTION TO THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS, FROM PHARETRA DIVINI AMORIS, "QUIVER OF DIVINE LOVE," BY LANSPERGIUS THE CARTHUSIAN

"AROUSE AND STIMULATE in your soul the devotion to the most gentle Heart of Jesus, that Heart entirely filled with love and mercy for you. Seek out the divine Heart frequently, with deep fervor and devotion, embracing it in spirit with the kiss of reverence and affection, and making it your dwelling-place.

"Ask God Almighty, through the Sacred Heart, everything you seek to ask. Offer to the Divine Majesty all your devotional exercises, through the Sacred Heart which encloses all the graces and gifts of heaven. It is the door through which you must go to God and God will come to you. To encourage yourself in this practice, and to benefit by it in stirring up true love for God, you should set up in a prominent place in your house a picture or statue of the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

"Whenever you look at it, remember your exile, your misery and your sins. Whenever you pass it, raise your heart to God. Even though you may speak no words, let your soul cry out. If you find that words are helpful, say a prayer that your heart be purified and your will perfectly united to the divine Heart and the will of God. If it helps your devotion, take the picture and kiss it reverently, directing your homage to the real Heart. Earnestly desire to imprint the real image of His Heart upon your own, surrendering your own mind and letting your heart draw into itself the spirit, grace and holiness of the vast abyss of virtue and sanctity abounding in the Sacred Heart. It is very pleasing to God for you to give special honor to the adorable Heart.

"Have recourse to the most kind Heart of Jesus in all your necessities, and you shall receive all the consolation and help you need. Even if all men should deceive and forsake you, do not be discouraged. Abide in peace, for the Sacred Heart, so good, so faithful, so loving, can never deceive you and will never forsake you.(1)

PRAYER

"O most noble, most merciful, most gentle Heart of my faithful lover, of my God and Saviour,

Jesus Christ, I beseech Thee to draw me to Thyself, and absorb my heart, all my powers, to Thy greater glory and for the accomplishment of Thy most holy will.

"O Jesus, most merciful Lord, I commend myself to Thy divine Heart, I resign myself and abandon myself entirely into Thy hands. I beg Thee also, O Most Gracious God, to take away this wicked heart, this impious and thankless heart, and to give me Thy Sacred Heart. Let my heart be according to Thy Heart and according to Thy holy will!

"O my Lord God, my Saviour and my Redeemer, take away all my sins and destroy in me everything displeasing to Thee; pour from Thy Heart into mine whatever will please Thee most. Wholly convert me and take full possession of everything within me, to use it according to Thy good pleasure and for Thine own sake. Unite my heart with Thine, my will with Thy will, so that I may never will and may never be able to will anything or in any other way than Thou wilt and what Thou wilt. O Sweet Jesus, O my God, let me love Thee with all my heart, in all things and above all things." (2)

ANOTHER PRAYER

"O my Most Loving Jesus, dearest spouse of my soul, I conjure Thee by the Sacred Heart pierced by a lance and rent by love, pierce, wound, break, enkindle and inflame my heart from that great brazier of love burning in Thy Heart, so that I may love Thee with all my heart; that is, with the whole gamut of my desires and with a perfect will that shall consider only Thee, seek only Thee, and only aspire to Thee, loving Thee in all things and above all things."(3)

PRAYER TO THE SACRED WOUND IN THE SIDE OF JESUS, DRAWN FROM « THE ROSARY OF OUR LORD'S PASSION », BY LANSPERGIUS

"O my Most Loving and Gentle Jesus, I desire with all the affections of my heart, that all beings created and uncreated, should praise Thee, honor Thee and glorify Thee eternally for that sacred wound wherewith Thy divine side was rent. I deposit, enclose, conceal in that wound and in that opening to Thy Heart, my heart and all my feelings, thoughts, desires, intentions and all the faculties of my soul. I entreat Thee, by the precious blood and water that flowed from Thy most loving Heart, to take entire possession of me, that Thou mayest guide me in all things. Consume me in the burning fire of Thy holy love, so that I may be so absorbed and transformed into Thee that I may be no longer but one with Thee."(4)

ANOTHER PRAYER

"O Most Loving and Kind Father, in satisfaction for all my sins and for those of the whole world, and in reparation for my sloth, my tepidity, my neglect and my disordered love, I offer Thee that sacred wound in the Heart of Thy Son, the blood and the water which flowed therefrom, and the boundless love wherewith He didst love Thee. I beseech Thee that Thou wouldst pour from that sacred wound into my soul a love most pure, most intense, most perfect and eternal, wherewith I may love Thee with all my heart and bless Thee in all things and above all things. Grant that I may think of Thee only, that I may seek Thee only, that I be attached to Thee only, wish to please Thee only, and that I may wholly employ all the faculties of my body and soul to love Thee and glorify Thee."(5)

CHAPTER 17

ANOTHER EXERCISE TO THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS, TAKEN FROM SAINT GERTRUDE'S EXERCISES ON PREPARING FOR DEATH

"O Love, thy flaming divine fire hath won me access to, the beneficent Heart of my Jesus. O Heart overflowing with sweetness! O Heart filled with piety! O Heart surging with charity! O Heart distilling sweetness itself! O Heart full of mercy! Let me die of love in return for Thy love! O Heart of Jesus, my beloved, bury my poor heart in Thy treasure house! O costly pearl of my heart, summon me to Thy life-giving banquet, and although I am most unworthy, let me drink of the wine of Thy consolation, so that Thy divine charity may fill up my deficiency, and the abundance of Thy love may compensate for my lukewarmness and sloth!

"O precious love, how ardently I desire Thee now to offer up for me that divine Heart, that delightful fragrance, that incense of sweet savor, that august sacrifice, on the golden altar where the mystery of the reconciliation of the human race was accomplished, offering it in satisfaction for all the days of my life which I have let slip by without doing what I ought to have done for Thy love.

"O love, plunge my mind deep into that Sacred Heart as into a river, burying all my negligences and all my sins in the flood of Thy divine mercies. Let me find, in the Heart of Jesus, my understanding clarified, my affections purified, and let me have a heart free, detached and empty of all imperfections, so that, when love shall separate my soul and body at the hour of death, I may return my heart stainless to the hands of God. O all-loving Heart, whom I love above all things, Thou art the one whom my heart entreats with all its affections. Be mindful of me, I beg Thee, and may the sweetness of Thy charity restore and strengthen the weaknesses of my heart.

"O Thou eternal sweetness of my soul, O Thou beloved of my heart, whose holy face is full of charm and grace, whose Heart is so filled with sweetness as to make Thee infinitely lovable, must my thoughts wander from Thee? O God of my heart, gather up into Thyself all the disorders of my mind. O my beloved, wash Thou and wipe away, by the purity and the holiness of Thy divine affection and by the burning love of Thy pierced Heart, all the stains of my guilty heart and all the disorders of my imagination, so that Thy most bitter Passion may serve me as a sheltering defense at the hour of my death and that gentle Heart, broken for love of me, may be my eternal abode, since I love Thee alone more than all creatures in the world.(1)

CHAPTER 18

COLLOQUY OF A HOLY SOUL, IN SOLITUDE, WITH THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

O LORD, how delectable is the odor of Thy fragrance! It is my hope that henceforth its sweet delight will make me entirely forget the false pleasures and the vain delights of the world. May Thy sweetness draw me after Thee and in Thee so that, having abandoned all that binds me to earth, I shall follow Thee, run to Thee, flee to Thee and take up my abode in Thy loving Heart.

That divine Heart is a port of safety, where the soul is sheltered from the winds and storms of the sea of this world. In that adorable Heart there is a calm which fears neither thunder nor storm. Therein one tastes delight that knows no bitterness. One finds a peace that never brooks any trouble or discord. There one meets with a joy that knows no sadness. In that Heart one possesses perfect felicity, a gentle charm, an unclouded serenity and happiness unthinkable. That Heart is the first principle of all good, and the initial source of all the joys and delights of paradise.

Most Sweet Jesus, from Thy divine Heart, as from the inexhaustible source, all felicity, all sweetness, serenity, security, repose, peace, joy, contentment, charm and happiness flow into the hearts of the children of God. What good can there be, or how can there be any good thing, that does not proceed from Thee, my Jesus, who art essentially good, the real good, the sovereign good, the only good?

What a joy to drink from this divine spring! What happiness to be refreshed by the delicious waters of this fountain of holiness, which issues forth from itself like a torrent of delight and contentment! Ah, delightful a thousand times is the fragrant perfume of Thy heavenly virtues, whose fragrance is so delectable as to entice all men to Thy loving Heart. It invites them, it strongly attracts them and leads them into the sanctuary of that divine Heart. It never disappoints their hopes. On the contrary, it so fortifies and confirms them that they will never again depart, having found in that most kindly Heart, as on a bed of repose, the end of all their toils.

O Thou God of love, let the sweet fragrance of Thy divine perfumes, which are the wonderful virtues of Thy holy Heart, flow abundantly into the depths of my heart! Let that fragrance penetrate all the faculties of my soul, O one and only source of all happiness, so that being enticed by the sweetness emanating from Thee, it may become detached from self and perfectly united to Thee, that it may make its abode in Thy loving Heart, there to die to itself and no longer to live but in Thee and for Thee!

CHAPTER 19

FORTY FLAMES OR ASPIRATIONS OF LOVE OFFERED TO THE LOVING HEART OF JESUS

1. O wondrous Heart of my Jesus, what joy it gives me to behold in Thee all the grandeur, all the riches and wonders of all beings created and uncreated!

11. O divine Heart, first object of the Eternal Father's love, as well as of Thine own, I give myself to Thee to be plunged deep into the abyss of that love forever.

111. O adorable Heart of the Only Son of Mary, my heart is filled with joy to see that Thou hast more love for that Blessed Virgin than for all created things, and that her love for Thee is greater than for all created things together. I give my whole heart to that mutual love of Son and Mother.

IV. O most loving Heart of my Saviour, I offer Thee all that love which rises to Thee like a flame from the hearts of the divine beloved, begging them to kindle my heart with theirs.

V. O Jesus, lawful King and Lord of all hearts, be Thou the King of my heart, and let me be naught but heart and love towards Thee as Thou art to me naught but a Heart of love.

VI. O Jesus most good, whither shall I flee from Thy justice unless Thou hide me in Thy Heart?

V11 O wonderful Heart, Thou source of my life, let me live only in Thee and by Thee!

VIII. O most loving Heart, how dearly have I cost Thee, seeing Thou hast bought me with the last drop of Thy blood! How my heart would rejoice to give Thee its last drop!

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

IX. O Heart most good, Thou hast laden me with graces and favors. Let all my heart-beats be so many acts of love and praise of Thee!

X. O most gentle Heart, Thou hast always loved me. Let my heart not have a breath of life except to love Thee!

X1. O most charitable Heart, who hast died to give me life, let me live with Thy life and die by Thy death for love of Thee!

X11. O Jesus, Thy Heart is aflame with most pure love for me; let me also love Thee, not for any temporal or eternal interest, but purely and solely for love of Thee!

XIII. O my Jesus, Thy Divine Father hath put all things in Thy hands, and Thy love holds them ever open to give me all. May all that I have and all that I am be also entirely Thine forever!

XIV. O God of my heart, may the love which caused Thee to die for me make me also die for Thee!

XV. O Heart so great, what is there greater than Thou? Who shall tell me that there is aught, either on earth or in heaven, than that to which I have given my heart?

XVI. O Heart of Jesus, it is Thou who hast given me Jesus to be my treasure, my glory, my life, my all; let me also be all to Him!

XVII. O Only Son of God, how is it possible, being the Son of so good a Father, that Thou didst will to have so wicked a brother as I, who have so grievously offended Thy Most Loving Father?

XVIII. O Heart, full of wisdom and light, thinking of me and all the infinitesimal things that concern me, let my mind and my heart be also equally attached to Thee, and let me serve Thee faithfully in the smallest as well as in the greatest things!

XIX. O Heart most mighty, employ Thy divine power to destroy in my heart all that offends Thee!

XX. O Heart so great, loving me everywhere in Thy omnipresence, let me also love Thee everywhere and in all things!

XXI. O Heart most faithful in Thy love, who lovest Thy friends in adversity more than in prosperity, make me love Thee more in times of affliction than of consolation!

XXII. O Heart of the King of the lowly, veritable abyss of humility, crush in me everything that is contrary to that holy virtue, and make it rule absolutely in my heart!

XXIII. O Heart most obedient, who hast preferred to lose Thy life rather than disobey, make me love obedience, for without it I cannot please Almighty God!

XXIV. O Heart infinitely purer than the hearts of angels, the source of all purity, imprint on my heart a very special love of purity and a vivid horror of all that is contrary to it!

XXV. O Heart and furnace of flaming charity, destroy and consume in us all that is opposed to divine charity, and make it rule in all the children of God!

XXVI. O divine Heart, who could fathom the infinite hatred Thou hast for sin? Imprint it upon our hearts and make us hate nothing in the world but that infernal monster, which is the sole object of Thy hate.

XXVII. O Father of Jesus, love Thy Son Jesus for me. Make me share in that love Thou bearest Him!

XXVIII. O Jesus, love Thy Divine Father for me, and enkindle my heart with the love Thou hast for Him!

XXIX. O adorable Spirit, who art all love and charity, do Thou love my Most Gracious Father and my Most Loving Jesus for me, and transform my whole heart into love for Them!

XXX. 0 Jesus, Only Son of God and Only Son of Mary, love Thy divine Mother for me, and enkindle my heart with Thy wondrous love for her.

XXXI. 0 Mother of love, do thou love Thy Jesus and my Jesus for me, and make me share in the love Thou hast for Him.

XXXII. 0 blessed St. Joseph, St. Gabriel, St. Joachim, St. Anne, St. John the Baptist, St. John the Evangelist, St. Lazarus, St. Mary Magdalene, St. Martha, all ye holy apostles and disciples of Jesus, all ye holy martyrs, all ye holy priests and levites, all ye holy virgins and all ye other saints, especially ye beloved of the Hearts of Jesus and Mary, do ye love Jesus and Mary for me, and pray them to model me after their example and to number me among the children of their Heart, and to associate me in your love for them forever and ever.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

XXXIII. 0 my Jesus, since Thy Father hath given me all in giving me Thee, all the hearts of the universe belong to me; therefore I include them all in the desire to love Thee with all the love of which they were capable when Thou didst create them to love Thee.

XXXIV. 0 my Jesus, hast Thou not said that Thou didst come to cast fire upon the earth, and that Thou hast no greater desire than to kindle all hearts? How is it then that the whole earth is full of hearts like ice? Sin is the sole cause of man's frigid soul. 0 cursed sin, how gladly would I be reduced to nothingness that you might be annihilated in every soul!

XXXV. 0 Heart of my Jesus, great furnace of love, send Thy sacred flames into all hearts of the universe, to enlighten them with heavenly fire and enkindle them with Thy divine sparks!

XXXVI. 0 Good Jesus, who hast so loved the Cross for love of me, that Thy Holy Spirit calls the day of Thy great sufferings the day of Thy Hearts joy, make me love and embrace with my whole heart all the crosses that are in store for me out of love for my most precious Crucified!

XXXVII. 0 most loving Hearts of Jesus and Mary, who are but one Heart in the unity of mind, will and affection, make your most unworthy child have but one heart with you and with all hearts that are yours!

XXXVIII. 0 Heart of Jesus, the Father of mercies and the God of all comfort hath given Thee to me and Thou art really my heart. Do Thou love for me everything that I should love and in the way that my God wills that I should love it.

XXXIX. 0 Heart of Jesus and Mary, inestimable treasure of manifold good, be my one treasure, my refuge and my protection! To you I have recourse in all my needs and necessities. When the hearts of all men deceive and abandon me, I have full confidence that the most precious and faithful Heart of my Loving Jesus and of His most sweet Mother will not deceive me and never will abandon me.

XL. Attend and hear, 0 vast furnace of love I It is but a tiny straw asking most humbly and earnestly to be immersed, absorbed, lost, swallowed up and consumed in Thy sacred flames for ever and ever!

MEDITATIONS

Meditations

FOR THE FEAST OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

FIRST MEDITATION

The Vigil of the Feast

Dispositions Required for the Worthy

Celebration of This Feast

FIRST POINT

THE FIRST DISPOSITION FOR THE FEAST OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS A BURNING DESIRE To CELEBRATE IT DEVOUTLY

CONSIDER that the adorable Heart of Jesus is the principle and source of His Incarnation, Birth, Circumcision, Presentation in the Temple, and of all the other mysteries and states of His life as well as of all His thoughts, words, deeds and sufferings for our salvation. His heart burning with love prompted Him to perform all these things for us. Thus it is that we owe honor and love to this most amiable Heart for countless reasons, and to show our affection we must celebrate this Feast with all possible devotion.

Let us offer our hearts to the Holy Ghost, and earnestly beg Him to enkindle us with a burning desire to celebrate the Feast of the Sacred Heart with as much devotion as though we were to celebrate it only once on earth. This great desire constitutes the first requisite in preparation for this solemn Feast.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

SECOND POINT

THE SECOND DISPOSITION is HUMILITY

The second disposition is one of deep humility. We must acknowledge our infinite unworthiness to take any part in the celebration of such a holy solemnity:

1. Because it belongs to heaven rather than to earth; and because the Feast of the Sacred Heart of Jesus is a feast of the Seraphim rather than of sinful men.

2. Because, through our negligence, God's blessings have not borne the fruit they should have in our souls, although we have celebrated this Feast many times.

The divine Heart is the source of every grace that we have received from heaven throughout our lives; yet our ingratitude and faithlessness have rendered these precious gifts fruitless and ineffectual.

May these thoughts inspire us to profound humility. Let us enter again and again into a true spirit of penance, which will prompt us to detest our sins, to excite genuine contrition in our souls, and to make a good confession to purify our hearts so that we may become worthy recipients of the light and grace necessary for a holy celebration of this Feast.

THIRD POINT

THE THIRD DISPOSITION IS UNION WITH THE THREE DIVINE PERSONS OF THE BLESSED TRINITY, THE BLESSED VIRGIN MARY, AND THE ANGELS AND SAINTS

As the third disposition we must offer ourselves to the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost, to the Blessed Virgin Mary, to all the angels and saints, especially to our guardian angels and our patron saints. We must implore them to prepare our hearts and to invite the heavenly Court to celebrate this Feast with us. Let us ask them to make us

SECOND MEDITATION

The Day of the Feast

The Gift of the Sacred Heart of Jesus to Us

FIRST POINT

JESUS HAS GIVEN Us His SACRED HEART

ADORE and consider our most lovable Saviour in the excess of His goodness and in the generosity of His love towards us. Consider attentively His boundless beneficence. He has given us life and all the benefits that spring from the gift of life. He has given us His Eternal Father to be our True Father, His most holy Mother to be our dear Mother, His angels to be our protectors, and His saints to be our advocates and intercessors. He has given us His Church, our second Mother, together with all the sacraments of His Church for our salvation and sanctification. He has given us all His thoughts, words, actions and mysteries, all His sufferings, and His very life which He spent and sacrificed for us, even to the last drop of His Precious Blood.

Moreover, He has given us His most lovable Heart, the principle and source of all other gifts. The charity of His divine Heart impelled Him to emanate from the adorable bosom of His Father, and come upon earth so that He might give us all these priceless favors. This Heart, humanly divine and divinely human, merited these graces by His sufferings, endured for us on earth.

SECOND POINT*WE SHOULD GIVE OUR HEARTS TO JESUS

How shall we repay our loving Redeemer for so much love? We must render love for love. In return for the gift of His Sacred Heart we must give Him our hearts without reserve. To return Our Lord love for love, we must offer our love wholly and completely to Him. He has given us His Heart for all eternity; we must give Him ours forever. He has given us His Heart with infinite love; let us give Him ours in union with His infinite love. He is not satisfied with giving us His own Heart, He has also given us the Heart of His Eternal Father, the heart of His most holy Mother and the hearts of all His angels and saints. He even gives the hearts of all mankind who are commanded under pain of eternal damnation to love us as He has loved us: Hoc est praeceptum meum ut diligatis invicem sicut dilexi vos. ( 1 )

Let us also offer Him in thanksgiving the Heart of His Eternal Father, the Heart of His holy Mother, the hearts of all the angels and saints and of all men; these are ours to give as though they belonged to us. St. Paul assures us that with the gift of His Son the Eternal Father has given us all things: Omnis cum ipso nobis donavit, ( 2 ) and that all things are ours: Omnia vestra sunt. ( 3 ) But above all let us offer Him His own Heart; He has given it to us; therefore it is ours and is the most acceptable offering we could make to Him. It is His own Heart and at the same time the Heart of His Eternal Father, one by unity of essence. It is also the heart of His most holy Mother, whose Heart is one with His by unity of will and affection.

Ejaculatory prayer: Let us give thanks to the Sacred Heart of Jesus for his ineffable gifts.

THIRD MEDITATION*The Gift of This Feast Is a Great Favor from Our Lord*FIRST POINT*EXCELLENCE OF THE FEAST OF THE SACRED HEART

LET US ADORE the incomprehensible goodness of our most loving Redeemer in giving us this holy Feast. It is, indeed, an extraordinary grace.

To understand it at all adequately, we must remember that the feasts celebrated by Holy Church during the course of the year are fountains of sanctification and blessings, but this Feast is a veritable sea of grace and holiness. The Feast of the Most Sacred Heart of Jesus constitutes an immense ocean of feasts, because it commemorates the principle of all the other feasts celebrated by Holy Church. It also is the festival of the prime source of everything that is great, holy and venerable in each of the other feasts.

It is our duty, then, to render infinite thanks to our Saviour for His goodness, and to invite the Blessed Virgin, all the angels and saints and all creatures to unite with us to praise, bless and glorify Him for this ineffable favor.

We should also dispose our souls to receive the graces He wills to communicate to us during the solemnity of this wonderful Feast. We must make a strong resolution to do everything in our power and to employ all our affections and every means possible to continue to celebrate it appropriately and devoutly during the Octave.

SECOND POINT

Our Duties TO THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

Why has the King of all hearts given us this Feast of His most lovable Heart? Solely that we may perform our duties to Him. We have four principal duties to fulfil.

The first duty is adoration. Let us adore the Heart of Jesus with all our heart and all our strength. It is infinitely worthy of adoration because it is the Heart of God, the Heart of the Only-begotten Son of the Eternal Father and of God made man. Let us adore this precious Heart, offering It all the adoration ever accorded to It in heaven and on earth. O my Saviour, may the whole universe unite in adoration of Thy divine Heart! I willingly consent to be reduced to nothingness now and forever, by means of Thy grace, so that the Sacred Heart of Jesus may be incessantly adored by the whole universe.

Our second duty is to praise, bless, glorify and thank His infinitely generous Heart for Its tremendous love for the Eternal Father, His most holy Mother, all the angels, all the saints, and all creatures, especially ourselves. Let us also thank Him for all the gifts, favors and blessings poured out from this immense sea of graces upon all things created, particularly upon us. O most sublime Heart, I offer Thee all the praise, glory and thanksgiving rendered Thee in heaven and on earth, in time and eternity. May all hearts praise and bless Thee forever!

The third duty is to ask pardon of His kind Heart for all the sorrow and suffering endured for our sins, and to offer in reparation all the satisfaction and joys given to Our Lord by His Eternal Father, by His Blessed Mother and by all ardent and faithful hearts. Let us accept out of love for the Sacred Heart all the trials, sorrow and affliction which may come upon us.

The fourth duty is to love this divine Heart with all possible affection and fervor in the name of those who do not love It and to offer It the entire love of all hearts that belong to It. O Heart all-lovable and all-loving, when shall I begin to love Thee as I should?

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

I am under countless obligations to love Thee; yet, alas, I realize that I have not even commenced. Grant me the grace to begin straightway to love Thee. Destroy in my heart whatever is displeasing to Thee and establish instead the reign of Thy holy love.

Ejaculatory prayer: God of my heart, my portion, Jesus forever.
Deus cordis mei, pars mea, Jesus in aeternum.

FOURTH MEDITATION
The Sacred Heart of Jesus Is Our Refuge, Our Oracle, and
Our Treasure

FIRST POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS OUR REFUGE

IN THE FEAST we are celebrating our most loving Saviour has given us His Heart, not only as the object of our homage and adoration, but also as our refuge and our shelter. Let us resort to this haven in all our undertakings and seek therein our consolation in our sorrows and afflictions. Let us place ourselves in the shadow of its protection against the malice of the world, against our own passions, and the snares of the devil; let us retire to this shelter of goodness and mercy to shield ourselves from all the perils and miseries of life. Let us seek refuge in the Sacred Heart, in the tower of strength, where we may escape the vengeance of divine justice for our sins which caused the death of the very Author of life. May this most benign and generous Heart be our shelter and our refuge in all our necessities!

SECOND POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS OUR ORACLE

Our divine Lord has given us His Heart also to be our oracle. How much more valuable is this gift than the first oracle which was placed in the tabernacle of Moses and afterwards in the temple of

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

Solomon! The first oracle was confined to one place, but ours is to be found wherever our Saviour is present. The former was in existence but a few centuries; ours will last until the end of time. The oracle of Old Law spoke by the voice of an angel, but the oracle of the New Law is the very voice of Christ Himself. O Jesus, Thou dost speak heart to heart, teaching us Thy will, resolving our doubts, smoothing our difficulties when we have recourse to Thy Sacred Heart with faith, humility and confidence.

If we wish to know what God asks of us upon different occasions, if we have a difficult task to undertake, if we are in doubt or perplexity, let us have recourse to the Heart of Our Lord, celebrating Holy Mass in His honor or else receiving Holy Communion. Thus we shall experience the consoling effects of His goodness.

THIRD POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS OUR TREASURE

Our most lovable Redeemer has also given us His most loving Heart to be our treasure. It is an immense and inexhaustible treasure which enriches heaven and earth with infinite blessings. Let us draw from this treasure whatever we need to pay our infinite debts to divine justice for our failings. Let us offer the most Sacred Heart in satisfaction for our numberless sins, offenses and negligences.

If we lack some virtue, we must draw upon the treasure house of all virtues, the Sacred Heart of Jesus. If we need humility, let us beg Him to impart to us a share in His profound humility. If we need charity, let us implore Him by His most ardent charity to give us perfect charity. Likewise we may take each virtue in turn.

When we need a special grace to meet certain circumstances, let us ask Our Lord through His most benign Heart to grant it to us from our treasure house.

If we desire to help the souls in purgatory, let us offer God our precious treasure that He Himself may take from it the price due HIS justice.

MEDITATIONS

When the poor beg for alms, we should ask the Sacred Heart the grace to respond to their appeal and give them a share in our heavenly treasure by saying this prayer: "O most benign and generous Heart of Jesus, have mercy upon all those who suffer."

When people ask to be remembered in our prayers, or make any request of us, we should lift up our hearts to Christ, our treasure, saying with true confidence and with deep humility: "O loving Saviour, arouse in me the feelings of Thy charitable Heart toward all who come to me for help."

The heart of every man is attached to whatever is his treasure. Let us so direct our life that all the affections of our heart may be concentrated on the greatest of all treasures, the most amiable Heart of Jesus.

Ejaculatory prayer: O God of my heart, my love, Jesus forever.
Deus cordis mei, amor meus, Jesus in aeternum.

FIFTH MEDITATION

THE Sacred Heart of Jesus Is the Perfect Model and Rule of Our Lives

FIRST POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS OUR PERFECT MODEL

WE SHALL never be able to understand adequately and esteem at its full value the inconceivable grace Our Lord has granted us in giving us His divine Heart. Let us picture a man who was such a favorite of the king that he could truthfully say: "The king's heart belongs to me." What happiness and joy to be so favored! But we have infinitely more than the heart of an earthly king. We have the Heart of the King of kings, who loves us so ardently that each one of us can truly say: "The Heart of Jesus belongs to me."

Yes, this admirable Heart is mine. It is mine because the Eternal Father has given it to me; it is mine because the Blessed Virgin has given it to me; it is mine because He Himself has given it to me, not only to be my refuge and shelter in my needs, to be my oracle and my treasure, but also to be the model and rule of my life and of my actions. I wish to study this rule constantly so as to follow it faithfully.

I must consider what the Heart of Jesus hates and what it loves, in order to hate only what it hates and love only what it loves. The only thing it hates or ever shall hate is sin. Did His gentle Heart feel any hatred for the miserable Jews who persecuted Him so unjustly or for the executioners who treated Him so cruelly? No, He never experienced the emotion of hatred. On the contrary, He besought His

Eternal Father to pardon His executioners and even excused the Most Outrageous of all crimes.

I wish to follow the Divine Rule for love of Thee, my Saviour. I will hate nothing but sin; I will love all that Thou lovest, even my enemies. With the help of Thy grace I will do all the good I can to those who seek to harm me.

SECOND POINT

SENTIMENTS THAT SHOULD FILL OUR HEARTS IN IMITATION OF THE HEART OF JESUS

My rule tells me that I must have in my heart what is in the Heart of Our Lord: Hoc sentite in cordibus vestris quod et in Christo Jesu. ( 1 ) These sentiments are:

1. His affection for the person and will of His Eternal Father. He so loves His Father that He has sacrificed Himself and is still prepared to sacrifice Himself a hundred thousand times for His glory. His love for the divine will is so great that never once in the course of His life did He prefer His own will but found His entire satisfaction in doing His Father's will: Meus cibus est ut faciam voluntatem ejus qui misit me. ( 2 )

2. Another sentiment of His Heart is horror of sin. He hates evil to such a degree that He delivered Himself to the wrath of His enemies and to the torments of the Cross to crush the infernal monster.

3. A third sentiment is His esteem for the Cross and for suffering which He loves so tenderly that the Holy Ghost speaking of His Passion called it the day of His Heart's joy: In die laetitiae cordis ejus us. ( 3 )

4. His love for His Mother is the fourth sentiment of His divine Heart. He loves her alone more than all His angels and saints together.

(1). Phil. 2, 5.

(2). John 4, 34

(3). Cant. 3. 11.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

5. There is also a sentiment of charity for us. He so devotedly loves us that "it seems," says St. Bonaventure, "that He hates Himself for us." In tantum me diligis, ut te pro me odisse videaris.

6. Lastly there is the sentiment of His Heart towards the world. He hates it as something accursed and outcast, openly declaring that it has no part in His prayers: Non pro mundo rogo,(4) and that His children are not of the world: De mundo non sunt sicut et ego non sum de mundo. ( 5 )

Such are the Divine Rules I wish to observe for love of Thee, my Saviour. I long to love God with all my heart, with all my soul and with all my strength. I long also to find my satisfaction in following in all things and everywhere His most adorable will. I long so to abominate all kinds of sin, that by means of Thy holy grace I may rather die than ever consent to it. O my Jesus, make me love crosses and afflictions that I may seek all my joy in them for the love of Thee and that I may say with St. Paul: Repletus sum consolatione; superabundo gaudio in omni tribulatione nostra. (6) Make me a sharer in Thy very great love for Thy holy Mother that she after Thyself may be the center of my veneration and fervent devotion. Impress upon my heart the hatred Thou hast for the world. Make me detest it as a veritable antichrist which is always opposed to Thee and has crucified Thee so relentlessly. Grant, I beseech Thee, O God of my heart, the grace, that for the love of Thee I may always preserve in my soul an entire and perfect charity for my neighbor. This is the rule of rules: Quicumque hanc regulam secuti fuerint, pax super illos. ( 7 )

Ejaculatory prayer: O Sacred Heart of Jesus, law and rule of our heart.

O Cor Jesu, lex et regula cordis nostri.

SIXTH MEDITATION

Jesus Has Given Us His Sacred Heart to Be Our Heart

FIRST POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS is GIVEN TO US TO BE OUR HEART

THE SUN OF GOD gives us His Heart not only to be the model and rule of our life, but also to be our heart, so that by the gift of this Heart, immense, infinite and eternal, we may fulfil all our duties to God in a manner worthy of His infinite perfections. We have three obligations in regard to God: 1. To adore His divine grandeur; 2. To render Him thanks for His unspeakable gifts; 3. To implore Him to grant through His divine generosity all the necessities of soul and body.

How are we able to discharge these duties in a manner worthy of God? We are utterly unable to do so. Even if we had the minds, the hearts and the strength of all angels and men, and if we were to use them to adore, thank, and love God and to satisfy His divine justice, we could accomplish absolutely nothing to discharge our obligations as creatures of God. We have, however, received from our Divine Saviour the gift of His adorable Heart which is the perfect means of fulfilling all these duties. We should employ the Sacred Heart as if it were our Own heart, to adore God fittingly, to love Him perfectly, and to satisfy all our obligations adequately so that our homage and love may be worthy of His supreme majesty. Eternal and infinite thanks be rendered Thee, O Good Jesus, for the infinitely precious gift of Thy divine Heart. May all the angels, saints, and all creatures bless Thee forever!

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

SECOND POINT

How WE SHOULD MAKE USE OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

What happiness and what wealth to possess the divine Heart of Jesus! What a treasure to have at our disposal! How great is our obligation, O my Saviour, because of Thy incomprehensible goodness! Thou dost ask the Eternal Father to make us one with Him and with Thee, as Thou and He are but one. Consequently Thou dost wish to be one in heart with Thee and with Thy Adorable Father. Thou hast willed to be our Head, and hast willed us to be Thy members and to have but one heart. and one spirit with Thee. Thou hast made us children of Thy Heavenly Father; Thou hast given us Thy divine Heart, so that we may love the Father with Thy very own Heart. Thou hast assured us that the Adorable Father loves us even as He loves Thee. Dilexisti eos sicut et me dilexisti. ( 1 ) Thou dost love us with the same Heart with which the Father loves Thee: Sicut dilexit me Pater et ego dilexi vos. ( 2 ) Thus Thou dost give us Thy Heart that we may love the Father and Thyself with the same heart and with the same love with which Thou invest us. We should, therefore, employ Thy Sacred Heart to offer Thee our adoration, praise, thanksgiving, and all our other duties with a reverence and love worthy of Thy infinite greatness.

What must we do to employ the great Heart that God has given us? We must do two things. First, whenever we adore, praise, thank and love God, or practise some virtue, or accomplish some action for His service, we must renounce our own heart which is poisoned with the venom of sin and of self-love. Secondly, we must unite ourselves to the love, charity, humility and all the holy dispositions of His Sacred Heart, so that we may be worthy to adore, love, praise, serve and glorify God with the Heart of God.

O my Saviour, extend the power of Thy eternal arm to separate me from myself and unite me to Thee. Pluck out my miserable heart and replace it with Thine own, enabling me to say: Confitebor tibi, Domine, in toto corde meo. ( 3 ) I will praise Thee and love Thee, my Lord, with my whole heart-with the great Heart of Jesus, which is my own heart.

O Heart all lovable and all loving of my Saviour, be Thou the Heart of my heart, the soul of my soul, the spirit of my spirit, the life of my life and the sole principle of all my thoughts, words and actions, of all the faculties of my soul, and of all my senses, both interior and exterior.

Ejaculatory prayer: O Heart all mine, I possess all things in possessing Thee!

O Cor meum, Cor unicum, in te mihi sunt omnia!

SEVENTH MEDITATION

The Most Profound Humility of the Sacred Heart of Jesus

FIRST POINT

SELF-ABASEMENT OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

HUMILITY is a virtue including an infinity of degrees because there are innumerable sources of humiliation. There are, however, three principal ones. The first is our nothingness which is a bottomless abyss of abjection and humiliation. The second is the infinite grandeur of God, for all greatness carries with it lowliness in those who are inferior to it, and the greater the elevation, the greater is the demand of humiliation on the part of the inferior. That is why the supreme greatness of the majesty of God should impress on created beings an abasement infinite in itself. The third principal humiliation is sin. The least of our sins is an infinite abyss of abasement, and God could justly annihilate us for our smaller faults.

Self-abasement is the first effect that humility should produce in our heart. It operated prodigiously in the Heart of our divine Saviour because Jesus, as man, understood very clearly that He Himself was nothing and of Himself had only nothingness.

Secondly, His very clear perception of the immense grandeur of God held Him continually in a state of incomprehensible lowliness.

Thirdly, He realized that He was a Son of Adam, and that original sin is an immense ocean of sin. It is the very fountainhead of all the sins past, present and future in the whole world, even if it should last for thousands of years more. Jesus understood that if He had been merely man and had been born of an ordinary earthly mother, and if He had not been preserved at the moment of His conception, He would have been as capable, as the other children of Adam, of committing all manner of crimes. This held Him in a state of profound humiliation. Beyond this He saw Himself charged with all the sins of the world as if they had been His own. Peccata nostra sua esse voluit, says St. Augustine, and He saw Himself obliged to bear before God the humiliation of a number of crimes as great as the drops of water and grains of sand in the sea.

MEDITATIONS

O Jesus, who could understand all the humiliations Thou didst bear on earth to destroy my pride? How is it possible that after all this, my heart can tolerate for one single instant this frightful monster?

SECOND POINT

HATRED OF THE HEART OF JESUS FOR THE GLORY AND ESTEEM OF THE WORLD

To know the second effect of humility in the Heart of our Redeemer, let us see His continual hatred for the esteem and glory of this world during the whole course of His life here below. He is the Only Son of God and is God equal to His Father. He is the King of glory, the sovereign Monarch of heaven and earth, who merits the homage and adoration of all creatures. If He were to display the palest ray of His majesty, the whole universe would fall prostrate at His feet to adore Him. But He permits none of His grandeur to appear, either at His birth or in the course of His life, not even after the Resurrection nor in the most adorable Sacrament where He is glorious and immortal. He fled when the Jews wished to make Him king, and declared that His kingdom is not of this world, so much did He detest the glory and honors of the world.

O Jesus, impress these sentiments upon my heart and grant that I may learn ever to esteem the praises of the world as poison from hell.

THIRD POINT*LOVE OF THE HEART OF JESUS FOR HUMILIATION

Recall to your mind all the humiliations, all the confusion, contempt, abjection, opprobrium and ignominies that our most adorable Saviour bore in His Incarnation, in His Birth, in His Circumcision, in His Flight into Egypt, and in all the mysteries of His Passion. All these humiliations constitute a magnificent feast that His divine love has prepared and all the ignominies are as delicious viands, upon which He has feasted and satisfied His extreme hunger for abasement.

Whence did this insatiable hunger proceed, if not from His infinite love for His Heavenly Father and for us? This love gave Him the incredible desire to be humiliated and considered as nothing, to atone for the infinite injury and the inconceivable dishonor the sinner had shown to God. The sinner tears Him from His throne so that he may put himself in His Creator's place, preferring his own satisfactions to God's good pleasure, his own honor to that of God and his own will to the divine will. This injury only a God can perfectly repair by His own abasement.

That is why the incomprehensible love of the Son of God for His Father not only obliged Him to suffer so many humiliations, but also brought Him to the abyss of ignominies to seek his joys and delights, to repair more perfectly the dishonor shown to His Father. His love compelled Him also to deliver us from the eternal pains of hell, to acquire for us everlasting bliss in heaven, to destroy our pride, the source of all our sins, and to establish in our souls that humility which is the true foundation of all virtues.

Infinite thanks, O my Jesus, be to Thy holy humility. Everlasting praise to the Eternal Father who exalted Thee as highly as Thou hast been humiliated and has given Thee a name above all other names. May every knee in heaven, on earth and in hell bend to adore and glorify Jesus Christ and may every tongue confess my Saviour, rejoicing in the immense and eternal glory of His Father

Ejaculatory prayer: Jesus, meek and humble of Heart, have mercy on us.
Jesu, mitis ejus humilis corde, miserere nobis.

EIGHTH MEDITATION*The Sacred Heart of Jesus Is the King of Martyrs*FIRST POINT*SUFFERINGS OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS BECAUSE OF OUR SINS

ALL THE SUFFERINGS of the holy martyrs pale into insignificance in comparison to the infinite sufferings of the adorable Heart of the King of martyrs. If you could number all the sins of the universe, you would count the myriad sharp arrows that pierced the divine Heart of our Saviour with so many wounds. These wounds caused the Sacred Heart to burn with love for His Eternal Father, whom He saw outraged and dishonored by innumerable crimes. O my Saviour, I hate all my sins, because they are the detestable executioners that brought Thy most gentle Heart to martyrdom.

Again, picture to yourselves a countless number of miserable souls for whom our Saviour had an incredible love. He foresaw that, notwithstanding all His sufferings for their salvation, they would by their own fault be lost forever. This vision of the damned inflicted unutterable sorrow on the most charitable Heart of Jesus. O unhappy souls, why have you not loved Him, who has loved you more than Himself, since He has given His very life and blood for your salvation? O Dearest Jesus, give me all the hearts of these unfortunate souls, that I may love and praise Thee for them eternally.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

SECOND POINT

SUFFERINGS OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS BECAUSE OF THE TRIALS AND TORMENTS OF THE MARTYRS AND CHRISTIANS

Recall to your minds all the sufferings, the agony, the trials and the torments of so many millions of martyrs and of all true Christians. All these afflictions are so many bleeding wounds for the most Sacred Heart of Jesus. His most benign Heart could suffer more than the tenderest of hearts because it was filled with an infinite charity for His beloved children. He had before His eyes all their crosses and sufferings. In the hour of affliction each one sought consolation from His adorable Heart. No human mind can understand the agonizing martyrdom suffered by this all paternal Heart in union with His heroic martyrs. This is expressed most remarkably in the words of the Prophet Isaias: Vere dolores nostros ipse tulit, (1) and also in the words of Saint Matthew: Ipse nostras infirmitates accepit, et aegrotationes nostras portavit. (2) Truly we can call the Sacred Heart the King of martyrs and the Glory of the Cross! How consoling it is for the afflicted to know that all their pain and sorrow have already been suffered by the most benign Heart of Jesus! He has borne all sufferings first out of love for His martyrs! Let us give ourselves also to Him to bear all our afflictions in union with immeasurable love with which He first suffered them.

THIRD POINT

SUFFERINGS OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS ON THE CROSS

All the other sufferings of our Saviour seem to diminish when compared to those borne by His divine Heart on the Cross. The

(2). Matt. 8, 17

MEDITATIONS

sufferings of Calvary were so excruciating that the perfect body of our Saviour was broken with pain and sorrow, and His soul He commended into the hands of His Father. O my Saviour, what made Thee suffer so many torments, if it was not Thy infinite love for Thy Father and for us? Indeed, we can say that Thou hast died of loving sorrow and that Thy Heart has been torn and broken by sorrowing love for the glory of Thy Father and for our redemption. O most adorable Heart of Jesus, how shall I thank Thee for the excess of Thy bounty? Oh, that I could possess all the hearts of heaven and earth to sacrifice them in the flames of Thy love!

O Most Holy Father, how canst Thou refuse what anyone asks of Thee through the amiable Heart of Thy Son, broken with sorrow for love of Thee and for love of us? No, it is impossible. Rather wouldst Thou allow heaven and earth to disappear. It is, then, through this divine Heart overcome by love and sorrow for me that I implore Thee, O Adorable Father, to take full and entire possession of my heart and to establish there perfectly and forever the reign of the holy love of Jesus and Mary.

Ejaculatory prayer:

Hail! Victim of all woes enthroned
Upon the Cross, the Martyrs' King!
Make Thou the Cross a joy intoned,
The crown and glory that we sing.

Ave, dolorum victima,
Centrum crucis, Rex Martyrum,
Fac nostra sit Crux gloria,
Amor, corona, gaudium.

NINTH MEDITATION

The Sacred Heart of Jesus Is the Heart of Mary

FIRST POINT

MUTUAL LOVE OF THE SACRED HEARTS OF JESUS AND MARY

THE VIRGINAL HEART of the Blessed Mother of Jesus has more love for her Dear Son than all the angels and saints together; thus the Sacred Heart of the Only Son of Mary is so full of love for His most loving Mother that He is more to her than all created things together.

Let us offer to Jesus the Heart and love of His Blessed Mother in reparation for all our want of love and service towards Him. Let us offer to His most worthy Mother, who is also our Mother, the Heart and love of her Son in satisfaction for our ingratitude and infidelity towards her.

SECOND POINT

THE THREE DIVINE PERSONS GAVE THE HEART OF JESUS TO MARY, AND THROUGH HER TO US

Not only is the Blessed Virgin the first object, after God, of the ardent love of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, but the Sacred Heart is really the Heart of Mary for five principal reasons. The first three reasons are: 1. because the Eternal Father has given her the Heart of His Only-begotten Son as a father gives the heart of a son to his mother; 2. because the Son has given His most loving Heart to the most admirable of mothers; 3. because the Holy Ghost has given

Mary the very spirit of love which unites the Blessed Trinity in the Sacred Heart of her Son. These Three Divine Persons continually and eternally give Mary the adorable Heart of the God-Man, so that she may give us her most precious gift, the Sacred Heart of her Divine Son.

Incessant and everlasting praise be to the Father, to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost for this infinitely precious gift that They have given to our Blessed Mother and through her to us. O Most Holy Trinity, I offer Thee the most adorable Heart of Jesus and the most loving Heart of His Mother in thanksgiving for Thy infinite goodness in my regard. I also offer Thee, in union with those two most amiable Hearts, my own unworthy heart, with the hearts of all my brethren, humbly beseeching Thee to take full possession of them forever.

THIRD POINT

OTHER REASONS WHY THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS THE HOLY HEART OF MARY

The fourth reason why the Sacred Heart is truly the Heart of Mary is that the Eternal Father, having considered the Blessed Virgin from the very instant of her conception as the one chosen to be the Mother of God, gave her from the first moment of her life a love similar to His love for His Divine Son. According to many theologians, Mary had more love for Jesus at that moment than all the Seraphim will ever have. Therefore, Mary's incomparable love for Jesus drew Him into her sacred womb and into her Heart to rest there eternally as the Heart of her Heart and as a Divine Sun that sheds its celestial light into her soul and inflames it with divine fire.

The fifth reason why the Sacred Heart of Jesus is the heart Of Mary is that, at the moment of the Incarnation, she cooperated with the Blessed Trinity to form the human Heart of Jesus, which was formed of her virginal blood. The blood Of her holy Heart passed into the Heart of Jesus and received the perfection that was needed to form the Heart of the God-Man. This divinely human and humanly divine Heart dwelt in the sacred womb of Mary as a furnace of divine love, a furnace which transformed the Heart of Mary into the Heart of Jesus and made these two Hearts but one and the same Heart in a unity of spirit, affection and will.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

The holy Heart of Mary was, therefore, always closely united to the Sacred Heart of her Divine Son. She always willed what He willed and also consented to act and to suffer so that the work of our salvation might be accomplished. Hence, the Fathers of the Church plainly assert that the Mother of the Saviour cooperated with Him in a very special way in the redemption of mankind. That is why our holy Redeemer told St. Bridget of Sweden, whose revelations have been approved- by the Church, that He and His holy Mother worked in perfect harmony, uno corde, for our salvation.

Thus the Sacred Heart of Jesus is the Heart of Mary. These two Hearts are but one Heart, which was given to us by the Blessed Trinity and by our Blessed Mother, so that we, the children of Jesus and Mary, might have but one Heart with our Heavenly Father and our holy Mother and that we might love and glorify God with the same Heart, a Heart worthy of the infinite grandeur of His divine majesty.

Ejaculatory prayer: O Heart of Jesus and Mary, my most loving Heart!

O Car Jesu et Mariae, Cor meum amantissimum!

Eight Other Meditations

ON THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

FIRST MEDITATION

The Blessed Trinity Lives and Reigns in the Sacred Heart of Jesus

FIRST POINT

THE ETERNAL FATHER LIVES IN THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

CONSIDER that the Eternal Father is in the Sacred Heart of Jesus, bringing to birth His Well-beloved Son and causing Him to live there the same all-holy and divine life that He lives in His own adorable bosom from all eternity. He imprints there a perfect image of His own divine Fatherhood, so that this humanly divine and divinely human Heart shall be Father to all the hearts of the children of God. Therefore, we should look upon Him, love and honor Him as our Loving Father, and endeavor to imprint upon our own hearts a perfect likeness of His life and virtues.

O Good Jesus, engrave the image of Thy most holy Heart upon our hearts and make us live only by love for Thy Heavenly Father. Would that we might die of love for Thee, as Thou didst die of love for Thy Eternal Father!

SECOND POINT

THE DIVINE WORD LIVES AND REIGNS IN THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

Consider that the Eternal Word is in that royal Heart, united with it in the most intimate union imaginable, the hypostatic union, which causes that Heart to be worshipped with the adoration that is due to God. He is there with a life that is somehow more helpful, if one may so speak, than His life in the Heart and bosom of His Father. The Word lives but does not rule in the Heart and bosom of the Heavenly Father; whereas He lives and rules in the Heart of the God-Man, ruling over all human passions which are centered in the heart so absolutely that they do not stir except by His order.

O Jesus, King of my heart, live and rule over my passions, uniting them with Thine, never allowing them to be used except under Thy guidance and for Thy glory alone!

THIRD POINT

THE HOLY GHOST LIVES AND REIGNS IN THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

Consider that the Holy Ghost lives and reigns ineffably in the Heart Of Jesus, where He conceals the infinite treasures of the knowledge and the wisdom of God. He fills the Sacred Heart with all His gifts to a pre-eminent degree, according to His divine words: Et requiescet super eum Spiritus Domini, Spiritus sapientiae et intellectus, Spiritus consilii et fortitudinis, Spiritus scientiae et pietatis, et replebit eum Spiritus timoris Domini. (1)

Consider, finally, that these Three Divine Persons live and reign in the Heart of the Saviour, as if they were seated on the most high throne of their love, in the primal heaven of their glory, in the paradise of their dearest delights. They there shed abroad, with inexplicable abundance and profusion, wonderful lights, and the burning fires and flames of their eternal love.

O Most Holy Trinity, infinite praise be to Thee forever for all the wonders of love that Thou dost work in the Heart of my Jesus! I offer Thee my heart, with the hearts of all my brethren, begging Thee most humbly to take entire possession of them, to destroy in them everything displeasing to Thee, and to establish there the sovereign rule of Thy divine love.

Ejaculatory Prayer: O Most Holy Trinity, eternal life of Hearts, reign in all hearts forever.
O sacrosancta Trinitas, aeterna vita cordium, in corde regnes omnium!

SECOND MEDITATION

The Sacred Heart of Jesus Is the Sanctuary and the Image of the Divine Perfections

FIRST POINT

THE DIVINE PERFECTIONS SUBSIST AND REIGN IN THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

LET US ADORE and contemplate all the perfections of the divine nature, subsisting and reigning in the Sacred Heart of Jesus: that is to say, the eternity of God, the infinity of God, His love, charity, justice, mercy, power, immortality, wisdom, goodness, glory, felicity, patience, holiness and all other perfections.

Let us adore these divine perfections in all the wonderful effects they produce in the divine Heart of the Son of God. Let us give wholehearted thanks for these manifestations, and offer them all th~ worship, glory and love which have been and shall be rendered to them eternally by that same Heart.

SECOND POINT

THE DIVINE PERFECTIONS STAMP THEIR ETERNAL IMPRESS ON THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

Let us consider that those adorable perfections imprint their image and likeness on the divine Heart of Our Lord, in a manner infinitely more excellent than all human and angelic minds can conceive or express. The adorable Heart of Jesus bears within itself the image of eternity by its perfect detachment forever from things fleeting and temporal and by its exceeding great affection for things divine and eternal. It bears the image of immortality by Its infinite love for the Heavenly Father and for us, a love whose immensity reaches everywhere, in heaven, on earth and under the earth. If we consider the nature of that incomparable Heart, we shall see without difficulty that it bears within itself a living likeness of all the other perfections of the Godhead.

O wonderful Heart of Jesus, we offer Thee our hearts; impress upon them, we beseech Thee, some reflection of that divine likeness, so that in us may be accomplished the commandment of our divine Master: Estote perfecti, sicut Pater vester caelestis perfectus est. (1)

THIRD POINT

THE DIVINE MERCY SHOULD BE THE OBJECT OF OUR VERY SPECIAL DEVOTION

Of all the divine perfections mirrored in the Sacred Heart of our Saviour we should have a very special devotion to divine mercy and we should endeavor to engrave its image on our heart. To this end three things must be done. The first is to pardon with all our heart and promptly forget the offenses done us by our neighbor. The second is to have compassion on his bodily sufferings, and to relieve and succor him. The third is to compassionate the spiritual misfortunes of our brethren, which are much more deserving of commiseration than the corporal ills. For this reason we ought to have great pity on the numbers of wretched souls who have no pity on themselves, using our prayers, our example and our teaching to safeguard them from the eternal torments of hell.

O most gracious and merciful Heart of Jesus, imprint on our hearts a perfect image of Thy great perfections, so that we may fulfil fulfil the commandment Thou hast given us: Estote misericordes, sicut Pater vester caelestis misericors est. (2) Ejaculatory Prayer: O Holy God, O Strong God, O Immortal God, have mercy on us. Sanctus Deus, sanctus fortis, sanctus immortalis, miserere nobis!

(2) Luke 6, 36.

THIRD MEDITATION

The Sacred Heart of Jesus Is the Temple, the Altar and the Censer of Divine Love

FIRST POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS THE TEMPLE OF DIVINE LOVE

THE HOLY GHOST, love uncreated and eternal, built this magnificent temple and fashioned it of the virginal blood of the Mother of love. It is dedicated to eternal love. It is infinitely more sacred, more noble and more venerable than all the temples material and spiritual in heaven and on earth. In this temple God receives worship, praise, and glory worthy of His infinite greatness. In this temple the supreme Preacher continually teaches us most eloquently. It is an everlasting temple that shall have no end. It is the center of all holiness, incapable of any profanation. It is adorned with all the Christian virtues in the highest degree, and with all the perfections of the divine nature, as with so many living images of the Eternal Godhead.

Let us rejoice in the vision of all the splendors of this wonderful temple and all the glories there tendered to the divine majesty.

SECOND POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS AN ALTAR OF DIVINE LOVE

The Heart of Jesus is not only the temple, but it is also the altar of divine love. On that altar the sacred flame of omnipotent love burns night and day. On that altar the great High Priest Jesus continually offers to the Most Holy Trinity manifold sacrifices and supreme oblation.

118-

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

First, He offers Himself as a sacrifice and victim of love, the most holy and precious victim that ever was or can be. He sacrifices utterly and entirely His body, His blood, His soul, His whole life, all His thoughts, all His words, all His actions and all that He suffered on earth. Moreover, He makes that sacrifice perpetually, with a love that is boundless and infinite.

Secondly, He sacrifices everything the Heavenly Father has given Him, namely, all rational and irrational creatures, animate and inanimate beings, which he immolates as so many victims in praise of His Father; but, above all, He sacrifices human beings, the good and the wicked, the blessed and the reprobate. The good He offers as victims of love to His divine goodness. The evil He immolates as victims of the wrath of God, to His awful justice: Omnis victima salietur.(1) Thus the great High Priest sacrifices all things to the glory of His Father on the altar of His Heart. Therefore, He alone may rightly say: Laetus obtuli universa. (2)

Let us offer ourselves to Him and beg Him to rank us with the victims of His love, to consume us as holocausts in the divine flames burning incessantly on the altar of His Sacred Heart.

THIRD POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS A CENSER OF DIVINE LOVE

The Sacred Heart Of Jesus is not only the temple and the altar, but also the censer of divine love. It is the golden thurible described in the eighth chapter of the Apocalypse, which St. Augustine interprets as the loving Heart of Jesus. In that precious censer all the worship, praise, prayers, desires and affections of all the saints are

(2). 1 Para. 29, 17.

MEDITATIONS

placed, like so many grains of incense to be offered to God in the Heart of His Well-beloved Son, ascending as a most pleasing odor to His divine majesty. There we also must place all our prayers, all our desires, all our devotions, and all the pious affections of our hearts, yes, our very hearts themselves, with all that we do and all that we are, beseeching the King of all hearts to purify and sanctify all these things and to offer them to His Father as a heavenly incense of sweet fragrance.

Thus the Sacred Heart of our Jesus is the temple, the altar, the censer, the priest, the victim of divine love, all for our sake, performing on our behalf the functions of those divine offices. O love so abundant! O my Saviour, how wonderful are Thy loving kindnesses! Ah!, what reverence and praise I should give to Thy loving Heart in return! O most blessed Heart of my Jesus, let me be naught but heart and love towards Thee and let all hearts on heaven and earth be immolated to Thy praise and glory!

Ejaculatory Prayer:

Hail, priest of hearts and victim, hail!
Alone Thou equal art to God.
Most worthy Temple; Holy Grail,
And Altar, holiest to laud.

Ave, Sacerdos cordium,
Ave, Deo par Victima,
Templum Deo dignissimum,
Et Ara sacratissima.

FOURTH MEDITATION

The Sacred Heart of Jesus Loves Us with an Everlasting and a Boundless Love

FIRST POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF Jesus Loves Us WITH AN EVERLASTING Love

THE DIVINE HEART of our Saviour is filled with eternal love for us. To realize this truth one should understand two things about eternity: first, that it has neither beginning nor end; secondly, that it comprises in itself all ages, past, present and future, all the years, months, weeks, days, hours and moments of the past, present and future, and that it comprises them in a fixed and permanent manner, holding all those things united and joined together in one indivisible point. That is how eternity differs from time. Time runs on incessantly; as one moment arrives, another elapses and is left behind, and so one never sees two moments of time together. But in eternity everything is permanent; whatever is eternal always remains of the same extension.

That is why the eternal love of the Sacred Heart of Jesus for us comprises two elements. First, this incomparable Heart has loved us from all eternity, before we were and could have known and loved it, even in spite of the vision and knowledge that it had of all our offenses which were present to its vision as they are now. Secondly, the amiable Heart of Jesus loves us at every moment with all the love wherewith it has ever loved us and shall love us throughout all eternity. Thus we can see the difference between God's love and ours. Our love is a passing act; the love of God is constant. The love that God has exercised towards us for a hundred thousand years remains in His Heart together with that which He will dispense a hundred thousand years from now. Eternity implies that in God there is nothing past nor future, but all is present, so that God loves us now with all the love wherewith He has loved us from all eternity and wherewith He will love us forever.

O eternity of love! O eternal love! If I had existed from all eternity, I should have been bound to love Thee from all eternity; and yet, my God, I have not begun to love Thee as I should. But at least let me begin now, O my Saviour, to love Thee as Thou wouldst be loved. O God of my heart, I give myself to Thee to be united to Thy ceaseless love for me from all eternity. I surrender myself to Thee to be united to the love wherewith Thou lovest Thy Father before all centuries, so as to love the Father and the Son with an eternal love.

SECOND POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF Jesus Loves Us WITH A BOUNDLESS LOVE

The loving Heart of Jesus loves us with a boundless love. The divine and uncreated love which possesses that adorable Heart, is nothing else but God Himself. Now, since God is unlimited, His love is also unlimited. Since God is everywhere, His love is everywhere, in all places and in all things. Therefore, the Sacred Heart of Jesus loves us not only in heaven, but He also loves us on earth. He loves us in the sun, in the stars and in all created things. He loves us in the hearts of all the denizens of heaven and in the hearts of all persons that have some measure of charity for us on earth. All love for ourselves existing in the hearts in heaven and on earth is a participation in the love of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. Moreover, He loves us even in the hearts of our enemies despite the hatred they bear us. I even make bold to say that He loves us in hell, in the hearts of the devils and the damned, in spite of all their wrath and hatred, since the divine love is everywhere, filling heaven and earth like the presence of God.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

O boundless love, I plunge myself into thy fires and flames that fill all created beings, in order to love my God and my Saviour in all places and in all things. O Jesus, I offer Thee all the boundless love of Thy Heart, of the adorable Heart of Thy Divine Father, the lovable heart of Thy holy Mother, and of all the hearts that love Thee in heaven and on earth. I ardently desire that all creatures of the universe be transformed into flaming fires of love towards Thee.

Ejaculatory Prayer:

How late have I loved Thee, O goodness so ancient and yet so new, how late have I loved Thee.

Sero te amavi, bonitas tam antiqua et tam nova, sero te amavi.

FIFTH MEDITATION

The Sacred Heart of Jesus Is the Source of the Life of the God-Man, of the Mother of God, and of the Children of God

FIRST POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS THE SOURCE OF THE LIFE OF THE GOD-MAN

THE ADORABLE HEART of our Saviour is the source of the life of the God-Man, and consequently is the source of all the thoughts and feelings of the Son of God on earth, of all the words He pronounced, of all the actions He performed, of all the sufferings He endured, and of the incomprehensible love wherewith He did and suffered all things for our salvation. Therefore, it is to Thy loving Heart, O my Jesus, that our obligation is due. What shall we do to thank Thee? We can do nothing more pleasing to Thee than to offer Thee thy most divine Heart. I offer it then to Thee, my Saviour, in union with the infinite love wherewith it hath accomplished so many wonderful things for our Redemption.

SECOND POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS THE SOURCE OF THE LIFE OF THE MOTHER OF GOD

The Sacred Heart Of Jesus is the source of the life of Mary, the Mother of God. When that admirable Mother was carrying her Be loved Son in her blessed womb, her virginal Heart was the source of the natural bodily life of her divine Child, but the Heart of that adorable Child was, at the same time, the source of the spiritual and supernatural life of His most worthy Mother. Hence the divine Heart of the Only Son of Mary was the source of all the pious thoughts and feelings of His Blessed Mother, of all the sacred words she spoke, of all the good deeds she performed, of all the virtues she practised, and of all the pains and sorrows she suffered in order to cooperate with her Beloved Son in the work of our Salvation.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

Praise eternal, O my Jesus, to Thy divine Heart! O my Redeemer, in thanksgiving for the great wonders of grace that Thy filial Heart hath wrought in Thy glorious Mother, I offer her maternal Heart flaming with love for Thee.

THIRD POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS THE SOURCE OF LIFE OF THE CHILDREN OF GOD

The Sacred Heart of Jesus is the source of life of all the children of God. Since it is the source of the life of the Head, it is also the source of life of the members; and since it is the source of life of the Father and the Mother, it is the source of life of the children. That is why we should regard and honor that benign Heart as the source and origin of all the good thoughts in the minds of all Christians, of all the holy words that have issued from their lips, of all the virtues that they have practised and of all the toil they have borne for their sanctification as Christians.

O my Saviour, may all these things be transmuted into immortal praise to Thy most Sacred Heart O Jesus, since Thou hast given me that very Heart to be the source of my life, let it be, I beseech Thee, the sole source of all my feelings and affections, of all the faculties and functions of my soul, and of all the use I make of my interior and exterior senses! In fine, let it be the soul of my soul, the spirit of my spirit, and the Heart of my heart

Ejaculatory Prayer: O Heart of Jesus, principle of all good, to Thee be praise and glory for ever.

O Cor Jesu, Principium omnium bonorum, tibi laus, tibi gloria in aeternum!

SIXTH MEDITATION

The Three Hearts of Jesus Which Are But One Heart

FIRST POINT

THE DIVINE HEART OF JESUS

WE HAVE THREE, HEARTS to adore in our Saviour which, nevertheless, are but one single Heart by virtue of the hypostatic union.

The first is His divine Heart existing from all eternity in the bosom of His Adorable Father, which is but One Heart and one love with the love and Heart of His Father, and which, with the Heart and love of His Father, is the source of the Holy Spirit. Therefore, when He gave us His Heart, He also gave us the Heart of His Father and of His Adorable Spirit; hence His marvelous words: Sicut dilexit me Pater, et ego dilexi vos. "I love you with the same Heart and the same love wherewith I love my Father." (1) My Father loves me with an eternal, boundless and infinite love; I love you also with a love that is eternal, boundless and infinite. My Father causes Me to be what I am, Godlike to Himself and Only Son of God; and I make you to be by grace and participation ~what I am by nature and essence, that is to say, Gods and children of God, seeing that you have but One and the Same Father as I, a Father who loves you with the same Heart and the same love wherewith He loves me: Dilexisti eos sicut et me dilexisti. (2) My Eternal Father has constituted Me universal heir of all His goods: Constituit haeredem universorum; (3) and I make you My co-heirs: Haeredes Dei et cohae (1). John 15, 9.
(3). Heb. x, 2.

MEDITATIONS

redes Christi; (4) I promise to give you possession of all My treasures: Super omnia bona sua constituet eum. (5). My Father finds all His pleasure and delight in Me; and I take My delight and pleasure in you: Deliciae meae esse cum filiis hominum. (6)

O goodness! O love! O God of love, how is it possible for the hearts of men to be so hard and cold towards Thee who art all aflame with the fire of love towards them? Oh, let all my joy and delight be in thinking of Thee, in speaking of Thee, in serving and loving Thee! O my All, let me be wholly Thine, and do Thou alone possess all that is in me.

SECOND POINT

THE SPIRITUAL HEART OF JESUS

The second Heart of Jesus is His spiritual Heart, which is the will of His holy soul, a purely spiritual faculty, whose function is to love what is lovable and to hate what is hateful. But the divine Saviour so perfectly sacrificed His human will to His Divine Father that He never exercised it while on earth and will never exercise it even in heaven, but He sought uniquely and solely His Father's will, according to those words of His: "I seek not my own will, but the will of him that sent me." (7) "I came down from heaven, not to do my own will but the will of Him that sent me." 8 Now, it is out of love for us that Our Lord renounced His own will, in order to perform the work of our salvation solely by the will of His Father, in particular when He prayed to Him in the Garden of Olives: Pater, non mea voluntas, sed tua fiat, "Father, not my will but thine be done!" (9)

(5). Matt. 24, 47.

(6). Prov. 8, 31.

(7). John 5, 30.

(8). John 6, 38.

(9). Luke 22, 42.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

O God of my heart, if for love of me Thou didst sacrifice Thy utterly holy and divine will, how much more should I renounce my own will for love of Thee, wholly depraved and corrupted as it is by sin! Ah, let me renounce it with all my heart forever, imploring Thee most humbly, O my adorable Redeemer, to crush it like a serpent full of venom and to establish in its place the rule of Thy divine will.

THIRD POINT

THE CORPOREAL HEART OF JESUS

The third Heart of Jesus is the Sacred Heart of His deified body, a furnace of love divine and of incomparable love-for us. Since the corporeal Heart is hypostatically united to the Person of the Word, It is enkindled with flames of infinite love for us. Its love is so intense that it constrains the Son of God to bear us continually in His Heart; to fix His eyes ever upon us; to take such a great interest in the smallest things concerning us that He verily numbers all the hairs of our head, allowing not one of them to perish; to ask His Father that we might make our eternal abode within His bosom: Pater, quos dedisti mihi, volo ut ubi sum ego; et illi sint mecum; (10) and to assure us that, if we vanquish the enemies of His glory and of our salvation, He will make us sit with Him on His own throne, and will let us enter into possession of the same kingdom and the same glory that His Eternal Father has given Him.

Oh, how abundant and rapturous is the love of Jesus for such faithless and ungrateful men as we! O Jesus, my love, either take away my life or let me live only to love Thee, to praise and glorify Thee unceasingly. Let me die a thousand deaths rather than willingly do anything to grieve Thee! Thou hast three Hearts which are but one and the same Heart, a Heart wholly devoted to loving me continually. Would that I possessed all the hearts in the universe that I might consume them in Thy holy love!

MEDITATIONS

Ejaculatory Prayer: I love Thee, O Most Loving Jesus, I love Thee, O infinite goodness, I love Thee with my whole heart and I wish to love Thee more and more.

SEVENTH MEDITATION
The Miracles of the Sacred Heart of Jesus

FIRST POINT

MIRACLES OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IN THE REALM OF NATURE

SET BEFORE YOUR EYES the realm of nature, the great universe comprising so many wonderful things, namely, the heavens, the sun, the moon, the stars and comets, the four elements, of which the air is peopled by such a great variety of birds; the earth, replete with its marvelous abundance of animals, trees, plants, flowers, fruits, metals, stones; the sea, filled with such a prodigious multitude of fishes. Add to that the creatures of reason, men and angels; consider them in the natural state of their creation. What a miracle to have made this amazing universe out of nothing! It is not a miracle, it is a world of miracles without number. Count all the creatures made by God and you will count so many miracles that God has performed in drawing them from the abyss of nothingness. Number all the moments that have elapsed since the creation of the world and you will number so many miracles, since preservation is a continuous creation. There is also an infinite number of other wonders perpetually wrought in the governance of this universe. Now, who is the author of those innumerable miracles? It is the inconceivable goodness and the incomprehensible love of the divine Heart of that adorable Word, mentioned by St. John the Evangelist in the first words of his Gospel: Omnia per ipsum facta sunt. It is because of His love for us that He has made all things, even though He had always before His eyes the ingratitude, the offenses and the crimes without limit which He was obliged to suffer and still endures every day from us.

MEDITATIONS

That is why all those things which He created are so many tongues and voices preaching to us unceasingly the ineffable charity of His most gracious Heart and exhorting us to adore Him, to love Him and to glorify Him in every possible manner.

Heaven and earth, says St. Augustine, and all things contained therein, cease not to tell me that I should love my God: Caelum et terra et omnia quae in eis sunt, non cessant mihi dicere ut amem Deum meum.

SECOND POINT

MIRACLES OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IN THE REALM OF GRACE

Picture the realm of grace, which comprises an infinitude of wonders incomparably surpassing those of the world of nature. It contains all the miracles of sanctity that have been wrought on the earth by the Holy of holies; all the wonders that transpired in the Mother of grace; the entire Church Militant; all the Sacraments, with all the marvelous effects which they produce; all the wonderful things that divine grace has effected and will effect in the lives of all the saints that have been and that shall be in this world. What is the source of all those wonders? Is it not the inconceivable charity of the blessed Heart of our Redeemer, who has established and constantly preserves this amazing world of grace on earth, for love of us?

O my Jesus, let all these wonders of Thy most loving Heart and all the powers of Thy divinity and Thy humanity be employed to bless Thee and praise Thee unceasingly and eternally: Benedicite omnes virtutes Domini Domino(1).

132-

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

THIRD POINT

MIRACLES OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IN THE REALM OF GLORY

Raise your mind and your heart to heaven, to contemplate the realm of glory, the fair, great and glorious city of Heaven, of which all the citizens are forever freed from all kinds of tribulations and showered with countless blessings. Behold that innumerable army of the blessed, quam nemo dinumerari poterat (2) who are more dazzling than the sun, who possess incalculable riches, joys unspeakable, and glories indescribable. Consider the inconceivable happiness which awaits you in that heavenly Jerusalem, since the Holy Ghost declares that never has eye seen, nor ear heard, nor human heart understood nor can ever understand the infinite treasures that God has prepared there for them that love Him. Now, what has made heaven and who is the author of all the miracles contained therein? It is the intense love of the Sacred Heart of the Son of God, who has merited it by His blood, who has filled it with an ocean of unutterable delights, to give us the full and perfect possession of it eternally.

O my Saviour, graciously let me offer Thee, I beg Thee, as an act of thanksgiving, all the glories and wonders of paradise! If I were possessed of a hundred thousand paradises, how gladly would I, by the help of Thy grace, divest myself of them so as to sacrifice them to Thy eternal praise!

Ejaculatory Prayer: Let the mercies of the Lord give glory to him: and his wonderful works to the children of man.

Confiteantur Domino misericordiae ejus, et mirabilia ejus filiis hominum.

(2). Apoc. 7. 9.

EIGHTH MEDITATION

The Sacred Heart of Jesus Is a Furnace of Love, Purifying, Illuminating, Sanctifying, Transforming and Deifying

FIRST POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS A FURNACE OF LOVE FOR US

THE MOST LOVING HEART of our benign Saviour is a burning furnace of most pure love for us; a furnace of purifying love, of illuminating love, of sanctifying love, of transforming love, and of deifying love. His love is a purifying love, in which the hearts of holy souls are purified more perfectly than gold in the furnace; an illuminating love, which scatters the darkness of hell with which the earth is covered and lets us into the wonderful brilliance of heaven; de tenebris vos vocavit in admirabile lumen suum (1) a sanctifying love, which destroys sin in our souls in order to establish there the kingdom of grace; a transforming love, which transforms serpents into doves, wolves into lambs, beasts into angels, children of the devil into children of God, children of wrath and malediction into children of grace and blessing; a deifying love, which makes gods of men, ego dixi dii estis, letting them share in the holiness of God, His mercy, His patience, His goodness, His love, His charity and His other divine perfections: Divinae consortes naturae. (2)

O divine love of my Jesus, I give myself wholly to Thee; purify me, enlighten me, sanctify me, transform me into Thee, that I may be naught but love for my God.

(1). 1 Pet. 2, 9.

134-

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

THE FURNACE OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS RADIATES LOVE TO ALL BEINGS

The august Heart of Jesus is a furnace of love which spreads its fiery flames in all directions, in heaven, on earth, and throughout the whole universe. Its fiery flames would have consumed the hearts of the Seraphim and would have enkindled all the hearts of earth, if the terrible chill of sin had not set in. Those divine fires transform all the hearts of heavenly lovers into so many furnaces of love for Him who is all love for them.

All creatures on earth, even those which are senseless, inanimate and irrational, feel the effects of the incredible goodness of that magnificent Heart, since He loves all things that are and hates nothing that He has made, sin being the only thing that He did not make, the only object of His hatred: Diligis omnia quae sunt, et nihil odisti eorum quae fecisti. (3)

Jesus has an extraordinary love for men, as well for the good as the wicked, for His friends as for His enemies, for whom He has such intense charity that even the overwhelming torrents and floods of their innumerable sins are not able to extinguish it: Aquae multae non potuerunt extinguere charitatem. (4) Not a moment elapses that He does not grant them manifold natural and supernatural favors, corporal and spiritual, even while they are offending Him and dishonoring Him by their misdeeds.

The divine fires of the precious Heart of the Son of God reach even into hell, to the devils and the damned, preserving their being, life, and the natural perfections which He gave them at creation and not punishing them as much as they have deserved for their sins, for which His divine justice might very justly chastise them much more severely than it does: Non est qui se abscondat a calore ejus. (5)

(3). Wisdom 11, 25.

(4). Cant. 8, 7.

(5). Ps. 138, 7

O sacred fires and flames of the Heart of my Saviour, rush in upon my heart and the hearts of all my brethren, and kindle them into as many furnaces of love for my Most Loving Jesus!

THIRD POINT

INTENSITY OF THE LOVE OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

Imagine all the charity, all the affections, all the tender and intimate feelings of all the hearts that the omnipotent hand of God might fashion as being collected and united in one heart large enough to contain them. Would they not all be capable of forming one unimaginable furnace of love? But realize that all the fires and flames of such a furnace would not make one tiny spark of the immense love with which the infinitely loving Heart of Jesus is inflamed towards you, O Christian soul.

O furnace infinitely to be desired! Who will grant me to be plunged into that burning fire? O Mother of Jesus, O all ye angels, O all ye holy saints of Jesus, I give myself to you all and to each in particular, and I give you also all my brothers and sisters in Christ, and all the inhabitants of earth, that you may cast us all into the abyss of that sacred furnace! Attend and hear, O vast furnace of love! A tiny straw asks most humbly and earnestly to be plunged, buried, lost, devoured and consumed wholly in thy sacred flames and thy holy fires forever and ever!

Ejaculatory Prayer: O fire which ever burnest and is never extinguished. O love which is ever fervent and never grows tepid, inflame me wholly that I may love Thee wholly.

O ignis qui semper ardes et nunquam extingueris. O amor qui semper ferves et nunquam tepescis, accende me totum, ut totus diligam te!

MASS
AND OFFICE OF
THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

On July 29, 1672, St. John Eudes addressed a circular letter to his spiritual children, the Priests of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary and the Religious of Our Lady of Charity, enjoining them to celebrate a solemn feast in honor of the Sacred Heart of Jesus on October 20. He sent them for this occasion a special Office and Mass, which he had composed two years before. Both these liturgical documents had been previously approved by the Archbishop of Rouen and by the Bishops of Rennes, Evreux, Bayeux and Lisieux. The Saint was authorized to celebrate the Feast of the Sacred Heart in the houses of his Orders as a double of the first class with octave. The use of the Office and Mass was also permitted on the first Thursday of the month, unless it was hindered by an office of nine lessons.

The Office of the Sacred Heart is a complete office with lessons for the eight days of the octave. Invitatory, hymns, antiphons, versicles, lessons, responsaries and collect-everything is proper in this office as in that of the great feasts of the Church. Only the Office of the Feast Day with its English translation is included in this edition. The Latin hymns were composed by St. John Eudes and the other parts were borrowed from Sacred Scripture and from the Fathers of the Church. By combining and adapting them to the devotion to the Sacred Heart, the Saint was able to endow his office with a definite personal character and make it at once highly original and most unified. The dominant thought is that which Our Lord develops in the discourse after the Last Supper, when He reminds His Apostles of the love He has never ceased to show them and exhorts them to abide in His love.

The Mass brings out the same thought as the Office. The Sequence, an imitation of the Lauda Sion, is noteworthy. The author here celebrates, with transports of joy and love, the glories of the Sacred Heart. The depth of thought, the exuberance of feeling, and the perfection of form make it a real masterpiece. Writers who have dealt with both the Office and the Mass are unanimous in their praise.

"These offices," said Cardinal Satolli in speaking of the two Offices of the Sacred Hearts composed by St. John Eudes, "are marked by such sweet and intense piety that only the heart of a saint can devise such forms." (1)

In his book on La Mère de Saumaise, Father de Curley, S.J., examines the Mass of St. John Eudes. "If we had to give a name to this Mass," he says, "we shall call it the Mass of Fire. It is eternal love breaking forth in notes of affectionate supplication." (2)

After studying this Office and Mass, Father Bainvel writes: "In them we have, indeed, an original work that in parts, by the harmonious blending of its wealth of profound thought, of poetic rapture, of unction and solid piety, all inspired by the Scriptures and the Fathers, recalls the admirable Office of the Blessed Sacrament. With regard to the general sentiments, these breathe the most perfect spirit of devotion to the Sacred Heart, especially the spirit of love, the love of man who would respond to the love of God.... The Mass is wholly a Mass of love, wholly filled with the Sacred Heart of Jesus, with His love for God and for us, with our love for Him. It is indeed a sublime and beautiful liturgical work, by means of which Fr. Eudes' influence was extended to the societies most deeply imbued with the spirit of the devotion of Paray, and will continue to be felt therein." (3)

After the establishment of the Feast of the Sacred Heart in the Eudistic Orders in 1672, it was adopted by other religious Congregations, notably the Benedictine Nuns of Montmartre, the Benedictine Nuns of the Blessed Sacrament, and the Religious of Our Lady of Corbeil. The Office and Mass used by these communities were those of St. John Eudes. Even in many convents of the Visitation Order, after the miraculous apparitions of Paray-le-Monial, the liturgical works of St. John Eudes were in use until 1750.(4)

The Eudist Fathers and the Religious of Our Lady of Charity of the Refuge and of the Good Shepherd continue to our day to celebrate the Feast of the Sacred Heart on October 20, with the Office and Mass of their Founder. Only when, in consequence of the vigorous liturgical campaign of Dom Guéranger, it was declared that the Bishops had no right to authorize new feasts and offices in their dioceses and that the authorizations granted by them were null and void, did the Eudist Orders have recourse to the Holy See for a special approval. On December 12, 1861, the Congregation of Rites authorized them to preserve the Feasts of the Sacred Heart of Jesus and of the Holy Heart of Mary established by their Founder, and to celebrate them with the Mass and Office composed by him.

Introit

Gaudeamus omnes in Domino diem festum celebrantes in honorem Cordis amantissimi Redemptoris nostri Jesu Christi, cujus amorem adorant Seraphim psallentes in unum: Ecce cujus imperium manet in aeternum. Ps. 110. Confitebor tibi, Domine, in toto corde meo in consilio justorum et congregatione, Gloria Patri. Gaudeamus.

Oratio

Pater misericordiarum, et Deus totius consolationis, qui propter nimiam charitatem qua dilexisti nos, dilectissimi Filii tui Cor amantissimum nobis ineffabili bonitate donasti, ut te uno corde cum ipso perfecte diligamus; praesta, quaesumus, ut cordibus nostris inter se et cum Corde Jesu in unum consummatis, omnia nostra in humilitate et caritate ejus fiunt, atque, ipso interveniente, justa cordis nostri desideria compleantur. Per eundem Dominum.

Introit

Let us rejoice in the Lord, while celebrating this Festival in honor of the Most Loving Heart of our Redeemer, Jesus Christ, whose love the Seraphim adore with one harmonious chant. Lo! His Kingdom is established forever. Ps. 110. I will praise thee, O Lord, with my whole heart; in the council of the just, and in the congregation. Glory.

Collect

O Father of mercies and God of all consolation, who by the exceeding love with which Thou hast loved us, hast given us with ineffable goodness, the Heart of Thy Beloved Son, so that having but one heart with Him, we may love Thee perfectly; grant, we beseech Thee, that our hearts, being consumed in Unity among themselves and with the Heart of Jesus, we may perform all our works in His humility and charity and that by His mediation the just desires of our hearts may be accomplished through the same Lord.

Lesson from the Prophet Ezechiel (c- 36)

Thus saith the Lord God: I will sanctify my great name that the Gentiles may know that I am the Lord, saith the Lord of hosts, when I shall be sanctified in you before their eyes. For I will take you from among the Gentiles and will gather you together out of all the countries and will bring you into your own land. Gradual (Gal. 5; Phil. 2; Eph. 5)

And because you are sons of God, God hath Sent the Spirit and Heart of His Son into your hearts, crying: Abba, Father. Have in your hearts the sentiments of His Heart; and walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us.

V. (John 15) As the Father hath loved me, I also have loved you: and this is my commandment, that you love one another, as I have loved you. Abide in my love.

Alleluia (Ps- 56; 2. Mach.)

My heart is ready, O God, my heart is ready to do all that thou willest, with a generous heart and resolute will.

In illo tempore: dixit Jesus discipulis suis: Sicut dilexit me Pater, et ego dilexi vos. Manete in dilectione mea. Si praecepta mea servaveritis, manebitis in dilectione mea, sicut et ego Patris mei praecepta servavi et maneo in ejus dilectione. Haec locutus sum vobis, ut gaudium meum in vobis sit, et gaudium vestrum impleatur. Hoc est praeceptum meum, ut diligatis invicem, sicut dilexi vos. Majorem hac dilectionem nemo habet ut animam suam ponat quis pro amicis suis. Vos amici mei estis, si feceritis quae ego praecipio vobis. Jam non dicam vos servos: quia servos nescit quid faciat Dominus ejus. Vos autem dixi amicos, quia omnia quaecumque audivi a Patre meo nota feci vobis. Non vos me elegistis, sed ego eligi vos, et posui vos, ut eatis, et fructum afferatis, et fructus vester maneat; ut quodcumque petieritis Patrem in nomine meo, det vobis. Continuation of the holy Gospel according to St. John (c- 15)

At that time, Jesus said to his disciples: As the Father hath loved me, I also have loved you. Abide in my love. If you keep my commandments, you shall abide in my love: as I also have kept my Father's commandments and do abide in His love. These things I have spoken to you, that my joy may be in you and your joy may be filled. This is my commandment, that you love one another, as I have loved you. Greater love than this no man hath, that a man lay down his life for his friends. You are my friends if you do the things that I command you. I will not now call you servants for the servant knoweth not what his lord doth. But I have called you friends: because all things, whatsoever I have heard of my Father, I have made known to you. You have not chosen me: but I have chosen you; and have appointed you that you should go and should bring forth fruit; and your fruit should remain; that whatsoever you shall ask of the Father in my name, He may give it you. These things I command you that you love one another.

Secret

Almighty God, bestow upon our hearts the spirit of the Heart of Jesus, Thy beloved Son, so that we who offer in the same spirit and heart with Him, one and the same sacrifice, may merit to be immolated in Thy honor with all that belongs to us. Through Our Lord.

Preface of the Nativity

Communio. O most loving Jesus, by Thy Heart, which was broken for us at the hour of Thy death, by the violence of Thy suffering and love, hear our cries to me, have mercy on us and possess our hearts forever.

Postcommunio. Hear, we beseech Thee, O most merciful Father, the prayers of Thy servant prostrate before Thee, and grant that the burning charity of the most loving Heart of Jesus, Thy beloved Son, penetrating to the very depths of our heart, may enkindle in us a heavenly ardor and make us share abundantly in His virtue that by the intercession of this same holy Heart our hearts may be continually immolated in the fire of Thy love and in the flame of eternal charity, and their just desires accomplished. Through the same Lord.

First Nocturn

Ant. Jesus Christ with exceeding love, came forth from the bosom of His Father, He rejoiced as a giant to run His course, nor is there any one who is hid from the heat of His love.

Ant. May the Father be mindful of all Thy Sacrifices and reward Thee according to the desires of thy Heart.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

Ant. With desire I have desired to give myself to you as Victim and as Food; and the Father has granted me the desire of My Heart.

V. Jesus so loved man as to give nobis Cor suum.

R. Gratias ei super inenarrabili dono ejus.

I will sanctify my great name that the Gentiles may know that I am the Lord, saith the Lord of hosts, when I shall be sanctified in you before their eyes. For I will take you from among the Gentiles and will gather you together out of all the countries and will bring you into your own land. And I will pour upon you clean water and you shall be cleansed from all your filthiness: and I will cleanse you from all your idols. And I will give you a new heart and put a new spirit within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh and will give you a heart of flesh. And I will put my spirit in the midst of you.

R. I have chosen and have called my Son, Jesus, a man of my will and according to my own Heart, for He always does what is pleasing to Me with generous Heart and resolute will.

V. My Heart is ready, Holy Father, my Heart is ready to do all that Thou wilt.

The Jews dug and pierced not only His hands and feet, but also His side; they pierced to the very core with the lance of rage His most Holy Heart which had long since been wounded by the lance of love. Thou hast wounded my heart, says the spouse of love in the Canticles; my Sister, my Spouse, thou hast wounded my heart, O Lord Jesus, Thy Spouse, Thy beloved, Thy sister, wounds Thy heart; why was it necessary that it should be wounded by thine enemies? What are you doing, O ye enemies? Since the sweet Heart of Jesus has been wounded, why do you add a second wound? Do you not know that the heart dies from one wound and becomes insensible? The Heart of the Lord Jesus is dead, for it has been wounded. It has been

V. Our Heart is in Thy hands, O Lord Jesus, according to the might of Thy arm; possess it forever.

Lesson V

Behold how great is the violence of His Heart's love, obtaining a dwelling and bringing death by means of this sweetest wound not only to the Lord Jesus, but also to His servants. Look at the Martyrs; they are tortured and they rejoice;
they are slain and they triumph.
Why? Because their hearts by the death of charity have long since been dead to sin, dead to the world; they had become insensible so that they could feel neither threats nor torments. But since we have once come to the Sweetest Heart of Jesus, and it is good for us to be there, let us not suffer ourselves to be easily drawn away from it, of whom it is written: "Withdrawing from Thee they will be written on the ground."
Let us hasten to Him, therefore, and exult and rejoice in Him being mindful of His Heart.

R. The Heart of Jesus is a true sacrificial altar on which the Divine fire is ever burning. Children of God, bring your hearts that they may be constantly immolated to God on this altar.

V. O Lord, loose my bonds and shall offer Thee a sacrifice of dis et amoris.-Afferte.

Lesson V1

Oh, how good and delightful it is to dwell in the Heart of Jesus! Thy Heart, O good Jesus, is a precious treasure, a precious pearl which we have found by digging the field of Thy Body. Who will cast aside this pearl? Nay, rather, I will give all I have, I will exchange all my thoughts and desires and purchase it. I will cast all my care on the Heart of the Lord Jesus and He will provide for me without fail. I will adore in this temple, this Holy of Holies, this Ark of the Testament, and I will praise the Name of the Lord, saying, with David, I have found my heart that I may pray to my God. And I have found the heart of my King, my Brother, my Friend, the benign Jesus, and why shall I not adore?" Assuredly I shall pray. For His Heart is mine. I will say it boldly, for if Christ is my Head, is not what belongs to my Head mine? Therefore, as the eyes of my corporal head are truly my eyes, so is my spiritual heart my heart. Therefore, it is well with me: truly I have but one Heart with Jesus and what wonder that there should be but one heart with the multitude of believers.

R. Thy Heart, O most loving Jesus, is a furnace of love. Bring your hearts to this furnace that they may be consumed in the fire of Divine Love and in the flames of eternal charity.

V. Blessed are they who are placed in the eternal fire of this furnace. Glory be the Father.

For love is mighty and close-clinging and has to be shown not only by the lips but from the very depths of the heart. So since He has reconciled us to God, let us at least continue. Ant. O love of loves! He has given us His flesh to eat, His Blood to drink, to redeem us and to cleanse us; He has given Himself as Head, Heart and eternal reward. Thanks to Him for the immense gifts of His Heart.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

Ant. Blessed is Thy Heart, O good Jesus, on which the Beloved disciple reposing, drank the flowing waters of the Gospel which He afterwards poured out for us, alleluia.

Chapter: (3 Kings 9)

I have sanctified this house, to put my name there for ever: and my eyes and my Heart shall be there always.

Hymn

What heart more worthy can we find
To worship than our loving King?
What dearer to the Father's mind
Than His Own Heart for us to sing?
O Heart, we hail Thee, richest treasure,
Heaven's glory, Godhead's hall,
Love for Virgin, passing measure,
Love triumphant over all.
O Heart loved far beyond the rest,
Be mindful of that love divine,
Which flowed from out the Father's breast,
A gift to Mary, hers and mine.
All worldly dreams now melt away;
My King shall be my love alone,
My only love, again I say
None else but Jesus is my own.
O Jesus, height of charity,
Look down with countenance be Mentes draconi subditas, Tuo redemptas sanguine.

nign,
And see our minds' depravity Redeemed by 'nine own Blood di vine.

Hymn

We sing the praise of Jesus' Heart
With fire of ardent love aflame:
With joy we tell the boundless part
His love and gifts so rightly claim.
Hail, priest of hearts and victim, hail!
Alone Thou equal art to God
Most worthy Temple, Holy a~rail,
And altar, holiest to laud.
An altar flaming, all afire,
And always set for victims there;

Receive our hearts as victims, fire
And burn them in Thy heav'nly flame.

O furnace of the heav'nly throng
Begetting us eternal joys,
In hearts of mortals kindle long
Those holy fires that purge alloys.
Lo! how that furnace opens wide!
Bear up unto those sacred fires,
Bring up our hearts, burn'd free of pride,

Each holy heart its flame desires.
Here offer we our hearts, and pray
This wondrous furnace shall as~ some
And shall devour them; that the ray
Of love both heav'n and earth con sume.

Thy mysteries let all men sing,
The greatness of Thy wondrous ways.

In prostrate worship may we bring
With humble hearts unending praise.

O Christ, Thou furnace high above, O'erwhelm Thy suppliants in flames:

Our hearts devour by Thy love
And with love's martyrs count our names.

O love, of mercy sweet the Sire,
O Love, Redeemer of all men;
O Love, of God the grace and fire,
Forever and forever reign!

SALUTATION TO THE SACRED HEARTS OF JESUS AND MARY

« This salutation is a beautiful consecration to the Sacred Heart of Jesus and to the Holy Heart of Mary. Although the Heart of the Son is infinitely superior in excellence and sanctity to the Heart of the Mother, God has united these two Hearts so closely that they are always one single Heart in feeling, affection and will. Moreover, Jesus lives and reigns so completely in the Heart of Mary that He is truly the soul of her soul, the spirit of her spirit, and the heart of her heart. Thus, we may rightly say that Jesus is the Heart of Mary and salute and revere Jesus in her as the spirit, the soul, the life, and the Heart of His Holy Mother." Cf. Oeuvres Complètes, VIII, pp. 363-364.

"Furthermore, when in this salutation I use the words, Adoramus te, the trader must not be surprised. There are three kinds of adoration or worship: the worship of latria, which is paid exclusively to God; hyperdulia, which is the special reverence with which we honor the Blessed Virgin Mary; and dulia, which is the respect paid to the saints. Do not think that when you say the words, Adoramus te, we are paying the same reverence and respect to the Sacred Heart of Jesus and to the Holy Heart of Mary. To the Sacred Heart we owe the supreme worship that is paid exclusively to God because of His uncreated and infinite excellence; to the Holy Heart of Mary we pay special worship, on account of her created but pre-eminent excellence." Cf. Oeuvres Complètes, VIII, P. 491-492

MAGNIFICAT OF SAINT JOHN EUDES

A Hymn of Praise and Thanksgiving to the Sacred Heart of Jesus and to the Holy Heart of Mary

Magnificat anima mea Cor admirabile Jesu et Marix,	My soul doth magnify the admirable Heart of Jesus and Mary,
Et exsultavit Spiritus meus in magna Corde meo.	And my spirit rejoices in my great Heart.
Nam Cor suum maximum dederunt mihi Jesus et Maria, Or omnia mea, in caritate ejus fiant.	Jesus and Mary have given me their Heart, this immense Heart in order that all in me may be performed in its love.
Gratias illis infinitas super inenarrabili dono ipsorum,	Infinite thanks to them for their ineffable gift.
Fecit mihi magna Cor benignissimum; suscepit me ab Otero matris meae.	This Heart infinitely merciful has done great things for me; it has possessed me from the womb of my mother.
Gratias infinitas super inenarrabilibus donis ejus.	Infinite thanks for His ineffable gifts.
Abyssus miserationum mearum invocavit abyssum misericordiarum ejus.	The abyss of my misery has called on the abyss of His mercy.
Gratias infinitas super inenarrabilibus donis ejus.	Infinite thanks for His ineffable gifts.
Præcivit me Cor mitissimum in benedictionibus dulcedinis suae.	This Heart infinitely meek has presented me with blessings Of its sweetness.
Gratias infinitas super inenarrabilibus donis ejus.	Infinite thanks for His ineffable gifts.

176 - THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

Sub umbra manus suae protexit Me, et custodivit me quasi pupillam Oculi.	He has protected me in the shadow of His Hand, and has guarded me as the apple of His eye.
Gratias infinitas super inenarrabilibus donis ejus.	Infinite thanks for His ineffable gifts.
Elegit me sacerdos sibi et cum principibus suis collocavit me.	He has chosen me to be His priest and has placed me with the princes of His people.
Gratias infinitas super inenarrabilibus donis ejus.	Infinite thanks for His ineffable gifts.
Dedit verba sua in ore meo et posuit os meum quasi gladium acutum.                      unto a sharp sword.	He has placed His words in my mouth and my tongue was like
Gratias infinitas super inenarrabilibus donis ejus.	Infinite thanks for His ineffable gifts.
Mortificavit et vivificavit me et fuit mecum ubicumque ambulavi.	He has led me to the valley of death and recalled me to life and He has been with me wherever I have directed my steps.

Gratias infinitas super inenarrabili-

Infinite thanks for His ineffable
gifts.
He has been the enemy of my enemies and has delivered me from all my tribulations.
Infinite thanks for his ineffable
gifts.
O loving Heart, source of all good, it is from Ilee that all good has come to me.
Praise, love and glory to Ilee, and may all tongues sing Tly benefits and may all hearts burn with Thy love.
May lly mercies be praised and may the marvels of Thy love be distributed among the children of men.

APPENDIX

Excerpts from Papal Documents concerning St. John Eudes and the Devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus:

Auctor cultus liturgici sacrorum Cordium. "The institutor of the liturgical worship of the Sacred Hearts.'---Leo XIII in the Decree on the Heroism of the Virtues of John Eudes, January 6, 1903

"But his services to the Church received a vast increase when, burning with a singular love for the most holy Hearts of Jesus and Mary, he was the first to think, not without some divine inspiration, of offering to them liturgical worship. Of this sweet devotion of piety, therefore, he is to be considered the father, since from the beginning of his congregation of priests he provided that the feasts of those Sacred Hearts should be celebrated among them; the doctor also, for he composed special offices and masses in their honor; and finally the apostle, for he strove with all his might to spread everywhere this salutary devotion.»-Pius X in the Decree of Beatification, December 13, 1908

"His zeal was manifested in a singular manner in promoting the salutary devotion to the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary. He was the first to think, not without some divine inspiration, of rendering them liturgical worship.... The zeal of John Eudes reached its peak when in 1670, after a mission at Rennes and the foundation of a seminary in that town, he was able there to celebrate for the first time the Feast of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, with the approval of the Ordinary, with which a great number of prelates hastened to concur. Two years later, the saintly founder explicitly ordained that the Feast be celebrated in all the houses of his congregation as the patronal feast. Pius X, Our Predecessor of illustrious memory, sanctioned these two feasts, celebrated by the Eudistic family, and authorized as the day of the solemnity, February 8 for the Feast of the Holy Heart of Mary, and October 2.0 for the Sacred Heart of Jesus. This endeavour to spread the devotion to the Sacred Hearts, of which he is the Father, the Doctor and the Apostle, stirred up the hatred of the Jansenists, who made him suffer many trials; his invincible courage supported them for the love of God and the salvation of souls».Pius XI in the Decree of Canonization, May 31, 1925

"Lastly, in more recent centuries, especially at the time when heretics by propagating false piety were striving to turn the faithful away from the Blessed Eucharist, the public devotion to the Sacred Heart saw its beginnings. This was due primarily to the work of St. John who rightly deserves to be called the institutor of the liturgical worship of the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary.»--Office for the Feast of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, Matins, Second Nocturn, Lesson 4.

GENERAL PREFACE

ST. JOHN EUDES has been called "the wonder of his age." Missionary, founder, reformer of the clergy, he crowded into a life of seventy-nine years so many and such varied accomplishments that one marvels how a single man could achieve so much. In addition to the activities of an incessant and many-sided apostolate, he wrote a number of valuable books, which rank him among the most prolific ascetic writers of the seventeenth century.

For many years the devotional works of St. John Eudes were practically unknown.(1) Occasionally a volume was discovered in the library of some seminary or religious house. Many others preserved in manuscript form were lost in the chaos of the French Revolution(2) At the beginning of the present century the sons of St. John Eudes united in a tribute of filial piety to bring out a complete edition of the works of their spiritual father, seeking them in public and private libraries throughout the world(3) About twenty volumes were found and edited in 1905 by the late Fathers Charles Lebrun, C.J.M., and Joseph Dauphin,

(1).Before the French Revolution the works of St. John Eudes were popular in France. In 1792 the houses of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary were confiscated by the Government and its members were massacred or dispersed throughout Europe. With the suppression of the Eudists, their rich literary heritage was widely scattered and partially destroyed. It was not until the re-establishment of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary in 1826 that effort was made to recover the printed and manuscript works of St. John Eudes. The research was carried on until the latter part of the nineteenth century. In the "Preface Générale to the Oeuvres Complètes (Vannes, 1905), Father Charles Lebrun points out that one of the purposes of the edition was "to unearth these works buried too long in oblivion," exhumers ces ouvrages ensevelis depuis trop longtemps dans l'oubli...

(2)The following manuscripts were not found: The Christian Man, All Jesus, The Divine office, The Admirable Sacrifice of the Mass, Meditations, (2 vol.), Sermons of St. John Eudes (3 vols.), Favors obtained by the Diocese of Coutances through the Blessed Virgin, The Divine Childhood of Jesus, The Devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus, The Admirable Life of Mary des Vallées, (incomplete copy found at Laval University Library, Quebec) and Correspondence of St. John Eudes.

GENERAL PREFACE

C.J.M. The first edition in French, Oeuvres Complètes du Vénérable Jean Eudes, ran into twelve octavo volumes with introductions, explanatory notes, analytic and alphabetic indexes of great value. These writings constitute a complete summa of ascetic and pastoral theology. The list is as follows:

Volume 1 The Life and Kingdom of Jesus in Christian Souls. In this work the Saint develops his spiritual teaching on the Christian life, namely, that the Christian life is simply the life of Jesus extended and continued in each one of us.

Volume 11. This volume contains six short treatises on subjects relating to the Christian life:

1. A Treatise on the Respect Due to Holy Places, which is an echo of the fiery denunciations he pronounced during his missions against profaners of the temple of God.

2. Meditations on Humility, a series of meditations on the profession of humility as used daily in his order of Priests, the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

3. Interior Colloquies of the Soul with God, meditations on creation, the end of man and the grace of Baptism.

4. Man's Contract with God in Holy Baptism, a summary of the teachings of Sacred Scripture and Tradition on the Sacrament of Baptism.

5. The Practice of Piety, a brief explanation of what is necessary in order to live a Christian life.

6. Catechism of the Mission, an outline of the catechetical instructions given during a mission.

Volume III. Contains two important works on sacerdotal perfection:

1. The Memorial of the Ecclesiastical Life, an explanation of the dignity and duties of the priesthood.

2. A Manual of Piety for Use in an Ecclesiastical Community, in which the author explains how the means of sanctification he recommended to his priests should be practically applied in their daily lives.

Volume IV. Comprises significant works on the priestly ministry.

1. The Apostolic Preacher is one of the first treatises written on the ministry of the Word of God and is even yet one of the most practical.

GENERAL PREFACE

V 11 -

2. The Good Confessor explains the qualities, and obligations of the minister of the Sacrament of Penance.

3. Counsels for Mission Confessors suggests practical means of assisting penitents to make their examination of conscience and excite themselves to contrition.

4. The Manner of Serving Mass explains the dignity and holiness of this act and what one must do to perform it devoutly and worthily.

Volume V. The Admirable Childhood of the Most Holy Mother of God. This book treats of the holy childhood of Mary and the practical means of honoring the mysteries and virtues of her early life.

Volumes VI, VII, VIII contain the entire writings of the Saint on the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary. The work is entitled: The Admirable Heart of the Most Holy Mother of God. It comprises twelve books covering the complete theology of the devotion to the Sacred Hearts. Eleven books discuss the theory, history, and practice of the devotion to the Immaculate Heart of Mary. The last book deals with the devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. It is this work, together with the Offices of the Sacred Hearts, that merit for him the title of Father, Doctor and Apostle of the Devotion to the Sacred Hearts.

Volume IX. The Rules and Constitutions of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

Volume X. Contains The Rules and Constitutions of the Order of Our Lady of Charity, the Directory of the Order, and a collection of two hundred and forty letters.

Volumes XI and XII embrace the Saint's Liturgical Works, comprising twenty-five Offices and Masses for feasts to which he urged special devotion, the Memorial of God's Blessings and several other minor works.

The second French edition appeared in 1935, Oeuvres Choies de Saint Jean Eudes, prepared under the direction of Father Lebrun, the leading authority on Eudistic research. It comprises nine volumes: The Life and Kingdom of Jesus in Christian Souls, Meditations of Various Subjects, Regulae Vitae Christianae et Sacerdotalis, Man's Contract with God in Holy Baptism, Letters and Minor Works, Writings on the Priesthood, The Sacred Heart of Jesus, The Admirable Heart of Mary, and The Admirable Childhood of the Mother of God. The format of these volumes is compact and more convenient than the 1905 edition, which is now out of print.

The publication of the works of St. John Eudes revealed the extent and depth of their spiritual doctrine. Cardinal Pitra, who was associated with the cause of Beatification, discovered in the writings of St. John Eudes a remarkable depth of thought and purity of doctrine. Cardinal Vives has more recently expressed his admiration:

I was acquainted with the Doctors of the Order of Saint Francis; I was acquainted with Saint Teresa and Saint John of the Cross, the mystical writers of my own country, Spain; but I was completely ignorant of the writings of Father Eudes. As a member of the Sacred Congregation of Rites it was my duty to study his life and his works, and I am in admiration. Blessed John Eudes must be ranked with the great lights of the Church. His spiritual doctrine is profound and of wonderful exactitude. He is one of the writers who has best propounded the doctrine of the Gospel.(4).

The late Father Ange Le Doré, for fifty years Superior General of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary, wrote:

The works of Blessed John Eudes, although they do not bear the scientific touch of the professional theologian, are nevertheless proof of his remarkable theological, ascetic and scriptural knowledge.... He is not a Doctor after the fashion of the scholastics of the thirteenth century or of the great theologians of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. As they, he might have built up theses and composed books didactic in form; but he was before all a savior of souls. For him the science of theology found its chief field of usefulness in the practice of virtue and in the acquisition of sanctity of which it is the principle.... He was a Doctor after the manner of the Apostles, the Fathers of the Church, St. Francis de Sales and St. Alphonsus de Liguori. The science which shines in his works not only emits light; it engenders piety and sanctity.(5)

The spiritual doctrine expounded by St John Eudes follows the teaching of Cardinal Pierre de Bérulle and Father Charles de Condren, two prominent members of the seventeenth-century French School of Spirituality. St. John Eudes applies this doctrine to the devotion to the

GENERAL PREFACE 1 X -

Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary, developing and rendering it more precise and practical. He has the rare gift of expressing the most sublime truths in simple, familiar language. He also excels in condensing into a few pages a complete scheme of Christian life and perfection.

The wish was repeatedly expressed that these inspirational writings could be made available to English-speaking readers. Excellent abridged editions of certain books were published in England and in Canada, but they did not do justice to the literary value of the Saint. Consequently, the Eudist Fathers commemorating their tercentenary in 1943 resolved to publish a complete translation of the principal works of their founder. Competent translators were secured and much time and effort were expended to produce readable volumes in modern English, faithful to the spirit and style of the original.

The first English edition, Selected Works of Saint John Eudes, is the result. In presenting it to the public the Eudist Fathers and the Religious of Our Lady of Charity of the Refuge, and of the Good Shepherd, wish to thank all those who contributed to the success of this comprehensive undertaking. They are especially grateful to the distinguished churchmen who have so graciously accepted to introduce these volumes to Catholic readers, because they consider that the works of St. John Eudes should be more widely known. The Saint in his apostolic work and in his writings ranks with the eminent figures who belong not to one country and to one religious order but to the universal Church. Three centuries have passed since he wrote the works now being printed in the new world, a striking illustration that he wrote for all time. He still speaks in accents that penetrate the mind and heart of the reader to enlighten, purify and sanctify so that Jesus Christ may live and reign in the Christian soul.

INTRODUCTION

The English translation of the letters of St. John Eudes, which is now being presented to the public, deserves to be widely read. "The style is the man himself," and it is always interesting to know the man; this applies even more to a saint.

John Eudes is not a stylist. He does not attempt to charm with the sparkling wit of Madame de Sévigné or the naive simplicity of St. Francis de Sales. Only the first letter, written when he was still a member of the Oratory,<sup>(1)</sup> gives the impression of conscious effort and striving for effect. In the 242 (2) other letters, St. John Eudes reveals himself as he really was, and we can form an unerring picture of him with his Norman shrewdness, his profound wisdom, his exquisite tenderness and his consummate sanctity.

First we remark in these letters the sly shrewdness characteristic of the Norman peasant. Born at Ri near Argentan, in the section of Normandy later known as the "pocket of Falaise," John Eudes was the son of an educated farmer and a local country girl. In him we find the typical Lower Norman who upholds his "woolen stocking"<sup>(3)</sup> against Mother Margaret Frances Patin<sup>(4)</sup> and consents to advance money only upon receipt of a signature.<sup>(5)</sup> He is the crafty ruralist who, in view of the opposition registered by the aldermen of Caen to the transfer of the House of Our Lady of Charity, advises that the thing be done "with such secrecy that you will be housed before it becomes known."<sup>(6)</sup> On another occasion he purchased, under an assumed name, the "Petit Prés" land before the Reverend Jesuit Fathers, who coveted it equally, got wind of his intentions.<sup>(7)</sup>

(1). On March 25, 1623, John Eudes entered the Oratory of Jesus, a religious order of priests, founded in 1611 by Cardinal Peter de Bérulle. The Saint was an Oratorian until 1643 when he left the Oratory to found the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

(2). In the course of his long and active career St. John Eudes wrote hundreds of letters. Several volumes of the original correspondence preserved by the Eudist Fathers at their Caen Seminary were lost during the French Revolution when the Seminary was confiscated by the Government. More fortunate than their spiritual brothers, the Religious of Our Lady of Charity of Caen were able to keep safe about 72 autographed letters that their holy founder had written to members or friends of the Community. Incomplete copies of this collection were to be found in many Refuge monasteries about the middle of the Nineteenth Century. When Reverend Charles Lebrun and Reverend Joseph Dauphin undertook the editing of the Oeuvres Complètes at the beginning of the present century, they collected in one volume all these letters together with many others that were found wholly or in part in the early biographies of the Saint. To these were also added a few letters sent to other communities or preserved in the National Archives of Paris. Up to the present the number of extant letters is 243.

Being a saint, he knows how to renounce the goods of this world, but being likewise a Norman, he tries to retrieve what he has just sacrificed.

As for the twelve hundred livres, we must, first of all, sacrifice them to God. After that, however, I am of the opinion that you should have a novena of Masses for the Dead said for the souls in Purgatory, in order to enlist their aid in recovering the money.<sup>(8)</sup>

When Sister Margaret of the Blessed Sacrament (9) died, the Prioress of the Carmelites of Beaune sent him some medals of the Holy Infant Jesus to commemorate the occasion. The Saint thanked the Prioress profusely; then he added naively and charmingly: "We are deeply grateful to you for the eight medals, but there are (twelve) brothers in our little community . . ." (10) St. John Eudes is thus a typical Norman who never relinquishes what he has and claims what is his exact due.

- If Norman shrewdness can be read between the lines of the correspondence of John Eudes,
- (3). People in the rural districts of France often keep their valuables in woolen stockings, since they do not possess strongboxes.

all his letters reveal patently the profound wisdom of the spiritual director of souls. Madame de Budos, Abbess of the Benedictine Monastery at Caen, and Sister Mary de Taillepie, a humble lay sister of the same abbey, both lived under his guidance. Mother Elizabeth, Superior of the Carmelites of Beaune, Mother Melchilde, Foundress of the Benedictines of the Blessed Sacrament, Mother Frances de Lorraine, Abbess of Montmartre, together with several of her daughters, Mother Margaret Frances Patin, the eminent Visitation Nun loaned to the Saint for the founding of Our Lady of Charity -all entrusted to him the guidance of their souls. There was also "his eldest daughter," Madame Blouet de Camilly(11) whom the Saint directed all her life and regarded as the true foundress of his institutions.

From all these letters we can glean a real treatise on the spiritual guidance of souls.

Rejoice, dearest sister, and have no fear of receiving Communion as usual, for every soul clothed with divine grace is prepared for Holy Communion, even though the senses are not garbed in the beautiful raiment of devout feelings and divine consolations, but remain in great dryness and poverty of devotion.(12)

This salutary advice was given at a time when even reputable theologians, influenced by the rigor of Jansenism, stipulated a perfectly pure love, accompanied by spiritual elation, as requisite for frequent approach to the Holy Table. St. John Eudes strove to counteract this insidious doctrine, using the very recommendations that were solemnly pronounced by His Holiness Pope Pius X almost three hundred years later.

The Saint teaches his disciples to profit richly by their shortcomings,(13) to sanctify even their headaches"so that~ by this means, you may pay some small measure of honor to His divine head crowned with thorns.(14) He constantly preaches a hatred for the world. One of the best illustrations of his ardor is found in his reproach to Madame Blouet de Camilly for considering marriage instead of the religious life for her beautiful daughter.

(11). Madame Blouet de Camilly was a noble lady of Caen, Normandy. She assisted the Saint on several occasions when he was organizing the first house of the order of Our Lady of Charity and of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary. She was very devout received spiritual guidance from Saint John Eudes until her death in 1680.

INTRODUCTION

Marry Fanfan!(15) is Marry that lovely lily-bud! (16) Oh, if you but know how those words, though you spoke them laughingly, have left me heartbroken.(17)

... she will have to cooperate and prepare for it (the religious life) through an intense hatred for the world with its vanities, a great scorn of self and an ardent desire to endeavor to seek all possible means of pleasing Him who desires to wed her.

It is your duty, my dear daughter, to help her, through your instructions, to adorn and beautify herself in order to be pleasing in the eyes of the Son of God and of the Blessed Virgin Mary.(18)

These conversational letters reveal even the small but effective penances which a spiritual director may impose upon his charges, thus affording them so much pleasure. Sister Mary de Taillepiéd could tell us about the prayer she had to offer for seven minutes "on these words: 'They are not of the world, as I also am not of the world'"(19) in reparation for having used a worldly expression in one of her letters(20).

St. John Eudes clearly assigns the virtues to their proper position.

If you are ordered to eat meat, be extremely careful not to make the slightest resistance to obedience, for you will render more honor to God by eating flesh meat through obedience than by fasting on bread and water of your own volition.(21)

INTRODUCTION      xxx1

We learn from the Saint's counsels to remain at peace by finding all our joy in God;(22) we learn how to sanctify our illnesses and to prepare for death without worrying about a general confession.(23)

These letters are a treatise on asceticism from which mysticism is not excluded. The practice of passive prayer(24) is censured in them, and the disciples of Mr. John de Bernières(25) are severely criticized.

That is what a holy person(26) had told Mr. de Bernières a number of times-that as many souls as he started on the path of passive prayer (that is God's province), he was starting on the road to hell.(27)

When God introduces a soul to mysticism, it must correspond with grace. St. John Eudes as the spiritual director of the celebrated mystic of Coutances(28) knows these secluded paths, and he gently teaches Madame Blouet de Camilly that spiritual rapture is not good for her, and that it is better for her to remain in the barren state of spiritual dryness to which she has been committed by the divine will, "our most bountiful Mother." (29)

If extraordinary happenings take place, such as visions or revelations, the Saint is not troubled; he understands the penetration of minds, and his doctrine closely resembles that of St. Francis de Sales in the

(23). Letter 109.

(24). The Saint refers to the prayer of quiet or quietism, an erroneous doctrine developed by Michael de Molinos in his work Dux Spiritualis (Rome, 1675). Molinos taught that in prayer one must not use images or discursive thought, but must remain in "obscure faith" and in quiet, forgetting every distinct thought of the Divine attributes, abiding in God's presence to adore, love and serve Him, but without producing any acts because with these God is not pleased. Quietism was condemned by Innocent XI in 1687.

(26). Mary des Vallées, called "The Saint of Coutances," as the victim of a curse and for many years suffered excruciating pains with admirable patience. Through her instrumentality God revealed many important matters to St. John Eudes, especially the founding of his two religious orders. See Letter 17, note 3.

INTRODUCTION

Treatise on the Love of God. He stresses the fact that "the third mark of divine inspiration is holy obedience to the Church and to superiors." (29) To a Carmelite nun who asks his approval of her desire to change communities, he sends this reply full of wisdom:

... I exhort her to follow the example of her blessed Mother, St. Teresa, who, one day received a command from the mouth of Our Lord Himself to go and establish a new Order-a matter of far greater importance for her than merely changing from one convent to another. When the Saint informed her superior about her plans, she was prevented from carrying them out and was ordered to go elsewhere. Whereupon she obeyed at once ... without opening her mouth to make reply or plea. Afterwards Our Lord told her that she had been more pleasing to Him in obeying her superior than if she had made the new foundation. Let Sister St. Anne remain in peace where she is, according to that example, until I come to Caen to look into the matter more closely . . . Obedience does no harm. Sister may be mistaken in her revelations, but she will never make a mistake by being obedient.(30)

Another trait of character that the letters of St. John Eudes reveal to the reader is his inexpressible tenderness, the tenderness of a profoundly human soul. We are told that the Saint used to have bread crumbs scattered to the birds during the winter; that he would stroke the head of the little page who served his meals; that he graciously shared the recreation of his spiritual daughters of Our Lady of Charity as St. Francis de Sales had formerly done at the Visitation Convent of Annecy. The formal writings of St. John Eudes do not reveal these lovable traits. His fatherly heart must be sought in his correspondence. We continually find him worrying about the health of his religious. To a Superior of Missionaries he writes:

Please be careful of your health, and to that end I urge you never to preach longer than an hour at a time. I also recommend to you the health of our dear brothers.(31)

INTRODUCTION XXX111-

He exhorts Mother Margaret Frances Patin, the Superior of Our Lady of Charity, to exercise the utmost care in the direction of the house because

... the fervor of our good Sisters and their desire to mortify themselves may impel them to endure excessive cold which may cause illness among them.(32)

St. John Eudes brings all his daughters to the holy altar,(33) and never forgets them there. Seven or eight times a day he recites for their intention the Nos cum Prole, (34) and if he is separated from them by order of the Bishop, (35) he quotes St. Paul: "What shall separate my heart from the holy love I should feel for the most cherished abode of such a good Mother? (36)

This paternal affection is especially noticeable in the Saint's letters to Madame Blouet de Camilly, his celebrated charge, "whom we hold most dear on earth." In one of his letters to her he writes:

I am worried because you mentioned in your last letter that you were not well(37)

When Mr. de Camilly, her husband, falls sick, St. John Eudes consoles her thus:

God grant, my dearest daughter, that on the occasion of our beloved brother's illness I may give you the same reply as that of Our Lord to St. Martha and St. Magdalen, who had told Him just what you write to me: "He whom Thou lovest is sick." God grant, I repeat, that I may reply to you: "This sickness is not unto death." (38)

INTRODUCTION

Unfortunately Mr. de Camilly's sickness was fatal and simultaneously the Saint learned about the serious illness of Madame de Camilly:

I cannot tell you too often, my dearest daughter, how distressed and grieved I am, for that is inexpressible. Certainly I know well through experience that your griefs and sufferings are also mine.(39)

Her saintly director counsels her to profit well by her sickness and trouble; he reminds her how she should prepare for death, if it be God's holy will. St. John Eudes's paternal tenderness sets aside a magnificent present for her:

Yesterday and today I said Holy Mass to supplicate Our Lord to grant you three things:

First, to bestow upon you, in whatever way He deems best and finds most pleasing, all the graces and gifts He has deigned and will deign to grant me during my lifetime, all the Masses I have said and shall yet say, all my missions of the past and the future . . .

Secondly, to bestow on you all the Holy Masses, missions and goodworks which, through His grace, have been performed and will yet be performed in our Congregation.

Thirdly, to bestow on you all the souls He has granted and will grant me yet, in His great mercy, on all the missions I have given and will yet give, and in other circumstances; and grant you these things in order to contribute to the accomplishment of His designs for you from all eternity.(40)

Here is the principal thing I ask of you, my dearest daughter. It is that, when God has shown you mercy . . . you take our Congregation and the House of Our Lady of Charity under your special protection in heaven. To this end I constitute you to be henceforth in the name of Our Lord and His most holy Mother, the solicitor and provider of all spiritual and temporal affairs, that you may intercede and beg for us at the throne of God and with the Blessed Mother.... Will you accept this position, my dearest daughter ... ? (41)

The Saint thus appoints Madame de Camilly the heavenly advocate of the Order of Our Lady of Charity and of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary. It would be difficult to say in what proportion God ratified these gifts. But what concerns us is the deep and delicate affection of this manly soul, the very lifelike tenderness of its paternal devotedness, the charming ingenuity of this heart wholly identified with the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

What we discover above all else in these letters of St. John Eudes is his consummate sanctity.

In his "Introduction" to The Kingdom of Jesus Monsignor Sheen aptly comments that "the poet would hold the 'mirror up to nature,' but this Saint holds the 'mirror up to Jesus.'"

In his letters we constantly see that the Saint's reaction, instantaneous and without reflection, is the same sincere, spontaneous ejaculation, the simple all-powerful word: Jesus.

When his crosses, trials and persecutions are mentioned, St. John Eudes retorts that men are but "rods used by this good Father to punish us." (42)

Even when the soul dearest to him reaches the point of death, it is not an occasion for weeping but a time to remind his friend what to do in order to die in the spirit of Our Lord:

The best disposition for a Christian death is to give yourself entirely to Our Lord, that you may unite yourself with all the holy dispositions with which He, His Holy Mother and all the saints died.(43)

Honors are offered to him. He is to be appointed co-adjutor Bishop of Evreux, but he answers thus:

I want no benefice other than the one my Saviour chose for Himself, that is, the Cross. That is the benefice I desire, that I embrace and love with all my heart for the love of my most amiable Crucified Saviour, Who loved and preferred it to all that the world loves and esteems more highly. I want no other, unless God absolutely wills it.(44)

INTRODUCTION

The mirror is admirably focused. The Saint loves the Cross of Christ and feels insecure whenever God refrains from overwhelming him with tribulations.(45)

Moreover, no misfortune troubles him for he places his hope not in earthly things, not even in his own dispositions or good works, but purely in the mercy of His all-bountiful God .(46)

Apostle and missionary, John Eudes was fired with zeal for immortal souls redeemed by Our Blessed Lord on Calvary. In his letters as well as in his writings on the priesthood, St. John Eudes ranks the work of the apostolate far above almsgiving, fasts, vigils and other mortifications; in fact, he places it above miracles(47) and even martyrdom itself, for

The most divine of all divine functions, says St. Dionysius the Areopagite, is to work with God for the salvation of souls. It is the continual occupation of the God-Man Himself; to it He devotes all His thoughts, all His efforts and all the powers of His divinity and humanity. It is the employment He gives to His angels and His greatest saints, the Apostles. It is the fruit of so many labors, so much sweat, so many tears, so much pain, so many fasts, so much preaching and shedding of blood, so many holy actions and cruel sufferings in the life of God on earth-a life of thirty-four years, terminated for the same end by His awesome death.(48)

His burning ardor for souls is also expressed forcibly elsewhere in the same letter written to the Ladies of Mercy in Rouen to exhort them to assist in the work of the Refuge of Caen:

(44). Letter 160.

(45). Letter 72.

(46). Letter 109.

(47) Letter 10.

(48). Letter 10.

Since it is so pleasing to God to build hospitals and sanitariums, think of the good accomplished by helping to establish a home and hospital for souls. . . (49)

To Father Blouet de Camilly, his successor as head of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary, he writes:

What are all those doctors and bachelors of arts doing in Paris, while souls are perishing by the thousand for want of someone to offer them a hand to withdraw them from perdition and preserve them from everlasting fire? Certainly, if I dared, I would go straight to Paris and cry out in the Sorbonne and the other colleges: Fire! Fire! The flames of hell are consuming the whole universe! Come you doctors, bachelors, and parish priests, come all you ecclesiastics, and help to extinguish them! (50)

In the presence of such flaming zeal, we may conclude with another letter of the Saint which reveals the source of his passionate ardor for souls, namely his all-absorbing love for the Sacred Heart of Jesus:

Hear, hear, O great furnace of Love! It is a tiny wisp of straw that begs Thee most earnestly to be cast, engulfed, lost, devoured, consumed for ever in Thy sacred flames.(51)

The letters of St. John Eudes should not be read superficially or in haste. They are spiritual reading, rather heavy, perhaps, but rich in spiritual thought like the Norman soil from which they are sprung. When the peasant of Ri" turns over the sod, he knows that there "a treasure is hidden inside." Let us confidently plow the soil of these letters so filled with promise, and realize once more the prophecy of the Kingdom of Heaven; for it "is like a treasure hidden in a field. The man

LIVE JESUS AND MARY

Madame,

May the grace, peace and consolation of Our Lord Jesus Christ and His most Holy Mother be with you for ever.

I must and I wish to adore with you the most holy and amiable will of God in the affliction it has pleased Him to send you. I must and I wish to cherish and love His eminently just and amiable hand which has dealt your soul such a harsh blow and pierced your heart with so bloody a wound, since that divine hand does nothing save through love of self and its creatures whom it seems to love even as itself.

Nevertheless, I must confess that my soul is filled with sadness and my heart with anguish at the thought of your agony. I cannot think of you, nor of your piteous state, without pain and tears; that, I believe, is permitted me. I see Jesus, the joy of heaven and earth, giving way to profound grief at the sight of the tears of Martha and Magdalen, who were weeping for the death of their brother!(6) Why, then, may I not weep on a similar occasion? I wish to weep with Jesus, that I may honor His tears. I wish to weep with all who mourn, according to the words of the Apostle St. Paul: "Weep with them that weep." (7) I wish to weep from the same emotions and sentiments as Jesus wept. I wish to offer Him a sacrifice of tears in homage to His divine and adorable tears. Let us, Madame, offer Him our tears in honor of His. Let us implore Him to sanctify and bless them through His. Let us beseech Him to unite our grief with His own in such a way that the tears flowing from our eyes may be mingled with those celestial waters of which the Prophet David says: "Let all the waters that are above the heavens, praise the name of the Lord." (8)

Madame, would you have your tears united with those sacred waters which unceasingly bless God in heaven? Then weep holily and religiously, that is to say, shed tears worthy of a religious and of one who is in a state obligating her to holiness. Let your eyes weep, but let your will be submissive to the will of God. Let your eyes weep, but let your heart and lips frequently repeat these divine words uttered by Jesus at the height of His anguish, and in a distress infinitely more poignant than your own: O my Father and my God, "not my will, but Thine be done." (9) In short, weep patiently and moderately, not excessively and without restraint.

Blessed are your tears if they are shed in this manner, for they will deserve to be dried by the hand of God Himself, according to this passage from Sacred Scripture: "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes." (10) They will be carefully gathered by the hands of the angels. They will be cherished like a precious liquid that perfumes heaven and renders eternal praise to God. If, on the contrary, they were not accompanied by these dispositions, they would be very displeasing to God and His angels and would serve only to make the flames of purgatory more painful for you. I implore Our Lord Jesus not to permit such a thing. I should gladly entreat Him, if it were possible, to transfer all the anguish in your soul to me, so that not only might I share your pain and sorrow, but even bear alone the weight of this affliction. Yet it is so heavy that only Our Lord can support it.

I beseech Him, then, to dwell in your soul, to enter into your heart, that He Himself may bear within you this painful cross which He has ordained to be yours. The Prophet Isaiah tells us that Christ came into the world to share the burden of our sorrows and infirmities (11). Indeed, Our Blessed Lord once experienced the same sorrow you are suffering now, a sorrow which for Him was infinitely more bitter and painful than yours is for you. The anguish you feel at this moment was one of the causes of the anguish He suffered in the Garden of Gethsemani, making Him sweat blood and utter these sorrowful words: "My soul is sorrowful even unto death." (12) It was not only the sight of the pains He was to suffer in His own body which wrung these words from His lips, but also the clear knowledge He possessed at the time of all the afflictions, those of the body as well as the spirit, which His beloved children were to undergo. He saw even then the grief which oppresses you at this moment. He beheld your tears, He heard your laments and sighs; and all these sighs and complaints were as so many sharp and piercing arrows which transfixed His Heart with grief because of the infinite love He bears you, just as the complaints and sorrows of a child dear to his father are like painful shafts in the heart of that poor parent when he beholds the suffering of his beloved offspring.

Jesus, therefore, Who is your Father and Spouse, felt in His paternal Heart the same affliction which fills yours at the present time. For that reason it should seem sweet and soothing to you, since it has passed through a Heart so full of love and meekness. I repeat that He once bore the same affliction that you bear. He bore it without your help and for your sake; yet He still wishes to bear it now in you and with you. Admit Him, then, into your soul. Do not let yourself become so taken up with grief that you leave no place in your heart for Him Who is your joy, your consolation and your all.

I see Him knocking at the door of your heart and waiting there with His own Heart and hands full of ineffable graces, blessings and comforts which He yearns to bestow upon you.

I hear Him saying to you in a kind and gentle voice: "Open to me, my dearly beloved sister, open to me the door of your heart." It is open to Thee; enter, O good Jesus, enter this poor heart. It is open to Thee; of that I am certain. Could it be possible that this soul would be so unfaithful as to refuse Thee admittance into her heart, allowing herself to be fully possessed by a futile and pernicious sadness? No, no, I do not think so. Enter, therefore, O God of love and comfort, into this heart crucified by grief, that it may be filled with love and consolation. Rid it of sadness and weariness and fill it with that strong and vigorous love through which Thou didst bear with strength and constancy the sorrows and agonies of the Cross and death.

Madame, behold then Jesus within your heart. He is there with the desire to bear with you the harshness of your trial, but He neither can nor wishes to bear it without you. Therefore unite yourself with Him, that you may bear your sorrow with Him. Unite your spirit with His spirit, your heart with His Heart and your will with His will.

Bear it holily, as He bore it holily and divinely; bear it strongly and courageously, as He bore it strongly and courageously.

To this end, I beg of you in His name to divert your mind from all considerations which sadden you, that you may devote it to better and holier thoughts. Consider the most holy will of God. Remember that this divine will is very worthy, excellent, powerful and absolutely sovereign in all things, is very just and equitable, very happy and joyous in all it does, and is very wise and prudent in all it ordains. All these points regarding that divine will are most worthy of consideration, and it seems to me that the purest, holiest and most perfect consolation I can give you should be drawn from these holy and divine considerations, and not at all from shallow and earthly thoughts, since I am addressing a person who has renounced everything shallow and earthly in the world in order to be professed in a holy and heavenly life.

Therefore consider, Madame, that the will of God is immense, that is, it reaches everywhere, arranging and ordaining everything that takes place in this world. That is why nothing happens by chance, nor by luck or accident; all things occur through the guidance and will of God.

Consider that the divine will alone is worthy of existence, continuance and accomplishment because of its infinite excellence and dignity; then let every other will be annihilated in the face of this one. Consider that it alone is worthy of reigning by reason of its sovereignty; then let every other will become submissive to its reign, not through compulsion, as in the case of the demons, but voluntarily, as with the angels. Consider that it is most just and equitable in itself and all its effects; then let all other wills acquiesce and conform to its decrees, as being eminently just and equitable. Consider that it is most sweet and amiable, doing all things through love of self and us; then let it be loved and cherished at least by those who have renounced love of the world to consecrate themselves to God. Consider that the divine will does all things with happiness and rejoicing; then let it be praised and blessed with happiness and rejoicing in all its manifestations, banishing all excessive sadness. Finally, consider that it does all things for the best, in the best possible way, at the most propitious time and place; then let it be adored and glorified in all the conditions and circumstances in which it accomplishes its work.

LETTERS AND SHORTER WORKS

Thus, Madame, do the angels and saints look upon and adore the most adorable will of God in heaven. Think how many saints there are in heaven who see their fathers, mothers, brothers and other relatives in the damnation of hell, which is the misfortune of misfortunes and the height of all woes; and notwithstanding, they adore, they love, they bless with joy and happiness that most just will because they see that such is the decree of divine justice concerning these relatives.

There is nothing like that in your case, thank God. The misfortune in which you have to adore the will of God is infinitely less grievous and bitter. Indeed, it is but honey and sweetness in comparison with the other sorrow. In that case it is a question of an eternal death, a terrible and fearful death; here it is a matter only of a temporal death which must not even be called death, but rather the passing from a mortal and unhappy life to an immortal and happy one. Then adore, on this occasion so sweet and benign to one who understands it well, adore, I repeat, and love and bless the most sweet and amiable will of God on earth, as the saints adore and bless it in heaven.

I do not doubt in the least that you are doing this. If you did not, how could you dare hope one day to be united with the saints in heaven, since one must do on earth what they do in heaven? If you did not imitate them, how could you dare say these words which you address to God so many times each day: "Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven?" (13) Would you not fear that the Son of God might make the same terrible reproach to you that He once made to the hypocritical Pharisees: "Hypocrites, well hath Isaiah prophesied of you, saying: This people honoureth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me?" (14) They pray with their mouths that my will may be done on earth as it is in heaven, but their hearts belie their tongues; their works are contrary to their words.

God forbid, Madame, that that should ever be said of you! Strive rather to be numbered among those who are referred to in the magnificent words which the Church so often puts on your lips: "To the saints, who are in his land, he hath made wonderful all my desires in them." (15) It is Jesus Who speaks, through David His Prophet, of His Eternal Father and His saints. "My Father," He says, "hath transmitted all my wonderfully admirable intents to the saints who are on earth." You are in the world of the saints, you are in a place of holiness; there should be no one in that place who is not a saint or inclined to saintliness. Therefore you should regard all the decrees of Jesus, whatever they may be, the most severe as well as the most delightful, as being equally wonderful, admirable and pleasant; let them all be wonderfully pleasant, dear and precious to you, and more precious than anything else in heaven and on earth. You can then say with your heart what you utter each day with your lips: "The law of thy mouth is good to me, above thousands of gold and silver;" (16) that is, My God, Thy will is dearer and more precious to me than not only millions in gold and silver, but even millions of brothers, relatives and friends if I had them. I should rather be deprived of a hundred brothers than that Thou shouldst be deprived of the accomplishment of the least of Thy desires.

By taking this attitude, Madame, you will deserve to be numbered among those who are meant in these words: "To the saints who are in his land . . ." (17) Therein is the epitome of true holiness, which is wholehearted submission to the will of God in all things.

As far as I can see, there could be no better opportunity for you to advance in grace and holiness. How dear and precious should be this hour of affliction! It is a time of grace and holiness. God at this moment has an infinite number of graces and blessings to bestow on you if you will but prepare yourself to receive them through the humble submission of your will to His. You can advance farther in grace in one hour during this time of affliction than in many days during a time of consolation. It is what Jesus intends for you now. He has an infinite desire to produce various effects of grace and sanctity in your soul through the medium of this trial which He has sent you. Do not suffer Him to be deprived of the effect of His desire; do not allow Him to be thwarted in His intention; and, what is still more important, do not deprive Him of the love and glory you can bring Him at this time. You have protested so often to Him that you want only to love and honor Him. Now, you will never be able to love Him more perfectly or honor Him more holily than at this moment. You can, in this hour of affliction, offer Him more glory and love in a single moment than in several days during a time of consolation. Do not deprive Him, then, of something so tremendous which you can and ought to give Him effortlessly by submitting your will to His. It is true that this is not easy for human nature, but it is easy with the help of the grace which is given you to do so. It will be easy for you if you remember that the severest and most terrible command that God ever had or ever will have was that by which He willed that His Son, His only Son, a Son such as Jesus is—He willed, I repeat, that this Son suffer inconceivably cruel and horrible torments; not only that He suffer them but that He die the most shameful and atrocious death of all possible deaths!

Oh, how severe is this will of a Father regarding His Son! How strange and terrible it is! Yet this same Son, Who is Jesus, in some way abandons and annihilates His own will, all-pure, all-holy and all-divine that it is, so that He may conform to His Father's will, so full of harshness and terror for Him that the very thought of it makes Him sweat blood. Therefore if Jesus somehow abandoned and annihilated a will as worthy and precious as was His human will, is it not highly reasonable, Madame, that we should forsake and destroy a will as impure, imperfect and corrupted by sin as ours is, so that we may accept the most holy, divine and amiable will of God?

But let me pause now, for I hear a voice more capable than mine of consoling you. It is the voice of him whom you mourn as dead, who nevertheless is not really dead. It is the voice of your beloved brother who says to you: "Why do you weep so, my dearly beloved sister? Is it because they told you I am dead? But no, that is not true; I am not dead but living, and more alive than ever before. I am not dead but living in God, in Whom all things live. Those are the first words of the Office which was sung for me: "Come, let us adore the King to whom all things live." I am not dead, but rather I have ceased dying that I may begin to live. Do you not know that life on earth is a life of death? It is a living death and a dying life; a life which should rather be called death and not life; an earthly life, an imperfect life, a sinful life. Will you say then that I am dead because I have left that miserable existence to participate in a heavenly life, a perfect life, an eternal and happy life? Do you not know that only the thoughtless and insane consider the faithful departed to be dead? No indeed, they are not dead. Those who die in Jesus Christ, that is, in His grace and love, do not die at all but pass from a most troublesome to a supremely happy life; and much less do they die who give their lives for the interests and glory of Jesus Christ.

"If I had died as a pagan, a heretic or an apostate, you would have reason indeed to weep. If I had died in a duel in defense of my honor and my private interests, I would say to you: Weep, weep, burst into tears, tears of blood; for those are the persons who are really dead, those who die in that way. It is for such a death that one must shed tears, and tears of blood. But look! I died in an army which fights the battle of God and His interests. (18) I died for the glory of Jesus Christ, for the defense of His Church and the establishment of His faith and Gospel! Is this not a happy death? Is it not a glorious one? Is it not worthy of gladness and rejoicing rather than tears and weeping? Does it not detract from the glory and dignity of such a death to deplore and lament, as if it were the most wretched death in the world?

"Why, then, my dear sister, do you grieve so? Is it because you will no longer see me on earth? But take comfort, for we shall meet in heaven, and very shortly. And I, while awaiting this happiness during your sojourn on earth, will always have you before my eyes, to help you in all your needs and wants at the throne of the King of heaven, with Whom I enjoy no less favor than I did with the King of earth. Cease, then, my beloved sister, cease, I beg of you, your grieving. Banish your sorrow, moderate your sighs, arrest the flow of your tears which henceforth would be injurious and unpleasant to me, insofar as it would offend Him Whom I love more than myself."

Those are the words and the voice of your beloved brother, Madame, which should console you greatly if you are at all capable of being comforted.

But I hear still another voice which comes to comfort you; the voice of your dear Spouse, Madame. It is the voice of Jesus, the God of all consolation, which alone can give you perfect comfort. Please listen to it, therefore, and in order better to hear it, close your ears to all the voices of human nature, passion and self-interest which are wholly contrary to the voice of Jesus. Here, then, is Jesus addressing you:

"What is the matter, my dear daughter? What grieves you so? Yes, your brother is dead, it is true, but it was I who ordained his death, and who ordained it through love of you and of him, for your greatest good and for his. Should not that alone suffice to comfort you? Should not the sole consideration of my most amiable will console and satisfy you? Have I not enough enemies who persecute and make war on in(!, opposing all my desires and intents? Do you wish to forsake me to take your place in their ranks? Do you wish to be numbered among those who desire to destroy and annihilate my most holy will, that they may supplant it with their own? Do you wish to deprive my sovereign will of the empire and domain it must exercise over all things, that you may superimpose your own will?

"I have deprived you for a little while of the presence of your brother, but am I not always with you? I am your best friend, your father, your brother, your spouse and your all; I am worth more than ten, yes, than ten million brothers; I love you with an infinite love; I am all heart and love for you; I have infinite power to help you in all your wants and needs and to defend you against your adversaries, or rather against mine? Those who oppose you oppose me; those who are your enemies are my enemies, provided you remain always united with me.

"Furthermore, I have taken your brother from you, not, however, to deprive you of him, but in order to return him to you in a better way. Do you not know that I repay a hundredfold all that is willingly given me? I have taken him in order to oblige you to give him to me, and if you relinquish him voluntarily and gladly, I will make it up to you a hundred times over, even in this life. I will give you a hundredfold all the help, comfort and favors you would have received from him, and thus you will lose nothing but gain much.

"Then give him to me, my daughter; give him willingly to me. Will you refuse me such a little thing-me, the one who has given and who gives you so much each day? Will you refuse me the life of a mortal man, when I have given my own life for you-a life so precious and worthy that a single moment of it is worth more than all the lives of the angels and of men? Give him to me, then, voluntarily, and not through compulsion and necessity, and I will return it all to you a hundredfold.

"And do not proceed to fill your mind with useless thoughts and cares, saying within yourself: But what will become of this one and that one? What about these persons and those persons? Who will provide for the concerns of this house and that house? After all, where is the confidence you ought to have in my providence and goodness? Do I not love more than you those persons for whom you are so troubled? I am well aware of their needs. Is not mine the power to attend in the best possible way to all the things that concern them?

"With regard to your house, which causes you so much anxiety, and rightly so, know that it is more mine than yours, and that I do not lack the will and the might to direct wisely and advantageously all matters which pertain to it.

"Therefore, my beloved daughter, rid your mind of these trifling cares, relinquishing all things to my bounty and providence. Banish, too, every other thought and consideration which serves only to fill your soul with trouble and your heart with anguish. Put an end to your tears; enough of weeping and lamenting, enough of sobbing, enough of yielding to sorrow and sadness. It is time to dry your tears so that you may devote yourself to things more holy and more worthy of your state in life. It is time for your soul to return to its former tranquility and peace. It is time to give your sisters and all who know you the comfort and edification you owe them. It is time to render me the duties and obligations of the state in life in which I have placed you. Otherwise there would be reason to believe that you loved your brother more than me, and yet you know that I have said: 'He that loveth father or mother (brother or sister) more than me, is not worthy of me.'"(19) Would you not fear that these words might be true of you? Would you not be afraid of making yourself unworthy of me if you persevered in your excess of sadness and tears? Would you not be fearful of giving scandal to so many persons in every walk of life whose eyes are upon you and who expect from you a courage and constancy worthy of your position?

"What would worldlings and laymen say if they saw that a person who has taught others about virtue and holiness for so many years had not yet learned to submit herself to my will, which is the foundation of all virtue and holiness? Would you not be giving them cause to despise the vocation and Order(20) in which you live, which would have done so little for your improvement during such a long time? No, my daughter, do not lower the dignity of your position; do not vitiate the holiness of your Order; do not wrong the virtue and power of my grace. Conduct yourself in such a way, in all your actions and feelings, in your speech and exterior deportment, that people may see nothing in you and hear no word from you that would be unworthy of the dignity of your rank, the sublimity of your vocation, the glory of your Order, or the holiness and excellence of my grace and love which dwell within you."

Madame, after these divine words of Jesus, your divine Spouse, there is nothing more for me to say. Only I implore the Mother of Jesus to implant the words of her Son deep in your heart. I beseech this Mother of grace and love, this Mother of all consolation, to fill your heart with her divine consolations and let you participate in the grace and love by virtue of which she bore unceasingly and courageously the most terrible wound inflicted by that sword of sorrow which pierced her soul, at the time of the Passion and death of her only and well-beloved Son.

I am writing you these words in anticipation of speaking personally to you, as soon as your time is less taken up with the many visits of condolence that you will receive.

I remain in Jesus and Mary, Madame,

Your most humble, obedient and devoted servant,

JOHN EUDES, priest of the Oratory of Jesus.

LETTER 2

To Sister Mary de Taillepied, (1) Lay Sister of the Abbey of the Holy Trinity at Caen. On the Solemnity of Jesus (2)

[January 1634]

JESUS, MARY

In the name and on behalf of Jesus Who is your All and mine, dear Sister, in His person, spirit and love I give you, for the current month and for eternity, the great Solemnity of Jesus which we are celebrating on the twentieth(3) of this month.

It is one of the three great festivities which take place continually in heaven. If Our Lord summons you to join Him soon, (4) you will celebrate it there with great happiness and rejoicing while we are observing it here below in sorrow and anguish. We shall be solemnizing, you and I, the same feast, but alas! in a very different way.

I cannot think of this without sadness. Alas! who would not sigh and weep bitterly? I weep not for you, but for myself. Ah!! my dear and beloved Sister, if you have the least urge of charity toward your poor Father, beseech Our Lord, when you are in His presence, to take me soon from this abode of sin and imperfection to that place where I may love Him purely, perfectly and endlessly.

While awaiting the time when you shall celebrate the Solemnity of Jesus in heaven, I want to celebrate it for you on earth, or rather I implore Jesus to honor and glorify Himself in you, in whatever way He wishes. I entreat Him to accomplish this in such a manner that all that has ever been, is now or ever shall be in you, in your body and soul, in your thoughts, words and actions, in your temporal and eternal life, may render homage and glory to all that is in Him, in His body and His holy soul, in His divinity and humanity, in His temporal and eternal life. Finally, I implore Him to annihilate you entirely and to establish Himself perfectly in you; to draw and consume you completely within Himself; to be all in you, that one may no longer see anything but Jesus in your exterior and interior life, in time and eternity; to dwell in you, live and function in you, suffer and die in you, adore and glorify Himself in you in whatever way He desires. That, my dear Sister, is what Jesus wishes to effect in you through this feast, or rather through this great mystery which encompasses all the other mysteries and feasts, and which I give you on His behalf. Surrender yourself to Him with this sole intention, and I will do the rest for you.

Also on His behalf and in His name, I assign you as a virtue, this month and always, the holy love of Jesus, that you may live and die in His love. I implore Him to love Himself in you; offer a little prayer frequently to Him for this intention. I also beseech the Father of Jesus, the Holy Spirit of Jesus, the Mother of Jesus, and all the angels and saints of Jesus to love Him for you and to bestow upon Him a hundredfold all the love you should have given Him during your whole life. Say a little prayer also to these saints and divine persons for this intention.

This morning at Holy Mass I renewed the union that Our Lord has given your soul with mine. Now do the same, I beg of you, in Our Lord's presence, by an act of the will, so that you may love and honor Him for me in heaven, if you attain it first, while I am striving to love and honor Him in your place on earth.

Farewell, my dear and beloved daughter. I am ever yours in Jesus and for Jesus, to Whom I pray unceasingly for you, even though I dare not ask Him to give you health. May this most amiable Saviour do whatever is pleasing to Him, provided He grants us the grace to love Him perfectly before long. Please make some reply to whoever reads this to you, telling her what you wish to have written to me.

Live Jesus and Mary.

LETTER 3

To Sister Mary de Taillepied. On the feast of Easter.

JESUS, MARY

What shall I say to you, my dear Sister, in this moment of joy and consolation, save what St. Paul says to us: "Rejoice in the Lord always; Again I say, rejoice!" (1)

Truly what an occasion we have for joy, beholding Jesus so full of glory, of grandeur, of felicity and content Surely we have very great reason to rejoice; there could be no one in the whole world with so great a cause for happiness.

What have worldlings to motivate their joy? Mud, dust, wind and smoke; whereas the reason for our joy is the same which gives jubilation to the Eternal Father, the Holy Spirit, the angels and the saints.

Therefore rejoice, repeating with the Blessed Virgin Mary: "My spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour." (2) I no longer wish to find happiness in myself or in created and perishable things, but in Jesus my Saviour. He is my All and I desire to belong wholly to Him. It is the most extreme folly and delusion to look elsewhere for any true happiness. Let us, then, vehemently and courageously renounce all other things and seek only Him.

Live Jesus and Mary.

LETTER 4

To Sister Mary de Taillepied. The Saint reprimands her for having used a worldly expression in writing to him, and directs her how to celebrate the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin.

I am sending you all that you asked of me, and something more. I like very much the ingenuousness and simplicity with which you write me; nevertheless, there was a worldly phrase that escaped in your letter. It was the expression, kissing of hands, which I had forbidden you to use. I advise you, -for that, to make seven or eight minutes of prayerful meditation on these words which Jesus spoke in referring to His own: "They are not of the world, as I also am not of the world." (1) Adore Jesus in His perfect separation from the world, as much in His manner of speaking as in all other things. Adore Him pronouncing those words. Give yourself, as well as us, to Him, beseeching Him to separate us completely from the world, both in its manner of speaking and in all else; and kiss the ground as many times as there are words in this sentence: "They are not of the world."

Do not think, however, that you have committed a grave error by having spoken in this fashion, perhaps unthinkingly. It is just that it makes me very happy to have you honor these words of the Son of God. Alas! my sins are more grievous than such as this. Live Jesus and Mary, who alone are free from error and sin.

I am ever and increasingly at your service, my dear Sister, in this same Jesus.

Exercise for the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin Mary angels and the greatest saints! Who could ever comprehend the relationship of God with this little girl who has just been born, and hers with God! What an abundance of graces and blessings does He diffuse in the soul of this child! What zeal and love for God, what union with Him! She gives Him more love and honor at that moment than has been tendered to Him during five thousand preceding years! O holy Virgin, let all the moments of my life, all my eternity, pay homage to that first instant of thy life!

At this very moment, my dear Sister, let us begin a holy and celestial life with the Blessed Virgin in honor of her holy and divine life.

LETTER 5

To Sister Mary de Taillepied. On her illness.

JESUS, MARY

What shall I say to you, my dear Sister, to comfort you? Shall I say what the world usually says to those who are sick—that this illness is nothing, and you will soon be well again? But that is not what you seek. Shall I tell you then that there is reason to hope that you will soon be free from the troubles of this earth and the exile you are suffering? But that is still not what you are seeking, since you wish to avoid any consideration of your own self-interest. What shall I tell you, therefore, to console you? I shall not speak to you at all about yourself, for we have to forget ourselves completely. I shall speak only of Jesus, Who alone should be the subject of our speech, our thoughts and our consolation. And what shall I say to you about this estimable and infinitely amiable Jesus? I shall tell you that He is all yours and you are all His, my dear Sister. What a consolation! What more could you wish? Live henceforth in peace, then, and fear nothing, for Jesus is wholly yours and you belong wholly to Jesus Who loves you infinitely, and Who has no thoughts or plans for you except those of love and goodness.

Do not be in the least troubled if you cannot recite your Office; say the prayers and perform your other exercises as well as you can because there are several persons who are doing these things for you. And what infinitely surpasses them is that Jesus Himself, your All, is unendingly absorbed in contemplation, praise and love of His eternal Father in your name. Finally, all things are yours in heaven and on earth. Dwell in peace, therefore, and in complete and total surrender of yourself, your health, life, soul and salvation into the hands of your most amiable Father Who is Jesus.

Live Jesus and Mary.

LETTER 6

To Sister Mary de Taillepie. On her infirmities.

JESUS, MARY

Blessed be Jesus, my dearest Sister, for finding you a worthy subject in which to glorify Himself through the most excellent of all means, that of suffering. You have the opportunity to be a martyr if you wish. But you must love our dearest Jesus exceedingly and offer Him all that takes place within you, so that He may use it to your advantage. If your suffering continues, tell Madame<sup>(1)</sup> about it so that she may decide on the proper remedy. Always abandon and sacrifice yourself, nevertheless, to the most holy will of Him Who loves you more than yourself, and Who has more concern for you than anybody else could ever have.

Live Jesus and Mary.

To Sister Mary de Taillepie. On crosses, and afflictions.

Blessed be Jesus, and may He bless your poor heart, my dearest Sister. May He live and reign in it, and implant in it the dispositions necessary for you to profit from your present condition.

Take comfort, dear Sister, and rejoice in our most amiable Jesus, for He is yours and you are His; He is in you and you are in Him. Therefore live always in Him, for there will you find your paradise. Withdraw your mind and heart from everything else so that you may captivate and enclose them sweetly in this divine paradise. It is the paradise of the eternal Father, in which He finds all His delights. Let all your happiness be also in Jesus, for He alone is capable of satisfying your heart. Embrace willingly all the sufferings and afflictions that it may please Our Lord to send you, since this is the most efficacious means of destroying ourselves and establishing Jesus in our stead.

[Plouer,(1) 1636] Here I am in a borough to begin a mission. I do not know what will happen to me, but during the last mission(2) I received some very fine epithets.

(1).A small town in Brittany about seven miles from Dinan in the Côtes-du-Nord District.

(2). Pleurtuit, a larger town than Plouer, about six miles from Saint-Malo. Most Reverend Achilles de Harlay- Sancy, Bishop of Saint-Malo, had requested the Saint to preach these two missions in his diocese. At that time Brittany was not so devoutly religious as it is today. At Pleurtuit Some lax and ignorant persons attacked the reputation of the missionaries, especially that of their superior, Father Eudes. Despite the efforts of these adversaries the mission was a definite success as this letter points out. The confessionals were literally besieged by people wishing to go to confession. Cf. ## LETTERS AND SHORTER WORKS

Some people called me the precursor of the antichrist; others said I was the antichrist himself. Some characterized me as a seducer, a devil who must not be believed; and others condemned me as a sorcerer enticing everyone in his wake. Some of them contemplated driving me away and might have carried out their plan, had not our Fathers arrived the same day. All that is but roses; the thorns that pierce my heart consist in seeing poor people sometimes follow me around for a week without being able to go to confession, although there are ten confessors here.

LETTER 9

To Madame de Budos. On resignation in time of illness.

[1637] JESUS, MARY

Madame:

May the grace and peace of Our Lord Jesus Christ be with you for ever.

I am filled with compassion for you at the sight of your incessant pains and weakness, and I should be filled with sorrow, too, if I did not perceive Jesus in your debility and suffering. In them I see only Jesus, only His goodness and love.

He is there, Madame; He abides within you. He is present in your anguish and sufferings. He is there, all love and completely transformed into love for your sake. He is there, preparing and ordaining these sufferings through love of you.

He is there, guiding and leading you along the paths of His love, drawing you toward the perfection of love by means of these trials and severities.

He is there, bearing with you through His love all the anguish of mind and body that is yours to bear. Even though you may often be unaware of it, He is nevertheless infallibly present, for if He were absent, you would find it impossible to support even the least of the infirmities you are suffering.

He is still there, purifying and sanctifying you and preparing great things for you, provided you, on your part, give the cooperation He asks.

He is there for the purpose of filling you completely with love for Him, and much more so than you are filled with suffering. I will say even more: not only does He wish to imbue you with His love, but also to transform you entirely into love for Him through crosses and sufferings, as His Cross and sufferings transformed Him into love for us.

He is there, finally, with a most ardent desire to draw you to Himself, to perfect and consummate you in Himself, along the path of these same sufferings. St. Paul says that it was fitting that Jesus Christ should be consummated by suffering "For it became him . . . to perfect the author of their salvation, by his passion." (1)

O dignity, O holiness, O admirable excellence of suffering used for the perfection and consummation of a God, for the perfection of Jesus, God and Man, for the consummation of Him Who is the consummation and perfection of all things! Great humiliation of Jesus, Who humbled Himself to a state in which He was capable of being perfected and consummated! And the immense dignity of suffering, chosen and used by Him and His Eternal Father to achieve this perfection and consummation!

Is it not a great honor for you, Madame, is it not a great favor, and should it not be a great comfort to you to be consumed and perfected through suffering, as Jesus was consumed by suffering? Does not Jesus show a rare and singular love for you by using the same means for your fulfillment and consummation as He employed for His own? May Christ Crucified be for ever blessed for so giving you a share in the blessings of His Cross! I implore Him to crucify you completely with Him, and to do so through the same love which nailed Him to the Cross for your sake.

I see an infinite number of crucified persons in the world, but few who are crucified by the love of Jesus. Some are crucified by their self-love and inordinate love of the world, but happy are they who are crucified for the love of Jesus; happy are they who live and die on the Cross with Jesus. You will be numbered among these, Madame, if you bear your cross lovingly, like Jesus, accepting, embracing and cherishing it with all your heart in honor of and in union with the same love with which He accepted and bore it for you.

To achieve that end, cast your eyes frequently upon Jesus Who is always with you, Who penetrates and pervades you much more do the pains and sufferings which seem to take complete possession of you. See only Jesus in your pains and sufferings; see only His goodness and love, which are responsible for all that happens to you. Here only to Him; be attentive only to Him. Forsake your weal and displeasure; disregard them utterly; ignore them entirely. Turn your mind gently and firmly from all thoughts and objects which may cause you to worry. Turn to Jesus, Who is turned toward you, and always has His eyes fixed lovingly upon you. Cling closely to Him and His divine love, as to One Who is your All and outside of Whom you wish nothing. Let there no longer be anyone but yourself and Him in the world, and let yourself be entirely unaffected and unclaimed by anything at all that is not He. Lose every thought and consideration of your own interests, of yourself and everything else.

Yes, lose yourself wholly and happily in the abyss of this goodness and love of Jesus which encompasses, penetrates and possesses you, and is always considering you, always watching over you and all that concerns you; which is more zealous, more attentive, more preoccupied to an infinite degree in procuring your welfare and advantage in all things than you yourself are.

O love! O bounty! O Jesus, God of love and bounty! Adore, love, bless Jesus so full of love and kindness toward you. Adore, cherish, glorify all His attentions, all His plans and all His desires in your regard. Surrender yourself frequently to Him and offer Him your whole state of spiritual and bodily sufferings in homage to the sufferings of His body and divine soul. Adore, too, the peace and tranquility of that holy soul in the midst of its pains and torments, and pray Jesus to let you participate in that same peace and tranquility as well as in all the other dispositions with which He suffered.

These, Madame, are the practices and duties which Jesus asks of you now. They are the allegiance and honor you must render Him in your present condition. I pray that He Himself may impress these thoughts and sentiments on your heart. I entreat Him to honor and glorify Himself in you. I implore Him, finally, to carry out all His plans and desires for you, allowing not even the slightest hindrance on your part.

And as for you, Madame, I beg only one thing of you, which is that you remember and put into practice something you said to me the last time I had the pleasure of seeing you. You told me that you no longer wanted anything except what God willed, and that you were submitting yourself unreservedly to all that it pleased Him to ordain for you. You spoke these words with a certain strength and energy which consoled me a great deal. I beseech you, therefore, not to contradict this statement, but to prove, whenever God may afford you occasion to do so, that you spoke those words not with your tongue alone but also with your heart and will.

You see, Madame, how freely I speak to you? But it is prompted by my zeal for your soul and my trust in your goodness. Let me say just one more thing, and that is to beg you to continue-for I believe that you are doing so now-to have something devotional read to you from time to time. I think that the acts of love<sup>(2)</sup> for Jesus which were recently sent you will serve the purpose. Have them read to you now and then, and dwell tenderly on them, without strain or exertion.

(2). The Saint probably refers to the thirty-four acts of love that are found in The Kingdom of Jesus (New York, 1946), Part V, P. 223 ff. This first devotional work of the Saint was published that year and was dedicated to Madame de Budos. See "Epistle Dedicatory" to The Kingdom of Jesus, p. xxix. ### LETTER 10

JESUS, MARY

Mesdames, my dearest sisters in Our Lord Jesus Christ:

May the grace, mercy and peace of this same Jesus Christ dwell in you for ever.

The zeal and piety that I discerned in you while I was in Rouen so edified and consoled me that I cannot sufficiently thank Our Lord. I implore Him daily, during the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass, to shower the holiest blessings of His divine mercy upon you and yours, as well as to preserve and enkindle in your hearts ever more and more the fire of His most ardent charity. I was at Rouen only three months in body, but I assure you that I am and shall always be there in mind and heart accompanying you to the prisons, hospitals and the homes of the unfortunate sick, while rejoicing with Our Lord, His most holy Mother and your guardian angels to behold you thus persevere in your performance of the works of God.

Yes, my dear sisters, you must know that by these holy actions you are rejoicing all paradise as well as augmenting the glory and accidental

(1) A pious association of Catholic ladies who devoted their time and money to corporal works of mercy. They visited hospitals, prisons and the private homes of poor families in the city. The Saint wrote this letter to ask them to extend their charity in an institution for women who desired to reform their lives. These ladies responded generously to the Saint's appeal. Cf. Boulay, Vie du Vénérable Jean Eudes, Vol. I, P. 406; The origin of the Order of Our Lady of Charity, p. 12; Henri Joly, Life of St. John Eudes, p. 142.

(2). As early as 1635 Saint John Eudes assisted in organizing a house for penitent women in the city of Caen. In 1641 the ladies in charge began to live a religious life under the direction of Margaret Morin, a Huguenot convert. Three years later Margaret Morin left the community and the Saint requested the assistance of the Visitation nuns of Caen to organize the religious community which eventually became the Order of Our Lady of Charity of the Refuge.

joy of God. If you but knew what happiness you afford your guardian angels by doing just what so many great saints of both sexes have done before you! Furthermore, you confound the evil one and enrage all hell. You bring down countless blessings from heaven upon your city, your families, husbands, children and yourselves. You spread the odor of piety and give to all France a virtuous example which will encourage many of your fellow creatures to imitate your charity. In short, you will revive in God's Church that primitive spirit of holiness which formerly flourished among the first Christians.

But the devil, who is enraged by all that is done for the glory of God, will not fail to do everything in his power to discourage you and force you to abandon this holy work. He will create many obstacles and oppose all your good intentions, particularly those regarding the house of Our Lady of Refuge, for he is driven to despair at the sight of these wretched souls, whom he employs to bring about the loss of many others, being snatched from his claws. But you must show, my dearest sisters, that your devotion and loyalty to the service of our good Master is greater than the rage of the demon against Our Lord and the souls He redeemed at the price of His blood. That malignant spirit sometimes labors thirty or forty years before he succeeds in bringing about the damnation of a soul by causing it to fall into mortal sin. Then do not grudge a little time, a little effort, a little material wealth, that you may thwart these evil works for the destruction of which the Son of God shed His blood. If you prevented but a single mortal sin from being committed in your city, you would be doing an incomparably greater good than if you delivered it from all the plagues and other temporal afflictions imaginable, since one sin alone is a greater evil than the combined ills of the world.

You should, therefore, consider yourselves fortunate that Our Lord is giving you the grace to use a portion of the temporal goods He has bestowed on you for the same purpose for which He gave His life's blood. What happiness for you to be chosen by God to be associated with Him in the greatest of His works, which is the work of the redemption of souls! To free a man who is bodily a captive in the hands of barbarians is a noble deed, but to free a soul from the slavery of Satan is greater than to deliver all who are in corporal slavery.

LETTERS AND SHORTER WORKS

Since it is so pleasing to God to build hospitals and sanitariums for the relief and assistance of those who are physically sick, think of the good accomplished by helping to establish a home and hospital for souls who are suffering from an infernal plague which will bring death to them and to countless others if not remedied. There are so many hospitals everywhere for the body; is it not right that there should also be some for souls who are more horribly and dangerously ill than bodies, and that persons who love God and know how dear to Him are souls should have as much concern for them as for physical needs, and even more? A single soul is worth more than a thousand worlds; therefore whoever wins a soul to God does better than if he were to conquer a thousand empires.

To give alms to the poor is very commendable and highly recommended by God in Sacred Scripture, but to cooperate in the conversion of a soul is greater, says St. John Chrysostom, than to give to the poor all the gold in the world, if it were yours. Now by assisting in the work of the Refuge, my dear sisters, you are doing both; you are giving spiritual as well as corporal alms. Judge for yourselves how pleasing this is to God, Who is all charity and mercy, and Who so loves mercy and charity that He is merciless in His judgment upon him who fails to exercise mercy; whereas, on the other hand, He withholds judgment while showing mercy to him who performs works of mercy.(4)

Many are envious, and rightly so, says St. John Chrysostom, of the fasts, vigils, hair cloths, chastisements and other penances and mortifications of religious who lead austere and solitary lives, but to deliver a soul from the clutches of the devil and return it once more to Jesus Christ surpasses all the austerities in the world.(5)

People admire miracles which affect the body, such as the restoration of sight to the blind, hearing to the deaf, speech to the dumb and life to the dead, but St. Gregory the Great assures us that he who cooperates with the grace of God in the conversion of a sinner performs a miracle greater than if he were to raise a dead person to life again.(6)

In short, the most divine of all divine functions, says St. Dionysius the Areopagite, is to work with God for the salvation of souls(7). It is the continual occupation of God-Man; to it He devotes all His thoughts, all His efforts and all the powers of His divinity and humanity. It is the employment He gives to His angels and His greatest saints, the Apostles. It is the fruit of so many labors, so much sweat, so many tears, so much pain and fasting, preaching and shedding of blood, so many holy actions and cruel sufferings in the life of God on earth—a life of thirty-four years, terminated for the same end by such an awesome death.

Is it not a great honor for you, dearest sisters, to participate in something so worthy, so exalted, so precious and divine? Should you complain or stint a little of this life in a cause for which God sacrificed Himself? How shameful for a Christian soul if Jesus Christ should reproach him at the hour of death for having spent on feasts, balls, pastimes, unnecessary clothing and a thousand other frivolities all the wealth that He had bestowed on him, while refusing to contribute anything to the salvation of souls for whom He sacrificed Himself!

Let each of you examine your conscience on this point, and there will be few who do not find yourselves guilty and have not great reason to fear the judgment of God. The goods and money you possess are not yours, but God's. Nevertheless, you have hitherto spent much of it on the world, on vanities, and consequently on the devil.

How can you expiate this sin? Henceforth do at least as much for Him to Whom you owe all as you have done in the past for His enemy, who is also yours. What you have used to gratify the world and Satan is lost, but whatever you give for Jesus Christ shall be returned to you a hundredfold in this world, and shall acquire eternal life for you in the next, according to the infallible promise of the Son of God. There is not one among you who does not have a very special devotion to the Blessed Virgin, the Mother of all purity. Remember, then, that you can do nothing more pleasing to her than to help maintain this poor little house dedicated to her under the title of Our Lady of Refuge, because it is a place of refuge for the chastity she dearly loves—a virtue which is so horribly persecuted in our century.

When I began this letter, I had no intention of making it so lengthy, but I believe that God wanted it so. Please accept all these counsels, therefore, not in the least as coming from me, who am nothing and wholly unworthy to be heard by you, but as coming from God. Read and re-read them, consider them attentively, and you will find them useful.

All goes quite well, thanks be to God, in the house of Our Lady of Refuge at Caen, and I assure you that it was a great comfort to me to find it so when, on my return to Caen, I called there to see how everything was progressing. For I found that God was being greatly glorified, both by the good order which is maintained there, and by the care being taken to establish these poor penitents firmly in the fear of God and the ways of piety, as well as to have them use their time profitably by keeping busy. Nevertheless, there are but three persons in Caen who are supporting this house, and they are not the wealthiest in the city. I implore you, my dear sisters, since you have more power in temporal things than those in Caen, to have also more charity. I very humbly entreat Reverend Father Angelique de Gaillon(8) to spare none of his zeal and piety for the advancement of the glory of our Master in this cause. Should some objection or obstacle arise, consult among yourselves and then appeal to his Lordship the Archbishop through his vicar general, Reverend Father Toussaint(9). I am quite sure that the love and most ardent zeal of this worthy prelate for the Church of God and the salvation of souls will move him to give you his powerful aid in every way possible.

In conclusion, do not forget me in your holy prayers. I remain with all my heart, in Jesus and Mary,

Your most obedient and humble servant,
JOHN EUDES, priest of the Oratory of Jesus.

(9). Father Joseph Mary Ory is of the opinion that Father de Gaillon was an Oratorian. Cf. The Origin of the Order of Our Lady of Charity, p. 16.

(10). «Father Toussaint, whose family name was Thébault, was certainly an Oratorian. A penitentiary canon as well as vicar-general, he was interred in the cathedral of Rouen in 1660.» ibid., p. 16.

LETTER 11(1)

To Madame Blouet de Camilly.(2) The Saint urges her to continue her support of the Refuge of Caen. ( 3 )

[1643]

Continue, my dear daughter, to put your confidence in God, and rest assured that our admirable Mother will take care of her children and send them all that is necessary. It is well, however, to feel the weight of the Cross; it is our glory and our crown.

(1). Many of the letters in this collection are fragmentary. The short extracts are taken from the early biographies of the Saint, from the Annals of the Order of our Lady of Charity or from the Annals of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary. This passage is from a letter written at Saint-Sauveur-le-Vicomte, where St. John Eudes was preaching a mission. Cf. Oeuvres Complètes du Bienheureux Jean Eudes, VOL 11, P. 41

(2). Anne Le Haguais married James Blouet, Lord of Camilly, whose family had received the title of nobility for services rendered to France in 1610. She had three sons and one daughter. One of the sons entered the Congregation of Jesus and Mary and succeeded St. John Eudes as superior general. For many years Madame de Camilly, a devout and pious lady, was under the spiritual guidance of the Saint. She assisted him on many occasions with her influence and her wealth, especially when he undertook to found his two religious orders.

LETTER 12(1)

To Reverend Father William Gibieuf.(2) On his mother's cure, obtained through the intercession of Cardinal de Bérulle( 3 ) in April, 1634.

November 25, 1643 ( 4 )

I witnessed a very obvious miracle which was wrought in the case of my mother. At a time when she was so ill in the crisis of a high fever that I no longer expected anything but death, she had brought to her a picture of Cardinal de Bérulle and some of his relics which I had given her, and upon kissing them and recommending herself to him, she found herself instantly cured. When I arrived to prepare her for death after having received word of her illness, I discovered her in church in good health.

(2). Father Gibieuf, born at Bourges, entered the Congregation of the Oratory. He received his doctorate in theology at the Sorbonne and became one of the most prominent Oratorians of the day. During the absence of Cardinal de Bérulle, he was vicar general of the Order and religious superior of the Carmelite monasteries of France. He died at the Saint-Magloire Oratory in Paris in 1650.

(3). Cardinal Peter de Bérulle (1575-1629) founded the Oratory of Jesus in 1611.

(4). This letter was written eight months after St. John Eudes left the Oratory to found the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

LETTER 13

To the Priests of the Seminary at Caen.(1)
On humility, charity and pure love.

Paris, December 9, 1643

JESUS, MARY

My dearest brethren:

I am leaving Father Manchon(2) the task of writing you the news.(3) These few lines are only to assure you that you are all present in my heart, which is filled with unsurpassed affection and tenderness for you. But that is nothing; your real cause for rejoicing is that you are present in the Heart of Our Lord and His most holy Mother. Let us also bear them in our hearts and strive to keep them living and reigning there by means of true and profound humility, perfect and sincere charity, complete scorn for the world and self, and pure love for God. Those are the things in which you will find peace of soul and paradise on earth. I beseech Our Lord and His most holy Mother to dispose of us all according to their Heart,(4) in whose love I embrace all of you together and individually and remain with all sincerity,

(1). The first Eudists at Caen resided in a small house called The Mission, which was used as the seminary; they were then known as the Priests of the Seminary of Jesus and Mary of Caen.

(2). Father Thomas Manchon (1617-1663) was one of the first five members of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary. A gifted speaker he labored with the Saint on many of his missions. He also directed the Seminary of Lisieux and of Rouen, where he died on February 6, 1663. It might be well to mention here the names of the other four Eudists who accompanied the saintly Founder to the Shrine of our Lady of Deliverance, ten miles from Caen, on March 25, 1643, and dedicated their lives to the sanctification of the clergy and the preaching of missions. Besides Father Manchon, the first companions of St. John Eudes were Simon Mannoury of Lisieux, Peter Jourdan of Coutances, Andrew Godefroy of Caen, and John Fossey of Thorigny. The two last did not persevere, but were very soon replaced by James Finel and Richard Lemesle, both Priests of the diocese of Coutances, Normandy. Cf. Les Fleurs de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, Vol. 1, P. 20.

(3). What the news was we cannot say with certainty. Apparently the Saint went to Paris to request Anne of Austria, the Queen Mother, to use her influence to have his new Congregation approved by Rome. Practically nothing resulted from these negotiations. Cf. BOULAY, op. cit., Vol. 2, p. 68.

Devotedly yours,

JOHN EUDES,

Priest of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

(4). The Saint uses an expression which is now a common prayer in the Church: Fac cor nostrum secundum cor tuum. Boulay, Ibid., Vol. 2, p. 67.

LETTER 14

To Father Richard Le Mesle.(1) Concerning successful negotiations.( 2 )

Rejoice that so far the Blessed Virgin has strengthened, helped and guided you in this whole matter, and continue to thank her, for her assistance is very evident. The less help you receive from earth, the more shall you receive from heaven. Let us put our trust in Our Lord and His holy Mother and abandon ourselves to their holy will, overlooking nothing that can be done in their interests, and welcoming, for the sake of their love, all the difficulties which arise, and which they permit only to beautify and enrich your soul, and to render it more pleasing to His Divine Majesty.

(1). Father Le Mesle (1608-1661) joined the Congregation of Jesus and Mary a short time after the foundation in 1643. He was a man of great prudence and zeal and worked successfully in the first Eudist Seminaries at Coutances and Caen. He died on October 21, 1661. Cf. Les Fleurs de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, Vol. 1, p. 10.

(2). The parents of Mr. Nicholas Blouet de Than, a wealthy gentleman of Caen, were trying to prevent their son from giving a substantial donation to the Eudists for the founding of the Caen Seminary. Father Le Mesle persuaded them to allow their son to turn over to the Congregation of Jesus and Mary an income of 1500 livres and 3000 livres of arrears. Mr. Nicholas Blouet de Than became a Eudist on August 15, 1644. Cf. BOULAY, Op. Cit., Vol. 2, P. 85

LETTER 15 (1)

To Mr. and Madame Blouet de Camilly(2 ) On the affairs of Our Lady of Charity,(3) and the proper dispositions for receiving Communion.

March 5, 1644

JESUS, MARY

My dearest spiritual brother and sister:

I received your letter. Blessed be God for the fervor of Messrs de Lion and de Répichon! (4) As soon as Mr. Dubuisson(5) arrives in Bayeux,(6) please let us know how the matter stands. Mr. de Lion writes me that it would be well, if the thing is urgent, to send the pastor of Notre Dame.(7) Please consult with Mr. Dubuisson about that, and then I will do whatever you decide upon together.

Rejoice, dearest sister, and have no fear of receiving Communion as (1). This letter was written from Coutances, Normandy, where St. John Eudes was preaching the Lenten sermons. Cf. Oeuvres Complètes, Vol. 11, 41.

(2) See Letter 11, note 2. Mr. James de Camilly was also a staunch friend of the Saint, who often called them his "spiritual brother" as he did in this letter.

(3). Monastery of Our Lady of Charity of the Refuge founded at Caen in 1642. See Letter 10, note 2.

(4). Mr. Robert de Répichon, sieur d'Avenay and de Lion, belonged to one of the oldest and most illustrious families of Normandy. He promised the Saint 14,000 livres for the foundation of the Caen Seminary on condition that the letters patent would be registered in Parliament and that the Seminary would be recognized by the Mayor and Councillors of Caen within two years. As difficulties prevented the Saint from carrying out these conditions, Mr. de Répichon contributed only 3000 livres. Cf. Boulay, op. cit., Vol. 2, pp. 87-88. In 1646 Mr. de Répichon defrayed the expenses of the mission which St. John Eudes preached at Lion-sur-Mer, ten miles from Caen. Cf. Boulay, Ibid. Vol. 2, P. 192.

Mr. de Lion was the son of Mr. Robert de Répichon. He was a pious young man, who, acting on the advice of the Saint, entered the Congregation of the Oratory.

(5). An excellent Catholic gentleman, who defrayed the expenses of the Vimoutiers mission which St. John Eudes preached in 1645. Vimoutiers is a small town of 3000 inhabitants situated between Lisieux and Argentan in Normandy. Mr. Dubuisson received the missionaries in his own home and waited upon them himself. Cf. usual, for every soul clothed with divine grace is prepared for Holy Communion, even though the senses are not garbed in the beautiful raiment of devout feelings and divine consolations, but remain in great dryness and poverty of devotion.

We are praying daily for you and all your affairs. I wrote you by the last mail what reply was received in that connection. Our admirable Mother has promised to give a farthing<sup>(8)</sup> to her daughters, our Sisters; she calls it a farthing because she has not a very high opinion of temporal things. Of this farthing she sent me two hundred livres today which I have in my possession. I do not know how much of the farthing still remains,<sup>(9)</sup> nor by what means to forward it to you. If Mr. de la Mare,<sup>(10)</sup> or some other person, could send someone to call for it here and deliver it to you in Caen, that would be excellent.

At any rate, I am asking you to give this sum to them little by little, according to their needs and your own discretion. If I do not find any other way to get it to you, I shall bring it at Easter.

I am with all my heart, in Jesus and Mary,
Devotedly yours,
JOHN EUDES, priest.

P. S. Please tell Mr. de Lion that it is absolutely imperative for him to go to Bayeux himself, and ask Mr. Dubuisson to tell him that he alone can do more there than anyone else in the world.

I greet and embrace all our brethren, especially our dearest Brother Dubuisson. Greetings also to our Sisters, particularly Madame de Montfort.<sup>(11)</sup>

Please put the address and postage on the letter I am writing to our

(8). Mary des VALLÉES, a saintly woman of Coutances, gave the Saint 800 livres for the Monastery of Our Lady of Charity at Caen. This may be the farthing to which the Saint refers in this letter. See Letter 17, note 3.

(9). This money received was on account and the Saint says that he does not know how much of the 800 livres remains to be drawn. Oeuvres Complètes, Vol. 11, P. 42. Boulay, Op. cit. VOL. 2, P. 94

(11). A sister of Mr. John de Bernières. See note 12. She assisted the Saint on many occasions. In 1641 she paid the expenses of the mission preached by St. John Eudes at Ramilly. Cf. Boulay, op. cit., Vol. 1, P. 288, P. 334.

Brother de Bernières,(12) and also mail that of Father Chrysostom,(13) after having scaled them both, as well as the few lines to Mr. Poisson.(14)

Never forget to date your letters.

(12). John de Bernières, a devoted friend of St. John Eudes, was born at Caen in 1602 and died there in 1659. He was very pious and charitable. Despite the fact that he was treasurer of France in the city of Caen, he spent a great deal of time in prayer and good works. Acting on the advice of his spiritual director, he built a house called The Hermitage, in the vicinity of the Ursuline Monastery and formed a community of devout laymen who lived with him. Mr. de Bernières was most generous to St. John Eudes when the latter was organizing the first house of Our Lady of Charity. Cf. Boulay, ibid., Vol. 1, pp. 287-288.

(13). Father John Chrysostom was a member of the Order of St. Francis. He was a very holy and learned man from whom the Saint received wise advice in 1641 and 1642 when he was contemplating the founding of his two orders. It was through this devoted religious that St. John Eudes consulted St. Vincent de Paul concerning the foundation of the Caen Seminary. Father Chrysostom died in 1645. Cf. Boulay, op. cit., Vol. 2, p. 196.

(14). Peter Poisson was a publisher of Caen. He brought out the first edition of The Kingdom of Jesus in 1637.

LETTER 16

To Mademoiselle Eustace de Taillefer, (1) afterwards Sister Mary of the Assumption. The Saint encourages her in her vocation, and speaks to her of Margaret Morin (2) with whom she was living at that time.

[1644]

JESUS, MARY

My dearest daughter:

I implore Our Lord and His most holy Mother to be your strength in this present affliction and temptation of yours which grieves me deeply. And have I not reason indeed to be distressed? I see that souls whom God has entrusted to me,(3) and who are dearer to me than life itself, are in anguish at this moment and in great danger of losing their vocation, and then of falling into the clutches of the infernal wolf;

(1). Renée Eustace de Taillefer entered the Refuge of Caen following the mission preached by the Saint at Valognes in 1643. She took the habit of the Order on February 12, 1645, was professed on June 2, 1652, and died on May 30, 1668. In 1644 the Community of the Refuge passed through a formidable crisis. Margaret Morin, who was acting as directress, sought to introduce a spirit entirely at variance with that which Saint John Eudes was striving to implant. This divergence of viewpoint between the founder and the directress led to the withdrawal of several postulants for whom the Saint had been harboring great hopes. Mademoiselle de Taillefer saw her sister, who had entered the Community with her, leave under these circumstances. She herself was on the point of abandoning her vocation, and it was to dissuade her from doing so that the Saint wrote her this letter. Cf. Boulay, Op. Cit., Vol. 2, pp. 99-101.

(2). Margaret Morin, a native of Coutances who had made her home in Caen, was born a Protestant. After her conversion she devoted herself to the performance of good works. Saint John Eudes decided upon her as the one to give him the assistance he needed in the founding of Our Lady of Charity. But Margaret Morin was unable to share his views and gave up the work in 1644. After her departure she remained several years in Caen in charge of the Hospital of the Petits-Renfermés. In 1652, in company with Mary du Bosc, she founded the Order of the Sisters of Charity of Bayeux, was professed on June 1, 1657 and died there in the odor of sanctity on October 1st of the same year.

(3). Reference is made here either to three postulants whom the Saint had sent to the Refuge of Caen, following the missions of Saint Sauveur-le-Vicomte and Valognes (1643), all of whom gave up their vocations with the exception of Mademoiselle de Taillefer, or to the directresses who were placed in charge of the work along with Margaret Morin, and who abandoned it when she did. yet I am not allowed to see them and speak to them in order to prevent it. She who stands in the way of this ought indeed to fear the vengeance of God. With all my heart do I pray Him, however, to have mercy on her. As for you, my dearest daughter, I beseech you, in God's name, to do nothing until I have spoken with you. Be patient a little longer and avoid temptation. Rest assured that in a few days you will be as happy and consoled as you are now disheartened.

Consider, my dear daughter, that divine Providence has directed you to me, and that it has pleased Him to make me instrumental in winning you over to His service. That is why I am entreating you, in the name of Our Lord and His most holy Mother, to grant me what I am asking of you, which is not to leave your house until I have first talked with you. She to whom you listen would have you believe that I am turning her out of the house, which is in nowise true, for I have always said, and I still say, that if she wishes to remain obedient and not rebel against all the things I have said to her, but rather comply as she should, I shall be very pleased if she remains. If she leaves, therefore, it is certainly not by my command but through her own disobedience. Finally, my dear daughter, I implore you once again to have a little patience, and you will see how this storm blows over.

What I am saying to you is intended for all our dear Sisters as well, whom I love, in truth, with my whole heart. Be so good as to tell them what I have told you, and you will be doing something very pleasing to God.

Your most affectionate father,
JOHN EUDES, priest of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

P. S. Kneel for a moment at the feet of the most Blessed Virgin Mary and give yourself to her, asking for strength. She is your true Mother and will never forsake you.

JESUS, MARY

We pray daily here to God for you and all that concerns you. Continue to receive Holy Communion according to the rule I gave you in parting.

Marry Fanfan!(1) Marry that lovely "Lily Bud"! (2) Oh, if you but knew how those words, though you spoke them laughingly, have left me heart-broken! Nevertheless, I too am of the opinion that she should be married, but to a heavenly and divine Spouse Who is King of heaven and earth. Try, my dear daughter, to incline her gradually to this divine marriage, for that adorable Spouse is considering her, but He wants her to consider Him in return. The Eagle(3) was speaking to me about it two days ago, and of her own accord, without my bringing up the subject, she confessed that she is worried about her. She urged me to tell you to prepare her little by little to be the bride of the divine Spouse, that is, to become a nun. She told me she fears very much that the girl does not give enough consideration to this most amiable Spouse, who complained about it, and that she regards her enemy, the world, a little too much. She said that you should guard against this, frequently counseling her to hate the world with its vanities and fashions which the most holy Virgin abominates and which always arouse her wrath. She also said that you should be careful with whom and in what way she seeks diversion, and that you should insist on joining her sometimes in her recreation. (4) All that is the language of the Eagle, spoken of her own volition, and I noticed that she was preoccupied with all these things. She revealed to me that she often thinks about them-not that she has any knowledge of something more, as she assured me. Just the same, it is a warning that deserves your careful consideration, my dear daughter, and ought to be put to good use. I forgot to mention that the Eagle also told me that you should advise her to meditate a little and should often speak to her of Our Lord, striving to imbue her with a great hatred for the world and sin, and a great love for Him Who desires complete possession of her heart.

All the Josephs, the Eagles, the Vines and the Earthworms(5) greet you in Jesus and Mary, who live and reign for ever in all hearts in heaven and on earth! Amen, amen! So be it! I embrace our spiritual brother.

I am writing a letter to someone (6) and am sending it to Madame de Caen,(7) with instructions to deliver it to you or have it delivered to you. When you receive it I beg of you to give it, or be sure to have it given, to the person to whom it is addressed. But be careful not to let anyone know that it has passed through the hands of Madame de Caen; please

(4). A girl (Mademoiselle de Camilly) in whom Mary des Vallées took great interest would sometimes indulge in the singing of profane and worldly songs. This she did, however, with such secrecy that even her own mother had no knowledge of it. But Our Lord informed Sister Mary about it, though she was eighteen leagues distant, and commanded her to warn the mother. She did so through a note written in these terms: « Warning to our lovely Lily Bud whom the divine Spouse is considering. He wishes her to behold Him in turn and He reproaches her for taking pleasure in the singing of profane songs. Profane songs are a plague which destroys chastity; be careful of them. »

«As soon as the mother received this warning she spoke about it to her daughter, who confessed that it was true that she sometimes sang these songs; but from then on she abstained completely from them." Vie Admirable de Marie des Vallées, Bk. 8, Ch. 9, Quebec MS.

Madame de Camilly's daughter joined the Benedictines of Holy Trinity, where she died a holy death on August 23, 1654.

(5). Figurative names for devout and humble friends of the Saint. In this letter he refers to Mary des Vallées as The Eagle.

(6). We are unable to say who this person was and why the letter was first sent to dame de Budos, the Abbess of Holy Trinity, and then to Madame de Camilly.

(7). The Abbess of Holy Trinity Monastery held the title of Madame de Caen. She took that name because it had been the title of the second abbess, who was a daughter of William the Conqueror. Cf. Trébutien, Caen, son histoire, ses monuments, 3rd edition, p. 156.

deliver it as if you had received it directly from me and inform this person that if she wishes to make a reply, she should give it to Father Mannoury(8) if he is still there. If he is not, let her give it to you, and you can mail it to me. If Madame de Caen sends for you, be sure to conceal (9) from her that you know anything about this matter.

(8). Father Simon Mannoury (1614-1687) was one of the first five members of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary. He made two journeys to Rome in 1645 and 1646 to obtain the approbation of the Holy See for the Caen Seminary and for the Congregation of Jesus and Mary. The second journey was a successful one. Later Father Mannoury became rector of the Lisieux, Caen and Evreux Seminary. He died March 23, 1687, Cf. Les Fleurs de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, Vol. 1, p. 103

LETTER 18

To Madame Blouet de Camilly. On the purchase of a house for the religious of Our Lady of Charity.

[March 1644]

JESUS, MARY

I was hoping to receive a letter from you in today's mail, my dearest daughter, to learn how you feel about Mr. de Montfort's house,(1) but I heard only from our brother Mannoury,(2) who wrote that he is coming to see me. I assume that you are sending me word through him.

Father Mannoury informs me that he and Father Jourdan(3) inspected Mr. de Montfort's house and found it wonderfully suitable and habitable. According to all that he writes me, we must not allow this opportunity to pass. The house is rather close to the Oratory, (4) but that matters little.

(1). Mr. de Montfort was Mr. John de Bernières's brother-in-law (See Letter 13, notes 11 and 12). The Saint was at that time trying to purchase a house at Caen for his new foundation, The Order of Our Lady of Charity of the Refuge. Cf. Ory, op. cit., P. 23.

(2). See Letter 17, note 8.

(3). Father Peter Jourdan (1608-1661) was one of St. John Eudes's first companions. He was a saintly priest and an excellent spiritual director. He died on December 27, 1661. See Les Fleurs de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, Vol. 1, P. 13; Boulay, OP. cit., Vol. 2, P. 8.

(4). St. John Eudes was a former Oratorian. After he left the Congregation of the Oratory, his former confrères strove their utmost to hinder the development of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary. Cf. Boulay, op. cit., Vol. 2, pp. 259-264.

However, I am leaving it all to your judgment and to that of our spiritual brother.(5) I am sending you the letter written me by Father Mannoury. Read it, please, and give it some thought. I implore our good Mother to inspire you with her will in this matter. If you judge the house to be suitable, kindly write Mr. de Bernières(6) to take it from Mr. Patri(7) and to close the deal.

We are making a novena here for the Bayeux affair(8) and for the Bulls of approbation(9) for our sisters. The novena consists in reciting once daily the Veni Creator, the Memorare and the Ave Maria filia Dei Patris;(10) Monstra te esse Matrem admirabilem twelve times; and twelve times these words which were recommended to the Eagle:(11) Sancta Maria, Mater Dei, Virgo cui data est omnes potestas in caelo et in terra, fiat nobis secundum verbum tuum, that is, be it done unto us according to thy promises. I beg of you and our fair "Lily Bud" (12) to join us in this novena, and our dear sisters too, but without telling them about the Bayeux affair which must always be kept secret. I am making the same request of our dear Father Jourdan. Recommend it also to the Mother of St. Joseph, to the poor, and to the Visitation Sisters.

The Eagle also told me yesterday that you should try little by little to instil in Fanfan(13) an affection for the things of God and have her choose her recreation along the same lines. She added that the evil spirit, perceiving your desire to give her to God, is striving now to attract her to the world, and that you, for your part, must exercise extraordinary care if she is to respond to Him Who calls her. She told me all that of her own accord, without my speaking to her about it, for she has great affection and concern for Fanfan and all her interests. That

To Madame Blouet de Camilly. On the qualifications required of girls who are received into the Institute of Our Lady of Charity, and on other subjects.

March 23, 1644

Dearest daughter:

I received your last very informative letter, but not in the last mail, which brought me nothing at all. I am worried because you mentioned in your preceding letter that you were not well.

I have no leisure just now to write to anyone but you. That is why I am asking you to write once more to Mr. de Bernières(1) that he should make sure of the house, and that if they demand a down-payment, he should tell them that the pastor of Notre-Dame(2) and Father Finel (3) will take care of it.

Contact our dear Sister Margaret,(4) too, and tell her for me that I have ascertained that this N&Nébou girl is quite sickly, and along with her having as little as she has,(5) there is no likelihood of admitting her into the house.

As for the candidate from Caen, what you have told me about her is impressive. Nevertheless, I think it would be better to postpone receiving her until my return. However, I am leaving that to your own judgment, my dear daughter, and to your will in the matter. I ask only that you consider the girl well to determine whether she has the necessary qualifications, namely, a spirit of piety, humility, meekness, obedience and simplicity, a firm resolution to renounce her own will completely, zeal for the salvation of souls, a naturally good disposition, and a sound body. For I cannot overemphasize the importance of being careful about the girls whom we accept, and of painstakingly examining and questioning them. Over and above all else must we be on our guard against taking in those who are worldly, proud and vain.

May God forgive you for your over-anxiety on the subject of the greatest happiness that can befall the fair "Lily Bud" (6) and her mother. You have a very great reason for rejoicing, inasmuch as the noblest, richest and most powerful Lord in the world loves you so much that He wants you to give Him your daughter as His spouse. The Eagle(7) speaks in that fashion, advising you that Our Lord and His most holy Mother most assuredly are beholding her and calling her to be clothed in red and white, which are the colors of the heavenly Spouse, that is virginal purity and love, charity and other virtues which beautify Him -provided, however, she so desires. For, even though she is called to such a happy and exalted state, she must nevertheless enter it voluntarily. She will receive extraordinary help, but she will have to cooperate and prepare for it through an intense hatred for the world with its vanities, a great scorn of self and an ardent desire to endeavor to seek all possible means of pleasing Him Who desires to wed her. And it is your duty, my dear daughter, to help her, through your instructions, to adorn and beautify herself in order to be pleasing in the eyes of the Son of God and of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

As for yourself, Madame, you are advised . . . that the way of the Cross is the most pleasing to God, since Our Lord Jesus Christ chose it for Himself and for you; and that you should be happy that the Blessed Virgin, in speaking of you, calls you her daughter and says that you and your spiritual brother are doing a work which is very pleasing to her, that of caring for her daughters,(8) and that she looks upon you and loves You as if you were the superior, as if you were an inmate of her house and had made a vow to live there. Why should you have any further doubt? You are wrong if you give any consideration to these anxieties, for it is impossible, in view of all that we know, and as I have seen and heard for a month, to be able to entertain the slightest suspicion. Be at peace then, dearest daughter, always humbling yourself, however, and trying to do whatever you can on your own part. Do not be discouraged, though, when that fails you. Pray Our Lord and His most holy Mother to supply the deficiency, and they will surely do so.

We will write to Mr. de la Bonneville.

All here send their regards to you, as well as to your spiritual brother, whom I embrace most affectionately.

I beseech our lovely "Lily Bud" to hate the world more than the plague and hell itself, and to love Him Who beholds and loves her with such great strength, purity and generosity.

It is in Him that I am

Very humbly yours,
John Eudes,

To Fathers Richard Le Mesle and Thomas Vigeon.(1) To invite them to fulfill their promises to join the Congregation of Jesus and Mary. ( 2 )

Lion-sur-Mer,(3) September 23, 1646

I beseech you to hasten here, that you may consummate your sacrifice and dwell with your brethren who love you tenderly, and ardently desire you ad convivendum et ad commoriendum, in life and in death. For you know that no one who looks behind him after he has put his hand to the plow is fit for the kingdom of God. Come then, my beloved brethren, in the name of Our Lord and His most Holy Mother, and be faithful to Him Who calls you. Come without delay so that you may spend the rest of your lives together in the service of our good Master and conquer for Him souls which were redeemed at the cost of His blood. Take care lest the tempter ensnare you or the world seduce you. Close your ears to the voice of the serpent, that you may open them only to that of heaven.

Le Bec-Thomas, July 24, 1647

Here we are in Le Bec-Thomas, where there are great crowds of people and where there exists an extraordinary need for a mission. Grief ran high when we left Nogent-le-Rotrou(3) to come here. I had never before seen anything like it. So let us take courage, dear brother. The more crosses we encounter in God's work, the more abundant are His blessings.

Reverend and dearest Mother:

May Jesus, the Most Holy Heart of Mary, be the heart of our hearts for ever.

I am writing you this from Citry, at the house of our dear Brother de Renty,(4) where he gave us the medals you sent him, which we all received with inexpressible respect, joy and consolation. I thank you for them with all my heart, in the name of all my confreres. I can assure you, my dearest Mother, that we shall cherish them the rest of our lives. An accomplished and energetic soldier, he distinguished himself in the army by his courage and military talents as well as by his virtue and piety. In 1638 he relinquished his rank in the army in order to devote himself entirely to the poor and the sick. Baron de Renty was a faithful friend of St. John Eudes and followed him on many of his missions. From the village of Citry where he was lord of the manor Baron de Renty wrote to Father Olier, the founder of the Sulpicians, on June 10, 1648: "Father Eudes' labours here are blessed beyond belief." Jesus has impressed on our hearts for His saintly spouse, our dearest Sister Margaret. For my part, I honor and invoke her daily. We have already experienced various effects of her charity, both spiritual and temporal, about which our dear Brother de Renty can tell you more.

The moment we learned of her decease we made a vow to say forty Masses in honor of all that the Divine Infant Jesus is in her soul, in thanksgiving for all the graces He has granted her, for the accomplishment of all His intentions in her regard, in supplication for some special bond between her and ourselves and for participation in her grace and spirit, as well as to pray Him to obtain from God peace for us with several persons.

I implore you, my dear Mother, to grant us a union of prayers(5) with your holy Community. This can be done without displeasing anyone, for it shall remain strictly a secret. Do not refuse this favor, then, which I beg of you in the name of the Holy Infant Jesus and His most sacred Mother.

We are deeply indebted to you for the eight medals, but there are (twelve) brothers(6) in our little Community and I should like very much for the others to participate in this favor. I beseech you, therefore, to be mindful of this and to place in the hands of our dear Brother de Renty the fruits of your charity.

On our part we will pray daily to God for your blessed community, and you shall have a very special share of all the blessings it may please His divine bounty to bestow on our missions. And I in particular, Reverend and dearest Mother, will remain eternally, in the love of the Sacred Heart of Jesus and Mary,

Devotedly yours,

LETTER 25

To the Queen Mother.(1) The Saint begs her to remedy the religious evils prevalent in France by choosing good bishops.

Paris, September 2, 1648

Madame:

I cannot disregard the inspiration that God has pleased to send me while I was offering the holy sacrifice of the Mass for Your Majesty, at the time Of the riots in Paris.(2) This thought was to beseech you in all humility, in the name of Jesus Christ and His most Holy Mother, to use the power conferred on you to check the impetuous torrent of iniquity which today is creating a strange havoc in France, dragging an infinite number of souls down into hell, and constituting the sole cause of all the miseries in this Kingdom.

It is a deplorable thing, Madame, provocative of tears of blood, to witness the loss of so many souls which cost the precious blood of Jesus Christ, to notice that this evil is spreading, and to see that so few persons bother about it. When it is a question of some temporal interest of the kings and princes of this world, they stop at nothing. But the interests of the Sovereign Monarch are ignored. We exhaust ourselves on our missions by dint of crying out against the numerous disorders existing in France, which dishonor God in the extreme, and are the cause of the damnation of countless souls; and He gives us the grace to remedy some evils. But I am certain, Madame, that if Your Majesty were willing to use the power He has entrusted to you, you alone could do more toward abolishing the tyranny of the devil and establishing the reign of Jesus Christ than all the missionaries and preachers combined.

If Your Majesty wishes to know how this can be done, it will be easy to suggest the means, and still easier for you, with the help of Our Lord's grace, to put them into effect.

For the time being I shall mention only the most powerful of all means: that of giving the Church good bishops, because good bishops and priests would make for good Christians, and in that way the Church of France would soon change its aspect and resume its former splendor. This, Madame, is Your Majesty's weightiest obligation. It is the greatest service you can render to God and His Church, and it is of such importance as to be highly deserving of Your Majesty's personal attentions(3) since you will be the first to have to render an account of it to the Sovereign judge; an account all the more terrible in that it involves the salvation of an infinite number of souls whom He has committed to your care. For I hear the Holy Spirit crying out through the lips of St.

Paul: "If any man have not care of his own, and especially of those of his house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel." (4) So that at the hour of his death he shall be condemned by God as an apostate and punished more severely than pagans and infidels.

If Your Majesty renders this service to Jesus Christ and His Church, He will shower you with spiritual and temporal blessings. But should you neglect to do so, I solemnly declare to you, in the name and in behalf of the great living God, that all the sins committed in France, because of your having failed to provide the Church with good bishops, will be attributed to you as if you yourself had committed them; that you will have to suffer condemnation and punishment for them; and that all the souls who may consequently be lost and every drop of blood shed by Jesus Christ for their salvation will cry out for vengeance against you at the hour of death.

In conclusion, Madame, I can assure Your Majesty in all truthfulness that in this whole matter I have no interest or end in view other than the glory of my Master and the salvation of souls. He Who knows the depths of the heart knows that I speak the truth.(5) In Him and His most Holy Mother, Madame, I remain always with all possible respect Your Majesty's

Most humble, obedient and faithful subject and servant,

LETTER 26

Memorandum presented to the Queen Mother on several outstanding disorders in France and the means of correcting them.( 1 )

[About 1648] LIVE JESUS

The Queen is most humbly petitioned, in the name and for the love of Jesus Christ, the King of kings, and of the most Blessed Virgin Mary, His Mother, the Queen of the universe, to be so kind as to read this memorandum, carefully and in its entirety.

1. The principal feasts of the Church are singularly profaned by the fairs which are held on those days, as much because most people attending these fairs miss Mass, as because of the unbridled profanity, perjury, cheating, thievery, drunkenness and other sinful excesses which are usually a part of such occasions. This state of affairs is so prevalent that God is more dishonored on those days which should be used to praise and glorify Him than on all the other days of the year-a thing which is capable of bringing down a great curse on France.

Remedy.- It would be very easy to correct this evil by having these fairs transferred to two or three days after the feast days.

11. God is no less offended and dishonored on the feasts of the patron saints of each parish, almost everywhere in France, by the dances, games, drunkenness and other dissipations which occur.

It appears that there are no longer any days consecrated to God, but only those dedicated to the devil. There are no longer any Christian feasts, but only pagan ones, and ordinarily more sins are committed on those days than during all the rest of the year.

(1). According to Martine, Vie de R. P. Jean Eudes, 1. 4, n. 29, this Memorandum was accompanied by a letter which began as follows: "I have been deliberating for a long me, Madame, whether I might use the liberty of writing your Majesty in describe to you the things that are going on, and which are of very great consequence to the glory of God and the good of your subjects. I was afraid to write you these somewhat unpleasant facts which will perhaps not be easy to remedy. But over and above that, I was afraid of betraying my ministry if I failed to speak out, and of rendering myself responsible for all the evil if I did not call your attention to these abuses so that I might beseech you to use your power to correct them."

LETTERS AND SHORTER WORKS

Remedy.-Issue an edict, to be published throughout France, by which all these disorders would be forbidden under pain of heavy fines that could be donated to the Church or to the poor. Let it be accompanied by strict injunctions to the judges and officers of each place to be responsible for its enforcement.

III. During the missions we conducted in several places, we found that the churches were deserted on Sundays and feast days, and even on the principal solemnities, because the inhabitants of those places did not dare come there for fear of being apprehended by policemen and tax collectors who seize them even at the foot of the altar to drag them off to prison-an iniquitous thing not practised even among the Turks, but which is nevertheless so true that I myself can testify to it with positive proof. On the feast of Corpus Christi a certain parish priest had taken the Blessed Sacrament from the altar and was about to leave his church to begin the procession. His parishioners were preparing to follow him but they resolved, all of them, not to leave when they learned that tax collectors were waiting to arrest several of them upon their exit from the church. One man alone protested that he would not forsake the Blessed Sacrament; but the moment he set foot outside the church, the police seized him and led him off to prison. Is not such barbarity and impiety enough to bring the thunderbolts of divine justice crashing down on our heads?

Remedy.-Since God has established Sundays and feast days to be days of rest and holiness devoted to His service, see to it that His people may serve Him at least on those days in peace and security. To this end, forbid collectors, tax-gatherers, bailiffs and sergeants to disturb them at those times.

IV. The spirit of the world wages open warfare upon chastity, a virtue eminently pleasing to Our Lord and His most Holy Mother, and without which no one shall see the face of God. This evil spirit employs all his efforts, in this century of corruption, to banish chastity from France and bring about the triumph of its enemy instead. To accomplish this he uses several kinds of armies. Here are six of them furnished by France herself:

The first army is composed of the balls and dances which give rise to a thousand sins. That is why St. John Chrysostom says that dancing is

LETTERS AND SHORTER WORKS

"the abyss of hell," which swallows up a great number of wretched souls; and St. Ephrem and the other holy Fathers tell us that it is the work, invention and assembly of the devil. One of the holy councils of the Church assures us that there are not so many sins committed by tilling the soil on Sundays as by dancing.

The second army is made up of the love comedies which are even more dangerous than dancing, and cause the damnation of many souls.

The third is composed of the love stories which are veritable books of the devil, employed by him to cause countless numbers of sins to be committed. That is why the very learned and pious Gerson, chancellor of the celebrated University of Paris, was quite right in saying, with reference to a romantic novel written in his day, that if he knew that the author of that book had done no penance for it before dying, he would no more pray to God for him than for Judas. And notwithstanding, the whole of France is poisoned by such books, which are actually authorized by permission of our most Christian King.

The fourth army consists of the lascivious songs which are printed, sold and publicly sung in the streets—a thing that singularly corrupts the morals of our youth. If they printed or publicly sang something offensive to the King, who would tolerate that?

The fifth army is the luxury, vanity and worldliness of women in their dress, against which all the holy Doctors of the Church say such terrible things, calling it the ornament and pomp of the devil, and which these women, in baptism, solemnly promised God to renounce. If they do not fulfill these promises, they can never hope to be associated in any way with Him.

The sixth is made up of the indecent sculptures, paintings and pictures which are also the source of more sins than people imagine. Nevertheless, one sees almost nothing else in the offices, halls and inner rooms of many Christians, instead of the likenesses of Our Lord, His most holy Mother, the holy Apostles and the other saints.

Remedy.— If the King were even slightly concerned about or offended by all or one of these things, the means of curtailing them would easily be found. Now, it is certain that the great King of heaven is mightily offended by them. That is why the Queen, who has so much love for His Divine Majesty, will not lack the courage and ingenuity to annihilate all these poms of Satan, and to snatch from his hands these infernal weapons with which he aspires to banish chastity from France.

Would it not be very easy for her Majesty to lead the way in renouncing balls, comedies and all these other Satanic poms, according to the promise she made to God in baptism, so that, through her example, she might inspire horror for them in the hearts of all her subjects?

Would it not be easy for her to order the chancellor to refuse permission henceforth for the printing of love stories, and even to forbid printers and booksellers to print and sell such books?

Would it not be easy for her to prohibit indecent songs from being printed and sold, and from being sung in the streets?

We often see poor people in prison for having sold a little salt in order to gain a livelihood. They are sentenced to pay heavy fines, and being unable to do so, they rot there in jail and are forced to ask as a favor that, instead of paying the fine, they be flogged by the executioner. I can testify to this myself, having interceded a number of times to obtain this concession for some of them. All these penalties are imposed because it is a question of the King's interests! But how much more is the glory of the Sovereign Monarch concerned in the above mentioned disorders, and with what zeal, consequently, should those truly devoted to Him strive to remedy them!

V. I do not even speak here about the blasphemies, curses and imprecations which defile the present-day speech of the French people. I make no mention of the passion for dueling which sacrifices so many souls to hell and causes the greater number of our French noblemen to become martyrs of the devil. Sufficient edicts have been issued against these disorders, but the important thing is to enforce them, for God will not exonerate anyone for having made fine decrees if no attempt is made to have them carried out.

VI. The greatest evil existing in France today is heresy,(2) an infernal rage which precipitates countless souls into eternal damnation.

(2). The heresy in question is not only Calvinism but also Jansenism which was beginning to spread throughout France. Cf. Annales de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, Vol. 3. P. 187.

Remedy.-Make peace, so that the royal authority may then be devoted to ridding France of this plague.

Conclusion

If the Queen is wholeheartedly devoted to God's interests(3) and uses her power to remedy the above-mentioned disorders, He will crown her with incomprehensible glory and inexpressible happiness. But if she ignores them and fails to do all in her power to abolish them, all the sins proceeding from them will be laid to her and she will be fearfully punished for them. Divine Bounty forbid that such should be the case. Rather, let her be an instrument of God to promote the reign of Jesus Christ in the hearts of all the French people.

(3). Anne of Austria was undoubtedly a pious and well-meaning woman; because, far from being hurt by such remonstrances, we have the best authority for saying that she gave much good example in attending, and listening to the Saint's sermons whenever he preached in Paris, or in the vicinity of the royal palaces. ### LETTER 27

To Very Reverend Father Francis Bourgoing, Superior General of the Oratory.(1)

St. John Eudes sends him a memorandum in justification of his withdrawal from the Oratory(2)

Paris, September 10, 1648

JESUS, MARY, JOSEPH

Most Reverend and Honored Father:

I kneel at your feet in spirit and in heart to receive, may it please you, your holy blessing, and to implore you very humbly, in the name of Our Lord Jesus and His most holy Mother, to be so good as to read and consider, with your usual kindness and charity, the things I have set forth in writing on the sheet I am attaching to this letter. I have composed this paper to clarify many things of which I believe you are not informed. Perhaps when you understand them, God will give you different sentiments. And I assure you, most Reverend

(1). Father Francis Bourgoing (1611-1662) was elected superior general of the Oratory of Jesus on May 7, 1641. In this letter and in the memorandum that accompanied it St. John Eudes justified himself for withdrawing from the Oratory. He undoubtedly expected that the Superior General would take steps to stop the unjust hostility of some Oratorians who sought to bring about the dissolution of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary founded in 1643.

(2). The memorandum which St. John Eudes sent to Father Bourgoing has not come down to us. We are therefore unable to say with certainty why he withdrew from the Oratory Of Jesus. Some writers have stated that the Saint left the Congregation because it had come under the evil influence of Jansenism, which destroyed to a great extent the work of de Bérulle and de Condren. It is true that St. John Eudes was always a vigorous opponent of Jansenism. Nevertheless the opinion that he left the Oratory to escape dangerous associations is groundless. Cf. Boulay, op. cit., Vol. 1, P. 487. Most biographers attribute the Saint's determination to leave the Oratory to his desire to realize the paramount objective of the Congregation at its foundation, namely the sanctification of the clergy through proper training in seminaries. This purpose had been almost entirely neglected by the Oratorians after the death of de Bérulle. Cf. Boulay, ibid., Vol. 1, P. 530. A recent biographer, Father Emile Georges, C.J.M., in his biography written for the canonization of the Saint, rejects both opinions and holds that St. John Eudes left the Oratory to obey the will of God manifested to him by a number of providential events. Father, that I am stating them to you with the same sincerity and truth with which I should want to speak to my confessor if I were about to die and appear before the tribunal of the great God. if you deem it opportune to turn this paper over to your Council, and especially to Reverend Father Gibieuf, (3) I shall be very grateful to you, for I am most anxious for him to see it. And if, after that, you honor me with a reply, kindly address it to me at Caen, where I intend to return and where, as everywhere else, I wish to demonstrate, whenever the providence of God permits, that I am and shall remain all my life, with all possible affection and respect, very reverend and honored Father,

Your most obedient, grateful and devoted servant,

JOHN EUDES, priest.

LETTER 28(1)

To the Prioress(2) of the Carmelites at Beaune.

Caen, December 20, 1648

JESUS, MARY, JOSEPH

Very Reverend and dear Mother:

May Jesus, the most Holy Heart of Mary, be the heart of your heart for ever.

I cannot tell you what joy my confrères and I have derived from our possession of the precious medals you were kind enough to send us by our dear Brother de Renty, (2) and for which we very humbly thank you. But I implore you now to look with favor, my dearest Mother, upon this repetition of the supplication I made to you through him, that of giving us some special alliance and union with

in honor of the most intimate union of Our Infant Lord Jesus with His most Holy Mother. All our confreres ardently desire it, too, and add their supplications to mine. Please do not, therefore, refuse us this favor. As for ourselves, we gladly affirm in the sacred love of the most Holy Infant Jesus for His Amiable Mother: Omnia nostra vestra sunt. Now we shall wait and hope for the same from you. In conclusion, if anything singular has happened since the decease of our dearest Sister,(5) you will oblige us exceedingly by letting us know about it.

I am with all my heart, very reverend and dear Mother,

Devotedly yours,

LETTER 29

To Father John Baptist Saint Jure,(1) a Jesuit. Concerning Baron de Renty(2)

[1649]

We have seen him carried away by his zeal and fervor in the church at Citry, sweeping it, removing the sweepings with his hands and ringing the bells to summon the people to the exercises. We have noticed him with tears in his eyes on such occasions, and when I asked him the reason, he confessed that they were caused by the excessive joy he felt upon witnessing the emotion of so many persons who were showing definite signs of conversion, restoring the goods of others, becoming reconciled with their enemies, getting rid of bad books, forsaking the occasions of sin and beginning a new life.

(1). Father Saint Jure (1588- 1663) entered the Society of Jesus at the age of 16. He was an excellent spiritual advisor and the author of a number of devotional works, The Religious Man, Treatise on the Love and Knowledge of Jesus Christ, and The Life of Mr. de Renty. To Father Simon Mannoury. On the dependence of the Congregation with regard to bishops.

Our benefactors(1) are moving heaven and earth. They have told astounding things about us to his Lordship of Bayeux;(2) among others, that we wish to establish ourselves by prerogative from Rome, without bishops. He is angry about this and determined not to tolerate it. I have written him to refute this calumny.

[1649]

I thank you with all my heart for your charitable letters. Reading them brought tears to my eyes, for they reveal the very sincere and cordial charity that Our Lord has given you toward me, and the very deep concern you have about my troubles. Let me assure you, too, my dearest brother, that there is no one in this world who loves you as much as I do. You are the only one of all our good confrères to console me in this trial, which is the hardest I have ever borne in my whole life.'

To One of His Sons Conducting a Mission in Gatteville.(1)On submission to the Will of God.*

[Paris, June 1650]

I had hoped to join you soon in the Gatteville mission, but Our Lord does not find me worthy of it and is keeping me here in my Paris purgatory for my sins longer than I had anticipated. Not that I wish it to be otherwise, for, thanks to His mercy, He gives me the grace to desire nothing in this world save to do His most holy will. And to tell you the truth, everywhere that I find His will, there I am in my element and paradise. Therefore Paris, which used to be my purgatory, is now my paradise, because I see clearly that the divine will has brought me here and is detaining me yet for a few days ... It makes no difference to me where I am nor what I do, provided I am serving my God and accomplishing His holy will. That is all we have to do in this world, and therein should we find all our happiness.

Our affairs are going well, thank God. Get ready now for three important missions at Bernay (3) Pontoise (4) and Saint Sulpice. (5) I implore Our Lord and His most holy Mother to prepare us for the accomplishment of their most holy wills. Once again, in the sacred love of their most loving Heart, do I embrace all of you, including our dear brethren Fathers Ameline, (6) Delaunay, (7) Paillot (8) and the others with you. ## LETTER 34

Paris, July 5, 1650(2)

J. M. J.

My dearest Sisters:

May Jesus, the most Holy Heart of Mary, be the life and joy of our hearts for ever.(3)

I was exceedingly happy to receive your beautiful and charitable letter, for which I thank you a thousand times. I trust that the Communion you offered to God for my intention, on the feast of St. John,(4) will be profitable to you as well as me, since all my intentions have no end save the sanctification of your souls and the establishment of the reign of God in your hearts. It is that for which we must unceasingly strive; all our happiness lies therein, and it alone should constitute our joy.

Speaking of joys, I am writing you this on the fifth of July, which is the feast of the Joys of Our Blessed Lady, our good Mother. If you have overlooked it, I am asking our dear Mother Superior to appoint another day on which you may observe this feast, and to permit all of you to receive Holy Communion, which you must offer to God for these five intentions:

1. In thanksgiving to the most holy Trinity for all the joys bestowed by It upon the Blessed Virgin, on earth as well as in heaven.

(1). This feast is still celebrated on July 5th by the Eudists and the Religious of Our Lady of Charity.

(2). This letter was written from Paris where St. John Eudes had gone with Father Mannoury to obtain from Bishop Molé of Bayeux the approbation for Our Lady of Charity. This was granted on February 8, 1651.

(3). St. John Eudes places this salutation at the head of most of his letters to his communities until 1660 when he begins to use "May the Divine Will Be Our Guide in All Things." See Letter 87

(4). We know that the Saint had received the name of John in baptism. The above letter shows that the sisters at Caen had sent him their feast day greetings on the feast of St. John the Baptist, June 24. Boulay thinks that John Eudes's patron saint was the Apostle St. John. Cf. Boulay, ibid., Vol. 1, p. 15.

2. In satisfaction and reparation for the sorrows and griefs she suffered during her life on earth, because of our sins.

3. For the increase and extension of her joys in heaven.

4. To ask God for the grace to scorn and detest all the false joys of this world.

5. To ask also for the grace to find all our joy in doing His most amiable will everywhere and in all things, and in carrying the Cross with our most adorable Saviour. For truly, my dearest Sisters, there is no real cause for joy on earth other than this: to perform the will of God and to be despised and crucified with Jesus Christ. Oh, would that we shared the sentiments of St. John of the Cross! When Our Lord asked him what he desired for the services he had rendered Him, he made this reply: "Lord, I ask nothing of Thee save to suffer and be despised for Thy sake." It was indeed the Holy Spirit Who inspired him to ask for the greatest blessing of this life.

After you have received Communion for these intentions, I pray you, my dear Sisters, to think seriously, each one to yourself, about what you can do to increase the joys of the most precious Virgin Mary.

In conclusion, we are overlooking nothing, Father Mannoury and I, that can be done for your house, or rather for the house of Our Lord and His most holy Mother. But the affairs of God are transacted only with much patience and resignation. I trust, however, that they will soon be settled, and that the outcome will be satisfactory to all of us. This letter is intended both for the Mother and her daughters, whom I greet one and all.

I pray you also to contact our dearest brethren,<sup>(5)</sup> so that, if they have forgotten to observe the feast of the joys of Our Blessed Lady, they may atone for their omission, for I have not the leisure just now to write them.

I am with all my heart, my dearest Sisters,

Devotedly yours,
JOHN EUDES, missionary priest.

LETTER 35

To the Missionaries at Gatteville. On the sorrow he feels on being separated from them, and on the Divine Will which he invites them to consider as their mother.

Paris, July 9, 1650 J. M. J.

My dearest brethren, whom I embrace with deepest affection, in visceribus Christi:

Here it is already the ninth of July and there is no prospect of my being able to leave Paris for two weeks yet. For that reason I am giving up the hope I had of seeing you at the mission in Gatteville. I can assure you that this mortification is one of the hardest I have had to bear for a long time, for it seems to me that I am separated not only from my own heart and body, but from something still dearer to me, since in truth I love you more, collectively and individually, than my inmost parts. I believe that I speak without exaggeration and in all sincerity.

The most adorable Will of God, which is our most bountiful mother, has ordained this separation; may it be for ever blessed for having done so! I call it our godmother, since from it we have received our being and life, that of nature as well as of grace. It must govern us, and we must obey it and abandon ourselves with the utmost confidence to its guidance, for it has a truly maternal love for us! That is why I urge, my beloved brethren, that we regard, honor and love God's Will as our most amiable mother, and that our principal devotion be to conceive a strong affection of mind and heart for it, conform faithfully to it in all things, and obey all its orders "with a great heart and a willing mind." Let us find all our glory and happiness therein and regard all else as pure folly.

"We can do nothing," says St. Paul, "against the truth: but for the truth." May God grant us so many graces that we may truthfully say:

(2). Cor 13, 8.

LETTERS AND SHORTER WORKS

"We can do nothing against the will of God, but for the will of God." We can do nothing, that is, we cannot think, say nor do anything contrary to the divine will, but we are strong and powerful to obey Him in all things.

Furthermore, when I call the divine will our mother, that does not imply that the most Blessed Virgin is not our Mother too, for the divine will so fills, possesses and animates her that it is like her soul, her mind, her heart and life, in such a way that she is but the same thing, if one may so express it, as the divine will itself. Thus the most precious Virgin is our Mother, and the divine will is also our mother. And nevertheless, they are not two mothers but one, to whom I offer and abandon myself with all my heart, along with my dearest brethren, that she may live and reign within us, carrying out all her designs, now and for ever, in her own way rather than in ours. Say amen, my beloved brethren, but say it with deep sincerity, not merely with your lips but much more with your works. To this end, I entreat you to practise faithfully what I wrote you in my last letter, which I pray you to re-read together if you still have it.

To the Priests of the Seminary at Caen. The Saint encourages them during the persecution directed against them by the bishop of Bayeux, His Lordship Edward Molé, who was seeking to interdict their chapel( 1 )

Coutances, November 6, 1650

I hope that this storm will pass and that Our Lord will salvage great good from it. His Lordship of Coutances(2) is showing me extraordinary charity and cordiality. I shall not tell you the rest; you will see it in its effects(3) Let us continue to humble ourselves before God and beg Him

I shall remain for a few days yet, no longer on account of the business which has kept me here until now, but for another matter of which I will tell you when I see you, and which I ask you to recommend to Our Lord and His holy Mother.

LETTER 37

To Father Thomas Manchon(1) at the Seminary in Caen. The course to follow if the seminary chapel is interdicted.

[Coutances, autumn of 1650]

Do not be astonished, my dear brother; it is a storm that will pass. If they intimate anything to you, make no reply but tell them that in my absence you have nothing to say until my return. However, if they order you to close the chapel, do so, and say your Masses wherever you can. Give encouragement to our brethren and exhort them to humble themselves in the sight of God, putting all their hope in Him and His most holy Mother, and spending as much time as possible before the Blessed Sacrament. Send some of them to Our Lady of Deliverance.(2)

With regard to the young man about whom you wrote me, send him to Coutances,(2) my dearest brother, provided he is highly resolved to renounce his own will completely, to be admonished about his shortcomings, and to live and die in the Congregation.

(1). The name given to the formative years in the Congregation of Jesus and Mary. According to the original rules as laid down by the Saint the probation was to last three years and three months in memory of three years and three months that the Apostles and Disciples lived with Our Lord before being incorporated into His apostolic family on Pentecost Sunday. The first year in the Congregation of Jesus and Mary is devoted to prayer and spiritual training and corresponds to the novitiate in other religious orders. The remaining years are spent in the study of philosophy and theology. In recent years the probation has been changed to four years. After completing his probation the candidate is incorporated into the Congregation by virtue of the perpetual promises that he takes to obey his superiors and the rules of the Order.

She called her nurse and requested her to kneel near the bed, reciting by heart the salutation to the most holy Heart of the Mother of God, Ave Cor sanctissimum, (4) printed in a little book. To the First Religious of Our Lady of Charity. The Saint announces the signing of the letters of establishment for the Order. He exhorts them to have true devotion to the most Holy Heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Paris, February 11, 1651 J. M. J.

My dearest daughters;

May Jesus, the most Holy Heart of Mary, be our life and our joy for ever.

I have wonderful news for you. But first, kneel down to receive it, not as coming from me, but from our adorable Jesus and His most worthy Mother.

At last, after several years of patient waiting, the letters for your establishment were signed by his Lordship of Bayeux (1) last Wednesday, (1). Edward Molé. See Letter 30, note 2.

LETTERS AND SHORTER WORKS

February 8th, the feast of the Most Holy Heart of the Blessed Virgin and the contract of foundation was also signed by him and by Mr. and Madame de Langrie. (2) So you are now true daughters of the Heart of the Queen of heaven, and obliged, in a special manner, to honor and love her most amiable Heart, to celebrate its feast with special devotion, to have but one heart with her and with one another, and to engrave on your own hearts a perfect likeness of the love, charity, obedience, humility, meekness, zeal for the salvation of souls and other virtues which reign in her Heart, so that you may thus conform to the Heart of her Son.

No longer need you be afraid. Your Community and Order are founded upon the Holy Heart of the sovereign Empress of the universe, and this was accomplished not through the efforts of men but by a special mandate from heaven. For last Tuesday his Lordship of Bayeux, after several previous delays and difficulties, had again postponed the affair to Friday; then on the very same day he announced that it would take place on Wednesday, which it did. Eternal thanks be rendered to the most Holy Trinity, Our Lord Jesus Christ, His most precious Mother and all the angels and saints who interceded in this great work, and may all who cooperated in it in any way whatsoever be for ever blessed with the choicest blessings of heaven.

In thanksgiving, my dearest daughters, it is my opinion that you should do the following things: Recite every day for a week, in a body, the Te Deum, the Ave Cor sanctissimum, and each day one of the eight litanies of the most Holy Heart of the Blessed Virgin, contained at the end of the book of devotion<sup>(3)</sup> to this same Heart. Then after this prayer, recite the litanies of St. Joseph, St. Gabriel, the Holy Guardian Angels, and the prayer to all the saints which is used on All Saints Day.

In addition, you should receive thirty-four Communion, at your

It was mainly through the influence of John Leroux, Seigneur de Langrie, Royal Counsellor, President of the Rouen Parliament, that St. John Eudes obtained the contract of foundation from Bishop Molé on February 8, 1651. Mr. de Langrie donated 10,000 livres to the monastery, and Madame de Langrie in recognition of the great service she had rendered the Order was given the privileges and rights of foundress. Cf. convenience, in thanksgiving to the most Holy Trinity, to Jesus, to the most holy Heart of His glorious Mother, to the angels and saints, and for his Lordship of Bayeux, your founders and benefactors, and all who have contributed to the success of this affair.

Furthermore, it seems to me that you ought to write four letters of thanks: 1. To his Lordship of Bayeux; 2. To President de Langrie; 3. To Madame de Langrie; 4. To Madame de la Porte,<sup>(4)</sup> to whom you are greatly indebted. I am asking our dear Sister Mary of St. Francis Xavier<sup>(5)</sup> to write these four letters. Above all, I implore you to begin now in good earnest to live as true daughters of the most Holy Heart of the Mother of God.

It is in the sacred love of this Heart that I am and will ever be, my dearest daughters,

Devotedly yours,
JOHN EUDES, missionary priest.

P. S. Wait until Father Mannoury and Mr. de Langrie arrive in Caen before you sing a solemn Te Deum, but while you are waiting do not neglect to recite it, as I mentioned in this letter.

(4). Madame de la Porte, whose husband was a Councillor of the Rouen Parliament, accompanied Mr. and Madame de Langrie when they visited Bishop Molé in Paris to request the approval of the Monastery of Our Lady of Charity of Caen. See Letter 21, note and if it were left to me, you would already have done so. But first you must have some Sisters with you, and you shall have them soon. Therefore be patient until then, my dearest daughter, and prepare yourself meanwhile for this holy act.

I beg Our Lord and His most Holy Mother to help you with your preparation, and to fashion you entirely after their own Heart. It is in the love of this most holy Heart that I remain, both to you, my beloved daughter, and to all my dearest daughters,

Devotedly yours,

To Father Simon Mannoury, in Coutances. Regarding a postulant admitted to probation.

(Corbeil,(') April or May 1651)

You will take care to form him according to the spirit of Our Lord, which is a spirit of detachment and renunciation of oneself and all things; a spirit of obedience and abandonment to the divine will, manifested to us by the rules of the Gospel and the regulations of our Congregation, which are simply an expression of the evangelical maxims, and by the behavior of those who act in God's stead; a spirit of pure love for God which inclines us to do nothing save only to please Him; a spirit of singular devotion to Jesus and Mary, to the mysteries of their lives, and to all the saints most closely associated with them; a spirit of scorn and aversion for the world, which is the body of Satan, and of all that the world loves; a spirit of love for the Cross of Jesus, that is, for scorn, poverty and sorrow; a spirit of hatred and horror for every kind of sin, which should incite us to wage war on it unceasingly and destroy it in ourselves and others; a spirit of humility, contempt, hatred and annihilation of self, as indicated in these words from the Imitation of Christ: "Love to be unknown and to be esteemed as nothing; (2) spirit of cordial and fraternal charity toward our neighbor, especially toward those of our Congregation and the poor, and of zeal for the salvation of souls; a spirit of virtue, in order to love all the virtues and practise them steadfastly in the spirit of Jesus, as is stated in the book The Kingdom of Jesus,<sup>(3)</sup> the reading and practice of which you should strongly recommend to those under your direction; a spirit of love, esteem and respect for the Church and all that pertains to it, as well as for all the religious Orders in the Church, for we should have a Catholic, that is to say, a universal, spirit-one that embraces, honors and loves all that is of God, for the sake of God; and we should hate and despise only sin and ourselves; finally, a spirit of prayer and piety, that we may perform all our actions in the spirit, that is, in the dispositions which are those of Our Lord.

Study these dispositions as carefully as possible, with the grace of Our Lord, and impart them to others by your example, prayers, discourses and meditations, readings and other exercises. Above all, implore God to grant you the spirit of meekness and watch yourself particularly on this point, that you may make yourself loved, and win hearts in which you may afterwards instil what God may grant you for that purpose.

To Father Simon Mannoury, in Coutances. On the mission at Corbeil.

Corbeil, May 18, 1651.

All our brethren here in Corbeil send affectionate greetings to their brethren in Coutances. Our dear brother Father Jourdan<sup>(1)</sup> is ill with a fever. We are here among a "stiffnecked" people but the mission is bound to convert some of them.

(1). Father Peter Jourdan (1607-1661) was One Of the first five Eudists. He was a zealous missionary and took part in the great mission given in Paris at St. Germain-des-Prés in 1661. ### LETTER 44

June 2, 1651

We are leaving tomorrow for Bernay, to begin the mission there on Sunday. It seems to me that it will be a good thing for Father Saché<sup>(2)</sup> to come on this mission, but first have him make a three-day retreat.

(1). See Letter 33, nov 3.

(2). Father Stephen Saché (1615-1678) was born at Aseville, in the diocese of Coutances, Normandy, in 1615. He entered the Congregation of Jesus and Mary in 1650. An intelligent and cultured priest, Father Saché won the hearts of all by his simple and pleasing personality. For twenty years he was assistant superior of the Seminary and College of Lisieux. ## LETTER 45 wrote you to send us Father Sache, but you have made no reply to me about it. This is a mission which begins where the others end, and we have a great dearth of workers for it. I was afraid that we should not have any crosses on this occasion, but God has provided, for our dear brother Father de Montaigu (1) has been ill since Sunday morning with a continuous fever, and Father Jourdan is kept busy taking care of him. Hurry and send us Father Sache. Could you do without Father Le Mesle(2) so that he could come to help us? I am leaving it in your hands. Write to the pastor of St. Gervais(3) and importune him to send us some of his good workers for this mission. Ask him, however, not to send any except those whom we have already seen.

To Father Simon Mannoury. The Saint asks him for helpers for the mission at Bernay.

(1). Father John Baptist de Montaigu (1610-1681) met St. John Eudes at Autun in 1647 and asked the Saint to be admitted into the Congregation of Jesus and Mary. In addition to his missionary activities Father de Montaigu was for eight years superior of the Seminary of Coutances. He died at the Rouen Seminary in 1681. Les Fleurs de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, Vol, 1, p. 61.

LETTER 46

(1)To Father Simon Mannoury, in Paris. On the opportuneness for a mission in Coutances, and the concessions to be made to His Lordship Edward Molé, the Bishop of Bayeux.

(Summer of 1651)

I have written to his Lordship the Bishop of Coutances(2) to ask for his approval of our giving a mission in Coutances at this time. Press him for a reply so that we may begin as soon as possible, for there are a good many persons who desire this work, and it would be fitting for us to render this service to God and to the public at the outset of our establishment there . . .

I beg of you not to leave Paris until you have used to advantage, as much as possible, all the means that the providence of God has placed and will place at your disposal to win over his Lordship the Bishop of Bayeux and his father.(3) Concede to his Lordship everything he wishes except the authority to appoint the superior of the seminary; he must be persuaded to consent to his election by the Community.

(1). Father Mannoury had gone to Paris on business, probably to request the Bishop of Bayeux to lift the interdict on the chapel of the Caen Seminary.

LETTER 47

To His Niece, Mary Herson,(1)afterwards Sister Mary of the Nativity.

On the dispositions with which she should take the veil.

September 3, 1651

My dearest niece and daughter in Our Lord Jesus Christ:

With all my heart do I bless our most amiable Saviour for the good sentiments He gave you during your retreat, and I beseech Him to grant you the grace to be faithful to Him by using them well, as He wishes you to do.

It is a mortification for both of us that I shall not be present at the ceremony of your clothing, but it will be better that way and greater blessings will result, since it is quite certain that the more crosses there are in the affairs of God, the more advantageous it is for us. But that will not prevent my being present in mind and heart in order to supplicate Our Lord and His most Holy Mother to use their own holy hands to divest you of yourself and all earthly things, that you may be clothed instead with their spirit and virtue.

On your part, there are eight things you must do:

The first is to enter into an ardent desire of wholly renouncing yourself and everything that is not God, and of giving yourself perfectly to Our Lord, that He may command of you all that is pleasing to Him, without reservation.

The second is to offer yourself to the holy Virgin with a fervent desire to serve, honor and imitate her as your dearest Mother, and to cultivate a special devotion to her most amiable Heart.

The third is to consecrate yourself to the Son and the Mother, that you may occupy yourself according to their most holy will with the salvation of lost souls who are so precious to them.

(1) She was the eldest daughter of the Saint's sister and was born on March 5, 1629. At the age of twelve she entered the Monastery of Our Lady of Charity of Caen. Nine years later, on September 8, 1651 she took the habit and received the name of Mary of the Nativity. She became superior of the Community and did much to spread the Order and in establish regular observance. She worked with the ecclesiastical superior, Father Legrand, parish priest of St. Julian of Caen, at the revision of the Constitutions and at the composition of the Custom-Book. She died on June 4, 1709 at the age of eighty-five. Cf. Ory, The origin of the Order of Our Lady of Charity, pp. 65, 194, 269.

The fourth is to protest to Our Lord that you wish to do all these things, particularly on the feast of the Nativity of the most Blessed Virgin Mary, not for the sake of rewards from heaven, nor earthly merits and consolations, but purely for His love and glory, and to accomplish His most adorable will.

The fifth is to remember that you are to perform an act which has previously been performed in such a holy manner by many saintly religious of both sexes, and to unite yourself to their holy dispositions, asking them to grant you a share in them.

The sixth is to pray to St. Joseph, St. Gabriel, your guardian angel, the holy guardian angels of your house, and all the saints who had a particular zeal for the salvation of lost souls, to help you perform this act.

The seventh and principal one is to humble yourself profoundly at the sight of your own unworthiness, wretchedness and lowliness, and earnestly to beseech the Blessed Virgin to obtain for you from her Son the grace to regard and treat yourself always as the lowliest of anyone in the house, and to be willing to be regarded and treated as such by others. That, my dear daughter, is what I particularly recommend to you; implant it so deeply in your heart that it may never escape, and in that way you will truly be one of the daughters of the Mother of love and humility.

The eighth is that, after you have done everything possible on your part to prepare yourself for so great an act, you place no reliance upon it and depend in nowise for support upon your own efforts and preparations, but that you offer and give yourself to Jesus and Mary, imploring them to do for you all that you yourself should do, and to prepare you themselves in their own way and according to their most holy will.

Lastly, all the sentiments of our good Mother are so precious to me that I can wish only what she wishes. Hence I am very pleased that you will bear the name of the Nativity of the most Blessed Virgin, so that you may regard that feast as the day of your rebirth into a whole new life--a day on which you may begin to live, with the Mother of sweet love, a life in imitation of hers.

Ask our good Mother to look to the needs of each of the Sisters, as well as to whatever else may be expedient, and to have these purchases made, and I will gladly settle for them.

I am writing to my nephew, your brother,(2) that I am glad he is coming, but I shall not be able to see him, for I cannot come out of seclusion and it would be inopportune for him to come here. Do not forget to ask him how he is behaving whether he goes frequently to confession and to a good and regular confessor, whether he kneels to say his morning and evening prayers, and whether he goes to catechism instructions and sermons. Give him this good advice: 1. To fear offending God above all else; 2. To live in peace and charity with everyone; 3. Never to lie or swear when buying and selling; 4. To place all his trust in God; 5. To have devotion to the Blessed Virgin and St. Joseph.

I greet our dearest Mother and thank her with my whole heart for all her care and trouble in your behalf, and I beseech Our Lord and His most holy Mother to thank her for both of us. I also send greetings to all our dearest Sisters and recommend myself to their prayers. I remain, in the sacred love of the most holy Heart of Jesus and Mary, my dearest niece and daughter in Our Lord,

Devotedly yours,
JOHN EUDES, missionary priest.

P. S. Do not forget to ask your brother for news of your little sister(3) -how she is getting along, and how much he could give her if she wished to become a religious.

(2). John Herson.

(3). France Herson entered the Order of Our Lady of Charity and made her profession as a lay sister on July 25, 1662. She took the name of Sister Mary of St. Francis.

LETTER 48

To Mother Margaret Frances Patin.(1) On various matters.

(1651) My very dear and good Mother:

May Jesus, the most holy Heart of Mary, be ours for ever.

It is always a great pleasure for me to receive letters from you, but even if you did not write me at all, I could never doubt your most cordial charity toward me, any more than your participation, in company with our dear Sisters, in my small afflictions. I thank you with all sincerity, my dear . est Mother, and beseech you to obtain for me from Our Lord the grace to bear them in His spirit.

I entrusted your letter for his Lordship of Bayeux to Mr. Le Tardif, who is well acquainted with the matter, and who can say whatever is necessary and fitting. He offered of his own accord to deliver it. Pray God to bless this affair, and to let His most adorable will be done in all things.

I am delighted that our dear Sisters are travelling so happily and courageously along the paths of heaven through the practice of sound virtues. I beseech them always to continue their advancement, especially in humility, obedience and mutual charity, and in the love of our most amiable Jesus and His most worthy Mother. It is in this same love that I send greetings to one and all, and that I am with all my heart, my dearest Mother,

Devotedly yours,

JOHN EUDES, missionary priest.

(1). In 1644 St. John Eudes asked the Visitation Nuns of Caen to assist him in the training of the first sisters of Our Lady of Charity until his spiritual daughters would be able to choose from among themselves a sister qualified to govern them. On August 10, 1644, Mother Margaret Frances Patin, a Visitation Nun, became superior of the Refuge of Caen. For twenty years she guided the nascent community and trained the young sisters that were destined to govern the order. Mother Patin died the death of a saint on October 31, 1668. Cf. ## LETTER 49

To Mother Margaret Frances Patin, Superior of Our Lady of Charity. The Saint speaks to her of Sister Mary des Vallées and gives her some spiritual advice.

(January 1652)

My dearest Mother, whom I love most cordially in the sacred love of the most holy Heart of Jesus and Mary:

May they be the heart of our hearts for ever.

Our dear Timothy(1) is now undergoing extraordinary sufferings, and it is therefore impossible to speak with her about anything. As soon as she has returned to her normal state, I will read her your letter, and if she gives me any message for you, I will not fail to convey it to you. However, I can assure you, my dearest Mother, that she loves you deeply and sincerely, and that you and all your dear Community have a very special place in her heart.

As for your own condition, after I had recommended you to Our Lord and given myself to Him, that He might direct me what to tell you, this is what came to my mind.

It is true, my dear Mother, that the miseries of the children of Adam are infinitely great beyond the power of speech or thought, for we bear within ourselves two unfathomable abysses of wretchedness: the first is the abyss of our nothingness, and the second is that of sin. God permits you, or rather He gives you the special grace, to see in yourself some portion of these two inexhaustible sources of miseries, and for two reasons:

First of all, He desires you to use this means to close all the approaches of your heart to that accursed vanity which so singularly ravages many souls who profess to be virtuous and pious, and who even aspire to perfection; and which, alas! precipitates many into the fires of hell. Then too, it is to preserve, strengthen and increase within you the most essential of all virtues, that of humility, which shapes the souls it possesses according to the Heart of Our Lord and His most Holy Mother.

Secondly, it is to render you conformable to our most adorable Master, Who is Jesus. According to the testimony of the Prophet Jeremias, He says this of Himself: I am the man that see my poverty."(2) For His humanity perceived perfectly and clearly that of itself it was nothing, and that, having sprung from nothingness and from Adam, it would have been born in original sin and consequently would have been capable of falling into all the miseries of the children of Adam if it had not been preserved by the great miracle of the hypostatic union. It penetrated even to the depths of these two abysses of nothingness and sin, a sight which caused Our Lord the most profound and inconceivable humiliation, as well as inexpressible pain.

Adore that divine humanity in this state, my dearest Mother. Thank Our Lord for having deigned to assume it for love of you. Give your~ self to it so that you may accompany it on whatever road it may please to take you. Offer it your little troubles in thanksgiving for His immense trials. Pray it to make good use of them in your name. Finally, abandon yourself with your whole heart to Divine Providence, that He may lead you wherever He will and in His own way. On your part, remain always humble and submissive to the guidance of God, but take care never to become discouraged; rejoice, rather, and give thanks to Our Lord for the graces He grants you. For I repeat, my dearest Mother, what I perceive quite clearly to be true, that your present state, as you describe it to me, is a great gift from God. "Blessed is he," says St. Paul, "that condemneth not himself in that which he alloweth."(3) For it frequently happens that, when one feels and believes himself to be very good, he is not good; and when he thinks himself quite wicked, it is then that he is most worthy in the eyes of God. But let us abandon ourselves entirely to the judgment, will and guidance of Him Who knows and loves us infinitely more than we ourselves do. Let us dwell in the house of our nothingness and await with patience, humility, simplicity and submission Him Who desires only nothingness as the material and substance with which to do whatever is pleasing to Him.

With my whole heart do I deliver you, my dearest Mother, to His omnipotent bounty, beseeching Him to annihilate you so completely that He may be all things in you. Please offer the same prayer for me.

Lastly, I send affectionate greetings to all our dear Sisters, imploring them not to fail to visit faithfully the most lovable infant Jesus every day during these forty days that commemorate His sojourn in the stable of Bethlehem, that they may adore, praise and love Him, give themselves to Him, and supplicate Him to grant them the spirit of His divine childhood, which is a spirit of innocence, humility, poverty, simplicity, obedience and charity. They should also call upon His most worthy Mother to thank her, give themselves to her and ask her to obtain for them this same spirit of her dearest Son. Then let them offer proportionate supplications to St. Joseph for the same intentions.

Father de Montaigu(4) told me that Mr. de Taillefer's bond(5) must be ratified by his sons-in-law, and that so far he has taken all the steps to have this done and will give it his whole attention, but that we must wait until Mr. de Taillefer comes here. However, if you desire him to return it to you, he will do so.

I will convey to Timothy, as well as I can, everything indicated in your letter.

I remain with all my heart, in Jesus and Mary, my dearest Mother,

Devotedly yours,

JOHN EUDES, missionary priest.

LETTER 50

To the Queen Regent.(1) On the appointment of the bishop of Bayeux.

(1653) Madame:

Having learned that the abbe de Sainte Croix(2) has declined the Bishopric of Bayeux, I should deem myself extremely culpable if I did not follow the advice given me by several great servants of God and point out to Your Majesty that, from time immemorial, no episcopal visitation has been made by the bishop in this diocese; that this negligence has produced disorders and profanations of greater duration than would have been caused had armies inimical to the Christian name passed through it a number of times. This voluntary resignation of such a wealthy benefice seems to be a warning to Your Majesty that God, Who has numbered even the hairs of our heads, does not permit such an extraordinary thing in these miserable times of corruption (when men do not scruple to renounce the benefice of eternity to acquire or keep one far less valuable than the bishopric of Bayeux), save with the intention of giving Your Majesty an opportunity to render justice to the blood of His Son Who, by shedding it to the last drop, acquired the domain and ownership of all the souls in this diocese, with a much better and indisputably more just claim than those who buy slaves at the cost of money, over whom they nevertheless have absolute power.

These considerations, Madame, incomparably more important than those which determine the government of the greatest monarchies on earth, demand of Your Majesty a saint as bishop of this diocese. You are obliged by the Holy Council of Trent, under pain of mortal sin, to nominate to all the benefices which have charge of souls, not merely those whom Your Majesty considers worthy, that is to say, saints, but rather the worthiest, that is, the greatest saints. All the more, Madame, are you obliged to do so in the case of a diocese as neglected as the one to which I refer, whose needs are infinitely greater than I can describe to Your Majesty. I am acquainted with these conditions through the numerous missions I have had the privilege of conducting in many of the localities there, and through the sighs and complaints which are wrung from many souls moved by zeal for the glory of God, during a long succession of years, over such deplorable conditions. This knowledge, coupled with my ardent desire to see showered upon this State<sup>(3)</sup> and the sacred person of Your Majesty as many blessings as the misfortunes that a justly provoked heaven seems to be preparing for us, has given me the courage to cast myself at Your Majesty's feet, in the name of all the people of this diocese, even the least and unworthiest of them, to try to obtain from you, in your kindness, the consent to a request so important to the glory of God, so necessary to the salvation of the souls for whom He delivered His own Son to death, and to a death on the Cross, and so capable of loading Your Majesty and the sacred person of our incomparable Monarch, that admirable God-given one, with all sorts of prosperity. It would atone in one respect for the abuse to His glory in this diocese, while in other respects His enemies and yours, who are those of the State, are committing outrages against Him which can be expiated only in the fires of hell.

I implore God in His goodness, of which you will one day partake, Madame, to shower upon Your Majesty the plenitude of His graces necessary to lead you to the heavenly land.

LETTER 51

To the Priests of the Seminary at Coutances. On the reopening of the chapel<sup>(1)</sup> of the Caen seminary.

Caen, May 15, 1653 J. M. J.

My dearest and beloved brethren:

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort; who comforteth us in all our tribulation." Alleluia! alleluia!

Our chapel is open and we are celebrating Mass in it.

Alleluia! alleluia! alleluia!

It was not opened until last Tuesday, but the affair was concluded and signed on Saturday, the feast of the Apparition of Our Risen Savior to His Most Holy Mother.

Alleluia! alleluia! alleluia!

It is a stroke of the incomparable power and ineffable goodness of our most bountiful Mother, who consented to defer the conclusion of this matter to the day of her greatest joy on earth, and who did so when we were no longer giving it much thought, after we and our friends had exerted all our efforts in vain.

Alleluia! alleluia! alleluia!

This Mother of mercy condescended to avail herself of the good Mother Superior of the Religious of Mercy in Paris<sup>(3)</sup> to grant us this favor in order to show us that it was a result of her boundless mercy, and that we are the Missionaries of Divine Mercy sent by the compassionate Father to distribute the treasures of His mercy to the wretched, that is, to sinners, and to deal with them in a spirit of mercy, compassion and meekness.

Alleluia! alleluia! alleluia! alleluia! alleluia!

How shall we repay this amiable Mother? And how shall we repay her beloved Son, through Whom the heavenly Father gives us all things? How shall we repay this divine Father Who is the primary source of all good?

Let all the angels and saints bless Jesus and Mary for evermore! May Jesus and Mary, together with the angels and saints, praise and glorify the eternal Father! May all the powers and perfections of the Divinity infinitely magnify the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit: "Let the mercies of the Lord give glory to him: and his wonderful works to the children of men."<sup>(4)</sup> But that is not all; I implore you, my dear brethren:

1. In memory of and in thanksgiving for the infinite favor Our Lord has granted us, through the intercession of the Mother of mercy, in coming to visit and comfort us by His divine presence in the Blessed Sacrament, that we resolve to celebrate annually the feast of His apparition to His divine Mother and His first visit to her after the Resurrection.

2. All of you say a votive Mass in honor of this mystery, to be followed by seven additional Masses for a devotion of your own, to thank God and ask three things of Him: the first, for all those who have opposed us, that non illis imputetur;<sup>(5)</sup> the second, for all our friends, that Our Lord may repay them a hundredfold for their charity toward us; the third, for ourselves, that He may grant us the grace to make holy use of His favors and begin seriously to love and serve Him with the perfection He asks of us, that is to say, through the practice of true humility, strict obedience, sincere charity, intense fervor for the salvation of souls, a pure love for God, and above all, perfect submission and abandonment to His divine will.

3. In the salutation to the most Holy Heart of our Mother of mercy, that we add Ave Cor misericordissimum after Ave Cor beatissimum; and that, in the salutation Ave Maria, filia Dei Patris, we also add the verse Mater misericordiae after Ave Maria, Mater admirabilis. Likewise in misericordiae in memory of and in thanksgiving for the mercy that God has shown to us on this occasion through this Mother of grace and mercy, in order to offer Him and His Son, through her, all those who are in some spiritual or corporal distress, but especially those in the fearful calamity of sin; and to submit ourselves to the mercy of God, that He may animate us with His spirit toward all the wretched, enabling us to pity them and do all in our power to help and relieve them.

4. Since Our Lord has given us the grace to reenter His house, and because we have the happiness of possessing Him once more in the Blessed Eucharist, we must renew our desire to pay and have others pay Him all possible honor and respect in this sacrament. Let us conduct ourselves in church with the utmost modesty, reverence and piety, never speaking a word there except in case of necessity, and then very little, in low tones; never allowing children to play nor make noise in our churches or chapels; never permitting the poor to beg for alms in church, nor dogs to be seen there, nor people to talk, assume an unbecoming attitude nor behave irreverently there.

Give yourselves joyfully, all of you, to Our Lord Jesus Christ, that you may enter into these sentiments and put them into practice for the love of our most amiable Jesus and His most worthy Mother.

I embrace each of you individually in the sacred love of their most holy Heart, with a renewed desire to serve you in every way I can. Embrace one another in this same love, "with a great heart and a joyful spirit." I give myself wholly to them for your sake, and to you for their sake, as your most unworthy servant and devoted confrere, of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

LETTER 52

To Father Richard Le Mesle.(1) On his persecutions.(2)

June 15, 1654

With all my heart I thank our most adorable Jesus and His most amiable Mother for the cross it has pleased them to send us. It is the single earthly treasure, the sovereign good of true children of Jesus and Mary, the source of all blessings, the glory and crown, the love and delight of true Christians. I speak with reference to the spirit, not the senses.

Therefore, dear brother, let us adore, bless, praise, glorify and love with all sincerity the most amiable will of our good Lord Who arranges all things for the best, and Who can gain glory from sin itself, the greatest of all evils. Let us say with all our souls: I will bless the Lord at all times?(3) The Lord is my helper; I will not fear what man can do unto me.(4) It is true that if the Lord Himself does not build the house, those who wish to construct it work in vain; but it is just as true that if the Lord Himself does not destroy the house, then those who wish to destroy it also work in vain. After all, God's will be done. He is the Lord; let what is pleasing to Him be accomplished ...

Furthermore, let us strengthen ourselves in the Lord and in the strength of His virtue, convinced that our work in Him is never useless. Let us place all our anxieties in His bosom, for He will take care of us. Those who thwart us are not dealing with us, but with the King and Queen of heaven and earth, who assuredly can frustrate all their designs when the proper time arrives. Nevertheless, we must do all in our power for the interests of our Master, and dwell in peace. Above all, let us not forget to pray for those whom God is pleased to use as instruments to chastise us, as for benefactors.

LETTER 53

To the Community of Our Lady of Charity at Caen. On the feast of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin, and zeal for the salvation of souls.

(Before 1656) J. M. J.

My dearest Sisters and beloved daughters in the sacred love of the most holy Heart of Jesus and Mary:

May the grace, peace and love of this same Jesus be for ever yours.

Not having the happiness of being able to address you personally at this time, I am availing myself of this letter to invite and exhort you to make a good preparation for the solemn feast of the glorious Assumption of our admirable Mother. It is her greatest feast, the day of her triumph and grandeurs. It is the day which ends all her works and sufferings, and inaugurates her repose and eternal happiness. It is the day which establishes her upon the throne of glory and majesty that is due the dignity of the Mother of God. It is the day on which she can say, after the manner of her Son and by virtue of her dependence upon Him: All power is given to me in heaven and in earth.<sup>(1)</sup> It is the day on which she is empowered to use the sovereignty that the most Holy Trinity has given her over heaven and earth, over hell and all things. For this reason all creatures are obliged to render her respect and homage, as to their Queen and Sovereign to whom they belong and upon whom they depend and will depend for all eternity.

But you are bound, in a very special manner, my dearest Sisters, to honor in every possible way this great Princess to whom you belong not only in the capacity of servants or slaves, as do most of the other creatures in her universal empire, but in your capacity as very dear and beloved daughters. Make ready, therefore, to fulfill your obligations to her on this great feast.

To that end, you must render her four tributes before she leaves this earth to ascend to heaven.

(1). Man. 28, 18.

If a great queen had come to visit you, what should you do when she was ready to depart for home? You would do four things:

1. You would thank her for the favor she had conferred on you.
2. You would make excuses and ask her pardon for not having received and entertained her in keeping with her station.
3. You would profess your service, respect and obedience to her.
4. If you knew that she desired something of you, such as a book of devotions, an image, a rosary or something similar, you would make her a present of it with all possible affection.

That is just what you should do with respect to the Queen of Heaven before she leaves this world. You owe her these four duties:

1. Thank her for all she has done and suffered here below, in cooperation with her Son, for our salvation and sanctification. Thank the most Holy Trinity, too, for having given her to us, and for all the graces we have received either directly from her or through her intercession.
2. Ask pardon of her and make honorable atonement for all the wrongs, offenses and outrages perpetrated against her on earth, for they occurred on our account and for our sake. As reparation and satisfaction, offer her the most amiable Heart of her Son so full of love for her, together with all the honor, glory and praises which have ever been, are now and shall yet be rendered to It in heaven and on earth.
3. Protest to her that you desire to serve, honor, love and obey her, and to imitate her virtues, and urge everyone as much as possible to do the same.
4. Consider what she asks of you, and what you can present to her that will please her; then make the offering with all your hearts.

After that, you should pray to her, as to your good Mother, to grant you her holy blessing, which she will surely do if you are firmly resolved to live as good daughters, to the best of your ability, through a conscientious imitation of her holiness.

Those are your duties on the eve of this feast.

On the day itself, there are five things you ought to do:

1. Give thanks to the most Holy Trinity and invite all the angels, saints and all creatures to give thanks with you for all the favors It has granted your most bountiful Mother during her life, at her death, and in her resurrection and glorious Assumption into heaven, as well as for all the favors she will enjoy there throughout eternity.

2. Rejoice with her because of all the glory and happiness that is hers in heaven, and which will be hers for evermore.
3. Pay honor and respect to the moment of her establishment at the right hand of her Son, and of her appointment as sovereign Lady and Empress of the whole universe. Render her, in the name and on behalf of all creatures, the homage, respect and obedience, the offers and protestations of service, dependence and submission, which are her due; and unite yourselves to the praises given her by all the inhabitants of heaven, even to those of the King Himself.

4. Offer her your whole mind, your whole will and your whole person. Beseech her to separate and detach you from the things of earth and bear you with her to heaven; to impress upon you a lively realization of her new life there, one all-holy and celestial; and to unite and associate you with the love, glory, adoration and praise which she renders and will for ever render in heaven to the most Holy Trinity.

5. Strive to find means of increasing her joy and glory.

Here are four excellent methods:

The first is to implant deep within your hearts a firm resolution and fixed intention of seeking nothing in all your actions, mortifications and exercises save the glory of her Son and the accomplishment of His most adorable will.

The second is to be strict and faithful in the obedience you owe your good Mother Superioress, whom you should regard and honor as a representative of the most holy Virgin, your true Mother and first Superioress. Be obedient also to your Rules and Constitutions.

The third is to love and cherish one another with a sincere, simple, tender and cordial love which will banish from your thoughts, words and actions everything in the least contrary to it~ and will impel you to make prompt and efficacious reparation for the slightest sins you may commit against natural charity.

The fourth is to excite a fervent desire to attain the end for which your holy Order was founded, that of laboring by your prayers, examples, instructions and every manner prescribed for you by holy obedi ence for the salvation of the lost souls whom divine Providence may send you.

This, my dearest Sisters, is the most fitting and powerful means of augmenting the glory, joys and even the domain of our great Queen. For the conversion of a soul affords her more happiness than any other good work that can be performed in this world, and from it she alone derives greater joy than all the rest of the inhabitants of heaven combined. To help snatch a soul from the tyranny of Satan in order to bring it within her empire is to render her a greater service than if one were to present her with an earthly kingdom. Hence it is the work closest to her Heart, the labor most pleasing to her. It is by this means, Therefore, that you can truly be daughters of her Heart, and that you will be associated with her in the same vocation.

Yes, my dearest daughters, you have in a manner but one and the same vocation with the Mother of God. For, just as God chose to form His Son within her, and through her agency, in the hearts of the faithful, so also has He called you to your holy Community to have His Son dwell within you, and through your labors, to restore Him to life again in sinful souls wherein He has died. God sent her upon earth and made her the Mother of His divine Son, giving her all the graces and qualities she possesses in behalf of sinners, without which she would be not at all what she is; in like manner and for the same end has He placed you in His holy house, with many graces in readiness for you. Ah, my dearest Sisters, how holy is your vocation! How advantageous is your state in life! How immense is the goodness of God toward you in having called you to a truly apostolic Order! Ah, how blameworthy would be your ingratitude if you did not recognize your inexpressible obligation to divine mercy on this account!

But remember that the evil spirit will not fail to tempt you in regard to your vocation, since this employment is singularly displeasing to him and he hates no one so much as those who labor for the salvation of souls.

He will remind you of the troubles and difficulties you must suffer, but remember, my dearest daughters, that there is no state in life exempt from work and suffering; that, if you do not suffer with Jesus, you shall not reign with Him. Hence there is nothing you should fear so much as to be without a cross. Cast your eyes upon the crucifix and see what He suffered to save souls. Is it reasonable that you should be associated with Him in the greatest work for which He came into the world, which is to save sinners, which cost Him so dearly, and yet expect to be spared every trial? Alas! Where would you be, if His fear of suffering, which was so violent as to cause Him to sweat blood, had prevented Him from laboring for your salvation?

Consider, too, the sorrows, tears and anguish which the Blessed Virgin had to accept as her portion in order to cooperate with her Son in the redemption of lost souls.

Read the life of St. Catherine,<sup>(2)</sup> and you will see what frightful torments she suffered for the relief of the souls in purgatory. Remember, too, that to help one single soul to rid itself of a mortal sin, even though it were not to persevere in the state of grace, is nevertheless greater than to release all the souls in purgatory from their torments.

Place before your eyes those holy women who leave their country and cross the seas to Canada, where they live daily in the midst of a thousand dangers in order to win souls to God.

I know a person of your sex, a weak, timid, fragile girl<sup>(3)</sup> like you, who entreated God with incredible fervor, for many years, to let her suffer for a time the frightful pains of hell, that she might preserve some wicked souls from it for all eternity. God, on that account, caused her to suffer torments so incredible that no tongue or pen could ever begin to express them, and she has been enduring these tortures for more than forty years.

After that, my dearest Sisters, should we not die of shame at the sight of our own weaknesses and cowardice? The slightest difficulties dishearten us, the feeblest temptations overcome us, the most trifling troubles discourage us, molehills become mountains in our estimation. We are saddened by the things that should cause us to rejoice; we tremble when there is no reason for fear! We wish indeed to enjoy the advantages of our holy religion, but we want no share of its crosses;

(2). St. Catherine of Genes in her Treatise on Purgatory 6, 17 writes: "This P~ of purification to which I see the souls of Purgatory subjected, I feel within myself."

we imagine that devotion consists of living an idle life of ease. Oh, how badly do we deceive ourselves! Any devotion which is not based on renunciation of self, of one's own will and gratification, and on bearing one's cross and following the path trodden by Jesus when He was seeking lost souls, is nothing more than pure illusion and fraud,

Do you not know, my dearest Sisters, that the broad road leading to heaven is the way of the cross, that it is the only one, and that the true and stable virtues necessary for us to be pleasing to God are acquired only through many trials, labors, mortifications and penances that must be self-imposed? Do you not understand when Our Lord tells us that because the kingdom of heaven suffers violence, only they, who do themselves violence can take it by force,<sup>(4)</sup> and that He Himself had to undergo an infinite number of tribulations in order to enter into the glory(5) which is rightfully His by virtue of so many claims? How can you be numbered among His members and spouses if you do not desire to conform to Him? Do you wish to have another Gospel written for you, or do you want God to send you another Messiah-a Messiah of honey and roses? Should you prefer to go to paradise by a path other than that which the Mother of God and all the saints traveled to attain it, or else is it your wish to go there all alone and leave your poor sisters on the road to hell because you are so fastidious that you are afraid to take the trouble to lend them a helping hand?

Perhaps you may say that they are traveling along a very muddy road, and that you are afraid of soiling yourselves by snatching them back; the devil is cunning enough to offer you that temptation--one all the more dangerous because it is seemingly beautiful and convincing. But I tell you, my dearest daughters, that it is impossible for Our Lord to allow anyone to fall who, out of love for Him, helps others to rise. Purity, when it is allied with true charity, can never be sullied, any more than rays of sunlight can be contaminated by mud. Cast aside, then, these vain fears, and trust in Him Who has called you to this divine employment. If you mistrust yourselves and rely wholly on Him, He will not withdraw and allow you to fall.

Finally, my dearest daughters, if you desire to increase the joy and glory of our worthy Princess, be faithful to her Son in your vocation; close your ears to the whisperings of the serpent; do not be daughters of Eve who listened to him and allowed herself to be seduced, but daughters of Mary who vanquished him and trampled him underfoot. I beseech her with all my heart to crush him completely beneath your own feet, and to render you worthy of being true daughters of her Holy Heart all aflame with love and zeal for the salvation of sinful souls who cost her the precious blood of her Son Jesus.

To His Lordship Francis de Champvallon,(1) Archbishop of Rouen. On the self-interest of bishops in protecting seminaries.

(About 1655)

Indeed, my Lord, I make so bold as to state that this is the business of their Lordships the bishops, and that it is largely to their own interests to protect those engaged in the work of seminaries, since they are wholly subject to them. This is especially true of us, who profess in all sincerity to be absolutely at their service.

(1). Appointed to the See of Rouen in 1651 the Archbishop was a personal friend of St. John Eudes. At the end of 1655 Archbishop Harlay de Champvallon decided to open a Seminary in his archdiocese under the direction of the Eudist Fathers. Because of opposition on the part of the Chapter he was unable to carry out the project until February 16, 1659. Boulay, op. cit., VOL 3, P. 240 ff.

LETTER 55

To Father Thomas Manchon,(1) Superior of the Seminary at Lisieux.(2)

On the death of Sister Mary des Vallées.( 3 )

Caen, March 2, 1656 J. M. J.

My dearest brother:

May Jesus, the most Holy Heart of Mary, be our consolation for ever.

It has pleased God to deprive us of the creature we held most dear on earth, our beloved Sister Mary. She passed away(4) last Friday, February 25, at a quarter past twelve.

Our deepest sorrow is that her body was taken from us for interment at St. Nicholas. Almost all the canons wanted her placed in the cathedral. Others wanted her to be buried at the Jacobins, in the Holy Rosary Chapel. But Mr. de la Foulery, who established a St. Joseph Chapel in the Church of St. Nicholas, arranged to have her interred there. He did this with the help of Mr. d'Urville, not wishing to act solely on his own responsibility. So we find ourselves deprived of this treasure, and all our brethren in Coutances and all our friends, those in that city as well as here, are sorely grieved about it. Madame de Saint Simon and Madame de Malherbe (formerly Mademoiselle de Pleimaret) did everything they could do under these circumstances, but in vain. Even the provost-marshal offered to use his influence to have the holy body taken by these persons and brought to our church, but we declined with thanks, fearing to create too much dissension. The same motive kept us from taking possession of her heart. It would have been quite easy for us to do this, and we are very sorry now for not having done so. But it is God Who has so arranged it, for reasons unknown to us.

(1). See Letter 13, note 2.

(2). The Lisieux Seminary was opened on January 11, 1654.

(3). She was, it would seem, a Dominican tertiary, hence the name «Sister». Cf. Joly, op. cit., P. 95.

(4). Mary des Vallées was sixty-six years of age.

LETTERS AND SHORTER WORKS

For three months her death was foreshadowed and foretold in several ways. She died in great interior and exterior peace, without any inward disturbance or any outward effort or struggle.

The illness which caused her death lasted only twenty hours. During that time she enjoyed, almost to the end, the use of her mind, seldom speaking, and then saying nothing more than yes, no or so be it, to the things which were said to her, and uttering the holy name of Jesus almost continually. She received all the sacraments, and our brothers in Coutances and I never left her during those last twenty-four hours. We were all present around her bed at the time of her death, the room being filled with people.

I did not forget, my dear brother, to recommend you to her before her death, as well as all the rest of our brethren, and she assured me well that she will take care of you and never forsake you. I heard her confession three times in the course of her last week, painstakingly examining and searching into her whole life, but I can truthfully say that I did not discover the slightest venial sin in all the sixty-seven years of her life. Nevertheless, we must not fail to have the usual prayers offered up for her, in accordance with the mandate of the Church. At our place<sup>(5)</sup> we have recited the entire Office for the Dead and have sung three Masses, namely: of the Holy Spirit, the Beata and the Requiem. We shall do the same here;<sup>(6)</sup> I pray you to do likewise. Besides that, we must say sixty-seven Masses in each of our houses for the following intentions: 1. in honor of all God's plans for Sister Mary and of everything He is in her; 2. in thanksgiving for all the favors He granted her and has granted us through her mediation; 3. in reparation for all our omissions in that respect; 4. for the accomplishment of all God's intents in this work; 5. to ask His Divine Majesty to let us partake of her spirit, that of extreme hatred for sin; purest love for God; complete detachment from self and all things; total submission to the most adorable will of God; burning love for the Cross; the utmost scorn of self; irreconcilable hatred for distinction; marked affection for contempt, confusion and ignominy; but most of all, incomparable charity, goodness, meekness, and forbearance toward one's neighbor, which impelled her to be extremely careful never to vex or anger anyone, but rather to please and gladden people as much as possible. It is particularly in this virtue, and in her humility, simplicity and sincerity, that we should try to imitate her. I implore all our dear brethren to be most diligent in asking God for these virtues and schooling themselves assiduously in their practice. Furthermore, the above intentions of these sixty-seven Masses will not preclude their being said also for the principal intentions which are given out from the sacristy.

Affectionate greetings to all our dear brethren whom I embrace with all my heart.

Please write to those in Coutances. I left them very much grieved, especially Father de Montaigu, but I was forced to come here on urgent and important business of which I shall write you, perhaps soon.

My most respectful and affectionate greetings to the Promoter.<sup>(8)</sup> I remain corde magno, dearest brother,

Devotedly yours,
JOHN EUDES, missionary priest.

P. S. I forgot to tell you that nearly all the residents of Caen are openly proclaiming that Sister Mary is a saint, even those who held her in contempt during her lifetime.

To the Community in Lisieux. On the death of Father James Le Duc. ( 1 )

Lingèvres, April A, 1656

I am very deeply grieved by the death of our good and beloved brother, Father Le Duc, for a good priest is an inestimable treasure in the Church whose loss cannot be sufficiently lamented. He was an excellent laborer whom God had endowed with many fine qualities, and there are very few like him. But Our Lord and His most Holy Mother, who are the real superiors of our Congregation and are more concerned with it than we, are aware of all that. Yet it has pleased them to take him, and they can do nothing save for the best. What consoles me is that he died during the Jubilee, in Holy Week, while working for the salvation of souls.

To Madame Blouet de Camilly. On the unexpected cure of Father Thomas Manchon, and various other matters ( 1 )

1656 J. M. J.

My dearest daughter:

May Jesus, the most Holy Heart of Mary, be for ever ours!

Enclosed is a letter for Madame de la Croizette. (2) It is rather long but it comforted me in my troubles. I am trying to give her, insofar as I am able, some sound consolation in hers. I am sending you this letter unsealed. When you have read it, be kind enough to seal it and give it to that lady. Tell her, however, that I beg her to read it leisurely in her study, in the presence of God, so as to derive the most good from it.

Furthermore, my dear daughter, know that you are the mother of two good children; (3) they are surely angels. May God grant them constancy and perseverance.

Father Manchon continues to improve; he is now at the home of Mr.

(1). Several days before coming to Coutances, where he was to preach the octave of Corpus Christi, Father Manchon was obliged to make a business trip for the Congregation, during which he spent several days and nights without sleep. When the business was finished he departed hurriedly in order to reach Coutances on time; but on the way he was taken with a serious illness from which it was believed he would die. The sickness was violent and obstinate, and all were fearful of the outcome. The prayers offered up for him were more efficacious than all the remedies employed. St. John Eudes, who had come to preach in his place, prayed earnestly to God to restore his preacher to him. Never was a father more grief-stricken by the illness of his son. God Who in former times had prolonged the life of King Ezechias by fifteen years for the sake of his virtues, prayers and tears was also moved, in His goodness, by the lamentations offered Him for the sick priest who had been reduced to that condition only through his excessive zeal to gain glory for Him. His health was restored and he used it, as before, to labor for the conversion of sinners." Peter Hérabourg, Vie du P. Eudes, Vol. 1, Ch. 21. This incident occurred in 1656.

de Mémont(4). It is certain that but for a miracle he would have died. So true is this that the doctors had assured us he could not live through the third day of his illness, for it was violent and dangerous. That is what I told you and my brethren in Caen when I first heard about it, but I added repeatedly that without a miracle he would never recover, and I was not saying that at random or unthinkingly. I am telling you all this now, my dear daughter, not so that you will consider me a prophet, for you would be wrong, but in order that no one may mistake me for a false prophet. I want to testify to this truth in view of what you said in your last letter which, although written in jest, qualifies me as such. That is how most calumnies are invented; one retains part of a statement and forgets the rest, or else one gives it a different appearance, another meaning. It teaches us to be cautious indeed in believing disparaging things about our neighbor.

They write me from Burgundy, from Arnay-le-Duc and Dijon, that our dear Sister(5) is being discussed from very conflicting viewpoints. There are Jesuit Fathers who are publicizing and upholding her as a great saint; while other religious, the brethren of those who persecuted her here, are saying all around that she was a sorceress, and they are circulating astonishing things about Father Eudes, too, whom they believe to have been her spiritual adviser. I am deeply grateful to them for the honor they do me in joining my name with hers in their slanders.

They are saying many other things, but Our Lord can answer them when He deigns to do so. Do not mention anything about all this.

I embrace our spiritual brother.(6) We are praying for our eldest brother who is at Rouen. All your children in Coutances greet you most humbly and affectionately.

It is very necessary for me to see the Rector before he leaves, but I can do nothing without the advice of our dear Brother de Bernières.

I am with all sincerity, my dearest daughter,

Devotedly yours,

To Father Simon Mannoury, at Lisieux. On various matters concerning the college in Lisieux and the nuns of Our Lady of Charity.

Coutances, July 29, 1656 My dearest brother:

May Jesus, the most holy Heart of Mary, be for ever ours!

I forwarded your letter to Father Manchon, asking him to send you a reply concerning the Promoter's last will and testament.(1) If he has not done so, it is my opinion that lawsuits should be shunned like the plague. It would be better to have less--indeed, to lose everything--rather than go to law, unless one enters a lawsuit incidentally and not as the principal party, and unless, in that case, one is perfectly sure of Success.

With regard to the college, here is my opinion: Father Marion(2) for the fifth class, Father de Longeval (3) for the fourth, Father Saché (4) for the third, Father Franco(5) for the first, Father Doucet,(6) prefect of boarders, Father Dudy,(7) prefect of the college; or else Father Yon(8) for the fifth class, Father Marion for the fourth and the rest as above, so that in this way we could take Father de la Haye(9) and Father de Longeval from the college to employ them otherwise. But do not say anything yet

(1). See Letter 55, note 8.

(2). Father Marion entered the Congregation of Jesus and Mary about 1655. After teaching at Lisieux, he became one of the first directors of the Rouen Seminary. Cf. Boulay, ibid., VOL 3, P. 275.

(3). Father John de Longeval later became superior at Lisieux. See Letter 121, note 1.

(5). Father Franco was probably a secular priest who helped the Eudists at Lisieux. Cf. Boulay, VOL 3, P. 102, who gives Francs, not Franco.

(6). Father John Doucet (1620-1654) entered the Congregation Of Jesus and Mary in 1654. He spent most of his life at the Lisieux College.

(8). Born at Montcuit in the diocese of Coutances, Father Yon joined the Congregation in 1654. He died on October 3, 1672.

about this latter plan. Just send me your opinion and I will confer with Father Manchon about it.

I am very sorry about Mr. de Langrie's dissatisfaction,(10) but what is there to be done about all that? If I allowed myself to follow my own inclination, I too should be strongly tempted to abandon that house; but we must forget ourselves and consider only Our Lord and His Holy Mother, doing everything for love of them. God permits all things out of goodness toward us in order to shield us from complacency and vanity, which perhaps would cause us to lose all the fruits of our labors.

I was never informed about the pastor of Saint Julian(11). That was done before I had heard anything about it. I am not sure whether he alone was responsible for it, or he and Mother together; but I do not think her daughters had anything to do with it. It is quite certain that the good Mother has not wanted anything of us for a long time. We must be patient, rely on divine Providence and travel our broad path, always serving our house to the best of our ability for the love of Our Lord and His most holy Mother. I told Mother, and also wrote her since my arrival here, that we must send a man purposely to Rome, but she has not answered me on that. There is no doubt that the course advocated by the pastor of Saint Julian is not a good one, and that it will not be successful. I am writing all these things to Mr. de Langrie, begging him to retain his goodwill. I hope to make a trip some time to Caen, where I shall see the parish priest of Saint Julian to state my reasons to him, and I shall ask him to call a meeting in order that we may decide what is best.

I am writing Mr. de Langrie that he should choose from our Sister Mary des Vallées, either some linen soaked in her blood or a medal that she wore for many years around her neck, or that be should say what he wants and I will gladly give it to him if it be in my power.

(10). Mr. de Langrie was Royal Councillor and president of the Normandy parliament. He was also one of the benefactors of the Cam Seminary. When Bishop Francis Servien was appointed Bishop of Bayeux in 1654, he took the superiorship of the Order of Our Lady of Charity from St. John Eudes, the founder, and gave it to Father Le Grand, the parish priest of St. Julian's Church in Caen. This change did not please Mr. de Langrie and he threatened to withdraw his support. Cf. Matthew Russel, Life of Blessed John Eudes, p. 114.

Coutances, August 12, 1656 My dearest daughter:

May Jesus, the most Holy Heart of Mary, be for ever ours!

In the sacred love of this divine Heart, the furnace of immortal love, do I love unchangeably and equally, without preference, all my dearest Sisters, the beloved daughters of my most honored Mother.

What shall separate my heart from the holy love I should feel for the most cherished house of such a good Mother? Will it be tribulation, or anguish, or persecution, or the sword, or any other thing? No, I am certain, with the help of the grace of God, Who has chosen me to take charge of it for Him, that neither the angels, nor the Principalities nor Virtues, nor the heights nor depths, nor life nor death, nor any creature, will ever be able to separate me from the charity I should have toward Our Lady of Charity, for I will always do with my whole heart whatever I can to serve that blessed house of my divine Mother. And no matter what happens, neither heaven nor earth, nor hell itself, shall ever hinder me from doing in its regard, as in all else, the most adorable will of my God, which alone is what I desire, aspire to and seek.

I should like with all my heart to do what our good Mother and you and our dear Sisters wish, but just now I am suffering from a slight indisposition of such a nature that I cannot travel without the risk of becoming ill along the way, as happened to Father Manchon while coming here. I need urgently to take medicine but must wait until the dog days are over. So I do not think I shall be able to go to Caen until September, but at all events, I assure you that it will be as soon as possible, with the help of Our Lord.

Nevertheless, I will recommend both you and your interests to Him with all possible affection, as I do each day. Offer to Him and His holy Mother, on your part, him who is ever, in truth, in the love of their most amiable Heart, my dearest daughter,

Devotedly yours,
JOHN EUDES, missionary priest.

P. S. My very humble and cordial regards to our dearest Mother(2) and her good daughters, my beloved Sisters, one and all. I ask her to give you a penance for having written in a worldly fashion-a fashion which daughters of the most Holy Heart of Mary ought to abhor and shun more than the plague itself, as much in this instance as in everything else, since all worldly fashions are highly displeasing to her and her Son.

To Mother Margaret Frances Patin. The Saint thanks her for her devotion to the work of Our Lady of Charity; he informs her that he has letters from the King (1) regarding their business at Rome; (2) and he instructs her how to act toward the sheriffs of Caen in a difficult situation where their opposition is feared (3).

Paris, March 7, 1657

My dearest Mother, and, in truth, beloved in Him Who is eternal love: I thank Him with all my heart for having imbued your own with such great zeal and charity toward the house of His most Holy Mother, and with such great kindness toward one who is so unworthy of it as I am. And I thank you a thousand times, my dearest Mother, for your many testimonies of it in the cordial letters you write us. I can assure you, too, that Our Lord has given me sentiments in your regard which words alone cannot express.

I am very happy about what you wrote me concerning our dear Sisters, and I bless Our Lord and His most Holy Mother with my whole heart for all the graces they are bestowing on them. I beseech all my dear daughters to be most faithful to them, and to labor in competition with one another to imprint upon themselves a perfect likeness of their most adorable Father and most amiable Mother through a conscientious and continual imitation of their holy virtues, particularly their humility, obedience, charity, forbearance and overwhelming love for the Cross.

(1). Louis XIV of France.

(2). This pertained in the approbation of the Order of Our Lady of Charity.

(3). Toward the end of 1656 Mother Patin purchased some property along the wharves where she planned to establish the Community, then temporarily installed in a house belonging to Mr. de Langrie. When everything was ready for the installation of the Community, it was feared that the sheriffs of Caen might be opposed to the establishment. In perplexity, Mother Patin referred the matter to St. John Eudes, who replied to her from Paris on March 7, 1657 by the above letter. The affair was righted and the sisters were able to move into the property they had purchased. Later they built 2 spacious convent on the same site, where the Community of Caen was housed until the destruction, of their house in June, 1944. Cf. Ory, OP. cit., P. 98

Quite some time ago I procured letters from the King for our business at Rome. I hope, God willing, to bring them to you soon, for I am feeling much better, thank God, and am waiting only until I have regained sufficient strength for the journey.

Fear nothing, my dear Mother, for God is with you and on your side; and if He favors you, who can oppose you? Time and time again you have felt the effects of His protection of the little house of Our Lady of Charity. Why, then, are you afraid? Rest assured that He will finish what He has begun. It is true that we must always do, on our own part, what we can. Now of three things, it is possible to do one of them. The first is to proceed with such secrecy that you will be housed before it becomes known. The second is to have Mr. de Bernières write to Madame de Longueville<sup>(4)</sup> and ask her in turn to write to the sheriffs that they should not interfere with you on this occasion; or, if he thinks it timely, I can make this request of her on my way through Rouen, but I should have to have his opinion. The third is to speak to the sheriffs and those persons close to the King, beseeching them to consent to your taking possession of this house. Since this last method is one of submission and humility, God would bless it, and the outcome could not fail to be successful; if they refused, we could then have recourse to Madame de Longueville.

Nevertheless, do not be satisfied to accept my thoughts alone on the subject, but ask the friends of the house-- Mr. de Bernières, and Mr. and Madame de Camilly--to meet together and discuss the best way to proceed, for Our Lord will inspire them with His holy will.

In the sacred love of the most Holy Heart of Jesus and Mary I greet our dearest Sisters, one and all. I remain, in truth, ever and unreservedly, my dearest Mother,

Devotedly yours,
JOHN EUDES, missionary priest.

LETTER 61

To Mr. Augustine Le Haguais.<sup>(1)</sup> On submission to the will of God during a time of suffering.

Caen, April 26, 1657 J. M. J.

Sir, our very honored and dear brother:

When I look upon you through human eyes in your present condition, I am indeed deeply moved to the point of great compassion. But when I consider you through the eyes of faith, I am prompted to bless and praise our divine Saviour for the singular effects of His infinite goodness toward you, for I see quite clearly that everything which is taking place is a command and inclination of His mercy in your regard. He wishes you to do penance for your sins in this world in order to pardon you in the next.

We are indebted to His divine justice for a hundred thousand bushels of wheat, and He lets us off for a portion of it. O great favor! We have merited eternal torments, and He is satisfied to let us suffer a few small temporal afflictions. I call them small, very small, in comparison with those our offenses deserve. All, what goodness! What an obligation we have toward such goodness! What care should we take to make good use of our afflictions! That is what I exhort you with all my heart to do, my dearest brother, that you may not thwart His plans for you at this time. He intends for us to be cleansed and purified of the filth of our sins by that lye-bath of suffering which may seem very strong to us; but the stronger it is, the more will it whiten us and make us pure and pleasing in the sight of His Divine Majesty, provided we, on our part, cultivate the necessary dispositions which are chiefly these four:

The first is to accept our sufferings from the most adorable Trinity and the most amiable Heart of our heavenly Father Who chastises us, not as a harsh judge, according to our merits, but as a very kind Father, and infinitely less than we deserve. If we accept them as coming from the latter, we shall not attribute them in any way to our fellow creatures who are but the rods used by this good Father to punish us.

The second is to humble ourselves under the mighty hand of God, considering ourselves not as just and innocent, but as guilty criminals who time and time again have deserved the wrath of God and all His creatures. But let us be convinced that the humbler we become in our nothingness and lowliness, the more will God be exalted therein, and the more, too, will He take care to protect us and convert all things to our welfare.

The third disposition is to regard sin as the sole author of all our ills, and consequently to turn all our hatred, indignation and vengeance against this monster which is our only enemy; to employ all our forces to persecute and destroy sin by true penitence; and to banish it henceforth beyond the doors and avenues of our souls. Let us remove the cause, and the effect will cease.

The fourth is to guard well against allowing ourselves to subscribe to pagan sentiments, which are to hate those who hate us. Rather should we follow those of our gentle Leader Who gives us this commandment: "Love one another as I have loved you, and by that shall they know that ye are My disciples."

I implore you, my dearest brother, to consider all these things seriously in the presence of God, that you may savour them, impress them on your heart and put them into practice, with the help of His grace which He will not refuse you if you recognize your infinite need of it and sincerely ask it of Him.

It is what I do for you each day, with as much affection as I am, in truth, unreservedly and always, Sir, my very honored and dear brother,

Devotedly yours,
JOHN EUDES, missionary priest.

LETTER 62

To the Professors of the College at Lisieux.(1)Advice concerning their employment and conduct.

Caen, October 15, 1657.

May Jesus, the most Holy Heart of Mary, be your heart, your mind and your strength in the employment you are undertaking in the diocese of Lisieux for love of Him-employment of the greatest importance. It is the work of God and of Jesus Christ, because it concerns the salvation of souls! It is the work of the Mother of God, the Apostles and the greatest saints! It is a mission of very great consequence to which the Son of God, the sovereign Missionary, sends you with these words: "As the Father hath sent me, I also send you."(2)

You are going to perform this mission for children, in whom you must lay the foundations of God's reign and in whom there are generally far fewer obstacles to divine grace than in adults.

They are children who belong to God through baptism, who were redeemed by the blood of the Son of God and created to see the face of God, to possess and bless Him for all eternity; children who are so dear to the heavenly Father that He has given each of them a prince of His court to serve as guardian angel and, in a certain sense, as a servant. "Are they not all ministering spirits, sent to minister for them, who shall receive the inheritance of salvation?"(3) Children, finally, for whom our good Jesus felt so much love and tenderness, and of whom He said: "Suffer the little children and forbid them not to come to me: for the kingdom of heaven is for such."(4)

(1). In 1652 the Bishop of Lisieux offered to entrust both a seminary and a college to the Eudist Fathers. St. John Eudes ardently desired the first of these foundations, but the second had no place in his plans. Because of the Bishop's insistence he accepted the college, and at once applied himself to make the best use of the gift, while assuring himself that in the future he would not accept any similar proposal. He no doubt was afraid lest he might follow the example of the Oratory, and allow the efforts of his Congregation to be diverted towards an object which was not that of the new Congregation.

LETTERS AND SHORTER WORKS

Weigh all these truths seriously, my dear brethren; they will lead you to thank God for the wonderful grace He has granted you in employing you in such a holy mission, and to search eagerly for and embrace all the means of which you can avail yourselves to do your task well.

To this end, you should:

1. Establish in your hearts a very pure intention to aspire to nothing, in all that you have to do, save the glory of God.

2. Make a firm resolution to be as diligent as possible in imparting to these children, first of all, a knowledge of salvation, and in the second place, education.

3. Take great care to preserve and increase in yourselves a spirit of piety and virtue, that you may avoid this reproach: "Thou therefore, that teachest another, teachest not thyself," (5) and imitate our Saviour while fulfilling in yourselves these words: "Jesus began to do and to teach." (6) I urge you, therefore, for the love of His most Holy Mother, to observe faithfully the following precepts:

Never fail to offer an hour of prayer together each morning before the Blessed Sacrament. The teachers and prefects, however, need make only a half-hour on class days and an hour on the other days.

The priests should celebrate Holy Mass daily, with preparation beforehand, strict attention and recollection while saying it, and an unhurried thanksgiving afterwards. Those who are not priests should hear or serve Mass every day with the proper interior and exterior dispositions.

Care should be taken to have Holy Communion distributed on the usual days.

Each one should always make his confession to the confessor assigned him.

The teachers should have the utmost respect and deference for the director assigned them, and he should exercise great charity, meekness and vigilance toward them.

Let everyone make a daily quarter-hour of spiritual reading from Holy Scripture, and then report on a passage during the evening conference.

Conferentia. Let the teachers do the same from the Gospel, that they may learn its chief maxims and implant them in the hearts of their pupils.

The spiritual conference and the humiliation<sup>(7)</sup> should be carried out weekly in the usual manner.

Every Saturday, in honor of the humility of Our Lord and His most Holy Mother, two of you should go to the kitchen to wash some of the dishes.

Have some poor person dine each week with the Community.

Silence should be observed strictly in the places and at the times appointed.

Outside of recreation periods, you should not waste time in conversing with one another.

Do not go into another's room except with permission or through necessity; and no one should allow the students, either boarders or day pupils, to enter his.

You should never go outside the refectory, except in case of illness, nor outside of mealtime, save through necessity and with permission; very rarely in town, and then only with leave.

Uniformity should be very closely observed in food, drink, dress and everything else.

All peculiarities and individual characteristics should be banished from the Community as highly dangerous nuisances.

You should receive nothing from your students nor anyone else that you appropriate to yourselves, whether it be money for Masses, or linen, clothing, butter, fruit, etc. These things should be turned over at once to the superior or the bursar.

No one should either give away or lend anything that belongs to the Community except with the superior's permission, under pain of being punished for theft, as in the preceding instance.

Charity and fraternal cordiality should be carefully fostered, and each one should avoid violating it through speech or in any other way. If anything to the contrary should occur, the offender ought not to allow the day to pass without atoning for his error and becoming reconciled with his brother.

(7). In the Congregation of Jesus and Mary this is a community exercise at which the members accuse themselves of the faults committed against the constitutions and rules.

LETTERS AND SHORTER WORKS

You should inform the superior, in a spirit of charity, of the shortcomings of individuals when there is no other way to remedy them; and you must be prepared to be told about your own and to accept the admonition in a spirit of humility and obedience, neither excusing nor justifying yourselves. Disputes ought to be shunned like the plague, and to that end you should all strive to renounce your own opinions.

As for the students, the teachers should make every effort to impress the following things upon them: 1. a deep respect for holy places, the sacraments and other things pertaining to religion; 2. an ardent love for Our Lord Jesus Christ; 3. a singular devotion for the Blessed Virgin Mary; 4. perfect obedience to one's parents; 5. sincere charity toward one another; 6. a lively fear of vanity and pride, and an ardent love for humility; 7. extreme hatred for every kind of sin; 8. complete resignation to the most holy will of God in all things. I need not speak of the horror that must be instilled in them for everything offensive to purity, nor of the painstaking care that should be exercised in teaching them to serve Mass.

You should all honor your superiors as representatives of Our Lord Jesus Christ, and strive to make a more complete renunciation of your own wills than of all the demons in hell, that you may accept in all things and places the most adorable will of God which is made known to you through the voice of your superiors and the mandates of the Community.

But above all, strive to know yourselves, that you may learn to despise yourselves and be humble in all things, for there is nothing more important or necessary to please God, serve Him and arrive at perfection.

De caetero, fratres, quaecumque vera, quaecumque pudica, quaecumque justa, quaecumque sancta, quaecumque amabilia, quaecumque bonae famae, si qua virtus, si qua laus disciplinae, haec cogitate . . . haec agite, et Deus pacis erit vobiscum.(8)

LETTER 63

To the Priests of his Congregation who were giving a mission at Honfleur. Thansgiving for the sanction of the seminary at Caen, granted on December 2, 1657 by His Lordship Francis Servien, Bishop of Bayeux.

December 1657

His Lordship(1) drew up authentic letters patent confirming the letters of the King(2) and of Bishop d'Angennes(3) and he had them all recorded in his secretary's office in Bayeux, and in the registry of the ecclesiastical court of Caen and of the ecclesiastical insinuations. Then he ordered the pastor of St. Julian's Church(4) in Caen to proclaim it publicly and to send notices last Sunday to all parish priests and preachers, so that they might announce to everyone that the establishment of the Bayeux seminary in our house had been confirmed, and that the ceremony would take place in our chapel on the same day with all possible solemnity. All of this was done. We sang a high Mass in the morning and vespers in the afternoon, both with great ceremony. The pastor of St. Peter's Church,(5) the canon of Bayeux, came expressly to say the Office after the Vicar-General and I had invited him to do so.

Father Larderat(6) had written me, on behalf of his Lordship, that I should invite the Abbé de Brissac to preach. The Abbé was unable to accept, but the rector of the Jesuits,(7) substituting for him, gave an excellent sermon, and so many people kept coming all day long that our chapel would have been filled even if it were as large as the church of the Abbey of St. Stephen. Blessed be Our Lord and His most holy Mother, who are the true and sole authors of this work. For we, on our part, did nothing, either by ourselves or through others, to petition his Lordship of Bayeux. On the contrary, he had been strongly importuned by a congregation(8) to which he was bound for many years by the ties of a very special friendship. This congregation made every effort to prevent, as did other persons who offered him signal advantages for his seminary, and who overlooked nothing that could possibly be done by themselves as well as their friends, to persuade him to reject us and ally himself with them. Nevertheless, he elected to ignore all these solicitations, and after having broken with all the others, he chose poor nobodies like us to take charge of his seminary. "He hath put down the mighty from their seat and hath exalted the humble." (9)

It is true that Father Larderat and the pastor at Saint Julian worked hard in this affair, but that was through an inspiration instilled in them by God, and not through anyone's request.

Let us all, therefore, feel a profound humility at the sight of so many favors. Let us give sincere thanks to God, and proportionately to the Blessed Virgin, St. Joseph and the other patrons of our Congregation, as well as to all the holy bishops of Bayeux.

For this purpose we have decided to choose the octave of Christmas for our thanksgiving, to expose the Blessed Sacrament in our chapel on the first three days, in accordance with permission granted us by the Vicar General, and to invite all our friends to adore and thank Our Lord with us.

During those eight days we shall say our Masses according to the order of the Church. In addition, we shall offer them on the first four days in honor of the Holy Trinity, Our Lord Jesus Christ, the Holy Spirit and the Blessed Virgin; on the fifth, in honor of the holy angels; on the sixth, in honor of St. Joseph, St. John the Evangelist, St. Joachim and St. Anne; on the seventh, in honor of the holy Apostles, martyrs, priests and Levites, virgins, innocents, bishops of Bayeux and all the saints; on the eighth, in honor of Our Lord and His most holy Mother.

To these we shall add three intentions: the first, for his Lordship of Bayeux and those others whom God used as instruments to accom plish His holy will in this matter; the second, for all those who opposed it; and the third, to obtain all we need to do well what He asks of us.

We shall also say a daily rosary which will be divided among us, and every evening the Te Deum and a Sub tuum praesidium.

I leave it to you to choose your own devotions, but I should like very much to know what they are . . .

My third recommendation to you is that you convince yourselves that, in order to know what God demands of you on this occasion, you must be mindful that the Congregation has been established by God in His Church and that He has granted you the grace of calling you to join it for these three ends:

First, to give you the means of arriving at the perfection and sanctity compatible with the ecclesiastical state.

Secondly, to labor for the salvation of souls through missions and other sacerdotal functions, which is the work of the Apostles and Our Lord Himself; a work so great and divine that there would seem to be none greater nor more divine, divinorum divinissimum.

Nevertheless, there is one function which does surpass it, and this is to labor for the salvation and sanctification of ecclesiastics, which is to save the saviours, direct the directors, teach the doctors, feed the shepherds, enlighten those who are the light of the world, sanctify those who are the sanctification of the Church, and perform in the hierarchy of the Church what the seraphim and cherubim perform in the heavenly realm. That is the third end for which God has deigned to establish our little Congregation in the Church and for which He has summoned us to join it, through an incomprehensible mercy of which we are infinitely unworthy. He wishes to place in our keeping the most precious, the most illustrious portion of His Church, dearer to Him than the apple of His eye, which is the heart of His mystical body, that is to say, the ecclesiastics. It is the holy family whose care and guidance He wishes to entrust to us.

Judge from that, my dearest brethren, the extent of our obligations, and what perfection He asks of us. He wishes priests to serve as models and examples for the faithful, but He desires us to serve as models and patterns for the priests.

LETTERS AND SHORTER WORKS

Let us humble ourselves at the sight of all these considerations which are so weighty, acknowledging our unworthiness and infinite incapacity for such a task. Let us, finally, cultivate a great mistrust of ourselves, while preserving the utmost confidence in Him Who calls us, for He has extraordinary graces to bestow upon us which are in proportion to our vocation. With His grace there is nothing impossible for us. Let us, however, conceive an earnest desire to place no obstacle in its way, but rather to prepare ourselves to receive it. Then let us resolve anew, as we offer ourselves to Him, to perform in a holy manner all our ecclesiastical functions, to carry out faithfully all our duties in the Community, to put all its orders into prompt execution, to obey our superiors to the letter, to love one another sincerely, and above all, to humble ourselves constantly in all things.

As for the ecclesiastics that God sends us, let us resolve to do three things: 1. to set them an outstanding example of piety, modesty and all the other virtues; 2. to receive and treat them with the utmost charity, sincerity, civility, courtesy, meekness and forbearance, omitting nothing we can do to help train and cultivate them in all that pertains to ecclesiastical life, customs and duties; 3. to pray a great deal for them, in our Masses and other prayers, that God may give them the true spirit of the priesthood.

That, my beloved brethren, is what God asks of us—great things which completely surpass our ability, but: "Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, do manfully." (10) "Be strengthened in the Lord and in the might of his power." (11)

I implore our most bountiful Jesus and His most worthy Mother to accomplish their all-holy wills perfectly in us.

In the sacred love of their most Holy Heart I remain sincerely, unreservedly and always, to each and every one of you, whom I embrace with all respect and affection, my very dear and honored brethren,

Your most unworthy servant,
JOHN EUDES, missionary priest of the

LETTER 69

To the Priests of the Seminary at Lisieux. On their refusal to accept Father Anthony Bernard (1) as their superior. (2)

January or February, 1659 My very dear and beloved brethren:

You are aware that all priests, especially missionaries, are obliged to practise all the virtues with a view to perfecting themselves as models of holiness for the faithful. You know, consequently, that their obedience for all the orders of their superiors must be unquestioning.

If you had practised it in that way, you would have done something very pleasing to Our Lord and His most Holy Mother, very advantageous to your souls and very comforting to me. But if you did not have enough virtue for that, you should at least have been satisfied to acquaint me with your feelings in a spirit of humility and deference.

If I had sent you the lowliest of our lay brothers to govern you, you should have submitted to it because for your sakes Our Lord was obedient to Herod, Pilate, the executioners who crucified Him, and the forces of darkness. I have sent you a man who is one of the first to have entered our Congregation, extremely wise, virtuous and charitable. Yet you scorn him, you reject him, thereby condemning the superior of your Congregation in the choice he has made and preferring your own judgment to his. But what is worse, one of you writes me for the others that this is a provocation not to be endured, that he is giving up his function as bursar and the others are threatening to withdraw from the Congregation. What sort of language is that? Is that the way for priests, missionary priests, to talk? Where is the humility, the obedience, the sacrifice of self, of one's own reasoning and will? Where are the fruits of so many meditations, spiritual readings and Masses?

Open your eyes, my dear brethren, and see the errors you have committed.

1. You have opposed the most holy will of God which was made known to you through him who acts in His place.

2. You have saddened and grieved your poor Father who loves you more than his own inmost parts.

3. You have scorned your brother and injured him immeasurably, for how will he be regarded henceforth in the Congregation? If I carried out your desires, he would be a man completely discredited and ruined, and that would be sufficient to force him to withdraw from the Congregation.

4. You have done incalculable injury to the Congregation through your very pernicious example, the aftermath of which is highly dangerous. For whenever the Superior of the Congregation sends a house a superior who is not acceptable to the bursar or someone else, they will have only to announce that they are resigning from their office and threaten to withdraw. In short, my dear brethren, it is like placing a dagger at my throat to force me to carry out your wishes. It is even like stabbing me in the heart, for it fills me with a most lively sorrow to see so little virtue among you, specially since I wrote you that it was to be only for a short time.

I hope that all these considerations may help you to recognize your errors, to humble yourselves and implore pardon of God for them, to resolve never to do such a thing again, and to submit yourselves willingly to the most adorable will of God which is made known to you by him who acts in His stead.

I am with all sincerity, my beloved brethren,

Devotedly yours,

LETTER 70

To Father Thomas Manchon, Superior at Rouen. On the conduct to follow with respect to the Jansenists.

February to, 1659 My dearest brother:

I received two letters from Paris on the same day, from two eminent persons who are friends of ours.

One writes me that he was present at a very select gathering where two men of rank said that it was on our account that His Lordship of Rouen<sup>(1)</sup> issued his order for peace, meaning that we were inveighing too violently and indiscreetly against the Jansenists.

The other writes me as follows: "I shall tell you simply that the complaint was made to me in a well-known Paris residence that for some time now it has been noticed in Rouen that there is a great deal of communication between some of your Congregation and those who are only too justly associated with the group. This is particularly true of the one who is in charge of the house, whose virtue I myself do not question but who, apparently lacking sufficient firmness and vigor to oppose these people openly, might be capable, though quite unintentionally, of arousing marked prejudice against your seminary and preventing all the good that it could accomplish. He might prejudice even the subjects seeking to enter there, who would attribute such conduct to him who is in universal charge of the Congregation."

That is what they wrote me; it should teach us to keep careful watch over our conduct. I know no better secret than to follow our own broad path without becoming involved in anything save to keep the commandments of God and of the Church, follow the rules of our calling and urge everyone, in our private conversations as well as our sermons and exhortations, to do the same. Let us avoid as far as possible any mention of controversial questions of the day, whether they concern faith or morals, and especially in our sermons.

LETTER 71

To Father John Dupont, Superior of the Coutances Seminary. On the opening of the seminary at Rouen. ( 1 )

February 1659

After many trials and obstacles, not only from outsiders but even from our friends, the Rouen seminary was opened last Sunday on the octave of the feast of the Most Holy Heart of Our Bountiful

Mother. There was great solemnity and joy on the part of all our brethren and friends who, after having disagreed in this affair, became reconciled very admirably, according to what Father Manchon wrote me, so that everything is peaceful now. Help us to give thanks to Our Lord and His most Holy Mother, as well as to all the angels and saints, and pray God to pardon those who opposed it and bless those who contributed to it, particularly Mr. de la Boissière.(2) It is to him, after God and our heavenly friends, that we are most highly obligated in this matter, since he worked on it for nine months with zeal, patience and wonderful perseverance.

(1). The Rouen Seminary was opened on February 8, 1659

LETTER 72

To Father Thomas Manchon, Superior at Rouen. *On his difficulties.

Since God has chosen you to establish a seminary as important as the one in Rouen, you should consider these crosses and obstacles as a very precious gift from His divine bounty and thank Him as for a very special favor, for it is a sign that the seminary will yield great fruits.

If I beheld you surrounded by prosperity and contentment, I should fear greatly for you and the work entrusted to you; but seeing you afflicted with crosses and persecutions, I rejoice and give thanks to God that He is making you travel the road He traveled, and that He is building His house on the same foundations as those on which He established His Church.

Listen, my dearest brother, to these words of the Holy Spirit: "Looking on Jesus, the author and finisher of faith, who having joy set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame ... think diligently upon him that endured such opposition from sinners against himself; that you be not wearied, fainting in your minds. For you have not yet resisted unto blood . . ."(1)

In conclusion, my dear brother, "Believe firmly in God, and place yourself entirely in His hands." Those are the words of St. Augustine, to which I shall add these of the Church: "Cast thy care upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee."(2) Let us abandon ourselves to His divine will with full and complete resignation, having boundless confidence in His infinite goodness and in the unrivalled charity of our most bountiful Mother, the Blessed Virgin Mary.

LETTER 73

"Do manfully and let thy heart take courage, and wait thou for the Lord."(1) For he hath said: I will not leave thee: neither will I forsake thee"; (2) and He is faithful to His words and promises: "Heaven and earth shall pass, but my words shall not pass."(3) "Casting all your care upon him, for he hath care of you."(4)

Our Lord and His most holy Mother, Who had foretold the establishment at Rouen a long time before, and Who did so in such a wonderful way, will not abandon their work. They have not given their sons a house to lodge them without intending to furnish them with food; but they wish to afford us an opportunity to exercise patience, obedience to their most adorable will, love of poverty and trust in their great goodness.

We must guard well, my dearest brother, against losing that confidence which the Holy Spirit recommends so highly to us in Sacred Scripture, for it is very pleasing to His Divine Majesty. Distrust binds His hands and prevents Him from bestowing the fruits of His holy generosity.

In short, God never forsakes the needy, but He wants us to pray to Him with trust and perseverance. Make a novena, then, for that intention.

LETTER 74

To Father Thomas Manchon. On another occasion.

I am constantly mindful of the needs of your house, but I cannot believe that our most bountiful Father and our admirable Mother will withhold their generosity in this urgent necessity. No, no, no, my dearest brother, they will not abandon their poor children, however unworthy and unfaithful; heaven and earth would sooner come to an end. What would become of those divine words: "Who giveth food to all flesh: for his mercy endureth for ever"?(1)

He Who lavishes His gifts on so many Turks, blasphemers, godless persons and atheists, will He forsake His own true children? It is impossible! It is utterly impossible! We have but one thing to fear, and that is to be too fearful and not have enough confidence.

The need is urgent, but I trust that help is not far distant. For my part, I am sparing no effort or endeavor to do all that I reasonably can in this matter, but, thank God, without haste or uneasiness, and without any reliance on what I am doing. Do as much on your own part.

But above all, I beseech you to see to it that God is well served and honored through faithful and literal obedience to all the orders and rules of the Congregation and all the things that God has been pleased to inspire me to establish in it. Know, my dearest brother, that by observing and having them observed as much as possible, you will be doing something very pleasing to Our Lord and His most Holy Mother, and you will bring down their holy blessing upon us and our Community. ### LETTER 75

To Mr. d'Omonville, Counsellor of the Parliament of Rouen. To persuade him to maintain the liberalities(1)pledged to the Rouen Seminary, which he mistakenly feared was being won over to Jansenism.

My dear Sir:

I must confess that it causes me a very bitter pang to see you withdraw your support from us. It is true that it would be better not to have any seminary at all than to see it managed and directed by Jansenists. But, thank God, the seminary at Rouen is certainly not in that state, for there is a great difference between a seminary which is under the authority of persons suspected of Jansenism and a seminary which is managed and directed by Jansenists. It is a fact that the seminary is under the authority of certain persons suspected of this pernicious doctrine; but it is under the immediate guidance and direction of persons who are as far removed from it as heaven is from hell.

If in breaking with us, my dear Sir, you were not doing something which will give the Jansenists what they want and which will be most prejudicial to Catholics, gemenstacerem.( 2 ) But consider, I beg of you, that as a result of this breach the seminary will no longer be ours, since all the conditions of the order of Parliament are by no means fulfilled. It will then fall into the hands of the Jansenists, which is precisely what they wish, and is the greatest misfortune that could happen to the city of Rouen and the entire province.

(1). As soon as the Rouen seminary was established, it was stipulated that the house was not to be supported by the diocese. Thanks to a donation of ten thousand livres pledged by Mr. d'Omonville, St. John Eudes had been able to assume this obligation. Abandoned now by Mr. d'Omonville, he found himself unable to meet it and forced, consequently, to give up the seminary, which would have allowed the Jansenists to take it over by supplying the necessary sum themselves. Cf. Costil, Annales, de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, Vol. 5, P. 337. Despite Mr. d'Omonville's donation, which the Saint succeeded in having maintained, the Rouen seminary passed through great financial smuts in its early days.

LETTERS AND SHORTER WORKS

If we are dependent on several suspected persons, that will induce us to keep guard over ourselves with increased effort and vigilance; but if the seminary falls into the hands of the Jansenists, who is going to answer to God for the great evils which will inevitably result, if not those who did not prevent the misfortune when they could have done so? One must always choose the lesser of two evils; now an evil that is neither present nor certain is incomparably smaller than one which is certain and inevitable. You fear that we are turning to Jansenism, although we are more opposed to it than fire is to water; but it is only too certain that if we do not keep the seminary, it will be entrusted to the Jansenists. That is why everyone who has heard this matter discussed cannot understand how it is possible to be in doubt about it, except a single individual from this district(3) who prefers his own opinion to that of all the directors, religious, and everyone else. Certainly such conduct is highly dangerous.

What likelihood is there, Sir, that one person who has some authority over us can pervert an entire Community which openly professes to wage war upon Jansenism? But were there such a danger, that same reason ought to induce our friends not to abandon us, especially at a time when there is no danger for them, since they are well aware that there is no malice in our ranks, thanks be to God.

Finally, my dear Sir, Jansenism is a very pernicious thing because it is a heresy which destroys faith. Schism and division among the servants of God, however, are no less dangerous, insofar as they destroy charity which is a virtue more excellent even than faith. "And now there remain faith, hope and charity, these three: but the greatest of these is charity," (4) says the Holy Spirit.

Therefore I urge you, my dear brother, by the tenderest charity of Our Lord and His most Holy Mother, not to withdraw your support from our brethren who love and honor you much more than can be expressed, and not to destroy such an important work in which you have helped serve as an instrument of God. I implore Him with all my strength to speak to your heart Himself and make you see the peril confronting you, not only because you are destroying the Rouen senti

LETTER 76(1)

To His Lordship Claude Auvry, a former bishop of Coutances(2) The Saint urges him to accept the bishopric of Bayeux, left vacant by the death of Bishop Servien.

Caen, June 1, 1659

Most illustrious and honored Lord:

Behold me at your feet to receive, may it please you, your holy blessing.

Mr. de Saint Hilaire was in the city yesterday evening. He brought me kindest regards from you, for which I thank you very much, my Lord, as also for your kindness toward our confrere, Father Blouet,(3) during the visit you graciously paid him, of which he wrote me in terms full of happiness and delight. For it is true that he entertains for you, my Lord, all the reverence and affection that the most dutiful son in the world could have for a very good father. And all our other confrères, thank God, share the same sentiments, which affords me no little satisfaction.

Mr. de Saint Hilaire told me something that would overwhelm me with joy if it came true. He assured me that Bishop Auvry was being mentioned for the bishopric of Bayeux, something which Mr. de Courmont had already told me six days ago. They have been talking about it in this city for a long time. O my Lord, if that came to pass, what rejoicing it would bring, not only to your most humble servants and unworthy children, but to this whole diocese, where I can assure you that you are greatly honored, loved and wanted. Indeed, I do not believe there could be another place so partial to you. But there is something else: these two gentlemen told me that only your consent is necessary to bring this about. Oh! how I do cast myself at your feet at this moment to implore you not to let this opportunity pass.

I shall perhaps be told that I am moved by self-interest to make this appeal to you. I confess that I am far from disinterested, but my sole interests are those of my God and His Church, and of your eternity, my Lord. Now, I see that if you were bishop of Bayeux and if God gave you the grace to reside there, as I believe you would plan to do, you would render Him invaluable services at little cost in this diocese. You would do great things for the welfare of that Church, and you would enrich your eternity with an infinite number of heavenly graces and blessings.

That is why, my Lord, I pray you, I implore you, I urge you, by all that you love and all that is lovable in heaven and on earth, to think earnestly and effectually about this matter, particularly for the love of the most holy Mother of God, patroness of this diocese as well as of that of Coutances. Since it has pleased God in His goodness to make you a bishop of His Church, please do not neglect the opportunity He gives you to be useful in episcopal duties which are so beautiful, so noble, so holy and divine. The episcopacy was instituted by Our Lord Jesus Christ for the same end as the apostolate, namely, to carry on the work of the salvation of souls which the great Bishop of our souls, in the wording of Scripture, began on earth; the work of the Apostles, the work of the kings and princes of heaven, the work of all works, omnium divinatorum divinissimum. Your life, your time, your mind and all that you possess, my Lord could they be used more worthily and advantageously than in such a work? You can do a certain amount of good at the Court, but you would accomplish infinitely more by governing a great diocese like this one. Forgive me for speaking to you at such great length about this, but I am still saying too little on a subject of such importance.

Think about it, then, my Lord, I beg of you once more. I implore

JOHN EUDES, missionary priest.

P. S. I forgot to tell you, my Lord, that his Lordship of ... arrived in this city Monday evening. I did myself the honor to go at once to greet him, and he received me with great friendliness, for which I am grateful to you and thank you very humbly. I shall go this week, God willing, to Coutances, but shall remain there only six or seven days in order to leave to begin a mission on Corpus Christi Sunday at Vasteville, (4) in La Hague. If you do me the honor to write me, please address your letters to me at our house in Caen, as if I were there, and they will be forwarded to me. What great happiness if I should learn that Bishop Auvry was appointed to the bishopric of Bayeux!

If I considered from a human point of view all that you write me of the needs of your house in Rouen, it would trouble me a great deal, but I look upon them as being in the province of God who manages all things in the best possible manner. though it is very large, it is nevertheless too small on this occasion. I can truthfully say that we have more than fifteen thousand people present on Sundays.

There are twelve confessors, but without exaggeration there is enough work for fifty. People come from a distance of eight or ten leagues, and their hearts are so touched that there is nothing to be seen but tears and nothing to be heard but laments from the poor penitent men and women. The results observed by the confessors in the tribunal are wonderful. But what grieves us is that we shall be able to confess only a fraction of these people. We are exhausted. The missionaries see some who have been waiting for a week without having been able to get to confession, and who cast themselves on their knees whenever they meet a priest, imploring him with suppliant hands and tears in their eyes to hear them. And yet this is already our sixth week (1) here.

What a great blessing the missions are! And how necessary! What a great evil it is to hinder them in any way! Oh, if those who have prevented us from giving several in this diocese only knew the harm they have done! "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." (2)

Let us pray the Lord of the harvest, my dear brother, to send laborers for it, saying frequently to Him with all our hearts: "Lord of the harvest, send labourers into thy harvest." What are all those doctors and bachelors of arts doing in Paris, while souls are perishing by the thousand for want of someone to offer them a hand to withdraw them from perdition and preserve them from everlasting fire? Certainly, if I dared, I should go straight to Paris and cry out in the Sorbonne and the other colleges: Fire! Fire! The flames of hell are consuming the whole universe! Come, you doctors, bachelors and parish priests, come, all you ecclesiastics, and help to extinguish them! (3) ' (1). St. John Eudes and his assistants began the mission on June 15, the Sunday in the Octave of Corpus Christi and closed it in the first week of August.

This is perhaps a reminiscence of the beautiful words written by St. Francis Xavier a century earlier in one of his letters: "It often occurs to me," he said, "to go through the academics of Europe, principally the one in Paris, crying out with all my might to those who have more learning than charity: Ah! how many ways lead heaven and are come into hell through your fault!"»

To Mother Margaret Frances Patin.(1) On her spiritual state.

My very dear and good Mother:

May the divine Infant Jesus be the heart of our hearts and the spirit of our spirits.

All that you have written me of the condition and dispositions of your soul is indisputable proof that our most amiable Saviour has a very special love for you. There is nothing to fear, my dearest Mother; you are in a good state. Remain undisturbed and confident, abandoning all that you are, in time and in eternity, to the most adorable will of God, Who has established His reign in your heart and will reign there for ever in the blessed eternity. But I beseech you, my dearest Mother, not to allow yourself to believe that you can or ought to do now what you have done in the past. On the contrary, you should greatly moderate your mortifications, and give your body all the rest and care necessary to conserve your health. If you do that, I assure you that you will be doing something highly pleasing to God, and a great deal more pleasing than if you were to do otherwise.

My most cordial greetings to all our dear Sisters in general, and to each one individually. I implore them to carry out faithfully their daily obligations to the divine Infant, His Holy Mother and St. Joseph, and to strive in competition with one another to imitate the humility of this Infant Jesus, as also His simplicity, innocence, obedience, meek

To Sister Mary of the Nativity Herson, His Niece. The Saint testifies to his conformity to the will of God, and gives her spiritual counsel.

Rouen, January 7, 1660 My dearest Sister:

May the divine will be our guide in all things.(1)

It is true that my months of absence are sometimes quite long, and longer than I am aware of, but not longer than I wish. For, through the mercy of my Lord, it seems to me that I desire nothing, either in this world or in the next, except to abandon myself entirely to the sweet possession of the most adorable will of my God, so that it may lead me wherever it pleases, and do with me, everywhere and at all times, whatever is most pleasing to it. Hence I cannot tell you yet when I shall return to Caen. I am well aware that, with the grace of Our Lord, it will be when I wish, but I do not know yet when I shall wish to do so; that is to say, I do not know when God desires it.

You describe your spiritual state very well to me, my dear Sister. I have nothing more to tell you on that subject, save that you should try not to worry about your poverty and wretchedness, but to dwell in peace, humility, patience, submission and abandonment to the divine will, remaining obedient to your superioress, and faithful to the observance of your Rules.

Above all, my dear daughter, I recommend three things to you. The first is always to preserve in your heart a firm and generous resolution to overcome the shortcomings that you recognize in yourself. The second is to keep your intention pure and upright, protesting frequently to Our Lord that you wish to do nothing save for His glory and love, and to accomplish His most adorable will in all things. The third is to have a great love, meekness and cordiality in your heart toward all your Sisters, demonstrating it by your words and actions.

I implore the most amiable Infant Jesus to live and reign in your heart, and in the hearts of all our dear Sisters. I send my regards to them, one and all, with every possible token of affection, wishing them a thousand and more blessings and a great abundance of graces, that they may use this new year in a holy manner and in conformity with the most holy will of God.

I am delighted that your brother, (2) my nephew, is so close to the time when he is to consecrate himself to His Divine Majesty through the solemn vows of holy religion. I implore God in His infinite goodness to grant him whatever graces are necessary and desirable to perform this act well. When you write to him, please give him my kindest regards.

I remain with all my heart, my dearest niece, Sister, and daughter,

LETTER 88

To Mother Margaret Frances Patin. On the decease of Sister Mary of the Child Jesus de Bois-David(1)

Rouen, February 1660

J.M.J. My dear good Mother:

May the divine will be our guide in all things.

The decease of our dear Sister Mary of the Child Jesus surprised me a little at first; but having cast my eyes upon that most adorable will which arranges all things in the best possible way, my heart remained at peace and my lips could only utter: My God, "not my will but Thine be done!" (2) Ah it is well that way, my dear Mother, since such is the pleasure of the divine Child Jesus, Who willed to take this dear sister, consecrated to the Divine Childhood, at the very time which is dedicated to this great mystery. She has gone to take possession of heaven in the name of all the sisters and to begin an eternal establishment of the Community of Our Lady of Charity. She has gone to paradise, there to adore, praise and love the most holy Trinity unceasingly and for all eternity, together with Jesus and Mary and all the blessed, in the name and on behalf of all her dear sisters. These are the first fruits of your house which you have offered to His Divine Majesty. It is your first sacrifice which must have been very pleasing before the throne of Almighty God.

But when I say that she has gone to heaven, I do not mean that she has arrived there yet, for sometimes one is a long time on the way. That is why we must pray a great deal for this dear sister. For my part, I will not fail to do so, with God's help.

I am afraid that the fervor of our good sisters and their desire to mortify themselves may impel them to endure excessive cold, which may cause illness among them. I pray you, my dear Mother, to take precautions against this.

With respect to Holy Communion for the sick, you may arrange for

To Mother Margaret Frances Patin. The Saint congratulates her on having celebrated the feast of the Heart of Mary. Then he expresses fear of her being elected superior of the Visitation Convent at Saint-Lo, ( 1 ) and he outlines the course she should follow during Lent.

Rouen, February 15, 1660 J.M.J.

My dear good Mother:

May the divine will be our guide in all things.

I was very happy about what you wrote me concerning our dearest Sister Mary of the Child Jesus, and I thank Our Lord and His most Holy Mother infinitely for it! I will do whatever is necessary, after we have discussed it together.

You make me very happy, too, my dearest Mother, by telling me that you celebrated the feast of the most Holy Heart of our admirable Mother so well. I give infinite thanks to her and her beloved Son for all the graces they bestowed on you that day-both you and all our dear Sisters. I bless and praise them with all my heart, too, for guiding you, my dear Mother, along the road which they themselves traveled, the way of the Cross and desolation. It is a very great favor that they are conferring on you; have no doubt about it, my dearest Mother. Embrace your cross wholeheartedly for the love of our most amiable Crucified and His divine Mother, and abandon yourself entirely to the divine will.

Thursday I delivered a lengthy exhortation at the greater Visitation Monastery, and another yesterday at the smaller one, where I saw the Mother Superiors of both places. I was highly gratified with them, especially with the superior of the first-mentioned monastery;(2) she is truly a holy nun. We spoke a great deal of Mother Margaret Frances Patin, for whom she shows a great affection. But she told me something that troubles me exceedingly: that it is to be feared that you may be elected to the foundation at Saint U, where Mother Chary was to go. I beseech you, my dearest Mother, to let me know as soon as possible if there is any likelihood of this, any reason to fear it, so that we may anticipate and try to avert this blow which would spell the ruin of the house of Our Lady of Charity. Please write me what you know about this, and your sincere opinion of it.

This good Mother also told me that she hopes soon to have copies of the Lives of your first Mothers, and that she will send them to you.

I greet our dear Sisters, one and all, in the sacred love of the most Holy Heart of Jesus and Mary, beseeching them not to fail to visit our most amiable Saviour in the desert each day during Lent, in the name of the whole human race, that they may prostrate themselves at His feet to adore Him in all that transpires within Him, both outwardly and inwardly. Let them also thank Him for all He is doing and suffering for them and for all mankind, ask pardon of Him for the many sins for which He is mortifying Himself so rigorously, give themselves to Him in order to be united with His holy dispositions in fasting, praying, and remaining in silence and solitude, and try to imitate Him in all these things. After that, they should also visit His most holy Mother, who is in a state conformable to that of her Son, that they may greet and honor her in this condition, thank her, unite themselves with her and pray to her.

I am with all my heart, speaking to the dearest Mother and her dear daughters, my beloved Sisters,

Devotedly yours,
JOHN EUDES, missionary priest.

P. S. Please have a few little prayers said in private, my dear Mother, for nine days, and have the Sisters receive Holy Communion in a body, for my intentions.

To Father John James Blouet de Camilly. On the behavior of the candidates for ordination at the Rouen seminary, during the Lenten ordination of 1660.

March 31, 1660

We were highly gratified with our candidates for ordination, who numbered one hundred twenty. God has singularly blessed us in them. His Lordship the Archbishop<sup>(1)</sup> ordered us to bring them in procession on Saturday, the ordination day, into Notre Dame Church, where he conferred Holy Orders on them. Then they returned as they had come, but with such great modesty, piety and recollection, both in entering and leaving, and during the ordination ceremonies, that everyone agreed it would be impossible to find humbler religious anywhere. All who saw them were greatly edified, and his Lordship the Archbishop evinced such great satisfaction over them that he insisted on telling everyone about it over and over again, and proclaiming his joy in his seminary. Give thanks to God and His most Holy Mother for all this, and communicate it to our dear brethren, whom I embrace with all my heart.

This venerable priest is our good friend, or rather our beloved brother whom we love and consider as one of our own, and as belonging to our Congregation, because he really loves it as much as any one of us. For many years now he has been laboring with us on our missions with wonderful blessings and results, since God has endowed him with the true missionary spirit and all the qualities necessary for the perfect exercise of such functions.

To the Community of Our Lady of Charity. On submission to the will of God.

Paris, July 20, 1660

J.M. J. My dearest and beloved Sisters:

May the divine will be our guide in all things.

I thank you with all my heart for your beautiful and cordial letter, which made me very happy indeed.

When I left Caen I expected to be away two months at the most, but my will was not in agreement with my thoughts, for it was my wish to be gone longer than eight months, but I was not aware that such was my will. I desired it, since God did, for His will is mine. I did not know then that I should have this intent, because I was ignorant of God's will in the matter, just as I do not know what He intends for the future. It is quite evident that His holy providence has brought Pray, my dearest Sisters, that He will do whatever is most pleasing to Him solely for the glory of His Holy Name, without regard for our unworthiness and wretchedness.

It is true that I am not in the least worried in your regard, my beloved Sisters, for, aside from the great concern and ardent love that I know our admirable Mother has for the daughters of her Heart, I also know full well in whose protection I have left you. That does not prevent, however, my offering you daily to Our Lord Jesus Christ during the holy sacrifice of the Mass, nor from visiting you each day in spirit. I beseech you in turn, my dearest Sisters, to join us daily in our labors during this mission,<sup>(1)</sup> by your prayers and other pious exercises. You can do nothing more pleasing to His Divine Majesty.

I am very happy over the blessings which God in His infinite goodness is bestowing on your little Community. I implore Him most humbly to increase them more and more, and not to tolerate any hindrance on your part. That such a thing may not happen, my beloved Sisters, I entreat you to examine yourselves particularly on these three points, namely: humility, obedience, and mutual charity and cordiality. I remain, a great deal more than you can imagine or I can say, in the sacred love of the most Holy Heart of Jesus and Mary, my dearest and beloved Sisters,

Devotedly yours,

(Paris, 1660) J. M. J.

My very dear and good Mother:

May the divine will be our guide in all things.

I praised God with my whole heart for all the graces He is giving you and for the holy dispositions He is implanting in your soul. I thank Him, too, for increasing the ranks of our dearest Sisters, your good daughters. But particularly do I give thanks to Him for the goodwill He inspires in you toward my niece;<sup>(2)</sup> I am most grateful to you on that score, my dearest Mother, and thank you with all sincerity.

I was delighted at first to read in your letter that your business in Rome is progressing satisfactorily, but this example at Avignon<sup>(3)</sup> of which you speak worries me considerably, for I am afraid they wish to unite you with the religious of Avignon—a thing that must never

(1). The Launay estate, situated in the parish of Saint Aubin-de-la-Pierre, near Periers, had been sold to the Coutances seminary in 1655 by Anne Le Conte, who entered the novitiate of Our Lady of Charity that same year. She brought the Community, a dowry of eight thousand livres. Upon receiving the habit she took the name of Sister Mary of the Presentation. In 1678 the Launay home became the novitiate of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

(2). The reference here is to Frances Herson, sister of Mother Mary of the Nativity Herson. She took the habit on July 25, 1662 at the age of twenty-one, was professed as a lay sister on March 25, 1665 and died on March 26, 1733. She was known in religious life as Sister Mary of St. Francis. Entering the monastery in her youth, she suffered an injury to her arm at the hands of an unskillful surgeon, and for a long time it was feared that she might lose the use of her arm. Mother Patin allowed her to remain, nevertheless, out of respect to her uncle. The Saint alludes to these facts in this letter. Ory, op. cit., p. 110, note.

(3). In the Refuge of Avignon, the penitents were governed by former penitents who had become religious. St. John Eudes, on the contrary, wanted the administration of the religious of Our Lady of Charity always to be kept free from any hint of suspicion and thus he frowned upon allowing the penitents desirous of consecrating themselves to God to be professed in the Order; he preferred their being sent to other Communities. This fact explains why he opposed, at all costs, the union of the Refuge of Caen with the one at Avignon. Cf. Ory, ibid., p. 110.

be allowed to happen. Indeed, I should prefer instead to see the house utterly destroyed, but I trust that Our Lord and His most Holy Mother will provide. When Mr. de la Boissière arrives here, where he is expected, I shall know from his own lips just what he meant.

I saw our dearest Mother de Maupeou<sup>(4)</sup> and shall see her again, God willing, after the close of our mission here.

If I can locate the goldsmith, I will take care of your request.

That business about the Launay estate is giving me a great deal of trouble, for our brethren at Coutances write me that it will ruin our house if something is not done about it.

I beseech you, my dearest Mother, to consider that I undertook this transaction as a favor to your house, that I did so against the opinion of all our brethren, and that we purchased this estate when no one else wanted it. All that is incontestable, for the place was certainly not such a bargain that we were obliged to buy it. It is true that, after the deal had been closed, you or someone else told me that the pastor of Saint Nicolas Church was asking for the property, but at that time I had a verbal agreement with another person who was also making a bid for it. Even so, if the pastor of Saint Nicolas had come into possession of it, together with the same troubles in connection with it that we are having, he would not have failed to appeal to you for indemnity. Hence I am entreating you, my dearest Mother, to act in this case as you would have others act toward you under the same circumstances. It is a transaction in which we have been cheated, and if she who sold us this property were still in possession of her wealth, she would be obliged to indemnify us. Now it may be that it was largely a donation to you. That is why it is up to you to do what she would be obligated to do if the estate still belonged to her; such a course is only fair and equitable. But do not let me be the judge of it; I urge you, my dearest Mother, to forestall any offense against Christian charity by allowing yourself to be guided in this matter by what the Rules of the Visitation Order command you to do.

To Mother Margaret Frances Patin. On her spiritual disturbances, and the steps to take in obtaining the approbation of Rome for the Order.

(1660) J. M. J.

My very dear and good Mother:

May the divine will be our guide in all things.

I bless Our Lord with my whole heart for the favor He has granted you in having controlled the wind and tempest, and having filled your soul with calm and tranquility. But I thank Him even more for the grace He has given you in allowing you the sufferings which I perceive from your letter you have undergone. My dear Mother, how precious is the state of suffering! Ah, what a priceless gift from divine Bounty it is! How much more should we render thanks to God for such desolations than for all the consolations in the world! They are the greatest gifts that God can bestow on earth upon souls who are very dear to Him, and, were we to remain on our knees for a century in thanksgiving for the most trifling affliction possible, we still could not thank Him worthily, as He Himself said on one occasion to Blessed Henry Suze of the Order of St. Dominic. But, my dearest Mother, I beseech you to shun the thought that you have no vocation to the house of our Lady of Charity. This idea does not proceed from God, since it is certainly contrary to the truth. Never have I known a vocation to be more obvious, indisputable and manifest than yours.

God grant that the news from Rome may be false, but I fear it is only too true, for Cardinal Anthony Barberini(1) to whom reference is made, and Cardinal Antonio are but one and the same person. It is true that we, on our part, have never spoken in Rome of the Daughters of the Heart of the Most Holy Virgin, so I do not know where that could have originated.(2)

Be that as it may, we must be completely resigned to the most adorable will of God and trust that His infinite goodness will arrange everything in the manner most pleasing to Him; that, after all, is what we wish. Nevertheless, we should not become discouraged, but should do whatever we can to achieve our end.

I have always said to you, my dearest Mother, and I say again, that we must send a man to Rome expressly on our business, for the reasons I have already given you. It is my opinion that we should wait for further news; however, we must be prepared to send someone in case it becomes necessary. It is not nearly enough that the matter has been recommended to His Lordship of Le Puy;(3) it is still necessary for us to send an ecclesiastic to further the affair. I know one(4) in Paris who would be well qualified, and I do not think he would refuse me. I have written to Paris to find out when His Lordship of Le Puy plans to leave, so that I may meet him to discuss the matter with him at greater (3). The Bishop of Le Puy, of whom mention is made here, was His Lordship Henry de Maupas. He was about to leave for Rome to urge, in the name of the French clergy, the canonization of the saintly Francis de Sales.

To Mother Margaret Frances Patin. On her spiritual anxieties, and on sending a representative to Rome for the purpose of soliciting approbation for the Order.

September 21, 1660 J. M. J.

My very dear and good Mother:
May the divine will be our guide in all things.

If I were to speak according to the senses, I should indeed pity you for your sufferings, but speaking according to the spirit, I find you more worthy of envy than of pity. The greatest happiness that can befall you is to be in conformity with Jesus Christ Our Lord, Who is our most adorable Master. Now, your present state of privation, death and annihilation is highly conformable to that endured by our most amiable Saviour here on earth. Therefore give yourself to Him, my dearest Mother, that you may suffer with Him in that condition and in His spirit, as He desires. Try to do these three things: 1. Strive not to become disheartened, guarding well against it. Surrender yourself to virtue and to divine strength, that they may sustain YOU. 2. Accept this state of death and annihilation, saying with the Son of God: "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit." (1). Abandon yourself completely to the most holy will of God, repeating with Our Lord: «Not my will, but Thine be done.» (2)

I come now to your undertaking, my dearest Mother. A short time ago I saw several persons who recently had been in Rome on business of the same nature as yours, and they assured me that it will never receive attention unless you send a man expressly to advance it, for the same reasons that I have already mentioned and written to you so often.

Remember, too, that His Lordship of Le Puy (3) said this same thing to me on the subject, and that what you wrote me about Mother de Maupeou should not cause you the slightest hesitation, because I am quite sure that after I have explained things to her, she will agree with me.

I have also been informed by various persons who were recently in Rome what the approximate cost will be. They all tell me that a moderate expenditure will come to at least two hundred livres for the journey there and that much again for the return trip. While there, one cannot get along on less than four hundred livres a year; however, it will not take that long. In brief, while it is impossible to determine exactly what the entire cost will be, I think YOU Can manage on about six hundred livres. That sum, of course, is nothing in a matter of such great consequence. Have no regard for money, my dearest Mother, in this urgent necessity, lest Our Lord tell you some day what he told to St. Teresa on an occasion when she was having difficulty in deciding something regarding the establishment of one of her houses; she was hesitating because it would cost a great deal, whereupon the Son of God said to her: "Thou art therefore still mindful of money!"

The person who has made you an offer to go to Rome to transact your business for a hundred crowns is either joking or else he is planning to go there anyway and would like to make the trip at your expense. But has he all the qualifications necessary to handle this affair? If so, do as you please about it. course to follow regarding the seminary at Valognes, (1) which was sus-

I learned that a young man who had been sent by his father to our house in Coutances to determine his vocation, wishing to go to Valognes to study theology there, wrote his father that a close friendship exists between the latter seminary and the one at Coutances, and that you assured him there was absolutely no danger. This greatly surprised the father, in view of what is being said about the Valognes seminary.

If that was your counsel, it was given with good intent and because you do not know how that seminary is reputed to be a hotbed of Jansenism an opinion which is current here, and held by the Queen, (2) the Sorbonne and many others. What you said is capable, therefore, of doing us great harm and causing us to be considered something we are not, thank God.

I implore you, then, my dear brother, to make amends for this as best you can without telling anyone at all that I wrote you.

LETTER 99

To Father John Dupont. *On the Hermitage (1) at Caen.

November 27, 1660

You did exceedingly well not to receive them (2) in your house; for our benefactors (3) have secretly put a pamphlet in circulation here which maliciously states that I was the spiritual director of the Hermitage, and others are saying that those who committed these follies in the streets of Caen and elsewhere were from our ranks . . . The source of such impostures is vanity, which, once it has taken root in the mind, can seldom be banished and then only with great difficulty. That is what a holy person (4) told Mr. de Bernières (5) several times—that as many souls as he started on the path of passive prayer (6) (for that is in God's province), he was starting on the road to hell.

(1). This reference is to several members of the Hermitage at Caen who had asked to enter the Coutances seminary. We know that Mr. de Bernières had grouped around him, at the Hermitage, some laymen and ecclesiastics who lived under his guidance in the practice of piety and good works. After his death (May 3, 1659), some of them indulged in demonstrations in the streets of Caen, and later in those of Argentan and Falaise, which met with diverse judgments. Cf. Boulay, Vie du V- P.. Eudes, Vol. 3, Ch. 20. Four who had taken part in the Caen demonstrations were condemned by the criminal prosecutor to pay a fine and suffer banishment from the city of Caen. Two of them, Dennis Roberge, valet to Mr. de Bernières, and John Dudouyt, went to join Bishop de Laval in Canada. Another, James Dudouyt, John's brother, entered the Congregation of Eudists, where he was known under the name of Jourdan. He died in the odor of sanctity at the seminary in Rennes. The Abbé Tresvaux has included quite a detailed account of him in Volume V of his edition of the Vies des saints de Bretagne, by Dom Lobineau. Cf. On the contrary, I allow myself to be bound to its most sweet hands, and its chains are so delightful to me that my captivity constitutes all my happiness and paradise. These past few days I have been seeing the Mother Superior (2) of the Visitation nuns in Caen, who came recently from Toulouse, that is to say, from a distance of two hundred fifty leagues. This fire, therefore, was the result of His mandate and it meant several things:

1. That it was strictly forbidden to work on Sundays and feast days;

2. That kings were allowed to build Louvres; but that God was ordering them to lighten the burden of their subjects, to take pity on so many widows, orphans and people overwhelmed by poverty;

3. That kings and princes were permitted to indulge in decent amusements; but to spend all their days, weeks, months, years and even a whole lifetime in doing so was not the road to paradise;

4. That Paris was full of atheists who trample God underfoot and do things to shock even the demons; and that, if their Majesties were aware of all this and refrained from using the royal authority to punish such horrible crimes, they would be held responsible for them before God and bring down His vengeance and curse upon their heads;

5. That, if temporal fire had not spared the royal house, the eternal fires would spare neither princes nor princesses, kings nor queens, unless they lived like Christians and took pity upon their subjects; and that, if this material fire had shown no respect for the portraits and likenesses of the kings which were in the palace that burned, neither would the fire of God's wrath spare the originals unless they used their authority to destroy the tyranny of the devil and sin, and to establish the kingdom of God in the souls of their subjects;

6. That my sole interest in saying these things was that of my Master and my God, as well as that of the salvation of my King and Queen for whom I would lay down a thousand lives;

7. That it was indeed a pity that the great personages of this world were besieged by hordes of sycophants who were so poisoning and destroying them by their flatteries that they almost never heard the truth; that preachers were very culpable in the sight of God to suppress the truth unjustly, and that I should consider myself most guilty if I did not say all these things to her Majesty;

Finally, I entreated her to accept them as coming not from a man

but from God; that I was only a worthless creature and miserable sinner, but that in the place where I was standing and as a representative of God, I could say, like St. Paul and all who have the honor to preach the holy word of God: "For Christ therefore we are ambassadors." (3) I was fulfilling my duty as an ambassador of Jesus Christ in order to bring the words of the King of kings to a great queen, and that I implored her to accept them as such.

In conclusion, I entreated the nuns and the assistants, with whom the church was filled to overflowing, to address their prayers to Our Lord and His most Holy Mother to obtain from His Divine Majesty the grace for our most Christian King (4) and our Queens (5) to acknowledge so many favors and blessings which heaven had lavished on their royal persons, and to use their power to overthrow the tyranny of hell and establish the kingdom of God in the souls of their subjects.

That is what I said almost word for word. I am writing you this so that you and your friends may know the truth.

I have since learned from several persons who were with the Queen, and who left with her at that time, that she took it very well indeed, and that, when several flatterers had wanted to comment, she silenced them very conclusively.

His Lordship of Coutances, (6) who is at the Court and knows what is going on there, expressed great satisfaction to me over my sermon; and a number of other persons of quality sought me out to let me know how glad they were about it.

May God bestow His universal blessing, granting us the grace never to seek anything save to please Him, and to do and say what He asks of us.

To Father John Dupont, Superior of the Coutances Seminary. In answer to Father Dupont's letter claiming that God did not wish him to remain there.

(1661) J. M. J.

Peace to men of goodwill, that is to say, peace to men who have made a complete renunciation of their own wills and have no other than God's, which is manifested to them through holy obedience.

O my dear brother, what a great delusion it is to maintain that one is quite certain that God does not desire something of him which obedience desires! Let us humble ourselves, my dear brother, and not misrepresent our own inclinations and feelings as the will of God when they are contrary to obedience, without which it is impossible to please His Divine Majesty, particularly in a Congregation of ecclesiastics who must serve as examples for all types of virtue.

You would be very fortunate even to die through obedience in your present employment. Let us ask Our Lord to make us participants in His divine obedience which caused His death on the Cross, and for our own part, let us strive to put our own wills to death and follow our most kind Father, if we wish to be numbered among His children. I implore Him with all my heart to grant us this grace. Nevertheless, since you constrain me to do so, I will shortly relieve you of your post at all costs, God willing.

I am, in truth, with all my heart,

Devotedly yours,
JOHN EUDES, missionary priest.

I am deeply moved by your illness. You have a quartan ague(2) in your body, and I have three in my heart: yours, that of our brother Father Jourdan and that of Brother Andre,(3) along with the tertian ague(4) of our beloved Father Blouet, and the ills of our very dear Father Le Mesle and all our other brethren.

davits(3) you had sent me from the Vicars-General, together with several others from the Vicars-General of Paris. These affidavits concern the nuns of the Hotel Dieu, in Paris, who are constantly in the midst of numerous sick persons, convalescents, doctors, surgeons, apothecaries, hospital attendants and even fallen women who come there to be confined, and they also concern your own Visitation Sisters who stay at the Magdalen Asylum. Their purpose is to prove that both employments exist without giving rise to any disorder.

A long time ago I spoke about this matter to his Lordship of Bayeux, (4) telling him what was being done at Rome in that regard. He even wrote, at my request, to some of his friends there, asking them to help further our cause. I spoke to him about it again this week, and he assured me that when he is in Rome he will furnish his affidavit and have it presented by the proper persons, and that he will have recourse to all his influence and friends there in order to bring our business to a successful conclusion. He is expecting to receive his Bulls tomorrow. He will be consecrated as soon as possible, and he hopes then to be in his diocese by All Saints' Day. Hence I have written Father Boniface that, if he perceives any danger of failure, he should not continue to push the matter but rather delay it for the moment until he obtains his Lordship's help. I received some letters from him yesterday, in which he wrote that they are raising formidable objections over the danger which they believe results from having religious govern penitents; that some, nevertheless, are encouraging his hopes, and that he is working day and night to promote this affair, busying himself with it to the exclusion of everything else. He also wrote that, in order to overcome their objection, he has disclosed that the penitents are separated from the Sisters by a wall; that they have their own dormitory, refectory and chapel; that there is a door in the aforementioned wall through which two of the older Sisters, chosen by the superioress, enter the penitents' quarters and leave again in the evening; that during the night the penitents are watched through a lattice; that there is always a lighted lamp in the center of their dormitory, before a statue of the Blessed Virgin; that those of the penitents who are recognized to be well grounded in the fear of God are put in charge of the others; that those who are capable of corrupting the others are placed under lock and key during the night; that no one is forced to enter the house, but, that only those accepted who, being moved by the grace of God, enter voluntarily to become converted and do penance.

He wrote me that he revealed all these things in order to overcome their objection, in the belief that they exist as he described them, and that I should inform you about it so that, if they are not exactly as he stated, you may put them into practice as soon as possible. For if it happens-as it will if he meets with success--that they write from Rome to the Nuncio, as is customary in such circumstances, requesting confirmation of these things, they must be found true. See to it then, my dearest Mother, if you please.

I wrote him that the penitents are not observed through a lattice, and that he should try to suppress this proposition, but that all the rest will be done. The Abbe Brisacier has contributed nothing whatsoever to our cause, and the banker<sup>(5)</sup> has served only to injure it. If a man like the one there now had been sent in the first place, the thing would have been accomplished a long time ago, and with less trouble and expense, which will be considerable now.

I have already seen our good Mother de Maupeou,<sup>(6)</sup> and I hope to see her again today.

I greet all our dear Sisters most cordially, each and every one of them. Please tell them that I recommend myself earnestly to their prayers. I remain, both to the Mother and her daughters, in the sacred love of the most Holy Heart of Jesus and Mary, my dearest Mother,

Devotedly yours,
JOHN EUDES, missionary priest.

LETTER 107

To Mother Margaret Frances Patin. The Saint asks that a copy of the Rules for the Penitents be made in order to send them to Rome, and he prescribes the Articles for them.

Paris, September to, 1661 J. M. J.

My dearest Mother:

May the divine will be our guide in all things.

Enclosed is a letter from Father Boniface which I received yesterday and am forwarding to you, so that you can have the plan he requests drawn up, like the one he has made, or approximately so, and can send it to me as soon as possible.

It will not be necessary for you to send me all your Rules, but have those written out for me which concern the penitents and the manner in which they are governed, and have the following articles inserted:

1. That only those are received who, being called by God, voluntarily enter the house to do penance there.

2. That during the time they spend there, they remain perfectly cloistered.

3. That they never are received into this monastery to become nuns, but if they desire to be such, they are sent to the monasteries of converts in other cities, if they wish to go there.

4. That their dormitory, chapel and refectory are separate from those of the nuns.

5. That, if anyone proves to be incorrigible, she is made to leave.

6. That, although they live in the same monastery with the nuns, they are separated from them at least by a wall so that there may be no communication between them except by permission of the superior.

7. That there is a door in this wall, through which two nuns, by order of the superior, enter every morning to join the converts in order to be with them during the day, in a room where they are all together, that they may watch over their conduct, see that they pray, have some spiritual reading for them at appointed hours, and see that they are working the rest of the time. In the evening, after prayers and self-examination, the converts retire to their cells and the two nuns rejoin the other religious. Then the door is locked and the key given to the Superior.

LETTERS AND SHORTER WORKS

8. That those nuns who are oldest both in age and in manner are chosen to be sent during the day to remain with the penitents. The same ones are not always sent, however; sometimes one is changed, sometimes the other, for greater precaution.

9. If any one of the converts is under suspicion, she is locked in her cell at night.

10. During the night there is always a lighted lamp in the converts' dormitory, before an image of the Blessed Virgin. There is also a religious to watch them through the grills, which are arranged in such a way that the nun who is observing them cannot speak to any convert, lest she be heard by the other nuns around her.

11. No questionable outsider, whether man or woman, is permitted to speak with the converts, not even their own relatives.

All these things were set forth by Father Boniface and must be included in the Rules you are sending me, with the intent to keep them as long as possible or until they are no longer needed.

The word converts used in Father Boniface's letter is the name given them in that country instead of penitents or repentant women.

If Father Mannoury were with you, he would immediately put all these rules in good order and draw up the plan for you that Father Boniface requests, and he would do so properly and in conformity with your place;(1) but it would be necessary to send a man with a horse expressly to Lisieux to bring him back as soon as possible. However, I should not want him to lodge with us on account of the sickness there. I should prefer that you give him the Rules of the Penitents with this letter after he has conferred with you, my dear Mother, and seen your house, and that he go to Camilly for two days to do the task there. I am writing him to call on you for that purpose if you send for him.

Send me at your earliest convenience the attestations of the cures and the chief personages of that city, such as you are able to procure, for his Lordship of Bayeux is still without his Bulls and is not leaving as yet for his diocese. Return Father Boniface's letter to me and address your letter to me at the Mazarin Palace in Paris. That is where I am lodging, since his Lordship of Coutances, who lives there, wanted me to have a room there and take a rest cure for an indisposition I have which is of very slight consequence.

I am with all sincerity, my dearest Mother,

Devotedly yours,

To Madame Blouet de Camilly. On her husband's illness. ( 1 )

Paris, October 18, 1661 J. M. J.

Godgrant, my dearest daughter, that on this occasion of our beloved brother's illness I may give you the same reply as that of Our Lord to St. Martha and St. Magdalen, who had told Him just what you write to me: He whom Thou lovest is sick(2) meaning their good brother St. Lazarus. God grant, I repeat, that I may reply to you: This sickness is not unto death. (3) But because these divine words would be ineffectual in my mouth, and since it is to Our Lord that you address yourself in saying to His representative, though an infinitely unworthy one: He whom Thou lovest is sick, I implore this most kind Saviour with all my heart, by the great goodness which prompted Him to make that reply to the sisters of Lazarus, to answer you in like manner with the words: This sickness is not unto death.

No matter what happens, my dear daughter, these words will always hold true of our dear patient, which is a wonderful cause for comfort, for there is no death for true children of God... I am the resurrection and the life, said the Son of God to St. Martha, he that believeth in me, although he be dead, shall live: and every one that liveth, and believeth in me, shall not die for ever. (4) Let us be comforted, my dearest daughter, by these great truths and by the recollection of what our good Saviour has said to us.

It is true, I must confess, that although these considerations do much to assuage my grief, my heart is nevertheless sorely afflicted by the knowledge that our poor dear spiritual brother, Mr. de Camilly, is in such a condition, and that you and all your loved ones, my dear daughter, are in your present anguish and in danger of falling ill from this perilous sickness. I beseech my Jesus with all my heart to keep you safe. Not my will be done, however, but His.

I fancy that I see from your letter that this kind Saviour is implanting in your heart, my good daughter, the dispositions which should be there at this time, and that comforts me no little. I thank Him infinitely for it and implore Him to preserve and increase this spirit in you for His glory. There is never a time when He is so glorified in a soul as during a period of affliction, when one bears it in a Christian spirit. Let us try, therefore, to do so, my dearest daughter, accepting from His hand the trials He sends us and supporting them with all possible humility, resignation and love.

If you perceive that our dear brother is in any real danger, have recourse to the little book I have written entitled Man's Contract with God ( 5 ) You will find, about halfway through this book, several complete acts which embody the dispositions necessary for a Christian death, and at the beginning of these acts, the method of using them when assisting a sick person, that the patient may practise them without disturbing himself. I should like all who take care of the sick to have this book. It would also be well for you to consult the final pages of Exercise in Preparation for Death, ( 6 ) ' contained in The Kingdom of Jesus, at the end of the book.

Finally, my dearest daughter, I implore Our Lord Himself to be

LETTER 109

To Madame Blouet de Camilly. How to act in time of illness.

Paris, October 25, 1661 J. M. J.

I cannot tell you too often, my dearest daughter, how distressed and grieved I am, for that is inexpressible. Certainly, I know well through experience that your griefs and sufferings are also mine.

I received your letters on Saturday, after the mail had gone Out, and that is why I could not write you until today; it added to my sorrow to have to go so long without giving you some small comfort.(1)

O my dear daughter, how terrible is my grief and anguish that I cannot be near you now to weep with you and -help you in your present affliction. But it is the most adorable will of God which arranges it thus and does everything through infinite goodness toward us and for the best. Then let it be adored, blessed and praised through all eternity in all its decrees! Never before, my dearest daughter, have we had such a magnificent opportunity to glorify God and render ourselves pleasing to Him as on this occasion, and perhaps never again shall we have such an opportunity. Let us not allow it to pass, therefore, without making the holiest possible use of it. To that end:

1. Let us acknowledge that of ourselves we are thoroughly incapable of using it without a special grace from the goodness of God, and that we are infinitely unworthy to receive this grace; but let us ask for it, nevertheless, with confidence, and it will be given to us.

2. Let us humble ourselves beneath the almighty hand of God, acknowledging that the least of our sins deserves all the afflictions in this world, and let us accept those He sends us, and will send in the future, in honor of His divine justice and in reparation for our sins.

3. Let us adore the most holy will of God, submitting and abandoning ourselves wholly and unreservedly to whatever disposal it may please Him to make of us and what is ours.

4. Because sorrows are a gift from God far more precious and greater in this world than consolations, let us thank Him for them with all our hearts, as much as is in our power.

5. Let us offer our sorrows, griefs, sighs and tears to Our Lord Jesus and His most Holy Mother, in thanksgiving for their sorrows and griefs which were infinitely greater than ours, and for all their sighs and tears.

6. Let us embrace our crosses for love of our most amiable Crucified, Who bore such heavy sorrows for love of us.

7. Let us unite ourselves with our Holy Mother at the foot of the Cross of her beloved Son. Alas! She is completely overwhelmed with sorrows, and yet so imbued with obedience to God's holy will that, because such is the desire of that adorable will, she sacrifices to His Divine Majesty a Son Who is infinitely dear to her, Who is her Son, her Father, her Brother, her Spouse, her God, her All. Let us unite ourselves, my dear daughter, to these holy dispositions, that we may sacrifice with her and with Our Saviour the lives of all our dear ones, our own lives, and a hundred thousand worlds if we possessed them.

8. Let us offer all our griefs and afflictions to Our Lord and His most Holy Mother, praying them to unite them with theirs and put them to the same use as they made of theirs, for the glory of the most holy Trinity.

9. For the same end, let us also offer them all the sorrows that have ever been, are now and ever shall be in the universe, particularly those of persons who have not put them to good use; since all these things are ours, according to the divine Word, we should use them to glorify our heavenly Father, together with our most adorable Master, Jesus, Who employs all things for His Father's glory.

10. Let us pray to our guardian angels, all the angels and saints, and our good Sister(2) to do all the above things for us, as also the others that we ought to do, in order to give thanks to God for our debt to Him in time of trouble.

Do you not earnestly desire all these things, my dear daughter, as well as to unite yourself with those who are doing or will do them for you? Yes, beyond a doubt you do. Say, therefore, for this intention, with all your heart: Amen, amen, fiat, fiat.

If you are in danger of death, here are several things that I urge you to do, both exteriorly and interiorly.

Exteriorly: 1. Recall whether you owe anything to anyone, and have payment made for all your debts immediately if possible, without leaving that responsibility to others after your death. 2. If you have had any disagreement with anyone, become perfectly reconciled, doing whatever is necessary to that end; and even ask pardon of all your servants. 3. Give your blessing to all your children, in the name of Our Lord and His most Holy Mother, entreating them to bless them in time and in eternity, and admonishing them to live in the fear of God and to love one another in charity. 4. If you can, have a donation given to the poor.

Interiorly: 1. Do not worry about making a general confession; that is not in the least necessary. But try to have general contrition, after having asked it of God. 2. Give yourself to Our Lord, in preparation for receiving Holy Viaticum, that you may receive Him in union with all the holy dispositions with which all the saints on earth received Him in their hour of death. 3. Do the same with regard to extreme unction, and do not wait to receive it until you no longer have the use of your sense'. 4. Have someone read you the acts contained in Man's Contract with God through Holy Baptism, which embody all the dispositions necessary for a Christian death; not all at one time, but first one, then another; and likewise the last chapter of The Kingdom of Jesus. 5. Do not forget to try to gain the plenary indulgence for the hour of death, which is granted to those who belong to the Holy Rosary and have the medals that you have. 6. After all that, the best disposition for a Christian death is to give yourself entirely to Our Lord, that you may unite yourself with all the holy dispositions with which He, His most Holy Mother and all the saints died. Among these dispositions, there are three for which you should strive in particular: humility, trust, and abandonment to the divine will. 7. Have them entreat your good sister at the Abbey(3) and kind Mother Patin to have the exercises of the Preparation for Death, contained in The Kingdom of Jesus, said for you. 8. After you have done all that, be careful not to rely on it, but place all your reliance and trust purely in the mercy of Our Lord and in the intercession of His most Holy Mother.

In conclusion, my dear daughter, I wish to make you the finest gift within my power, and this is it:

Yesterday and today I said holy Mass to supplicate Our Lord to grant you three things:

First, to bestow upon you, in whatever way He deems best and most pleasing to Him, all the graces and gifts He has deigned and shall deign to grant me in my lifetime, all the Masses I have said and will yet say, all my missions of the past and future, and in general, all that He has granted and shall grant me to think, say, do inwardly and outwardly, and suffer in His service.

Secondly, to bestow on you all the holy Masses, missions and all the goodworks in general which, through His grace, have been and shall ever be performed in our Congregation.

Thirdly, to grant you all the souls He has given and shall give me, in His great mercy, in all the missions I have conducted and will yet conduct, and in any other circumstances; and to grant you these three gifts in order to contribute to the accomplishment of His designs for you from all eternity, and that He may forever find as much glory in you as He desires.

And so that I may do what I can on my part to put you in possession of these three gifts, after having adored the infinite love through which our Lord gave to His most holy Mother all that He received from His Father, and having thanked Him for it, I offered myself and am offering myself again to this divine love of Jesus for His dearest Mother, who is both His Mother and Daughter; and in union with this same love, I have given and am giving you for evermore, my dearest daughter, and irrevocably, the three aforesaid gifts, in the most perfect manner that I can confer them on you, in accordance with the most holy will of God, and that I may contribute all within my power to the perfect accomplishment of all the plans that His Divine Majesty has had for you from all eternity.

Will you not accept this gift, my dearest daughter, for this same intention? Then give thanks to Him Who is the sole source of all good, and not to him who is nothing and of himself can give rise to no good. I forgot to tell you that I prayed to the Blessed Virgin Mary, all our angels and saints, and our good Sister to implore Our Lord to ratify and confirm this gift.

I am asking three things of you, too, my dearest daughter:

1. That, if you have anything to tell me or recommend to me, you tell it to Father Dudy, and even request him to write it down in your presence, to make sure that he forgets nothing.

2. That you leave to our beloved brother, Father Blouet, your holy relics, and to me the holy rosary that you received from our Sister, (4) as also everything else that belonged to her, even her cane, and I will distribute them to whomever you wish; you can tell this also to Father Ducly. (5) Nevertheless, that you may act without any compulsion, I shall leave this entirely to your generosity. Leave me something, however, from among your devotional articles, whatever you wish.

Here is the third and principal thing I ask of you, my dearest daughter. It is that, when God has shown you mercy and this you can expect with confidence from His infinite goodness and the intercession of Our glorious Mother and our good Sister - you take our Congregation and the House of Our Lady of Charity under your special protection in heaven. To this end, dear daughter, I constitute in the name of Our Lord and His most Holy Mother, the solicitor and provider of all our spiritual and temporal affairs, that you may intercede and beg for us at the throne of God and with the Blessed Mother, our good Sister and all the angels and saints. Will you accept this position, my dearest daughter, and give yourself to the Son of God and His divine Mother in order to accomplish this carefully according to their most holy will, and to try to obtain for us now from the goodness of God these four things above all others? 1. Several good brothers and excellent workers to help us labor for the salvation of Souls. 2. The favor of building a church in Caen, in honor of the most holy Heart of our most Holy Mother. 3. A house in Paris, with a church or chapel, to celebrate therein the feast of this same Heart. 4. Success in Rome for the negotiations concerning our good sisters. In addition, as soon as you reach heaven, ask for the salvation of Mr. Le Haguais, your brother, and of your good daughter, Madame de Camilly, and all her children and yours.

I give you my daily blessing, and several times during holy Mass I entreat our good Jesus . . .

May the divine will be our sole consolation in our afflictions.

It does all things with such great wisdom and goodness that we have only to look upon it in all the misfortunes that befall us in order to be comforted.

I must confess, however, that this consolation does not prevent my suffering a great sorrow, according to the senses, because of the decease of our good Mr. de Camilly. We have lost a very sincere and faithful friend.

But I speak from the human viewpoint in saying that we have lost him, for, after all, who does not lose God loses nothing. Then too, we do not lose our friends when God takes them unto Himself. On the contrary, they are all the more ours, and they are more useful to us in heaven than on earth. But we must help them to reach heaven quickly, for it often happens that one is a long time in arriving there.

I entreat all our dear brethren to take care to render God what we owe Him in this hour of sorrow, by humbling ourselves under His almighty hand, adoring His divine will and submitting ourselves to it with all our hearts, thanking Him for the crosses that it pleases Him to send us, sacrificing to Him our lives and those of all our loved ones, and above all, trying to put ourselves in the state in which we should wish to be at the hour of death. To that end, let us renew our desire to fulfil all our obligations with the utmost exactitude.

To Father Thomas Manchon. On the death of Father Richard Le Mesle,( 1 )which occurred on October 21, 1661.

I am suffering deeply from the death of our beloved Mr. de Camilly, and to an even greater degree from that of Father Le Mesle, who was one of our best members, one of the most useful to our Congregation and one most devoted to it.

To Madame de Camilly. To comfort her on the death of her husband.

Paris, November 1, 1661 J. M. J.

I give infinite thanks to Our Lord Jesus and His most precious Mother for your improved health, my very dear and good daughter; it affords me great consolation. Yes, my dearest and peerless daughter, I shall write you often, I assure you, and gladly; for your letters always console me, and I find comfort in writing you, too.

But what shall I say to you, my good daughter, to console you in your sorrow, the most grievous you have ever had and perhaps ever will have?

This is what I have to tell you, which is what I also tell myself. Is it not the most adorable will of God that regulates and ordains everything that happens here below? Yes, beyond a doubt. Is not this adorable Queen infinitely wise, powerful and good, in order to know, be able and desire to direct all that happens to us, even to the smallest things and most trifling circumstances, in the way most advantageous for the glory of God and our own good? Yes, certainly. That being the case, it is then an infallible conclusion that what has happened to you is for the greatest glory of God and to our advantage.

Well then, shall we grieve over an event by which God is glorified, which He has ordained out of infinite goodness toward you? Let us be comforted, therefore, my incomparable daughter, and let us not give way any longer to grief. Let us find consolation in our knowledge that our dearest spiritual brother, Mr. de Camilly, is now numbered among those who will see the face of the heavenly Father and will love and bless Him for all eternity.

Let us also rejoice, my dear good daughter, because this life is short and because soon, through divine mercy, we shall see this beloved brother and with him render eternal praise to God for all the favors He has granted us in His goodness. Let us obey the voice of the Holy Spirit which tells us: Weep but a little for the dead, (1) seeing that he is at rest. He is speaking of him who has lived in the fear of God, such as our own dear departed; for, in referring to the wicked, He says: The mourning ... for a fool and an ungodly man is all the days of their life. (2) Alas, yes, one must weep eternally, and tears of blood, for those who have not lived as Christians; but with regard to him who lived and died in the way of Christ, we should do what God says: Weep but a little.

I implore you, therefore, my dear good daughter, to moderate your tears and restrain your laments.

Let infidels and heretics, let the relatives and friends of bad Catholics, weep without consolation and unceasingly for the death of their departed ones; but we have no death to lament. Our beloved spiritual brother is not dead and will never die, but for all eternity he will live the life of the children of God, a life free from all evil and replete with every kind of blessing. In God's name, my incomparable daughter, do not give way to sadness any longer. Of what use would it be except to scandalize your neighbor and cause you some troublesome illness from which you might never recover?

It has pleased God to deprive you of your dear husband; yet you are not a widow, because Our Lord is your Spouse, for a long time ago he gave you the grace to be chosen by Him as His spouse. (3) Is He not worth more, this most amiable Jesus, than all the men in the universe? Well then, my good daughter, look upon this divine Saviour as your most lovable Spouse; thank Him for the infinite favor He bestowed upon you in granting you a place in the ranks of His spouses; give Him your whole heart and affection; strive earnestly to disengage yourself completely from this earth and all its creatures; and let your sole concern be henceforth to labor to make yourself pleasing to this divine Spouse, and so to prepare yourself for a good and holy death which wings its way toward us.

Since Jesus is your Spouse, my dear daughter, the Mother of Jesus is your mother; therefore cast yourself at her feet to greet and honor her as such, to offer yourself to her, to protest to her that you wish to serve, love and follow her as your most bountiful Mother; and entreat her to protect, bless and guide you as her daughter. Say to her, for these intentions, with all your heart: Monstra te esse Matrem ... three times, and Sub tuum ...

The best things you can do for our dear departed one are to say the holy rosary, offer to God your Holy Communion and the Masses that You hear for him, and above all, have as many Masses said as possible.

(3). After having given birth to four children, three boys and a girl, Madame de Camilly made a vow of perpetual chastity, under the guidance of St. John Eudes and with her husband's consent, and signed the agreement with her blood. Hérembourg, 1, Ch. 13.

LETTER 113

To Madame de Camilly. On the same subject.

Paris, November 8, 1661 J. M. J.

What are you doing, my poor dear afflicted child? What are you doing? In what condition are you at this moment? Are you not making any attempt to moderate your grief? Write me a little about your feelings, my dear good daughter. It seems to me that I have not received a letter from you for a long time. I think of you constantly, my incomparable daughter, and your sorrows are always in my heart.

But if we are not masters of our senses in such bitter anguish, let us try, my beloved daughter, frequently to raise our minds to the heavenly Father, saying to Him these holy words which His Son Jesus, our most adorable Master, addressed to Him in the most poignant and overwhelming grief that ever was or will be, that we may acquire the spirit of obedience, resignation and love with which this divine Saviour uttered them: "Father, not my will, but thine be done." (1) Let us repeat those sacred words over and over again, and these, too, which also emanated from the all-loving Heart and adorable lips of this same Jesus: "Yea, Father; for so hath it seemed good in thy sight." (2) Yes, my most kind Father, Thou Who dost all things with infinite wisdom and goodness, I wish all that Thou dost wish, and because such is Thy desire. It is Thou Who didst give me this dear husband, it is Thou Who hast deprived me of him; blessed be Thy name! I sacrifice him to Thee to the fullest extent of my will, despite all the feelings and reluctance of human nature, and I wish to repeat what one of Thy handmaids once said on a like occasion: that, because it hath pleased Thee to take him unto Thyself, if it needed but a single hair of my head to restore him to life, I would not give it, with the help of Thy grace. No, my God, for nothing in the world would I wish to do the slightest thing contrary to Thy most adorable will.

O my Jesus, Who hast sacrificed for me, with an infinite love, a life of which one moment was worth more than all the lives of men and angels, I give myself to that incomprehensible love with which Thou didst make this great sacrifice, and in union with this same love, I sacrifice to Thee with all my heart, not only the life of this dear husband whom Thou didst give me, but also my own life and those of all my children, my father, brother, and all my loved ones. And if I possessed all the lives of angels and men, with the help of Thy holy grace, my Saviour, I should want to sacrifice them all to Thee in thanksgiving for the sacrifice Thou didst make of Thine, through such a frightful death, for the glory of Thy Father and the salvation of all mankind.

O Mother of Jesus, I honor thee at the foot of the Cross of thy Son, doing in union with Him what He is doing, that is to say, offering and sacrificing Him to His Father, even as He offers and sacrifices Himself. I give myself to Him and to thee, that I may unite myself with the holy dispositions with which thou didst make this sacrifice; and in union with these same dispositions, I wish to immolate for my God, with my Jesus and thee, all that is most precious to me, all that I am, all my capabilities, and a hundred worlds if I possessed them. Compensate for my shortcomings, O my gracious Mother, and do for me in thine own way, that is, most perfectly, what I can do but very imperfectly. I give thee my heart and my will for that purpose, and I consent most willingly to whatever thou mayest do in my name.

O all ye angels and saints of Jesus, help me, I implore, to make this sacrifice.

That, my beloved daughter, is what I urge you to say and do as best you can, every day from now on; and then make a firm resolution to live henceforth like a true spouse of Jesus, giving Him without reservation your heart, all your affection, your time, and whatever is left of your life, of which but little remains. These are the principal fruits that He wishes you to gather from your grief, and He desires you to belong wholly to Him. I beseech Him to exert His all-powerful goodness to take complete possession of you.

To the Community of Our Lady of Charity. On the observance of the Rules, and the practice of certain virtues.

Paris, December 3, 1661 J. M. J.

My dearest Sisters:

May the divine will be our guide in all things.

I give infinite thanks to our most bountiful Jesus and his most Holy Mother for the great blessings they are showering upon your Community. I supplicate them to increase the blessings more and more, and to grant you the grace to make the holy use of them that Jesus and Mary ask of you. To this end I beseech you, my dearest Sisters, to be very faithful and exacting in the observance of your Rules and Constitutions, and in the practice of all the holy virtues, especially humility, obedience, mutual charity, zeal for the salvation of souls, submission to the most holy will of God, pure love for Jesus and a special devotion to His Blessed Mother. That is what your good Mother teaches you daily by her words and example; it is what I have always preached to you, my dearest Sisters, and will preach to you all my life, for our sole occupation in this world is to strive to please God, and that is the only way to do so. Lastly, I thank you, my dearest Sisters, for your charitable regards; please continue to send them, and rest assured that I never forget you at the holy altar, for, in truth, you are dearer to me in the presence of God than I can tell you.

Father Peter Jourdan, (1)which occurred on December 27, 1661.

May the divine will be our guide in all things, and our sole comfort in all our afflictions.

Here is one which is very painful to me and has caused me unwonted sorrow: it is the death of our most kind and lovable brother, Father Jourdan. But it is only just, my dear brother, that God be the master and that His most adorable will prevail over ours. If I indulged my feelings, I should cry aloud with grief and tears: "Doth bitter death separate in this manner?" (2) But when I consider the most holy, wise and bountiful will of God, I cry out from the depths of my heart: "Yea, Father; for so hath it seemed good in thy sight."(3)

From John Eudes, missionary priest, the superior of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary, greetings to whom it may concern:

According to information given us by our beloved brother, Peter Sesseval, a missionary priest of our Congregation, an almost countless number of souls are being lost in the kingdom of China and neighboring countries because of a shortage of evangelical laborers to help snatch them from perdition and place them on the road to salvation. He has, in consequence thereof, conceived a very ardent desire to join several other ecclesiastics who are about to set out for these regions, but, because he wishes to do nothing without the perfection of perfect obedience to the superiors whom God has placed over him, he has entreated us to look with favor upon this project and to give it our approval and consent.

After having carefully recommended the matter to God and contacted some of the heads of our Congregation, and being desirous of cooperating in such a holy work for which, with the help of divine grace, we should willingly sacrifice a hundred thousand lives if we had as many, we did and do now consent most willingly by these presents that the aforesaid Peter Sesseval carry out his pious and praiseworthy desire, in our knowledge of his piety, prudence, ability, and other virtues and good qualities which God has given him.

Yes, my dearest brother, with all our hearts we approve of your holy undertaking for the glory of God and the salvation of souls.

Go then in the name of the Blessed Trinity, to make It known and adored in places where It is neither known nor adored.

(1). Father Peter de Sasseval (1632-1663) was stationed at the Rouen Seminary when he was requested by His Lordship Francis de la Palue, Bishop of Heliopolis, to labor in the mission fields of China. Despite the shortage of priests in the Congregation of Jesus and Mary, St. John Eudes granted permission to Father de Sasseval to accompany the Bishop of Heliopolis. Father de Sasseval died on December 8, 1663 before reaching his destination. Cf. Les Fleurs de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, Vol. 1, p. 18.

LETTERS AND SHORTER WORKS

Go in the name of Jesus Christ, the only Son of God, to bring to souls the fruits of His precious blood which He shed for them.

Go under the protection and in the safe-keeping of the Blessed Virgin Mary, to imbue those hearts with the respect and veneration due her, and under the guidance of blessed St. Joseph, St. Gabriel, your guardian angel, and the holy apostles of the places where you are going, to work with them for the salvation of lost and abandoned souls.

Go in the name and on behalf of our little Congregation, to accomplish in China and the other places where Providence directs you what we should like to do throughout the whole world, even to the shedding of our last drop of blood: destroy Satan's tyranny there and establish the kingdom of God.

But remember that, because this work is entirely an apostolic mission, you must have a very pure intention of seeking therein only the glory of God, and a most profound humility and mistrust of self, boundless confidence in His infinite goodness, complete submission to His most adorable will and that of the prelates placed over you in His stead, unconquerable patience in your labors, an ardent zeal for the salvation of souls, and a most sincere charity toward other ecclesiastics, particularly the religious of the holy Society of Jesus, with whom we importune you always to live in perfect union and understanding. Meditate frequently on these virtues, earnestly ask God for them, and try to practise them faithfully. May God in His goodness deign to grant you them in their perfection, together with all the other graces necessary and expedient to accomplish perfectly His most holy will, and to conduct yourself everywhere both as a true missionary of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary, and as a true child of their most amiable Heart.

May Jesus and Mary grant you their holy blessing for that purpose. May it remain always with you and precede, accompany and follow you everywhere and in all things.

With this wish do we pronounce over you, in the name of Jesus and Mary, and in the sacred love of their most charitable Heart, these precious words of Holy Mother Church: Nos cum Prole pia benedicat Virgo Maria.

To Madame Blouet de Camilly. On various subjects. Contemplated establishment of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary in Paris.

Paris, January 3, 1662 J. M. J.

My very dear and good daughter:

May the divine will be our guide in all things, and our sole comfort in all our afflictions.

This is a sorrow which is most painful to me and causes me extraordinary sorrow; (1) but I adore, bless and love with all my heart the most adorable and amiable will of my God, which should be infinitely dearer and more precious to us than all the lives of men and angels, if they were ours.

The condition of our dear brother, Father Blouet, is still another grief which weighs heavily upon me. I urge him to do all he can to improve his health; but, my dear daughter, be careful, too, not to physic him too much for fear of injuring his stomach, which is somewhat delicate.

When I see Mr. La Huguais, (2) I will not fail to tell him what you want, though I do not think that is necessary, because I believe he is not giving it the least thought, unless he has changed his mind since I saw him about two or three weeks ago. I do not often see him, since it is quite a distance from here to his house, with the days being extremely short now and the roads bad. But please do not think, my dear good daughter, that I tell him everything you write me. No, I can assure you that I tell him nothing except the things you want me to tell him, or those you have already told him yourself in your letters. Know once and for all, dearest daughter, that your interests mean more to me, and always will, than those of anyone else whomsoever.

Excuse me, my good daughter; I do think about returning, and every day I importune God to take me away from this place which wearies me exceedingly, but I am here on very important business for the general good of our Congregation. It concerns not only an establishment in Paris, (3) but something else of even greater importance which will, however, soon be concluded. I hope that Lent will not find me still in Paris.

My most humble and affectionate greetings to the family in general and each member individually, particularly to Mr. de Camilly, (4) whom I thank with all my heart for his kind and beautiful letter. To him and all the others I wish every manner of blessings for the New Year and all the years to follow, and afterwards the blessed eternal years.

LETTER 118

To Mother Margaret Frances Patin. On her negotiations in Rome.

[Beginning of 1662) J. M. J.

My dearest Mother:

May the divine will be our guide in all things.

I received a letter this week from Father Boniface, who writes me that your cause is constantly gaining favor, thank God, and that this is the time to redouble your prayers, for the affair, he says, is now coming to a head.

He also writes that he has been informed that the rate of exchange, that is to say, what must be paid to bring money into Rome, will soon be increased by five per cent; thus, instead of ten francs per hundred, the fee will amount to fifteen. This is because of the large sums of money it will be necessary to take out of Paris when the Ambassador and Cardinal de Retz,<sup>(1)</sup> who will soon leave here for Rome, arrive there. Hence he will soon be out of funds, since he now has but about a hundred crowns. His expenses come to about ten crowns a month, and his room costs three crowns, not counting laundry, fuel and candles. Upon his arrival in Rome he had to spend more than a hundred crowns on clothing and linen, for he left here with badly worn garments, fearing that he might be robbed along the way. He said that wearing apparel is very expensive in Rome and of poor quality, making it necessary for him to buy serge garments for the winter, but that he still needs a summer-weight cassock and cloak, which will cost twenty crowns. It is impossible for him, he writes, as active as he is, to keep himself in clothing on less than sixty or eighty crowns a year. He says, too, that it will cost him a great deal to have several papers copied, and much more besides for presents that he is obliged to give to various persons, for one gets nowhere in that country without them. Lastly, he writes that I shall be amazed when he shows me his accounts.

That is what his letter says, and he is a very sincere and truthful man, who would spend no money except on necessities. We are very fortunate to have found someone so generous with his time and efforts, which are considerable, for he is working very hard in your interests, sparing no trouble or endeavor, and he is doing nothing else except that. Therefore I am asking you, my dearest Mother, to give the order that money be provided to send him.

I wrote you that I sent him five hundred livres in September, and that it cost me fifty livres more to have them delivered. Since I had the money then, and he had written me that he needed it, I did not wish to importune you at that time. If I had more, I should send it to him as gladly as I did the other time, confident that you would repay me, but I have none. Please get some, therefore, and send it to me as soon as possible, for the rate of exchange will soon be higher; then too, I shall be here only a short time. Without it, my dearest Mother, your business would come to a standstill, and Father Boniface would have to abandon it at that point. After so much effort and expense, we must not leave it in mid-air. One should not complain about money where the affairs of God are concerned. If you have none, you should borrow it or take it out of your revenues. Do not send less than four or five hundred livres; it will cost far more for the Bulls, and you shall receive an account of everything. Do this as soon as possible, my dearest Mother, if you please.

My most cordial greetings to all our dear Sisters. I remain most sincerely, my dearest Mother,

Devotedly yours,
JOHN EUDES, missionary priest.

P. S. Here is a Collect for the Office and Mass of your Blessed Father(2) which Mother de Monçon sent me for you to keep. It was composed by our Holy Father the Pope(3).

In the decree of beatification the Pope observes that he celebrated the Mass of the new Blessed with a Collect which served also for the Office. The rest of the Mass and Office was taken from the Common of a Confessor Bishop.

LETTER 119

To Mother Margaret Frances Patin. The Saint urges her to supply Father Boniface with the money needed in working to obtain the probation of the Order from Rome.

[Beginning of 1662] J. M. J.

My dearest Mother:

May the divine will be our guide in all things.

If I yielded to purely human sentiments, your illness would move me deeply, but, aside from hoping that Our Lord will restore your health, I am obliged by the sight of His most adorable will to say but one thing: "Yea, Father: for so bath it seemed good in thy sight." (1)

I beseech you, my dearest Mother, to take a little better care of your health, and to accept the doctor's judgment in all things that can contribute to your recovery.

But on what account, my dear Mother, do you write me what you have done concerning your undertaking? Do you wish to abandon it, now that it is so far advanced and progressing so well? Do you think that anything can be accomplished in Rome without money, or that Father Boniface can live there and support himself without it? Is it not enough that he is giving you his time and efforts? I have assured you, and do assure you again, that he is a most virtuous ecclesiastic, a very good man, who undertook this business solely because of his zeal for the glory of God and the salvation of Souls, and purely through charity, since he has a means of support without it. Do you take me for a liar and a cheat? Do you believe that he is squandering your money, or rather mine? Should you like to repay all his efforts in such coin?

But you say that your close friends are astonished that a man should be so long in Rome to transact your business, and business such as that. Would to God that these friends of yours might consent to replace Father Boniface! They would see how things are done in Rome, and how the smallest transactions consume both time and patience. Remember, my dear Mother, that if Father Boniface had pushed this matter too vigorously before he was in possession of the last affidavits that were sent him, he would have failed irreparably, because without them our cause would have been rejected a second time, after which all hope would have had to be abandoned.

Remember, too, you and your good friends, that this is one of the most difficult affairs that can be dealt with in Rome. First of all, those in Rome look upon our institute as an innovation, and consequently as one of the most important and complex things that can be discussed there. Secondly, they see that it is an Order and a Community composed of virtuous women who are to devote themselves to the direction and guidance of girls and women of low morals. This situation creates a difficulty which no one has yet been able to surmount in Rome, because it is believed there that it is impossible for virtuous women to associate with these others without real danger to their own morals. And to show you that no one has thus far been able to overcome this objection, you must know that the Sisters of Refuge at Nancy, who have houses also at Avignon, Dijon and Rouen, have not yet succeeded in obtaining Bulls from our Holy Father the Pope, despite all their efforts; and yet, their affair is not so difficult as ours because, in the first place, their Community is composed of penitent women who are not in any danger from their contact with the penitents, as virtuous women might be; and secondly, they have been received and approved at Avignon by the papal legate. And nevertheless, they still have not been accorded approbation from Rome, although they have a man there who has been working on it for them longer than Father Boniface has been there, and he is a very influential person who is highly esteemed in Rome. Father Boniface talked things over with him, and he writes me that this man agrees with him and has decided to await the outcome of your affair to see what course it takes and what comes of it, so that afterwards he may act accordingly in advancing the cause of the Sisters of Nancy. Thereupon I wrote to Father Boniface that I was very pleased that this gentleman had taken this resolution; for, if his business had come up for consideration before ours, it would have met either with success or failure. If the latter had happened, there would no longer have been any hope for our cause; but had it been successful, and then yours had been proposed later, you would have been obliged to join the other Sisters and adopt their Rules. You can judge from all this, therefore, that a transaction like yours is not so simple as your close friends seem to think it is.

But there is still a third thing that makes it very difficult, which is that your cause has already been once rejected.

Please tell all these things to your friends, and they will change their mind, or else they are not good friends of your house.

Tell them also, and believe it yourself, my dearest Mother, for it is true-tell them that they should not, in a matter of consequence like this, form groundless judgments that are prejudicial to the charity we owe our neighbor, lest they mortally offend God. I have already told you repeatedly, and I say it again, that Father Boniface has no interests in Rome except yours. So true is this that I even refrained from asking him to procure indulgences for us, or anything else whatsoever, in order not to distract him in the least or make it possible for you to say that he was handling other affairs besides your own.

LETTERS AND SHORTER WORKS

Should he remain even a day longer in Rome after the negotiations are accomplished, rest assured that it will not be at your expense, and that he will render you a strict account of your money, together with that which I sent him for you. Do not wait for me, however, to forward more money to him. And if you fail to send him any, understand that, when he has spent the remainder of what he still has, to the exclusion of what he will need for the return trip, he will abandon your cause and leave Rome, and thus it will have come to nothing. All your efforts on behalf of the house of Our Lady of Charity will have been nullified, for without Bulls from our Holy Father the Pope it will not be possible for it to subsist, because the very first Sister who is tempted against her vocation will easily be persuaded that her vows are invalid, since her Community lacks the Pope's approval. Then she will withdraw, the whole structure will collapse, and the blame will be attributed, before God and man, to good Mother Margaret Patin, who would not furnish what was necessary to obtain the Bulls of approbation.

O my dear Mother, the saints have never spared money when it was needed for the affairs of God. You were able to procure enough to purchase the Old Bank House, for which you had a liking, although you did not actually need it. Would you stint money now for something which will be the very foundation of your Community, and without which it cannot subsist? In God's name, my dearest Mother, lay aside your mistrust and ill-founded suspicions as something unworthy of such a saint as Mother Patin, and do not listen to these good friends of whom you write me, to the extent that you do not believe a word of what is said to you by one who has more esteem and affection for you, and more zeal for the good of your house, than anyone else in the world.

It is he who remains, in the sacred love of the most Holy Heart of Jesus and Mary, my dearest Mother,

Devotedly yours,
JOHN EUDES, missionary priest.

My dear good Mother:

May the divine will be our guide in all things.

I give infinite thanks to Our Lord and His most Holy Mother for your improved health. I implore them to preserve and strengthen it, and to make you entirely well and holy for their glory and the sanctification of the most cherished house of their divine charity.

Many thanks to you, too, my dearest Mother, for the consolation you afford me in writing that you have received my little niece; but I am amazed that I was not informed sooner, either by you or others, of something I had been wanting for such a long time.

In this I am comforted; but allow me to tell you, my dearest Mother, that it grieves me exceedingly to see you abandon your transaction in Rome, just when it is progressing so well. I also received a letter this week from Father Boniface to the effect that it looks very favorable indeed. You inform me that you cannot send any money, that you have no assurance that the cause will succeed. Is it possible that Mother Patin, who is so virtuous and reasonable, should make such a proposal? Do you wish to deal with Father Boniface, who has made such a long trip and is going to so much trouble for us, through mere charity, as if you were a money-agent? Do you want him to return to you what he will have spent for his necessities while in your service? If you were employing him as a valet, he would not have to do that. Is it not enough that he has promised to render you an exact account of his expenses?

You say that I wrote you that divine Providence would provide. That is true, but are you implying that I am obliged by these words to furnish the money needed? If I had it, I should gladly advance it for that purpose; but I have already contributed to it all that I had, besides having borrowed a considerable sum. It is quite true that I have spent more than six hundred livres in this transaction, including the money I had as well as what I borrowed. Nevertheless, if you guaranteed to repay me, I would see if I could borrow more. But you would have to send me your written assurance of this in Thursday's or Friday's mail, at the latest, for, God willing, I shall soon leave here. But I shall not be immediately in Caen, for I am stopping off a few days in Rouen and Lisieux. If you allow me to leave here without sending me any mandate in this matter, what will become of it? And what about Father Boniface, to whom I shall be obliged to write, before my departure, that you wish to send him nothing except instructions to drop the whole matter and return? And how shall we answer to Our Lord and His most Holy Mother for having thus abandoned their project—a project so vital to their service and the salvation of souls? Do not cast the blame on anyone else, my dearest Mother, for I am quite certain that the whole thing depends on you.

In God's name, my good Mother, do not economize in a thing which is the very foundation of the House of Our Lady of Charity. You have worked and suffered so much for it up to this time, and without it the house is in obvious danger of ruin. If you have no money, send me a written promise to repay it to me, and I will do everything in my power to raise it.

Most cordial greetings to all our dear sisters. I am with all sincerity, my dear good Mother,

Devotedly yours,
JOHN EUDES, missionary priest.

P. S. I recommend that you and your dear daughters pray for his Lordship of Bayeux, who will be consecrated next Sunday.

LETTER 121

To Father John de Longeval,(1) Priest of the Seminary of Rouen. On the Archbishop's manifestations of his satisfaction with that seminary.

Paris, March 10, 1662

Wherever he goes, the Archbishop speaks of the work accomplished by the Rouen seminary, and his enormous satisfaction in the modesty and piety so visibly reflected in the faces of those on whom he conferred Holy Orders in Pontoise.(2)

It is a source of great joy to me to witness the blessing that God is pleased to bestow on the labors of my dear brethren; may He be eternally blessed for it!

Oh, how pleasing is this work to Our Lord and His most Holy Mother! What happiness it affords the angels and saints! How wonderful are the benefits accruing from it to the Church! How many souls will be saved through this means! What gratitude do we owe the goodness of God for having chosen us, unworthy as we are, for such a holy task-the most necessary, worthy and fruitful of all the tasks in God's Church! Blessed are they who persevere in such a holy work and ignore the sensibilities of a corrupt nature which seeks only its own satisfaction. Blessed are they who renounce the case that self-love craves, that they may labor in imitation and for love of our divine Master, Who never enjoyed rest in this world and Whose whole happiness consisted in doing the most holy will of His Father. Blessed are they who labor with Him, for soon their work shall be finished and they shall enjoy eternal rest with Him. Therefore: "In doing good, let us not fail. For in due time we shall reap, not failing." (3) (1). Father de Longeval's name is mentioned in a letter written to Father Mannoury, Superior of the Lisieux College, in 1656. (See Letter 58) Father de Longeval succeeded Father Mannoury in 1662 as Superior at Lisieux. Cf. Boulay, Op. cit., VOL 4, P. 11. No other details could be found in the reference books on the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

LETTER 122

To Mother Mary of the Nativity Herson. The Saint assures her that he willingly forgets certain past grievances.(1)

[1662]

J. M. J.

My dearest niece and beloved daughter:

I read your letter with great joy and consolation, and with all my heart do I forgive and forget entirely all that has taken place. I ask but one thing of you, that you faithfully serve our most benign Saviour and His most beautiful Mother, and that you love them with your whole heart.

Most cordial greetings to your good Mother Superior and all my dearest daughters.
If they wish to gratify me and make me very happy, they should welcome back the poor orphan whom they sent away.

Live Jesus and Mary.

JOHN EUDES,
Priest of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

(1). The grievances in question here were probably those arising from Mother Patin's refusal to furnish Father Boniface with money. In that case, this letter, which carries no date, would have been written in 1662.

To Father Louis Faucon,(1) known as de Sainte Marie, successor to Father Thomas Manchon as Superior of the Rouen Seminary. *On the poverty of his house.

Our Lord makes us poor in order to grant us the grace to be in conformity with Him, and to give us an opportunity to humble ourselves, become submissive to His most holy will and place all our trust in Him. Therefore, let us trust in Him without reservation, my dear brother, and also in our most Holy Mother. She is the one who gave us the house in Rouen; there is no likelihood of her having placed us in a house to allow us to perish there of hunger. She is too good for that, and she certainly does not lack power, since she is very powerful in heaven and on earth. Then have recourse to her; nevertheless, do not fail to do, for your own part, whatever you can.

(1). Born at Aulnay in the diocese of Bayeux in Normandy, Father Faucon (1624-1675) entered the Congregation of Jesus and Mary in 1653. He labored in the Coutances and Evreux Seminaries up to the time he was appointed superior of the Rouen Seminary, in 1663. Father John Avenel's Appointment to Lisieux.

J. M. J.

Our dearest brother Father Avenel(1) will live in our house in Lisieux, where he will teach the fourth or fifth class, according to the decision of the superior.

To Cardinal Grimaldi,(2) Archbishop of Aix. On the organization of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

[January or February 1664] My Lord:

I cast myself at your Eminence's feet to beg your holy blessing and to thank you infinitely for the favor you did us in writing to Rome. I also beg you in all humility to continue to honor us with your goodwill and protection, since it is true that, through the grace of God, we seek only the glory of His Divine Majesty and the salvation of souls.

(1). This letter was written from Meaux, at the conclusion of the mission preached there by St. John Eudes in 1664. It began on the least of the Epiphany and closed at the end of the first week in Lent.

(2). The Cardinal (1597-1695), wrote in the Cardinal Prefect of the Propaganda requesting wider faculties for St. John Eudes and his missionaries. The request was not granted. Cf. Boulay, Op. cit, Vol. 3, PP. 438-448,

LETTERS AND SHORTER WORKS

To broach the main subject at once, I shall state the following facts, in compliance with your Eminence's order to me:

1. Our four houses (in Caen, Coutances, Lisieux and Rouen) are united in a single Congregation under the same rule and guidance. No detriment results from the dependence of each upon its own prelate, who exercises over it the same authority that he has over all other persons and places under his episcopal jurisdiction in that diocese.

2. The superior of each house is chosen by the superior general of the Congregation and presented to the bishop of that particular diocese for his approval and confirmation, if he finds him acceptable; if not, another must then be presented to him.

3. Everyone in the house, our own members as well as the seminarians, is under the direction of the superior of that particular house.

4. We have sufficient funds only for the support of our own members, and until God inspires our prelates with the will to do what your Eminence has done for your seminary, or provides in another way, the seminarians must pay their own room and board, which in Coutances amounts to two hundred livres; in Caen and Lisieux, where living is not so cheap, two hundred fifty livres; and in Rouen, where expenses are still higher, three hundred livres.

5. Since our houses form a Congregation which is under the guidance of one superior, its members are sent from one house to another, as in other congregations-a practice which is necessary and most useful for several reasons. They are also taken from all the houses to participate in the missions, according as they are needed, for some of them grow weary of being constantly in one place; they dislike listening always to the same preachers; some form dangerous attachments; and frequently differences of disposition make these changes imperative. It is necessary for all these reasons that the seminaries be united and under a single direction, in order to insure their subsistence and their usefulness to the Church. It was for this reason that St. Charles established the Congregation of the Oblates to which he entrusted the direction of his seminaries.

I do not have at hand the rules of our seminaries. However, these are the principal ones: Rising is at 4:30, and prayer begins at 5:00, continuing until 6:00. Then the Little Hours are recited by the whole Community, after which, three times a week, an account of the morning meditation is given. Then each one retires to his room.

From 10:00 to 11:45 a class in theology is taught.

At 11:45, the litany and examination of conscience take place, followed by dinner.

After dinner there is recreation until 1:30, and then liturgy or chant class.

At 2:00 are Vespers and Compline; from 3:00 to 4:00, theology for the ordinands.

From 4:00 to 5:00 there is a lecture on the Manual, given to the cures.

At 5:45 are Matins and Lauds, and the Litany of the Blessed Virgin; then supper and recreation, which continues until 8:00.

At 8:00 cases of conscience are propounded for half an hour; then night prayers are said and the subject for meditation is read.

The signal for retiring is given at 9:30, and everyone goes to bed.

High Masses are sung twice a week, and Vespers on all Sundays and feast days.

A spiritual conference is given once a week, and Saturday evenings there is a meditation on the Sunday Gospel, instead of the cases of conscience.

We are bringing to a close this mission [at Meaux] on which God has showered wonderful blessings. His Lordship of Châlons, in Champagne, is asking us to give one in that city at the beginning of next October, but I do not know yet whether we shall be able to undertake it. I am returning to Caen to give a mission, after Easter, in Le Cotentin.(3).

LETTER 126

To Father James de la Haye de Bonnefond.(1) On the Cretteville (2) mission, in the diocese of Coutances.

[Autumn of 1664]

We are giving a mission now in Le Cotentin, in the parish of Cretteville-en-Beauputois, where President de Franctot is spending the vacation, and God is lavishing extraordinary blessings on it. Although it has rained almost constantly during our six weeks here, and despite floods on all sides and extremely bad roads, there are nevertheless large crowds in attendance at the sermons and other exercises of the mission. The rush to the confessionals is so great that many persons from four and five leagues distant are seen to remain three or four days at the feet of the confessors, from morning until night, without eating or drinking, and so moved to contrition that those who hear their confessions have no trouble at all in influencing them to renounce their bad habits, all the occasions of sin and every other obstacle to salvation. They say, consequently, that they have never seen a mission wherein graces from heaven were so abundant. It should encourage us to labor for the salvation of so many poor souls who perish daily. Help us, too, my dear brother, to bless Our Lord and His most Holy Mother for all the favors they are conferring on our little Congregation; they are surely very great.

(1). Father James de la Haye de Bonnefond (1634-1711), joined the Congregation of Jesus and Mary in 1658. He was superior of Rouen in 1666 and of Caen in 1670. Three years later he left for Rome where he tried in vain to obtain the approbation of the Congregation. St. John Eudes appointed Father de Bonnefond his vicar in 1679. He died on August 22, 1711 at the age of 78 years. Cf. Les Fleurs de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, Vol. 1, P. 287.

To One of His Spiritual Children, After an Illness. On obedience to the divine will.

Help me to thank Our Lord and His Holy Mother for having delivered me from a severe illness-it was pleurisy- which lasted only a week. Help me also to ask them to give me to the divine will so completely that I may never use a single moment of the life it has granted me except to do everywhere and in all things what is most pleasing to it. I am most edified *and comforted by your obedience to that adorable will. Remain firm in this holy disposition. I entreat Our Lord to strengthen and increase it in you more and more.

LETTER 128

To the Priests of the Rouen Seminary. To announce to them the nomination of their new superior, Father James de la Haye de Bonnefond.

[1665]

After praying intensely that I might receive the grace to know the adorable will of God with regard to the superior whom I had to send you, I decided that there was no one better fitted than our dear confrere Father de Bonnefond. He ranks high in virtue and piety, he is very wise and prudent, he has learning, and he has served as bursar, which makes him better qualified to be superior. He is extremely reluctant to accept, but his reluctance is joined with obedience, which are two indications of his capacity for this position. For it is a maxim that whoever cannot obey is not fit to give orders. Furthermore, he has no failing to prevent him from giving good example. Finally, he knows how to get along with people. Thus he has all the qualities necessary in a superior, which are very rarely found in one person.

Châlons, May 22, 1665

This mission is beginning where the others end, that is to say, with great fervor. The church, a very large one, is always filled for our sermons, as on Good Friday. We are hopeful of great fruits; they are already abundantly in evidence. I have as much strength again to preach as I ever had, thank God; so far I have preached almost every day. Our two brothers, Father Blouet and Father Yon, are beginning to relieve me on the days when I give lectures to large groups of ecclesiastics and religious; for his Lordship. of Châlons(2) is seeing that all the Orders are represented there-the Augustinians, Benedictines, I]Dominicans, Franciscans, and Jesuits.

LETTER 130

To Mother Margaret Frances Patin. She had informed him of the apostolic approbation of the Order of Our Lady of Charity.

Paris, October 11, 1665. J. M. J.

I thank you with all my heart, my dearest Mother, for the wonderful news you sent me; my joy is too great for words. Infinite thanks be for ever rendered to the most Blessed Trinity and our most amiable Jesus! Eternal thanks to His most Holy Mother, who is also ours! Immortal thanks to our honored Sister Mary des Vallées, who contributed so much to this splendid success! Immortal thanks to all the angels and saints, particularly St. Francis de Sales! Blessing after blessing upon everyone who labored to achieve it!

Let us rejoice in Our Lord, my dearest Mother; let us rejoice, my dearest Sisters. May these favors from heaven animate us to love our most bountiful Jesus and our amiable Mother more fervently, as well as to serve them more faithfully, through the practice of sound virtues, especially humility, obedience, charity, and above and beyond all else, zeal for the salvation of lost and abandoned souls. It is in this that you can manifest still more the love you bear Him Who sacrificed Himself for their sake, as also your desire to please His most charitable Mother.

In conclusion, I am sure that you have sung our holy Alleluia. Ah, how I should like to sing it with you, my dearest Mother and daughters, and to bring you a sacred relic of the holy martyrs who were the companions of St. Dionysius, one that I obtained for you from Madame de Montmartre.(1) I have not forgotten you, my dearest Sisters, although you appear to have forgotten me entirely, inasmuch as I have had no word from you since I left Caen. I assure you that each day I bring you upon my shoulders to the holy altar as my poor lambs, and in my heart as my dear daughters, that I may sacrifice you, one and all, with our adorable Host to the praise and glory of the most Holy Trinity, and do a number of other things for you which would take too long to write,

Please read this letter, my dearest Mother, to all our Sisters, and do not forget in your prayers one who is truly, in the most Holy Heart of Jesus and Mary, my dearest Mother,

Devotedly yours,

[1666] J. M. J.

My dearest Mother:

I am very sorry to learn about the illness of our dear Sisters, especially my dear Sister Mary of the Holy Spirit; but the most adorable will of God be done everywhere and in all things. Please assure her, my dear Mother, that I am particularly mindful of her at the holy altar, where I am not forgetting any of the other sisters either.

Whenever one of our Sisters is in danger of death, it would be well to have some of the others divide among themselves the exercises in preparation for death which are contained in Part Seven of The Kingdom of Jesus, in order to say them for the sick person, who should be told what is being done so that she may agree to it and unite herself with the exercises in heart and in will. I beg you, my dear Mother, to tell this to all our Sisters, that they may keep it in mind.

My most cordial regards to all of them, and many thanks for their prayers for this mission, upon which God is lavishing such abundant blessings.

LETTER 132

To Mr. Augustine Le Haguais.(1) On the mission at St. Peter's Church in Caen, and the course to follow in his adversities.

April 1, 1666
Sir, our dearest and beloved brother:

It is true that God in His goodness has liberally showered a great abundance of graces on our mission, contrary to the expectations and opinions of our friends and ourselves, who would never have dared to hope for what we have witnessed. To God alone be the honor, glory and eternal praises for it, and to the Mother of grace who, after God, is its primary source. Let thanks be rendered also to her dearest Son Who has contributed greatly to it by His blessings. You have good cause, my dear brother, to rejoice over it and to help us thank divine mercy, since we share alike the good and the evil.

Yes, indeed, the good and the evil. For, if our benefits and blessings afford you joy, your troubles and persecutions grieve me, and more deeply than I can tell you. But it is a great comfort to me, my dear brother, to see the graces that God is granting you in the midst of your misfortunes. May He be eternally blessed for His Courage, rejoice, my beloved brother; all your afflictions are beautiful broad fields given you by our heavenly Father, the revenue from which will soon make you very rich, provided you try to turn your land to good profit.

To this end, three principal things are necessary: 1. to fertilize it well, 2. to irrigate it, 3. to sow it with seed. To fertilize it with humility, by humbling ourselves a great deal, according as God gives us the grace to do so; to irrigate it with the tears of deep contrition for our sins; to sow it with the divine seed of God's word, which we must implant in our hearts and meditate on frequently, particularly on the following words taken from various parts of Sacred Scripture: "But thy providence, O Father, governeth it." (2)

There you have the divine seed with which we must sow our land.

LETTER 133

To Mother Margaret Frances Patin. On drawing up the Constitutions.

Evreux, November 12, 1666 J. M. J.

My dearest Mother:

You will do well to put the Directory at the end of the Constitutions, and to add to these Constitutions the three following chapters: i. On the Reception of Postulants; 2. On the Entrance of Novices; 3. On the Obligation of the Rules. But in the second Article of the first chapter, I should like these words to be omitted: "They shall be detained a few days as outsiders," for it seems to me that this cannot be put into practice. Furthermore, be careful to insert these first two chapters in the proper places in your Constitutions. With regard to the third, it should be placed at the end.

As for the Ceremonial, we shall see to it, God willing, at some future time.

A thousand thanks, my dearest Mother, to you and all our dear Sisters for your prayers for the mission, on which God is bestowing great blessings. May He be eternally blessed for them, as also His Holy Mother.

Most cordial greetings to all my dear Sisters. With my whole heart I remain, my dearest Mother,

LETTER 134

To Mother Margaret Frances Patin. On various subjects.

Evreux, January 13, 1668 J. M. J.

My dearest Mother:

Your beautiful long letter, so full of kindness, charity and friendliness, filled my heart with an altogether singular joy and comfort, and I thank you a thousand times for it, my dearest Mother. Let me assure you that my own heart is overflowing with affection and tenderness for you and all my dear daughters, and that I make it a special point to offer the Mother and her daughters daily to Our Lord, during the holy sacrifice of the Mass, and to pray for all their spiritual and corporal needs.

I return infinite thanks to our most adorable Saviour and His most amiable Mother for all the favors they have bestowed on Mr. de Bellecourt's daughter, and I beseech them to make her a worthy daughter of their most Holy Heart, Whose feast is now established in six different churches in this city.

We have come to the close of our mission, on which God lavished extraordinary blessings. I beg of you, my dearest Mother, and of all our dear sisters, to help us thank Him and His most Holy Mother for it, as well as for the new cross they have placed on my weak shoulders - the establishment of a new house, toward which we are now working.

In conclusion, my dearest Mother, his Lordship acknowledges and loves you as one of his dearest daughters, and as such he sends you his holy blessing. I shall be here another eight or ten days, after which I am obliged to go to Rouen to begin a new mission. I shall have great need of your prayers for it, my dearest Mother, and of those of all our dear sisters. I should like so much to pay you a visit first, if time allowed, but it is too short.

Adieu then, my dearest Mother. I will never forget you in my prayers; do not forget me, either. With all my heart I remain, both to you and to all my dear daughters,

Devotedly yours,
JOHN EUDES, missionary priest.

LETTER 137

To Father James de la Haye de Bonnefond, Superior of the Rouen Seminary. On the precautions to be taken against the plague.

September 14, 1668

Every day I have been waiting to hear from you, my dearest Brother, for I am extremely worried about you and all our dear brethren, from the highest to the humblest. We are saying daily prayers and Masses for you, and I have written all our houses to do likewise in order to place you under the protection of the Blessed Virgin.

I beg of you to make a novena of Masses in honor of her maternal Heart, and another in honor of St. Charles to implore him to intercede for us with this most charitable Heart, not only to place you under its protection, but first and foremost for all those who are victims of the plague or in danger of it.

I likewise entreat all our dear brethren, on this occasion, to render to God all the honor we owe Him; and, in order to use this circumstance as He would have us do, let us also:

1. Adore His divine justice and humble ourselves for our sins, in the name of all the people.

2. Give thanks to Him for this scourge, beholding in it not only a manifestation of His justice, but even more of His mercy which chastises us that we may be reformed and saved, not lost.

3. Adore the divine will in its intents for us, and abandon ourselves wholly to its operations in order that it may do with us what is most pleasing to God. It is an incontrovertible fact that this plague was brought on by our sins. Let us all, therefore, make a careful self-examination to determine those sins which could have contributed to it, then humble ourselves and make amends for them, trying to place ourselves in the state in which we should like to be at the hour of death, for there is no time for such preparation when one is ill.

4. Adore Our Lord Jesus Christ on the Cross and in the infinite love with which He bore so many sufferings for our sake, offering ourselves to Him to suffer all the crosses it may please Him to send us, in thanksgiving for His.

5. Offer Him all the stricken people and implore Him to grant them the grace to use their affliction to good advantage.

6. Recommend them to her whom we call Consolatrix afflictorum.

7. Give ourselves to that immense love through which our most lovable Saviour took upon Himself all the sins of the world and offered Himself to His Father to atone for them, that we may immolate ourselves to divine justice as offerings for the sins of our brethren and sisters, as well as for our own sins, and that we may assist the plague stricken people, if it please Him, in union with the charity which brought Him upon earth to assist and succour the victims of the plague, that is to say, sinners.

Finally, let us pray our Holy Mother, our angels and saints to accomplish all these things for us.

Paris, January 9, 1669 J. M. J.

My dearest daughter:

With all my heart do I give thanks to Our Lord and His most Holy Mother for having chosen you to take charge of their house. I say charge, for you will do well, my dearest daughter, not to consider it an honor or advantage, but rather a cross and very weighty burden, since superiors must answer to God for the salvation of the souls whom God has entrusted to them.

Mother Mary of the Blessed Sacrament died on January 26, 1678. Cf. Ory, The Origin Of the Order of Our Lady of Charity p. 159, 183 and 194.

(2). Mother Patin died on October 31, 1668 at the age of 68 years.

Then too, you should not look upon yourself as a superior, for the true superior is the most Holy Mother of God. You are only her vicar, or substitute, and therefore you should frequently cast yourself at her feet, particularly whenever you have to perform some action as superior. There at her feet, make an act of self-renunciation, give yourself to her and implore her to annihilate your own spirit within you and grant you hers, which is that of her Son, so that you may guide your Sisters in the spirit of their Spouse and their Mother.

To that end, there are four things you should do, my dearest daughter:

The first is to speak to your Sisters more by deed than by word, while assuming the lead in all things and endeavoring through your behavior to be a model of all the virtues.

The second is to guide them with great charity, meekness and kindness, anticipating all their spiritual and material needs, and demonstrating in all things that you have truly a motherly heart full of concern, tenderness and cordiality in their regard.

The third is to see that your Rules and Constitutions are strictly and carefully observed, and to that end you yourself should study them diligently, especially those that concern you.

The fourth is to take special care of the penitents and to overlook nothing you can do to perfect their conversion, for the house was established for that purpose; thus all the graces that God may deign to grant it depend on that. As long as the duties belonging to this institute are properly fulfilled, God will abundantly shower His blessings on your Community, but as soon as they are neglected, He will abandon you, and the whole structure, spiritual as well as material, will collapse.

I trust, God willing, that I shall soon be able to answer the rest of your letter in person. You must not be in too great a haste, for a number of reasons, to write the biography of a person who has just died.

I send my most cordial regards to all my dear daughters. I have always felt and will continue to feel toward them a truly paternal affection. I am, in truth, my dearest daughter,

Devotedly yours,
JOHN EUDES, missionary priest.

LETTER 139

To Bishop de la Vieuville of Rennes.(1) The celebration of the jubilee is not favorable to giving a mission.

[1669] I beg of you, my Lord, to consider that the jubilee will either precede, coincide with or follow the mission.

If the jubilee precedes it, the mission will no longer be seasonable, since each one will already have gained his Jubilee indulgence.

If it coincides with the mission, it will render our work useless for two reasons: 1. With the fruits of the mission depending on good confessors, the people will avoid the missionary confessors who are more strict, and will go to others who are less exacting, since the Jubilee Bull grants each one the privilege of choosing his own confessor. 2. Should everyone go to the missionaries, the Jubilee will not last longer than two weeks. Now in order that a mission produce some change in morals and destroy vice and bad habits, it must last at least seven or eight weeks. Even those that we preach in the smallest country parishes continue for not less than six weeks.(2) Otherwise one simply puts a plaster on the sore but does not heal it. Weeds are cut down but not uprooted. A noise is made, but there is little result.

If the jubilee follows the mission, everyone will desert our exercises in order to attend the jubilee. All that I am telling you, my Lord, I have learned from experience gained by preaching missions during other Jubilees. I am observing these very things now in a mission that we began three weeks ago in the diocese of Bayeux. So long as there was no talk of a Jubilee, it was bringing wonderful results, but ever since news of it began to spread, we have been accomplishing nothing. It is of the greatest importance to choose a suitable time to give this mission, since it is to be preached in your cathedral and will be our first effort in your diocese.

(1). A city of Brittany in the department of Ille-et-Vilaine, about 260 miles west of Paris.

(2). It is interesting to note the length of missions in the Seventeenth Century. The Saint give, his reasons why the mission should last at least a month and a half. It is probable that missions were not given so frequently then as at the present time.

To the Superior at Rouen. The Saint requests him to send Father Thomas Vaguel(1) to him.

[Before 1670]

... It is not by my authority as your superior that I am asking you to send Father Vaguel. I am requesting it of you as a brother who entreates you to lend him to us for a little while, or rather, to give him to Our Lord and His most Holy Mother. I hope you will not refuse them.

(1). Father Vaguel (1624-1674), a native of Caen, joined the Congregation of Jesus and Mary in 1647. After reaching at the Lisieux College, he was appointed superior of the Rouen Seminary and law of the Evreux Seminary. He was an excellent missionary and spent the last years of his life in the work of the missions. He died on March 10, 1674. Cf. Les Fleurs de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, Vol. 1, P. 43.

LETTER 141

To Mother Mary of the Blessed Sacrament Pierre. On the establishment at Rennes, and the zeal that ought to be manifested on such occasions.

Rennes, January 19, 1670 J. M. J.

I received the copies you sent me, my dear daughter, but the judgment of verification from the Parliament is missing. There is one, to be sure, but it is a judgment which orders only that Caen be informed of the conveniences or inconveniences of the city. We have no need of that one, but of a different one in your possession, issued after the other, which orders that your letters patent from the King be registered. Please have a copy of it made as soon as possible and send it to me without delay, for his Lordship of Rennes wishes to see it.

I am surprised at your writing me that it is impossible to send any of our Sisters here so soon. What is the meaning of that, my dear daughter? Is it because there are none who wish to come? I cannot believe that the Daughters of Charity could have so little love for God and so little charity toward souls who have been redeemed by the precious blood of His Son.

LETTERS AND SHORTER WORKS

Is it because they hold some grievance against the superior here?(1) But she is all charity, meekness and kindness.

Is it because you think that you shall be asked for a dowry, or room and board, or the expenses of the trip made by those who come? But I give you my word that none of these things shall be demanded of you. One of our presidents has offered to have them brought here in her carriage.(2) If they do not like it after they arrive, they will be privileged to leave. Then too, as long as they remain, your house will be relieved of the support of two girls. It will also be strengthened by the union which will be formed with this house, and it will furnish an example for other establishments of your Order.

Lastly, I do not know the origin of this hindrance and delay, but I do know that the devil, who is enraged at the Communities which labor for the salvation of souls, will do all in his power to prevent this plan and postpone its execution, because he knows only too well that, when we have left here, it will be easy for him to create obstacles.

But why, my dear daughter, are you so reserved toward me, who have no intent other than the glory of God, the salvation of souls and the advantage of your house? Why do you not simply tell me what the trouble is, so that I may try to remedy it? You can let me know as safely in writing as by word of mouth, for letters are never lost in the mail.

Most cordial regards to all my dear daughters. I beseech them to have a very special devotion to the divine Infant Jesus and His most Holy Mother.

In the love of the most Holy Heart of the Son and the Mother I remain, both to you and to them, my dearest daughter,

Devotedly yours,

To Sister Mary of St. Agnes des Champs,(1) in Caen. On the love of Jesus and Mary, and union with the dispositions with which they died.

Evreux, October 12, 1670

J. M. J.

I thank you with all my heart, my dearest daughter, for your letter so full of charity and friendliness, and I give infinite thanks to our most benign Saviour and His most amiable Mother for the holy dispositions which they are implanting in your soul. It is a very special grace which proceeds from their purest goodness. I implore them to strengthen and increase it more and more. And in order to cooperate on your part, try to cultivate love for the Son and His Mother. Offer yourself frequently to them, beseeching them to immerse, engulf, lose and consume you in the sacred flames of the fiery furnace of their most amiable Heart. Always unite this love with humility, as well as with trust and complete abandonment of your whole self to the divine will. Finally, my dearest daughter, give yourself repeatedly to Jesus in order to unite yourself with the holy dispositions with which He and His most Holy Mother died. I beseech them very humbly and earnestly to grant you their holy blessing all the moments of your life, particularly in the last one, to assist you during that final passing, and to receive and harbor your soul for ever in their most benign Heart. I have the greatest confidence in the incomparable goodness of this admirable Heart of Jesus, the Son of Mary, and of Mary, the Mother of Jesus, that they will grant you this grace.

(1). Father Joseph Mary Ory, author of The origin of the Order of Our Lady of Charity, says very little about Sister Mary of St. Agnes. He merely mentions the fact that she had been brought up in the Caen Monastery and had been tormented with interior trials. The Saint often came to console her, and when he was unable to visit wrote encouraging letters such as the one given here. Cf. Ory, op. cit., p. 174.

Evreux, September 27, 1671 J. M. J.

I deeply regret the great affliction, my dearest niece, that has befallen your poor brother. We must pray earnestly that God may grant him the grace to make good use of his sorrow, and recommend his children to the Blessed Virgin Mary, supplicating her to be their mother. I wrote to him as consolingly as I could and said Mass for the deceased, as also for him and his children, which I will do again. Ah, how fortunate we are, and how advantageous is our state in life compared with the most favorable situations of our time! How much are we bound to bless, love and faithfully serve Our Lord and His most Holy Mother for having withdrawn us from the inferno of the outside world and placed us instead in the paradise of their holy house! Ah, how gladly should we embrace all the duties of our state in life!

I am leaving here Tuesday, Godwilling, to go to Lisieux, where I shall remain for two or three weeks. Then I am proceeding to Caen, and I will not fail to call on you there.

LETTER 147

To a Religious of Montmartre. On submission to the will of God.

[1671]

Tell the good Mother that she should resign herself without reservation to the most adorable will of God, neither desiring nor asking for anything save what is pleasing to Him. That is the secret of obtaining from God everything we wish, for in all things we should have no will other than His, especially since we are well aware that He desires only what is for our greatest good. Oh, how pleasing to His Divine Majesty is one soul! What wonderful peace the soul enjoys when it has wholly, annihilated its own will and all its inclinations, and has sacrificed all its desires, interests and satisfactions to God, neither wishing nor asking for anything, at any time, except what is most pleasing to its God, professing to desire no happiness other than the happiness of its most kind Father! No matter what happens, nor in what state it is, the soul is always very happy because God is, too. One must indeed be hard to satisfy if he is not made happy by the happiness of God. This is the way, therefore, in which one obtains from God all that he requests of Him, because he asks for nothing that is not pleasing to Him. It is paradise on earth. Ask Him for this grace for me, my dearest daughter, and I will do the same for you, that you may thus be in complete conformity with the Heart of Jesus and Mary.

It pleased our most benign Saviour and His most kind Mother to manifest their admirable power and incomparable goodness on this occasion, and to bestow on my work the most wonderful success that could have been desired. To Sister Mary of the Nativity Herson. On the guidance of the penitents, and the proper preparation for the feast of the Holy Heart of Mary.

[Paris, beginning of 1672] J. M. J.

I was just on the point of going to see you and the other Sisters, my dearest niece and daughter, when our dear brother Father Hubert came expressly to Caen from Paris to take me back with him. I am there now in my desire to obey the divine will wherever it may be pleased to send me. Pray that I may be granted the grace to die rather than deviate ever so slightly from its commands.

It is that divine will which has placed you in charge of our sister penitents. It is the holiest of any employment you could undertake in this world. Apply yourself to it with all possible diligence, charity and fidelity.

My most cordial regards to them, as well as to my dear daughters. God bless them all, particularly my dearest daughter Mary of the Child Jesus, whom I desire with my whole heart to be professed.

Here are three ways in which to prepare for the feast of the Most Holy Heart of Mary: 1. Humble yourselves and ask pardon for your past sins; 2. Conceive an ardent desire to impress upon your hearts a perfect likeness of the virtues of the Holy Heart, and strive unceasingly toward that end; 3. Give yourselves to the infinite love of the divine Heart of Jesus for the Holy Heart of Mary, that He may prepare you for this feast.

To Sister Mary of the Child Jesus de Bois-David,(1) the second of that name. On the subject of her profession.

Caen, February A, 1672

A thousand thanks, my dear good daughter, for your most cordial and sincere letter, with its many indications of your true charity in my behalf. I thank my dearest daughters, too, whose names were mentioned in your letter, for their charitable regards. If all the others shared this same spirit, they would be daughters of Our Lady of Charity in the true sense.

I feel it very keenly that I cannot attend the ceremony(2) of your profession, my dearest daughter. I will be present in spirit, however; and I intend to sacrifice you together with my Saviour in the great sacrifice which I am going to offer for you, that I may supplicate Him, as well as His most Holy Mother, to take my place at your holy profession and to render you entirely conformable to their divine Heart.

It is in this most amiable Heart that I will remain eternally to you and all my true daughters, despite hell itself,

LETTER 152

To Father James de la Haye de Bonnefond, the superior of the Caen Seminary. On the registration of letters patent obtained in view of an establishment at Paris. ( 1 )

[Spring of 1672]

We have not yet presented our letters patent to the Parliament. We are engaged in paving the way for success in this, which we hope to receive from above. Have prayers said for this affair and recommend it to God. I think we shall embark on it next week. I should like the matter to be taken to Our Lady of Deliverance. (2) "For many dogs have encompassed me;" (3) but, after God, all my trust rests in our most powerful and bountiful Mother. No matter what happens, I shall always be happy, God willing, and I shall always benefit from it, for I desire no happiness or benefit other than that of my God.

(1). In 1671 a lady by the name of Madame Pétau gave to St. John Eudes, by a deed of gift between living persons, two-thirds of a home that she owned in Paris, near St. Josse Church, as a home for the students of his Congregation. In the event that the Saint was evicted from this house, Madame Nun wanted him to be given the price required for the purchase of another house to be used for the same purpose. The execution of this contract gave rise to great difficulties. The pastor and the church wardens of St. Josse opposed it, offering to give St. John Eudes the price of the house in question. The Saint, perceiving their opposition, resolved to take advantage of the benevolence of the King, whom he had just won over during a mission preached at Versailles, to solicit letters patent which would permit him to execute this contract, as soon as the opportunity presented itself. He obtained them in March, 1672, but it still remained to have them registered in Parliament. The Saint feared new opposition from this direction, and it did not fail to materialize.

(2). The Saint asks Father de la Haye de Bonnefond to pray at the shrine of our Lady for the success of the undertaking. See Letter 37, note 2.

LETTER 157(1)

To the Priests of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary. *On the establishment of the least of the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

Paris, July 29, 1672.

J.M.J.

My dearest and beloved brethren:

It is an inexplicable grace which our most amiable Saviour has accorded us in giving our Congregation the admirable Heart of His most Holy Mother. But not being content, in His infinite goodness, to stop there, He has gone even further in giving us His Own Heart, along with the Heart of His glorious Mother, to be the founder and superior, the beginning and end, the heart and life, of this Congregation.

He conferred this great gift upon us at the birth of our Congregation, for, although we have heretofore celebrated one special and particular feast of the adorable Heart of Jesus, nevertheless we never intended to separate two hearts which God has so closely joined together, the most august Heart of the Son of God and that of His Blessed Mother. On the contrary, from the very beginning of our Congregation it has been our intention to regard and honor these two Hearts as one, in unity of spirit, feeling and affection, as is clearly indicated in the Salutation to the Divine Heart of Jesus and Mary that we recite each day, as well as in the prayer and in several portions of the Office and Mass which we celebrate on the feast of the Holy Heart of the Blessed Virgin.

But divine Providence, which guides all things with marvelous wisdom, has willed to introduce the feast of the Heart of the Mother before that of the Heart of her Son, in order to prepare the hearts of the faithful for the veneration of His adorable Heart, and to dispose them to obtain from heaven the grace of this second feast by the great devotion they have shown in celebrating the first. Although the latter has (1). This circular letter is an important historical document on the Devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. In it the Saint enjoins his spiritual sons to celebrate a solemn feast on October 20. been attacked, first of all, by the spirit of the world, which never fails to oppose whatever proceeds from the spirit of God, nevertheless, as soon as it became known to those who profess to pay special honor to the most Holy Mother of God, they looked upon it with joy and embraced it with ardor. For several years now they have celebrated it with great fervor, and today it is solemnized everywhere in France, and in several religious orders and congregations, with such abundant blessings that there is reason to hope that some day it will be celebrated throughout the universe.

It is this ardent devotion of the true children of the Heart of the Mother of love which has obliged her to obtain from her beloved Son this signal favor which He has accorded His Church, that of granting her the feast of His royal Heart which will be a fresh source of an infinity of blessings for those who are disposed to celebrate it holily.

But who indeed would not do that? What solemnity is more worthy, more holy and more excellent than this one, the fountain-head of everything great, holy and venerable in all other feasts? What heart is there more adorable, admirable and worthy of love than the Heart of this God-Man whose name is Jesus? What honor is not due this divine Heart which has ever rendered and will eternally render God more glory and love, at every moment, than all the hearts of men and angels can render Him in a whole eternity? What zeal should not be ours to honor this august Heart which is the source of our salvation, the origin of all the joys of heaven and earth, an immense furnace of love for us, which thinks of nothing, day and night, save to confer on us an infinity of blessings, which, finally, was broken with grief on the Cross for our sake, as the Son of God and His most Holy Mother declared to St. Bridget, according to an excellent doctor, Father Bail.

Should the objection be raised that the feast is an innovation, I shall reply that innovation in matters of faith is indeed pernicious, but that it is good in matters of piety. Otherwise one would have to frown upon all the feasts in the Church, since they also were new when they were first celebrated, particularly those most recently established, such as the feasts of Corpus Christi, the Holy Name of Jesus, the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin Mary, the Holy Name of Mary, her Grandeurs, Our Lady of Compassion, of Hope, of Victory (in the diocese of Paris) and many others, as well as a considerable number of new saints' feasts which have been added to the Roman Breviary. If they answer that these things were done on the authority of our Holy Father the Pope, I shall reply, as did St. Francis de Sales and a great many very illustrious and learned prelates and doctors, that each bishop in his own diocese, notably in France, has the same power in this regard as that of the Sovereign Pontiff in the entire Church.

Then let us acknowledge, my dearest brethren, the infinite grace and incomprehensible favor with which our most bountiful Saviour has honored our Congregation in giving it His own most adorable Heart, together with the most amiable Heart of His Holy Mother. They are two inestimable treasures which contain an enormity of heavenly blessings and eternal riches, and He has made our Congregation their depository, that through it they may then be implanted in the hearts of the faithful.

Let us humble ourselves infinitely at the sight of our own infinite unworthiness in the face of such tremendous considerations. Let us be deeply grateful for the ineffable bounty of our most benign Saviour and the incomparable charity of His dearest Mother, who is also ours. Let us never cease to bless, praise and glorify them, nor to invite all the saints and all creatures to bless and thank them with us. Let us joyfully and jubilantly embrace the solemnity of the divine Heart of our most amiable Jesus.

I am enclosing herewith the Office and Mass of this feast, approved by all our prelates. Use them with all possible care, diligence and fervor in order to celebrate it worthily.

To that end: 1. Invite all our friends and all devout persons to join with you in doing so.

2. If you receive this package in time, have the feast proclaimed. If there were time, there would have to be a sermon.

3. Fast on the vigil of the feast.

4. Have twelve poor persons dine in the refectory on the eve of the feast or the day before.

The octave is not yet printed and ready to be sent to you.

In a word, my dearest brethren, I beseech you to celebrate this feast with all possible devotion and solemnity, and then write me all about it afterwards. You will thereby greatly rejoice him who desires for you the holiest blessings of our most bountiful Saviour and His sweet Mother, and who is, in the sacred love of His divine Heart, my dearest brethren,

Your unworthy servant,

Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

LETTER 158

To Archbishop de Médevy of Rouen. In justification of the Feast of the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

[About 1672]

It is true, my Lord, that any innovation in matters of faith is extremely pernicious and utterly damnable. But I beg of you to consider, my Lord, that it is not the same thing in matters of devotion, for there are many feasts in the Church which were not established at the outset and are new ... Certainly if those innovations were bad, the Church would not allow them.

Please consider, too, that all our prelates have given us their approbation and permission in this matter. That is why I beseech you very humbly, by this most adorable Heart which is the source of everything holy and venerable in all the feasts which the Church celebrates, by the love with which It is inflamed for you, and by all the effects of that love which you have experienced and want to experience at the hour of your death, not to prevent this feast from being celebrated in your seminary as it is celebrated in others. If you refuse me this favor, which I request of you with all possible respect and submission, I must confess that I shall be deeply pained; but should you grant it to me, as I trust you will, in your kindness, you will afford me much joy and infinite gratification. Do not, then, reject this most humble and earnest prayer addressed to you by one who is, in truth, with all his heart, and with deepest respect....

LETTER 159

[1672]

I do not even presume to write to his Lordship, for I am so filled with astonishment, confusion and fear, in view of the frightful danger confronting me, that I do not know where I stand. I feel like one who has lost his mind and power of speech, except that, if I dared, I should cry out that I desire no benefice save the one my Saviour chose for Himself, which is the Cross. My only consolation is that I have an enormous confidence in the incomparable goodness of my most amiable Jesus, and of His most bountiful Mother and mine, that they will direct all things in the manner most pleasing to them. That is my only prayer to them, save that they grant me the grace to do their most holy will everywhere and in all things. I see all that our dear Mr. de... fears for me, and it causes one's nature to shudder and tremble. But my spirit embraces all for the love of our adorable crucified Saviour and in reparation for my sins, the least of which merits infinitely worse, for I have the greatest confidence that my good Mother will not abandon me.

LETTER 160

To The Same Person. On the same subject.

[1672]

The fear I have had up to now of resisting the will of God in that matter of which you are aware, Sir, obliged me to endure what was being said and done to further it; but at last the crystal-clear view I have of my great, my very great, my almost infinite unworthiness, and the fear of seeing myself compelled to answer to God for the salvation of so many souls, oblige me to tell you, sir, that I declare openly and from the bottom of my heart that I want no benefice other than the one my Saviour chose for Himself, that is, the Cross. This is the benefice I desire, that I embrace and love with all my heart for the love of my most amiable Crucified Saviour, Who loved and preferred it to all that the world loves and esteems more highly. I want no other, unless God absolutely wills it. I implore you to read this letter to his Lordship and to the vicar-generals, as well as to Monsignor de ...

LETTER 161

To Father Simon Mannoury. On the request of His Lordship Henry de Maupas, Bishop of Evreux, to make him his coadjutor.

[September 1672]

This news has not caused me the slightest disturbance, both because I am quite certain that, no matter what may be said, nothing will come of these proposals, and because, if it did happen, it would assuredly be God Who had so willed it. Tell his Lordship of Evreux plainly that I desire no benefice save the one chosen by my Saviour Jesus Christ for Himself, that is, His Cross. So far I have had all manner of them, and by the grace of God I have not bent beneath their burden; but as for this new cross which threatens me, I have no fears at all. I know men, and I feel quite sure that this is the cross they will most willingly spare me.

LETTER 162

To Father James de la Haye de Bonnefond. On the same subject.

September 17, 1672

Here is still another matter that I urge you to keep very secret: his Lordship of Evreux wishes to have the nonentity of nonentities as his coadjutor. He has consulted several bishops and doctors about it, and other religious of outstanding piety, as well as his two vicar-generals, all of whom have encouraged him in it ... He has drawn up a petition to present to the King and has written in this regard to Father Ferrier.<sup>(1)</sup> Monday he is to send Father du Vaucel, his vicar-general, to Paris, and he, accompanied by Father Cyprien, a Discalced Carmelite, will call on Father Ferrier to request him to present the petition to the King.

Since I learned this piece of news, which is known only to Father Mannoury, I have not troubled myself about it, as much because I believe that the whole project will go up in smoke, as because I am afraid of resisting the divine will, in case this affair is proceeding from God. But as soon as I learned of the disclosure of his Lordship of Evreux, I wrote to Father Mannoury that I desired no other benefice except that chosen by my Saviour for Himself, that is, His Cross; that this was the sole cross I was seeking, which I embraced and loved for the love of this most amiable Redeemer Who preferred it to all that the world most loves and esteems; and that I begged him to make that avowal to his Lordship of Evreux and his vicar-generals. I see nothing but crosses heaped upon my head if this does not succeed. As for the others, that is, those who are connected with such a high place, I do not fear them so much because I cannot convince myself that the thing will happen.

October 18, 1672

Father du Vaucel, Vicar General of Evreux, will arrive in Paris to-morrow for the affair we have been discussing, my dearest brother. Then please write for me to Coutances, Rennes and Lisieux, telling them to do the same; and to Rouen, that they should make a novena of Masses to St. Joseph, all for my intentions. Ask our Carmelites also to make a novena of their own chosen devotion, in honor of the Blessed Virgin and St. Teresa.

LETTER 164

Paris, October 23, 1672

J. M. J.

I give infinite thanks to our most adorable Saviour and His most amiable Mother for the solace they have granted you, my dearest daughter. There is no credit due me, for nothing can be expected from one who is merely a nonentity. It is solely an effect of their bounty; may they be eternally praised and blessed for it.

Give yourself to them with your whole heart, my dear daughter, in order to serve and honor them with joy, love and confidence. Be very careful to suppress all thoughts that can trouble you, and to appeal to the most bountiful Virgin in all our trials, as a daughter having recourse to her most sweet mother. She has never yet rejected anyone, and she will not do so the first time in your case.

Be satisfied to make your confession as usual during your retreat. Then too, do not speak to his Lordship of Bayeux about it; it is your superior who should settle these things. My most cordial greetings to her, as also to her niece, Sister Mary of the Nativity and to your brother. I remain with all my heart, in Jesus and Mary, my dearest daughter,

Devotedly yours,
JOHN EUDES, missionary priest.

LETTER 165

To Sister Mary of St. Agnes des Champs. The Saint encourages her to put her trust in the Blessed Virgin Mary.

J. M. J.

I am extremely sorry, my dearest daughter, that I cannot go to see you, but have recourse to our Holy Mother. She has never rejected anyone, and you need not fear that she will do so in your case. She is all mercy, charity, goodness, meekness and kindness. You are her daughter, and she is your Mother—a mother who loves you so much that, if the love of all the mothers who ever existed, are now living and will yet be, were gathered into a single heart, it would form only a tiny spark in comparison with her love for you. Then go to her with full and complete confidence. Implore her aid with all earnestness, and you will feel the effects of her incomprehensible goodness.

With my whole heart do I beseech her and her beloved Son to grant you their holy blessing.

Nos cum Prole pia benedicat Virgo Maria.

Live Jesus and Mary.

My most cordial regards to the whole Community.

I am asking you, my dear daughter, to communicate this to Madame. (2) He had an unparalleled devotion for the Blessed Virgin, from whom he received extraordinary favors. He suffered for more than twenty years, and during that time he never left his room except to say Holy Mass, spending all his time in prayer, in having Sacred Scripture and the holy Fathers read to him, and in making collections of all their beautiful sayings in praise of the incomparable Mother of God, with which he filled several huge hand-written volumes. To Father James de la Haye de Bonnefond. On the mission at Saint-Germain-en-Laye.

Paris, April 21, 1673

Yesterday the Queen called on the Carmelite nuns here while I was at Montmartre. She evinced such great satisfaction over the mission and the preachers that it defies expression. She said that other sermons were only speeches, but that ours penetrated the depths of the heart, that everyone was moved by them, and that she could see a change in the King's behavior. Beg God to bless our small efforts. Finally, she demonstrated such enormous benevolence, such enormous friendship (those are the words of our good Sister Teresa, who made the account as glowing as possible), toward the nonentity of nonentities that it is impossible to imagine. And she earnestly enjoined Sister Teresa not to allow the day to pass without telling me all these things. Blessed are they who are loved by the Queen of Heaven!

LETTER 170

To Mother St. Gabriel, a religious of Montmartre. Concerning his ardent desire to see Jesus and Mary live and reign in the hearts of the abbess and her daughters.

[1673]

I implore our Blessed Mother to impress a perfect image of her most amiable Heart on the heart of her beloved daughter, Frances de Lorraine, and on all the hearts of her dear daughters of Our Lady of Montmartre, at whose feet my mind and heart will always remain, crying out unceasingly: Live Jesus and Mary in the hearts of my dear daughters! May they and they alone for ever dwell therein, and may they inflame and consume their hearts completely in the sacred flames of their divine love!

Once again I send my greetings to our good, our excellent Madame, whom I pray God to preserve, bless, sanctify and make as great a saint as I should like her to be. I beseech this of Him now and for the rest of my life. ings concerning meekness, for a hard, harsh, dry, haughty and domineering disposition serves only to spoil everything, ruining the filial affection, confidence and tenderness which should be present in the hearts of those in our charge, and tends to fill them instead with fear, terror, contempt, aversion and hatred. In a word, it is good only for destroying a Community and putting the head of the superior on the block. I do not think, my dearest daughter, that you are behaving in this way, nor has anyone said so to me, but since I know from experience that being a superior ruins many persons by giving them that haughty, domineering, hard, bitter, dry and harsh spirit, I am always afraid. Strive, therefore, I entreat you, to guide your daughters with all possible gentleness, kindness, cordiality and tenderness. It is the spirit of Our Lord and His most Holy Mother; pray to them frequently to

To Father James de la Haye de Bonnefond, in Rome. On the difficulties he was encountering in his efforts to obtain approbation of the Congregation.

[1673]

I always implore God in His goodness to destroy our little Congregation completely if it does not exist for His greatest glory, and I embrace with my whole heart all the mortifications and humiliations which would consequently be mine. Thanks to my Saviour, it seems to me that I have no desire in the depths of my soul save that of seeking in all things what is most pleasing to Him. Let us take courage and rejoice in two things which ought to cause us to die of joy:

First, that all the enemies of our great God can never keep Him from being what He is. "Know ye that the Lord He is God," (1) says the Secondly, that all the powers of earth and hell can never hinder us in our sole and all-important occupation, that of serving and loving our most adorable Jesus and His most Holy Mother. Let us lose all rather than lose the least particle of trust we should have in their incomparable goodness toward our Congregation, of which they have given us such abundant proof.

We have never transacted any business that was not accompanied by some cross, which is the true character of all God's affairs. The more they are thwarted, the greater are the fruits and blessings that result from them. I have high hopes for this affair, since there are so many difficulties in connection with it. I am confident that Our Lord and His most Holy Mother will, in their goodness, remove these obstacles. Finally, my dearest brother, one would never accomplish anything in God's work if he were easily rebuffed by obstacles and difficulties. Even if you gain nothing, after having done everything possible, I shall be as happy, God willing, as if all were accomplished. For what is it that I seek? My own interests and gratification? By no means, thank God; only His will!

To Sister Mary of the Nativity Herson. On the consolations that accompany crosses, and on several things regarding the house of the Charity Sisters of Bayeux, where she had been sent.

Paris, February 16, 1674 J. M. J.

I thank you with all my heart, my dearest daughter and good niece, for your kind letter so full of charity and cordiality.

It is true that our most amiable Saviour is loading me down with crosses, but at the same time He is granting me such a great abundance of graces that all my afflictions are turned into consolations. Many lies and calumnies<sup>(1)</sup> about me have been widely circulated, but God will use them for His greater glory, while the father of lies, who is their author, will be put to confusion.

I give infinite thanks to my dearest Jesus and His Holy Mother for all the blessings they are bestowing upon your work in the house where you are at this time, and I beseech them to increase these spiritual favors more and more, in you as well as your dear companion, to whom I send my most cordial regards.

I am most grateful to Reverend Father Guardian, of whom you wrote me, for his charity toward you and his kindness in my regard; I thank him over and over again.

My affairs are progressing very well, thank God. The falsehoods are being exposed, and I hope that Our Lord and our gracious Mother will soon show us the effects of their special protection.

It is not enough for you to have revealed your reasons and difficulties to the Mother Superior; you should also acquaint his Lordship of Bayeux with them, and beseech him to keep in mind his word to you. Over and above all else, I entreat you, my dearest daughter, to implant deep in the hearts of all your daughters a tender and cordial devotion to the most Holy Mother of God, who is an inexhaustible source of

LETTER 175

To Colbert (1)

Sunday morning, April 15, 1674 My Lord,

Yesterday evening I received an official letter which was delivered to me from you, ordering me to retire' to the seminary at Caen. I immediately made arrangements to obey. I will presently leave Paris and will await, along the way, a coach which is to be sent to me from Evreux, since I was unable to reserve a seat in the public coaches and my age does not permit me to go on horseback or on foot. I felt, my Lord, that I was under an obligation to you to inform you of my prompt obedience, and to protest that I remain, my Lord, with profound respect,

Your most obedient and humble servant,

JOHN EUDES, priest.

(1). Colbert (1619-1683), was statesman and general controller of finance under Louis XIV.

(2). When Father Boniface, mentioned in preceding letters, saw that he could not obtain from Rome the approbation of Our Lady of Charity, he filed a petition in St. John Eudes's name with the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, requesting that his Congregation be permitted to make a vow to uphold the authority of the Sovereign Pontiff, even in matters which might give rise to doubts. The petition came to nothing, and St. John Eudes, not knowing that it had been filed, did not even suspect its existence.. His enemies succeeded in getting their hands on it and using it to discredit him with King Louis XIV, who banished him to the seminary of Caen.

Whatever you do, my dearest brother, we must labor to clear ourselves of the accusation of having drawn up that petition, which is altogether contrary to the truth. Father Boniface has given me a statement in writing to the effect that he wrote me, when he was in Rome, to ask if I wanted him to handle our business, and that my answer was no. But they are not satisfied with that. In short, the whole success of our affairs depends on this justification.

Let them annihilate me and put another in my place. What difference does it make who governs the Congregation, provided he does it well? [October 1674]

I can truthfully say to you, my dearest brother, that since I came into the world I have not suffered such a bloody persecution as this one. What grieves me most is that it is one of my own sons(1) who used to live here, and who never received anything from me but every possible mark of friendship, who has been my most relentless persecutor. ### LETTER 183

To Father James de la Haye de Bonnefond, in Rome. On a defamatory libel ( 1 ) published against the Saint.

December 12, 1674

Now I am involved in a new persecution, bloodier than all the others. My great benefactors, the gentlemen of the new doctrine, had a libel printed against me which they have distributed throughout the whole of France and in all the communities of Paris. It deals with my writings on Sister Mary (2) and is full of falsehoods, calumnies and all sorts of marks of their prejudice. They charge me with thirteen heresies, namely: Arianism, Nestorianism, Monothelism, Jansenism, in connection with four condemned propositions, and others. The cause of their anger is that everywhere

I oppose their innovations, that I uphold the faith of the Church and the authority of the Holy See, and that I burned a hateful book written against devotion to the Blessed Virgin, at the end of which it said that we must by no means pray to her any more than to the other saints, and that she is not the Mother of God, even though she is called the Mother of Jesus. The author of this libel(3) is an abbe from M. de Sainte Marie's" locality, along with several others.

St. John Eudes, faced with this torrent of abuse and its resulting mistrust, remained silent. One of his friends, Father de Launay Hué, powerfully and convincingly replied to all the attacks of Father Dufour, turning against the latter the accusation of heresy which he has brought against St. John Eudes. To the Priests of His Congregation. On trust in God in the midst of persecutions.

Let us be strictly on guard against losing our trust even in the slightest degree. We should offend the power and infinite goodness of our most adorable Father and our most amiable Mother if, after having experienced so many effects of their incomparable charity, we lacked confidence in them. They are raising up several powerful persons to uphold and defend us. I hope that this persecution is the final attempt of the rage of hell against us. You cannot imagine how many different calumnies the demon is circulating against me on all sides.' But in the midst of all this I sing with my whole heart:

Live Jesus, my sole desire!
Live Jesus, my whole delight!
Live Jesus, my sweet Saviour!
Live Jesus, God of my heart!

Live the Queen of my heart!
Live Mary, Mother of love!
Day and night I wish to sing
The wonders of her all-good Heart!

[1674] J. M. J.

I can add no more, my dearest daughters, to what I have already told you a number of times, which is that you should do everything in your power to return to the house of your Order and your vocation. Not so long ago I was speaking about this to his Lordship of Bayeux, and he told me that the last time he had talked with you, you seemed quite satisfied to remain where you were. If that is the case, I do not understand a word of what you write me; otherwise, keep reminding him of his promise, of your weariness at being so long outside of your own center, and of the fact that there are many nuns in his own diocese with whom he can replace you. Do not be content to speak once, nor four times, nor a dozen, but keep on entreating, supplicating and importuning him both verbally and in writing.

I remain with all my heart, in Jesus and Mary,

Devotedly yours,

To the Superior of the Rouen Seminary. In answer to a letter urging him to reply to the libel of the Abbé d'Aulnay.

A thousand thanks, my dearest and beloved brother, for the charitable and cordial letter you wrote me; I am most grateful to you and to those gentlemen who are noted therein. I beg of you to assure them of my gratitude and thank them profusely for me. Their zeal and goodness are most praiseworthy, but, because I can find no evidence in the holy Gospel that our divine and adorable Master ever used the ways and means indicated in your letter to defend Himself against the injustice and cruelty that He suffered at the hands of the Jews, I cannot bring myself to do otherwise than to try to imitate Him in His patience and silence: Jesus autem tacebat.(1) Perhaps God will raise up someone who can answer the libel.(2) Be that as it may, I gladly embrace all the crosses it may please God to send me, and I earnestly entreat Him to grant pardon to me and those who are persecuting me. My numerous sins are deserving of a thousand times worse ...

thousandth part of what one ought to suffer here; 2. Because there is nothing which so greatly increases grace and divine love in the soul as the sufferings of this life—something which those of purgatory cannot do, since they serve only to satisfy divine justice for the punishment due to sin. In short, there is nothing which gives greater glory to God and is more pleasing to Him than the sufferings of this world. That is why Our Lord said one day to Blessed Henry Suso that, if a man only knew the reward obtained in heaven for the most trifling affliction of mind or body that can be suffered in this world for the love of God, he would prefer to spend a century in a fiery furnace than to be deprived of this reward. I should not want a soul who desires to love God purely, however, to suffer from the motive of that reward, but rather because suffering is infinitely pleasing to His Divine Majesty.

lence toward our little Congregation, which I ask you to continue for the love of Our Lord and His most Holy Mother.

I am not surprised, Sir, by these calumnies which are going the rounds, for it seems as if all hell has been loosed against us. But the least of my sins merits a thousand times worse, and I have not the slightest doubt that Our Lord will derive the greatest possible glory from all this. I sincerely beseech Him to show mercy toward all these slanderers and calumniators.

It is a strange thing to say and believe that priests, who profess to live in the fear of God, should be so blind, so senseless and so hatefully impious as to say prayers and salutations, recite a special Office and celebrate Masses and feasts in honor of the heart of a poor girl dead these ten years,<sup>(1)</sup> who is neither canonized, nor beatified nor anything else. Do they not see that all the words of the salutation, all the anthems, responses, hymns and lessons of the Office and Mass are addressed to the Heart of the Blessed Virgin?

It is the blackest and most false calumny to claim that this good girl was a sorceress, and that she had been condemned as such by a judgment of Parliament.

All the other statements in your letter, too, are utterly false, as are similar ones contained in a defamatory libel which has been spread against me. It is crammed with material taken from my writings on the life of this good girl. But the authors have done just as the Huguenots do with books written by Catholics on controversial issues, taking only the objections and omitting the answers. So, too, has the author of this libel selected only what is hard to understand and liable to offend the reader in these writings on Sister Mary, without adding the explanations I have given. In addition, he has also inserted several ridiculous things taken from other accounts that I never wrote ...

(1). This is a mistake. Mary des Vallées had been dead, as a matter of fact, for nineteen years. Father Costil who compiled the Annales de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie adds that the letter sent him was not from the hand of St. John Eudes. Undoubtedly it was only a copy, which explains the error committed.

LETTER 198

[1675]

I, the undersigned, a priest of the seminary of Caen, do hereby declare to his Lordship the Most Illustrious and Reverend Bishop of Bayeux, my prelate, that several years ago, having assumed the obligation, by the order of His Lordship de Matignon, at that time bishop of Coutances, to become the spiritual director of Mary des Vallées, a native of his diocese, I felt that it was my duty, in order to give an exact account of the mind and soul of this girl, to assemble and write down all that I was able to learn about her, as much from various persons of outstanding doctrine and piety who had known or guided her several years previously, as from what I had learned since taking over her spiritual guidance. In doing so, however, I had not the slightest intention of compiling a book for publication, nor of submitting these writings as unquestionable truths. They were intended simply as memoirs, and as an account on which my superiors might pass whatever judgment they pleased. If I added my own reflections here and there, it was only to suggest to them a way of explaining and understanding these things. I never intended that anyone except my superiors should see these writings. If at present, then, they have fallen into other hands for I understand that certain persons claim to be in possession of them - it has happened through the negligence or disloyalty of some of my friends to whom I had entrusted them, in good faith, to be examined only in private. These persons either took copies or allowed them to be taken without my knowledge and against my will. Then certain individuals of evil intent not only confused and identified them with other accounts which had already been written by others on the same subject, but they also garbled and altered them in several places in order to make it possible to give them sinister and criminal interpretations.

After all, I do acknowledge that I am neither impeccable nor infallible, but that of myself I should be capable of falling into all sorts of errors if God in His goodness did not keep me from doing so. And I confess, with the great St. Augustine, that I am indebted to the grace of God not only for the little good I have tried to do but also for all the evil I have not done.

Furthermore, if in the writings which are really mine there is found any expression too positive, or any proposition not strictly in conformity with the common doctrine of the Church, I am ready and willing to make a sincere retraction, both verbally and in writing, and to submit all that I have written and shall ever write to the judgment and correction of the most Holy, Catholic, Apostolic and Roman Church, and particularly of his Lordship the bishop, into whose hands I have delivered all my writings in order that he may pass judgment on them and make such disposition of them as it may please God to inspire him. I will yield entirely to his decision.

Dated at Caen this 25th day of June, 1675,

To King Louis XIV. Memoir dealing with the petition which Father Boniface had addressed to the Pope, in 1662, in St. John Eudes' name but without his consent, and which had displeased that monarch.

[1675 or 1676]

I protest at your Majesty's feet, Sire, and before God, that the petition in question was never presented by my order nor with my consent, that I never knew what it contained, and that Father Boniface has never belonged to our Congregation.

He is a good Flemish priest who was formerly an Oratorian Father. He claims to have left them because he felt that they leaned toward those who were too mild in their condemnation of the book of Jansenius.

It is true that this good priest offered to handle the business of our Congregation when he was in Rome thirteen or fourteen years ago; but he promised me in writing to affirm on oath that I requested him not to involve himself in our affairs. It is evident, through two petitions which I turned over to the archbishop<sup>(1)</sup> and which were formerly presented for us, that never have we either desired or sought anything having reference to that petition. That alone seems sufficiently to justify our intentions. I cannot imagine what use our adversaries were able to make of that petition which they brought to light after it had been hidden for fourteen years, and against which they raised no outcry at that time, save to provide themselves with a means of constituting me an impostor. It could not be detrimental to them at present, since the last petitions presented from me were in no way similar to it. Therefore it appears likely that, having discovered this old scrap of paper by some means unknown to me and realizing, furthermore, that I was strongly opposed to what it contained, they had me questioned at length, surmising indeed that I would answer simply, according to my custom and my own mind, without suspecting the trap they were

Do not, Sire, allow the goodfaith of a priest in his seventies, who has been laboring half a century for the Church, to remain in doubt, nor a Congregation established by letters patent from the King, your father of glorious memory, to be suppressed. In the letters of establishment granted to us by this great King, he declares that he would willingly give his life for the accomplishment of such a holy work which could do so much for the glory of God. The Queen, your mother, has always favored us with her powerful protection, and because of your Majesty's kindness I have had reason to hope that God was reserving for you the completion of a work begun by this great Prince and this holy Princess.

Prostrate, Sire, at your Majesty's feet, I ask this favor of you, and I hope that God, Who has given you such a just and upright heart, may render you the protector of innocence.

For six years I have groaned beneath the weight of the King's disfavor for a fault of which I am, in truth, completely innocent, and from which you and you alone, my Lord, have sufficient power and kindness to deliver me. For, although I have spent my whole life-nearly fifty years--in the service of the Church and of their Lordships the prelates, not one of them is willing to take a step or say a word in my defence except his Lordship of Coutances.(1) They all send me to his Lordship of Paris, saying that he is all-powerful and so kind that even his own enemies feel the effects of that kindness ...(2)

To Madame d'Argouges. (1) On the projected establishment of the Daughters of Our Lady of Charity in Paris. (2)

[1678] J. M. J.

Madame:

Here are your good nuns of Our Lady of Charity who have the honor to join you, that they may carry out whatever orders it may please you to issue. They are the Daughters of Most Amiable Heart of the Mother of God, and they are also the daughters of your most kind heart, since that glorious Virgin has given you a mother's heart and love toward them. They are going to Paris to search for lost souls, in imitation of Our Saviour Who says of Himself that He came to seek and to save those who were lost. Of all divine things, the most divine, says St. Dionysius, is to cooperate with God in the salvation of souls. For that reason, Madame, you can do nothing more pleasing to His Divine Majesty than to provide the employment you intend to give these good girls. All the souls who may be saved through their mediation will honor you, after God, in heaven as the cause of their salvation, and you will have a very singular share of their glory. To win a soul for God is greater than to conquer a hundred thousand worlds, for a single soul is of higher value than that many worlds. That is why you will be wealthy in heaven beyond all power of speech or imagination.

(2). "This letter bears no date, but it can have been written only in 1678. As a matter of fact, in that year a plan for an establishment in Paris, prepared by President d'Argouges, failed, for reasons unknown to us. The sisters were to leave Caen, and Mother Mary of the Trinity Heurtaut left her monastery at Guingamp in order to join them. This letter of St. John Eudes was undoubtedly intended to announce their departure from Caen and their arrival in Paris . . . Madame d'Argouges was in no way discouraged by this failure. She continued her proceedings, and in 1682 she was able to staff the St. Pélagie house with Mother Mary of the Trinity and several sisters who had come either from Guingamp or from Caen." To Reverend Father Louis Francis d'Argentan, a Capuchin. On his book, Les Grandeurs de la Saint Vierge.

[1678] Most Reverend Father:

I am doing myself the honor of writing you to render you infinite thanks for the admirable book you have written on the glories of the Blessed Virgin. I am preaching it to everyone. Would to God it were in the hands of all Christians, and that they took as much delight in reading it as I do! . . . Blessed be the hand which has written so worthily of the greatness of the Mother of our Saviour! Blessed be the head and heart whence have sprung such beautiful truths! Oh, how wretched and hateful is the tongue which dares to pronounce anathemas against those who have devotion for our lovable Mother! It is against her enemies that all the anathemas should be fulminated, particularly against those who hide themselves in their house whenever one knocks at their door, crying out that they are not there, only to surprise the passers-by and slaughter them. O my dearest Father, if I were now at your feet, you could not prevent me from kissing them, no matter how much you protested.

LETTER 210

What comforts me is the sight of the most adorable will of God which does everything for the best, and my belief that you will gladly submit yourself to the decrees of that divine will which has chosen you to replace our dear departed superior. It is what I beg of you, my dearest brother, while venturing to assure you that Our Lord and His most Holy Mother will be with you, managing their house through you and giving you all the enlightenment and graces necessary for that purpose. Accept this post, therefore, from their hand, or rather from their most charitable Heart; and accept it corde magno et animo volenti, with a fervent desire to govern their family according to their spirit, which is one of humility, kindness, charity and meekness.

(1). Father de Bon (1640-1680) entered the Congregation Of Jesus and Mary in 1670. He was appointed to the Rouen Seminary and then to that of Evreux. On March 3, 1679 he succeeded Father de la Haye as Superior of Evreux. He died on April 17, 1680. Cf. Les Fleurs de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, Vol. 1, p. 58.

LETTER 211

To Father Richard Dufour,(1) His Secretary. The Saint gives an account of his audience with Louis XIV.

Paris, June 17, 1679

Yesterday I had the honor of seeing the King at Saint Germain. It happened in this way: I was ushered into the King's room, where I found myself surrounded by a large group of bishops, priests, dukes, counts, marquises, marshals of France and King's guards. His Lordship of Paris took me to one corner of the room. When the King made his entrance, he walked by all these great lords and came directly Up to me, his expression full of kindness. Then I began to speak to him of our affair and he listened most attentively, with an air of being very glad to hear what I was telling him.

"Sire, I have come to your Majesty's feet to render you my most humble thanks for your kindness in granting me the honor and consolation of seeing you once more before I die, and to protest to you that there is no man in this world who has more zeal and fervor than I where your Majesty's service and interests are concerned. This is the sentiment in which I desire to spend and use the little time left me in this life. I also beg of you most humbly, Sire, to honor us with your royal protection, and to continue to reward us with your graces and favors. This is what I hope from that wonderful benevolence which rejoices and delights the hearts of all who have the honor of speaking to your Majesty, and which never fails to send them away full of joy and comfort."

When the King had heard these things, he said to me:

"I am very pleased to see you. I have heard about you. I feel quite sure that you are doing a great deal of good in my States. Continue to work as you have been doing. I shall be very pleased to see you again, and will protect you on whatever occasions may arise."

Those were the words of the King, which filled me with an unspeakable gratification, and were overheard by his Lordship of Paris and all the lords who were present. They were amazed to see such a great King speak so gently and kindly to the most insignificant of all men.

Thereupon I went to say Mass at the Franciscans. Then I was invited to dine with the almoners, who received me with marked kindness and charity.

Write to all the superiors of our houses, in my name, that I beg of them to do three things: first, to make an octave of thanksgiving to Our Lord and His most Holy Mother for the splendid success of this affair; secondly, to pray a great deal for the King and all the royal house, for their Lordships of Paris and Coutances; thirdly, to make a firm resolution henceforth to love and serve our benign Saviour and His most Holy Mother with more fervor than ever before, through the practice of the holy virtues ...

LETTER 212

To Father Ralph de Bon, Superior of the Seminary at Evreux. On a loss he had suffered.

February 16, 1680.

As for the twelve hundred livres,<sup>(1)</sup> we must first of all sacrifice them to God. After that; however, I am of the opinion that you should have a novena of Masses for the Dead said for the souls in Purgatory, in order to enlist their aid in recovering the money.

(1). The money has been stolen or lost. Cf. Fleurs de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, Vol. 1, p. 60.

LETTER 213(1)

To a Superior of Missionaries. On the course to follow in giving Missions.

What should console and encourage you is that Our Lord is in your midst (on your missions) in a very special way, according to His promise: "Behold I am with you all days."<sup>(2)</sup> Not only is He with you, but He is in you, too, in order to continue that same work of the redemption of souls which He Himself began. Dwell also in Him, dearest brother, and to that end strive to put aside your own self and renounce it vigorously, that you may withdraw into Our Lord and give yourself completely to Him, since outside of Him you can do nothing but in Him.

(1). All letters from 213 to the end of this collection are taken from the biographies of the Saint or from Les Annales de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie. There are no references in them that would help to discover the date when they were written by the Saint.

you can do all things. Remember that to preach is to make God speak, and consequently he who preaches should be destroyed so that God may be everything in him. Take great care, therefore, to annihilate yourself at the feet of Our Lord before ascending the pulpit, and to give yourself to Him, imploring Him to annihilate you Himself and establish Himself within you, so that it may be He Who speaks, for to Him and Him alone belongs the privilege of preaching His Father's word.

Try also, dearest brother, always to pray a little, and to read your Breviary and say Mass with recollection.

Please be careful of your health, and to that end I urge you never to preach longer than one hour at a time. I also recommend to you the health of our dear brothers. See to it that they all return from the church at the same time, that they may have their meals together. Have the indisposed say early Mass, and above all, see that they retire at nine o'clock in the evening to get the rest they need.

Recommend interior piety and exterior modesty to them frequently, and that they give themselves often to Our Lord in order to accomplish His work in His spirit, that is, in the interior and exterior dispositions with which He performed all His actions when He was on earth. I beseech them all to give themselves earnestly to Him in order to perform the divine actions-and by that I mean sacerdotal functions digne Deo, that they may deal with sinful souls in a spirit of charity and meekness, and live and converse with one another with respect and brotherly love, "not considering the things that are his own, but those that are other men's," (3) Particularly do I urge them to hold in extreme horror and to shun more than death and hell itself the slightest shadow of that abominable vice which shall be nameless, and therefore to exercise the utmost reserve toward persons of the opposite sex.

I bless God infinitely for all the graces He bestows upon you during your missions. If the attendance is not so large at the current One, do not let that discourage you. If there are not many people there at first, there will be more later on. And remember, too, that a single soul is a whole world in the sight of God, and that Our Lord Himself stopped to preach to one lone woman. Furthermore, self-love and vanity, which interfere even in the works of God, must be mortified. Be careful, how ever, to devote just as much attention and preparation to your preaching, for in those circumstances it is necessary to be even more diligent and fervent.

LETTER 214

To a Benedictine Abbess. The Saint asks her not to suppress the feast of the Holy Heart of Mary in her monastery.

Madame, although I do not have the honor of being known to you, I am nevertheless venturing to take the liberty of writing to you, to acquaint you with my sorrow upon learning that you not only have abolished the feast of the Holy Name of Mary in your monastery, but have also determined to suppress the feast of her Holy Heart.

O Madame! What are you doing? The abbesses preceding you, who were so full of wisdom and virtue, established those feasts as a consequence of their singular devotion for the glorious Virgin, and you are destroying the work of their piety! What will they say to you on the day of judgment?

What are you doing, Madame? God in His goodness established these two feasts in your house, like twin fountains of graces and blessings, and you are draining them dry! The Sacred Heart of Jesus and the Holy Heart of Mary were two impregnable towers to shelter the souls of the abbess and her daughters from their enemies, and you are destroying them! You are striking and wounding the Heart of the Mother of pure love! You are excommunicating her most venerable name and pleasing Heart! You are driving them out of your house! After all that, how will you dare to appear before her presence? Have you no fear at all that her Son, Who is acutely sensitive to the slightest offenses committed against His dear Mother, may fulminate some terrible excommunication against you, and that they may close the door of their house against you? They gave you their Hearts, which are but a single Heart through unity of spirit, to be your heart, your treasure and your consolation, and you are rejecting it! How will you continue to live without a heart? Will you not henceforth deserve to be called, in the words of the Prophet Osee, "a dove that is decoyed,"<sup>(1)</sup> no longer possessing a heart? The Mother of God gave you her Heart as an asylum in all your troubles, an immense treasure filled with an infinity of benefits, according to these words of a holy prelate of your Order: "a fountain of infinite good." And yet you want none of them, preferring to lose them! You are abolishing a holy feast founded on the approbation of a great number of illustrious prelates, by authority of a legate a latere and on the immovable rock of the apostolic Holy See, and authorized by a great number of Holy Fathers, celebrated theologians, and even several great saints and a number of very learned men of the Order of St. Benedict, all of whom have left us obvious proofs of their devotion to this most benevolent Heart during their lives here on earth, and who are now celebrating its praises in heaven. Do you think, Madame, that you will do better to subscribe to the sentiments of men who are still in the darkness, rather than to those of the saints who are enlightened by the wisdom of heaven and educated by the doctrines of Jesus Christ? For He Himself desired to be the first to preach this devotion, having taught it to St. Mechtilde, a nun of your holy Order. If you condemn this feast, now that it has existed for several years in your monastery, it is greedy to be feared that you may not celebrate it with the saints who will solemnize it in heaven for all eternity.

In God's name, Madame, consider these things seriously and accept them from the hand which offers them to you, that of purest charity, and as coming from one who has all conceivable respect for you.

(1). Osee, 7, 11

LETTER 215

To a nun of the Order of St. Benedict. To become humble, but not discouraged, because of her shortcomings.

No, my dear Sister, as long as we remain on earth we shall never be entirely free from the shortcomings and imperfections of the world. O earth, how unbearable thou art! O abode of sin and misfortune, wilt thou hold us here yet a long time? O Jesus, wilt Thou not call us Soon to join Thee? Tell us, most amiable Jesus, when will there no longer remain anything in us that is contrary to Thy love? When shall we love Thee perfectly? Let us hasten, my dear Sister, to labor for the ac. accomplishment of God's work in ourselves, so that we may soon leave this place of darkness and horror to enter into the kingdom of eternal love.

Furthermore, let us always humble ourselves a great deal in view of our shortcomings; but at the same time, let us cast off ourselves, flee from ourselves as from a place filled with all sorts of evils and miseries, that we may enter into Jesus Who is our house of refuge, our treasure in which we possess every kind of wealth and shall find all types of virtues and perfections to offer His eternal Father in satisfaction for our sins and imperfections. If we dwell within ourselves, we shall find nothing therein save every cause for grief and sadness; but if we emerge from ourselves in order to ascend to Jesus, we shall behold in Him so many delights, grandeurs, perfections and wonders that, if we truly love Him, we shall rejoice exceedingly in the sight of these things, exclaiming with the Blessed Virgin: Exultavit spiritus meus in Deo salutari meo, "My spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour." (1)

That is one of the uses we should make of our defects. O blessed shortcomings, if I may so express it, when they give us cause to cast ourselves aside in order to ascend to Jesus and unite ourselves with Him Who alone is free from shortcomings and imperfections! Belong to Him alone; remain wholly and for ever in Him.

In this same Jesus I am devotedly yours, and ever more and more.

Live Jesus and Mary.

LETTER 216

To Two Religious of Montmartre. On crosses and afflictions.

I am writing you this, my dearest daughters, to assure you that I feel your crosses very keenly, that is, humanly speaking. For, speaking as a Christian, I shall tell you that the greatest cause for joy that we can ever have on earth is to be crucified with our amiable Saviour.

Human nature does not begin to understand such language, but it is an article of faith that therein is the sovereign good of Christian souls. So true is this that the saints in heaven who suffered the greatest torments here on earth would very gladly exchange the glory and joys they possess in heaven for the sufferings they endured in the world, if God allowed them to do so. That is why I give infinite thanks to divine Bounty for the holy dispositions which fill your hearts in this circumstance. Courage, my dearest daughters, rejoice; rejoice because our dearest Jesus is granting you a share in the one thing in this world that He most dearly loved, and of which His Holy Mother had the greatest share. You must not doubt that I am doing my very best for you in the presence of God.

LETTER 217

To a Religious of Montmartre. On the crosses and afflictions of one of her sisters in religion.

I beseech my dearest daughter to help me to love God She has much, indeed, for which to show Him great love. For just as the greatest love He manifested for us was in His sufferings, so also the greatest love we can show for Him is to suffer for His love. Oh, if the seraphim were capable of jealousy, they would surely be jealous at the sight of the sorrows of our dear sister, and I venture to say that they would gladly exchange the delights of the glory that is theirs for the greatest torments that can be endured on earth. I give infinite thanks to our most adorable Crucified Saviour for allowing this dear sister to participate in His most sacred crown of thorns, and for the grace He is giving her to make such good use of her sufferings. I urge her always to continue to bear them with all possible humility, resignation and love.

To a Nun of the Order of St. Benedict. On the good use to be made of her headaches.

It is a special favor that our most adorable Crucified is granting you in still allowing you your headaches so that, by this means~ you may pay some small measure of honor to His divine head crowned with thorns. Exercise the utmost care, my dearest daughter, to use this illness to the best possible advantage by supporting it with humility, submission to the divine will and love for Jesus wearing a crown of thorns.

LETTER 219

To a Religious of Montmartre. On the love of God.

I thank you, my dearest daughter, for your charitable letter. I am indeed delighted to see that you are persevering in your desire to love our most amiable Saviour and His dearest Mother more and more. I very humbly supplicate them to cast all of you, that is to say, Madame(1) and all her daughters, who are my dearest sisters, into the innermost depths of the furnace of divine love. I do this daily for you, insofar as I am able, with a most ardent desire for all of you to be inflamed, devoured and consumed by the sacred flames of that divine furnace. From the depths of my soul do I cry out, de prof undis clamavi, for each and every one of you: Hear, hear, O great furnace of love! It is a tiny wisp of straw that begs thee most earnestly to be cast, engulfed, lost, devoured, consumed for ever in Thy sacred flames.

The divine Heart of Jesus and Mary is this furnace whose fires and flames are fed only on hearts. Oh, how happy are the hearts which lose themselves in these divine flames! But they require hearts that are humble, pure, detached, charitable, faithful, obedient, inflamed with an at

To Reverend Mother St. Gabriel, a Religious of Montmartre. On trust in Mary.

I thank you with all my heart, my dearest daughter, for the immense love you bear our most amiable Mother whose name is Mary, the Mother of Jesus. Continue to grow in this holy love, my dear daughter, and strive to make her loved by everyone of your acquaintance. Have no fears; the good and powerful Mother of God has never failed, and will never fail, the needs of those who love and serve her, and who, after God, have put all their trust in her incomparable goodness. But she has her own seasons and moments, and we must await them with patience and submission to the will of her Son, which is also her own will.

There has occurred to me a way to find help, and I have communicated it to our friends who approve of it. To the Superior of the Seminary at Rouen. On the necessity of offering daily an hour of prayer.

Without prayer, it is impossible, my dear brother, for a Congregation to subsist in the spirit of piety and virtue necessary to render it pleasing to God and useful to the Church. To make a half-hour of prayer and not make any at all are practically one and the same thing. And yet, there is nothing more necessary to ecclesiastics. Besides, I know of no seminary where an hour of prayer is not made. If you are absolutely set on establishing a half-hour for the seminarians, I beg of you to arrange it so that our confreres may always make a full hour of prayer. Otherwise it would be better for us to give up the seminary.

confess to you that I felt, and do feel now, an inexpressible sorrow. I beg of you, and of all our brethren, too, to atone for this omission as best you can. To that end give the order that, on the first day open after the receipt of this letter, all the Masses be votive Masses: some of the Holy Spirit, some de Cruce, some de Beata, and have one de Beata High Mass—all of them in thanksgiving for the favors God has granted us and in reparation for our misuse of them. For the future, it will be necessary to repeat this each year.

LETTER 231

To a Superior. On how to direct subordinates.

To a Superior. The Saint complains because he refused to allow the withdrawal of a subject.

If you persist in your impetuosity and disobedience, I shall complain about it to Our Lord and His Holy Mother. I am wholly confident that they will take the matter in hand, and will not allow you to ruin and destroy their Congregation in this manner.

It is charity alone which constrains me to write you these things. I urge you, my dearest brother, by the Sacred Heart of our most benign Father and our most bountiful Mother, to make good use of my recommendations and accept them in a spirit of humility, obedience and charity.

LETTER 233

To a Superior. The Saint asks him not to be too exacting with regard to the sick.

It is never detrimental to the spiritual progress of a Community when one does not do what God does not want him to do. Now God does not desire anyone to observe rules when he cannot do so because of illness or some other infirmity. We should not wish to do more than what God desires. Let us do only what we can, my dearest brother, without becoming troubled or worried, submitting ourselves with peace and tranquility to the commands of His most adorable will.

LETTER 234

To a Confrere. The Saint's charity toward a sick person.

I embrace our dear patient most cordially, in the sacred love of the most Holy Heart of Jesus and Mary. I beseech him to rejoice and to bless God for the graces He is bestowing upon him, to abandon himself wholly to the divine will, and to entrust himself unreservedly to His infinite goodness. With all my heart do I implore our most kind Jesus and His most bountiful Mother to grant him their holy blessing, not for his death, but that he may live and recover in order to win still more souls who may bless them for all eternity. It is for that intention, in the name and on behalf of the Son and the Mother, and by virtue of their divine Heart, that I pronounce over our beloved brother: Nos cum Prole pia benedicat Virgo Maria.

God grant us the grace to make perfect use of this New Year in His service and that of His most Holy Mother, and with as much solicitude and fidelity as if this were to be our last year. With all my heart do I desire to do so. For that reason I have withdrawn into seclusion to make a good retreat, God willing, just as long as possible. Help me to do this, my dearest brother, by your holy Masses.

LETTER 236

To a Priest of His Congregation. The Saint informs him that his past wrongs are forgotten.

the grace to be, to have and to do what they wish, because they desire only what He wills—those, I repeat, always possess perfect peace. That is what I should and wish to believe.

LETTER 238

To the Priests of His Congregation. On the accomplishment of the divine will.

The accomplishment of the divine will is the sole object of our being in this world; it is our sole business and unum necessarium. It is what we ask of God each day through these words: "Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." (1) It is our proper sphere and our element, in which we shall find real repose and true life. But in order that the divine will may reign over us and govern us, it is absolutely necessary that we renounce our own wills, which are just as contrary to Him as the devil is to God. We should strive, with the help of God, to trample our wills underfoot, to crush them like a serpent and like the and Christ, in the conviction that nothing within us forms so great an obstacle to the accomplishment of the divine will as our own wills.

of Our Lord Himself to go and establish a new Order-a matter of far greater importance for her than merely changing from one convent to another. When the Saint informed her superior about her plans, she was prevented from carrying them out and was ordered to go elsewhere. Whereupon she obeyed at once, not only without accusing her superior of resisting the will of God, but even without opening her mouth to make any reply or plea. Afterwards Our Lord told her that she had been more pleasing to Him in obeying her superior than if she had made the new foundation. Let Sister St. Anne remain in peace where she is, according to that example, until I come to Caen to look into this matter more closely. In it I perceive a good many things which to me seem contrary to the spirit of God. Perhaps I am mistaken, but I should be very glad to investigate the whole thing right on the premises. Obedience does no harm. Sister may be mistaken in her revelations, but she will never make a mistake by being obedient.

Nevertheless, that does not discourage me, thank God, because I do not lose sight of the divine will which does all things and does them well, and because I have the greatest confidence that Our Lord and His Holy Mother will not abandon us but Will attend to everything in the way most pleasing to them. That, thanks be to God, is all I desire.

Virgin, to go to Our Lady of Recovery,(5) which is a place of devotion to this same Virgin in a chapel in the parish of Tourailles, in the diocese of Seez. Afterwards, my mother then being pregnant, she and my father made a pilgrimage to the same chapel, where they offered and consecrated me to Our Lord and Our Lady.

Tuus sum ego, O Domine Jesu; tuus sum ego, O Domina Maria. Accipite et possidete me totum ut totus impendar cum Jesu et Maria, et omnibus Sanctis, in laudem et gloriam aeternam sanctissimae Trinitatis. Amen, amen, fiat, fiat. Sit nomen Domini benedictum, qui habitare facit sterilem in domo, matrem filiorum lactantem.

4. If doctors are correct in their opinion which holds that the soul is infused into the bodies of male children the fortieth day after conception, my soul was created by God and united with my body on the 25th of March, the day on which the Son of God was made incarnate and the Blessed Virgin Mary became the Mother of God. For I was born on the 14th of November, and consequently, having been conceived nine months previously, the 14th of February was the day of my conception. Now from that day to the 25th of March there are exactly forty days.

Benedictum sit Cor amantissimum, et dulcissimum Nomen Domini Nostri Jesu Christi, et gloriosissimae Virginis Mariae Matris ejus, in aeternum et ultra.

5. I was born on November 14th, in the year 1601, on a Wednesday, and baptized the following Friday evening, which was the beginning of Saturday. At that time the name of John(6) was given me by my godfather of the same name, and my godmother whose name was Mary.

(6). Boulay says in Vie du Vénérable Jean Eudes, Vol. 1, p. 15, that the patron Saint of John Eudes was the Apostle St. John, not St. John the Baptist. The people in the country places of France always make a distinction between John and John the Baptist. Furthermore, the Saint does not seem to have had a special devotion to St. John the Baptist, whereas he chose St. John the Evangelist as one of the patrons of the Congregation Of Jesus and Mary. Strangely enough, we find the Religious of Our Lady of Charity sending him their feast day wishes for June 24, Feast of St. John the Baptist. See Letter 34.

6. Living in a parish where there was very little instruction for salvation, and where few persons ever received Communion except during the Easter season, I began to know God when I was about twelve years old, through a special grace of His divine goodness, and to receive monthly Communion(7) after having made a general confession. It was on the feast of Pentecost(8) that He granted me the grace of making my first Holy Communion. Gratias Deo super inenarrabili dono ejus.

Thereupon He also gave me the grace, shortly afterwards, to consecrate my body to Him by a vow of chastity, for which may He be blessed for evermore.

7. For sometime I studied under a rural teacher, a priest named Father James Blannet, from whose example and spiritual instruction I profited a great deal. Then my father sent me to Caen to continue my studies at the College of the Reverend Jesuit Fathers(9). There, on the feast of St. Dionysius,(10) in 1615, I was taken into the fourth class conducted by Father Robin,(11) with whom I studied as far as the second class inclusively. This was through a special grace of Our Lord, because he was a virtuous and pious teacher who frequently spoke to us of God with extraordinary fervor, which helped me in matters of salvation much more than I can express.

8. I was received into the Sodality of Our Lady,(12) at the college of the very Reverend Jesuit Fathers of Caen, about the year 1618, wherein Our Lord granted me extraordinary graces through the intercession of His most Holy Mother.

(7). At that time there were very few in the parish who received the Blessed Eucharist more than once 2 year." Cf. Russel, OP. cit., P. 7.

Confitebor tibi, Domine, in iota corde meo, in concilio justorum et congregatione.

9. I received tonsure and the four minor orders in the year 1620, if I remember correctly, in Seez, in the month of September.(13)

Omnes sancti Sacerdotes et Levitae, benedicite Dominum in aeternum.

10. I was admitted into the Congregation of the Oratory(14) at their house on Saint Honoré Street in Paris, where I was received by the founder, Reverend Father de Bérulle, on March 25, 1623. (15)

11. I was clothed with the ecclesiastical garb that same year, on the feast of The Seven Dolors of the Blessed Virgin Mary, which falls on Friday of Passion Week.

Confitebor Domino, et exaltabo nomen ejus in aeternum, quia incluit me vestimentis salutis, et indumento justitiae circumdedit me. Tibi laus, tibi honor, tibi gloria, O piissima Virgo Maria, in saecula saeculorum. Amen.

12. I began to preach during the same year, 1623, at the command of my superiors, although I was not as yet in holy orders.

13. I received tonsure and minor orders in Seez, on September 19, 1620, and the order of subdiaconate, also in Seez, in 1624. I began the reading of the Breviary on the feast of St. Thomas the Apostle.(16)

Repleatur as meum laude, et cantem gloriam tuam, tota die magnitudinem tuam.

14. I received the order of diaconate in Bayeux, during Lent of 1625.

(13). In entry 13 the Saint says that the date was September 19.

(14). The Oratory of Jesus was founded in 1611 by Father Peter de Bérulle, who was afterwards created Cardinal.

(15). The Feast of the Annunciation was an important day in the Congregation of the Oratory. Cardinal de Bérulle, the founder, had a special devotion to the Incarnate Word and taught his young disciples to concentrate all their spiritual efforts on the adorable Person of the Saviour. Faithful to the spirit of the Founder, St. John Eudes inculcated the devotion upon his spiritual son. It is noteworthy that he founded the Congregation of Jesus and Mary on March 25, 1643.

15. In the same year, 1625, the order of the priesthood was conferred upon me in Paris on the 20th of December.(17)

Sacerdotes Domini, benedicite Dominum: laudate et superexaltate eum in saecula.

16. Thereupon I said my first Mass on Christmas Day of 1625, at midnight, in the Saint Honoré house of the Oratory in Paris, in a chapel and at an altar dedicated to the most Holy Mother of God.

Gloria tibi, Domine, qui natus es de Virgine, etc.

17. In the years 1625 and 1626 God sent me a physical infirmity which prevented me from working abroad. He allowed me to spend these two years(18) in retreat, devotion to prayer, the reading of pious books, and other spiritual exercises. This was a very special grace for which I must eternally bless and thank His divine bounty.

Misericordias Domini in aeternum cantabo.

18. In 1627 pestilence(19) invaded the diocese of Seez, in the parishes of St. Christopher, of St. Peter and St. Martin of Vrigny, of Avouines and several other neighboring parishes, and the stricken inhabitants were left devoid of any spiritual help. I requested permission of Reverend Father de Bérulle, in Paris, where I was at the time, to go to their assistance, and this he granted me. Then I went to take up residence with a good priest of St. Christopher's parish, named Father Laurens~ who received me charitably into his house. Every day we would say Mass, he and I, in a chapel at St. Evroult's, not far from his house. After that I would put some consecrated Hosts into a small white steel box, which I now keep at the bottom of my trunk, but which I wore then around my neck. Thereupon we would go, this good priest and I, to call on the sick, sometimes in one parish and sometimes in another, where we would hear confessions. Then I would administer the Blessed Sacrament to them. We did this from the end of August until after All Saints' Day, when the plague had completely disappeared, and God preserved us so well that we never felt any ill effects from it.

19. In 1631 Father Gaspard de Repichon, the superior of the house of the Oratory in Caen, was stricken with the plague. God also granted me the grace to assist him in his illness, which proved fatal to him, and to administer all the sacraments and be present during his last agony and at his death; likewise I assisted two others after him and rendered them all the corporal services usually given to sick persons, after having administered the holy sacraments to them. Later one of them recovered, but the other died. And God again preserved me from all harm.

Propterea confitebor et laudem dicam tibi, et benedicam nomini Domini in aeternum; quoniam de interitu redemisti vitam meam. Laudent coelum et terra, mare, et omnia quae in eis sunt.

20. In the year 1632 I labored on missions(20) in the diocese of Coutances, at Lessay, Périers, Saint Sauveur-le- Vicomte, La Haye-du-Puits, Cherbourg and Montebourg.

21. In 1635 I gave several missions in various places in the diocese of Bayeux, namely: at Beneauville, Avenay, Evrecy and Villers-Bocage.

Omnis spiritus laudet Dominum.

Benedic anima mea Domino, et omnia quae intra me sunt nomini sancto ejus.

23. In September of the same year I gave a mission in the parish of Le Fresne, the cost of which was borne by Mr. de Camilly(21) On this occasion God was pleased to convert a goodly number of Huguenots. It was also on this mission that I began to have morning and evening prayers offered, as we do now on our missions.

*Confiteantur Domino misericordiae ejus, et laudent cum omnes virtutes ejus**

24. In the year 1637 I gave a mission in the parish of Ri, my birthplace, in the diocese of Séez, upon which God showered many blessings.

Benedicite omnia opera Domini,.Domino, Laudate et superexaltate cum in saecula.

25. In 1638 I gave three missions: the first at Bremoy, in the diocese of Bayeux, during the summer; the second in September at Estreham, the expenses of which were defrayed by Madame Laurence de Budos,(22) the abbess of Holy Trinity at Caen; the third during Advent at Le Pont-l'Eveque, in the diocese of Lisieux.

It is impossible to express the fruits garnered by God from all these missions; may He be eternally blessed and glorified for them.

26. In the year 1639 I preached during Lent at Le Pont-l'Eveque, which served as a continuation of the mission I had given there during Advent.

27. In that same year, between Advent and Lent, I gave a mission at the Abbey of St. Stephen in Caen, the fruits of which were far more abundant than can be recorded.

Quid retribuam Domino, pro omnibus quae retribuit mihi? Tibi sacrificabo hostiam laudis, et benedicam nomen tuum in saeculum, et in saeculum saeculi.

28. During the summer of that year His Lordship Philip Cospéan, Bishop of Lisieux, had me conduct a mission in the city of Lisieux, through which God was greatly glorified.

Tibi laus, tibi honor, tibi gloria, O beata Trinitas, unus Deus, a quo omne bonum in coelo et in terra procedit.

29. Still in 1639 I preached during Advent in St. Peter's Church in Caen, as also the following Lent, in 1640, when Our Lord deigned to produce some wonderful effects of grace in many souls by virtue of His divine word.

Confiteantur tibi, Domine, omnia opera tua. Laudent et superexaltent misericordias tuas in saecula.

30. In 1640 I also preached the Advent season in Lisieux, as well as the following Lent, in 1641, when God in His goodness continued, as always, to grant me His usual blessings.

Benedicam Dominum in omni tempore: semper laus ejus in ore meo.

31. In the aforesaid year 1640 I conducted a mission in the parish of Le Mesnil-Mauger, in the diocese of Lisieux. God lavished so many graces upon it that they are beyond the power of expression.

Ex quo omnia, per quem omnia, in quo omnia, ipsi gloria in saecula.

32. In 1641 I gave five missions, all filled with immeasurable blessings: The first was at Urville, near Falaise, in the diocese of Bayeux.

The second was given at Remilly, in the diocese of Coutances. It was requested and paid for by Mr. de Montfort(23) and his wife, a sister of Mr. de Bernières.(24) It was during the Remilly mission that I began to hold private conferences for ecclesiastics.

The third was at Landelle, in the same diocese. Mr. de Renty(25) induced us to give this one.

The fourth was conducted at Coutances. Father Le Pileur, the vicargeneral of His Lordship Léonor de Matignon, Bishop of Coutances, requested and paid for it.

The fifth was held during Advent in the city of Pont-Audemer, in the diocese of Lisieux. Its cost was defrayed by His Lordship Philip Cospéan, Bishop of Lisieux.

Gloria in excelsis Deo, et in terra pax hominibus bonae voluntatis. Laudamus te, benedicimus te, adoramus te, glorificamus te, gratias agimus tibi propter magnam gloriam tuam.

bounty, for it was then that I had the happiness of first knowing Sister Mary des Vallées," through whom His gracious Majesty bestowed on me a great number of signal graces(27). After God, I am indebted for this favor to the most Blessed Virgin Mary, my most honored Lady and dearest Mother, whom I can never sufficiently thank.

Confiteor tibi Pater, Domine coeli et terrae, quia abscondisti haec a sapientibus et prudentibus, et revelasti ea parvulis. Ita Pater, quoniam sic fuit placitum ante te. Ave Maria gratia plena, Dominus tecum, benedicta tu in mulieribus, et benedictus fructus ventris tui Jesus. Amen.

35. It was also in 1641 that God granted me the grace of beginning the establishment of the house of Our Lady of Charity,(28) on the day of the Immaculate Conception of the most Holy Virgin.

Deo gratias.

36. In the year 1642 I gave three missions which were even richer in graces and blessings than all the preceding ones.

The first was held at Rouen and lasted from the beginning of the year until well on into Lent. Its cost was defrayed by the Duchess d'Aiguillon.

The second was conducted during the summer in the city of Saint Malo, in Brittany, and was paid for by His Lordship Harlay-Sancy, Bishop of Saint Malo.

The third was given in Saint U, in the diocese of Coutances.

(26). Often called "The Saint of Coutances," Mary des Vallées was the humble instrument used by God to guide St. John Eudes in many of his important undertakings. See Letter 17, note 3.

(27). In this Article 34 the Saint makes two statements: first, that it was in the month of August, 1641 that he began to know Mary des Vallées; secondly, that God bestowed upon him, during the course of his life, signal graces through the intercession of this holy woman. He does not say that these graces were given him at his first meeting with "The Saint of Coutances" as she was called by the people. It is hard then to understand how this text could have been used to substantiate the assertion that at that very moment, through the mediation of Mary des Vallées, the Saint received from heaven the triple mission of founding the Congregation of Jesus and Mary, instituting the Order of Our Lady of Charity and establishing the public cult of the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary. The Saint's early biographers never wrote anything of the sort. This opinion, which dates from Reverend Father Le Doré, seems to us to be thoroughly groundless. Cf. the pamphlet by Reverend Charles Lebrun on Marie des Vallées et le culte public du Coeur de Jésus. Reply to Mr. Emile Dermenghem.

Renedictus es, Domine, in firmamento coeli, et laudabilis, et gloriosus, et superexaltatus in saecula.

37. In the year 1643 Our Lord and His most Holy Mother, in their excessive goodness, granted, us the grace to begin the establishment of our little Congregation(29) on March 25th, the day on which the Son of God was made man and the Blessed Virgin became the Mother of God.

Sacrosanctae Trinitati, Christi Jesu humanitati, Virginis Matris foecunditati, et omnium Sanctorum universitati, sit sempiterna laus, honor, virtus et gloria, ab omni creatura, per infinita saecula saeculorum. Amen.

38. In this same year we gave two missions which yielded extraordinary fruits, surpassing those of all the preceding missions, as if Our Lord had clearly wished to show everyone that He was with us and was the author of the above-mentioned establishment.

The first was given at Saint Sauveur-le-Vicomte, in the diocese of Coutances.

The second took place at Valognes, where the crowds were so large that I was obliged to preach daily outside the city, behind the chateau, and it is estimated that there were forty thousand persons present on Sundays and feast days.

It was during this mission that God granted us the grace to establish the devotion of Our Lady of Victory in a chapel which had been completely deserted and abandoned, in the parish of Alleaume, near Valognes.

Gloria aeterno Patri, gloria Filio ejus Unigenito, gloria Spiritui sancto, gloria Virgini Matri, et nunc, et semper, et in saecula saeculorum. Amen.

39. In the year 1644 I preached during Lent at Coutances, with altogether singular blessings. I had the pleasure of lodging with Father Potier, a holy priest, at whose house Sister Mary des Vallées was living. I made it a point to see and converse with her daily, thereby gaining spiritual benefits and advantages that words can never reveal.

Gratias Deo et beatissimae Virgini Mariae pro inenarrabilibus donis eorum.

40. During the summer of that year we gave a very celebrated and fruitful mission at Honfleur, in the diocese of Lisieux, for which may God and His most Holy Mother be for ever blessed.

We conducted several others like it during the following years in various places, namely:

At Entrees, near Corbon, diocese of Lisieux, in the year 1645;

At Vimoutiers, in the same diocese, also during 1645;

At Arnay-le-Duc, in Burgundy, in the diocese of Autun. It was procured and partially paid for by Mr. de Renty, in that same year of 1645;

And at Couches, in the same diocese and year, and also through Mr. de Renty.

41. At Thorigny, in the diocese of Bayeux. This mission was procured by Madame de Matignon, in the year 1646, during Lent.

At Le Bénv, in the same diocese, in 1646. Its cost was borne by Mr. de Renty. Sister Mary des Vallées was present, at Mr. de Renty's request, and God worked several wonders through her on that occasion.

At Lion, in the diocese of Bayeux, near Our Lady of Deliverance, in the aforesaid year 1646.

42. At Nogent-le-Rotrou, in the diocese of Chartres, in 1647.

At Fouqueville, in the diocese of Evreux. It was arranged and paid for by Madame de Bec-Thomas, who is now Madame de la Porte, the wife of Mr. de la Porte, a councillor of the Parliament of Rouen, in that same year 1647.

At La Ferté-Vidame, in the diocese of Chartres. This mission was paid for by the Duke de Saint Simon, in the aforesaid year 1647 43. At Autun, in Burgundy. It began in Advent of the year 1647 and ended shortly before Lent in the year 1648.

At Beaune, in the diocese of Autun, during Lent of that same year 1648. These last two missions were also arranged by Mr. de Renty, who defrayed their expense.

At Fère-en-Tardenois, in the diocese of Soissons. It was obtained and paid for by the Princess de Conde, the mother of the Princess de Conde and de Conti, in the aforesaid year 1648.

LETTERS AND SHORTER WORKS

During these last four missions, the results of God's goodness and mercy were most extraordinary and abundant, for which may Jesus Christ be praised and glorified for all eternity.

Confitemini Domino quoniam bonus, quoniam in saeculum misericordia ejus.

44. His bounty and mercy were also very manifest and considerable on the following missions conducted by us:

At Saint Sauveur-Lendelin, in the diocese of Coutances, the birthplace of Sister Mary des Vallées, who attended this mission. We gave it in the year 1649 at the expense of Mr. de Liancourt.

At Briquebec, in the same diocese, also in 1649

At Alleaume, near Valognes, in the aforesaid year 1649.

At Saint Sever, in the diocese of Coutances. It had been requested in the last will and testament of Mr. de Renty, at that time deceased, and paid for by Madame de Renty in the same year 1649.

45. At Vesly, in the diocese of Coutances, in the year 1650. It was during this mission that God granted us the grace of establishing the devotion of Our Lady of Consolation in a chapel situated in the parish of Vesly, which previous to that time had been totally abandoned.

At Denneville, also in that diocese, in the same year 1650.

At Ravenoville, in the same diocese. Its cost was borne by Mr. de Cybrantot, in the aforesaid year 1650.

46. In this same year we began the establishment of our house in Coutances, on the feast of the Immaculate Conception of the most Blessed Virgin, for which may her Son Jesus and she be eternally blessed by all the creatures in heaven and on earth. Amen, amen, fiat, fiat. And this establishment was made possible through the great kindness shown us by His Lordship Claude Auvry, Bishop of Coutances, who of his own accord indicated that he desired it.

47. After this we gave a second mission in Coutances which began during Advent in 1651 and ended shortly before Lent of the year 1652. Its fruits were most abundant; for them and for those of all the preceding and following missions, eternal praise and glory be rendered to the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost, and to the most Holy Mother of God, for ever and ever. Amen.

48. God also granted us the grace to give the following missions, namely:

At Paris, in the parish of Saint Sulpice, during Lent of the year 1651. This mission had been requested a long time before by Father Olier,(30) pastor of Saint Sulpice, who defrayed its cost.

In the city of Corbeil, diocese of Paris. It was paid for by Madame Tronson, of the parish of Saint Sulpice in Paris, during the same year 1651.

At Bernay, in the diocese of Lisieux. It was procured and paid for in part by Mr. de Croisy, lawyer for the Council, in the aforesaid year 1651.

At Marolles, in the diocese of Lisieux, in autumn of that same year 1651.

49. At Pontoise, in 1653. This mission was obtained and paid for through the efforts of Reverend Mother Joan of Jesus, a Carmelite nun and sister of his Lordship, Chancellor Segulier.

At Lisieux, our second time there, during autumn of the same year 1653

50. It was during this mission that our house in Lisieux was established, for which immortal thanks be rendered to Our Lord Jesus and His most Holy Mother.

51. At Cisai, in the diocese of Lisieux. It was requested and paid for by President d'Amfreville, in the year 1654

52. At Lingevres, diocese of Bayeux, in 1656. This mission was procured by His Lordship Francis Servien, Bishop of Bayeux, and employed by divine Providence to destroy the bad impressions that his Lordship had received of us, and to reconcile him with us.

53. At L'Etanville, near Grandcamp, in the diocese of Bayeux. It was given at the request and expense of President de Langrie in the year 1657.

54. The establishment of our house at Rouen was concluded and signed by his Lordship the Archbishop on the feast of the Ascension in 1658, and our church there was opened in the year 1659, all through the efforts and charity of Mr. de La Motte-Lambert,(31) Father Mallet, who was the vicar-general, Mr. d'Omonville, (32) Father de Fermanel, a priest and the son of Mr. de Fermanel the collector, and Mr. Cornier.

(30). Father John James Olier, the founder of the Society of St. Sulpice.

(31). Peter de la Motte-Lambert was for many years councillor of the Court of Rouen.

He later became a priest. Pope Alexander V<sup>11</sup> appointed him Vicar Apostolic in China with the title of Bishop of Berytus.

(32). Counsellor of the Rouen Parliament. See Letter 75

55. At Vasteville, in La Hague, in the diocese of Coutances, we gave a mission filled with extraordinary blessings, in the year 1659.

And we held another that year at Villedieu-les-Poëles, in the same diocese, which was no less fruitful than the preceding one. It had been the wish of the late Mr. de Remy, and its expense was defrayed by his widow.

For all these missions and establishments, for all these graces that God has granted us, I say with my whole heart and supplicate all the angels, saints and creatures to say with me: Regi saeculorum immortalis et invisibilis, soli Deo honor et gloria in saecula saeculorum. Amen.

quoque, O sanctissima Dei Mater, laus, et gratiarum actio ab omni creatura, in aeternum et ultra. Amen, amen, fiat, fiat.

I must not forget seven other favors bestowed upon us by Our Lord and His Holy Mother, for which I owe them particular thanks.

56. The first was in connection with His Lordship Edward Molé, Bishop of Bayeux, who had been prejudiced by unfavorable impressions he had been given of us, and ordered our chapel in Caen to be closed, with the intention of completely suppressing our establishment. God frustrated these plans, undoing all that his Lordship had done against us, through l'Abbé de Sainte Croix, his brother, for shortly afterwards Bishop Molé died, and l'Abbé de Sainte Croix was appointed to the bishopric of Bayeux. He restored us to our former status, so that our chapel was reopened in the year 1653, after Easter, on the feast of the Apparition of Our Lord to His most Holy Mother after the Resurrection, a day of great consolation and extraordinary joy for us and all our friends.

Regina coeli laetare, alleluia, quia quem meruisti portare, alleluia, resurrexit sicut dixit, alleluia. Ora pro nobis Deum, alleluia, alleluia, alleluia, alleluia.

57. The second favor was that Our Lord Jesus Christ and His most worthy Mother granted us the grace to erect a church in Coutances, over a period of three years. This is the first church ever to be built and dedicated in honor of the most Holy Heart of the Blessed Virgin, who has but one Heart with her beloved Son.

58. The third favor concerned our most honored Sister Mary des Vallées, who had desired that her body be interred in our church. Although we were deprived for a time of this treasure, God in His goodness was pleased to restore it to us through the mediation of President de Langrie,(33) and to preserve it for us through the protection of His Lordship Claude Auvry, Bishop of Coutances, notwithstanding all the evil intents of worldly persons to rob us of it, nor all their efforts in that direction.

59. The fourth was that, through a wonderful demonstration of His divine might and infinite mercy, God deigned to give us, contrary to all likelihood, the large square(34) in front of our house in Caen for the construction of a church in honor of the most Holy Heart of our admirable Mother, and for the erection of the other buildings and accommodations we needed, availing Himself of His Lordship Francis Servien, the bishop of Bayeux, Mr. de Longueville, the governor of the province, and Mr. de la Croisette, governor of the château of Caen, as well as of Madame de la Croisette, his wife.

60. The fifth is that God preserved me many times, through the intercession of my most kind Mother, the Blessed Virgin Mary, when I found myself on the verge of losing His grace and falling into the hell of sin.

Confiteor tibi, Domine Deus, in toto corde meo, et glorificabo nomen tuum in aeternum, quia misericordia tua magna est super me, et eruisti animam meam ex inferno inferiori. Sit laus tibi, Mater gratiae, sit laus tibi, Mater misericordiae, quoniam ab hoste me protexisti. Sit laus tibi, Mater mea charissima, ab omni creatura in saecula saeculorum. Amen.

61. The sixth is that divine Mercy has had me undergo a great number of tribulations, which is one of the greatest favors accorded me, because they have been most useful to me and God has always delivered me from them.

LETTERS AND SHORTER WORKS

Benedictus Deus et Pater Domini nostri Jesu Christi, Pater misericordiarum et Deus totius consolationis, qui quos amat castigat. Dedit mihi per multas tribulationes transire, et consolatus est me in omni tribulatione mea, et eripuit me de omni angustia.

62. The seventh is an infinite number of other graces that Our Lord has granted me, through the mediation of His most worthy Mother, for which may they both be blessed and glorified for all eternity.

Magnificate Dominum Jesum mecum: et exaltemus nomen Matris ejus in aeternum. Confiteantur Domino misericordiae ejus: et mirabilia ejus filiis hominum.

63. In the year 1659, for ten days during Advent, I delivered conferences in Rouen to the candidates for ordination, as also during the following Lent of the year 1661, with great blessings.

Benedictus es, Domine, in firmamento coeli, et laudabilis et gloriosus in saecula.

64. In the closing days of 1659 and at the beginning of the year 1660, God permitted me to be despised, reviled and calumniated to an extraordinary degree. Nevertheless, this grieved me very little and almost not at all, through a special grace of divine Bounty, for which may He be forever praised and glorified.

65. During the same year 1660, shortly before the Ascension, divine Providence sent me to Paris and engaged me, when I least expected it, to give a mission at the Quinze-Vingts, (35) on which God abundantly lavished wonderful blessings. It was His Lordship Claude Auvry, Bishop of Coutances, who had us give it and who defrayed the expenses.

Confiteantur Domino misericordiae ejus: et mirabilia ejus filiis hominum.

66. Following the preceding mission, we gave a short one that lasted only ten days, in the parish of Mauregard, five or six leagues from Paris, in the diocese of Meaux.

In omni loco dominationis ejus, benedic anima mea Domino.

67. In the same year 1660 we gave another mission at Paris, in the Church of Saint Germain-des-Prés. It began On July 4th and continued until the feast of the Nativity of Our Lady. God bestowed even greater blessings upon this mission than the one we had given at the Quinze-Vingts. It was Father de Pousse, the pastor of Saint Sulpice, who had us conduct it.

(35). A hospital for the blind in Paris. The Church connected with the institution had a very select congregation. Even King Louis XIV and his Court attended services there.

Te Deum laudamus, te Dominum confitemur.

68. In the years 1661 and 1662 God granted me the grace of enduring several great afflictions, partly from the slanders and calumnies of the world and partly from persons very dear to me who caused me, for many months, the most poignant sorrows and griefs I have ever suffered in my whole life.

Benedicam Dominum Jesum omni tempore: semper laus ejus in ore meo.

69. In the year 1662, on a Saturday, the eve of the Visitation of Our Lady, Our Lord provided us with the means of redeeming an annuity of three hundred sixty-nine livres which we had been paying to the city of Caen for the square in front of our house which had been granted us in fief. This was accomplished through the mediation of a man from Paris who wishes to remain anonymous, both during his lifetime and after his death. Simply out of pure charity he, or rather Our Lord and His most Holy Mother, gave us the sum of ten thousand francs, from which we took about eight thousand to effect this amortization and pay up two years of arrears owed on the aforesaid annuity. Thereupon I dedicated and consecrated the square, on that same day, in honor of the Holy Heart of the Blessed Virgin. I also made a vow to God, in the presence of the Blessed Sacrament, to choose her as foundress of the church that we desired and hoped to erect there in honor of this same Heart, as well as foundress of the houses necessary and expedient for our Community, and never to concede the title of founder or foundress to anyone else at all.

Benedictum sit in aeternum Cor tuum amantissimum, O Maria, vita, spes et laetitia cordis nostri.

70. It was also in 1662, on the 16th of September, that Our Lord was pleased to send me a grave illness which lasted for six weeks, during which He bestowed choice graces upon me.

Benedic anima mea Domino: et omnia quae intra me sunt, nomini sancto ejus.

71. In 1663 Our Lord and His most Holy Mother granted us a very precious gift in the form of a heavy cross, with the grace to receive it from their hands and bear it with complete submission to the most adorable will of God. It was the death of our beloved brother, Father Manchon, (36) who died at Rouen on February 6th with the holiest dispositions that could be desired, after having labored more than twenty years for the salvation of souls and won a great number of them for God through numerous missions. The news of his death was brought to us here in Caen on February 8, the feast day of the Most Holy Heart of the Blessed Virgin, on which His Lordship of Bayeux celebrated Holy Mass, solemnly officiated at Vespers, was present at a very beautiful sermon delivered by Father de Than, a doctor and religious of the Abbey of St. Stephen in Caen, and then gave Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, all of which afforded us comfort in our great affliction.

Benedicam Dominum in omni tempore: semper laus ejus in ore meo.

72. In the same year 1663 we gave a very fruitful mission in the parish of Saint Germain de la Campagne, in the diocese of Lisieux. It was requested and paid for by Father Le Marchand, one of the four priests of that parish.

Deo gratias.

73. During that year we also conducted a second mission at L'Etanville, where we had previously given one in 1657, and it proved to be even more fruitful and celebrated than the first one had been. It too was requested and paid for by President de Langrie, who died on the 13th of December in that same year. His Lordship Francis de Nesmond, Bishop of Bayeux, arrived toward the end, administered confirmation, preached at the cemetery, and gave benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, after a powerful and very fervent exhortation.

Soli Deo honor et gloria in saecula saeculorum. Amen.

74. In the same year we gave a mission at Saint Lô which lasted from the 7th of October until Advent. God bestowed wonderful blessings upon it. There were twenty-five confessors, but even fifty would scarcely have been enough. A great number of restitutions and recon ciliations were effected, and we burned a considerable number of bad books. Gratias Deo super inenarrabilibus donis ejus.

The Abbé of Saint Lô procured it and defrayed most of the expense incurred; the rest was contributed by Mr. de Mesny, a clothier named Mr. Eliot, and several others whose names are written in the book of life.

75. In the year 1664 we gave a mission in the city of Meaux which lasted from the Epiphany to the first week of Lent inclusively. God showered no fewer blessings on this one than upon the preceding mission. His Lordship the bishop of Meaux instructed us to give it and bore the entire cost.

Sit nomen Domini benedictum, ex hoc nunc, et usque in saeculum.

76. During that year 1664, on the 20th of May, the day before the Eve of the Ascension, the first stone of our church in Caen was laid with great solemnity by Madame de la Croisette, the wife of Mr. de la Croisette, governor of the city of Caen. This she did, not in her own name, but in the name and on behalf of our divine foundress, the most Holy Mother of God. His Lordship Francis de Nesmond, Bishop of Bayeux, assisted by fifteen ecclesiastical dignitaries, performed the ceremony and celebrated the pontifical Mass of the Most Holy Heart of the Blessed Virgin, with the Introit Gaudeamus, the Gloria in excelsis, the Credo and the Sequence Laetabunda. It was sung by the clergy of Caen, all of whom were on hand, for his Lordship had ordered all the pastors to bring their processions there. The Mass was celebrated on a stage which had been erected on the spot where the church was to be built. Mr. de la Croisette was present, together with the chief personages of the city and a very great multitude of people. The sermon was preached by Father Lamy, lecturer in theology at Bayeux. On the afternoon of the following day, May 21, the eve of the Ascension, the laying of the first foundations of the church was begun.

Alleluia, alleluia, alleluia, alleluia, alleluia. Benedictum sit in aeternum sanctissimum Cor Mariae, pars nostra, spes et gaudium, coetusque nostri gloria. Amen.

77. In the same year 1664 we gave our second mission at Ravenoville, in the diocese of Coutances. Its cost was defrayed by Mr. de Cybrantot, and it was richly blessed by God.

Sit nomen Domini benedictum, ex hoc nunc, et usque in saeculum. 78. Also in that year we gave a mission at Cretteville-en-Beaupois, in the diocese of Coutances. It was paid for in part by Madame de Malherbe, who just before her death had requested that mission and had left some money toward its expense; the remainder was furnished by other pious persons. The blessings of God were extraordinarily in evidence there.

Benedicite omnia opera Domini Domino.

79. In 1665 we gave a mission at Granville, in the diocese of Coutances. Its cost was generously defrayed by the inhabitants of the city, and it yielded innumerable fruits. During this mission I was taken ill with pleurisy, from in which divine Bounty deigned to deliver me.

Benedic anima mea Domino: et omnia quae intra me sunt nomini sancto ejus, qui sanat omnes infirmitates tuas, qui redimit de interitu vitam tuam, qui coronat te in misericordia et miserationibus.

80. In the same year, 1665, we gave a mission in the city of Châlons, in Champagne. It was requested and paid for by His Lordship the Bishop of Châlons, and divine Mercy showered very abundant blessings upon it.

Gratias Deo super inenarrabilibus donis ejus.

81. In that same year, and also at the beginning of 1666, we gave a mission at St. Peter's Church in Caen. It continued from the beginning of Advent until Lent, at the partial expense of His Lordship of Bayeux, who contributed five hundred livres. Mr. and Madame de Secqueville donated about eight hundred livres, and other persons also contributed. This mission produced wonderful and abundant results, for which may God be eternally glorified.

Gratias agimus tibi propter magnam gloriam tuam.

82. In 1666 we also gave four other missions:

The first in the diocese of Lisieux, in the parish of Mesnil-Durand.

The second in the diocese of Coutances, in the parish of Cerisy-Montpinchon. Its cost was borne by some private individuals.

The third in the château at Caen, for the soldiers.

The fourth in the parish of Saint Eny, in the diocese of Coutances, at the expense of Father de Meautis, a priest, and the inhabitants of the place.

Sit nomen Domini benedictum, ex hoc nunc, et usque in saeculum.

83. In 1667 we continued the mission at Evreux which we had begun during the preceding year 1666, and which we finished on the Epiphany. It was given through the zeal and at the expense of

His Lordship Henry de Maupas du Tour, Bishop of Evreux. In the course of this mission we established the feast of the Most Holy Heart of the Blessed Virgin in several of the churches of Evreux, and His Lordship granted permission for this to be done throughout his diocese.

84. At the conclusion of this mission, His Lordship established our seminary at Evreux, purchasing, paying for and furnishing the house, and endowing it with an income of two thousand livres. Father Le Doux, the dean of Évreux, donated to us his house and garden, and the Priory of the Wilderness, known as St. Susan's Priory.

Te Deum laudamus, te Dominum confitemur.

85. During that same year we gave four other missions:

The first at Besneville, in the diocese of Coutances, near Saint Sauveur-le-Vicomte, at the expense of Father de Gourmont, the archdeacon of Coutances.

The second at Percy, in the diocese of Coutances, through the efforts of Madame de Matignon.

The third at Brucheville, near Le Grant-Vey, in the diocese of Coutances. It was requested by the pastor of that parish.

86. Previous to these last two missions, we had given one in the cathedral of Rouen which was paid for by Mr. Le Cornier, head of the exchequer, and several other persons of piety who had contributed to it. It began on Septuagesima Sunday and ended during the octave of Easter, suffering many trials and setbacks at first but yielding abundant fruits.

Gratias agimus tibi propter magnam gloriam tuam.

87. God in His goodness was pleased to grant me, that same year, several extraordinary crosses, for which may He be eternally praised and blessed.

88. From the closing days of 1667 until Lent of the following year, we also gave a mission at Marigny, in the diocese of Coutances, through the efforts of Fathers Eleine and Chardin, priests of that locality.

Deo gratias.

89. In 1668 we gave one during Lent at Carentan, in the same diocese, chiefly through the Cure de Brevands; during the summer, another at Montfarville, in the parish of Le Plessis; one in 1669, during Lent, in the borough of Montsurvent, in the same diocese; and in the month of July, one in the borough of Cenilly and at Quettehou.

90. At the end of the same year and the beginning of the following one, we conducted a long mission in the city of Rennes, in Brittany, which lasted from the first part of Advent until the Octave of Easter. It was singularly blessed, thanks to the zeal and generosity of His Lordship de la Vieuville, Bishop of Rennes who, at the conclusion of this mission, established us at Rennes, donating to us a house, a garden and an income of two thousand livres.

91. In that same year 1670 we gave three other missions in the diocese of Rennes:

The first at . . . (37)

The second at ...

The third in the city of Fougères.

Soli Deo honor et gloria, in saecula saeculorum. Amen.

92. In that year, too, Our Lord was pleased to favor me with several good crosses, for which may He be eternally blessed. May He grant me the grace to be able to say for evermore:

Mihi autem absit gloriari, nisi in Cruce Domini.

93. In the same year 1671 His Lordship the archbishop of Paris sent us to give a mission at Versailles, during the jubilee. It was the wish of the King, who took care of its cost. There, with the Blessed Sacrament exposed, God granted me the grace to deliver two powerful exhortations before the Queen, while I was holding the monstrance, and a third one of even greater force in the King's presence.

Domine, salvum fac Regent, et exaudi nos in die qua invocaverimus te. That year I was accompanied everywhere by crosses. Eternal thanks be rendered to the most lovable Crucified Saviour and to His most Holy Mother and mine.

94. Throughout the year 1672 I was almost always laden with crosses, (37). The names of the parishes where St. John Eudes preached these two missions are left blank in the copy of the Memorial which has come down to us.

in the midst of which divine Bounty granted me so many graces that I was able to say:

Repletus sum consolatione, superabundo gaudio in omni tribulatione mea. Circumdederunt me canes multi. Pater, dimitte illis.

95- In 1673 the King and Queen had us give a mission during the Easter fortnight at Saint Germain-en-Laye. It was most fruitful, and their Majesties appeared highly pleased with it.

96. Also in the year 1673 we gave a mission at Elbeuf, diocese of Evreux, by the command of His Lordship of Evreux. Its expense was shared by His Lordship, by the pastor of Elbeuf and by Father Le Sueur, his curate. Two extraordinary things happened during the course of this mission:

First of all, on June 11, the fourth day of the mission, as I was preparing to take my place in the pulpit to preach, there was a fearful clap (38) of thunder which filled every heart with a great fear, and penetrated into the church, scattering violence everywhere in its wake, even at the high altar; but it left the altar of the Blessed Virgin completely unscathed. This was attributed by a number of persons to the fact that the mission had been dedicated on its opening day in honor of her most Holy Heart. Two small stone columns on either side of an embossed image of the Blessed Virgin, which is on a small door leading into the nave of the church, were shattered, but the image remained intact. The lightning did strike a priest, who was carried out half dead, his shirt having caught fire underneath. After regaining consciousness, he made his confession and received all the sacraments, dying a Christian death. Only the one priest was killed, but other persons were injured; among them, a scrivener or notary who had been praying with one knee resting on a small low box and the other off the floor. The thunder prostrated him, to teach him the respect with which one should address His Divine Majesty, and it injured both his knees, to punish him through the things in which he was deficient.

The second event which occurred during that mission was what I am about to relate. On the second day of July I preached on the subject (38). The Saint relates this fact in a letter to Mother St. Henry, a religious of Montmartre. See Letter 169.

of the most Blessed Virgin Mary. As I began to speak, toward the end of my sermon, against that vice which is incompatible with devotion to the Queen of Virgins, everyone became aware of something that sounded like frightful thunder coming from the vault of the church, although the weather was quite calm and cloudless. It seemed at first, nevertheless, to be thunder; but as people realized that it was lasting a long time, that is to say, for about the length of a Miserere, and that it was coming from the vault of the church, they believed that the roof was splitting open and was about to collapse, and that everyone there would be crushed to death. And then you would have witnessed the most fearful desolation in the world; the whole church resounded with the most pitiful cries, tears, groans and lamentations. Some were crying for mercy, others were calling upon the Blessed Virgin and the saints to help them, while still others prostrated themselves on the floor, and some cast themselves at the feet of nearby priests, beseeching them to absolve them from their sins. At last the noise ceased and everyone withdrew from the place more dead than alive. As for myself, I knelt down in the pulpit to adore divine Justice and do what I should for my listeners and myself.

The cause of this incident was never ascertained. For, as soon as the noise ceased, people hastened up to the vault, but they could discover nothing at all there. However, everyone deemed it to have been a manifestation of the fury of the devil against the mission, but the confusion was tied against him, for God employed these two kinds of thunder as a means of softening hardened hearts and preparing them to receive the grace of the mission, the fruits of which were many.

97. In the same year 1673 Her Royal Highness Madame de Guise donated twelve thousand francs to us to be used in building the Church of the Most Amiable Heart of Jesus and Mary in our house at Caen, in the manner and according to the conditions imposed by the contract drawn up in Paris, in the presence of Notaries Du Chatelet, Després and Gallois, on June 3, 1673.

98. Toward the end of that year and at the beginning of the following 1674, divine Providence favored me with several great trials, (39) greater in some respects than all the preceding ones. For, first of all, in an attempt to destroy our Congregation, my enemies turned the King against me by persuading him that I had committed serious acts against his Majesty's interests, although I had never even thought of such things; but this had been foretold to me a year or so previously. Secondly, in order to Prevent us from obtaining confirmation of our Congregation from the Holy See, they sent a document from Paris to Rome which was crammed with calumnies and lies about us.

99. In the years 1675 and 1676 our most lovable Crucified Saviour honored me with several weighty crosses by permitting defamatory libels,(40) filled with atrocious insults and slanders, to be published against me practically throughout the whole of France. These accused me of a great number of heresies, from which, thanks be to God, I am far removed. However, all that vanished into thin air.

100. In 1674 our dear Father James de la Haye de Bonnefond,(41) who had gone to Rome, returned with several Bulls(42) for us from our Holy Father Pope Clement X: a Bull which authorizes us to give missions (39). Father Boniface, a Flemish priest, had been sent to Rome by St. John Eudes to obtain the formal approbation of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary. This was not granted. Wishing to secure some return for the very great expense which his mission put upon the Eudist Fathers, Father Boniface, in the year 1662, presented a petition to the Congregation of Bishops and Regulars in which he suggested that, as a barrier against heretical opinions that were creeping into many countries, the members of this Congregation were ready to add in their obligations a vow binding them to uphold all opinions and doctrines tending to favor the authority of the Holy See, even if they were doubtful. Twelve years later this petition was found by the Saint's enemies, who brought it in the notice of Louis XIV as an attack on the pretensions of the French King. Although St. John Eudes made a formal declaration that he had no part in Father Boniface's petition, he fell under Louis's displeasure. Father Boniface also declared on two different occasions that the Saint had nothing to do with the petition. The King refused to be appeased. Through the intervention of His Excellency Harlay de Champvallon, Arch. bishop of Paris, King Louis XIV finally consented to receive the Saint. See Letter 202.

anywhere in France, with a plenary indulgence; a Bull confirming the statutes of our Congregation; and six other Bulls for our houses at Caen, Rouen, Coutances, Lisieux, Evreux and Rennes, giving us the power to establish Confraternities of the Most Holy Heart of Jesus and Mary in our churches and chapels, with many indulgences. From the lips of our Holy Father, and consequently from the adorable lips of Our Lord Himself, these churches and chapels received the name, in the aforesaid Bulls, of The Churches and Chapels of the Divine Heart of Jesus and Mary, which afforded me extraordinary consolation in the midst of all the above-mentioned troubles.

101. In the years 1674, 1675 and 1676 we gave several missions in the dioceses of Bayeux, Coutances, Lisieux, Evreux and Rennes. God lavished His choicest blessings upon them, particularly on the one that we gave at Saint Lô in 1676, our third time there, during which divine Bounty converted a considerable number of Huguenots.

102. In the year 1676 Our Saviour bestowed upon me many painful crosses, for which may He be blessed for all eternity.

A very painful affliction turned into consolation. From the 25th of November, in the year 1673 to the 17th of June, 1679 I suffered a terrible affliction as the result of a thoroughly false calumny against me which had been implanted in the King's mind. It accused me of having presented a petition(43) to our Holy Father the Pope, requesting permission to render obedience to him etiam in iis quae dubium movere possunt;(44)which is something that has never entered my mind. Nevertheless, the King was persuaded to regard it as a crime, and this threatened to bring about the destruction of our Congregation. But God in His goodness prevented it, through the intercession of the Blessed Virgin, in the following manner. Having made a vow to God to dedicate one of the principal chapels of our church in Caen in honor of her Immaculate Conception, I received a letter three days later from His Lordship Claude Auvry, a former bishop of Coutances, addressed to(43). The Boniface Petition.- See note 39 me at Caen on behalf of His Lordship the archbishop of Paris, and stating that the King had lost the unfavorable impression that he had been given of me, and that I should come to Paris to thank his Majesty. I went, and upon being presented to the King by His Lordship of Paris, I spoke to him as follows:

"Sire, I have come to your Majesty's feet to render you my most humble thanks for your kindness in granting me the honor and consolation of seeing you once more before I die, and to protest to you that there is no man in this world who has more zeal and fervor than I where your Majesty's Service and interests are concerned. This is the sentiment in which I desire to spend and use the little time left me in this life. I also beg of you most humbly, Sire, to honor us with your royal protection, and to continue to honor us with your graces and favors. This is what I hope from that wonderful benevolence which rejoices and delights the hearts of all who have the honor of speaking to your Royal Majesty, and which never fails to send them away filled with joy and comfort."

The King's reply. The King, having listened very attentively and with a kind expression, spoke to me in the following manner:

"I am very pleased to see you; I feel quite sure that you are doing a great deal of good in my Kingdom. Continue to work as you are doing. I shall be very pleased to see you again, and will help and protect you on whatever occasions may arise."

Those words of the King filled me with an inexpressible happiness. So it was, then, that after a desolation of six years' duration, the Father of Mercy and God of consolation deigned to dry my tears and change my most bitter anguish into unbelievable joy, for which may He be blessed and praised for all eternity, Immortal thanks and praises, too, be given the Mother of graces and blessings, through whose hands pass all the blessings that divine Bounty grants to us.

103. On my return from Paris I developed a hernia as the result of the jolting of the coach in which I was riding, as it traveled along a very rocky road. This caused me a great deal of physical pain, but far greater suffering of mind, inasmuch as it deprived me of the power to labor on missions for the salvation of souls.

Gloria tibi, Domine, qui natus es de Virgine.

104. In the year 1680, during the octave of the feast of Corpus Christi, God granted us the grace to convene the first general assembly of our little Congregation, with the purpose of electing someone to replace me, particularly after my death. Father Blouet de Camilly (45) was unanimously elected to be Superior General of the Congregation for life. This was a very great consolation to me, and all the greater because it has been preceded by very acute sorrow and anguish, for reasons I cannot record here.

105. Today, July 25th of the same year 1680, (46) God granted me the grace to finish my book, The Admirable Heart of the Most Holy Mother of God.

immolated to His glory and pure love.

(1637) Jesus, Mary

O my most amiable Jesus, I adore Thee and glorify Thee endlessly in the most bloody martyrdom Thou didst suffer through Thy Passion and Cross.

I adore Thee and bless Thee with all my might in the state of offering and victim in which Thou art present in the Blessed Sacrament of the altar, where Thou art continually sacrificed for the glory of Thy Father and love of us.

I honor Thee and venerate Thee in the most sorrowful martyrdom suffered at the foot of Thy Cross by Thy Holy Mother.

I praise Thee and magnify Thee in the various martyrdoms of Thy saints who endured so many atrocious torments for love of Thee.

I adore and I bless all the thoughts, intents and infinite love Thou hast had from all eternity with regard to all the blessed martyrs who have been in Thy holy Church since the beginning and will continue to be there until the end of the world.

I adore and I venerate in every way I can Thy extreme desire and most ardent thirst to suffer and die in Thy members until the end of the world, in order to fulfill the mystery of Thy Holy Passion and glorify Thy Father through the way of suffering and death until the end of time.

In honor of and in homage to all these things, and in union with the boundless love in which Thou didst offer Thyself to the Father, from the first moment of Thy Incarnation, as a sacrifice and victim' in order to be immolated for His glory and for love of us through the most sorrowful martyrdom of the Cross; and also in union with the love of Thy Holy Mother and all Thy holy martyrs: I offer and aban don myself, I vow and consecrate myself to Thee, O Jesus my Lord in the capacity of sacrifice and victim, that I may suffer in body and soul, according to Thy pleasure and with the help of Thy holy grace, all manner of pains and torments, and even shed my blood and sacrifice my life for Thee through any death pleasing to Thee; and this for Thy sole glory and for pure love of Thee.

I vow to Thee, O my Lord Jesus, never to revoke, that is, never to make a formal act of disavowal, of this my oblation, consecration and sacrifice of myself to the glory of Thy Divine Majesty. And should there arise an occasion on which I should have either to die or to renounce Thy holy faith, or else do something of consequence against Thy divine will, I make a vow and promise to Thee, as firm and constant as possible, while trusting in Thine infinite goodness and the help of Thy grace, to confess, acknowledge, adore and glorify Thee in the presence of everyone, at the price of my blood, my life and all the martyrdoms and torments imaginable, and to suffer a thousand deaths, with all the tortures of earth and hell, rather than deny Thee or do anything serious that is contrary to Thy holy will.

O good Jesus, receive and accept this vow of mine and this sacrifice which I make to Thee of my life and my being in homage to and by the merits of the most divine sacrifice Thou didst make of Thyself to Thy Father on the Cross. Look upon me henceforth as an offering and victim dedicated to be wholly immolated to the glory of Thy holy name. Grant, through Thy great mercy, that my whole life may be a perpetual sacrifice of love and praise for Thee. Let me live a life that may perpetually imitate and honor Thine own holy life and that of Thy Blessed Mother and holy martyrs, that I may never pass a day without suffering something for love of Thee; and that I may die a death conformable to Thy holy death.

That is what I beg of Thee very humbly and earnestly, O most kind Jesus, by that ardent love which brought Thee to a death on the Cross for us, by that precious blood Thou didst shed, by that most sorrowful death Thou didst suffer, by the overwhelming love Thou didst bear for Thy most Holy Mother, the Queen of martyrs, by Thy love for all the holy martyrs and their love for Thee; in short, by all Thou dost love and all who love Thee, in heaven and on earth.

O Mother of Jesus, Queen of all martyrs, O ye holy martyrs of Jesus, implore this same Jesus, I beseech you, to effect these things in me, through His infinite goodness, solely for His glory and most pure love. Offer Him this vow of mine, and pray Him to confirm and fulfill it by virtue of His precious blood, just as I am about to sign it with my own blood in testimony of my desire to shed it even to the last drop for love of Him.

JOHN EUDES.

Live Jesus and Mary, Whom I love more than my life.

Jesus, Mary

I believe in God, the Father Almighty, Creator of heaven and earth. And in Jesus Christ, His only Son, Our Lord, Who was conceived by the Holy Spirit, born of the Virgin Mary, suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, died and was buried.

Amo te, amantissime Jesu, amo te, bonitas infinita: amo te ex toto corde meo, ex tota anima mea, et ex totis viribus meis, et magis atque magis antare Polo.

Beati qui ad coenam nuptiarum Agni vocati sunt! Beati qui laverunt stolas suas in sanguine Agni! Majorem charitatem nemo habet, quam ut animam suam ponat quis pro amicis suis. Amen.

Veni Domine Jesu. Jesus Maria. Jesu fortitudo Martyrum, miserere nobis. Regina Martyrum, Pea pro nobis. Omnes sancti Martyres, clarificate et orate Jesum pro nobis. Jesus Maria.

(2). The date is significant. St. John Eudes had been trained in the school of de Bérulle and de Condren, who held up the Incarnate Word as the perfect model of the Christian and the priest. In his spiritual classic, The Kingdom of Jesus, Part 1, P. 75, St. John Eudes explains that at the moment of His Incarnation Jesus Christ took a vow of obedience and martyrdom, thus offering Himself as a victim entirely immolated to the glory of His Eternal Father. It was in memory of this vow that the Saint choose the Feast of the Annunciation to consecrate his whole life to God as a victim to His glory and pure love. Cf. Georges, Op. Cit., P. 41

of Holy Matrimony with the Most Blessed Virgin Mary, the Mother of God.

(1668) Jesus, Mary, Joseph

O admirable and most amiable Mary, Mother of God, only Daughter of the eternal Father, Mother of the Son of God, Spouse of the Holy Ghost, Queen of heaven and earth, it is no wonder thou art willing to be the spouse of the least of all men and greatest of all sinners, Who had the boldness to choose thee from his tenderest years to be his most unparalleled spouse, and to consecrate his body, heart and soul wholly to thee. The truth is that thou dost wish to imitate the infinite goodness of thy Son Jesus Who is willing to be the spouse of a sinful and wretched soul. May all the angels, saints, creatures and the Creator Himself praise and bless thee eternally for it, and atone for all my countless acts of ingratitude and infidelity against thee.

Since thou hast already shown such great kindness, O most charitable of all creatures, deign to accept the conditions of our holy union which I am about to write down on this paper. It will serve as the contract, or rather, as a copy of the contract, of which I implore the Holy Spirit to be the notary, that He may record it in thy Heart and in mine in the golden and indelible letters of His pure love.

Whereas the husband is the head and superior of the wife, and whereas she is subject to his authority, I wish to respect and honor thee as my Queen and sovereign Lady, and I desire my whole being, with all its dependencies and appurtenances, to be fully subject to thy power, that thou mayest dispose of them all according to thy pleasure.

Whereas a portion of the wife's dowry remains in the hands of her husband-an arrangement popularly known as a changeable gift-who uses it as he deems best, I desire to appropriate and retain nothing of the dowry thou hast brought me, that is to say, the numberless graces and favors which the heavenly Father has granted me through thy intercession. I willingly surrender all claims to any advantage for my private interests, placing these graces in thy hands, together with all the fruits they have yielded, so that thou mayest return them to Him Who is their primary source, and to Whom alone may all glory for them be eternally rendered.

Whereas the wife, after her husband's death, retains only a portion of her wealth as her marriage settlement, it is my intention, O my most honored Lady, that all that I am, all of which I am capable, all that I possess in body and soul, nature and grace, all that I hope for in glory, and in general, all that belongs to me in either the spiritual or temporal order, or that depends on me in any way whatsoever, be thine entirely and without reservation, that thou mayest do with them what thou wilt. But all that is nothing. O, had I a hundred million worlds, how gladly would I give them to thee, O my Holy Spouse! Truly, if through the impossible I were a divine being, like thy Son Jesus, I would give myself to thee with the utmost happiness, in union with the same love with which He gave Himself to thee.

Whereas the wife must conform to her husband and become like him, according to these divine words: Faciamus homini adjutorium simile sibi,<sup>(1)</sup> I desire with all my heart to strive to become like thee, O my Queen, through a careful imitation of thy holy life and eminent virtues. I beseech thee to use thy God-given power to destroy in me whatever may prevent my doing so, and to impress upon me a lively image and perfect likeness of thyself.

Just as husband and wife must live together in the same house, so also do I desire to dwell with thee in the most amiable Heart of Jesus, which is also thy Heart. Grant that I may never leave it, I beg of thee, but that I may have no other dwelling in time and in eternity.

Just as the wife is inseparable from her husband and is obliged to follow and accompany him everywhere, so also do I beseech thee, my all-good, to be ever with me, in all places, at all times and in all my actions, that thou mayest guide and govern me in all things, according to the most adorable will of thy Son.

Just as the honor of the wife, which is her husband's glory, must be very dear and precious to him, so do I protest my desire to be especially fervent in honoring and having honor paid thee in every way I can, with the help of the grace of thy Son.

Just as husband and wife must love each other with a love that is sincere, constant and cordial, so have I every imaginable proof, O my all-lovable one, of thine incomparable affection for me; thou dost likewise behold the fires and flames, the sincerity and tenderness of my heart in thy regard. O my all-desirable Queen, what do I wish, what do I love, in heaven and on earth, after thy Jesus and mine, other than thee! O thou sole object of my heart, second only to my God, what would I not do and suffer for thy love! I know there is nothing more pleasing to thy Son and thee than to labor for the salvation of souls. Surely thou art aware of my feelings in that respect! O, that I had all the hearts of men and angels, with all the capacity to love which ever was and ever shall be, that I might avail myself of them to love Jesus, the Son of Mary, and Mary, the Mother of Jesus! But even then I should not be content. One must have the heart of a God in order to love worthily a God-Man and a Mother of God. Thanks be to Him, I have such a one, for, since Jesus has given Himself wholly to me, His Heart is consequently mine. Yes, the Heart of Jesus is my own heart. It is in the love of this Heart that I wish to love my most kind Saviour and His most amiable Mother, and that I desire to love them deeply, ardently, tenderly, solely and eternally. I wish to love only what they love, I hate only what they hate, rejoice over nothing save what affords them happiness, grieve over nothing except what displeases them. And I wish to find all my consolation and delight in thinking of them, conversing with them, speaking of them and hearing them spoken of, being active in their service, suffering for love of them, and dying ten thousand times, were it possible, for Jesus and Mary.

Just as husband and wife have a mutual obligation to aid and console each other in their infirmities, illnesses and afflictions, it is my desire to serve, help and console thee, according to the power God has granted me, in the persons of the poor, sick and afflicted, in whom I shall see thee as the mother in her children. I beseech thee, too, my all-gracious one, to help, protect and sustain me in my spiritual and corporal needs.

just as husband and wife should have but a single heart and soul, grant, O Queen of my heart, that I may have but one soul, one mind, one will and one heart with Thee. To that end, deprive me of my own heart and give me thine, according to thy word, that I may sing for all eternity:

*O qualis haec benignitas!
Ardens Mariae charitas
Meum sibi cor abstulit, Suum mihi Cor praebuilt.*

May this sacred Heart of my dearest Mary be the soul of my soul and the spirit of my spirit; may this amiable Heart be the principal of my life and all my thoughts, words, actions, feelings and affections; may I perform all my actions and bear all my trials and afflictions in the love, charity, humility, submission, patience and the other holy dispositions and intentions of this most holy Heart.

Just as the wife should redouble her care of her husband and her affection toward him during his last days and at the hour of his death, so also do I ask thee, O beloved of my soul, to be present and near me personally On my last day and during my final hour, according to thy promise, in order to defend me against the enemies of my salvation; to strengthen and comfort me; to prepare me for a holy death; to give me a share in the holy dispositions with which thou didst die; to receive my soul when it leaves my body; to lodge it within thy bosom and thy maternal Heart, for thou art the Mother and Spouse of my Jesus; to elevate it unto thyself in heaven, that there I may love, praise and glorify for ever the most Holy Trinity, together with thee and with all the angels and saints.

Just as the wife should care for the children that her husband has left her after his death, so do I beseech thee with all my heart, O my all-charitable one, to take very special care of all the spiritual children God has given me; they are thy children, too, since He has given them to me through thy intercession. I place them all, from this moment forward, in thy loving care, beseeching thee to preserve them so well that not a single one may perish. I also place in thy blessed hands the Communities over which divine Providence has given me charge, or with which He has granted me a special bond of unity; and all those persons who have any friendship and charity toward me, or who have recommended themselves to my prayers, or to whom I have any obligation whatsoever, without forgetting those who have felt any hatred or aversion toward me, for whom I pray thee to ask pardon of divine Mercy.

But above all else, I recommend to thee most earnestly, O my loving Mother, the little Congregation of Jesus and Mary, which thy Son and thou have given me, entreating thee, O my Queen, by all the kindness of thy most benign Heart, to make up all my omissions in its regard; to annihilate anything that may obstruct the designs of God for it; to protect, bless and govern it in all things. Remember, O most kind and powerful Virgin, that thy Son Jesus is its Founder, Superior and Father; that thou art its foundress, superioress and mother; and that it is wholly dedicated and consecrated to thy most Holy Heart. Grant then, I beseech thee, that all the children of this Congregation may be true children of thy Heart, and that to that end they may make a complete renunciation of their own wills in order to comply everywhere and in all things with the most adorable will of God. Expel all those who wish to live according to the desires of their own hearts, and do not allow anyone of that character to enter. Bless and favor in every way those who faithfully observe the rules which are established in this Congregation. Bless, too, with thy holiest blessings all who love and protect it. But most of all do I ask of thee, O my amiable Princess, that thou grant it a superior pleasing to thy Heart, who may make amends for the countless mistakes I have made in its regard, and who may rule it in thy spirit, which is the spirit of thy Son.

Those are the conditions of the contract of holy matrimony into which thou has desired me to enter with thee, O Queen of heaven, as with the most holy spouse of my spirit and heart. Once again I entreat thee to look with favor upon it and to sign it with the blood of thy virginal Heart, just as I am going to sign it with my own blood, in the ardent desire of affixing my signature with the last drop of my heart's blood. Grant that it may be accepted and signed by thy adorable

LETTER TO THE MOST HOLY VIRGIN

Most august Mother of God, most glorious Empress of heaven and earth, prostrate in mind and heart at the feet of thy Supreme Majesty, in all the humility, respect and devotion of all the hearts that love thee, and desiring that my mind, understanding, memory, will, heart, tongue, hand and pen may render thee all possible homage, I venture, though infinitely unworthy, to take the liberty of writing thee this letter, in imitation of others among thy children.

First of all, it is to protest to thee, in the face of heaven and earth, that I acknowledge and honor thee as the most worthy sanctuary of the Holy Trinity, the most worthy daughter of the eternal Father, the dearest Mother of His Son, the beloved Spouse of the Holy Spirit, the most powerful Queen of the universe, my sovereign Lady, my most honored Mother, and the holiest, wisest, sweetest, happiest and most beautiful, powerful, generous, compliant, glorious, admirable and amiable of all creatures.

Secondly, it is to offer thee all the respect, service, veneration, praise, honor and glory which are due to thy grandeurs, and have been and ever shall be rendered in all times past, present and yet to come.

Thirdly, it is to render thee all possible gratitude and thanksgiving for the countless results of thine incomparable goodness toward me and all created things.

Fourthly, it is to ask pardon of thee most humbly and to make honorable amends for all my ingratitude, negligence and unfaithfulness toward thee, and for all the wrongs and offenses thou hast received from men and demons; and to offer thee, in supplement and reparation, the most amiable Heart of thy Son Jesus, all aflame with love for thee, together with all the love and honor which has been and ever shall be rendered thee in time and in eternity.

Fifthly, it is to beseech thee most humbly, by the most ardent love which thy Son Jesus bears thee, by that which thou bearest Him, and by all the kindness of thy maternal Heart, to obtain from Him pardon for me for all my sins, to atone for all my offenses against His Divine Majesty, to destroy within me all that is displeasing to Him, to establish perfectly in me the reign of His divine love and adorable will, to let me share with thee in all things, in whatever way is most pleasing to Him, to fashion me wholly after His Heart and thine, to give me knowledge, if such be His pleasure, of the time when He shall be pleased to call me unto Himself, to assist me at my death, to obtain the favor for me from my Saviour that my last breath may be an act of pure love for Him and thee, to receive my soul when it leaves my body, to present it to my Jesus, to lodge it in His Heart and thine, and to plunge, engulf and consume it in that fiery furnace of divine love for evermore.

These are the most humble and earnest prayers which I venture to offer thine incomparable benignity, O Mother of grace, not only for myself but for all thy children, with whom I desire to have but one heart and soul in order to live the same life and die the same death in the holy love of the most amiable Heart of Jesus and Mary, to whom and through whom I am,

Most august Mother of my God, most gentle Queen of my heart, and most pious and good Mother of my soul, Thy Sovereign Majesty's Most humble, obedient, grateful and sincerely devoted servant in all things,

JOHN EUDES, missionary priest.

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT OF SAINT JOHN EUDES

(1671) Jesus, Mary

In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, and in honor of and union with the last will and testament made by my Jesus on the final day of His mortal life on earth, I am drawing up this will solely for the glory of my God, and in the following form:

1. I bequeath myself with all my heart to my Saviour, that I may unite myself with the perfect faith of His most Holy Mother, His Apostles, His saints and the entire Church; and in union with this faith, I protest before heaven and earth that I wish to die as a child of the Holy, Catholic, Apostolic and Roman Church, and in the belief of all the Christian truths she teaches; and I offer myself to my God so that I may suffer, with the help of His grace, all imaginable torments and all possible deaths to that end.

2. With all my heart do I bequeath myself to the infinite love through which my Saviour died on the Cross for me and for all men; and in union with this love, I accept and embrace my death, whenever and however it may please Him to send it, in honor of and thanksgiving for His holy death and that of His glorious Mother. I most humbly beseech Him, by the Holy Heart of this Blessed Mother, and by His own adorable Heart broken and shattered for love of us and by the sorrows of the Cross, to grant me the grace to die in His love, through His love and for love of Him.

3- Prostrate in spirit at the feet of all my brethren and all those persons to whom I have given any dissatisfaction or bad example, I ask pardon of them with my whole heart, entreating them to forgive me for the love of Our Lord, and to beg Him to show mercy to me.

4- With all my heart I bequeath myself to that boundless charity which prompted my Saviour, while He was hanging on the Cross, to offer this prayer to His eternal Father for those who were sacrificing Him: Pater, dimitte illis, non enim sciunt quid faciunt.(1) And in union (1). Luke 23, 34.

LETTERS AND SHORTER WORKS

with this same charity, I say to my heavenly Father from the very bottom of my heart for all those who have offended me in any way whatsoever, provided, of course, it were at all possible to offend a wretched sinner like me: Pater, dimitte illis, non enim sciebant quid faciebant.

5. I declare that it is my intention to receive Holy Viaticum and the Sacrament of Extreme Unction. I beseech my dearest brethren to administer them to me while I still have the use of reason, and I give myself to my God in order to unite myself with all the holy dispositions with which any of the saints have ever received them. And should it come to pass that I am deprived of the last sacraments, I implore my most benign Redeemer to accomplish in me the purposes for which He instituted them, and to do so for His sole glory.

6. Should it happen that I lose my use of reason and exterior senses, I concur with my whole heart in all the acts of faith, hope, charity, humility, resignation, contrition and others which may be said for me, whether on earth or in heaven; and I beseech my dear brethren, my guardian angel, St. Michael, St. Gabriel, all the other angels, St. Joseph, St. Joachim, St. Anne, St. John the Baptist, St. John the Evangelist, St. Lazarus, St. Mary Magdalen, St. Martha, all the holy Apostles, martyrs, priests and virgins, all the holy innocents, all the saints in paradise, and in particular, my Blessed Mother, the most Holy Virgin, to supply my deficiencies, discharge all my duties toward God and perform for me all that will be most pleasing to His Divine Majesty. I also implore them to protest that I wish every throb of my heart and veins, and every breath, to be as so many acts of contrition, resignation, praise and love for my Creator and Saviour.

7- With all my heart do I will myself to the infinite love through which my Jesus gave His holy soul to His Father with these words: Pater, in manus tuas commendo spiritum meum;(2) and in union with this same love, I bequeath my own soul to the Father of mercy, the God of all consolation, with the same words: Pater, in manus tuas commendo spiritum meum. I place it also in the most amiable Heart of Jesus and Mary, that fiery furnace of eternal love, entreating them most (2). Luke 23, 46.

LETTERS AND SHORTER WORKS

humbly to embrace, consume and transform it into a very pure flame of that divine love.

8. If I had any desire, I should wish my body to be interred in our church at Caen, which is consecrated to this same Heart of Jesus and Mary. But I abandon both my body and soul completely to the divine will, submitting myself most willingly to all it may be pleased to ordain in time and in eternity, joyfully consenting that my body be reduced to a powder, and that each grain of dust from it be a perfect act of adoration and praise for the mystery of the burial of my Saviour and His most Holy Mother.

9. I implore my dearest brethren to bury me in the little white habit of my loving Mother, including the white silk girdle and the heart bearing a red silk cross, as well as the alb I have marked for that purpose, together with the holy scapular, the holy rosary given me by Sister Mary des Vallées, the original of my last will and testament, of which this copy will survive, the Contract of Marriage that I made with the Blessed Virgin, and above all, the holy image which is fashioned in part from holy relics and is kept in a small niche of gilded copper.

to. To the fullest extent of my will do I give myself to that incomprehensible love through which my Jesus and my all-good Mother gave me their most amiable Heart in a special manner. In union with this same love, I bequeath this Heart (3) as something which belongs to me, and of which I can dispose for the glory of my God-I bequeath it, I repeat, to the little Congregation of Jesus and Mary to be the portion, the treasure, the chief patron, the heart, life and rule of the true children of this Congregation. In like manner do I offer and dedicate our Congregation to this divine Heart, to be consecrated to its honor and praise for time and eternity. I beseech and urge all my beloved brethren to strive to render It and have It rendered all the honor within their power; to celebrate with the most fervent devotion possible its feasts and (3). This is noteworthy in view of the fact that St. John Eudes was the first to preach the devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus and to the Holy Heart of Mary. He considers the Heart of Jesus and the Heart of Mary as belonging to him "in a special manner" and therefore leaves them to his spiritual sons and daughters as a priceless heritage. Offices on the days indicated in our Proper, and to give exhortations on this subject in all their missions; to strive to impress on their hearts a perfect likeness of the virtues of this most Holy Heart, and to look upon It and to follow It as the pristine rule of their lives and conduct. I entreat them to give themselves to Jesus and Mary in all their actions and exercises in order to perform them in the love, humility and all the other dispositions of their Sacred Heart, so that, by this means, they may love and glorify God with a Heart truly worthy of God, Corde magno et animo volenti, and that they may be like unto the Heart of God and true children of the Heart of Jesus and Mary.

ii. I likewise bequeath this most precious Heart to all my dearest daughters, the religious of Our Lady of Charity, to the Carmelites of Caen, and to all my other spiritual children, particularly those who have a special love for their most unworthy Father, and whose names are written in the book of life. I give all of them, and each one individually, to this most kind Heart for the aforesaid intentions indicated in the preceding Article, and I promise them that, if my Saviour grants me forgiveness, as I hope from His infinite mercy and the incomparable charity of His Blessed Mother, I will take very special care of them in heaven. I hope that God may grant me the grace to assist them in their hour of death, in company with this most kind Virgin.

12. Prostrate at the sacred feet of my Jesus, Whom I adore as the Institutor, Founder, Superior and Father of our Congregation, as also at the feet of the Queen of heaven, whom I honor as the institutress, foundress, superioress and mother of that same Congregation, I implore them most humbly and earnestly, by their most benign Heart, and I ask all paradise to join in my prayer, to replace me with a man to govern it who will be pleasing to their Heart, make reparation for the incomparable mistakes I have made in its regard, and guide it in their spirit. And because I know better than anyone else the qualities and dispositions of the members of the Congregation, I beg my dear brethren to approve of my telling them that there is no one indeed so well suited in every respect for this position as our dearest Brother . . . (4)

(4). There is a blank in the original manuscript. Father Costil in Annales de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie says that the Saint undoubtedly had Father Blouet de Camilly in mind. Cf. Boulay, Op. cit., Vol. 4, P. 460.

13. I also ask them to regard the Rules and Constitutions which I leave them, as well as all the Offices and prayers which are found in the Proper and Manual of our Congregation, not at all as something proceeding from me, but as being given to them by the hand of Our Lord and His most holy Mother. I beg them to observe and practise the rule conscientiously for the love of Jesus and Mary, for I declare to them that the Son and the Mother will love, protect and bless in every way those who do so, and that they will deal with them in this world and in the next as true children of their Sacred Heart; but that they will refuse to consider as children of their Congregation, either in life or in death, those who despise or neglect these Constitutions or Offices. (5)

14. I bequeath my sacred, heart-shaped reliquary of silver, the one that I wear, to the sacristy of our house at Caen, to be inseparably attached to the image of the most Holy Virgin which is exposed on the altar whenever her Litanies are sung.

15. I bequeath my crucifix, which is filled with holy relics, to my successor, with the request that every morning and evening he perform the acts of devotion to the crucifix which are given in The Kingdom Of Jesus. (6)

16. I also leave to him the disposal of the other holy relics which I wear, and of those contained in the little chest in my room, near the window which overlooks the garden of the Reverend Jesuit Fathers, together with some medals which are kept there and in the drawer of my desk. Through his hands I bequeath them to whomever he distributes them.

17. I urge him, as well as all his successors, not to fail to pay an annual visit to all the houses of the Congregation, either in person, or through others when he cannot do so himself, and to observe in them everything that is indicated in the Constitutions.

18. I also request him to see that my Sermons are not scattered, but to have them bound in order to preserve them for the Congregation; and if there should remain some of the books I have written for the good of souls, to have them printed, and even to arrange to have all my writings printed in one volume.

19. I beseech all the superiors of the Congregation to study and practise conscientiously the rules of their office, to speak unceasingly to their subordinates through their works and examples, and to guide them with all possible charity, meekness and kindness. And I conjure all true children of the Congregation always to pay their superiors all the respect, affection and obedience due those who represent Our Lord Jesus Christ. For from these two duties of superiors and subordinates depends the preservation and entire happiness of the Congregation.

20. Having received outstanding aid in all my exterior needs for many years from our dear Brother Richard Le Moine,(7) I beg all my dear brethren, particularly him who will succeed me, to have toward him the same charity that they would have for me, if I were still of this world.

21. In conclusion, I bequeath myself with my whole heart to my dearest Jesus, that I may unite myself with all the holy dispositions with which He, His most Holy Mother and all the saints died, embracing for love of Him all the pains of mind and body which may be mine during my last days, protesting to Him that I wish my final breath to be an act of purest love for Him, and imploring Him to accept and reserve for my hour of death all the sentiments and acts of religion indicated in this paper.

This is my last will and testament. I very humbly implore my most amiable Saviour and His good Mother, by their most benign Heart, to be its executors, and to see that all the Articles contained herein are carried out in whatever way is most pleasing to the most adorable will of my God.

Amen, amen. Fiat, fiat. Veni, veni, veni, Domine Jesu.

Dated at Paris, this 24th day of April, 1671.

JOHN EUDES, missionary priest
of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

SUPPLEMENT

I should not wish to be guilty of extreme ingratitude toward my dearest daughter in Our Lord, and my eldest daughter, Anne Le Haguais, Madame de Camilly. It was she with whom our dearest brother, Father de Than, associated himself in the foundation of our house at Caen, and very justly so, for God gave her a maternal affection for the whole Congregation, and particularly for that house which she benefited in every way possible. Therefore I implore all my dear brethren to regard and honor her in that capacity, and to render her, during her lifetime and after her death, all that is due the foundress and mother of a Congregation. I am giving her something which is very precious to me - a small image of the Blessed Virgin that I wear around my neck in a little silver case, which also contains a fragment of the true Cross. This image was given me from the same Virgin as a token of the special union which she granted me the privilege of forming with her.

Dated at Paris, this 1st day of May, 1672.

JOHN EUDES, missionary priest.

DONATION OF HIS HEART AND REVOCATION

St. John Eudes had requested that his heart be given, after his death, to the house of Our Lady of Charity; and in addition to having indicated this desire in his last will and testament, he had entrusted to the nuns a document on this subject signed by his hand, the text of which follows:

In the year 1678, on the 13th day of January, I gave my heart to my beloved daughters in Our Lord, the religious of Our Lady of Charity who are established at Caen, to be interred in their monastery there. Such is my will which I desire to be carried out, and I request the priests of our seminaries to do so. In testimony whereof I have affixed my signature,

JOHN EUDES, missionary priest of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

He revoked the aforesaid donation by crossing out that Article in his will and leaving to the seminary the following statement:

I hereby revoke the gift which I made of my heart to the religious of Our Lady of Charity, desiring that my body and heart be interred together in our church of the most amiable Heart of Jesus and Mary. Dated at Caen, this 18th day of September, 1678.

JOHN EUDES, missionary priest of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN MARY

To give thanks to her, to "commend to her care the Congregation at Jesus and Mary, and to ask of her a good and holy death.( 1 )

O great and most amiable Mary, most august Empress of the universe, most holy and worthy Mother of my God, behold me prostrate at thy feet to ask pardon very humbly of thee for having dared to undertake, through an excessive audacity, to record in this little book the ineffable perfections and incomprehensible excellences of thine admirable Heart. What is this compassionate Heart, save an impenetrable abyss of grace and holiness, an immense world of unrivalled wonders and an infinitely exalted heaven of incomparable glories and grandeurs? And what am I, save an infinitesimal atom, an abyss of wretchedness and darkness, the nonentity of nonentities? Is it not prodigious temerity for a puny earthworm like me to dare lift my eyes toward heaven to gaze upon the foremost, the worthiest and the most brilliant object of the infinite love of the three adorable Persons of the most Holy Trinity?

But how can I close my ears to so many millions of voices which incessantly cry out to me that I am a monster of ingratitude if I do not render the thanks I owe my sovereign Princess for the many favors that I have received and am constantly receiving from the inconceivable kindness with which her most generous Heart is filled toward the least of all men?

For, first of all, is it not true, O Holy Virgin, that after God I should respect and honor thee as my true Mother to whom I owe my birth, my being and my life, and without whom I should still remain in the nothingness from which I should never have emerged? For this reason I have as many obligations toward thee as there are advantages attached to existence and to the life of a reasonable and Christian creature.

Secondly, how great is my debt to thee, O Mother of goodness, for having given me a father and a mother who exercised great care to rear me, by the good example of their lives and their holy instructions, in the fear of God and the spirit of Christianity?

How greatly am I indebted to thee for having inspired them to place me under the discipline and guidance of the holy Society of Jesus, in the city of Caen, and for having admitted me into thy Sodality which is truly a school of virtue and piety, under the direction of the same Society? And this, indeed, O Mother of grace, was one of the greatest graces I have ever received from my God through thy intercession. .

Here is another very special grace. It is that, in order to snatch me from a manifest danger which would have caused my downfall, thou didst enlist me in the Congregation of Jesus and Mary, established by thee and thy beloved Son in the holy Church for two ends of the greatest importance and usefulness to that same Church, namely: to attend to the functions of ecclesiastical seminaries and to the exercises of missions. And God has granted me the grace, through thy mediation, O Mother of mercy, to devote myself unceasingly for nearly forty years to the functions of these same seminaries, and for nearly sixty years to the exercises of missions, with the very abundant blessings which divine Bounty has showered upon my meager efforts through thy sacred hands, for the saints assure us that no grace descends from heaven to earth without passing through those blessed hands.

I have no words at all to express the infinite excellence of the incomprehensible favor thou didst grant us, my brethren and me, in bestowing upon us the adorable Heart of thy beloved Son, along with thine own all-loving Heart, to be the heart, life and living rule of our Congregation.

I must not omit mention of the great favor with which the Sovereign Priest, thine only Son and my Saviour, deigned to honor me through thy intercession, when He granted me a share in His divine priesthood, which is a grace in a certain sense infinite, and which comprises an infinity of others, such as the power to consecrate on the holy altar His adorable Body and precious Blood; the power to offer Him to God as a sacrifice, as He offered Himself to the Father on Calvary; the power to give Him to the faithful in the Holy Eucharist; the power to annihilate all the sins of earth and hell if they were in one soul; the power to bind and loose, to absolve and condemn, to reconcile sinners with God, to open heaven and close hell; the power to spread the Holy Gospel, preach the divine word and propagate the admirable light of faith throughout the world; the power, finally, to confer upon Christians the divine Sacraments of the Church, which are the inexhaustible sources of the graces acquired for us by our Redeemer through His precious blood.

I do not even mention the light thou wert pleased to give me so that I might bring into existence this small undertaking, together with other similar ones preceding it, in which there is no favor which does not proceed from the Father of wisdom and from that admirable Star who for our sakes brought forth the Sun of justice.

What shall I say of an infinity of other benefits which I have received from the generosity of my God through thy intercession, O admirable Mother? How many sins have I committed for which thou hast obtained pardon for me? How many others should I have committed if thou hadst not preserved me from them?

How often have I seen myself on the brink of hell, in obvious danger of falling therein but for thy most benign hand which saved me?

How often would the roaring lion from hell, who prowls about un ceasingly in all directions seeking to devour the souls redeemed by the precious blood of thy Son, have swallowed up and devoured my own soul, had not the admirable charity of thy Heart opposed it?

Alas! Without thee, my dearest and all-good Mother, where should I be today? I should be in the fiery furnace of hell from which I should never emerge.

Oh, what a profusion of kindnesses! What an excess of mercy! What incomprehensible obligations I have toward the incredible charity of thy most benign Heart O, what immense graces, infinite graces, eternal graces! Let all the spirits, all the tongues and hearts of heaven and earth praise, glorify and love thee eternally in my name!

But the grace of graces, the favor of favors, is the great multitude of crosses which my most adorable Crucified has bestowed upon me on thy behalf, for which may He be praised and glorified forevermore.

Now are not all these graces, not to mention a million others, as so many voices continually preaching the respect, veneration and gratitude I should have for that most august Heart, of which I have infinite reason to say what St. John Chrysostom said of the heart of St. Paul—that it is for me a fountain of countless blessings: Fons innumerorum bonorum? Yes, indeed, the most kind and benign Heart of the Mother of my Jesus is for me an immense source of all sorts of inconceivable blessings, graces and favors. That is what I should and wish to proclaim openly, wherever I may be. It is what compels me to bring forth this little work, that those who take the trouble to read it may be aroused and animated to praise, bless and glorify with me this most worthy Heart as the holiest, noblest and most generous, royal, magnificent and amiable of all hearts, second only to the adorable Heart of Jesus.

Finally, my most kind Mother, I have received so many favors from thy maternal Heart that I can truthfully say that they surpass in number the hairs of my head.

But I have still two favors to ask of thee which will crown all the others. For I possess overwhelming confidence in the unrivalled charity of thine admirable Heart that my infinite unworthiness will not prevent thee from granting me these two things.

LETTERS AND SHORTER WORKS

The first is that thou look with favor, my dearest Mother, upon my giving to thee, or rather, my returning to thy hands, the little Congregation of Jesus and Mary which thou wert pleased to give me through an excess of thine inexplicable goodness. Thou knowest that I have offered, given and consecrated it to thee hundreds and hundreds of times during my life; but now I wish to give it to thee incessantly and for all eternity, in union with the incomprehensible love with which the only Son of God gave Himself to thee for evermore. Avail thyself of thy sovereign God-given power in order to take full, absolute and eternal possession of it. Give it wholly to thy Son Jesus; pray Him to annihilate therein all that is displeasing to Him; to establish perfectly in it the reign of His holy love and His adorable will; to fill it with His divine spirit, His spirit of humility, submission, charity, purity, zeal for the glory of God, hatred for sin, love for the Cross, the abnegation of the aged, and a great detachment from and scorn for the world and all the things of this earth; to protect, sustain and defend it against those who would thwart it; to give it a great number of evangelical laborers who may devote themselves to the training and instruction of holy priests and good pastors through the exercises of seminaries, and who may work efficaciously for the salvation of souls through missions. Finally, may He dispose of it entirely according to His Heart, together with all His children in general and each one individually; and may He accomplish in it all the designs of His goodness, at all costs, annihilating us rather than permitting us to place any obstacle in its way because of our sins.

I also offer thee, O most sacred Mother of God, all the founders, benefactors and friends of this little Congregation, beseeching thee very humbly to preserve, bless and sanctify them, to place them in the ranks of the children of thy Heart and to let them feel the effects of this holy prayer which we offer for them several times a day: Retribuere dignare, Domine, omnibus nobis bona facientibus, propter nomen tuum, vitam aeternam. Amen. O Lord, be pleased to grant eternal life, for the love of Thy Holy Name, to all our friends and benefactors.

The second favor I ask of thee, O Mother of goodness, is to look upon me always as a true child of the ineffable goodness of thy most Holy Heart, even though I am infinitely unworthy of my heritage. For it is not a pretended or imaginary thing, but a real and established truth, that thou gavest me birth and life through a certain and unquestionable miracle, following the vow made to God by my father and mother, who were without children and unable to have any, that they might obtain this favor through thy intercession. When this vow was followed by the fulfillment of their desire, they took me, while I was yet in my mother's womb, into a holy chapel dedicated to thy name under the title of Our Lady of Recovery, in order to give thanks to thee for the favor thou hadst granted them, and to offer and consecrate me to my Creator, as well as to her through whose intercession He had called me into being. Look upon me, therefore, and treat me, O most amiable Mother, as the fruit and the child of the wonderful charity of thy Holy Heart, and do not allow me to degenerate from such a noble birth. Impress upon my heart and my life the likeness and resemblance of the holy virtues which reign in the Heart and life of my heavenly Mother, from which, alas! I am infinitely removed. But above all, I implore thee, by all the mercies of thy benign Heart, to obtain for me from divine Clemency complete pardon and general remission of my numberless sins, offenses and negligences, and to help and protect me with extraordinary bounty in my last days and in my final hour.

Alas! thou knowest, O Mother of grace, that human weakness and wretchedness is so great that there is not a man in the world who, after having struggled with the infernal powers for eighty or a hundred years, would not be capable of succumbing to them and losing his salvation in the last hour of his life. Have pity on me, then, O Mother of goodness: Tu mea maxima fiducia, tu ratio spei meae. I have the greatest confidence in thee, who art, after God, the principal foundation of my hope. Do not permit the enemies of my salvation to have any advantage over thy poor son: Nequando dicat inimicus meus: praevalui adversus eum. But grant, through thy powerful intercession, that all the moments of life still remaining to me may be entirely and solely consecrated to the glory of my Saviour and the honor of my Holy Mother; that all my thoughts, words and actions, every breath, every throb of my heart and veins, all the functions of the faculties of my soul, and every use of my interior and exterior senses may be a perpetual exercise of praise and love for my most adorable Jesus and my most amiable Mother.

O most kind Mother, obtain for me from my God that moriatur anima mea morte Justorum et fiant novissima mea horum similia; that I may die the death of the just, that is, the holy death of the King and Queen of the just, who are Jesus and Mary, and of those of whom the Holy Ghost says: "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord"; and that I may die in the holy interior and exterior dispositions in which they died.

Let me die pronouncing these words which my Redeemer spoke on the Cross, and while giving myself to Him in order to say them in the holy dispositions with which He uttered them: Pater, in manus tuas commendo spiritum meum.

Let me die in the faith of all the holy martyrs, with complete confidence in the immense mercy of my Redeemer and the unparalleled kindness of His Most Holy Mother and mine; and with perfect charity toward my neighbor.

Let me die in the spirit and in the sentiments of humiliation, contrition and penance with which my loving Savior bore my sins during His Sacred Passion and Death.

Let me die with these divine words in my heart and on my lips: "Jesus, Mary"; and let me pronounce them in union with all the love which ever has been, is now and ever shall be in all hearts which love Jesus and Mary.

Let me die in the love, through the love and for the love of my Jesus, and let my last breath be an act of purest love through which I may offer and sacrifice myself of my own accord to my God, in union with that same love with which my Redeemer offered and immolated Himself on the Cross to His Father for love of me.

In conclusion, with all my heart do I give my soul, O Mother of love, in union with the same love by which my Saviour gave thee His at the moment of His Incarnation. Do thou preserve it as something which is wholly thine; receive it into thy most sacred hands when it leaves my body; harbor it in thy maternal Heart; present and give it to thy beloved Son, that He may place it in the ranks of those who will love and bless Him for all eternity with thee and with all the angels and saints in that blessed eternity, O clemens, O pia, O dulcis Virgo Maria, vita, dulcedo et spes mea charissima.

GENERAL PREFACE

ST. JOHN EUDES has been called "the wonder of his age." Missionary, founder, reformer of the clergy, he crowded into a life of seventy-nine years so many and such varied accomplishments that one marvels how a single man could achieve so much. In addition to the activities of an incessant and many-sided apostolate, he wrote a number of valuable books, which rank him among the most prolific ascetic writers of the seventeenth century.

For many years the devotional works of St. John Eudes were practically unknown.(1) Occasionally a volume was discovered in the library of some seminary or religious house. Many others preserved in manuscript form were lost in the chaos of the French Revolution(2) At the beginning of the present century the sons of St. John Eudes united in a tribute of filial piety to bring out a complete edition of the works of their spiritual father, seeking them in public and private libraries throughout the world(3) About twenty volumes were found and edited in 1905 by the late Fathers Charles Lebrun, C.J.M., and Joseph Dauphin,

(1).Before the French Revolution the works of St. John Eudes were popular in France. In 1792 the houses of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary were confiscated by the Government and its members were massacred or dispersed throughout Europe. With the suppression of the Eudists, their rich literary heritage was widely scattered and partially destroyed. It was not until the re-establishment of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary in 1826 that effort was made to recover the printed and manuscript works of St. John Eudes. The research was carried on until the latter part of the nineteenth century. In the "Preface Générale to the Oeuvres Complètes (Vannes, 1905), Father Charles Lebrun points out that one of the purposes of the edition was "to unearth these works buried too long in oblivion," exhumers ces ouvrages ensevelis depuis trop longtemps dans l'oubli...

(2)The following manuscripts were not found: The Christian Man, All Jesus, The Divine office, The Admirable Sacrifice of the Mass, Meditations, (2 vol.), Sermons of St. John Eudes (3 vols.), Favors obtained by the Diocese of Coutances through the Blessed Virgin, The Divine Childhood of Jesus, The Devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus, The Admirable Life of Mary des Vallées, (incomplete copy found at Laval University Library, Quebec) and Correspondence of St. John Eudes.

GENERAL PREFACE

C.J.M. The first edition in French, Oeuvres Complètes du Vénérable Jean Eudes, ran into twelve octavo volumes with introductions, explanatory notes, analytic and alphabetic indexes of great value. These writings constitute a complete summa of ascetic and pastoral theology. The list is as follows:

Volume 1 The Life and Kingdom of Jesus in Christian Souls. In this work the Saint develops his spiritual teaching on the Christian life, namely, that the Christian life is simply the life of Jesus extended and continued in each one of us.

Volume 11. This volume contains six short treatises on subjects relating to the Christian life:

1. A Treatise on the Respect Due to Holy Places, which is an echo of the fiery denunciations he pronounced during his missions against profaners of the temple of God.

2. Meditations on Humility, a series of meditations on the profession of humility as used daily in his order of Priests, the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

3. Interior Colloquies of the Soul with God, meditations on creation, the end of man and the grace of Baptism.

4. Man's Contract with God in Holy Baptism, a summary of the teachings of Sacred Scripture and Tradition on the Sacrament of Baptism.

5. The Practice of Piety, a brief explanation of what is necessary in order to live a Christian life.

6. Catechism of the Mission, an outline of the catechetical instructions given during a mission.

Volume III. Contains two important works on sacerdotal perfection:

1. The Memorial of the Ecclesiastical Life, an explanation of the dignity and duties of the priesthood.

2. A Manual of Piety for Use in an Ecclesiastical Community, in which the author explains how the means of sanctification he recommended to his priests should be practically applied in their daily lives.

Volume IV. Comprises significant works on the priestly ministry.

1. The Apostolic Preacher is one of the first treatises written on the ministry of the Word of God and is even yet one of the most practical.

GENERAL PREFACE

V 11 -

2. The Good Confessor explains the qualities, and obligations of the minister of the Sacrament of Penance.

3. Counsels for Mission Confessors suggests practical means of assisting penitents to make their examination of conscience and excite themselves to contrition.

4. The Manner of Serving Mass explains the dignity and holiness of this act and what one must do to perform it devoutly and worthily.

Volume V. The Admirable Childhood of the Most Holy Mother of God. This book treats of the holy childhood of Mary and the practical means of honoring the mysteries and virtues of her early life.

Volumes VI, VII, VIII contain the entire writings of the Saint on the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary. The work is entitled: The Admirable Heart of the Most Holy Mother of God. It comprises twelve books covering the complete theology of the devotion to the Sacred Hearts. Eleven books discuss the theory, history, and practice of the devotion to the Immaculate Heart of Mary. The last book deals with the devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. It is this work, together with the Offices of the Sacred Hearts, that merit for him the title of Father, Doctor and Apostle of the Devotion to the Sacred Hearts.

Volume IX. The Rules and Constitutions of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

Volume X. Contains The Rules and Constitutions of the Order of Our Lady of Charity, the Directory of the Order, and a collection of two hundred and forty letters.

Volumes XI and XII embrace the Saint's Liturgical Works, comprising twenty-five Offices and Masses for feasts to which he urged special devotion, the Memorial of God's Blessings and several other minor works.

The second French edition appeared in 1935, Oeuvres Choisies de Saint Jean Eudes, prepared under the direction of Father Lebrun, the leading authority on Eudistic research. It comprises nine volumes: The Life and Kingdom of Jesus in Christian Souls, Meditations of Various Subjects, Regulae Vitae Christianae et Sacerdotalis, Man's Contract with God in Holy Baptism, Letters and Minor Works, Writings on the Priesthood, The Sacred Heart of Jesus, The Admirable Heart of Mary, and The Admirable Childhood of the Mother of God. The format of these volumes is compact and more convenient than the 1905 edition, which is now out of print.

The publication of the works of St. John Eudes revealed the extent and depth of their spiritual doctrine. Cardinal Pitra, who was associated with the cause of Beatification, discovered in the writings of St. John Eudes a remarkable depth of thought and purity of doctrine. Cardinal Vives has more recently expressed his admiration:

I was acquainted with the Doctors of the Order of Saint Francis; I was acquainted with Saint Teresa and Saint John of the Cross, the mystical writers of my own country, Spain; but I was completely ignorant of the writings of Father Eudes. As a member of the Sacred Congregation of Rites it was my duty to study his life and his works, and I am in admiration. Blessed John Eudes must be ranked with the great lights of the Church. His spiritual doctrine is profound and of wonderful exactitude. He is one of the writers who has best propounded the doctrine of the Gospel.(4).

The late Father Ange Le Doré, for fifty years Superior General of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary, wrote:

The works of Blessed John Eudes, although they do not bear the scientific touch of the professional theologian, are nevertheless proof of his remarkable theological, ascetic and scriptural knowledge.... He is not a Doctor after the fashion of the scholastics of the thirteenth century or of the great theologians of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. As they, he might have built up theses and composed books didactic in form; but he was before all a saviour of souls. For him the science of theology found its chief field of usefulness in the practice of virtue and in the acquisition of sanctity of which it is the principle.... He was a Doctor after the manner of the Apostles, the Fathers of the Church, St. Francis de Sales and St. Alphonsus de Liguori. The science which shines in his works not only emits light; it engenders piety and sanctity.(5)

The spiritual doctrine expounded by St John Eudes follows the teaching of Cardinal Pierre de Bérulle and Father Charles de Condren, two prominent members of the seventeenth-century French School of Spirituality. St. John Eudes applies this doctrine to the devotion to the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary, developing and rendering it more precise and practical. He has the rare gift of expressing the most sublime truths in simple, familiar language. He also excels in condensing into a few pages a complete scheme of Christian life and perfection.

The wish was repeatedly expressed that these inspirational writings could be made available to English-speaking readers. Excellent abridged editions of certain books were published in England and in Canada, but they did not do justice to the literary value of the Saint. Consequently, the Eudist Fathers commemorating their tercentenary in 1943 resolved to publish a complete translation of the principal works of their founder. Competent translators were secured and much time and effort were expended to produce readable volumes in modern English, faithful to the spirit and style of the original.

The first English edition, Selected Works of Saint John Eudes, is the result. In presenting it to the public the Eudist Fathers and the Religious of Our Lady of Charity of the Refuge, and of the Good Shepherd, wish to thank all those who contributed to the success of this comprehensive undertaking.

They are especially grateful to the distinguished churchmen who have so graciously accepted to introduce these volumes to Catholic readers, because they consider that the works of St. John Eudes should be more widely known. The Saint in his apostolic work and in his writings ranks with the eminent figures who belong not to one country and to one religious order but to the universal Church. Three centuries have passed since he wrote the works now being printed in the new world, a striking illustration that he wrote for all time. He still speaks in accents that penetrate the mind and heart of the reader to enlighten, purify and sanctify so that Jesus Christ may live and reign in the Christian soul.

FOREWORD

IT WAS indeed a happy inspiration which prompted the late Reverend Charles Lebrun, C.J.M., to gather into a single volume, and thus render easily accessible, the various meditations that Saint John Eudes scattered so profusely through his many spiritual writings. It was also a happy inspiration on his part to have enriched the volume with his own brilliant essay on prayer as practised and recommended by Saint John Eudes. No one has studied more carefully or understood more thoroughly the spiritual teaching of the Saint, and no one was more highly qualified to develop his thought on prayer-its nature, importance, form and the place it occupies in his concept of the Christian life.

It is a fundamental principle in the teaching of Saint John Eudes that the Christian life is nothing more than the reproduction, continuation and completion of the life of Jesus, the Head of the Mystical Body, in each one of us, the members. "When a Christian prays," he says, "he continues and accomplishes the prayers of Jesus Christ. When he works, he continues and accomplishes Christ's laborious life. When his relations with his neighbor are inspired by charity, he continues and accomplishes Christ's public life . . ." (1)

Now it was with the hope of aiding Christians to reproduce and continue in their lives the life of prayer of Jesus while on earth that Saint John Eudes composed his meditations. To facilitate the practice for those who find it difficult to concentrate and reflect, he frequently proposes an elevation or ready-made colloquy by means of which they can easily raise their minds and hearts to God and give expression to their sentiments of tenderest love and deepest devotion, as is evident the Saint himself was accustomed to do. We know that the entire life of Jesus on earth was a life of continual prayer, and consequently that there can be nothing more important in the life of a Christian than the practice of prayer. Oportet semper orare (Luke 28, 1).

For the first time, this book of Meditations by Saint John Eudes, with the admirable Introduction of Father Lebrun clarifying the mind of the Saint on the whole subject of prayer, is offered to the public in English dress. With it go the hope and the prayer that it may prove serviceable to many souls in the world and in the cloister; that it may assist them in reproducing and continuing the life of prayer of Jesus; nay more, that it may help many to "put on Christ," become more perfectly "other Christs," and thereby greatly extend His kingship on earth.

INTRODUCTION

THE wish has been expressed that the meditations scattered through the spiritual writings of St. John Eudes be gathered together in one separate volume. To comply with this request, the present work has been compiled. All the meditations in The Kingdom of Jesus, The Sacred Heart of Jesus, The Admirable Heart of Mary, The Admirable Childhood of Mary, and the Manual of Piety, will be found in this book. A brief note at the beginning of each series indicates the work from which the meditations are taken and adds explanatory material to make them more useful to the reader. The following general introduction outlines the teaching of St. John Eudes on prayer, especially on mental prayer or meditation.

I. PRAYER IN GENERAL

St. John Eudes did not write a special book on prayer, but the few pages devoted to the subject in The Kingdom of Jesus (1) enable us to give an account of his ideas on it. Moreover, that book is full of prayers and meditations that make it, in M. Joly's words, "a manual of prayer" and show us the theoretical ideas of the author reduced to practice.

In that volume the Saint uses the word "prayer" in its widest sense so that he applies it to every kind of prayer, no matter what acts it comprises or how it is offered. In his eyes spiritual meditation and the reading of good books are true prayers for they arouse in us devotional sentiments and acts of love of God.

Prayer is often defined as a request made to God for our necessities, and some Christians restrict prayer to petition. Such a prayer is certainly good, and the Divine Master recommends it in the Gospels: "Ask, and it shall be given you," He said to His apostles, "seek and (1). In this Introduction and elsewhere all references to The Kingdom of Jesus and to The Sacred Heart of Jesus are to the new American translation published in the series The Selected Works of St. John Eudes, New York: P. ## INTRODUCTION you shall find: knock, and it shall be opened to you" (Matt. 7, -7); and on another occasion He reproached them for having made no requests: "Hitherto, you have not asked any thing in my name. Ask, and you shall receive" (John 16, 24)

Excellent as the act of petition may be, it is not the main element of prayer. St. John Eudes unfolds a much wider idea of prayer which he draws from Catholic traditions. "Prayer," he says, "is a respectful and loving elevation of your mind and heart to God. It is a joyous meeting, a holy communication, a divine conversation between God and the Christian." (2)

As a rule, in actual fact, a Christian speaks to God in prayer in the style of the Our Father, and God replies by inspiring in his mind good thoughts, or acts of faith, confidence, love and the like. But it may happen in prayer that the mind and heart are raised to God with a more or less active feeling of adoration and love which finds no expression in either external or internal words; yet, this is most certainly prayer. That is why the Saint begins by telling us that prayer is "a respectful and loving elevation of your mind and heart to God."

After defining prayer, St. John Eudes goes on to describe in detail the elements that compose it. "In it," he says, "the soul considers and contemplates its Creator in His divine perfections, in His mysteries and in His works; it adores and blesses Him, loves and glorifies Him, gives itself to Him, is abased before Him at the sight of its sins and ingratitude. It implores Him to be merciful and learns to become like Him by imitating His divine virtues and perfections, and finally, asks for all the things necessary to serve and love Him."(3)

(2). cf. The Kingdom of Jesus, Part 1, P. 24. St. Augustine, St. John Damascene, and many subsequent writers define prayer as Ascensus mentis ad Deum, but in adopting this definition St. John Eudes develops it in his own way. He remarks that it is a respectful and loving elevation of the heart as well as of the mind, and this indeed is how everyone considers it. The second part of his definition (an intercourse with God) is also classical, and is to be found in St. Francis de Sales' Treatise of the Love of God, as well as in the writings of St. Teresa and many others. On the idea of prayer, see Bremond, Histoire du Sentiment Religieux, V11, P. 5ff.

(3). cf. The Kingdom of Jesus, Part I, pp. 24-25. The Saint is not here dealing exclusively with infused contemplation. He often uses the word contemplation in The Kingdom of Jesus, but in its widest sense, meaning the attentive consideration (apparently without reasoning) of the divine perfections or of the mysteries of our Lord and of His holy Mother.

INTRODUCTION

XXV-

These few lines, inserted almost accidentally in one of the chapters of The Kingdom of Jesus, really contain the germ of a complete theory of prayer, to which we will return when dealing with the subject of mental prayer. For the moment we may merely note that according to St. John Eudes prayer is primarily an exercise, the object of which is to render to God that tribute of adoration and love, of satisfaction and thanksgiving, to which He has a right. It is only when he has duly performed these duties that a Christian may turn to his own needs and ask for their fulfilment, and he does so less from self-interest than from a desire to be able to love and to serve God. As St. John Eudes (like Cardinal de Bérulle and his followers) frequently reminds us: "the interests of God must be dearer to us than our own." Accordingly prayer in his view is profoundly theocentric.

Saint John Eudes next stresses the excellence of prayer so defined. "Prayer," he says, "is a participation in the life of the angels and saints, in the life of Jesus Christ and of His most holy Mother, even of the life of God and of the Three Divine Persons. For the life of the angels and saints, of Christ and of His most holy Mother is nothing else but a continual practice of prayer and contemplation, in which their uninterrupted occupation is to look upon God, to praise and love Him, to ask Him, on your behalf, for the things you need. And the existence of the Three Divine Persons is a perpetual contemplation, praise and love of one another, which is accomplished first and foremost by prayer. (4)

"Prayer," continues the Saint, "is perfect delight, supreme happiness, a true earthly paradise. It is by this divine exercise of prayer that the Christian soul is united to God, who is the centre of its being, its goal and its supreme good. It is in prayer that God belongs to the soul and the soul to God. It is by praying that the soul pays Him rightful service, homage, adoration and love, and receives from Him His lights, His blessings and a thousand tokens of His exceeding great love. It is during your prayers that God takes His delight in you, according to this word of His: 'My delights were to be with the children of men' (Pr, v. 8, 31), and gives us an experimental knowledge of the fact that our true joy and perfect satisfaction are to be found in God, and that a hundred, or even a thousand years of the false pleasures of this world are not worth one moment of the true delights which God allows those souls to taste, who seek all their contentment only in conversing with Him in holy prayer."(5)

Of course prayer has its difficulties and trials, as St. John Eudes well knew; he devoted a section of The Kingdom of Jesus to spiritual dryness and afflictions(6). But whether it be easy or laborious, delightful or arid, prayer is always an exercise of praise and love of God, and even when we are deprived of the sweetness of sensible devotion, the Saint would have us find all our happiness in conversing with God in prayer.

He adds that prayer is "the one true and proper function of a man and of a Christian, since man is created for God and to be with God, and the Christian is on earth only for the purpose of continuing what Jesus Christ did during His life."(6a) Therefore prayer is the basis of a truly human life, and above all the foundation of a Christian life. It is true that if we are to be really Christian we must add to prayer the practice of virtue and the fulfilment of our daily duties; but it is prayer which makes us love and practise virtue and gives us the necessary courage to face the demands of duty however formidable these may be.

And the Saint concludes with this pressing admonition: "Therefore, with all my power, I urge every one of you who read these words, and in God's name I adjure you, since our dear Jesus condescends to take His delight in being with you and speaking to you through prayer, do not deprive Him of His satisfaction, but learn by your own experience that like holy wisdom 'His conversation hath no bitterness, nor His company any tediousness, but joy and gladness' (Wisd. 8, 16). Look upon prayer as the first, the principal, most necessary, most urgent and most important business of your life, and as far as possible, free yourself from all less necessary duties, to give as much time as you can to prayer . . ." ## II. MENTAL PRAYER

Mental prayer is inward prayer which consists, not in the recitation of a formula, but of interior acts in which language has a purely accidental part, as, for instance, when we make use of a formula to arouse our attention or to stimulate our devotion.

Mental prayer has always been held in high honor by devout souls in religious communities, but since the fifteenth century the custom has arisen in many institutes of devoting a fixed time every day to the regular practice of mental prayer.

St. John Eudes considered mental prayer of capital importance, and called it "the mother and nurse of true piety;" indeed, in his A Memorial of the Ecclesiastical Life he boldly declared it "as necessary for the soul of a Christian, and much more so for that of a priest and pastor, as is material bread for the body." So, too, in his Good Confessor, after showing that piety is indispensable to all who propose to hear confessions, he adds these strong words: "But what is piety? If you would be acquainted with it and possess it you must practise it. But I declare to you that so long as you do not know what true piety is, you will not be fit to hear confessions."

He is no less outspoken in The Apostolic Preacher: "It is in prayer," he says, "that God so enlightens our minds that we are able to see the importance and the beauty of Christian virtue; it is therein, too, that He takes possession of our hearts so that we may taste and love that virtue. And when we are fully persuaded of this and powerfully influenced by it, then we have a wonderful power of making it intelligible to others and of firmly impressing it in their hearts."

The truths with which God enlightens our minds, whose consideration moves us to serve and to love Him, have an incomparably greater power of inflaming our hearts than have those which we derive solely from books without having meditated and pondered upon them before God. There is almost as much difference between these two sets of truths as there is between well-cooked and well-seasoned dishes and those that are totally unprepared."

He considered that religious communities absolutely require mental prayer, and that without it they cannot survive: "Without prayer," he

INTRODUCTION

one day wrote to the superior of one of his houses, "it is impossible for a Congregation to subsist in the spirit of piety and virtue which is necessary if it is to be pleasing to God and useful to the Church." And he added: "There is little difference between making half an hour's prayer and not making it, yet nothing is more necessary for ecclesiastics, and I know of no seminary in which they do not make an hour's mental prayer." (8)

In The Kingdom of Jesus also the Saint strongly recommends pious souls to practise mental prayer. "This kind of prayer," he tells them, "is more holy, more useful and more filled with blessings than words can convey. For this reason, if God draws you to mental prayer and gives you the grace to practise it, you should indeed thank Him for this very great gift. If He has not yet given you this grace, pray that He may do so, and for your part exert all your efforts to correspond with His grace, and cultivate this holy practice. God Himself will instruct you in the ways of this prayer better than all the books and all the teachers in the world, if you cast yourself down at His feet with humility, confidence and purity of heart." (9)

111. NATURE OF MENTAL PRAYER

St. John Eudes does not dwell at any length on the nature of mental prayer, but the few lines given to the subject in The Kingdom of Jesus have a clarity and precision that leave nothing to be desired. "The first is called mental or interior prayer, in which the soul communes with God, taking as the subject of conversation one of His divine perfections, or some mystery, virtue or word of His Divine Son, whether something He accomplished in the past, or is doing now, in the order

(8). Letters and Minor Works, Letter 228.

(9). The Kingdom of Jesus, Part 1, pp. 26-27. These words show that the Saint does not attach very much importance to treatises; and rigid methods of prayer. Not that he despises them. He advises his priests to give retreatants aid beginners in the spiritual life the guidance they require for commencing the practice of prayer, and he even suggests that they should give them the sixth volume of Louis of Grenada's Memorial of the Christian Life. He also advises that beginners should be assigned subjects of prayer suited to their capabilities, and he would have them give an account of their prayer. But in spite of all this he only attaches secondary importance to these means of training. For him, as for everyone else, the true master of prayer is the Holy Spirit, and it is for Him to teach us to pray well.

of glory, grace or nature, in His Mother, His saints, His Church or in the world. You begin the conversation of prayer by applying your understanding to consider with a determined, yet unstrained, attention and effort the truths to be found in the subjects chosen, truths which can arouse the soul to love God and hate sin. Then make your heart and will produce a few fervent acts of adoration, praise, love, humility, contrition and oblation, with the resolution to avoid evil and do good, according to the prompting of the Spirit of God." (10)

With all their brevity these few lines plainly show the Saint's mind on the subject of prayer; they tell us what should be its subject and of what acts it should be composed. The author's teaching on both these points is succinct. In the first place, he would have us take as the subject of our prayer one of the divine perfections, a mystery, a virtue, or a saying of the Incarnate Word, or else consider how our Divine Master operates in His saints, in His Church, or in the natural world. He seems to exclude purely moral subjects which, instead of drawing a soul to God and His love, throw it back upon itself and plunge it into preoccupation with its own personal interests.

Nor would he have us limit ourselves in our prayers to considering in themselves the Christian virtues, the evangelical truths or the example of the saints, but he wants us always to consider them in relation to the Incarnate Word. In his eyes the Christian virtues are a participation in the virtues of Jesus, the Gospel truths are words of instruction that have fallen from His lips, and the examples left by the saints are the fruits of Christ's sanctifying action in each of them; and thus he was accustomed to consider them in his views on prayer, in perfect harmony with his teaching on devotion to the Incarnate Word and the life of Christ within us.

As for the acts that comprise prayer, these are of two kinds, springing, respectively, from the intellect and the will. It is true that, strictly speaking, prayer consists of affections of the will acting under the influence of grace; but the will is a blind faculty, and, if it is to be attached to what is good, the intellect must present that good and make the will recognize it.

We, therefore, should begin our prayer with acts of the intellect,

INTRODUCTION

"applying our understanding," as the Saint says, "to consider with a determined, yet unrestrained, attention and efforts the truths to be found in the subjects chosen . . ." (10a) Thus, we should not dwell on purely speculative truths: to do so would be to make our meditation a study, whereas it ought to be an exercise of piety.

The only truths which should engage our attention are those which can move us to love and serve God, and these we should consider with gentle and insistent attention; gentle, because prayer should be made quietly, without striving or fatigue; and insistent, because otherwise the heart will remain cold and will soon stray off to distractions.

Later on we shall see what the Saint asks us to consider in the mysteries of the Incarnate Word, but for the present we may note that he does not ask of us wise and profound considerations, but very simple and easy reflections. Prayer, in fact, is within the grasp of all devout souls; provided they know enough of the mysteries and the teaching of the Incarnate Word to be able to achieve first-rate prayer. "O Jesus, my Saviour, Thou art all lovable, infinitely lovable and infinitely worthy of love. O my God, I need no other knowledge but this. What concern have I with so many studies and ideas and considerations? It suffices me to know that my Jesus is all lovable, and that there is nothing in Him that is not worthy of being loved beyond measure. Let my mind then be satisfied with this knowledge; but may the hunger of my heart to love Him Who can never be loved enough, never be sated." (11)

There are to be found in the Saint's works, and especially in The Kingdom of Jesus, some complete meditations which are models of mental prayer, and it is obvious at a glance that their "points" are extremely simple and well within the range of all minds. This is the case, for example, with the meditations for each day of the week and on the subject of baptism. Unfortunately, for want of understanding these principles, many souls are never trained to prayer, for they try to make use of learned reflections which are beyond their capacity and have nothing in common with prayer.

The acts of the will demanded by prayer may be reduced to three. The first is an act of adoration united to acts of praise, thanksgiving,

INTRODUCTION XXX1-

reparation and . especially love. We must adore Jesus in all His mysteries , in all His virtues and works because He is our God and, therefore, always has a right to the supreme worship owed by the creature to his Creator. We must praise and glorify Him because of His infinite perfections, we must thank Him for His benefits and above all for the glory that He procures for His Heavenly Father. We must beg His pardon for our ingratitude and our sins, and lastly affirm that we love Him with our whole heart, and seek to employ all that we are and all that we have for the purpose of loving Him.

The second act is what the Saint calls oblation, which means not only the giving and consecration of self to Jesus, but also and more particularly an act by which, renouncing all power of disposing of ourselves or acting of our own accord, we surrender ourselves to Him entirely, so that He can take possession of us, eradicate everything opposed to His influence, make us sharers in His mysteries and virtues, and guide us in everything as the head guides the members that it vivifies.

It is, in short, that "adherence" so strongly recommended by Bérulle and his school. To this oblation is naturally added an invitation to Jesus Christ to take possession of our hearts and to establish therein His life and virtues. It is true that this request is already virtually included in the oblation of which we speak, but St. John Eudes almost always makes it the subject of a formal act, as for instance in his salutation to the Sacred Heart, Ave Cor Sanctissimum, (12) and in many of the prayers in The Kingdom of Jesus and in the Manual of Piety that he composed for his congregation of priests.

The last act involved in prayer is a resolution to shun evil and to do good, imitating the example of the Divine Master and putting His holy teaching into practice. This shows us that the Saint had the same view of prayer as had Father de Condren, Father Olier and all the fol- (12). In the Ave Cor Sanctissimum, a prayer written by St. John Eudes in honor of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, we find after acts of adoration, praise, thanksgiving and love, these words: "we offer Thou our heart we give it in Thee. We consecrate it to Thee. We immolate it to Thee. Receive it and possess it wholly; purify it, enlighten it, sanctify it, that Thou mayest live and reign in it now, always and forever and ever. Amen."

Cf. The Sacred Heart of Jesus (New York, 1946), p. 173.

This is that oblation or adherence which we have just explained.

lowers of Cardinal de Bérulle. (13) Prayer, as taught by this school, is but the practical application in our relations with God of the principles that sum up St. John Eudes' spiritual teaching.

The various elements of prayer unite and interact throughout its whole course; therefore, St. John Eudes sees no necessity to make our considerations and our affective acts two distinct matters. The intellect' and the will have to work together, as they do in the meditations given in The Kingdom of Jesus. Nor is it necessary to separate the various acts of the will so as to make them in the order we have just shown. They also combine and intermingle, and we may even say that in practice each of them calls up the other two, implicitly contains them and can suffice for the completion of a good prayer.

IV. MEDITATION ON THE MYSTERIES

St. John Eudes says that the mysteries of our holy religion must be "the subject of our contemplation and adoration," "the object of all our pious exercises," the "daily bread and nourishment of our spiritual life" consequently the ordinary subject-matter of our mental prayer. To help us in meditating on these mysteries the Saint points out seven elements which we have to consider and to honor in each mystery.

Of these the first is the body or external aspect of the mystery, which St. John Eudes explains as being "all its outward manifestations. For (13). To grasp his concept of prayer, we must bear in mind the fact that St. John Eudes belongs in the Seventeenth-Century French School of Spirituality, also called "the Berullian School" from the name of its founder and most illustrious member, Cardinal Pierre de Bérulle, who in 1611 organized the French Congregation of the Oratory on the model of the one founded some years before by St. Philip Néri at Rome. In 1623, St. John Eudes entered the Oratory and received his spiritual training from Bérulle himself and from his saintly successor, Father Charles de Condren. These two holy men concentrated their devotion on Jesus Christ, the Incarnate Word, and on His most holy Mother; they looked upon the Christian life as a continuation and an extension of the life of Christ in each one of us; they stressed the virtue of religion and the supreme worship of adoration that we owe to God in union with His Divine Son. These ideas, so clear to de Bérulle and de Condren, constitute the basis of the spiritual teaching of St. John Eudes to be sure, he sets them forth in his way; nevertheless, they are the essence of his spiritual doctrine. Other distinguished disciples of de Bérulle were Bossuet, St. Vincent de Paul and Father Jean Jacques Olier. In 1643, St. John Eudes left the Oratory to found the Congregation of Jesus and Mary for the training of priests and the preaching of missions. cf. The Spiritual Teaching of St. John Eudes (London, 1934) PP. 49 ff.

instance, the visible exterior elements in the mystery of the birth of Jesus are the nakedness, poverty, cold and weakness of the newborn Infant, the little swaddling bands in which He was wrapped, His cradle in the crib and on the straw between the ox and the ass, His tears and baby cries, the tiny movements of His sacred feet and hands, the first gaze of His baby eyes, His slumber in the arms of His Blessed Mother, the nourishment He took from her most holy breasts, the sweet kisses He received from her and from St. Joseph, the visit of the shepherds, and all the other touching incidents that took place outwardly in the stable of Bethlehem, on the night of the birth of the Son of God." (14)

Saint John Eudes then adds, "Every detail deserves your consideration and honor, because there is nothing unimportant in the mysteries of Jesus, but, rather, each aspect is great, divine and worthy of adoration. If the Son of God, therefore, takes the trouble to concentrate His divine Spirit and Heart (which ought not, it seems, to be concerned about anything other than divinity itself), on the consideration of every step you take, even numbering the hairs of your head, as He Himself asserts, and writing and treasuring in His Heart the slightest actions you perform for Him, so that He may do honor and glorify them for all eternity in heaven, how much more should you centre your mind and heart on the consideration, adoration and glorification of the smallest details of the infinite mysteries of His life, seeing that there is not one thing about them which is not infinitely great and admirable, and deserving of infinite honor and adoration !" (15)

The second feature to be considered in each mystery is, in St. John Eudes' words, "the interior spirit of the mystery, that is, the particular virtue, power and grace which inhere in the mystery and are peculiar to III since each mystery has its own proper virtue and spirit of grace. This includes the thoughts and intentions, the affections, sentiments, dispositions and interior activity accomplishing the mystery. In a word, it includes all that took place inwardly in the mind, Heart and holy soul of Christ, and in the minds and hearts of all those who participated directly in the mystery." (16)

INTRODUCTION

"This spiritual aspect," the Saint proceeds, "ought to engage your principal attention and honor in the mysteries of the life of Our Lord; yet it actually receives the least attention and honor. Many Christians are satisfied to contemplate the body and the externals, without passing on to the inward features of these tremendous mysteries. Yet it is the spirit and the core that are most important, constituting the foundation, the substance, life and truth of the mystery, whereas the exterior is no more than a covering, an accessory, and the accidental being of the mystery. The exterior and body are passing and temporal, but the interior virtue and spirit of grace which dwell in each mystery are permanent and eternal." (17)

The third element to be honored in Our Lord's mysteries comprises the effects He has produced and still continually produces by each of them.

The fourth comprises the particular designs entertained by Jesus in each of His mysteries.

The fifth is the share and the special part taken by the Blessed Virgin in each mystery.

The sixth feature to consider in His mysteries is the part played by the angels and saints particularly connected with each mystery.

Lastly, the seventh matter to be considered and revered is our own participation in these mysteries. "You have a very particular part in each mystery of the Son of God, inasmuch as He had some thought, some plan, some special love for each one of you, and the design to impart to you special graces and special favors, both on earth and in heaven by every mystery of His perfect life." (18)

Obviously St. John Eudes does not attempt to persuade us to include all these considerations in our meditations. Every person is free to choose those which most attract him or correspond to his particular needs, and to concentrate his thoughts and his love on these. In due proportion, these principles apply equally to other possible subjects of prayer, especially to the mysteries of the Blessed Virgin, the Christian virtues, and the teachings of our Divine Master.

V. HOW TO BEGIN AND END MEDITATION

In his Manual of Piety, St. John Eudes indicates four ways to begin and end the regular exercise of morning prayer. Fundamentally they are similar, but their difference purposely preserves us from the monotony which accompanies the constant repetition of any formula and diminishes its efficacy. The study of the first method will be sufficient for us.

The Saint wishes us to commence our prayer by four preliminary acts:

The first is an act of adoration. "Let us adore God," he says, "and humiliate ourselves deeply before Him, recognizing the fact that we are infinitely unworthy of appearing before His face and of thinking of Him, and that we do not deserve that He think of us, nor that He suffer us in His presence." The greater number of spiritual authors invite us to place ourselves in the presence of God while beginning our prayer. The act of adoration recommended by St. John Eudes presupposes and implies this Divine presence. It is impossible to adore God and to humiliate ourselves before God without feeling that we are in His presence.

The Saint does not ask that we place ourselves by a formal act in the presence of God, because he desires the prayer to be said before the Blessed Sacrament and also because the Three Divine Persons of the Blessed Trinity are present everywhere and reside in a special way in the soul of a Christian who is in the state of grace,

The second preparatory act for prayer is an act of purity of intention or of pure love. "Let us humble our spirit and self-love at the feet of our Lord," the Saint tells us, "renouncing all curiosity of mind and all self-satisfaction, confessing to Him that we wish to do this action, by means of His grace, for His pure love and for His sole contentment."

Prayer is an act of faith and of love; therefore we must try to seek first the glory of God and then personal advantage. The Saint puts us on our guard against speculations in which the mind is merely pleased with itself, and against devotion which simply delights the heart. To seek and enjoy these emotions would be to forget that prayer is fundamentally a religious act designed to render to God His due homage of adoration, praise and love, and there is no prayer-value in extravagant speculations nor the pleasantness of sensible devotions. St. John Eudes invites us to renounce them and to resign ourselves in advance to dryness and aridity which, instead of vitiating prayer, renders it more excellent, particularly when the dryness and aridity are involuntary.

xxxvi-

The third preparatory act for prayer consists in our surrender to Jesus and His divine spirit. "Let us give our mind and heart to Our Lord, begging Him that He possess them and that He lead them into prayer according to His Holy Will." This act is called the adherence. It is required for every act of Christian life, since the Christian life is the life of Jesus in us, since it emanates from Him, and since we can do nothing without Him. We are like the branches which can produce neither leaves nor fruit without the sap which comes from the trunk of the tree. Here, as always, St. John Eudes invites us to join to the act of oblation and adherence an act of request which follows in the natural sequence.

In The Kingdom of Jesus the Saint strongly emphasizes this act of oblation to Jesus: "Finally, to make all the other holy dispositions complete, at the beginning of your prayer, fervently give your mind and heart to Jesus and to His divine spirit, praying Him to inspire in your heart such thoughts and affections as He may desire. Abandon yourself entirely to His holy guidance, that He may guide you as He pleases in this divine activity. Trust in His great goodness to lead you in the most fitting manner, and to give you all that you shall ask . . ." (19)

Finally, remembering that we are the members of the mystical body of Jesus Christ, and that we are completely with Him, with His holy Mother and all the saints, Saint John Eudes invites us to unite our prayer to that of Jesus and to all those who pray with Him on earth and in heaven. "Let us give ourselves to our Lord, Jesus Christ," he says, "in order to enter into the holy dispositions of His continual prayer before His Eternal Father, and to unite ourselves with the prayer now being said by His holy Mother, by St. Joseph, by St. Gabriel, and by our good angels."

(19).Ibid, P. 32.

XXXV11-

These preparatory acts are simply the fundamental application of the theory of the Seventeenth-Century School of Spirituality. They find their application everywhere, in the preparation for prayer as well as in the prayer itself.(20)

In finishing the prayer four things should be done.

The first is to give thanks to God and to ask His pardon. "Let us thank God," says St. John Eudes, "for the graces that He gave us in this prayer, let us ask pardon for the faults we have committed during it, and let us beg Our Lord Jesus Christ to amend them and that He Himself be our perpetual prayer before His Father."

Then comes an invitation to make what St. Francis de Sales calls "the spiritual bouquet or nosegay," but St. John Eudes never uses the expression. He prefers to call it an "ejaculatory prayer." "Let us make," he says, "a selection of the principal resolutions and suggestions that God has given us in daily prayer, and as an ejaculatory prayer we shall say: . . . . ."

In the Congregation of Jesus and Mary founded by him, St. John Eudes requested that the ejaculatory prayer be recalled not only at the end of all the community prayers, but also after the Litany of the Blessed Virgin recited in the evening. The Saint desired that his children remain the whole day under the influence of their morning prayer.

In the third place, the Saint invites us to rely entirely on the assistance of Our Lord and His holy Mother for carrying out our resolutions. "Let us guard well," he said, "against depending on our own thoughts and resolutions, but rely on the pure mercy which our Divine Saviour imparts to us in prayer, begging Him to give us the grace to practise them. Let us also place ourselves with this same intention in the hands of the Blessed Virgin."

After that we must beg the angels and saints to continue our prayers. "Let us pray," said St. John Eudes, "to the Blessed Virgin, St. Joseph, St. Gabriel, our guardian angels, to all the angels to help us to overcome our faults, to help us continue our prayer for ourselves and to join our prayers with their unceasing chorus of praise and prayer before the face of God."

INTRODUCTION

verbal prayers usually conclude with the expression of sentiments similar to those which we have just indicated, and have as their object to obtain from Our Lord, from His holy Mother, from the angels and from the saints, the grace to spend the day in a spirit of prayer.

CONCLUSION

Such is the idea of prayer given by St. John Eudes, and his understanding of its practice. We have already mentioned that his views on this point are those of the followers of the Seventeenth-Century French School of Spirituality for whom prayer is paramountly adoration and love and is deeply theocentric. It is, in addition, a way of increasing the life of Jesus in us, and that is why the offering of ourselves to the Incarnate Word occupies an important place in it. But, as participation in the life of Jesus demands upon our part the comprehending of His feelings and virtues, so it requires the resolutions which assure its efficacy.

We might add that prayer, as the followers of Cardinal deBérulle understand it, leaves little room for the imagination or for human reasoning. It is based entirely upon the principles of faith, such as those furnished us by Holy Scripture; it does not contain anything arbitrary or factitious, and it demands of the intelligence only that it seeks to fathom the truths of Scripture in order that the heart, in its turn, find in them an increase of generosity and love.

We need not try to find out how this concept of prayer agrees with that of Louis of Grenada, of St. Ignatius, and of St. Francis de Sales. There are fewer differences than at first appears to be the case, because they are all only various applications of the Catholic doctrine.

PRAYERS BEFORE AND AFTER MEDITATION (1)

To prepare your soul for meditation, recite the following vocal prayers:

Come, O Holy Ghost, fill the hearts of Thy faithful and enkindle in them the fire of Thy love.

V. Send forth Thy Spirit, and they shall be created.

R. And Thou shalt renew the face of the earth.

LET US PRAY, O God, Who by the light of the Holy Spirit didst instruct the hearts of the faithful, grant us by the same Holy Spirit a love and relish of what is right and just, and a constant enjoyment of His consolations. Through Christ our Lord. Amen.

Our Father. Hail Mary. I Believe in God.

Hail, Heart most holy.	We revere Thee.
Hail, Heart most meek.	We praise Thee.
Hail, Heart most humble.	We glorify Thee.
Hail, Heart most pure.	We give Thee thanks.
Hail, Heart most devout.	We love Thee,
Hail, Heart most wise.	With all our heart,
Hail, Heart most patient.	With all our soul,
Hail, Heart most obedient.	And with all our strength.
Hail, Heart most vigilant.	We offer Thee our heart.
Hail, Heart most faithful.	We give it to Thee.
Hail, Heart most blessed.	We consecrate it to Thee.
Hail, Heart most merciful.	We immolate it to Thee.
Hail, most loving Heart of Jesus	Receive it and possess it wholly;
and Mary.	Purify it, enlighten it, sanctify it,
	That Thou mayest live and reign
	in it now, always and forever
	and ever. Amen.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

O Angel of God, my guardian, enlighten and protect, direct and govern me.

All hail, ye Angels and Saints of the heavenly courts. Deign to intercede for our salvation and for the salvation of the world.

Select one of the methods to be used before meditation and read it, pausing after each paragraph to make the acts suggested.

FIRST METHOD(2)*ACTS BEFORE MEDITATION*I

Let us adore God and humble ourselves profoundly before Him, acknowledging that we are infinitely unworthy to appear before His face or think about His divine Majesty; and that we do not deserve to be thought of by Him or admitted into His presence.

II

Let us annihilate our self-love and our pride at the Saviour's feet renouncing all intellectual curiosity and self-satisfaction, and assuring our Lord that we wish to perform this action, with the help of His grace, for the sake of His pure love and His sole satisfaction.

III

Let us give our minds and hearts to our Divine Lord, supplicating Him to take complete possession of them and guide them in this prayer, according to His holy will.

IV

Let us give ourselves to Our Lord Jesus Christ, that we may enter into the holy dispositions of His continual prayer before His Heavenly Father, and that we may also join in the prayer now being offered by all the holy souls in heaven and on earth, particularly by His Blessed Mother, Saint Joseph, Saint Gabriel and our guardian angels.

(2). To prevent routine in this most important art of the Spiritual life, St. John Eudes gives four methods or ways of beginning and ending meditation. cf. "Introduction," p. xxxv.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECT*ACTS AFTER MEDITATION

At the end of meditation, read the following paragraphs, pausing after each to make the acts.

Let us thank God for the inestimable graces He has given us and ask His divine pardon for the faults committed in the course of our prayer; let us implore our Lord Jesus Christ to make amends for them and to be Himself our perpetual prayer before His Father.

1 1

Let us consider the principal inspirations and resolutions which God has given us in the prayer, that we may recall them throughout the day; and as an ejaculatory prayer, let us say:

Here recall a brief and appealing invocation to God or the saints, taken from Sacred Scripture or the Divine Office, or from one of the Fathers, to serve as an ejaculatory prayer during the day.

III

Let us take care not to rely solely on our own thoughts and resolutions, but rather on the infinite mercy of God; let us place at Our Lord's disposal whatever blessing He has imparted to us in the prayer, supplicating Him to preserve it and grant us the grace to practise it. Let us also place the same intention in the hands of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

IV

Let us implore the Blessed Virgin, Saint Joseph, Saint Gabriel, our guardian angels and all the angels and saints, to make up our deficiencies, continue our prayer for us and admit us as partners in the prayer which they offer perpetually in God's presence.

V

Let each one make an examination of conscience in order to foresee customary faults and possible occasions of sin; let him likewise review

SECOND METHOD

ACTS BEFORE MEDITATION

I

Let us adore God, humble ourselves before Him and give Him our minds and hearts with the desire to perform this act well, for love of Him alone.

1 1

Let us make an act of self-renunciation, surrendering ourselves to Our Lord Jesus Christ, that we may offer our prayer in His loving Spirit.

Let us pray to the Most Holy Virgin, the angels and saints for assistance to help us to perform this action worthily.

ACTS AFTER MEDITATION

I

Let us thank God for the graces He has given us and ask pardon for our omissions.

1 1

Let us make a selection of the inspiring thoughts and sentiments God has given us; and as an ejaculatory prayer, let us say:

Here recall a brief and appealing invocation to God or the saints, taken from Sacred Scripture or the Divine Office, or from one of the Fathers, to serve as an ejaculatory prayer during the day.

THIRD METHOD

ACTS BEFORE MEDITATION

Let each one yield himself to the spirit of God, that he may cultivate the dispositions necessary to prepare his soul for the prayer; and that he may say, to that end, in his heart and with all his heart, what I am about to say.

I

O my God, prostrate at the feet of Thy infinite grandeur and engulfed in the abyss of my nothingness, I adore Thee as my Creator and the universal Lord of all things, acknowledging that I am infinitely unworthy to appear before Thy face and even to think of Thee. I do not deserve that Thou shouldst think of me nor suffer me to come within Thy presence. I ask pardon of Thee, my God, for all the sins which have rendered me so unworthy of Thee.

1 1

O my God, at Thy feet I place my self-love and my pride; deign to annihilate them. I desire to perform this prayer as well as possible, with the help of Thy holy grace, for Thy greater glory and my salvation.

1 1 1

My Divine Jesus, I give Thee my mind and my heart. I implore Thee to take possession of them and guide them throughout this prayer according to Thy holy will.

IV

O Jesus, in complete self-renunciation I give myself to Thee with all my heart, that I may enter into Thy spirit of prayer, uniting myself

O Mother of Jesus, O blessed Saint Joseph, O blessed Saint Gabriel, O my holy guardian angel, all ye angels and saints of Jesus, implore my God to give me the true spirit of prayer, and grant me fellowship in the unceasing prayer which you offer before the throne of His divine Majesty.

ACTS AFTER MEDITATION

Let each one give himself to the spirit of God, that he may finish his meditation in the dispositions suggested by the following words which everyone should repeat in his heart.

I

O my God, I thank Thee for the graces Thou hast given me in my prayer, and I ask pardon of Thee for the faults I have committed therein. I implore Thee, O my Jesus, to make reparation for them in my name and to be Thyself my perpetual prayer before Thy Father.

1 1

O my Saviour, I trust entirely in Thy boundless mercy, not in my weak and feeble self, nor in my resolutions. In Thy Heart and Thy hands I place the salutary thoughts and inspirations Thou hast given me in this prayer; deign to preserve them and grant me the grace to bring them to fruition. To that end, O Mother of my Jesus, I place them also in thy tender heard

FOURTH METHOD

ACTS BEFORE MEDITATION

After the Veni, Sancte Spiritus, read the following words and then pause for the length of a Miserere to make the acts.

Let each one give himself to the spirit of God, that he may enter into the dispositions customary for beginning the prayer, that is, to adore God, to humble ourselves before Him, to renounce self, to consecrate our being to Our Lord's spirit of prayer, and to invoke the Blessed Virgin, the angels and saints.

ACTS AFTER MEDITATION

At the end of meditation, read the following words and then pause about the length of a Miserere.

Let each one finish the prayer in the usual way, that is, by thanking God, imploring His forgiveness, reviewing the principal thoughts and inclinations He has given us, placing them in the hands of Our Lord and His Holy Mother; by invoking the Blessed Virgin, the angels and saints, and by making the recommended spiritual preview of the day.

Conclude your meditation with the following vocal prayers:

We fly to thy patronage, O Holy Mother of God; despise not our petitions in our necessities, but deliver us from all dangers, O glorious and blessed Virgin. -

*Lord Jesus Christ, we are nothing, .
We can do nothing,

THE LIFE OF JESUS IN THE Bosom OF His FATHER
Is FILLED with GLORY AND DELIGHT

O JESUS, my Lord and my God, I contemplate, adore and glorify Thee in Thy divine life from all eternity in the bosom of the Eternal Father, before Thine Incarnation in the virginal womb of Thy Mother. What a holy life! How pure, divine, wonderful and filled with glory, greatness and delights! What joy to see Thee living, from all eternity, a life so filled with perfection, contentment and wonders! Blessed be Thou, O Father of Jesus, for having imparted such a life to Thy Wellbeloved Soul O Jesus, I offer Thee all the glory, love and praise Thou dost derive from the Father and the Holy Spirit throughout the eternity of Thy divine life.

SECOND POINT

THE CHIEF FUNCTION OF JESUS From ALL ETERNITY IS To CONTEMPLATE AND LOVE His FATHER

O Jesus, when I consider Thy divine and eternal life, I see that Thy chief function for all eternity is to contemplate, glorify and love Thy Father, to refer Thyself to Him as to Thy principle, to give Him Thy being, Thy life, Thy perfections and all that Thou shalt be forever, as gifts received from Him, to be employed in glorifying and loving Him, and to offer Him infinitely worthy praise and love. Blessed be Thou, O Jesus, for all these things. O Most Amiable Father, how I rejoice to behold Thee so loved and glorified by Thy Son! I offer Thee all love and glory that Thou dost receive from Him during all eternity, by His divine life in Thy fatherly bosom before His Incarnation.

THIRD POINT

From ALL ETERNITY JESUS THINKS OF ME AND LOVES ME

O Good Jesus, Thou hast expended all Thy divine life for my benefit. From all eternity Thou dost think of me, love me and offer me to the Father, and Thou dost offer Thyself also to Him, to come one day upon earth to be made flesh, to suffer and die on earth for love of me. O Dearest Jesus, Thou hast loved me from all eternity, and I hardly know if I have yet begun to love Thee as I ought. Forgive me, my Saviour. From now on, and for all eternity, let me live but to love Thee!

"I have loved Thee with an everlasting love."

Monday

The Incarnation

FIRST POINT

JESUS SHOWS HIS LOVE; FOR HIS FATHER
IN HIS INCARNATION

O JESUS, I adore Thee at the moment of Thy Incarnation, which is the first instant of Thy mortal life. I adore all the marvelous things that took place in Thee at that moment. What great accomplishments were effected in Thee and by Thee, in that blessed instant, in the eyes of the Father, the Holy Spirit, Thy sacred humanity, and Thy Blessed Mother! What thoughts, what affections, what love! How Thy holy soul in that instant devoted itself, before Thy Father's face~ to adore and glorify Him and sacrifice Thee entirely to His glory, and to accomplish all that He willed!

O Good Jesus, I adore Thy first thoughts and Thy first acts of adoration, oblation, love and praise, which Thou didst offer to Thy Father at that time. How exalted and divine were the love and glory Thou gavest Him then! Truly Thou didst give Him infinitely more honor and love in that moment alone than all the angels and all men accorded Him in the five thousand years that preceded Thine Incarnation, or ever shall give Him for all eternity. O Father of Jesus, what satisfaction for my soul to behold Thee so loved and glorified by Thy Soul O Jesus, be Thou blessed, adored and glorified forever for the honor and love Thou didst give to Thy Father at the blessed moment of Thine Incarnation!

SECOND POINT

JESUS SHOWS His LOVE FOR MARY IN His INCARNATION

O Jesus, when I consider Thee in this mystery, I see by the light of faith that Thou dost entertain most exalted thoughts and great designs upon her in whom the Incarnation was accomplished, and that Thou dost indeed effect great and marvelous works in her. O Jesus, I adore the first thoughts, the first acts of love and movements of grace, of light and of eminent sanctity which Thou didst produce in Thy Blessed Mother at the moment of Thine Incarnation. So, too, do I adore the first acts of adoration, praise and love of the most admirable Mother for the Most Adorable Son. Blessed be Thou, O Jesus, Son of Mary, for all the wonders Thou didst work in Thy divine Mother by this stupendous mystery! Blessed be thou, O Mother of Jesus, for all the glory thou hast given thy Son in this same mystery! Unite me, I implore thee, to all the love and honor thou didst give thy Dear Son in the first instant of His life, and grant that I may share in thy peerless love for Him and in thy zeal for His glory.

THIRD POINT

JESUS SHOWS His LOVE FOR ME IN His INCARNATION

O Most Amiable Jesus, at the same instant that Thou didst look up to the Father, after the Incarnation, Thou didst also look upon me. Thou didst begin to think of Him, refer Thyself to Him and love Him and Thou didst likewise begin to think of me, to give Thyself to me and love me. At the very instant Thou didst begin to live, it was to live for me, to prepare and acquire for me most extraordinary graces, and to form plans for my salvation. From that very moment Thou didst plan and desire to create in me an image of the mystery of the Incarnation and to become incarnate in me, that is, to unite me to Thyself, and Thyself most intimately to me, both physically and spiritually by Thy holy grace and Thy divine sacraments, and then to fill me with Never allow me to impede Thy grace again. From now on I desire to annihilate, at all costs, everything in me that opposes Thy holy will. My Jesus, may it please Thee to grant me the grace and strength to do this.

FIRST POINT

JESUS BECAME A LITTLE CHILD To SANCTIFY HUMAN CHILDHOOD

O GREAT and Admirable Jesus, Thou wast not satisfied to become man for love of men, but Thou didst also will to become a child, subject to all the lowliness and weakness of infancy, in order to honor the Eternal Father in every condition of human life, and to sanctify all the states of our life. Blessed be Thou, Good Jesus, for these favors! May all Thy angels and saints bless Thee eternally! O most amiable Child, I offer Thee my own childhood, although it is past, imploring Thee most humbly that, by virtue of Thy divine Childhood, Thou mayest wipe out all that was bad or imperfect and cause my whole life as a child to render homage to Thy most adorable Childhood.

SECOND POINT

JESUS LOVED His FATHER AND His MOTHER DURING His CHILDHOOD

O Divine Jesus, when I contemplate Thee in Thy holy Childhood, I see that Thou art never idle, but dost effect great things for Thy Eternal Father, contemplating, adoring and loving Him, and also for Thy Blessed Mother, heaping upon her a world of graces and blessings, also for St. Joseph, and little St. John the Baptist and the other saints with whom Thou didst associate as a child, accomplishing in them most wonderful works of illumination and sanctity. and bless Thee in all Thy divine occupations and in the marvelous effects of Thy divine Childhood. I offer Thee all the honor and love Thou didst receive in Thy holy Childhood from Thy Father, Thy Blessed Mother, St. Joseph, St. John the Baptist, St. Gabriel, and from the other angels and saints who are in any special way associated with Thy divine Childhood.

THIRD POINT

JESUS LOVED ME DURING HIS CHILDHOOD

O most amiable Child, I adore all Thy thoughts and designs and Thy most burning love for me. Thou wast thinking of me, and didst love me without interruption in Thy Childhood. Thou didst cherish the plan and the strong desire to imprint upon my heart an image of Thy divine Childhood, that is, to make me enter upon a state of holy and sacred childhood, which should imitate and honor the meekness, simplicity, humility, purity of body and spirit, the obedience and innocence of Thy holy Childhood. O my Jesus, I give myself to Thee to accomplish Thy plan and desire and to enter into this state. I shall henceforth strive, with the help of Thy holy grace, which I invoke with my whole heart, to become meek, humble, simple, pure, obedient, free of all arrogance, bitterness and malice, like a child, so that I may render some small honor to Thy Childhood which so deserves to be honored.

FOURTH MEDITATION

Wednesday

The Hidden and Laborious Life of Jesus

FIRST POINT

DURING His HIDDEN LIFE, JESUS TEACHES US TO LOVE RECOLLECTION AND SOLITUDE

O JESUS, although Thou didst have so many and such great acts to perform on earth, converting so many souls, working so many miracles, doing so much good by Thy blessed example and holy preaching, if Thou hadst gone out among men, yet Thou didst not will to do this until the age of thirty, performing in the meantime no outward act that might make Thee known to men. Thou didst remain hidden and withdrawn into the Father, in Whom Thy mind, heart, thoughts, desires and affections were uninterruptedly enclosed. Thou didst choose this secluded life to honor Thy hidden life from all eternity in the bosom of Thy Father, and to teach us that solitude and recollection are pleasing to Thee. Of the thirty-four years of Thy life upon earth, no more than four were spent in active intercourse among men, while thirty were spent in seclusion and solitude. Blessed be Thou, O Good Jesus, for all the glory Thou didst give Thy Father during these thirty years of Thy hidden life! Grant that I in their honor may henceforth love recollection and solitude, both interior and exterior. Draw me apart and hide me in Thee. Absorb my mind into Thine, my heart into Thy Heart and my life into Thy life. I desire henceforth, with the help of Thy grace, to make every effort to withdraw my thoughts and affections from all things into Thee, O my Jesus, as into my place of refuge, my centre, my element and my paradise, outside of which all else is hell and perdition. I wish to dwell ever in Thee, following Thy commandment: "Abide in me" (John 15, 4), that is, in Thy Spirit, Thy love, Thy sentiments and inclinations, never to leave Thee again.

SECOND POINT

JESUS IN His LIFE OF LABOR TEACHES US HUMILITY

O Most Great and Most Adorable Jesus, Thou didst will to lead an unknown and despised life, a life lowly and abject in the eyes of men, a life of poverty, labor and suffering, hearing the name and following the trade of carpenter, to teach us first by example what Thou didst later teach us by words, namely, that "what is high to men is an abomination before God;" quod hominibus altum est, abominatio est ante Deum (Luke 16, 15). O Jesus, imprint this truth deeply in my mind and firmly implant in my heart a great hatred and horror of an fame, praise, greatness and vanity, and for all that catches and dazzles the eyes of men, giving me a very strong love for all that involves lowliness, abjection and humiliation.

THIRD POINT

JESUS IN His HIDDEN LIFE RENDERS INFINITE GLORY To His HEAVENLY FATHER

O Jesus, Thou art God, even as Thy Heavenly Father and Thou art but One God with Him; Thou dost share one power and operation, and with Him Thou art the Creator, Preserver and Governor of our vast universe. From all eternity Thou dost send forth with Him a Divine Person, that is, the Holy Ghost, who is God even as the Father and Thou. This and other exalted marvels worthy of Thy supreme greatness, Thou dost accomplish. Yet in Thy hidden life of labor on earth, I see that Thou dost lower Thyself to the commonest and most lowly actions of human life, such as eating, drinking, sleeping, working, earning Thy living with the toil of Thy hands and in the sweat of Thy brow. I am filled with wonder and consolation because Thou art no less great and admirable in small things than in great. In these lowly commonplace activities Thou didst tender infinitely great glory to the Omnipotent Father because, O Jesus, Thou didst perform all actions, even the smallest and most ordinary, not with common or ordinary dispositions, but with an infinite love for the Father and for us. Thou didst merit and acquire, by the power of Thy holy actions, a special grace for all our acts, to enable us to perform them meritoriously. Hence we can and must do everything devoutly; otherwise we nullify and waste the graces Thou hast acquired for us in the performance of similar actions. Do not allow this to happen, O Good Jesus! Give me the grace Thou hast acquired for me by Thy holy actions, so that I may perform all my own acts with holiness. This is my desire and my resolve. Grant me grace to fulfil it purely for Thy glory, that in future I may offer up all my acts, even the smallest, in honor of Thine and that I may, as far as possible, perform my tasks with the dispositions and intentions that exalted the lowliness of all Thy most humble-, human deeds.

FIFTH MEDITATION

Thursday

The Public Life of Jesus and His Life in the Blessed Eucharist

FIRST POINT

THERE ARE FIVE POTENT REASONS WHY JESUS LIVED His PUBLIC LIFE

O MOST Amiable Jesus, Thou dost live, reign and commune for all eternity with the Eternal Father and the Holy Spirit. How rich is this association and how delightful to Thee! What glory and praise Thou dost receive from the Father and Holy Spirit Yet Thou didst will to come forth from the bosom of the Father to appear on earth, to associate, eat and drink in familiar visible companionship, not only with Thy Blessed Mother, St. Joseph and the holy apostles and disciples, but even with sinners, from whom Thou didst sustain all kinds of outrages and indignities. Thou didst will to do this: first, to give homage to Thy divine and holy association with the Father and the Holy Spirit from all eternity by association with Thy Blessed Mother, St. Joseph, the holy apostles and the disciples; secondly, to deliver us from the punishment, so rightly deserved by our sins, of being reduced forever to the wretched company of demons, and to make us worthy to dwell eternally in the company of the angels and saints, Thy Blessed Mother, and the Three Divine Persons; thirdly, to show us the vital truth of Thy words, "My delights were to be with the children of men" (Prov. 8, 31); fourthly, to acquire for us, by the merit of Thy active life, the grace we need to behave virtuously in our relations with one another; fifthly, in order that the perfection of Thy holy and divine conduct in Thy relations with other men might serve as a model and example of the way we should act towards our neighbor.

DISPOSITIONS WHICH CHARACTERIZED THE PUBLIC LIFE OF JESUS

I adore Thee, O Jesus, I bless Thee and love Thee for all these favors. I adore Thee in Thy public life and active ministry, which lasted from Thy thirtieth year to the day of Thy death. I adore and give Thee glory for everything in this period of Thy life, inward and outward, that is, all the actions, words, teachings, miracles, journeys, labors and weariness, and for all Thy thoughts, feelings, intentions, affections and inner dispositions. I bless Thee for all the glory Thou didst render to the Eternal Father. I offer Thee all the love and honor accorded during the time of Thine active life by all the holy souls who came in contact with Thee. I also offer Thee all my own associations and contacts, whether past or future, in homage to Thine own, and I implore Thee to cause all my actions relating to my neighbor to be consecrated to the glory of Thy public life.

O Jesus, I adore the thoroughly holy and divine dispositions which characterized Thy activity among men. With what dignity, charity, meekness, patience, modesty, detachment from creatures and attention to God didst Thou move and act in the world of men! O my Saviour, I desire that such dispositions may henceforth characterize all my relations with my neighbor. Alas! How far I am from such perfection and how many faults I have committed in the days gone by! For all these I beg Thy forgiveness, imploring Thee to implant in me all the dispositions I have requested.

THIRD POINT

JESUS STILL LIVES WITH US IN THE BLESSED EUCHARIST

O Lord, Thou wast not satisfied to live and associate with mankind during Thy mortal life. When Thou wast on the point of returning to heaven, Thy most insatiable love and exceeding great desire to prove the tremendous truth that Thy delight is to be with the children of men inspired Thee to devise a most admirable institution that would keep Thee ever with us, and give Thyself to us with all the essence of Thy riches and wonders. All this was accomplished by means of the Holy Eucharist, which is a compendium of all Thy wonders and the greatest of all the effects produced by Thy love for us. O love! O goodness! How is it that I am not utterly transformed into love and praise for Thee? O Jesus, forgive me my past abuse of so great a grace; grant that in the future I may make better use of this Divine Sacrament and that, as Thou dost find Thy delight in being with me, I may also find all my delight in Thy company, in thinking of Thee, in loving and glorifying Thee.

SIXTH MEDITATION

Friday

The Passion and Death of Jesus

FIRST POINT

JESUS PRACTISES SUBMISSION AND PATIENCE THROUGHOUT His PASSION

O JESUS, Thou art the love and the delight of God and the angels, of heaven and earth. Thou art the God of consolation, the source of all joy and bliss, joy and blessedness itself. Yet, when I behold Thee on the final day of Thy mortal life, I see that Thou art the object of the wrath and persecution of heaven, earth, hell, of God, men and all creatures. I see the universe and the powers of evil leagued against Thee, expending all their energies to make Thee suffer. Thou art, as it were, a target exposed to every volley of contradiction and outrage. I behold Thee so filled with sorrow, anguish and torments in every part of Thy body and soul, that Thou dost seem to be transformed into pain and sufferings. Hence the Prophet Isaias calls Thee "the man of sorrows." Virum dolorum (Isa. 53, 3)- O my Dearest Jesus, what has reduced Thee to so pitiable a state? It is Thy goodness, my Saviour, and the excess of Thy love. O my Sweet Jesus, let me adore, love and bless Thee in all Thy sufferings, both interior and exterior; let me adore in Thee the holy and divine dispositions of Thy suffering. With what submission to Thy Father's will, with what deep humiliation under the burden of all the sins of the world, with what charity for us, with what meekness and patience towards Thine enemies Thou didst endure the culmination of all sufferings! How ashamed I am to behold my Jesus suffering so extremely, with such dispositions, while I see how sensitive I am to the slightest pain, and so far from sharing His dispositions! O Good Jesus, I give myself to Thee to suffer all Thou dost will and

I offer Thee all that I have suffered and am yet to suffer in my whole life. May it please Thee to unite my works and trials with Thine; bless them through Thine; use them as Thine own, to glorify the Father and to honor Thy holy Passion. Grant that I may share in the love, humility and other dispositions with which Thou didst suffer!

SECOND POINT

JESUS MANIFESTS His LOVE OF THE ETERNAL FATHER DURING HIS PASSION

O Most Amiable Jesus, Thou didst bear the torments of the Cross and of death with so much love for the Father and for us that the Holy Spirit speaks of the day of Thy Passion as "the day of Thy Heart's joy" (Cant. 3, it), to show that Thou didst find joy and satisfaction in suffering. O my Saviour, let me also find my joy and all my happiness in this world in trials and labors, in contempt and sufferings, if by them I can give Thee greater glory and love. Implant these dispositions in my soul, and imprint upon my heart intense hatred for the delights and pleasures of this earth, and a particular affection for hard work and suffering.

THIRD POINT

THE DEATH OF JESUS IS AN OBJECT OF LOVE AND A MODEL FOR US

O Jesus, I contemplate and adore Thee agonizing and dying on the Cross. I adore Thy last thoughts, words, actions and sufferings, the last use of Thy bodily senses and of the faculties of Thy soul, the last graces Thou didst infuse into the soul of Thy Blessed Mother and the other watchers, who remained at the foot of the Cross; Thy last acts of adoration and love for the Heavenly Father; the last sentiments and dispositions of Thy Heart and Soul and the last breath that yielded up Thy life. I offer Thee the last moment of my life together with my death, in honor of Thy holy death and the consummation of Thy life. Bless my death, O Jesus, my Saviour, and sanctify it by Thine own; unite it to Thine; grant that I may share the holy and divine dis

SEVENTH MEDITATION

Saturday

The Life of Jesus in Mary and of Mary in Jesus

FIRST POINT
JESUS LIVES IN MARY

O JESUS, Thou only Son of God, only Son of Mary, I contemplate and adore Thee, the Divine Author of her existence, living and reigning in Thy most holy Mother. Thou art all and dost all in all things, so surely Thou art and dost all in Thy most holy Mother. Thou art her life, her soul, her heart, her spirit, her riches. Thou art in her, sanctifying her on earth and glorifying her in heaven. Thou art in her, accomplishing greater works and giving to Thyself, in and by her, greater glory than through all the other creatures of heaven and earth. Thou art in her, clothing her with Thy qualities and perfections, inclinations and dispositions, imprinting in her being a most perfect image of Thyself, of all Thy states, mysteries, and virtues, and making her so like Thee, that whoever sees Jesus sees Mary, and he who sees Mary beholds Jesus. Blessed be Thou, O Jesus, for all that Thou art and all that Thou dost accomplish in Thy most holy Mother! I offer Thee all the delights, all the love and all the glory Thou didst ever have or ever shalt have in her perfections.

SECOND POINT
MARY LIVES IN JESUS

O Mother of Jesus, I honor and venerate thy most holy and admirable life in thy Son Jesus; a life which is resplendent with every kind of virtue and perfection; a life of which one single moment is more dear to God than the lives of all angels and men; a life that imparts more honor and love to God than all other lives combined in heaven and on earth. This life is none other than the life of thy Son Jesus, which He communicates to thee from moment to moment by a most particular and ineffable favor. Blessed be thou, O holy Virgin, for the wealth of honor thou hast given to thy Well-beloved Son throughout thy life! I offer thee all my life, O Mother of being and grace, and I consecrate it completely to the honor of thy holy life, and with my whole heart I beg thy Son Jesus, the God of being and love, to grant by His great goodness that my whole existence may pay continual and eternal homage to His most holy life and to thine.

THIRD POINT
JESUS LIVES IN US

O Jesus, God of my life and of my heart, Thou hast a very great desire to dwell in me, and to make me live in Thee an entirely holy and heavenly life. Forgive me for having obstructed the fulfilment of Thy desire by my sins and infidelities. Eradicate the corrupt and depraved life of the old Adam in me, and in its place establish Thy holy and perfect life. Dwell in all Thy fulness in my spirit, heart and soul, and therein accomplish all the works Thou dost desire for Thy glory. Love Thyself in me, and in me glorify Thyself completely according to Thy most holy will. O Mother of Jesus, if it please thee, obtain from thy Son the accomplishment of these designs in me.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"For to me, to live is Christ."

Mihi vivere Christus est (Phil. 1, 21).

EIGHTH MEDITATION

Sunday

The Glorious life of Jesus in Heaven

FIRST POINT

JESUS LIVES A GLORIOUS LIFE WITH THE ETERNAL FATHER

O JESUS, having considered and adored Thee in Thy mortal life, the agony of the Cross, the shadow of death and the chill of the Sepulchre, let me now adore and contemplate Thee in the exaltation, brightness and delights of the life of glory and blessedness Thou didst enter by the Resurrection, which Thou hast enjoyed in heaven in the bosom of the Father since the Ascension. O immortal and glorious life of my Jesus! O life entirely free from the sorrow and suffering of this earth! O life completely rapt and absorbed in God! O life of undiluted love, of love most pure and all-encompassing, because in His heavenly life Jesus finds no thought other than to love His Father, and to love us for His Father, to love, bless and glorify His Father for us, to offer us to His Father and to intercede for us with Him! O life most holy, most pure and most divine! O life replete with unutterable joy and exultation! O life that enjoys the fulness of glory, greatness and bliss which is God! O my Dear Jesus, what joy for my heart to behold Thee living such a radiant life! May Thy Most Lovable Father be blessed forever for having brought Thee into heaven.

SECOND POINT

JESUS LIVES IN GLORY WITH HIS SAINTS

O Jesus, most worthy of love, not only art Thou in Thyself living a life of glory and blessedness, but so also are all the angels and saints who are with Thee in heaven. Thou livest in them; Thou dost communicate to them Thy glorious and immortal life; Thou art glorious and blessed in them, as St. Paul testifies in the words: omnia in omnibus (1 Cor. 12, 6). It is Thou who dost adore, praise and love Thy Eternal Father in them and by them. Blessed be Thou for all these things, O Good Jesus! I refer and offer to Thee the glorified and blessed life of all the citizens of heaven, together with all the love and praise they give Thee now and shall give Thee forever, in homage to the life of bliss and glory which Thou hast in Thyself. I beg all Thy angels and saints to love and glorify Thee for me, and to associate me with all the love and glory they give Thee and shall render Thee forever.

THIRD POINT

JESUS WILL LIVE IN GLORY WITH ME IN HEAVEN

O Jesus, object of all desire, I know that Thy love for me is infinite, that Thy extreme zeal for Thy glory most ardently desires Thy Self to be perfectly loved and glorified in me, and also that Thou hast an infinite desire to draw me to Thee in heaven. I know that Thou mayest live perfectly in me and fully establish in me the kingdom of Thy glory and Thy love. Thou wilt not live and reign perfectly in me so long as I remain on earth. Therefore, O my Saviour, I no longer desire to live on earth except to long without ceasing for my heavenly home. Heaven! O heaven! How desirable art thou! How thou dost call to our love! O God of heaven, when will the time come for me to see Thy holy face? When wilt Thou live fully in me and when will I love Thee perfectly? O earthly life, how hard, how unbearable art thou! O God of my life and of my heart, how long and cruel is this life in which Thou art so little loved and so much offended!

Another Meditation for Sunday

The Mysteries of Christ's life

FIRST POINT

WE SHOULD ADORE AND LOVE JESUS IN HIS MYSTERIES

O JESUS my Lord, I cast myself down and efface myself at Thy feet; I surrender myself to the might of Thy divine spirit and Thy holy love, in their immense power and greatness; I adore, glorify and love Thee in Thyself and in all the mysteries and phases of Thy life. I adore Thee in Thy temporal life on earth for thirty-four years. I adore Thee in the first moment of that life, in Thy holy Childhood, in Thy hidden life of labor, in Thy public ministry among men, both when Thou didst live and walk on earth for all to see, and now that Thou art still among us in the Blessed Eucharist. I adore Thee in all Thy sufferings, interior and exterior, and in the last moment of Thy passible life. I adore Thee in Thy Me of glory and bliss in heaven ever since the Ascension. I adore Thee in Thy life in the most Blessed Virgin and in all the angels and saints, whether in heaven or on earth. And, in general, I adore, love and glorify Thee in all the other mysteries and wonders that are embraced in the measureless expanse of Thy life, divine, temporal and glorified. I bless Thee and give Thee infinite thanks for all the glory Thou didst ever and ever shalt render to the Father in all the phases of Thy life.

I offer Thee all the love and honor Thou ever didst or shalt receive forever, in all Thy mysteries and states, from all the angels and all the saints, begging them most humbly to love and glorify Thee, for me, in every way possible and fitting to Thy glory.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

SECOND POINT

WE SHOULD ASK JESUS TO GRANT US A PARTICIPATION IN HIS MYSTERIES

O Jesus, I give myself to Thee and beg Thee with my whole heart to enter into me, there to destroy all that is not Thee, and to imprint a perfect image of Thyself, the states and mysteries of Thy life, Thy qualities and Thy virtues. Come, Lord Jesus, enter into me to destroy all that is not Thee and establish Thyself perfectly, there to be all and do all, that thus my being and my life, in all aspects and ramifications, may be totally dedicated to the honor of Thy life and Thy sovereign being. May my birth in nature and in grace, my childhood, adolescence and my years of activity as a mature man, my agony, death and burial together with all the other phases of my temporal and eternal life, be consecrated to the honor of each successive part of Thy life, Thy birth, Thy childhood, Thy adolescence, Thy maturity, Thy passion, Thy death and Thy burial, and all the other states of Thy temporal and eternal life. May all my thoughts, words and actions give honor to Thine. May every step I take, all my works and sufferings give honor to every step Thou didst take on earth and all Thy works and sufferings. May all the powers of my soul and all the senses of my body be dedicated to the honor of Thy holy soul and senses of Thy deified body. Finally, may everything that ever was, is and shall be in me be transformed into ceaseless and eternal adoration, praise and love for Thee. Come, Lord Jesus, enter into me; live and reign over me perfectly, and there love and glorify Thyself as befits Thee, to carry out the designs of Thy goodness in my being, to accomplish the work of Thy grace and to establish forever in my heart the kingdom of Thy glory and Thy pure love. *Veni, Domine Jesu, veni in plenitudine virtutis tuae, in sanctitate Spiritus tui, in perfectione mysteriorum tuorum, et in puritate viarum tuarum. FIRST COLLOQUY

God's Favors to Me Before My Creation and My Consequent Debt to Him

FIRST POINT
GOD HAS LOVED ME WITH AN ETERNAL LOVE

WITH God there is neither past nor future, and everything has always been before Him as present and visible in His eternal light. He cast His divine gaze upon me from all eternity; He looked upon me with the eye of mercy; He thought of me tenderly and ardently; He disposed and ordained, with wondrous kindness, everything that was to happen to me in body and soul and in every circumstance, development and event of my existence and life, even to the hairs of my head; He formed great designs concerning me. He designed to create me with all the natural advantages and perfections He has given me. He designed to preserve me as He does every moment of my life. He designed to create the world and to preserve it in existence for love of me.

(1). 'The "Interior Colloquies" were first published with the "Meditations on Humility" as Part Eight of The Kingdom of Jesus. In 1666 St. John Eudes published both series in one separate volume. There are thirteen colloquies. The first eight deal with man as a creature of God, Who is his principle, model and ultimate end. The last four consider man's duties as a Christian, his relations with the Three Divine Persons of the Blessed Trinity and his obligation to renounce Satan and follow Christ. The thirteenth colloquy treats of the choice of a state of life.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

The Eternal Father willed to send His Son and to deliver Him up to the death of the Cross to redeem me.

The Son willed to take human flesh and to do and suffer all that He did and suffered in this world for me.

The Holy Ghost willed to form the humanity which was united to the Son in the sacred womb of the Blessed Virgin for love of me and to come into this world Himself to be my light, my sanctification, the Spirit of my spirit and the Heart of my heart.

Lastly, the Most Holy Trinity willed to bestow upon me all the corporal and spiritual, temporal and eternal favors that He has since given me and will ever give me. And so God had great designs for me from all eternity, Thus, O my God, Thou didst bear me in Thy mind and in Thy heart from all eternity. Thus Thou didst think of me and love me an eternity before I was capable of knowing and loving Thee. There never was a time, O God of Love, when Thy mind and Thy heart were not concerned about me. "What is a man that thou shouldst magnify him? Or why dost thou set thy heart upon him?" (Job 7, 17). It would almost seem, O Eternal Goodness, that Thou hast no sooner thought of Thyself than Thou hast thought of me, no sooner loved Thyself than Thou hast loved me, since Thou hast thought of me and loved me from all eternity.

My God, what shall I do, what shall I render to Thee for Thy eternal love of me? Surely if I had existed from all eternity I should have given and consecrated to Thee my whole soul, my whole heart, all my thoughts, designs and affections. But not having existed from all eternity, I should at least have turned to Thee with my whole mind and will as soon as I was capable of doing so. Alas! I can truly say with St. Augustine; "Too late have I loved Thee, O Eternal Goodness." Forgive me, I beseech Thee, O my God. I wish to begin now to love, serve and honor Thee with all my heart, with all my soul and with all my strength; I beg Thee to grant me that grace by the infinite love Thou hast borne me from all eternity and give me grace to return Thy love.

THE CHRISTIAN SOUL WITH GOD

SECOND POINT

GOD HAS LOVED ME WITH A CONSTANT LOVE

The love, wherewith God loved me before I existed, is not only eternal; it is also continual, immutable and constant. God began to think of me and love me without beginning and He has not ceased. There has been no interruption in His thought or love for me; His mind and His heart have always been turned to me. In spite of the fact that He foresaw all my offenses and ingratitude, it made no change in His invariable and permanent love for me; He never ceased to wish me an infinity of good. It may truly be said that during the time of His eternal duration, not a single moment elapsed (if there are moments in eternity) without His thinking of me.

O excessive goodness! O eternal and immutable love! May eternal thanks be offered to Thee by all Thy creatures! O my God, too late have I known Thee, too late have I loved Thee! Perhaps I have not even yet begun to do so as I ought; but if I have begun, how many interruptions have there been since? How many infidelities have there been? What coldness and remissness! Have mercy, O my God, have mercy on this ungrateful and perfidious sinner. Henceforth, I wish with the aid of Thy grace to spend every moment of my life in Thy love and service. To this end, I intend to regulate and arrange my time and my occupation so that everything may be consecrated to Thy glory.

THIRD POINT

GOD HAS LOVED ME WITH AN INFINITE AND PURE LOVE

God has not only loved me from all eternity with a constant and invariable love, but He has also loved me with all that He is, that is to say, He loved me with a most pure love, for nothing obliged Him to love me before I existed except His pure goodness. Thus the love of God for me before my creation has four qualities: it is eternal, immutable, infinite and most pure. I will return thanks for all these blessings; I will humble myself before Him and ask forgiveness for all my ingratitude. I will excite a great desire to begin in good earnest, and henceforth to employ my whole life, all my time and all my strength, in loving and honoring Him and causing Him to be loved and honored by others as far as lies in my power; and I will do so purely for love of Him and for His glory. I will beg Him to destroy in me everything that might oppose these resolutions and to give me the grace requisite for their accomplishment. I will beseech the Blessed Virgin Mary, all the angels and the saints to obtain this great grace for me.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

Ejaculatory prayer:

"To Thee be praise, glory and love, O Blessed Trinity." Tibi laus, tibi gloria, tibi amor, O beata Trinitas.

SECOND COLLOQUY
God's Favors to Me by My Creation and Preservation and My Obligations Towards Him

FIRST POINT

GOD CREATED ME BY HIS INFINITE POWER, WISDOM AND GOODNESS

Who has created me and given me being and life? Not the world, not the evil spirit, nor myself, but God, by the exercise of infinite power, wisdom and goodness. "He made us, and not we ourselves" (Ps. 99, 3). His infinite power drew me from the nothingness from which I could not emerge save by the power of an Almighty hand. His immense wisdom appears in the wondrous order and arrangement of every faculty of my soul and every part of my body. His ineffable goodness is manifested in the fact that He drew me out of nothingness to give me not the nature of a stone, not the vegetative life of a plant or a tree, nor the sensitive life of an animal. This He might have done without wronging me and without my having any reason to complain. He willed instead to create me to His own image and likeness, to give me the many advantages of the time and place of my birth, my parentage, the perfections of body and mind and other favorable circumstances accompanying my birth which I should carefully weigh and consider.

"What shall I render to the Lord, for all the things that He hath rendered to me?" (Ps. 115, 12) I will thank Him, bless Him and love Him with all my heart. I will endeavor to realize that, as God is the author and eternal principle of my being and life, I must, therefore, devote my existence entirely, not to my own interests and inclinations, but to God, to His glory and the accomplishment of His holy will. As God is not only the source whence I came, but also the prototype whose living image I am, I am obliged to imitate Him in His sanctity,

His charity, His patience, His meekness, His vigilance, His justice and His mercy.

I will examine myself to see if I have spent my past life for Him or for others, and whether I have studied to imitate Him, and show forth in my life His likeness rather than that of His enemy. If I find myself guilty, I will humble myself and ask pardon of God for my past infidelity. I will resolve to live in future solely for the Author of my life; to refer myself wholly to Him as to my Principle, I will study the life and perfections of my Divine Exemplar, so as to imitate them and bear His living image in me, with the help of His grace, which I will earnestly beseech of Him for that intention, humbly desiring Him to destroy in me everything that might oppose His admirable designs, and to imprint a perfect likeness of Himself in my soul.

SECOND POINT

GOD CREATED US FOR HIMSELF

Why did God create me? For Himself, to think of Him, to love Him, to speak of Him, to work for Him and to sacrifice myself for His glory. He is not only my principle and prototype but also my sole end. Hence, as God made me for Himself alone, I should consider attentively, weigh carefully and engrave deeply upon my mind the truth that I am in this world only to serve and honor Him. This is my only care and affection. All my thoughts, words and actions, all my time, all I have, all I know, all I can do, should tend towards this purpose of life. God is my last end, and consequently in Him I will find my sovereign good, my centre, my treasure, my glory, my felicity, my repose, and my true paradise; likewise, outside of Him I will find only trouble, anxiety, bitterness, anguish, malediction and hell.

Have I paid attention in the past to this great and important truth? Have I been one of those whom St. Bernard castigates when he says: "Foolish persons who take greatest care of the least things and least care of the greatest." If such is the case with me, I will ask pardon of God and consecrate myself wholly to Him. I will devote myself solely to this work, which is of such consequence that it entails nothing less than an eternity of bliss or misery.

THIRD POINT

PRESERVATION IS A CONTINUOUS CREATION WHICH INCREASES OUR OBLIGATIONS TO GOD

God created me not only once, but as many times as there are moments in my life. From the moment of my creation until now, He has borne me in His arms, in His bosom and in His Heart, with more care and love than a mother carries her child, and not a single moment has passed without His thinking of me, loving and preserving me. The most wonderful fact is that He preserved me even when I was offending Him, when He might justly have crushed me and cast me into hell. Now, preservation is continual creation, so much so that if God were to withdraw His Almighty Hand which sustains me, and were to cease for a single moment to preserve me, I would at that very instant return to the nothingness from which He drew me. Therefore, He gives me at each successive moment the identical being He conferred at the first instant of my life and with the selfsame power and goodness with which He gave it to me then. I belong to Him, therefore, by as many ties as there have been moments in my life and I am deeply indebted to Him for each succeeding moment as for the first.

O my God, since I am Thine by so many claims, and have so many obligations to serve Thee, do not permit sin, the devil, nor the world to have any share in what is Thine, but do Thou take full and entire possession of my being and life. O world, O prince of the world, O detestable sin, I renounce you forever. O my God, I consecrate myself to Thee and I declare that I wish to live, act, speak, think and suffer for love of Thee alone.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Thou hast made me for Thyself, O Lord, and my heart can find no rest except it reposeth in Thee."

Fecisti me, Domine, ad te, et inquietum est cor meum, donec revertatur in te. St. Augustine, Confessions I, i.

THIRD COLLOQUY

The Dignity and Sanctity of Our Ultimate End

FIRST POINT

OUR ULTIMATE END IS THE SAME As THAT OF THE ANGELS

FOR what end did God make us? For the same end as the angels. God placed us in this world to do what the angels constantly accomplish in heaven. Wherefore, being associated with the angels and created for the same duties, namely, to adore, praise, love and serve God and to follow His most holy Will always and everywhere, we should live angelic lives and delight in the fulfilment of these duties. Alas, if we examine our life, we will find that instead of imitating the angels in their purity, sanctity, humility, charity, love, submission to the Will of God and fidelity in His service, we have frequently imitated the demons in their malignity, pride, envy, disobedience, treachery and rebellion against God. In fact, instead of devoting ourselves to the functions of angels, we have actually performed the work of demons.

Let us humble ourselves; let us detest our malice; let us forever renounce the prince of darkness. Let us cultivate a great desire to imitate the angels, and to begin to perform on earth what we shall do in union with them for all eternity in heaven. Let us beg them to associate us in the praise they continually offer to God and to make us share in their love and fidelity.

SECOND POINT

OUR ULTIMATE END IS THE SAME AS THAT OF THE SAINTS

God placed us in this world for the same end as the holy patriarchs, prophets, apostles and martyrs, the holy bishops, priests and all the other saints who formerly lived upon earth and are now in heaven.

THE CHRISTIAN SOUL WITH GOD

They were men such as we are, men of flesh and blood, frail, mortal, exposed to the same temptations as ourselves. We belong to the same Church as they, we adore the same God, we have the same Saviour and Mediator, Jesus Christ, Our Lord. We share the same Holy Gospel, the same Sacraments, the same faith, the same hope, the same promises. He who sanctified the saints has an infinite desire to sanctify us, too, provided we do not oppose His holy Will. Yet they are saints and they served God "in holiness and justice before Him," all the days of their life (Luke 1, 75)

As for us, who are we and what are we doing? What good reason we have to humble ourselves! What shall we say to the Son of God when, on the day of judgment, He will show us all the saints who were like us, and will reveal to us how much easier it was for us to serve Him with them rather than to follow those who are now forced to cry out in hell: "We have erred from the way of truth ... and have walked through hard ways" (Wisdom 5, 6-7).

Let us, therefore, make a firm resolution to walk in the way of the saints, to read and study their lives, especially the lives of those who have been of our saintly calling, so as to imitate them. Let us beg them to obtain this grace for us.

THIRD POINT

OUR ULTIMATE END IS THE SAME AS THAT OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN, OF OUR LORD AND OF THE THREE DIVINE PERSONS

Not only have we the same destiny as the angels, archangels, cherubim, seraphim and all the saints, but we have also the same end as Mary, the Queen of the angels and saints, as Jesus, the Saint of saints, and as the Three Divine Persons of the Holy Trinity. Why did the Blessed Virgin and our Lord Jesus Christ come upon earth, except to honor and glorify God, and to make Him known and adored? What is the end of the Three Divine Persons but their Divinity? What is their greatest and continuous activity but to praise, bless, love and glorify each other perpetually? God created us for the same end, that is, to honor and glorify Him, to make others know and serve Him, in every possible way. Thus, we have one and the same end as the angels, the seraphim, all the saints, the Blessed Virgin, the God-man and the Most Holy Trinity.

50-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

How noble, how worthy, how holy is our destiny! How elevated is our status in having so high an end! How happy we are in being created for such exaltation! How miserable we are when we let our minds and hearts, our thoughts and affections, revel in the mud and filth, in the smoke and folly of the base, terrestrial affairs of the children of this world! How deeply we are indebted to our Creator, for having created us for so admirable an end, for having given us such a wondrous alliance with His angels, His saints, His Blessed Mother and Himself! What holy lives we should lead! How pure should be our intentions in every thought, word and action! Yet the majority of men live as if they were only made for earth, honor, wealth, pleasure, self, the world, the devil and bell.

And what have we done so far? Let us stir up a horror of ourselves and our sinful lives. "For in many things we all offend" (James 3, 2). Let us earnestly desire and resolve to be perfectly converted to God, and to live only to tend to our ultimate end and to direct other souls to their eternal destiny.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"What have I in heaven? And besides thee what do I desire upon earth?"

Quid mihi est in caelo, et a te quid volui super terram (PS. 72, 25)

FOURTH COLLOQUY

Our Obligations to God for the Creation and Preservation of the World

FIRST POINT

GOD CREATED THE WORLD FOR US AND GAVE IT TO US WITH AN INFINITE LOVE

THE origin and end of the world is God, its Author and Creator, Who made it for Himself and for His own glory: "The Lord hath made all things for Himself" (Prov. 16, 4). All creatures bless, glorify and magnify God, each in its own way: "Full of the glory of the Lord is His work" (Ecclus. 42, 16). "His work is praise and magnificence" (Ps. 110, 3) - "All the earth is full of his glory" (Isa. 6, 3). All irrational and inanimate creatures do the will of God, following the instincts He has given them, and never swerve from the laws he has prescribed for them: "He hath made a decree, and it shall not pass away" (Ps. 148, 6). "All things serve thee" (Ps. 118, 91). All creatures serve God for the accomplishment of His designs and the manifestation of His power, His wisdom and His infinite goodness. What power is manifest in creating such a multitude and a variety of beings out of nothing! What divine wisdom has established such a wonderful order, harmony and proportion in nature! What goodness has wrought so many wonders for all men in general and for each in particular, even for ungrateful and perfidious men who do not appreciate them, but use these creatures to wage war against their Creator and to dishonor Him.

Let us adore God, inviting all creatures to bless and praise with us His incomprehensible power, wisdom and goodness. "All ye works of the Lord, bless the Lord: praise and exalt him above all for ever" (Dan. 3, 57). This they do incessantly and invite us to do so with them. "For all creatures," says St. Augustine, "are so many tongues and voices which cry out incessantly: 'Love, love Him who made us for you.'" O my God, how strange it is that inanimate and irrational creatures glorify Thee, while man, a rational creature who is infinitely more indebted, dishonors Thee!

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

The ineffable goodness with which God created all things in the universe appears not only in His having created them for our wellbeing and given them to us, but also in His having given them to us with infinite love; so much so, that if every morsel of bread we eat and every drop of water we drink were of infinite value, He would give them to us as lovingly as He does now. Thus it is with everything we use. If we numbered all the creatures in the world, we would count as many obligations to their Creator who gives them to us with infinite love.

O my God, what shall I do for Thee and what return shall I make for so many manifestations of Thy infinite goodness? Let me at least learn from irrational and inanimate creatures to serve and glorify Thee and to submit to Thy laws and orders, if I do not wish to be numbered among those fools against whom Thy creatures will fight in the day of judgment to avenge the wrongs Thou hast endured from ungrateful men: "The whole world shall fight with him against the unwise" (Wisd. 5, 21).

SECOND POINT

GOD PRESERVES THE WORLD FOR US WITH AN INFINITE LOVE

God created the world, not only once, but an infinite number of times, that is, as many times as there have been moments of time in the thousands of years since the world was created. At every successive moment, He has prevented it from falling back into the nothingness from which He drew it and He continually preserves it, which preservation is a perpetual creation. If anyone could count the moments which have elapsed from the creation of the world until now, he would count so many infinite obligations on our part to the infinite goodness of our adorable Preserver. For each one of us was present to Him from the beginning of the world and throughout eternity before material creation. He created the world for love of each one of us in particular, and likewise He has preserved it ever since for each one of us with infinite love. Be Thou blessed, O Great God, be Thou infinitely blessed! "Let the mercies of the Lord give glory to him: and his wonderful works to the children of men" (Ps. 106, 21).

THIRD POINT

OUR LORD, AT THE PRICE OF HIS PRECIOUS BLOOD, HAS PURCHASED FOR US THE RIGHT TO USE CREATED THINGS

It is true that the world and everything in it was made for man. But man, having been condemned to death on account of his rebellion against God, lost his right to their employment when he sinned, so the sinner has no more right to make use of any creature. If the Son of God had not died to free us from our guilt of sin, all creatures, instead of serving our needs, would rise up against us as they will against the wicked on the day of judgment. But Our Lord Jesus Christ, by virtue of His Precious Blood and Redeeming Death, has restored to us the right to use the things of this world for our necessities, although not to the full and copious use man would have enjoyed if he had not sinned. Man is permitted to employ God's creatures as God Himself used them, according to the words of the Holy Ghost: "They that use this world, as if they used it not" (I COR. 7, 31), that is to say, without excess, without being attached to it or taking any undue pleasure in it, but simply according to necessity and insofar as is requisite for the service and glory of God, with thanksgiving to the Creator who made the creatures of the world, and to the Redeemer who acquired for us with His Precious Blood the right to their use which we had lost by our sins.

We would have no right to live a moment, to set foot upon the ground, to breathe the air, to receive light from the sun, warmth from the fire, to be cleansed by water, to be covered by the clothes we wear, to be protected from the inclemency of the weather by the houses in which we live, to rest in our beds, to eat a morsel of food, to drink a drop of water, nor to make use of any creature, if the Son of God had not shed His Precious Life-Blood to deliver us from the punishment of privation which we merited by our sins. Having employed the being and life God gave us to offend Him, we deserve to be deprived of existence and consequently of all our rights. If we now retain some measure of these rights, it is because the Son of God purchased them for us by His Death on the Cross. So we have not a moment of time, we do not eat a morsel of food, nor use anything in this world that has not cost the Blood of Jesus Christ. Wherefore, we are infinitely indebted to Him. If we could count all the service and assistance received from creatures at every moment of our life and our continual use of them, we would count so many infinite obligations to Jesus Christ, who purchased that privilege for us at the infinite cost of His Precious Blood.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

Let us beg God to engrave these truths upon our hearts, Let us acknowledge our indebtedness and return thanks to Jesus Christ. Let us think of them frequently and raise our hearts to Him from Whom we receive so many favors every moment. Let us resolve to spend all our time in the honor and service of our most amiable Saviour Who purchased every moment of life so dearly for us. Let us declare to Him that we will never employ anything created except for His glory and in the way He used it while on earth. Let us ask Him to give us this grace for love of Himself.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Let all thy works, O Lord, praise thee."

Confiteantur tibi, Domine, omnia opera tua (Ps. 144, 10).

FIFTH COLLOQUY

The Divine Claims upon Our Allegiance Because of Our Creation

FIRST POINT

THE CLAIMS OF GOD TO OUR ALLEGIANCE

AS A result Of Our creation, God assumes certain all-important claims to our allegiance. He is our origin; He is our last end; he is our centre and our element; He is our supreme good, our monarch and our absolute sovereign; He is our ruler, our protector and our defender; He is our judge.

Let us adore and praise God in all these divine aspects. Let us rejoice that He is so great, that He possesses countless perfections, and has so much power over all His creatures who are dependent upon Him in so many varied ways. Let us also rejoice that we belong to Him by so many claims to our allegiance and that He vouchsafes to exercise all these rights in our regard. It is a marvelous advantage, a great glory and a singular honor for us to have an origin so noble, an end so exalted, a centre so divine, a supreme good so bountiful and provident, a prototype so perfect, a king so powerful, a ruler and protector so prudent and strong, a judge so just and equitable, and a God so great, so admirable and so good.

SECOND POINT

THESE DIVINE CLAIMS ARE ALWAYS EFFECTUAL

All these claims which God wishes to extend to us are not vain, idle or ineffectual. He exercises them continually over us and over all creatures. He produces wondrous effects through them and would operate even more lavishly if we did not prevent Him.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

As our origin, He not only gave us being at the moment of our creation, but He imparts it to us continually and produces us incessantly and more incomparably than the fountain produces its gushing waters, the tree its foliage and the sun its rays. Wherefore, we are more dependent upon God than the rivers upon their source, the leaves upon the tree trunk, or the rays upon the sun.

As our end, centre, element and supreme good, He calls and attracts us to Himself continually, saying: "Come to me all you who labour and are burdened: and I will refresh you" (Matt. 11, 28). If there is a secret virtue in the centre of a stone, in the element of the fish and in the sphere of fire, which so strongly attracts them, how much stronger is the virtue of our true centre, our true element and our real sphere, which is God? How is it, then, that we allow ourselves to be so little attracted to Him? Certainly, we must believe that we offer very great resistance and that there must be a terrible weight of sin within us to resist such powerful attraction. O my Sovereign End, my Divine Centre, attract me, draw me completely to Thee, and do not allow me to oppose Thy power in any way.

THIRD POINT

THE RECOGNITION OF THESE DIVINE CLAIMS IS THE MEANS OF HAPPINESS

Moreover, as our last end, our centre, our element, our sphere and supreme good, God alone is capable of giving us true peace, perfect rest, and of filling and satiating the immense capacity of our soul: Anima rationalis ita facta est capax majestatis tuae, quod a te solo et a nullo alio impleri possit, says St. Augustine. When our soul renounces everything earthly to give itself entirely to its Creator, He fills it with ineffable repose, with a peace surpassing all understanding and the reward of infinite blessings.

As prototype, He gives us the model and example of admirable perfection and sanctity, saying: "Be holy because I am holy" (Lev. 11, 44) - "Be you therefore perfect, as also your heavenly Father is perfect" (Matt- 5, 48) - "Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful" (Luke 6, 36). "Be ye therefore followers of God, as most dear children" (Eph. 5, 1). Furthermore, He Himself imprints His divine image upon souls who give themselves entirely to Him. O my God, I surrender myself to Thee; engrave in my soul a perfect image of Thy sanctity and Thy divine perfections.

THE CHRISTIAN SOUL WITH GOD

As king, ruler and protector, God rules us by the holiest laws, and He is ceaselessly vigilant in governing and protecting us.

As judge, He continually exercises His justice and His judgment in the world, giving to everyone according to his works, punishing some and rewarding others.

Let us adore and bless God in all the effects He has produced and will produce in creatures by His claims upon man. Let us thank Him for the blessings He has produced in us or would have produced if we had not prevented Him. Let us ask pardon for our resistance. Let us give ourselves to Him, that He may exercise all His divine powers over us as He pleases and make them as fruitful in us as He desires.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Thou art the God of my heart, and the God that is my portion for ever."

Deus cordis mei, et pars mea Deus in aeternum (Ps. 72,26).

SIXTH COLLOQUY

The Rights of God Over Man as a Result of Creation

FIRST POINT

THE RIGHTS OF GOD BECAUSE HE IS OUR PRINCIPLE, OUR END AND OUR SOVEREIGN GOOD

BY REASON of the preceding aspects, God has many claims upon us which we should study in order not to violate them. If we are so careful to study and maintain our petty rights over our dependents, how much greater reason have we to consider the great and important rights God has over us, that we may fulfil the obligations towards Him that those rights entail. Therefore, let us see what they are.

By every quality of His Infinite Perfection, God has the right to be acknowledged, adored, praised and glorified by us as God, to whom we must sacrifice ourselves and all things.

As our origin, our last end and our supreme good, He is entitled to possess us entirely, as wholly His own, made only for Him and infinitely dependent upon Him.

As He is the origin and end of our being and life, God maintains a right to be the origin and end of all our thoughts, words and actions and of all the customs and functions of our life, that is, we should think, say or do nothing except through Him or for Him, by his command and for His glory.

As the origin who produces us continually and always bears us in His Hand and in His Heart, so that, should He cease to sustain us, we would at that very instant fall back into nothingness, He has the right to exact that, as we always necessarily live in Him, according to the words of St. Paul: "In Him we live, and move, and are" (Acts 17, 28), we should voluntarily abide in Him by means of love in charity: "God is charity: and he that abideth in charity, abideth in God" (I John 4, 16).

O my God, let me always abide in Thy love and in love of my neighbor so as to be always in Thee.

SECOND POINT

OTHER RIGHTS OF GOD OVER US IN VIRTUE OF HIS ALLEGIANCE

As our origin God imparts to us a being and life that are a participation in His being and life, as St. Paul tells us, "We are also his offspring" (Acts 17, 28). He has the right to exact that we lead a life conformable to His, that is, a life all holy and divine, so as not to degenerate from the nobility of our fountainhead, and dishonor the source and origin whence we have sprung.

As our end, Centre, element and divine sphere, God has the right to expect that we should aspire unceasingly to Him, and seek our rest and contentment in Him alone.

As our supreme good, He is entitled to be loved above all things and to have entire possession of our hearts and all our affections.

O my God, in Thee are true good, honor and content and out of Thee, there is no good. Grant that I may love Thee with whole heart! Mayest Thou be henceforth the sole object of all my desires and affections.

THIRD POINT

RIGHTS OF GOD OVER US IN CONSEQUENCE OF HIS OTHER CLAIMS

As our prototype, God possesses the right to require us always to walk before Him and in His presence, continually and fixedly watching our Divine Exemplar so as to pattern our life and model our behaviour and actions on the perfection of His life and the sanctity of His principles and actions.

As king, He has the right to legislate and to reign over us.

As ruler, He possesses the right to direct our every act.

60-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

As protector, He has the right to our acknowledgment of the truth that He alone can assist and defend us, and that we should have recourse to Him in all our needs, both corporal and spiritual.

As judge, He has the right to watch over all our actions, examine them, demand an account of even every idle word and reward or punish us according to our merits.

Such are God's rights over us in consequence of these aspects of His divine claims to our allegiance.

O my God, I adore and glorify Thee in all Thy just and lawful rights over all creatures and over me in particular. I rejoice with all my heart and testify that if Thou didst not possess them, I would give them to Thee. How frequently I have prevented Thy enjoyment of those rights over me! I humbly ask Thy pardon. Henceforth, I will endeavor to avoid opposing Thy divine rights any more and to fulfil, with the aid of Thy grace the obligations they entail.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"My God and my All."
Deus meus et omnia.

SEVENTH COLLOQUY

Man's Obligations to God by Reason of the Preceding Rights

FIRST POINT

MAN'S OBLIGATIONS TO GOD

AFTER considering and studying God's divine claims and His rights over us as a result of creation, it is easy to see our consequent obligations.

1. As He is our origin, we should abide in Him, live a life worthy of our origin, continually refer to His authority all that we are and all that we do, sacrificing ourselves unceasingly to Him so that He may possess us entirely. "Look unto the rock whence you are hewn" (Isa. 51, 10)

2. Since He is our end, centre and supreme good, we should continually aspire and long for Him, choose and seek Him always and in all things, never desiring any rest or content save in Him alone.

3. Since He is our prototype, we should constantly study His life and perfections in order to imitate them and form in ourselves a living image of our adorable exemplar: "Look and make it according to the pattern, that was shown thee on the mount" (Exod. 25, 40).

4. Since He is our king, ruler and protector, we owe Him honor, obedience and confidence.

5. Since He is our sovereign possessing more power over us than the potter over his clay, as holy job says: "Multiply my wounds even without cause" (Job 9, 17), we should abandon ourselves wholly to Him.

6. As He is our sovereign judge, we should submit to His power to judge us. We should adore, bless and glorify Him in all the judgments, known and unknown, manifest and secret, that He daily exercises over all creatures and especially over us. Above all, we should adore and praise Him in the judgment He exercises every moment over the souls that appear before His tribunal and in the judgment that He will exercise over us at the hour of death and in the day of judgment. Lastly, we should fear His justice, remembering that "it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God" (Heb. 10, 30- We should resolve to live as persons who will shortly have to appear before His dread tribunal, to render an account of each idle word.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

Such are our obligations. Let us humble ourselves for neglecting them in the past. Let us plead for mercy, begging our Lord Jesus Christ, who came upon earth to satisfy for our sins, to repair our faults. Let us resolve to live henceforth in accordance with these obligations, invoking the aid of divine grace for that purpose.

SECOND POINT

MORTAL SIN IS A VIOLATION OF ALL THE RIGHTS OF GOD OVER US

Anyone who offends God mortally not only deprives God of all the homage he owes Him, but also robs Him, so far as possible, of all His claims upon him. He denies Him and disavows all allegiance to God's supreme authority. He usurps and appropriates those essential rights, thus denying God by his works, because the sinner destroys God so far as lies in his power and makes himself his own god. What is God? He is our Supreme Good, who should be loved and esteemed above all things. His glory, pleasure, interest and will should be preferred to every other glory, pleasure, interest and will. He is the beginning, end, Centre, exemplar, king, master and ruler of all things. Consequently, all things should be referred to Him, tend to Him, take their pleasure in Him, follow Him as their rule and obey Him. What does the sinner do? He makes more account of himself than of God; he prefers his own will, interest, pleasure and glory to the will, interest, pleasure and glory of God. He desires to be master and dispose of himself as if he were his own instead of God's possession, as if he were his own beginning, holding his being and life from himself. He wishes to find his pleasure and happiness not in God, but in himself. He wishes to follow no rule but his passion and desires, no laws but his inclinations. He wants no ruler save his own blinded intellect and disordered will.

What is all this? Is it not to usurp God's rights and to rob Him of all His authority to appropriate them to ourselves? Is it not to deny God by our works? Do we not say to God by our depraved actions: "Lord, I am told that Thou art my beginning, end, centre, supreme good, exemplar, guide, king, and ruler, and that Thou hast manifold claims upon me; but I renounce Thee and disavow all these claims~ I am my own beginning, end, rule and guide." Actually, we destroy and annihilate God by our defiance and make a god of self. This is what we do when we commit mortal sin.

O sin how terrible you are! How deeply I detest you! Forgive, my God, pray, forgive all my offenses.

THIRD POINT

BY INDUCING OTHERS TO SIN AND ABUSING CREATED THINGS, MAN ROBBS GOD OF HIS RIGHTS AND MAKES HIMSELF THE GOD OF CREATURES

Anyone who induces others to do anything contrary to the will of God either by word, deed or example, anyone who makes improper use of the things God has put into this world for our necessity, who uses them to excess and to satisfy his own pleasure, ambition, avarice or other passions, instead of using them for God's glory, robs God, so far as lies in his power, of His rights over created things. He appropriates them to himself and makes himself the god of those things. When he encourages other people to do anything contrary to the law of God, he desires them to prefer his will and interest to that of God; and thus he seeks to be put in God's place in their regard. When he abuses the things God has made, he is not ruled by the will and glory of God but by his passions and corrupt inclinations, and he manifestly robs God of His rights over creatures and attributes them to himself. As God is the beginning and end of all things, His will and glory should be the measure and rule of our employment of creatures. Whoever uses anything otherwise, annihilates God in so far as he may, to put himself in His place and make himself god of creatures.

But how does God desire us to use the things of the world? He has declared His Will by the use His Son Jesus Christ made of them, for

He sent Him upon earth to be our model in that as in everything else. O my God, I have followed this Divine Model most miserably I am profoundly guilty of abusing the gifts Thou hast given me! Too often I have despoiled Thee of Thy supreme rights Thou hast over creatures to appropriate them to myself I Forgive me, O my God. I will no longer use anything save for Thy greater glory and in accordance with Thy holy will, in imitation of Thy Son our Lord Jesus Christ.

O my God, I have turned away from Thee in the past, from Thee who art my origin, my end and my supreme good. I have turned to myself, to the world and to Satan, preferring their will and mine to Thine. I affirm sincerely that I now desire to renounce entirely Satan, the world and myself to be converted and turn to Thee completely and forever.

O my God, I give myself to Thee as my origin; possess me wholly. May I ever remain in Thee; may I avoid all that may not be worthy of my origin. Mayest Thou be the beginning and the end of all my actions.

O my God, I give myself to Thee as my end, my centre and my supreme good. Draw me to Thee.

Grant that I may continually tend towards Thee. Be Thou alone my pleasure, my glory, my treasure and my aft.

O my God, I give myself to Thee as my king. "Give me the grace to do what Thou commandest and command what Thou dost please" (St. Augustine, Conf. 10, 29).

O my God, I give myself to Thee as my prototype. Imprint upon my soul a perfect likeness of Thyself.

I give myself to Thee as my ruler and my protector. Direct me according to Thy holy will and preserve me from sin.

I give and abandon myself to Thee as my sovereign. Do with me what Thou wilt.

I give myself to Thee as my judge. Willingly I submit to all the judgments Thou hast exercised and ever wilt exercise upon me, in time and in eternity, saying with all respect and submission: "Thou art just, O Lord; and thy judgment is right" (Ps. 118, 137). "Yea, O Lord God Almighty, true and just are thy judgments" (Apoc. 16, 7)

Our Obligation to Love, Honor, Imitate and Serve God Because of All That HE Is In Himself

FIRST POINT

GREATNESS OF GOD'S PERFECTIONS

SUPPOSE that we had never received any favors from God and were not obliged to serve Him by reason of our creation, our preservation, the creation and preservation of the world and all His consequent attributes and claims upon us. Even so we should still have infinite obligations, much more pressing than the preceding, simply because of the nature of God as He exists in Himself. Let us, therefore, adore God's divine essence and let us open the eyes of our faith, to behold and consider, with all possible respect and humility, His infinite being, His incomprehensible essence, His ineffable divinity, His supreme and adorable majesty, as follows:

"O divine Essence Who art a fathomless and unlimited abyss of marvels! O immense ocean of grandeur! O incomprehensible world of miracles! O unity of my God! O simplicity! O eternity without beginning and without end, to Whom all things are ever present! O immensity who dost fill and encompass all things and couldst fill a countless number of worlds if they existed! O infinity, who dost contain all perfections! O immutability! O immortality! O invisibility! O inaccessible light! O incomprehensible truth! O abyss of knowledge and wisdom! O truth! O sanctity of God, wholly detached from all things and wholly centered in Himself !

"O sanctity that suffers the destruction of His works in His presence, that will destroy this world by fire, that has even delivered to the death of the Cross the most excellent of His works, the God-Man! O divine strength which bearest all and dost all! O omnipotence!

O divine providence governing and ordaining things! O justice! O bounty! O plenitude of good, joy, peace and honor! O divine will accomplishing all that Thou dost please in heaven and on earth! O love! O charity! O divine sufficiency, by which God is so sufficient to Himself that Sacred Scripture says: "I have said to the Lord: thou art my God for thou hast no need of my goods" (Ps. 15, 2). O divine vigilance, all-seeing eye of the power, justice and mercy of God! O thoughts, designs, affections! O divine operations of God in Himself! O infinitely happy and glorious life of my God! O divine sovereignty which can dispose of all things, without anyone being permitted to question Thy decisions!

O my God, I adore Thee, with and through Jesus Christ Thy Son, in union with all the adoration, praise and benediction of His members. I adore all these infinite grandeurs and perfections, and all innumerable and inconceivable attributes that are unknown to me. I adore, praise, glorify and love Thee according to all Thou art. What joy it gives my heart to behold Thee so great and so replete with myriad excellences ! Truly, my God, if all this greatness were mine instead of Thine, I would willingly renounce it to give it to Thee!

SECOND POINT

THE MUTUAL RELATIONSHIP OF THE THREE DIVINE PERSONS

Who are the Three Divine Persons and what do they accomplish for each one of us? The Father is continually communicating to His Eternal Son His being, His life, all His perfections, His glory, His felicity, all His goods and treasures. The Son is constantly referring to His Father as His origin, all that He has received from Him, and enjoys a perpetual state of glory and praise of His Heavenly Father.

The Father and Son give and communicate to the Holy Ghost all that They are, have and know. The Holy Ghost is continually referring to the Father and the Son, as to His source, all that He derives from Them. These divine communications, processions and relations, communications of the Father to the Son, of the Father and Son to the Holy Ghost, processions of the Son proceeding from His Father, and of the Holy Ghost proceeding from the Father and the Son, relations of the Father to the Son, of the Son to the Father, of the Father and Son to the Holy Ghost, of the Holy Ghost to the Father and the Son are eternal, continual and immense, filling heaven and earth.

With these divine communications and processions, the Father, Son and Holy Ghost have but one and the same essence and divinity, live one and the same existence, possess one and the same power, wisdom, goodness and sanctity, and abide in the most perfect Unity.

The three Divine Persons are continually and mutually considering and perpetually praising, loving and glorifying one another.

O Most Holy Trinity, I adore, bless and glorify Thee in this stupendous mystery. I unite with all the love and praise that the Divine Persons give one another. I offer Thee all the glory Thou hast in Thyself, for which I render infinite thanks with the Holy Church: I give Thee infinite thanks, O Eternal Father, for the divine generation of the Eternal Son. I give thanks exceedingly, O divine Father and Only-begotten Son of the Father, for the procession of the Holy Spirit in unity of Source. I offer infinite thanks, O Father, Son and Holy Ghost, for the mutual love, glory and praise of the Trinity. O my God, Heavenly Father, how I rejoice to behold that Thy Son and Holy Spirit love and praise Thee from all eternity and to all eternity, with a love and praise befitting Thy greatness!

O Only-begotten Son of God, how my soul rejoices in contemplating the infinite love and glory Thou dost receive from the Heavenly Father and from the Holy Spirit O Holy Spirit, what joy for my heart, to contemplate the love and blessings which are continually given Thee by the Father and the Son! O divine community, O unity, O society, love and life of the Three Eternal Persons! What rejoicing, what jubilation, what felicity for me to know that Thou art filled with ineffable glory, with inconceivable beatitude and infinity of good, and to know that Thou art God, the one only God living and reigning forever. "Sing joyfully to God, all the earth: serve ye the Lord with gladness. Come in before his presence with exceeding great joy. Know ye that the Lord he is God." (PS. 99, 2 - 3).

THIRD POINT

OUR OBLIGATION TO HONOR THE DIVINE PERFECTIONS AND THE DIVINE PERSONS

All the perfections of the divine essence and the marvelous mysteries of the Three Eternal Persons constitute so many innumerable obligations for us to serve, honor and love the Blessed Trinity. God is so great and so admirable that His least perfection, if there be any less glorious than the others, merits infinite adoration, service and obedience. What honor does His supreme greatness and majesty demand of us? What love does His goodness and His incomprehensible charity merit? What fear does His dread justice inspire? What obedience is due His sovereignty? What purity of heart and life is required by His sanctity in those who serve Him?

What is our obligation to the Eternal Father for the being and life He imparts to His Divine Son by His Eternal generation, and to the Father and Son for all They impart to the Holy Ghost in his continual procession? Our debt is incomparably greater for this triune mystery than for the creation of a hundred thousand worlds.

What do we owe the Eternal Father for the infinite love of His Only-begotten Son, the Son for the love of His Father, and the Father and Son for their love of the Holy Ghost, and the Holy Ghost for the love of the Father and the Son? What do we owe to the Three Divine Persons for the praise and glory they give one another for all eternity and to all eternity? Certainly we owe them more service and obedience for all these mysteries than for all the graces we have received or can receive from Their divine liberality. The glory of the Three Divine Persons must be dearer to us than our own welfare, for we should love them more than ourselves. Let us, therefore, give ourselves to God to serve and honor Him according to His most holy will.

What God most desires of us is that we imitate Him for He is our Exemplar, as Jesus Christ says: "Be you therefore perfect, as also your heavenly Father is perfect" (Matt, 5, 48), and St. Paul enjoins: "Be ye therefore followers of God" (Eph. 5, 1). Let us give ourselves to Him with a great desire to imitate His sanctity, his purity, charity, mercy, patience, vigilance, meekness and all His other perfections. Let us beg Him to imprint in our soul a perfect image and likeness of His sanctity and His divine virtues.

NINTH COLLOQUY

Our Obligations to God as Christians, and What It Means to Be a Christian

FIRST POINT

OUR OBLIGATIONS AS CHILDREN OF GOD, BROTHERS, AND CO-HEIRS OF CHRIST

TO BE a Christian is to be a child of God, sharing one and the same Father with Jesus Christ His Only Son. "He gave them power to be made the sons of God" (John 1, 12). "I ascend to my Father and to your Father," says our Saviour (John 20, 17)- "Behold what manner of Charity the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called, and should be the sons of God," says St. John (I John 3, 1). By creation, God is our creator, our origin, our efficient cause, our king, our sovereign; and we are His creatures, His handiwork, His subjects and His servants. By our regeneration and the new birth given us in baptism, in which we receive new being and a new and divine life, God becomes Our Father, and we His children, so that we can and must say: "Our Father who art in Heaven."

The consequences of this divine adoption are as follows:

1. By the new birth of baptism we emanated from the bosom of the Father, so we shall always remain there and be borne continually in His bosom. Otherwise, if He ceased to bear us for a single moment, we would lose the new being and life we received in baptism. He also says: "Hearken unto me, O house of Jacob, all the remnant of the house of Israel, who are carried by my bowels, are borne up by my womb" (Isa. 46, 3)

2. We are brothers of Jesus Christ, of His royal and divine race, sharers in His heritage. Whence it follows that the Christian, the new man and the new creature who is born only of God, knows no other

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

genealogy than that of Jesus Christ, no other Father but God: "And call none your father upon earth" (Mat. 23, 9). "Wherefore henceforth, we know no man according to the flesh," (2 Cor. 5, 16), says St. Paul. "That which is born of the Spirit, is spirit;" says our Lord (John 3, 6).

3. We are co-heirs with Jesus Christ, and heirs of God. O marvels! O dignity! O nobility! O greatness of the Christian! "Behold what manner of charity the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called, and should be the sons of God" (1 John 3, 1). What a tremendous favor of God to have made us Christians! How deeply we are indebted to His goodness! How miserable is the wretched creature who denies God for his Father and wishes to be a child of the devil! This is what those do who commit mortal sin. To them our Lord says: "You are of your father the devil, and the desires of your father you will do" (John 8, 44). Let us humble ourselves at sight of our sins. Let us renounce Satan and give ourselves to God, firmly resolving to live henceforth as true children of God, not to degenerate from the nobility of our birth, not to sully our race, and not to dishonor our Father. The wise son is the glory of his father; he who does not act wisely is the ignominy of his father.

SECOND POINT

OUR OBLIGATIONS AS MEMBERS OF JESUS CHRIST

A Christian is a member of Jesus Christ. "Know you not that your bodies are the members of Christ?" (1 Cor. 6, 15). Our alliance and union with Jesus Christ is consequently much more noble, more intimate and perfect than the members of a human and natural body with their head. Hence it follows that we belong to Jesus Christ as members to their head; that we are dependent upon Him and under His direction as members are upon their head; that we are one with Him as members are one with their head.

We must not be amazed when He assures us that His Father loves us as He loved Him: "Thou hast loved them, as thou hast also loved me" (John 17, 23); that He will write His name upon us: "I will write upon him the name of my God" (Apoc. 3, 12); that we will share one abode with Him, namely, His Father's bosom: "Where I am, there also shall my minister be" (John 12, 26); and He will let us sit with Him upon His throne (Apoc. 3, 21). What goodness! God is not content to call us His friends, His brothers, His children; He wishes us to be His members.

Let us love and bless Him and consider that this membership obliges us to live the life of our Head, to perpetuate His life upon earth, and to continue all the virtues He practised. How far removed we are from that holy life! How horribly guilty is he who commits a mortal sin! He dismembers Jesus Christ; he tears one of His members from Him to make it a member of Satan. Let us give ourselves to Jesus Christ as His members, and profess to live His life henceforth. It would be an outrage to see a member live any other life than that of its head. Wherefore, St. Gregory of Nyssa says: "Christianity is the profession of the life of Christ" (Ad Harmonium, De professione Christiana).

THIRD POINT

OUR OBLIGATIONS AS TEMPLES OF THE HOLY GHOST

A Christian is a temple of the Holy Ghost. "Know you not," says St. Paul, "that your members are the temple of the Holy Ghost?" (I Cor. 6, 19). Being children of God and one with the Son of God as members with their Head, it necessarily follows that we must be animated by the same spirit. St. Paul says: "And because you are sons, God hath sent the Spirit of his Son into your hearts" (Gal- 4, 6); and "if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his" (Rom. 8, 9). Hence the Holy Spirit has been given us to be the Spirit of our spirit, the Heart of our heart and the Soul of our soul, to be always with us and within us, not only as if dwelling in His temple, but actually as part of the mystical body of Jesus Christ, which should be animated by His Spirit, for the members and every part of the body should be animated by the spirit of their Head.

This being so, who can tell or even imagine the excellence of the Christian religion, the dignity of a Christian who is a child of God, a member of Jesus Christ and animated by His Spirit? How great is our obligation to God, what should be the sanctity of our life, and how guilty he is who commits mortal sin? For he drives the Holy Ghost from His temple to give entrance to the evil spirit; he crucifies Jesus Christ in himself, stifling His indwelling spirit to establish His enemy, Satan, in his soul.

74-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

All these truths are essentially solid and infallible. Let us consider them attentively, weigh them carefully and engrave them deeply upon our hearts, to excite ourselves to bless and love God because of our infinite obligations to Him for having made us Christians. We must resolve to detest our ingratitude and our past sins, and henceforth to lead a life worthy of the perfection of the Father whose children we are, and of the purity of the Spirit whose body we share.

Ejaculatory prayer: -

'Our Father Who art in Heaven, Thy Will be done on earth as it is in Heaven.'

Pater noster qui es in caelis, fiat voluntas tua sicut in caelo et in terra.

TENTH COLLOQUY

Admirable Accomplishments of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost in Making US Christians

FIRST POINT

To MAKE US CHRISTIANS GOD THE FATHER GAVE U HIS DIVINE SON

Two great achievements, which include many others, were necessary to make us Christians. The first was to break and destroy the unhappy and detestable alliance we had contracted by sin, with Satan, whose slaves, children and members we had become. The second was to reconcile us with God, whose enemies we were, and establish us in a new alliance with Him, nobler and more intimate than the bond we enjoyed before sin. To accomplish those two things, it was necessary to blot out our sins, to deliver us from the power of Satan, to purify and cleanse our souls from the guilt of their crimes, and clothe them with the graces and gifts befitting the title of children of God and members of the Son of God.

Here is what the Eternal Father accomplished for this purpose. He sent His Only Beloved Son, His Heart, His love, His delight, His treasure, His glory, and His life. He sent Him, I say, and gave Him. But where, to whom and why did He send and give Him?

1. He sent Him into this world, to this land of misery and malediction, a place of darkness, horror, sin and tribulation.

2. He gave His Divine Son to us, that is, to His enemies, to ingrates and perfidious creatures, to Jews, Herods, Judases and executioners who have outraged, persecuted, sold and crucified Him, and who still outrage, persecute, sell and crucify Him every day. By giving His Divine Son to us, He delivered Him up to the torments and death of the Cross. "God so loved the world, as to give his only begotten Son" (John 3, 16).

3. Why did He send and give His Only Son in this way? To deliver us from the tyranny of sin and the devil; to wash our souls in His Precious Blood, to adorn us with His sanctifying grace; to be our redemption, our reparation, our purification, our justification, our sanctification, and to raise us from the horrible position of slaves, children and members of Satan, to the admirable dignity of friends and children of God, brothers and members of Jesus Christ. "O ineffable goodness!" exclaims St. Augustine. "O incomparable mercy! We were not worthy to be slaves of God, and lo! we are numbered among His children!" O Good and Amiable Father, what shall we render to Thee for the infinite gift*Thou hast bestowed upon us, in giving us that which Thou dost hold most dear and precious, Thy Only Son? We offer Thee Thy same Dearly Beloved Son in thanksgiving, and in union with our obligation, we offer, give, consecrate and sacrifice ourselves to Thee wholly and irrevocably. Take us and possess us perfectly and forever.

SECOND POINT

TO MAKE US CHRISTIANS GOD THE SON ASSUMED HUMAN NATURE AND DIED ON THE CROSS FOR US

To make us Christians, the Son of God left the bosom of the Eternal Father and came into this world, was made man and lived thirtyfour years upon earth, counting from the time of His Incarnation. How many mysteries and great works He accomplished during those thirty-four years! How many painful things He suffered! What confusion, opprobrium and torments He endured! What bitter tears and Precious Blood He shed! How many fasts, vigils, labors, fatigues and torments and how much weariness, bitterness and anguish He bore! All this He did to make us Christians, children of God and His members.

O my God, Thou didst employ only six days in creating the world, and a moment in making man; but to make him a Christian, Thou didst devote thirty-four years, and thirty-four years of a life of incessant labor and unspeakable suffering. It cost Thee only a few words for the creation, and it cost Thee all Thy Blood and Thy life with infinite sufferings for the Redemption. Since I have so many obligations to serve Thee because Thou hast created me, how much more am I obligated to Thee for having redeemed me? If I owe myself wholly to Thee for the gifts of being and life by creation, what do I owe Thee for having given Thyself to me by the Incarnation, and for having sacrificed Thyself for me on the Cross? O my Saviour, insignificant as I am, let me at least be wholly Thine! May I live only to love, serve and honor Thee, and to make Thee loved and honored in every possible way!

THIRD POINT

ROLE OF THE HOLY GHOST IN THE INCARNATION AND THE SANCTIFICATION OF OUR SOULS

The Holy Ghost also helped to make us Christians. He formed our Saviour, our Redeemer and our Head in the sacred womb of the Blessed Virgin. He animated and directed God the Son in all He thought, said, did and suffered, His consummate Sacrifice on the Cross: "Who by the Holy Ghost offered himself unspotted unto God" (Heb. 9, 14) After our Lord ascended into heaven, the Holy Ghost came into this world, to form and establish the body of Jesus Christ, His Church, and to apply to it the fruits of His life, His Precious Blood, His passion and death; otherwise, our Lord would have suffered and died in vain.

Moreover, the Holy Ghost comes in baptism to form Jesus Christ in our souls, to incorporate us, to give us birth and make us live in Christ, to apply to us the infinite merits of His Precious Blood and His death, and to animate, inspire and direct us in all we think, say, do and suffer as Christians and for God; therefore we cannot pronounce the name of Jesus except by the power of the Holy Ghost, and we are not sufficient to think a holy thought without the grace of God. What great and wondrous marvels have been wrought by the Father, Son and Holy Ghost to make us Christians! O blessed St. John, you were indeed right to say in the name of all Christians: "The world

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

knoweth not us" (I John 3, 1). How we should bless and love the Father, Son and Holy Ghost for having called and exalted us to the dignity of Christians! What should be our life! It should be all holy, all divine, all spiritual for our Lord tells us. "That which is born of the Spirit, is spirit" (John 3, 6). O Divine Spirit, I give myself wholly to Thee: take possession of me and direct me in all things. Grant that I may live as a child of God, as a member of Jesus Christ, and as one born of Thee: "That which is born of the Spirit," who is consequently Thine, and should be possessed, animated and directed by Thy vivifying grace.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Let the mercies of *the Lord give glory to him: and his wonderful works to the children of men."

Confiteantur Domino misericordiae ejus: et mirabilia ejus filiis hominum (Ps. 106,8).

ELEVENTH COLLOQUY

By Baptism We Were Made Christians

FIRST POINT

BAPTISM IS A NEW CREATION

BAPTISM is a new creation; therefore Sacred Scripture calls the Christian a new creature. Baptism is a second creation of man of which the first is merely a shadow and a figure.

By the first creation, God drew us from utter nothingness; by the second, He drew us from the nothingness of sin which is a much deeper abyss. The former void is not opposed to the power of God; but the latter infinitely resists Him by its infinite malice. When God created us in Jesus Christ, as St. Paul says, when He gave us new being and new life in Jesus Christ by baptism, He found us in the nothingness of sin, in a state of enmity, opposition and contradiction towards Him. But He overcame our malice by His goodness and by His infinite power.

By the first creation God gave us a human, frail and mortal being; by the second He imparted to us heavenly and divine being.

By the first creation He made us to His own image and likeness; by the second He restored His image which sin had effaced, and imprinted it more nobly and more excellently than the original pattern, making us partakers of His divine nature in a much more eminent degree.

By the first creation God placed man in the visible world made at the beginning of time. By the second He placed the Christian in a new world. What is this new world? What is the Christian's world? It is God with all His perfections, the very bosom of God. It is Jesus Christ the God-Man, considered in Himself, in His life, in His mysteries, and considered also in His body which is His Church. This is the world of the new creature, quite different from the first world of the first creature.

The original world is a world of darkness, sin and malediction: "The whole world is seated in wickedness" (1 John 5, 19); but the second is a world of peace, sanctity and benediction, in which there is an infinite number of infinitely beautiful, delightful and agreeable treasures. What ravishing and wonderful delights there are in God, in the perfections of God, in the sanctity of God, in the eternity of God, in the immensity of God, in His glory, in His felicity, in His riches, in the earthly life of Jesus Christ and in all His mysteries, actions, sufferings and virtues; in His glorious and immortal life, in His Church and in the lives of all His saints!

In the world of Adam there are heavens, stars and elements. In the world of the Christian the heaven is God and the bosom of God; the sun is Jesus; the moon is Mary; the planets and the stars are the saints; the earth is the sacred humanity of Jesus Christ; the water is Christian grace; the air is the spirit of the Holy Ghost; the fire is love and charity; the bread is the Body of Jesus Christ; our wine is His Precious Blood; we are clothed with Jesus Christ: "For as many of you as have been baptized in Christ, have put on Christ" (Gal. 3, 27). There are no poor, nor mendicants, in the world of the Christian, because all true Christians are infinitely rich: "All things are yours" (1 Cor. 3, 22). We are all magnates, princes and rulers.

Woe to the world of Adam, wholly corrupted by sin! Let us leave it to the children of this world and give our hearts to our Christian world. Let us forsake the world of Adam to enter the world of Jesus Christ. All who belong to Jesus Christ are apart from the world of the old man, as Jesus Christ is not of it: "They are not of the world, as I also am not of the world" (John 17, 16).

We Christians find true riches, honors and pleasures in our regenerated world. The children of darkness find pleasure in seeing the things of their world, in speaking of them and hearing of them: "They are of the world. Therefore of the world they speak" (1 John 4, 5)- SO we should find our happiness in studying, describing and learning the wonders and news of our world, which are infinitely more delectable than the news of the sinner's world: "The wicked have told me fables: but not as thy law" (Ps. 118, 85)

THE CHRISTIAN SOUL WITH GOD

Finally, we should die to the world of Adam, to live in our world and the life of our world which is God and Jesus Christ our Lord. We inhere in Him as a part of Himself, consequently to be animated by His spirit and live His life. This death and this life are expressed in St. Paul's words: "You are dead: and your life is hid with Christ in God" (COL. 3, 3). Let us give ourselves to God that He may fill us with His lofty sentiments. Let us earnestly entreat Him to render His gifts fruitful in us, and to imprint in our hearts great contempt and aversion for the world of Adam, with a new, profound esteem and love for our own Christian world.

SECOND POINT

BAPTISM IS A REGENERATION

Sacred Scripture calls baptism a regeneration and a rebirth: "By the laver of regeneration" (Tit, 3, 5) "Unless a man be born again of water and the Holy Ghost" (John 3, 5). Baptism is a generation and birth, having for exemplar and prototype the eternal generation and birth of the Son of God in His Father's bosom, and His temporal generation and birth in the virginal womb of His Mother.

In His eternal generation, the Heavenly Father communicates to His Divine Son His being, His life and all His divine perfections; so, too, in our baptism, the Father gives us, through His Son and in His Son, a being and life all holy and divine.

In the temporal generation of the Son of God, the Eternal Father gives Him a new being and a new life, a life all holy and divine, yet none the less clothed with mortality, passibility, and all the wretchedness of human life; similarly, the new life which God gives us in baptism is wholly environed and beset by frailty, weakness, mortality and all the infirmities of human life to which it is United.

The Holy Ghost was sent to form the Son of God in the sacred womb of the Blessed Virgin. He is likewise sent to form our Lord and to make Him live by baptism in the depths of our soul, to in 82-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

corporate and unite us with Him and to give us birth and life in Him: "Unless a man be born again of water and the Holy Ghost, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God" (John 3, 5)

The Three Divine Persons of the Blessed Trinity have cooperated by the same power and goodness in the admirable work of the Incarnation, are present in our baptism, cooperating to give us the new being and new life in Jesus Christ which is conferred upon each neophyte.

Thus baptism is an ineffable generation. "Of his own will hath he begotten us" (James 1, 18), and an admirable birth, a living image of the eternal and temporal generation and birth of the Son of God. Therefore our life should be a perfect image of His life. "We are created in Christ Jesus" (Eph. 2, 10); We are "born of God" (John 1, 13) We should live only by God, in God and for God; we must live no life but that of Jesus Christ, directed solely by His spirit, which should animate and possess us completely.

Let us be very humbled to find ourselves so removed from this life which should exist in all Christians. Let us give ourselves to God with a great desire to live the real life. Let us implore Him to destroy in us the life of the world and sin, and to establish His admirable life in us, that we may not be like those unhappy beings whom St. Paul says are "alienated from the life of God" (Eph. 4, 18)

THIRD POINT

BAPTISM IS A DEATH AND RESURRECTION

Baptism is a death and a resurrection. It is death. "If one died for all, then all were dead" (2 Cor. 5, 14), says St. Paul, that is, all who are incorporated in Jesus Christ as His members in baptism, are become members of a dead and crucified Head, and must be crucified and dead to the world, to sin and to self.

It is also a resurrection for by baptism we leave the death of sin to enter the life of grace.

Baptism is a death and a resurrection, having for its prototype the Death and Resurrection of Jesus Christ. Christians who are baptized in Christ Jesus are baptized in His death. "We are buried together with him," says St. Paul, "by baptism unto death" (Rom. 6, 4). The Christian likewise participates in His Resurrection: "for, as Christ is risen from the dead by the glory of the Father, so we also may walk in newness of life" (Rom. 6, 4). By baptism we are obliged to die to everything, to live with Jesus Christ an all-heavenly life, as if we are persons no longer of earth, but of heaven, whose mind and heart dwell in heaven, according to the words of the first Christians speaking by St. Paul: "Our conversation is in heaven" (Phil- 3, 20), and his own exhortation: "If you be risen with Christ, seek the things that are above, not the things that are upon the earth" (COL. 3, 1-2)

THE CHRISTIAN SOUL WITH GOD

Finally, by baptism we are obliged to verify in ourselves the following words: "You are dead: and your life is hid with Christ in God" (COL. 3, 3)- We must be dead to all that is not God, to live only in God and abide with Jesus Christ: "as those that are alive from the dead" (Rom. 6, 13), says St. Paul. We must consequently lead a heavenly life upon earth, that is, a holy life adorned with all kinds of virtue, a continual exercise of love, adoration and praise of God, and of charity to our neighbor.

Such should be the life of all baptized persons. Those who, instead of living this holy Christian life, follow the life of the world which is, as St. Ambrose says, the body of the dragon, the life of pagans, of beasts, of demons, renounce their baptism, and render themselves far more guilty than pagans and demons. How dreadful is sin which extinguishes~ a life so noble and precious as the Christian life we have received by baptism, the life of God, the life of Jesus Christ in our souls, and establishes instead the horrible life of sin, a diabolical and detestable existence! Let us detest our sins. Let us renounce with all our heart the life of the world and of the old Adam. Let us give ourselves to Jesus Christ, begging Him to destroy the old life in us, and to establish His own all-glorious life in our regenerated souls.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"I live, now not I; but Christ liveth in me."

Vivo autem, jam non ego; vivit vero in me Christus (Gal. 2, 20).

TWELFTH COLLOQUY

Baptism Is a Divine Contract Between Man and God

FIRST POINT

By BAPTISM WE ENTERED INTO A SUPERNATURAL FELLOWSHIP WITH GOD

BAPTISM is a divine contract of man with God, containing three great provisos.

First, God by His incomprehensible goodness and mercy delivers us from our cursed alliance with Satan, whose children and members we have become by sin, and permits us to enter into a wonderful fellowship with Him. "By whom you are called unto the fellowship of His Son Jesus Christ our Lord" (I Cor. 1, 9), says St. Paul. "That which we have seen and have heard, we declare unto you," says St. John, "that you also may have fellowship with us, and our fellowship may be with the Father and with his Son Jesus Christ" (I John 1, 3)

What is this supernatural fellowship? It is the noblest and most perfect fellowship that can exist. It is not merely the alliance of friend with friend, of brother with brother, of children with their father, of bride with bridegroom, but of member with Head, which is the most intimate of all fellowships.

The natural and corporal union of the branches of a vine with the stalk, and of the members of the human body with the head, although the most intimate of all imaginable unions in nature, is only a figure and a reflection of our spiritual and supernatural union with Jesus Christ by baptism. Corporal and natural things are mere shadows of spiritual and supernatural life.

Furthermore, the union of the branches with the stalk of the vine, and of the members of the body with their corporal head, is in conformity with the quality, and the material nature of the things It joins together. But the union of the members of Jesus Christ with their Head is in conformity with the excellent holy and divine nature of the participants. Consequently, the more that divine Head and those sacred members are exalted above the natural head and its members, the more the alliance of Christians with Jesus Christ excels the union existing between the head and the members of the human body.

THE CHRISTIAN SOUL WITH GOD

The friendship we contract with Jesus Christ by baptism, and through Him with the Eternal Father, is so lofty and so divine, that it merits comparison by Jesus Christ Himself to the unity that exists between the Father and the Son in the words: "That they may be one, as we also are one. I in them, and thou in me: that they may be made perfect in one" (John 17, 22-23). So the unity of the Father and Son is the ideal of the union with God by baptism; and this union is the living image of that adorable unity.

Moreover, the wondrous alliance we enjoy with-God by baptism is exalted and ennobled by being founded, so to speak, on the Precious Blood of Jesus Christ and constituted by the Holy Ghost. Thus the Holy Ghost, who is the unity of the Father and the Son, is the sacred bond of our fellowship and union with Jesus Christ, and through Jesus Christ with the Eternal Father, a union indicated by the divine words: "That they may be made perfect in one" (John 17, 23) -

Thus we see that, by baptism, we become one with Jesus Christ, and through Jesus Christ with God, in the most exalted and most perfect concordance possible, next to the hypostatic union of the human nature with the Eternal Word. O incomparable alliance! O ineffable fellowship! How deeply indebted we are to the infinite goodness of God for a contract so great! What praise and thanksgiving we should offer Him! "Thanks be to God for his unspeakable gift" (2 Cor. 9, 15)

Since we are thus associated with the Saint of saints in so intimate a union, what should be the sanctity of our life? Surely, as we are one with God, we should have but one heart, one mind, one will, one affection: "He who is joined to the Lord, is one spirit" (I Cor. 6, 17) We should love only what He loves and hate what He hates. How deserving of hatred is sin! For what is it to sin mortally? It is to violate and break that divine alliance we formed with God by baptism, to return to our contract with Satan, His enemy. It is to dishonor the unity of the Father and the Son by destroying its image.

86-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

Sin profanes and renders fruitless the adorable Blood of Jesus Christ which is the foundation of our fellowship. It extinguishes the Spirit of God who is its sacred bond, according to the prohibitive: "Extinguish not the spirit" (I Thess. 5, 19). What a horror we should have for our past sins! What fear of relapsing into them! And what care we should exert to preserve the rich and precious alliance we have contracted with God, and to associate with it our entire life and activity.

SECOND POINT

BY BAPTISM GOD BOUND HIMSELF TO TREAT US As His CHILDREN AND MEMBERS OF HIS SON

The second proviso of our baptismal contract with God is that having received us into fellowship with Him, as His children and as members of His Son, He is bound to consider, love and treat us as His own children, and to regard and love our souls as His spouses. He has faithfully treated us in this way, and bestowed upon us inestimable gifts in conformity with the dignity and sanctity of our alliance with Him. He has endowed, enriched and adorned us with ineffable gifts and treasures. He has given us His grace of which the least degree is worth more than all the empires of earth. He has given us the gift of faith, hope, and charity, three priceless gifts and sources of inestimable blessings.

He has given us also the other virtues, which are all joined to charity, the seven gifts of the Holy Ghost and the eight beatitudes. Since our baptism, He has always kept His paternal eyes fixed on us, and His Heart loving us. He gives us everything necessary and suitable for body and soul, and is faithful in fulfilling all His promises to us. And after all that, He again assures us that we are to be His heirs in heaven, and that we will there possess benefits that eye has never seen, the ear heard, nor the human heart conceived! Oh, what graces! Oh, what mercies! "Let the mercies of the Lord give glory to him, and his wonderful works to the children of men" (Ps. 106, 30 -

THIRD POINT

By BAPTISM WE CONSECRATED OURSELVES To GOD AND PROMISED To ADHERE To JESUS CHRIST

The third proviso in our baptismal contract is that we offered and consecrated ourselves to God through our godfather and godmother. We promised to renounce Satan and his works, that is, all kinds of sin, and his pomps, meaning the world, and to adhere to Jesus Christ. According to the ancient form observed in baptism, the person to be baptized, turning to the West, said: Abrenuntio tibi Satana: "I renounce thee, Satan." Then turning to the East, he said: Adhaereo tibi Christe: «I adhere to Thee, Jesus Christ." And the same thing is still said to-day in different but equivalent words. Such is our solemn promise to God in baptism, a promise made before the Church, a promise hidden and included in a great Sacrament, a promise so binding that no one can ever dispense us from it, a promise, says St. Augustine, recorded by the angels, according to which we shall be judged at the hour of our death.

Let us judge ourselves now that we may not be judged then, and let us condemn ourselves that we may not be condemned. Let us rigorously examine our life and see if we have lived in accordance with this promise. We shall find that we have frequently acted as if we had promised just the opposite, and instead of renouncing Satan, sin and the world, and following Jesus Christ, we have turned our backs upon Him and denied Him by our works, and chosen the side of His enemies. What treacherous perfidy! What base ingratitude after so many favors! Oh, what shame for us! How we should mark our infidelity and renew the promise and profession of our baptism with greater fervor!

This I now wish to do, O my God. For this end I renounce thee, cursed Satan, with all my heart and with all my strength. I renounce abominable sin. I renounce the detestable world. I renounce its false honors and vain pleasure, its deceitful riches, its diabolical spirit, its pernicious maxims and all its corruption and malignity.

I give myself to Thee, O Lord Jesus, wholly and forever. I will adhere

IMITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

to Thy holy doctrine by faith, to Thy holy promises by hope, to Thy divine commandments and counsels by love and charity. I will follow Thee in the practice of every virtue, and I will follow Thee as my Head, as one of Thy members. I will continue Thy life on earth as far as possible, with the aid of Thy holy grace, which I most earnestly entreat for this intention.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"But it is good for me to adhere to my God, to put my hope in the Lord God."

Mihi autem adhaerere Deo bonum est, ponere in Domino Deo spem meam (Ps. 72, 28).

MEDITATION

The Choice of a State of Life

FIRST POINT

CONFORMITY TO THE HOLY WILL OF GOD IN THE CHOICE OF YOUR STATE OF LIFE

y. You are not permitted to choose any state of life but the one God has designed for you from all eternity. You must not take up any work except that to which He is pleased to call you. You are not your own, but His, by an infinity of rights: by the claim of creation, preservation, redemption, justification, His complete sovereignty over all creatures, and by as many claims as there were thoughts entertained, words spoken, actions performed, sufferings endured, and drops of blood shed by the Son of God, to redeem you from the slavery of the devil and of sin.

Therefore., it is His divine right to dispose of you, of your life and works, for you belong to Him infinitely more than a subject to his king, a slave to his master, a house to its purchaser, or a child to his father. Hence, renounce yourself, affirm that you desire not only to be His and to serve Him, but to serve Him in the way that will be most pleasing to Him, and in the state to which He deigns to call you. Ask Him to make known His holy will on this point, and resolve to dispose yourself as best you can to know and follow His providential plan.

SECOND POINT

MEANS OF KNOWING THE WILL OF GOD

You have seven things to do in order to dispose yourself to learn the divine will concerning your vocation.

The first is to humble yourself profoundly, acknowledging that you are infinitely unworthy to serve God in any state or condition whatever. Being involved in darkness, you cannot of yourself know God's will on this point, and you do not deserve that He should communicate His divine light to you.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

The second step is to purify your soul from all sin and affection for sin, by means of sincere repentance and an extraordinary confession, to remove everything that might prove an obstacle to the heavenly light and graces you require for this decision.

The third step is to declare to God that you desire to be absolutely His, to serve Him with all your heart, for love of Him, in the kind of life to which He deigns to call you.

Fourthly, you must attain complete neutrality towards the professions in which you might please God, and rid yourself of all sorts of designs and aspirations, placing your ideas, tastes, desires and inclinations at the feet of our Lord, that He may clothe you with His own, fully resigning your liberty that He may dispose of you as He pleases, placing your heart in His hands like soft wax or like a blank page, for Him to engrave or write on it the message of His adorable will.

Fifthly, you must pray earnestly, with greatest confidence, that by His infinite mercy, He may place you in the state He has deigned to choose for you from all eternity, although you are infinitely unworthy of it; and that He may give you the light and grace you need to embrace this state and to serve Him faithfully therein.

Sixthly, you should fortify your prayers with mortification, alms, or other works of mercy, corporal or spiritual.

The seventh and last step is to implore the help of the Blessed Virgin, of St. Joseph, of your guardian angel and of all the other angels and saints, that they may obtain for you the grace to know and follow what God asks of you.

These are the seven things you have to do to dispose yourself to know your vocation. Ask Almighty God to give you the grace to follow them; and, on your part, endeavor to dispose yourself with the aid of His holy grace.

THE CHRISTIAN SOUL WITH GOD

THIRD POINT

SIGNS WHEREBY YOU MAY KNOW THE WILL OF GOD

If after following the preceding steps, and entering into the dispositions indicated, you feel an inclination to a particular kind of life, you must not immediately follow this desire. First, you must examine it thoroughly, for fear of following the attractions of your own will, or of self-love, or of the evil spirit, in place of the inspirations of the Spirit of God. In order not to be deceived, consider carefully: 1. whether the state to which you feel drawn is one in which you can readily serve God and work out your salvation; 2. whether God has given you the necessary physical and mental qualities and the requisite conditions to enter that state; 3. whether your desire is stable and permanent; whether your motive is pure and disinterested, having no other intention but to honor God and accomplish His most holy will; 5. whether your desire is approved and confirmed by the advice of God's earthly representatives, capable of directing you in a matter of such importance.

These are the five marks of a true vocation from God. If they are to be found in your desire for any state, there is nothing left but for you to resolve firmly to embrace it, to seek the means leading to this end, to ask God to give you all the graces necessary to attain it, to serve and honor Him in it in accordance with His omnipotent designs, and to invoke the intercession of the Blessed Virgin, of the angels and saints.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Make the way known to me, wherein I should walk: for I have lifted up my soul to thee."

Notam fac mihi viam in qua ambulem, quia ad te levavi animam meam (Ps. 142, 8)

MEDITATIONS ON HUMILITY

MEDITATIONS ON HUMILITY ( 1 )

It is a daily practice in many religious communities to make a profession of humility. After the morning meditation, one of the members, inclining profoundly, recites it aloud, and at the end, the others, also bowing down, answer: "Lord Jesus Christ, have mercy on us."

But, if the truths contained in the words of this profession are to make a deeper impression, and produce greater fruits in souls, it is necessary to study carefully and meditate seriously upon them. This is why I have selected them as material for these meditations.

PROTESTATION OF HUMILITY

Domine Jesu Christe, nihil sumus,

Lord Jesus Christ, we are nothing,

Nihil possumus,

We can do nothing,

Nihil valemus-,

We are worth nothing,

Nihil habemus, praeter peccatum,

We possess nothing but sin,

Servi inutiles sumus,

We are useless servants,

Natura filii irae,

We are children of wrath,

Novissimi virorum et Primi Peccatorum,

The last of men and the first of sinners,

Nobis igitur confusio et ignominia .

Upon us be confusion and shame,

Tibi autem honor et gloria in saecula saeculorum. Amen.

To Thee be honor and glory for ever and ever. Amen.

Domine Jesu Christe, miserere nobis.

Lord Jesus Christ, have mercy on us.

(1). See footnotes, P. 41

FIRST MEDITATION*On the Words: Nihil Sumus-"We Are Nothing."*FIRST POINT*GOD IS THE SOVEREIGN BEING

LET us adore God, pronouncing the divine words Ego sum Qui sum: I Am Who Am" (Exod. 3, 14). Let us beg Him to make us realize their truth and render them fruitful in us, for all God's words are filled with light and power; light to illumine our minds and power to effect in our hearts the work of grace and sanctification in conformity with their significance.

Let us consider that God alone is worthy to exist and that He alone exists, properly speaking: "See ye that I alone am" (Deut. 32, 39). Any other creature whatsoever not only does not deserve to exist, but does not even exist before God. "All nations are before him as if they had no being at all, and are counted to him as nothing, and vanity" (Isa, 40, 17). His being is eternal, without beginning and without end, immense, filling all space, immutable, infinite, changeless, replete with admirable perfections, infinitely happy, rich and glorious, sovereign and independent, the source of all being, to whom every creature in heaven, on earth and in hell should be referred as to its source, should pay honor, homage, adoration and sacrifice as to the Sovereign Being of all Creation.

Let us rejoice that God is "He Who is." "Come in before his presence with exceeding great joy" (Ps. 99, 2).

Let us adore, bless and glorify Him. Let us offer and sacrifice to Him our being and the existence of all angels, men, irrational creatures and even the demons and damned.

HUMILITY

SECOND POINT*HOMAGE DUE TO GOD

Since God alone is He who is, and all that is not God is as nothing before Him, God alone is worthy to be considered, esteemed, loved, desired and honored. We should, therefore, have neither mind nor heart, nor thought nor affection, nor eye, nor tongue, nor hand for anything else. Yet, there is nothing less esteemed, loved, desired, and sought after, nothing of which we think less, of which we speak so little, and for Whom we do so little, as God. What is not, that is, the nothingness of created things, is much more esteemed, desired and sought after than He who is, and we think, speak and do a great deal more for nothing than for our Supreme All.

Let us humble ourselves for having been among those who have preferred the nothing to the All. Let us ask pardon of this great All. Let us protest that, henceforth, we desire to see and love Him alone in all things, beseeching Him to annihilate all things and ourselves in our own eyes, so that He may be All in all to us.

THIRD POINT*SCORN OF SINNERS FOR GOD

Let us consider how sinners annihilate "Him Who is." First, the atheists in belief annihilate Him, saying there is no God: "The fool hath said in his heart: There is no God" (Ps. 13, 1). Secondly, the atheists in life and morals annihilate Him by living and acting as if they did not believe in Him. Thirdly, all those who commit mortal sin annihilate Him because they annihilate His sovereignty, by refusing to depend upon Him. They destroy His will, desiring the accomplishment of their own whims to the detriment of His eternal will. They impugn His wisdom, desiring that He should have no will to punish them, His power in wishing that He should have no power, His providence in persuading themselves that He has no thought of things here on earth. We have annihilated God in this way if we have sinned mortally.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

Let us beseech Him to forgive us. In reparation, let us annihilate ourselves in every possible manner, in our own opinion and in that of others. Let us seek all sorts of opportunities to annihilate ourselves by various practices of humility, begging Him to employ His power and His goodness in extinguishing us and impressing upon our hearts a great affection for nothingness so that our highest ambition may be to become nothing in this world, that God may be All in all things: Omnia in Omnibus (I Cor. 15,28)

Ejaculatory prayer:

SECOND MEDITATION

Annihilation of Our Lord Jesus Christ

FIRST POINT

OUR LORD ANNIHILATED HIMSELF IN HIS HUMANITY

LET US adore our Lord Jesus Christ in the annihilation revealed in these words: "He emptied himself" (Phil. 2, 7), and consider that He annihilated Himself in His humanity and even in His divinity.

In His humanity, He annihilated Himself in thought, interior dispositions, words and actions.

He annihilated Himself in His thoughts and interior dispositions. His sacred humanity clearly realized that of itself it was nothing and His holy soul dwelt in a continual disposition of annihilation before the greatness and supreme Majesty of God.

He annihilated Himself in His words for it was He who said: "My substance is as nothing before thee" (Ps. 38, 6). Whenever He spoke of Himself, He always referred to Himself as "the son of man" that is, the son of nothingness and consequently "nothing."

He annihilated Himself in His actions: during the whole course of His life He abased and humbled Himself as a man of no account. Everything that He did was for His Heavenly Father and nothing for Himself as man, no more than if He had not existed. "Christ is God's" (I Cor. 3, 23)

He also annihilated His will, His intellect and His love of Himself.

Let us, therefore, exalt Jesus as much as He humbled Himself, and, imitating His example, let us endeavor to annihilate ourselves in thought, word and deed. Beg Him to give us a share in His divine knowledge, that we may realize our nothingness; to imprint upon our souls a lively perception of our nothingness; and to grant us the grace to think, say and do nothing for ourselves, but all for Him, our Supreme All.

100-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

SECOND POINT

OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST ANNIHILATED Himself IN HIS DIVINITY

Our Lord annihilated Himself even in His divinity. He extinguished in a manner His supreme being in the nothingness of our nature, His divine life in our mortality, His eternity in time, His immensity and infinity in the littleness of childhood, His omnipotence in weakness and importance, His wisdom in the folly of the crib and the Cross, His sanctity in His likeness to sinners, His glory in ignominy, His joy in suffering, His plenitude in poverty, His sovereignty in dependence and subjection.

Adore and glorify Him in this annihilation. Thank Him for the glory rendered to His Eternal Father. He has annihilated such great, holy and divine privileges for us; therefore let us annihilate for Him things base~ abject, evil and corrupt, such as is everything found in us.

THIRD POINT

OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST WILLED TO BE TREATED As NOTHING

Consider that while He was on earth, our Divine Saviour willed to be treated as a non-entity, or rather, as if He were less than nothing, for He permitted mankind to treat Him with less respect and humanity, and with more ignominy and cruelty than they would have done if He had been only a nonentity. Consider, too, that even in our day, He is annihilated in His divinity and humanity in the Blessed Sacrament of the Altar; and is treated there even by the majority of Christians as a nothing, for they behave in His presence with less fear and reverence than if He were nothing.

Let us give ourselves to Him, to honor and imitate Him in this annihilation. Beg Him to blot out our vanity and give us a share in His spirit of humility, so that henceforth we may regard and treat ourselves and be glad to be esteemed and treated as nothings who deserve only contempt and humiliation.

HUMILITY 101 -

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Lord Jesus Christ, we are nothing." Domine Jesu Christe, nihil sumus.

THIRD MEDITATION

Annihilation of the Blessed Virgin and of Holy Church

FIRST POINT

THE BLESSED VIRGIN ANNIHILATED HERSELF IN HER OWN EYES

THE Blessed Virgin resembled her Divine Son in His self-annihilation and imitated perfectly His thoughts, His interior dispositions, His words and actions in the manner we have indicated, and all proportions being observed, she also extinguished her own will, her intellect and her self-love, although all these things were sanctified in her. Let us honor her in this self-effacement and ask her to obtain for us the grace to imitate her profound humility.

SECOND POINT

OUR LADY WAS TREATED BY OTHERS AS IF SHE WERE NOTHING

Let us consider that the Blessed Virgin treated herself and was treated by others in this world as if she were nothing. Offer to God all the glory that she rendered Him by this self-abnegation. Let us strive to exalt her in reward for her abasement and endeavor to imitate her.

THIRD POINT

OUR LORD WILLED THAT HIS CHURCH SHOULD BE SMALL AND HUMBLE

Let us consider that the Son of God compares His Church to a grain of mustard seed, "which is the least indeed of all seeds" (Matt. 13, 32), and that He willed that it should be small, humble and persecuted in this world. It was small in its foundation, being founded on a crucified

HUMILITY 103 -

God-Man and twelve poor, weak and ignorant fishermen, all of whom died by the hands of executioners. It was small in its first members. "For see your vocation, brethren," says St. Paul, "that there are not many wise according to the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble. But the foolish things of the world hath God chosen, that he may confound the wise; and the weak things of the world hath God chosen, that he may confound the strong. And the base things of the world, and the things that are contemptible, hath God chosen: and things that are not, that he might bring to nought things that are" (1 Cor. 1, 26-28). The Church is even unpretentious in its tremendous sacraments, which are symbolized by very minor objects: Baptism by water, the Blessed Eucharist by bread and wine.

The Son of God has ordained this for three reasons:

1. To confound human pride which always desires its work to be conspicuous, while He wills that His greatest work, namely, His Church, should be concealed under these apparently insignificant things.

2. To teach us not to be guided by human judgment and reason which esteem and regard only sensible and apparent things, but by the spirit of faith which considers only things invisible and eternal according to the sacred words: "While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen. For the things which are seen, are temporal; but the things which are not seen, are eternal" (2 Cor- 4, 18)

3. To teach us to despise the ideas and opinions of the world and refrain from efforts to win its acclaim. If our Lord had wished to please the world, He would have founded His Church on the emperors, on the great and the wise of the earth, and would have followed a much more elaborate course with regard to His doctrine and Sacraments. He wished to teach us to despise fame and worldliness and to employ all our efforts in pleasing God alone in all we do and to serve Him by humbling and abasing ourselves everywhere and always.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Lord Jesus Christ, we are nothing."
Domine Jesu Christe, nihil sumus.

FOURTH MEDITATION

We Are Nothing from Every Point of View

FIRST POINT

OUR ORIGIN IS NOTHINGNESS

LET us adore the Holy Ghost pronouncing these words by the mouth Of St. Paul: "If any man think himself to be something, whereas he is nothing, he deceiveth himself" (Gal. 6, 3). Let us give ourselves to the Holy Spirit and earnestly beseech Him to make us realize this truth and give us grace to draw therefrom the fruit He wishes.

Let us consider that we are nothing in body or in soul, since both have been created out of nothing, so that our origin is nothingness. Worldly men may glory in the status of their ancestors. Let us Christians remember that we descended from nothing from which God draws us forth. What should humble us still more is that we did not deserve that He should draw us from it any more than an infinite number of other creatures who will remain in nothingness forever. God in His pure goodness withdrew us from the void.

Another truth which should confound our pride is that if God did not preserve us every moment, if He were to leave us to ourselves, we would fall back into the nothingness whence we came, so true is it that of ourselves and by ourselves we are nothing. By counting every moment that has elapsed since you came into the world, you may know how many times you would have been annihilated if God had not performed as great a miracle to preserve you as He did to create you. Hence, let us acknowledge that nothingness is our portion and our inheritance. We may glory in this and in nothing else. Let us adore and praise the divine power and goodness for having drawn forth and sustained us at every moment. Let us beg God to engrave these truths profoundly upon our mind, so that they may serve to destroy our vanity and to keep us humble.

SECOND POINT

BECAUSE OF OUR SINS WE HAVE DESERVED TO BE ANNIHILATED

Let us consider that as often as we have offended God in any way whatever, we have deserved to lose the being He has given us, and that if He willed to punish us as we deserve, He would have annihilated us, according to these words: "Correct me, O Lord, but yet with judgment: and not in thy fury, lest thou bring me to nothing" (Jer. 10, 24)

Now, if we have so often deserved to be annihilated, have we not also deserved all the humiliations, abjections and trials of this life? What would we think of a man who had merited not only death, but extinction, thousands of times? How unbearable are vanity and selfesteem in one who has been drawn from nothing, without any merit on his part, who has been preserved from annihilation as many times as there are moments in his life! How can man be vain when he has justly merited to be returned to nothingness as often as he has offended his Creator and Deliverer!

THIRD POINT

THE GREAT EVIL OF PRIDE

The truth of our nothingness being conceded, let us consider how great an evil is pride, and how very wrong it is to attribute any vanity to oneself in thought, word and action or to seek honor and praise. Pride is an illusion, a lie and a theft. It is a truth of faith that we are nothing; therefore he who esteems himself and thinks himself to be something is a seducer who deceives himself: "he deceiveth himself" (Gal. 6, 3)- He who speaks well of himself is a liar. "For I know that there dwelleth not in me, that is to say, in my flesh, that which is good" (Rom. 7, 18), says St. Paul. He who attributes anything to himself and seeks honor and glory, is a thief who robs of His property God who is All, to appropriate it to him who is nothing.

106-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

How often have we committed these faults? Let us ask pardon of God and beg Him to preserve us from them in future. To prevent our relapse, let us frequently reflect on and what we are of ourselves, and where we would be if God did not continually exercise His mercy on our behalf.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Correct me, O Lord.... and not in thy fury, lest thou bring me to nothing."

Corrige me, Domine... verumtamen non in furore tuo, ne forte ad nihilum redigarme (Jer. 10, 24)

107-

FIFTH MEDITATION

on the Words: Nihil Possumus--"We Can Do Nothing."

FIRST POINT

GOD ALONE IS MIGHTY

LET us consider that God alone is mighty: (1 Tim. 6, 15). His power is eternal, infinite, immense, immutable and essential; that is, everything in Him is omnipotent, His goodness, His justice, His mercy and all His other divine perfections. He could, in a moment, annihilate all things. Heaven and earth cannot resist His power for an instant. "Almighty is -his name" (Exod. 15, 3) - Sin is the only thing He cannot enact; for ability to sin is not power, it is merely impotence.

Let us adore this divine power. Let us rejoice that we belong to a Master and Father Who is omnipotent. Let us give and consecrate ourselves to His divine power and beg Him to extinguish in us all power to do evil and make us powerful to do good: "Mighty in work and word" (Luke 24, 19)

SECOND POINT

OUR LORD ACKNOWLEDGED His IMPOTENCE

Let us consider and adore our Lord Jesus Christ uttering these words: "I cannot of myself do any thing" (John 5, 30), not only as man but even as the Son of God. As He received being and life from His Heavenly Father, He likewise received all power from Him and He acknowledged this in His public profession: "I cannot of myself do any thing." This profession He willed to be written in His Gospel in order to confound our pride and to teach us not to appropriate any part of our performance to ourselves; for even the Son of God acknowledged that of Himself and without His Father, He could do nothing, and thus referred to His Heavenly Father everything that He accomplished.

108-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

Let us consider also that the Blessed Virgin has perfectly imitated her Son in this humility; and that as a reward the Eternal Father has given all power to the Son, and to the Mother in relative proportion: "All power is given to me in heaven and in earth," says our Lord (Matt. 28, 18). And the Blessed Virgin can say the same in due proportion. Let us rejoice over this magnificent reward of humility and surrender ourselves to the Son and His Blessed Mother, begging them to employ their vast power in crushing our pride and making us share in their humility.

THIRD POINT

OF OURSELVES WE CAN DO NOTHING

Let us consider attentively the truth of these words: Nihil possumus. First, of ourselves we can do nothing pleasing to God. "Without me you can do nothing" (John 15, 5). Secondly, we cannot speak a good word: "O generation of vipers, how can you speak good things, whereas you are evil?" (Matt. 12, 34)- "No man can say the Lord Jesus, but by the Holy Ghost" (I Cor. 12, 3). Thirdly, of ourselves we cannot entertain a good desire. "It is God who worketh in you, both to will and to accomplish" (Phil. 2, 13). Fourthly, we cannot have a good thought without the grace of God. "Not that we are sufficient to think any thing of ourselves, as of ourselves: but our sufficiency is from God" (2 Cor 3, 5). Lastly, we cannot perform the least act of Christian virtue, nor resist the slightest temptation in the world, even for a moment. What a source of humiliation for us! Let us rejoice in this abjection and engrave these truths deeply upon our minds, so that everywhere and always we may acknowledge our futility and our great need of God. This will compel us to have recourse to Him continually, saying frequently: "O God, come to my assistance; O Lord, make haste to help me" (Ps. 69, 2).

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Gladly therefore will I glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may dwell in me."

Libenter igitur gloriabor in infirmitatibus meis, ut inhabitet in me virtus Christi (2 Cor. 12, 9).

SIXTH MEDITATION*On the Words: Nihil Valemus---'We Are Worth Nothing.'*FIRST POINT*OUR LORD WISHED TO BE TREATED AS IF HE WERE WORTHLESS

LET us consider that every detail concerning our Lord Jesus Christ is of infinite value. Every aspect of His divinity, His humanity, His body and soul, His thoughts, words and actions, is of infinite value. Let us rejoice in His sublime worth. Let us thank the Eternal Father for having made everything in His Beloved Son Jesus Christ so noble and so precious.

Let us consider that our Lord Jesus Christ, although He is infinitely adorable in all things, willed to be treated as though He were of no account. People despised His words, His works, His sacred humanity, His Precious Blood and His life as if they were of no value. Even in our own day He is similarly treated by Jews, infidels and heretics in the Blessed Sacrament and by many Christians who blaspheme, crucify and trample Him underfoot.

SECOND POINT*IN CONSEQUENCE OF SIN WE ARE THE MOST WRETCHED OF ALL CREATURES

Let us consider the essential truth of these words: "We are worth nothing." There is no creature, however wretched it may be, among insensible and inanimate things, that cannot be said to be better and more precious than we are, on account of our corruption from sin. So we should humble ourselves below the mire, the dust, and the most abject things, and make more account of the most contemptible objects in the world. We may regard ourselves like Jonathan, speaking to

HUMILITY

David: "Who am I thy servant, that thou shouldst look upon such a dead dog as I am?" (2 Kings 9, 8) and say with Solomon: "What shall we be able to do to glorify him?" (Ecclus- 43, 30) -

THIRD POINT*AS CHILDREN OF ADAM WE DESERVED ETERNAL DEATH

Let us consider these words of our Divine Lord: "You are the salt of the earth. But if the salt lose its savour, wherewith shall it be salted? It is good for nothing any more but to be cast out, and to be trodden on by men" (Matt, 5, 13)- Consider that as often as we have offended God, we have fallen into the state signified by these words: "Salt that has lost its savour." Hence, we are good for nothing any more but to be cast out of the house of God and to be trodden underfoot by men. Not only that; but we are fit only to be cast into eternal fire, according to the words which our Lord addressed to Ezechiel the prophet: "What shall be made of the wood of the vine? . . . Shall it be useful for any work?" (Ezech. 15, 2-4). No. As our Lord says in the Gospel, it is only fit for the fire of hell: to be "cast into the fire" (Matt. 3, 10)

This is our fitting destiny as children of Adam. Hence we are good for nothing but to be cast into eternal fire. And what is worse, we do not deserve even that the justice of God should take the trouble to cast us into hell, nor that God should ascend His mighty throne to judge us. We should cultivate the sentiments of Job, when, after considering the baseness and corruption of man, he exclaims: "And dost thou think it meet to open thy eyes upon such a one, and to bring him into judgment with thee?" (Job 14, 3)

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Lord Jesus Christ, we are worth nothing."
Domine Jesu Christe, nihil valemus.

SEVENTH MEDITATION

On the Words: Nihil Habemus Praeter peccatum
"We Possess Nothing Except Sin."

FIRST POINT

ALTHOUGH OUR LORD WAS FILLED WITH VIRTUE AND GRACE
HE CONSTANTLY HUMILIATED, HIMSELF

LET us consider and rejoice that God possesses in Himself the infinity of good. Let us consider also that there existed not the least shadow of evil in our Lord; yet He humbled Himself as if there had been all kinds of evil and no good within Him. He appropriated nothing to Himself, but referred everything to His Almighty Father, being regarded and treated as if He were destitute of all good, according to the words of Sacred Scripture: "I am the man that see my poverty" (Lam. 3, 1). Yet we who are full of evil and void of all good cannot humble ourselves! We even strive to rob God of what belongs to Him, and to attribute it to ourselves!

SECOND POINT

OF OURSELVES WE ARE NOTHING

Let us consider and weigh the truth of these words: "We have nothing." This means actually that we have nothing in the order of nature nor of grace, neither in heaven nor on earth, neither in body nor in soul. St. Paul said: "I know that there dwelleth not in me, that is to say, in my flesh, that which is good" (Rom. 7, 18). How much more truly may we say it? If we possess any good, any quality, or any advantage, either natural or supernatural, it is not our own. "What hast thou that thou hast not received? And if thou hast received, why clost thou glory, as if thou hadst not received it?" (1 Co. 4, 7. So far from being able to glory in the natural or supernatural gifts that God has bestowed upon us, we should derive from them a sense of humiliation, confusion and fear. The more we have received from God, the more we are obliged to render to Him. Yet if we examine ourselves carefully, we will find that we are making very poor use of the graces of God, and that we have more reason to humble ourselves before His Providence than if we had received no blessings whatsoever.

THIRD POINT

VICE Is DEEPLY ROOTED WITHIN US

Let us consider how destitute we are of every virtue: faith, hope, charity, fortitude, justice, temperance, prudence, humility, obedience, patience, meekness; and how every vice lies deeply rooted within us. Yet we esteem ourselves and wish others to have a good opinion of us. Let us be profoundly humble; let us learn to know ourselves, to treat ourselves and wish others to treat us as persons destitute of all good and filled with every evil.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Lord Jesus Christ, we have nothing except sin."

Domine Jesu Christe, nihil habemus praeter peccatum.

EIGHTH MEDITATION

On the Words: Servi Inutiles Sumus-We Are Unprofitable Servants."

FIRST POINT

GOD IS SUFFICIENT To HIMSELF AND DOES NOT NEED ANY CREATURE

LET US consider that the first reason why we are useless servants arises from the greatness, sufficiency and plenitude of God, Who calls Himself Sadai, that is, "sufficient to Himself," because He is so sufficient to Himself and replete with good, that He has no need of us nor of any creature of heaven or earth. Even the God-Man, Jesus Christ our Lord, says: "I have said to the Lord: Thou art my God, for thou hast no need of my goods" (Ps. 15, 2).

The fact that God has no need of our goods is an infallible mark of His divinity. That is why, when we offer or give anything to God, we sacrifice it to Him, that is, annihilate it before Him, to testify thereby that He has no need of anything. If anyone presented a valuable horse to a governor and were to kill the animal when offering it, the governor would not be pleased because the gift would be useless to him. But the greatest service we can render to God is to sacrifice and annihilate our offerings, to testify thereby that He has no need of them. This is why Jesus Christ sacrifices Himself on the Cross. Now, if Jesus Christ is not necessary to God, and if all the angels and saints and the Blessed Virgin can say: "We are unprofitable servants," with how much greater truth can we say it?

Let us rejoice that God is so replete with every conceivable good; let us be glad to be useless because He is quite sufficient to Himself.

HUMILITY

SECOND POINT

WE ARE NOTHINGNESS IN THE ORDER BOTH OF NATURE AND OF GRACE

The second reason for our uselessness arises from our extreme poverty and our twofold nothingness in the way of nature and grace. Our first portion is the nothingness from which God created us: and the second is the nothingness into which we have fallen by sin, which deprives us of the ability to entertain even a single good thought. Nothing can come from nothing; consequently we are utterly useless and worthless.

Let us ask God to engrave these truths deeply upon our hearts and to preserve us from thinking that we are necessary or useful in any way whatever. God alone is necessary.

THIRD POINT

By SERVING GOD PERFECTLY WE GIVE HIM ONLY WHAT COMES FROM HIM

The third cause of our uselessness is implied in the comparison drawn by our Lord in the Gospel. A servant who accompanies his master on a journey does not rest when he reaches home, but must prepare refreshments for his master and then serve him at table; yet even so his master does not thank him, for he has only done the duty he is paid to do. So, our Lord says: "When you have done all these things that are commanded you, say: 'We are unprofitable servants; we have done that which we ought to do'" (Luke 17, 10)

Now, besides this, there are three considerations which should make us deeply humble: 1. When we have done our utmost in the service of our Master, we have done only what we ought to do. 2. We never do all we could, nor practise all the virtues we might. 3. We accomplish nothing as perfectly as we might, but always with many faults. Even if we were to do everything possible as perfectly as we could, we would still do nothing: for it is God who operates in us. Even in our virtuous actions, we actually give nothing to God, but are continually receiving from Him. Therefore, if we were to perform the good works of all the angels and saints and were to practise every virtue to an eminent degree, we should still say: "We are unprofitable servants."

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

Let us ask God to imprint all these truths deeply upon our souls and make them fruitful, destroying our pride and giving us true humility.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Lord Jesus Christ, we are unprofitable servants."
Domine Jesu Christe, servi inutiles sumus.

NINTH MEDITATION

Natura Filii Irae-"We Were Born Children of Wrath."

FIRST POINT

WE ARE CHILDREN OF WRATH BECAUSE OF ORIGINAL SIN

By OUR own corrupt and depraved nature we are children of wrath, because we are children of sin and iniquity. This is our second portion, our first being nothingness. We are children of sin and perdition for we were born in sin and in damnation. "We were damned before we were born," says St.

Bernard. We have within us the source of every sin. Let everyone examine himself and he will find that he has within him the source of pride, avarice, envy and every other vice. So much so that if God left us to ourselves, we would be as proud as Lucifer, as avaricious as Judas, as envious as Cain, as gluttonous as the rich glutton, who "feasted sumptuously every day" (Luke 16, 19), as choleric and cruel as Herod, as lewd as Anti-Christ, as idle as the unprofitable servant in the Gospel, "the unprofitable servant cast ye out into the exterior darkness" (Matt. 25, 30)

Let us humble ourselves, contemplating the sins of earth and hell as if they were our own. When any one speaks evil of us, or offends us, let us not complain, but take his part against ourselves, remembering that we bear within us seeds of every evil. When we hear of impious and wicked men, let us consider that we have similar taints of sin in our own person, by reason of which the Church obliges the priest celebrating the Holy Mass to strike his breast and say: Nobis quoque peccatoribus. "Also to us sinners."

118-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

SECOND POINT

WE HAVE A STRONG INCLINATION TO EVIL

We have such a strong inclination to evil that if God did not continually bear us up, we would fall into a hell of every kind of sin with more impetuosity than a mill-stone hurled into the sky would fall if it were not restrained by a miracle. This weight which drags us down to sin is our self-love. "Self-love is my weight. I am carried by it wherever I go" (St. Augustine, Conf- 1, 13, C- 9) - "It almost overcomes the weight of my actions" (Breviar. rom. Comm. un. Mart., Oratio, Infirmitatem). Our own enterprise is the work of sinners. Let us not be surprised when we see anyone fall, but thank the mercy of God which sustains us. Let us have compassion on the errors and lapses of others and never prefer ourselves to anyone. Let us reflect that if God were to give other men the same grace that He has given us, they would be far better than we and derive more profit.

THIRD POINT

WE ARE SLAVES OF SIN

We are slaves of sin: "Whosoever committeth sin, is the servant of sin" (John 8, 34). Wherefore, if God left us to ourselves, sin would tyrannize over us as it does over the damned, so that we could not think, speak or do anything but sin. We should be wholly transformed into sin as saints in heaven are transformed into sanctity. And so, of ourselves, we are nothing but sin, and we deserve to be treated as sin itself by God and His creatures.

This is how we should esteem ourselves; and we should be glad that others have the same low esteem for us and treat us as sinful men. Let us ask this grace of God.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"O Lord, rebuke me not in thy indignation, nor chastise me in thy wrath."

Domine, ne in furore tuo arguas me neque in ira tua corripas me (Ps. 6, 2).

TENTH MEDITATION
on the Same Words: "We Were Born Children of Wrath."

NOT only are we the source of every sin, not only have we an original inclination to sin, but we are an abyss of every sin for four reasons. The first is that our sins annihilate God, which is the extreme malice of sin and of the sinner. The three reasons which prove this malice will form the three points of this meditation.

FIRST POINT

THE SINNER USURPS WHAT BELONGS TO GOD AND MAKES HIMSELF His OWN GOD

We are an abyss of sin because sin and the sinner, so far as possible, drag God from His throne and annihilate Him, and what is still worse, the sinner elevates himself to the throne of God, usurping the dignity belonging only to God. In order to understand this, we must remember that, when God created man and all things, He created them only for Himself: "The Lord hath made all things for himself" (Prov. 16, 4)

Being the principle, the exemplar and the end of man and of all creatures, God wishes men to return to Him as to their origin, to imitate Him, to model their life and their actions on Him as their exemplar, to follow Him as their rule, to work towards Him with all their strength, by every thought, word and action, as to their last end. To render him capable of doing this, God has given man a mind, a heart and a will to know and love Him, to return to Him, to imitate Him and to tend unceasingly to Him as to his center. And in order that man may do so with joy and facility, God has enlightened his mind with the light of faith, has poured divine grace into his soul and enkindled love in his heart.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

But what has ungrateful man done? He has become separated from God and devoted his interests to self. Instead of employing his love for God, he has devoted it to himself and developed self-love. Instead of returning to God as to his principle, he has turned away from Him. Instead of referring to God all the blessings of nature and grace, man appropriates them to himself by complacency and self-esteem, as if they came from himself, who is only nothingness. Instead of following God as his exemplar and his rule, he follows the rule of his passions. Instead of allowing himself to be led by the spirit of God, he desires no other guidance than that of his own inclination. Instead of tending to God as to his end, taking his repose in Him and doing everything for Him, man wishes to tend wholly to himself, and to do everything for self.

Who is God? God is He whose will, interest, pleasure and honor should be preferred before every other will, interest, pleasure and honor. What does the sinner do? He prefers his own will, interest, pleasure and honor to the will, interest, pleasure and honor of God. Thus he usurps the place of God, makes a god of self, falls into self-adoration and pays self the homage which belongs to God alone. This is the extreme iniquity of sin. This is what we have done every time and as often as we have sinned. Hence we should despise ourselves as a bottomless pit of sin.

SECOND POINT

THE SINNER MAKES HIMSELF GOD OF ALL CREATURES

Not only does the sinner make a god of self, but he also makes himself the god of all creatures made by God. Man wants other creatures to offer him what belongs only to God; he desires them to prefer his inclinations, interests, pleasure and honor to those of God. Instead of attributing and referring every good to God alone as to its only source, man desires creatures to esteem him as if he possessed good in himself, and to praise and applaud his actions as if he could do good, independently.

He desires created beings to imitate him instead of God. He desires them to have no other rule than his inclinations, to be directed by his spirit, to love him to the prejudice of God and to do everything for him instead of doing everything for God. We have frequently been guilty of this and so we have usurped the place which God alone should hold towards creatures. What an abomination! How true it is that I am an abyss of every sin! O my God, impress these truths upon my mind; grant that I may regard, treat and hate myself as much, and that I may be glad to be so treated by others.

HUMILITY

THIRD POINT

THE SINNER MAKES Himself THE GOD OF GOD

There is another and a last extremity of sin, the deepest abyss of iniquity, which consists in making oneself the god of God. The sinner would wish God to prefer his interests, will, pleasure and honor to the interest, will, pleasure and honor of His divine majesty. He would wish that his human will might rule the Providence of God and that God should be guided by the sinner's whims and fancies. He would seek to be the end of God and to have God adore him and make him His idol. O abomination of abominations! Behold the bottomless pit of sin! See what we have done every time we have sinned! Here we have an infinite source of infinite humiliation.

O my God, let me see these truths in the light of faith! O my God, enrich their fruitfulness within me! Let me know myself, let me know that I am nothing and that Thou art all! Let me no longer consider myself, let me do nothing for self, but all for Thee. Let no creature think of me, speak to me, nor of me, do anything for me nor give me anything, but all for Thee; and do Thou Thyself give me nothing, do nothing for me, nor consider me any more, but everything for Thyself! For Thou alone shouldst be Thy object! Let nothingness be obliterated with regard to itself, with regard to all Thy creatures and with regard to Thy supreme majesty! Let All be all, in all things and everywhere.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"O Lord rebuke me not in thy indignation, nor chastise me in thy wrath."

Domine, ne in furore tuo arguas me, neque in ira tua corripas me (Ps. 6, 2).

ELEVENTH MEDITATION

On the Same Words: "We Were Born Children of Wrath."

WE DESERVE to be the object of the wrath of God and all God's creatures and of our own condemnation, for three reasons.

FIRST POINT

THE EVIL WHICH THE SINNER WORKS UPON HIMSELF

Since by sin the sinner kills his body, so far as he may, and kills his soul, he deserves that God should take away the life and being imparted to him, in punishment for his abuse of existence, in using it to fight against his Creator. Moreover, the sinner robs himself of the grace and friendship of God, and of eternal happiness, meriting the torments of hell. Thus he injures himself far more than the demons in hell and the creatures in the world could harm him even if they all united for his ruin.

Therefore I, a sinner, should despise, humble and hate myself more than all the abominable and contemptible things in the world. If God were to surrender me to the demons, they would exercise upon me the hatred I have merited by my sins and so would perform an act of justice. And I, instead of humbling and hating myself, exalt, love, praise and revere myself.

O my God, what a contradiction! Let it exist no more! Let me hate and fear myself more than death, more than the devil, more than hell. Permit me to hate nothing but myself, who am nothing but sin, and let me vent all my wrath, hatred and vengeance upon myself, out of zeal for Thy divine justice towards sin and the sinner!

HUMILITY

SECOND POINT

THE SINNER DESTROYS ALL THE WORKS OF GOD IN SO FAR AS IS POSSIBLE

We have merited God's wrath because the sinner, so far as possible, destroys all the works of God in nature, grace and glory. In nature, since he commits sin, for which God might justly annihilate the whole world. The damnation of a single soul is a greater evil than the destruction of the entire world of nature. Now God may justly damn a soul for a single mortal sin. Therefore He might justly annihilate the world of nature in punishment for a mortal sin. I say, furthermore, that, according to all theologians, the extinction of every natural being is not so great an evil as a venial sin. So he who commits a venial sin works an evil greater than the destruction of the whole world; consequently God might justly destroy the whole world in punishment for a venial sin.

He who sins mortally annihilates also the world of grace and glory. For, if all God's graces were in his soul, by committing mortal sin, he would destroy them all and consequently all the glory destined for him in heaven. Hence, the sinner merits the anger of every creature of nature, grace and glory and they will vent their just wrath upon him in the day of judgment. Even now they would do so if the mercy of God and the Blood of Jesus Christ did not restrain them: "The mercies of the Lord that we are not consumed" (Lam. 3, 22)

O my God, let me behold this devastating truth in Thy divine light, so that I may know that no creature, rational or irrational, owes me anything; no one should consider, nor love, nor give me anything, nor render me any service or assistance, nor even think of me. Rather do I deserve that every creature should employ all his strength in destroying and annihilating me.

124-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

THIRD POINT

THE SINNER EVEN ATTEMPTS To DESTROY GOD

We have merited God's wrath because the sinner annihilates not only all the works of the Creator, but also all the works of the Redeemer. The sinner renders void and useless to himself all the meritorious labors, sufferings, the Precious Blood, the life and death of the Divine Son of God, together with all the Sacraments and means of salvation established in Holy Church.

Moreover, the sinner even "annihilates God as far as lies in his power," says St. Bernard. In the first place, the sinful man obliterates the will of God replacing it with his own; secondly, he destroys within himself the Spirit of God Who is God; thirdly, he destroys the life of God in his soul by grace; fourthly, he crucifies Jesus Christ in himself after having already crucified Him with the Jews: "Crucifying again to themselves the Son of God" (Heb. 6, 6). Therefore, we may say that the sinner annihilates all things, since he annihilates, as far as he may, God the author of all things. The sinner deserves to be an object of wrath and malediction to created and uncreated things, and all creatures should unite to crush him. So he may say with the prophet: "Correct me, O Lord, but yet with judgment: and not in thy fury, lest thou bring me to nothing" (Jer. 10, 24)

If I carefully consider these truths, O my God, how is it possible that I can still be proud? O Lord, crush this serpent of pride in my soul at any cost.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Correct me, O Lord, but yet with judgment and not in Thy fury, lest thou bring me to nothing."

Corripe me, Domine, verumtamen non in furore tuo, ne forte ad nihilum redigas me (Jer. 10, 24).

125-

TWELFTH MEDITATION

On the Same Words: "We Were Born Children of Wrath."

WE ARE unworthy of every good, and deserving of every evil; therefore we should humble and hate ourselves.

FIRST POINT

WE ARE INFINITELY UNWORTHY OF EVERY GOOD

Our existence as children of wrath, death and iniquity makes us unworthy of every good, corporal, spiritual, temporal and eternal, of nature, grace or glory either emanating from the Creator or derived from creatures, unworthy to receive any assistance, gifts or favors from our Creator or from creatures, nay, infinitely unworthy even that they should think of us or speak of us or on our behalf. I say infinitely unworthy, because no human mind is capable of realizing our unworthiness except the mind of God alone. The following are the reasons:

First, by our sins we have robbed ourselves of blessings, that come from infinity, namely, the grace and friendship of God, the tide of children and heirs of God and the enjoyment of God and all the treasures He possesses in Himself.

Secondly, we have deprived God of a good, that in a way is infinite in depriving Him of the service, honor, love and obedience we owe Him, a good that is eternal in its duration, for anything we do for God renders Him an honor that will last for all eternity. We deprive God of a good, infinite in a way because it is due to God on account of His infinite perfections and our obligations towards Him; infinite because God purchased it at an infinite price, the Precious Blood of His Divine Son.

Thirdly, by sin we have willed to deprive God of Jesus Christ, the God-Man, by crucifying Him anew, and consequently we have also 126-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

willed to deprive Him of the mystical body of Jesus Christ and of all the honor, praise, glory and adoration that Jesus Christ will render to His Father for all eternity, either in Himself or by His mystical body, the Church.

Fourthly, we have willed, as a result of this, to deprive all creatures of their Redeemer.

For these reasons, we have rendered ourselves so to speak infinitely unworthy of every good. Therefore, let us not complain when we are forgotten or when we do not receive the recognition we expect, but let us humble ourselves.

SECOND POINT

WE ARE DESERVING OF ALL EVIL

We are infinitely deserving of every evil, of contempt, punishment and suffering. I say infinitely because we are so despicable that only God Himself can understand the measure of our guilt, I say that we infinitely deserve every evil, corporal and spiritual, temporal and eternal, from God and from creatures, because by sin we have done an injury to the infinite God, to ourselves and to all creatures, and sin is an evil which may be said to be infinite in its nature, its object, its end and its effects.

The sinner inflicts an injury which we call infinite on God Himself, for as St. Bernard says, "he annihilates God so far as it lies in his power."

Man does an injury to himself for he kills his body, and murders his soul, as completely as possible.

He perpetrates an injury against all creatures in the order of nature, grace and glory since he destroys them to the extent of his ability. Should we not call it an infinite injury?

This being so, let us not be surprised when other creatures injure us by word or act, nor when God chastises us. Let us only be surprised that our Divine Creator and all His faithful creatures suffer us to exist anywhere but in hell and in nothingness.

THIRD POINT

WE SHALL NEVER HUMBLE OURSELVES SUFFICIENTLY

From these two truths follow other realities:

1. We shall never completely fathom the abyss of our unworthiness and misery. Even after we are well advanced in this knowledge, we must believe that there is infinitely more left to be known in the unfathomed depths of our nothingness.

2. We can never humble ourselves sufficiently, and even if we were to accomplish our very utmost in this respect, we would still be removed from the humiliation due to our baseness, and from the final degree of humility. Our Lord alone attained this final degree for He alone humbled Himself infinitely.

3. If all the creatures of heaven, earth and hell were to employ all their strength in vilifying us, it would be but a trifle of the shame we deserve.

4. God alone can humble us suitably.

Let us beg Him to engrave these truths upon our mind and make them fruitful in us. O great God, if we believe these truths, how can we still be proud? How can we seek to avoid suffering, or find it so hard to humble ourselves? How can we love honor and dread contempt so much? Lord Jesus, have mercy on us.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"To us sinners therefore be confusion and shame and to Thee be honor and glory forever and ever. Amen."

Nobis peccatoribus confusio et ignominia, tibi autem honor et gloria in saecula saeculorum. Amen.

THIRTEENTH MEDITATION

On the Same Words: "We Were Born Children of Wrath."

WE Have merited the wrath of God and of all His creatures, and deserve eternal torments.

FIRST POINT

WE HAVE MERITED THE WRATH OF GOD

The greatest torment of the damned is the wrath of God: "They shall be called ... the people with whom the Lord is angry for ever" (Mal. 1, 4). "They would prefer being burned in a fire ten times more intense," says St. Chrysostom, "than see the face of God kindled with wrath against them." Therefore, they will cry out on the day of judgment, "Fall upon us and hide us from the face of him that sitteth upon the throne and from the wrath of the Lamb. For the great day of their wrath is come, and who shall be able to stand?" (Apoc. 6, 16-17) and St. Paul tells us: "Who shall suffer eternal punishment in destruction, from the face of the Lord" (2 Thess. 1, 9).

We have merited like condemnation and would infallibly and eternally have become the object of the wrath of God, of the wrath of the Father, of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, if Our Lord Jesus Christ had not delivered us by bearing the wrath of His Almighty Father for our sake according to His own words: "Thy wrath hath come upon me" (Ps. 87, 17). Let us love and bless our merciful Saviour and humble ourselves at the thought that, since we have incurred the wrath of God, we have, in consequence, merited to be deprived of all His graces and all the effects of His bounty; and much more have we merited all the sufferings of this life and even the torments of hell; yet even these are much less than the wrath of God.

HUMILITY

SECOND POINT

WE HAVE MERITED THE WRATH OF ALL CREATURES

Not only are the damned the object of God's wrath, but also of the wrath of all creatures rational and irrational, animate and inanimate, in heaven, on earth and in hell. For the justice of God arms all His creatures against them: "He will arm the creature for the revenge of His enemies. He will put on justice as a breastplate, and will take true judgment instead of a helmet. He will take equity for an invincible shield. And He will sharpen His severe wrath for a spear: and the whole world shall fight with him against the unwise" (Wisd, 5,18-21).

1. The Blessed Virgin, all the angels and saints in heaven are all animated by God's wrath against the damned. God communicates all His sentiments to His loved ones and the more closely they are united to God, the more they share in His dispositions. They love what God loves and hate what He hates. Whence it follows that the Blessed Virgin is more wrathful against the sins of the damned than all the angels and saints together; and so it is with all the other saints in proportion.

2. All creatures upon earth, even the inanimate things of nature, are enkindled with wrath against the damned. Even every single atom is full of wrath against the damned and aids God's justice in avenging the injuries these sinners perpetrated against their Creator.

3. Even the damned and the demons cooperate with God's justice and are wrathful against one another, so that they are mutual executioners, tearing, cursing and tormenting one another perpetually.

4. Every reprobate is his own executioner raging against himself, hating himself and finding himself more intolerable than all the other demons and damned, because of the just judgment of God and the operation of the wrath of God which animates the lost soul against himself.

We have merited that this punishment should be ours, and we should look upon ourselves as wretches who have merited the eternal wrath of God and of all His creatures forever. We should infallibly have been reduced to such a state if our Lord had not delivered us, by taking our place and willing to be hated and persecuted by the world and all creatures. Let us love and bless our Saviour and make Him the only object of our love. Let us be humbled, venting our hatred, anger and contempt upon ourselves. Let us reflect that, having merited the wrath of God and all His creatures, we do not deserve to be well treated by anyone and, if all creatures were to do their utmost to humiliate and persecute us, it would be justly deserved.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

THIRD POINT

WE HAVE DESERVED ETERNAL TORMENTS

In addition to the wrath of God and creatures, the damned will also suffer many other eternal torments: the gnawing worm: "their worm dieth not" (Mark 9, 45), the unbearable stench, the shouts, the blasphemies, hunger, thirst, fire, suffering in every part of body and soul, rage, despair, confusion, infamy and the endless eternity of all these torments.

We have merited all these punishments and much more have we merited all the confusion and ignominy of this world. Let us die of shame if we are still proud and vain, and cling to a high esteem of ourselves, after studying these realities, or if we still think anyone owes us anything. Let us beg God to engrave deeply on our mind the knowledge of our three portions, namely, nothingness, sin and the wrath of God, of creatures and eternal torments. This is expressed in our protestation of humility: "We are nothing; we are worth nothing; we are worthless servants; we have nothing but sin; we are born children of wrath." Let us not let a day pass without remembering and reflecting on our just deserts, so that when we have occasion to humble ourselves as we do hourly, we may ever have them in mind and they may serve to keep us constantly humble as the Holy Spirit teaches: "Humble thyself in all things" (Ecclus. 3, 20)

Ejaculatory prayer:

"To us sinners be confusion and shame, and to Thee be honor and glory forever and ever. Amen."

Nobis peccatoribus confusio et ignominia, tibi autem honor et gloria in saecula saeculorum. Amen.

FOURTEENTH MEDITATION

On the Words: Novissimi Virorum-"The Last of Men."

FIRST POINT

OUR LORD ADVISES US TO TAKE THE LOWEST PLACE

BY THESE words we profess our desire to regard ourselves as the least of men and to rejoice that others should treat us similarly. To enter into this disposition and to realize the truth of these words, let us first consider and adore our Lord pronouncing the words: "Sit down in the lowest place" (Luke 14, 10). Let us adore His admirable designs for each one of us in giving this counsel of humility. Let us humble ourselves and ask His forgiveness for having opposed His holy will and beg the grace not to do so again. Let us give ourselves to the spirit in which He pronounced those words so that they may be faithful in us. And on our part, let us cultivate the desire to practise His counsel in constant lowliness.

SECOND POINT

OUR LORD CHOSE THE LAST PLACE IN ALL HIS WORDS

Let us consider that our Lord taught nothing that He did not first practise, and He always chose the last place in His words, thoughts, interior dispositions and actions.

By His words, He said of Himself, "I am a worm and no man" (Ps. 21, 7). Let us adore Him uttering these words and consider that the worm is the most abject of creatures. It lives in the ground and everyone tramples it underfoot. In the same way the Son of God abased Himself beneath the feet of every man.

Very frequently, too, He called Himself "the Son of man" (Luke 12, 8), to confound our pride, let us prefer to be called by what is most excellent in us, whereas Jesus Christ, God and man, Son of God and Son of man, takes His name from what is lowest in Him, calling Himself the Son of man, that is, the Son of the sinner who, of himself, is only nothingness, sin and damnation. Thus our Lord calls Himself a sinner, which is the greatest of all humiliations.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

Moreover, after saying of St. John the Baptist: "Amen I say to you, there hath not risen among them that are born of women a greater than John the Baptist," our Saviour says of Himself: "Yet he that is the lesser in the kingdom of heaven (that is, in the Church) is greater than he" (Matt. 11, 11). But how can we reconcile those ideas: "He that is lesser is greater?" If He is greater than St. John the Baptist, how is He lesser in the Church? And if He is the least in the kingdom of heaven, how is He greater than St. John? He is truly and indeed greater, but He calls Himself lesser because He treated Himself and willed to be treated as the last of men.

Lastly, He wished to be called "the most abject of men" in Sacred Scripture (Isa. 53, 3). This was one of His titles of honor. He gloried in it and wished it to be mentioned among His titles in Scripture. Let us adore Him humbling His greatness in this manner and taking the last place by His words.

Let us humble ourselves for having so often in our words exalted ourselves, resolving to refrain carefully from everything contrary to humility, asking God's grace to enable us to do so.

THIRD POINT

OUR LORD TOOK THE LAST PLACE IN HIS THOUGHTS AND INTERIOR DISPOSITIONS

The Son of God took the last place in His thoughts and interior dispositions. These thoughts certainly correspond with His words and His Heart was not in opposition to His lips. Therefore, He considered Himself the last of men and always remained in this attitude before God. Interiorly, He always took the lowest place for He regarded Himself as the bearer of the sins of all men, taking the place of all criminals, and obliged to endure the humiliation of their crimes, and consequently, to humble Himself below all creatures. Let us adore Him in these dispositions; let us give ourselves to Him, asking Him to let us share the depths of His sublime Humility.

HUMILITY 133 -

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Lord Jesus, I will sit down in the lowest place."
Domine Jesu, recumbam in novissimo loco.

FIFTEENTH MEDITATION
On the Same Words: "The Last of Men."

FIRST POINT

OUR LORD TOOK THE LOWEST PLACE IN His INCARNATION AND CHILDHOOD

OUR Lord took the last place in His actions throughout the whole course of His life, as well as in His words, thoughts and interior dispositions.

In becoming man, He might have assumed the most perfect state of human life at the very moment of His Incarnation, by forming Himself as perfect a body as that of Adam at his creation. Instead He chose the lowest state of human life, that of infancy.

In choosing a mother, He might have chosen one of high rank, a queen, a princess or a titled lady. Instead He chose a woman from the lowest rank, from among the poor who earn their livelihood by manual labor. He chose a virgin who esteemed herself as the least of all His creatures.

He also chose a foster-father of lowly condition, who likewise esteemed himself the least of all men. For, after the Blessed Virgin, no one was so humble as St. Joseph.

Since it was ordained for Him to become incarnate in Judea, Jesus might have chosen Jerusalem or some other famous city; but he chose Nazareth, a despicable place, as these words of Nathaniel show: "Can any thing of good come from Nazareth?" (John 1, 46).

For His birth, He might have chosen a palace or honorable edifice; but He willed to be born in a most abject place, in a stable, in a cave which was a shelter for beasts. And He wished to be laid on the straw in the manger, between an ox and an ass.

Eight days after His birth, He willed to be marked with the seal of sin by circumcision, which was to rank himself amongst the lowest, for there is nothing lower than sin and the quality of sinner whose likeness He assumed.

Then, too, He chose the most trying season and month of the year for His birth; and He willed to be born not as Lord and Master, but enrolled as a subject and vassal of Emperor Augustus.

When He was presented in the Temple, He would not have His parents offer a lamb, the offering of the rich and the first of the nation, but two pigeons or turtle-doves which was the offering of the poor and the last of the people.

When Herod sought His life, He chose flight, the last and most ignominious of all means of escape; He chose the country most unworthy of His presence, Egypt, where idolatry was rife and where Satan held sway.

In the Temple with the doctors, He was not the doctor but the disciple, not learned but ignorant, questioning the doctors as if to learn of them.

Let us adore our Lord in all these mysteries and in all these humiliations. Let us strive to exalt Him the more, the more He has humbled Himself. Let us bless Him for the glory He rendered the Eternal Father by His abasement. Let us ask our Blessed Saviour to give us a share in His spirit of humility.

SECOND POINT

OUR LORD TOOK THE LAST PLACE DURING HIS ENTIRE LIFE

In the house of His Blessed Mother and St. Joseph, the first place was rightfully His but He took the last. Although He is infinitely higher than either of His parents, He coveted no other rank with them than that of subject: "And (He) was subject to them" (Luke 2, 51).

Among all the conditions of human life, He takes not that of a prince nor of the wealthy, but the last of all, that of a poor man who earns his bread by the sweat of his brow: "Is not this the carpenter's son?" (Matt. 13, 55)

In His baptism in the Jordan He again takes the lowest place, willing 136-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

to be baptized as if He were a sinner. "For so it becometh us to fulfil all justice" (Matt. 3, 15), that is, all humility.

When He retired into the desert, He spent forty days among wild beasts. He permitted the vilest of creatures, the demon, to approach Him, to tempt Him and consequently to treat Him as if He were a sinner and capable of sin, and even to touch Him and carry Him from one place to another; hence He took the last place, in Satan's hands.

With the apostles and disciples He takes the last place, for He says: "I am in the midst of you, as he that serveth" (Luke 22, 27)

At the Last Supper, He knelt and performed the humblest action possible, which was to wash their feet, even those of Judas, thus placing Himself at the traitor's feet, at the feet of a devil, as He Himself said: "One of you is a devil" (John 6, 71). This was the lowest place in the world, for Judas was the most wicked creature the world has ever known.

In His Passion our Lord subjected Himself to the power of darkness: "This is your hour, and the power of darkness" (Luke 22, 53). He was treated as a fool and a madman by Herod and his army and in the streets of Jerusalem, and He died on a Cross. If there is question of poverty, our Lord was born, lived and died in the greatest poverty ever experienced. If there is question of suffering, He suffered extreme torments in body and soul. If there is question of privation, no one has ever endured or will ever endure any lot comparable to His. If there is question of humiliation, there never was and never will be abasement and lowliness like His. He died "with the wicked" (Isa. 53, 12). "He shall be filled with reproaches," says the Prophet Jeremias (Lam. 3, 30)

He also takes the last place in Holy Church where in the Blessed Sacrament, He is the Victim bearing the sins of the world, where He dwells in the greatest humiliation and annihilation imaginable., according to both the manner and duration of this humiliation.

Lastly, even in the midst of His glory in heaven, He wills to bear for all eternity the marks of the greatest ignominy ever known, His Sacred Wounds-the marks of His Crucifixion and His dreadful death of shame.

Let us adore, bless and exalt the Son who thus first practises what He teaches in the words: "Sit down in the lowest place." Let us give ourselves to Him to enter wholly into His dispositions.

HUMILITY

THIRD POINT

REASONS FOR THE DIVINE CHOICE OF THE LAST PLACE

Let us consider the reasons which inspired the Son of God to take the last place. The four chief motives are: (1) To render adequate homage by this extreme abasement to the supreme majesty of His Eternal Father; (2) to repair the dishonor given to His Heavenly Father by the pride of men who always desire the first place everywhere; (3) to confound our pride and to oblige us by His example to humble ourselves; (4) to merit and acquire the grace for us to overcome our pride and imitate Him in His humility.

Let us thank Him for all these lessons. Let us die of shame at finding ourselves so proud. Let us cultivate a great desire to imitate Him and obey His blessed words. In order to do this let us surrender ourselves to His spirit of humility.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Lord Jesus Christ, I will sit down in the lowest place."
Domine Jesu Christe, recumbam in novissimo loco.

SIXTEENTH MEDITATION

On the Same Words: "The Last of Men."

FIRST POINT

OUR LORD WILLED TO BE TREATED AS THE LAST OF MEN By His CREATURES

NOT only did the Son of God treat Himself as the last of men, but He also willed to receive similar treatment from others.

1. He was so treated by men and by sinners, members of Satan, for never was man treated by men with such ignominy and cruelty as was inflicted on the Son of God.

2. Not only was He reviled by men, but also by the demon in the desert when the evil spirit tempted Him as if He were capable of all types of sin. The devil even carried Him from one place to another, which so far as we know, Satan was never permitted to do to anyone else. Our Lord was also assailed by the demons during His Passion, according to His own words: "This is your hour, and the power of darkness" (Luke 22, 53), which show that He subjected Himself to the powers of darkness.

SECOND POINT

OUR LORD WILLED TO BE TREATED AS THE LAST OF MEN BY THE HOLY GHOST

Our Lord was also treated as the last of men by the Holy Spirit. The Gospel says that after our Lord was baptized in the River Jordan, that is, after He had taken our sins upon Him, "The Spirit drove him out into the desert" (Mark 1, 12). These words signify ignominy, and that the Holy Spirit treated our Lord as one burdened with all the sins of the world and obliged Him to endure confusion and penance for them.

HUMILITY

139-

This was prefigured by the emissary goat led yearly to the Temple, over which the high priest confessed all the sins of the people, then committed it to a herdsman who drove it out into the desert (Lev. 16, 5-10). Thus the Eternal Father charged His divine Son with all our sins: "The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all" (Isa. 53, 6). And the Holy Ghost drove Him into the desert like a man burdened with all the crimes of men and obliged to endure their humiliation.

THIRD POINT

OUR LORD WILLED TO BE TREATED AS THE LAST OF MEN By His FATHER

Our Lord was also treated as the last of men by His Eternal Father. God looked upon His Son as taking the place of sinners and treated Him as such; nay, He treated Him almost as if He were sin itself: "He hath made sin for us" (2 Cor 5, 21). Wherefore He says: "For the wickedness of my people have I struck him" (Isa. 53, 8). "He that spared not even his own Son, but delivered him up for us all" (Rom. 8, 32), to the Cross, to death, to the powers of darkness and to the greatest opprobrium that ever was and ever will be. Nay, it would seem that divine justice treated Him with more severity than the reprobate in hell, the vilest of creatures. For it is not unwarranted that those wretches, who are rebels, should be treated as they are, for they assuredly deserve it; but it is a very strange thing to witness the only Son of God treated by His Eternal Father for the crimes of others.

Thus did our Lord take the lowest place and treat Himself as the last of men in His words, thoughts, actions and interior dispositions throughout His whole life. Thus did He will to be treated as the last of men by sinners, members of Satan, by the demons, by the Holy Ghost and by His Eternal Father. He did so in order to glorify His Father absolutely by humbling Himself to the very utmost to repair the dishonor given to His Father by our pride. He stooped to confound our arrogance, to make us hate vanity and love humility.

How pride dishonors God and how horribly displeasing it must be to Him since it was necessary that God-made-man should thus humble Himself in order to repair such dishonor! What a dreadful vice is vanity when the Son of God had to lower Himself to such depths of abasement in order to destroy it! How precious is humility in the sight of God, and how pleasing to His divine majesty since the Son of God wished to be treated in this way in order to make us love humility, to attract us to it by His example and obtain for us the grace to practise it! How guilty we are if we still yield to pride, if we will not humble ourselves! How great will be the shame of the ambitious on the day of judgment!

140-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

Let us adore our Lord in all these humiliations. Let us desire Him to be exalted in proportion to His abasement. Let us enter into His dispositions. Let us take the lowest place everywhere in mind and heart, and be glad to be treated both by God and creatures as the last of men. Let us beg the Son of God to destroy our pride and imprint in our hearts His dispositions of humility.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Lord Jesus, I will sit down in the lowest place."

Domine Jesu, recumbam in novissimo loco.

SEVENTEENTH MEDITATION

on the Words: Primi Peccatorum-"The First of Sinners."

FIRST POINT

OUR LORD WILLED TO BE TREATED AS THE CHIEF OF SINNERS

LET US consider that the Son of God treated Himself and willed to be treated not only as the last of men, but also as the first of sinners: "(He) was reputed with the wicked" (Isa. 53,12). He willed to die between two criminals as if He had been their leader. He was treated with as much opprobrium as if He had been sin itself: "Being made a curse for us" (Gal. 3, 13), says St. Paul. Our Divine Redeemer regarded Himself as laden with all the crimes of all sinners and He considered all the sins of men as His own. "He willed that our sins should be His own," says St. Augustine.

Let us adore and exalt Him in His profound annihilation. Let us beseech Him to destroy our pride and share His humility, showing us how we should treat ourselves and be glad to be treated, since the Son of God so humbled Himself.

SECOND POINT

MANY GREAT SAINTS TREATED THEMSELVES AS THE FOREMOST OF SINNERS

Let us consider that only the greatest saints shared the dispositions of our Lord and treated themselves as the foremost sinners. Such was St. Paul's opinion of himself: "A faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into this world to save sinners, of whom I am the chief" (I Tim. 1, 15). St. Francis, St. Bernard, St. Dominic and many other great saints practised the same self-abasement. The 142-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

Holy Ghost inspired them with these thoughts and sentiments; consequently they were founded upon truth. For He is the Spirit of truth and not of lies. We must not ask how we can reconcile the idea that St. Paul is the first of sinners, if St. Francis is the greatest sinner. And how St. Francis is, if St. Bernard is? Although the spirit of human reason does not understand, it nevertheless holds true before God and according to the Spirit of God.

We must not follow our own light, which is nothing but darkness, but we must draw this conclusion and fruit from the verdict of the saints. If I had the light of those saints, I would see clearly that they were right in believing themselves the first of sinners. And, if those great saints lived in such dispositions and esteemed themselves so vile, what should be my opinion of myself, and how much more reason have I to believe that I am "the first of sinners," and to treat myself as such and rejoice to be so inspired by others?

Let us honor those sentiments in the saints. Let us bless God for their presence and thank Him for their meritorious application. Let us ask our Lord through the intercession of the saints to let us share their abnegation. Let us ask St. Paul, St. Francis and the other saints to engrave similar sentiments of profound humility in our own hearts.

THIRD POINT

REASONS WHY WE SHOULD CONSIDER OURSELVES THE GREATEST OF SINNERS

Although human reason cannot penetrate the things of God, and the truths and maxims of the Gospel, the following reasons may serve to prove that we are: "The first of sinners."

In the first place, we may easily compare ourselves with Lucifer, Judas and Antichrist for, as children of Adam, we have within us the source of every sin of earth and hell. But, in order to put ourselves below Judas, Lucifer and Antichrist, we should believe with St. Francis, that if God gave to the greatest of all sinners the graces He has bestowed upon us, that sinner would become better than we, and if God were to withdraw His graces and leave us to ourselves, as He will withdraw them from Antichrist, we would be worse than His arch-enemy.

HUMILITY

We should, moreover, compare our sins not with the sins of other men but with the graces we have received from God. Now, we have received more graces from His divine bounty than all pagans, Jews and heretics together. If we are priests, we have received more graces than all other Christians for the grace of the priesthood surpasses every other. Consequently, the sins of a priest are greater than the sins of all other men; therefore, a single sin of ours makes us as guilty and more so than the sins of all other men put together.

As priests, we are obliged in imitation of our Sovereign Priest, to take the sins of others upon ourselves and to expiate them by humiliation and penance as if they were our own sins. Wherefore, every priest should humbly treat and consider himself as laden with the sins of the whole world and rejoice in being treated as such even as if he were the chief and greatest of sinners.

Let us beg our Lord to imprint these truths upon our minds and engrave these dispositions in our hearts. Let us desire them ardently. Let us give ourselves to the Spirit of God to treat ourselves henceforth, and to wish to be treated by others with lowest esteem.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"O God, be merciful to me a sinner."

Deus propitius esto mihi peccatori (Luke 18, 13)

MEDITATIONS
ON OUR BIRTH AND BAPTISM

IV

MEDITATIONS
ON OUR BIRTH AND BAPTISM ( 1 )

( 1 ). "Meditations on Our Birth and Baptism" are taken from "Part Seven" of The Kingdom of Jesus, Pp. 295-312. They may be used very profitably during the Christmas Season as an exercise in honor of the Child Jesus.

Saint John Eudes prefaces the first meditation with the following remarks: "I can never tell you enough, nor should you grow tired of hearing and considering (so important is it) that Jesus Christ, Who is your Head and Whose members you are, passed through all the stages of human life, through which you are passing. He did almost all the things that you do, and performed not only His outward acts but also all His interior actions for Himself and for you. Therefore, Christian sanctity and perfection consist in ceaselessly uniting yourself to Him as His members, and in continuing to do what He did, as He did it, to the best of your ability, uniting yourself with His dispositions and intentions. It likewise consists in consenting and adhering to what He did for you in the presence of His Father and in ratifying it. So, too, it consists; in performing all your inward actions not only for yourself, but also for the whole world, in imitation of the Son of God, and especially for those with whom you have some special connection with respect of God. This Christian devotion inspires similar acts of union and imitation proportionately, towards the Blessed Virgin, never separating the Mother from the Son."

FIRST MEDITATION

Duties to Be Rendered to God on the Anniversary of Our Birth

FIRST POINT

LET US ADORE JESUS IN HIS ETERNAL AND TEMPORAL BIRTH

O JESUS, I adore Thee in Thy eternal birth and Thy divine dwelling for all eternity in the bosom of Thy Father. I also adore Thee in Thy temporal conception, and in Thy presence in the sacred womb of Thy most pure Mother, for the space of nine months, and in Thy birth into this world at the end of that time. I adore and revere the great and admirable occurrence of all these mysteries. I adore and honor the holy dispositions of Thy Divine Person and Thy holy soul in these mysteries. With my whole heart I adore, love and bless all the acts of adoration, love, oblation Thou didst render to the Eternal Father, and all the other divine acts and practices offered Him in these mysteries.

SECOND POINT

LET US UNITE OURSELVES TO THE HOMAGE THAT JESUS RENDERED TO His HEAVENLY FATHER FOR US

Again I adore and glorify Thee, O Good Jesus, as performing all these things for Thyself, for me and for everyone in the world. On this anniversary of my birth I give myself to Thee, O my Dear Jesus, that I may now repeat the acts Thou didst perfect while dwelling from all eternity in the bosom of the Father, and for nine months in the bosom of Thy Mother. I unite myself to Thee to perform this duty as Thou didst perform it, in union with love, humility, purity and other holy dispositions of Thy adorable soul. Since Thou didst perform this act for Thyself and for me and for all men in the world, I also desire to exercise this present devotion, not only for myself, but for all the men in the world.

I now desire, O my Saviour, to render unto Thee as far as I can, with the help of Thy grace, all the rightful homage I should have paid Thee if I had been gifted with the use of reason, from the first moment of my life. So, too, I desire to pay Thee all the due meed of adoration, praise and love, which should have been given to Thee at that same time by all my friends, and by all people who ever were, are, or shall be in the world; and even that which should have been rendered to Thee by the evil angels at the moment of their creation. I give myself again to Thee, my Lord Jesus. Enter into me, and unite me to Thyself in order that in and by Thee I may fulfil these desires for Thy pure glory and satisfaction.

THIRD POINT

LET US ADORE, LOVE AND THANK JESUS FOR OUR BIRTH AND BAPTISM

In union, therefore, with the devotion, love, humility, purity and sanctity, and all the other sublime dispositions with which Thou didst honor, bless, love and glorify the Eternal Father in Thy eternal and temporal birth, and in Thy dwelling from all eternity in the bosom of Thy Father, and during nine months in the bosom of Thy Mother: I acclaim Thee; I adore, love, bless and glorify Thee together with the Father and the Holy Spirit as my God, my Creator and Sovereign Lord. I adore, love and glorify Thee also on behalf of all creatures-angels, men, animals, plants and inanimate things. I wish I could possess in myself the totality of their being, all their strength and all their actual or potential capacity to glorify and love Thee, that I might now use it all in paying Thee this homage for myself and for them, especially those for whom, before Thee, I have both the obligation and desire to pray with special zeal.

I give Thee infinite thanks, O my God, on behalf of myself, all creatures, and especially my particular friends, for the gift of life, and

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

the capacity to know and love Thee. I thank Thee for having preserved our existence and allowed us to be born alive to receive Holy Baptism. If we had died before being delivered from original sin by the grace of Holy Baptism, which has been the misfortune of many souls, we should never have seen Thy divine face, and we should have been deprived forever of Thy holy love. May all the angels and saints bless Thee forever for this most special favor Thou hast accorded us.

Ejaculatory prayer: "He made us, and not we ourselves."

Ipse fecit nos, et non ipsi nos (Ps. 99, 3)

SECOND MEDITATION Our Obligation of Loving and Serving God

FIRST POINT

LET US CONSECRATE OUR BEING AND OUR LIFE TO JESUS

OMNIPOTENT Creator, Thou didst give me being and life solely that I might employ them in Thy love and service. Therefore, I offer my life to Thee. I consecrate and sacrifice it altogether to Thee, together with the being and life of all the angels, all men and all creatures, in testimony that I desire no longer to live save to serve Thee with all the perfection Thou dost ask of me.

O my God, what a source of humiliation and pain it is for me to think that, during the first months of my life, I was Thine enemy and under the power of Satan, in a continual state of sin that infinitely displeased and dishonored Thee! For this I most humbly beg Thy forgiveness, O my Lord, and in satisfaction for the dishonor I gave Thee while I remained in the state of original sin, I offer Thee, O Father of Jesus, all the glory given Thee by the immaculate Mother during the time she dwelt in the blessed womb of St. Anne, her mother.

O my Jesus, in honor of and in union with the love with which Thou didst accept and bear all the crosses and sufferings that were permitted by the Heavenly Father to attend Thy temporal birth, I offer Thee all the trials and afflictions I have suffered since my birth, and those remaining for me to suffer until the end of my life, accepting and loving them for love of Thee, and begging Thee to consecrate them to the homage of Thine own sufferings.

O Most Kind Jesus, I offer Thee all the circumstances of my birth, and I implore Thee by Thy very great mercy to wipe out all that displeases Thee in the first part of my life. Deign to make up for my faults, giving to Thy Father and to Thyself all the honor I ought to have given Thee at that time, if I had been capable of honoring Thee; and mayest Thou grant that the earliest phase of my life may render an undying homage and glory to the divine state of Thy dwelling in the bosom of Thy Father and in the womb of Thy Mother, and to Thy eternal and temporal birth.

SECOND POINT

LET US RATIFY THE ACTS DONE IN OUR BEHALF BY JESUS ON THE DAY OF HIS BIRTH

Such, O my Lord, is the rightful homage I ought to have rendered to Thee, had I been able, at the moment of my birth, and indeed from the first moment of my life, that I now endeavor to render to Thee, although very tardily and imperfectly. But what gives me infinite consolation, O my Dear Jesus, is that I know Thou didst atone for my deficiencies by Thy temporal birth. Then Thou didst render all this just homage to God the Father, performing in a most holy and divine manner all these acts and devotions for Thyself and for me. Thou didst refer and consecrate to His glory all Thy being and Thy entire life, present and to come, and together with it all my being and every state of my life, and of all creatures that ever were, are, or shall be, all the past, present and future state of created things being just as vividly present to Thee then as now. Thou didst look upon every life as Thine own, as something given to Thee by the Father, according to Thy blessed words: "All things are delivered to me by my Father" (Matt. 11, 27). Thou wast consequently obliged, by Thy profound love for Him and Thy zeal for His honor, to refer and give and sacrifice everything to Him. And this Thou didst do most excellently.

Thou didst also offer to Thy Father the holy and divine state of Thy dwelling in the sacred womb of the Virgin, all filled with glory and love for Him, in satisfaction for the dishonor that was to be rendered to Him by myself in the state of original sin. And at the same moment when Thou didst accept and offer to Thy Father all the crosses and sufferings of Thy whole life, Thou didst offer Him also all the past, present and future trials and afflictions of all Thy members: for it is the function of the head to act for himself and on behalf of all his members, because the head and the members are but one, and also because all that pertains to the members belongs to the head, and conversely all the attributes of the head belong to the members.

And so, O divine Head, Thou hast turned my whole being and the whole condition of my life to meritorious purpose. In Thy temporal birth, Thou didst render for me to Thy Father all the rightful homage I should have rendered Him at my own birth, and Thou didst then practise all the acts and exercises of devotion that I should have practised. Be Thou blessed for ever! How willingly I consent and adhere to all that Thou didst do at that time for me! Indeed I ratify it with my whole will, and would gladly sign that ratification with the last drop of my blood. I also endorse all Thou didst do for me in all the other phases or actions of Thy life, to compensate for the faults Thou didst know I was going to commit.

In imitation of Thee, O my Jesus, in honor of and in union with the same love which led Thee thus to accomplish all things for Thyself and for all Thy brothers, members and children, and for all creatures, I henceforth desire in all my functions and activities to render to Thee all the honor and glory I can, for myself and for all Christians, who are my brothers, and members of the same Head and Body. I desire to honor Thee on behalf of all men and all other creatures that are unworthy or incapable of loving Thee, as if all of them put together had entrusted me with their duties and obligations towards Thee, and had charged me to love and honor Thee on their behalf.

THIRD POINT

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN

O Mother of Jesus, I honor thee, as far as I am able, in the moment of thy holy conception, and in the instant of thy birth into the world. I honor all the love, all the adoration, praise, oblations and blessings thou didst offer to God at that time. In union with thy love, purity and humility as thou didst adore, love and glorify Him, and didst refer thy being and thy life to Him, I adore, bless and love my God with thee, my Mother, with my whole heart. I consecrate and sacrifice to Him forever my life, my being and my whole self.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

So also, acclaiming thee, O Blessed Virgin, as Mother of God and consequently as my Sovereign Lady, I refer to thee, after God, the whole state of my being and my life. I implore thee most humbly to offer to God, for me, all the love, the glory and rightful homage thou didst render to Him at thy birth, by way of satisfaction for my faults, and to cause, by thy prayers and merits, all the phases, actions, and sufferings of my life to pay undying homage to all the phases, actions and sufferings of thy Son's life and thine own.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"I am thine."

THIRD MEDITATION (2)
Institution of the Sacrament of Baptism(3)

FIRST POINT
LET US ADORE JESUS AS THE INSTITUTOR OF THE SACRAMENT OF BAPTISM

O Jesus, I adore Thee as divine Author of the holy Sacrament of Baptism, which Thou didst institute for my salvation. Thou didst also acquire and merit the grace contained in that Sacrament, by Thy Incarnation, Thy Baptism in the River Jordan and by Thy holy death.

I adore the exceeding great love with which Thou didst merit and institute this same Sacrament.

I adore all the designs which Thou didst cherish in its institutions for the whole Church and for myself in particular.

I thank Thee countless times for all the glory Thou hast given to Thyself and for all the graces Thou hast transmitted to Thy Church, and to me in particular, by this Sacrament.

I offer Thee all that glory and all the graces Thou hast produced in Thy Holy Church by this means.

(2). Before these Meditations on Baptism, St. John Eudes says:

"Holy Baptism is the beginning of your true life, that is, your life in Jesus Christ, and it is the origin of all happiness. Therefore, it is certain that you would have been obliged to render a very special tribute to your Heavenly Father on the occasion of your baptism. But you were incapable of fulfilling your obligation then because you did not have the use of reason. It is logical that you should each year set apart a little interval near the anniversary of your baptism, or else some other time, to devote yourself to prayer and thanksgiving for this priceless Sacrament." Cf. The Kingdom of Jesus, P. 302

(3). Saint John Eudes begins this meditation with the following reflections:

«The author of the holy Sacrament of Baptism is Jesus Christ our Lord. He is the source of all its graces, acquired and merited by His Incarnation, by His Baptism in the River Jordan, by His Passion and Death. He applied these infinite merits to you by virtue, of His Resurrection., out of His exceeding great love.» Ibid., loc. cit.

SECOND POINT

Act OF REPARATION FOR HAVING SO LITTLE PROFITED
BY THE GRACE OF BAPTISM

I beg Thee to forgive me for neglecting to take advantage of the grace Thou didst give me in holy Baptism, and for having made it valueless by my cowardice and infidelities in Thy service, and for having even destroyed it entirely in my soul, by my sins.

I give myself to Thee, O Good Jesus; renew in me the treasure of baptismal grace, and accomplish in me, by Thy very great mercy, all the plans of Thy Providence on my behalf in the divine Sacrament of Baptism.

THIRD POINT

LET US ADORE JESUS RECEIVING BAPTISM IN THE RIVER JORDAN

O Jesus, I adore Thee in the mystery of Thy Incarnation, Passion and Death, as meriting the grace of the Sacrament of Baptism; but especially do I adore Thee in the mystery of Thy holy Baptism in the River Jordan. I adore all the dispositions of Thy divine soul in this mystery, and all the designs Thou didst then deign to have in my regard. How different was Thy Baptism, Lord, from ours! In Thy Baptism Thou didst take upon Thyself our sins, to make satisfaction and do penance for them before the Father of heaven, in the desert and on the Cross, while in our baptism Thou didst lift from us the burden of our sins, washing and effacing them in Thy Precious Blood. Baptize me with the Baptism of the Holy Ghost and of fire, even as Thy blessed precursor, St. John the Baptist, assures us Thou dost baptize, that is, consume all my sins in the fire of Thy holy love, and by the power of Thy divine spirit.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"We are baptized in Christ Jesus."

FOURTH MEDITATION

The Mysteries of Which Baptism Makes Us Participants(4)

FIRST POINT

LET US ADORE JESUS AS THE EXEMPLAR OF OUR BAPTISM IN THE MYSTERY OF His TEMPORAL AND ETERNAL BIRTH

O JESUS, Son of God and at the same time Son of man, I adore Thee in Thy temporal and eternal birth. I give Thee infinite thanks for all the glory Thou didst thus render to Thy heavenly Father. I adore the thoughts and designs Thou didst then deign to have for me, thinking of me from the very first, O Good Jesus; Thou didst love me and didst plan to make in me a living image of Thyself, of Thy birth and

The following reflections should be read before the meditation:

(1). "All things outside of God have their idea, their exemplar, and their prototype in God; so also Sacramental Baptism has for prototype and exemplar four great mysteries, namely:

(a) The mystery of our Lord's eternal birth, because His Father, by eternal generation, imparted to Him being, life and all the divine perfections, by reason of which He is the Son of God and the perfect image of His Father. Likewise, by Baptism He imparted to you the celestial and divine life He received from His Father; He implanted in you a living image of Himself, and He made you children of His Own Heavenly Father.

(b) The mystery of our Lord's temporal birth, became at the moment of His Incarnation and birth in the Blessed Virgin, He united our nature with His and His essence with our nature, and filled it with Himself and clad Himself in it as in a garment; similarly in the holy Sacrament of Baptism He united Himself with you and incorporated you with Him; He formed Himself and, as it were, took flesh in you. He clothed and filled you with Himself, according to these words of St. Paul: "As many of you as have been baptized in Christ have put on Christ" (Gal. 3, 27).

(c) The mystery of His death and burial, for St Paul also tells us that "All we, who have been baptized in Christ Jesus, are baptized in His death" (Rom. 6, 3), and that "we are buried together with Him by baptism into death" (Rom. 6, 4). This means precisely the Same as the thought expressed by the same Apostle in other words: "You are dead: and your life is hid with Christ in God" (Col. 3, 3), that is: You have entered by baptism into a state which obliges you to die to yourself and to the world, and to live no longer except with Jesus Christ, by a totally holy and divine life, hidden and absorbed in God, resembling the life of Jesus Christ.

(d) The mystery of the Resurrection, because by His Resurrection the Son of God entered into a new life, totally heavenly and spiritual, entirely separated from the earth. And so St. Paul instructs the faithful: "We are buried together with him by baptism into death; that, as Christ is risen from the dead by the glory of the Father, so we also may Walk in newness of life" (Rom. 6, 4).

For these reasons, then, we owe our Saviour a great tribute of homage and should lift up our minds and hearts to Him. « The Kingdom Of Jesus », P. 303-304

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

Thy life. just as God the Father communicates to Thee His divine and immortal life, and just as Thou art consequently His Son and His most perfect image, so also Thou didst plan to transmit to me by Baptism Thy holy and celestial life, and to make me a living image of Thyself, and to transform me by grace into what Thou art by nature, that is, a child of God, and by participation and resemblance, God and another Jesus Christ.

Who could ever thank Thee for such great favors! How culpable I am for having, by my sins, so often impeded the perfect fulfilment of Thy divine plan! Forgive me, my Saviour, with all my heart I beg Thee to forgive me, and I give myself to Thee so that Thou mayest make amends for my faults and renew in me that image of Thyself, of Thy birth and of Thy life. Separate me from myself and from all that is not Thee, in order to unite and incorporate me with Thee. Empty me of myself and of all things, destroy me utterly, in order to fill me with Thyself and to form and establish Thyself in me. Cause me henceforth to be a perfect image of Thyself, just as Thou art a most perfect image of Thy Father.

Grant that I may share in Thy filial love for Him, since He is my Father as He is Thine; enable me to live by Thy life, that is, a holy and perfect life, truly worthy of God, since Thou hast made me God by participation; and, finally, invest me so fully with Thy qualities, perfections, virtues and dispositions, and so transform me into Thee that men may see only Jesus in me, only His life, His humility, His meekness, His charity, His love, His spirit, and His other virtues and qualities, since Thou dost will me to be Thy other self on earth.

SECOND POINT

LET US ADORE JESUS AS THE EXEMPLAR OF OUR BAPTISM IN THE MYSTERIES OF HIS DEATH, BURIAL AND RESURRECTION

O Jesus, I adore Thee in the mystery of Thy holy death, Thy burial and Resurrection. I give Thee thanks for the glory Thou didst render to the Eternal Father in these mysteries, and for the thoughts and plans Thou didst have in them for me. For Thou didst constantly think of me in all these mysteries, and at every moment of Thy life, and Thou didst always have a special plan for me. Thy special Providence was to imprint on my soul, by holy Baptism, an image of Thy death, burial and Resurrection, causing me to die to myself and to the world, hiding me in Thyself, and with Thee in the bosom of the eternal Father, and raising me up again and causing me to live like Thee a new life, altogether celestial and divine. For this, be Thou blessed forever!

Alas, by my sins I have destroyed in myself the great effects produced by Thy goodness, and for this I beg Thee, with all humility and contrition, to forgive me. I give myself to Thee, O Good Jesus, I surrender myself to the spirit and the power of the mystery of Thy death, burial and Resurrection, that Thou mayest cause me to die again to all things; that Thou mayest hide me in Thyself and with Thyself in the bosom of the Heavenly Father; that Thou mayest dissolve my mind in Thy mind, my heart in Thy Heart, my soul in Thy soul, my life in Thy life; and that Thou mayest establish in me the new life into which Thou didst enter by Thy Resurrection, so that I may no longer live, save in Thee, for Thee, and by Thee.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"We are buried together with him by baptism into death." Consepulti sumus cum illo per baptismum in mortem (Rom. 6, 4)

FIFTH MEDITATION

Administration and Ceremonies of Baptism(5)

FIRST POINT

LET US ADORE JESUS AS THE ONE WHO BAPTIZED US IN THE PERSON OF THE PRIEST

O my Most Beloved Jesus, I adore and recognize Thee as the One who baptized me, in the person of the priest, whom Thou didst use as a living instrument to confer this grace upon me. Alas, Lord, I knew Thee not at that time! I did not think of Thee, I did not love Thee, nor did I appreciate the very great favor conferred upon me. Yet this did not deter Thee from loving me, and receiving me among the number of Thy children, and even of Thy members, by the sanctifying grace of Baptism. O my adorable Saviour, I desire with all my heart to bring back that holy time, that happy moment in which Thou didst baptize me, in order that I may adore, bless, love and glorify Thee infinitely, imploring Thy Eternal Father, Thy Holy Spirit, Thy Blessed Mother, all the angels and saints and all creatures to love, bless and thank Thee for me forever.

(5). All the Fathers of the Church teach us that our Lord Jesus Christ Himself, by the power of His Holy Spirit, confers all the Sacraments in the person of the priest, who represents Him and acts in His name and by His authority. It is He who consecrates in Holy Mass and gives us absolution in the Sacrament of Penance; also He baptizes us, with various symbolic ceremonies, inspired by His Spirit in Holy Mother Church and filled with mysteries that signify great graces that are conferred upon us in Holy Baptism. We should, therefore~ pay Him homage in this connection. The Kingdom of Jesus, P. 306.

OUR BIRTH AND BAPTISM

SECOND POINT

LET US ADORE JESUS INSPIRING THE CEREMONIES OF BAPTISM TO THE CHURCH

O Jesus, I adore Thee as the One who, by Thy Holy Spirit, didst institute and inspire in Thy Church all the ceremonies which accompany the solemn administration of Sacramental Baptism. I adore all Thy admirable designs in their institution. I give myself to Thee that Thou mayest effect them in my person, and that by Thy great mercy Thou mayest produce in me the great and holy effects signified by these symbolic ceremonies.

O Jesus, cast out the evil spirit from me forever and fill me with Thy Divine Spirit. Give me a lively and perfect faith. Fortify my bodily senses and my spiritual faculties against every kind of temptation by the virtue of Thy holy Cross and consecrate them to Thy glory. Fill my soul with Thy divine wisdom, that is, with Thyself; excite in me the most avid hunger, thirst and desire of Thee, the principal and only food of my soul, so that I may no longer find any savor or relish in anything save Thee alone. Keep me safe in Thy Church, as in the bosom of a mother, apart from whom there is no life or salvation, and give me the grace to honor her in all her observances, as in customs taught and inspired by Thee. Give me the grace to obey all her laws and commandments, as those of a mother most worthy of honor who commands nothing save in Thy Holy Name. In all things and everywhere teach me to follow the maxims and guidance of the Spirit of the Church which is entirely Thine own.

THIRD POINT

LET US BEG JESUS TO MAKE US PARTICIPANTS IN THE GRACES SYMBOLIZED BY THE LAST CEREMONIES OF BAPTISM

O Good Jesus, open my ears to Thy word and Thy voice, as Thou didst open the ears of the man possessed by the deaf and dumb spirit, by the application of Thy sacred spittle, and close them altogether to the voice of the world and of Satan. Anoint me with the oil of Thy grace so that I may spread abroad, as it were, the divine odor of Thee in every place. Give me a firm and lasting peace with Thee and with every kind of creature. Clothe me in the white robe of Thy holy innocence and divine purity, both bodily and spiritually. Dispel the shadows of my darkness, filling me with Thy heavenly radiance.

Set me on fire with Thy sacred love and cause me to be a shining and a burning light, to illumine and enkindle all my associates with the light of Thy knowledge and the fire of Thy love. Finally, if I became a source of joy to all the citizens of heaven, to the Blessed Virgin, the Eternal Father, Thyself, and the Holy Spirit, when by Baptism I was delivered from the power of Satan and admitted into the divine company of angels and saints, and even of the Three Divine and Eternal Persons, and if in token of this joy the church bells were rung after I was baptized, cause me now to live henceforth in such a way as to continue to be a source of joy and satisfaction to the court of heaven, the Queen of Angels and the Most Blessed Trinity. Grant also that I may find all my satisfaction and joy in serving and loving Thee.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"You are the light of the world."

Vos estis lux mundi (Matt. 5, 14)

SIXTH MEDITATION Profession of Baptism

FIRST POINT

RENEWAL OF OUR BAPTISMAL PROMISES

O JESUS, my Lord and my God, I adore Thee as the mystical Head whom I must follow and imitate in all things, according to my solemn and public profession made at Baptism. I promise, through my sponsors, before heaven and earth, to renounce Satan utterly with all his works and his pomps, that is, sin and the world, and to adhere to Thee as my Head, and to give and consecrate myself altogether to Thee, to dwell in Thee forever.

Great indeed are this promise and profession, which oblige me, as a Christian, to practise great perfection and sanctity. To profess to dwell in Thee and to adhere to Thee as my Head is to profess to be one with Thee, as the members are one with their head; it is to promise to have but one life, one mind, one heart, one soul, one will and one thought, one devotion and disposition with Thee. It means to profess not merely poverty, chastity and obedience, but to profess Thy very self, that is, Thy life, spirit, humility, charity, purity, poverty, obedience and all other virtues. In a word, it is to make the very profession Thou didst make before the Eternal Father at the moment of the Incarnation, a profession perfectly fulfilled throughout Thy life. It means to make profession never to follow my own will, but to seek all happiness in doing everything willed by God, to remain in a state of perpetual subjection to God, and submissive to men for the love of God. It means existing always as a host and victim continually sacrificed to the pure glory of God.

Such is the vow I made at Baptism, O Jesus my Lord. How holy and divine is that profession! How far is my life from this sanctity and perfection! How often have I failed in every respect to live up to so sacred a promise! Forgive me, most merciful Lord, forgive me. O Divine Redeemer, I implore Thee to repair all my failings, and in satisfaction for them, to offer to Thy Father the inestimable honor Thou didst accord Him all Thy life long, by carrying out perfectly the profession made to Him at the Incarnation.

O my Jesus, in honor of and in union with the very great love and holy dispositions of Thy profession, I now desire to enact in my own person what I promised through others at my baptism, that is, I will to renew the profession then made by my godparents. Therefore, in the virtue and might of Thy Spirit and Thy love, I forever renounce Satan, sin, the world and myself. I give myself to Thee, O Jesus, to adhere to Thee, to remain in Thee, to be but one with Thee in heart, mind, spirit and life. I offer myself to Thee, never to do my own will, but to seek all my happiness in doing everything commanded by Thy holy will. I sacrifice myself to Thee as a host and victim to be immolated to Thy pure glory in any way that may be pleasing to Thee.

O most compassionate Jesus, I implore Thee by Thy great mercy, grant me the grace to carry out this holy profession perfectly. Do Thou fulfil it Thyself in me and for me, or rather for Thyself and for Thine own good pleasure, in all the perfection Thou dost desire; for I offer myself to Thee to do and suffer whatever pleases Thee for this intention.

SECOND POINT

PRAYER TO THE MOST HOLY TRINITY(6)

O Holy and Adorable Trinity, I adore Thy divine essence and Thy Three Eternal Persons; I adore Thee for having been present at my baptism; I adore all the designs of Thy Providence for me. I beg Thee

(6). St. John Eudes makes the following reflections before this prayer to the Blessed Trinity:

"As has been said, it is our Lord Jesus Christ who baptizes the faithful; but each soul is baptized in the Name and by the power of the Most Holy Trinity. The Three Divine Persons are present at Holy Baptism in a particular manner. The Father is present generating His Son in the soul and imparting to it a new being and new life in His Son. The Son is present, being born and receiving life in the soul, transmitting His divine sonship, by which the neophyte becomes a child of God, just as He is Son of God. The Holy Spirit is present, forming Jesus in each even as He was formed in the bosom of the Virgin. The Father, Son and Holy Ghost are present, separating the new-born Christian from all things, taking possession of him and consecrating him specially to Themselves, imprinting Their divine character and image on his soul and establishing in his being (as in Their living temple, Their sacred tabernacle, or Their holy throne and heaven) the dwelling-place of the Blessed Trinity, Their glory, kingdom and life. And consequently, if only sin did not stand in the way, the Three Eternal Persons; would dwell always in each Christian heart in a particular and ineffable manner; They would most wonderfully glorify one another by living in the soul a most holy and divine life. So, too, it follows that we belong to God as creatures entirely consecrated to Him and we must consequently pursue no other purpose in life save His glory and service. In this connection it would be well to pay the following tribute of praise to the Holy Trinity.« The Kingdom of Jesus,» P. 310 to forgive me for impeding their fulfilment and in satisfaction I offer Thee the life, actions and sufferings of my Lord Jesus Christ and of His most holy Mother. I give myself to Thee, O Divine Trinity, for the accomplishment of those same designs.

O Eternal Father, O Thou the only Son of God, O Holy Spirit of the Father and the Son, enter into me; enter into my heart and my soul; separate me from all that is not Thyself, draw me to Thyself, live and reign in me, destroy in me all that displeases Thee, and cause my being and my life to be completely consecrated to Thy pure glory.

THE PREPARATION FOR DEATH

V

MEDITATIONS
ON
THE PREPARATION FOR DEATH (1)

DEATH is usually preceded by such violent throes of intense weakness that the dying person is unable to direct his thoughts to God and cannot render the homage owed to His divine majesty at that crucial time. Therefore, it is extremely advisable to anticipate this disability by setting aside a few days each year to carry out now what one ought rightfully to render to God at the hour of death. St. Gertrude tells us that when she had once performed this exercise, our Lord revealed that it was most pleasing to Him, and He promised to set aside her preparation and keep it for the day of her death. We should be confident that in His goodness He will give this grace to us also, if we make use of the same exercise. To this end, we may make, during ten consecutive days, the following meditations, or else choose one each month in our retreat.

(1). These meditations are found in "Part Seven" of The Kingdom Of Jesus", PP. 312-344. They are both inspiring and practical. Religious communities will find them most useful for the monthly retreat and for the Preparation for death.

FIRST MEDITATION

Submission to the Will of God

FIRST POINT

LET US ACCEPT DEATH AS A PUNISHMENT FOR OUR SINS AND AS A HOMAGE TO THE SOVEREIGNTY OF GOD

O my Lord Jesus, behold me prostrate at Thy feet, adoring my judge and Sovereign, as Thou dost pronounce on me the sentence of death, pronounced to Adam and in his person to all sinners, by Thy words: "Dust thou art, and into dust thou shalt return" (Gen. 3, 19). In honor of Thy exceeding great love and most profound humility with which Thou didst hear and accept the sentence of death, spoken by Pilate, the Roman Governor, but willed by Thy Eternal Father, in honor of and in homage to His divine justice, I submit with my whole heart to the sentence of death Thou didst pass upon me even at the beginning of the world, recognizing that I have deserved it not only by original sin, but each time I have committed sin.

O my God, I recognize that even if I were guilty of no sin, whether original or actual, nevertheless, by Thy absolute sovereignty and power over me Thou couldst in all holiness take away my life, annihilate me and do with me as Thou wilt.

And so in honor of the very great love and in union with the deep submission with which the Blessed Virgin, Thy Mother, accepted death even though she was not obliged to die, by reason of any sin, original or actual, I, too, accept death in homage to Thy sovereignty, abandoning myself entirely into Thy hands, that Thou mayest dispose of me in time and in eternity, according to Thy holy will, for Thy greater glory.

THE PREPARATION FOR DEATH

SECOND POINT

LET US ACCEPT DEATH TO HONOR THE DEATH AND THE SOVEREIGNTY OF OUR LORD

O Jesus, Thou art eternal and immortal; Thou art the source of an life, yet Thou dost will to die on the Cross the most cruel and ignominious of all deaths in homage to the justice and sovereignty, the divine and eternal life of Thy Father, and to give me a token of Thy love. And so, my Saviour, even if I were not obliged to die on account of my sins, and even if (to suppose the impossible) I depended in no way upon Thy sovereignty, and even indeed if Thou hadst not died for me in particular, I ought not only to accept death, but even to desire to die, in order to honor Thy holy death, which is so exalted and worthy of honor that all living creatures ought to subject themselves to death voluntarily even if they were not already obliged to die, in homage to the death of their Creator made Man.

Even if Thou hadst not died, O my God, all living things ought most willingly to sacrifice their very existence to pay homage to Thy supreme and eternal being, and to bear witness by this sacrifice that Thou alone art worthy to live, and that no other being or life has any right to show itself, but should be annihilated in Thy presence as the stars of heaven are extinguished in the light of the sun.

Thy death is so worthy of honor and homage, Thy life is most worthy to be adored. With excessive love Thou didst will to die, not only to satisfy the justice of God the Father and to honor His sovereignty, but also to sacrifice Thy human and temporal life for the glory of the divine and eternal life with Thy Father and Holy Spirit. By this sacrifice Thou didst bear witness before heaven and earth, that there is none but the divine life alone that is worthy of existence, and all other created life, however noble and excellent, should be extinguished in the sight and in the presence of this supreme and uncreated life. Therefore, in honor of Thy death, in homage to Thy Life, in union with the infinite love with which Thou didst thus will to die, for such great and divine intentions, and also in honor of the burning love with which Thy Blessed Mother and all Thy saints, especially Thy holy martyrs, embraced death with a very ready will for the same intentions, I accept and embrace death with my whole heart, in whatever form it may please Thee to send it to me, that is, in the place, time, manner and under all the circumstances it shall please Thee to decree.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

And so if Thou dost order me to die a painful or even a shameful death, or that I be left desolate and abandoned by all human help, or if I am to be deprived of the use of my senses and reason, provided Thou art always with me, Thy holy will be done. I desire to accept and embrace all this in honor of Thy most sorrowful and ignominious death, in honor of the unspeakable desolation Thou didst suffer on the Cross, abandoned by all when even the face of Thy All-loving Father seemed veiled. I accept it in homage to the surrender of Thy senses-, Thou didst make in earliest childhood. I honor Thee in the humiliation Thou didst suffer, being treated as a madman by Thine own people, at the beginning of the preaching of the Holy Gospel, and by Herod and his court during Thy Passion.

Finally, my Dear Jesus, I place myself entirely in Thy hands. I abandon myself so completely to Thy good pleasure that I no longer desire to have any other will or desire, save to let Thee win, desire and choose for me, in this and in everything else. Thou dost possess infinite wisdom and power and Thou hast a far greater knowledge and power and will to further Thy glory than I ever could have. One thing alone I beg of Thee, and it is that, since Thou didst die in love, by love and for love, if I am not worthy to die for Thy love or by that love, at least Thou mayest permit me to die in Thy dear love.

O my Jesus, I implore that, just as Thou didst perform all actions and functions for Thyself and for all men, especially for Thy children and friends, I may be permitted, in honor of and in union with Thy love, to perform all these actions and render unto Thee all due homage not only for myself but for all men, especially for all those for whom Thou knowest that I am both bound and anxious to pray with particular fervor.

THE PREPARATION FOR DEATH

THIRD POINT

LET US ACCEPT DEATH TO HONOR THE DEATH OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN MARY

O Mother of Jesus, surely it would seem that thou shouldst not have died, since thou art the Mother of the Eternal and Immortal Son of God, who is life itself. Yet thou didst willingly submit to death, in homage to the most adorable death of thy Son. Thus, thy death is so exalted and worthy of honor that all creatures ought to subject themselves to death by their own free will, in order to honor the death of their Sovereign Lady, the Mother of their Creator. Therefore, O holy Virgin, even if I were not obliged to die, I should, nevertheless, wish to accept death freely, and offer it to thee together with the death of each one who is dear to me, and of all mankind, in homage to thy most holy death. I most humbly implore thee, O Mother of Life, to unite my death to thine in honor of the death of thy Son and to obtain from Him the grace to die in His favor and in His love.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Dust thou art, and into dust thou shalt return."
Pulvis es, et in pulverem reverteris (Gen. 3, 19).

SECOND MEDITATION

Thanksgiving for Graces Received

FIRST POINT

LET US THANK OUR LORD FOR ALL THE GRACES THAT WE HAVE RECEIVED FROM HIM

AFTER we have made the solemn act of acceptance, we should prepare for a holy death, first by thanking Our Lord for all the favors we have received from Him in our whole lifetime. And it is very wise to devote a day to this exercise as follows:

O Jesus, I contemplate and adore Thee as the principle and source of all good things and all temporal and eternal graces past, present and future, in heaven and on earth, especially those I have received from Thee. I refer all these graces to Thee, for Thou art their source and Thy glory is their destiny. O good Jesus, who could ever describe all the favors that Thou hast done me? They are numberless and I am utterly incapable of thanking Thee for them as Thou dost deserve. O dearest

Lord, may all that ever was, is, or shall be in me, may all earthly and heavenly creatures, all the angels and saints, Thy Holy Mother, Thy Holy Spirit, Thy Eternal Father, all the powers of Thy divinity and humanity, and all the graces and mercies which emanated from Thee, may all these be employed in praising Thee forever. May they be entirely transformed into everlasting praise of Thee, of all that Thou art together with Thy Father, Thyself and Thy Holy Spirit, and of all the graces Thou didst ever impart to Thy sacred humanity, Thy Blessed Mother, the angels and saints, and all creatures, and especially the graces Thou hast given me, or would have given me if I had not stood in Thy way.

O Father of Jesus, Holy Spirit of Jesus, Mother of Jesus, angels of Jesus, saints of Jesus, and all creatures of Jesus, bless and give thanks to Him for me forever. O Divine Jesus, do Thou glorify Thyself for me and return to Thyself a hundredfold all the thanks I ought to render to Thee.

SECOND POINT

LET US THANK OUR LADY, AND ALL THE ANGELS AND SAINTS
FOR THE MANY FAVORS RECEIVED THROUGH THEM

O Good Jesus, Thou knowest how many favors and benefits I have received from Thy Blessed Mother, the angels and saints in heaven, and from many persons on earth. Thou knowest also how incapable I am of acknowledging them and giving thanks for them as I ought. And so I have recourse to Thee, imploring Thee most humbly to make up for my deficiencies and to give, on my behalf, to all those Souls, both in heaven and on earth, all that I ought to render to them for the benefits I have received through their intercession.

O Mother of Grace, Mother of my God, it is through thy mediation that I have received all the graces ever bestowed on me from heaven. May heaven and earth bless thee for them all, on behalf of myself and of all the thoughtless persons who have received favors from thee and give thee no thanks whatever.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Let us return thanks to the Lord our God."

Gratias agamus Domino Deo nostro.

THIRD MEDITATION

Confession, Satisfaction for Our Sins

FIRST POINT

IN REPARATION FOR OUR SINS LET US OFFER Jesus ALL THE GLORY
THAT HE RECEIVED From His FATHER, His HOLY SPIRIT, THE BLESSED VIRGIN, THE ANGELS AND THE SAINTS

HAVING set aside one day to thank God for all the graces He has given us in our lifetime, it is most necessary that we devote another day to ask forgiveness for our sins and to make satisfaction to Him. To that end, we ought on this day to make a good confession, either an extraordinary confession or one marked by unusual contrition and selfabasement, with as much care as if it were to be our last confession. As a preparation for this confession we should set aside a little time during the day to meditate on this matter, in the presence of God, in the following way:

O Most Lovable Jesus, infinitely worthy of all service and love, to Whom I owe debts without number, Thou didst create me only to love and serve Thee.. Yet I have done scarcely anything but offend Thee by thought, word and deed, by all my bodily senses and spiritual faculties, by my misuse of Thy creatures, against all Thy commandments, in countless different ways. O what sins! What ingratitude! What betrayals! Lord Jesus, I cast all my offenses upon Thy divine love, into the abyss of Thy mercies. Grant that I may be utterly transformed into sorrow and contrition, with tears of blood to detest and wipe out the sins I have committed against that immense Goodness, so deserving of love and honor! My God, what is there that I could ever do to make reparation for my sins? But even if I were to suffer all the torments and martyrdom in the world, I still could not of myself alone repair the insult given Thee by even the least of my faults.

THE PREPARATION FOR DEATH

SECOND POINT

LET US OFFER TO GOD IN REPARATION FOR OUR SINS THE HONOR WHICH JESUS RENDERED TO HIM

O Good Jesus, I offer Thee instead all the glory, love and service given Thee by all the saints and Thy most Blessed Mother, by their holy thought~ words and actions, by holy use of their bodily senses and their spiritual Powers, by their eminent virtues and sufferings, in satisfaction for the failures of my lifetime. I offer Thee likewise an the honor given Thee forever by all the angels, by the Holy Spirit, by Thyself, and by the Eternal Father, in reparation for the dishonor I have given Thee all my life.

O Heavenly Father, O Holy Spirit, O ye angels and saints, offer up for me, to my Saviour, all the love and glory you ever gave Him, in satisfaction for the wrong I have done Him by my offenses.

Miserable sinner that I am, by offending my God I have offended all things. I have offended the Father, the Son, the Holy Ghost, the Mother of God, all the angels and saints, and all creation, for all are concerned and offended in offense to their Creator. How, O my God, how can I make reparation for so many offenses, make satisfaction to so many persons and pay off so many debts? I know what I will do: I have my Jesus who is in Himself an infinite wealth of virtues, merits and good works. He has been given me to be my riches, my virtue, my sanctification, my redemption and reparation. I shall offer Him to the Eternal Father, to the Holy Ghost, to the Blessed Virgin, to all the angels and all the saints in reparation and satisfaction for all the faults I have committed. O Holy Father, O Divine Spirit, I offer all the love and honor that my Jesus gave you by all His divine thoughts, words and actions, by His divine employment of all the members of His body and of His soul, by all His glorious virtues and heroic sufferings, in satisfaction for all the offenses I have committed against you all my life long.

O holy Virgin, O holy angels, O blessed saints, I offer you my treasure and my all, my Saviour Jesus Christ; I conjure you to draw from His infinite storehouse of merit whatever you require in payment and satisfaction for all the debts I owe you, by reason of my sins and negligence.

O my Jesus, my divine Redeemer, do Thou make reparation for all my faults, and by Thy very great mercy atone for all my sins committed against the Eternal Father, Thyself the Son, the Holy Spirit, Thy most Blessed Mother, the angels and saints and all persons I have offended. I give myself to Thee to do and suffer in atonement whatsoever may be pleasing to Thy holy will, accepting now all the sufferings of body or spirit that I may have to bear, whether in this world or in the next, in satisfaction for my sins.

O most holy Virgin, I have so many obligations to serve and venerate thee; yet I have so little honored and so greatly offended thee by offending thy Son! I beg thy forgiveness, O Mother of Mercy, and I offer thee in satisfaction all the honor ever accorded thee in heaven and on earth. I implore all the angels and saints, the Holy Ghost, thy Son, and the Eternal Father to supply for my deficiencies, and fill up the measure of glory I ought to have rendered to thee all my life long.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"My sin is always before me."

Peccatum meum contra me est semper (Ps. 50, 5)

FOURTH MEDITATION

Holy Communion

FIRST POINT

INTENTIONS FOR OUR LAST HOLY COMMUNION

HOLY COMMUNION is the most precious and effective means given us by God to render to Him all the honor and service we owe to Him. To prepare for a holy death, we should make a point of taking one day of this exercise to dispose ourselves for an exceptionally well prepared Communion, marked by extraordinary devotion and approached with as much care and recollection as if it were to be our last.

We should offer this special Communion to our Lord:

1. In honor of all that He is in Himself and towards us.
2. In thanksgiving for all the effects of His love for His Father and for all creatures, but especially for us.
3. In satisfaction for all the dishonor and pain given Him by all the sins of the world, especially by our own.
4. For the fulfilment of the plans of His Divine Providence for all men, especially for us.

SECOND POINT

DISPOSITIONS FOR OUR LAST HOLY COMMUNION

Let us offer ourselves to the Eternal Father, begging Him to unite us with the surpassing love of His paternal heart when He received His Son Jesus Christ into His bosom on the day of the Ascension. Let us give ourselves to Jesus and beg Him to unite us with the most ardent love and profound humility with which He instituted the Holy Sacrament of the Altar, on the eve of His death. Let us offer ourselves to the 180-

Blessed Virgin, to St. John the Evangelist, to St. Mary Magdalen and St. Mary of Egypt, and all the other saints, praying that they may cause us to participate in the love and fervor, the humility, purity and sanctity with which they received Holy Viaticum.

THIRD POINT

LET US ASK OUR DEAR LORD TO ACCOMPLISH AND COMPLETE ALL HIS HOLY DESIGNS IN US

After we have received Communion and made the usual thanksgiving to our Lord with unusual fervor, let us adore His divine plans from all eternity for us. Let us beg Him to remove all the obstructions we have ever placed in the way of their operation. Let us beg Him fervently not to let us die until He has completed the plans of His goodness and the work of His grace in our souls. Let us give ourselves to Him with a great desire and mighty resolution to work manfully to consummate His work in us, and to destroy in ourselves everything that might stand in His way, so that we may be able to repeat to Him, on the last day of our life, His words to the heavenly Father on Good Friday: Opus consummavi quod dedisti mihi ut faciam, I have finished the work which Thou gavest me to do" (John 17, 4).

Ejaculatory prayer:

"He that eateth this bread shall live for ever."

Qui manducat hunc panem vivet in aeternum (John 6, 59).

FIFTH MEDITATION Extreme Unction

FIRST POINT

LET US ADORE JESUS AS AUTHOR OF EXTREME UNCTION

O JESUS, I adore Thee as the author of the Holy Sacrament of Extreme Unction, and as the source of its priceless graces, which Thou hast acquired and merited for us by the shedding of Thy Precious Blood. I refer to Thee all the graces Thou didst ever produce in souls through Extreme Unction. I bless Thee a thousand times for all the glory Thou hast given to Thyself by this last Sacrament. I adore the infinite design of Thy Providence in the institution of Extreme Unction and I surrender myself to the accomplishment of Thy divine Plan for me according to Thy holy will. I implore Thee most humbly to grant me the grace of receiving this Sacrament at the end of my life. And if I should not be able to receive it, I implore Thee to produce in my soul, by Thy great mercy, the same graces I would acquire by its reception.

O Jesus, I adore Thee in the holy anointing of Thy sacred body in the last days of Thy life by St. Mary Magdalen, and at Thy burial by St. Nicodemus and St. Joseph of Arimathea. I offer Thee all the holy unctions ever performed, in this last Sacrament, upon the bodies of all Christians who have received it or ever shall do so, in honor of and homage to the divine anointing of Thy deified body.

SECOND POINT

LET US ASK JESUS TO PREPARE OUR SOULS TO RECEIVE EXTREME UNCTION AND ALL ITS ATTENDANT GRACES

O Good Jesus, I adore Thee as High Priest to Whom, before all others, belongs the right of conferring all the Sacraments. I give my self to Thee as High Priest and implore Thee to inspire in my soul the dispositions required for the fruitful reception of Extreme Unction and to produce in me all the graces represented by its consoling ceremonies.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

In order to dispose myself for its reception, O my Saviour, behold and cast myself down at Thy feet, accusing myself most humbly before Thee and Thy heavenly court of all my sins, most humbly begging Thy forgiveness with all the humility and contrition I can muster, with my whole heart imploring Thee, together with Thy Blessed Mother and all the angels and saints, to ask forgiveness from Thy Eternal Father, and to offer to Him in satisfaction for my sins the full measure of Thy infinite merits and sufferings.

O Good Jesus, come into my soul and into my heart. Come to bring me Thy holy peace and to destroy in me all that might disturb the peace and repose of my spirit. Come unto me, and with Thy Precious Blood purify me of the foulness of my sins. Come to grant me full and total absolution, indulgence and remission of all my sins.

O Most Kind Jesus, I offer Thee all the senses and members of my body and all the powers of my soul. Anoint me, I beg Thee, with the sacred oil that ever flows from Thy divine Heart, that is, with the oil of Thy grace and mercy and, by this heavenly anointing, cleanse me of the evil effects of my sins. O Dearest Jesus, I offer Thee the holy employment of bodily senses and spiritual powers ever made by Thy Divine Self, by Thy Blessed Mother and all the saints, in satisfaction for my abuse or misuse of the members and senses of my body and the faculties of my soul. May it please Thee to grant me the grace to employ them in future only for Thy pure glory.

Finally, O Most Amiable Jesus, may it please Thee to give me Thy holy blessing. Ask the Beneficent Father and the Holy Spirit to bless me with Thee, so that this divine and mighty benediction may destroy in me all that displeases Thee, and transform me utterly into eternal benediction and praise of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Come, Lord Jesus."

Veni, Domine Jesu (Apoc. 22, 20).

SIXTH MEDITATION

The Last Will and Testament of Jesus and the One Which We Should Make in Its Honor

FIRST POINT

THE FIRST THREE BEQUESTS OF CHRIST'S LAST WILL

O JESUS, I adore Thee in the last days of Thy life. I adore every aspect and event of these last days, but especially Thy divine Testament pronounced in the Canacle, on Mount Olivet and from the Cross. I adore, bless and glorify the supreme love for Thy Father, the most burning charity towards us and all the other holy dispositions of Thy last Testament to mankind.

The last will of Our Saviour comprises five bequests:

The first bequest is to His enemies, for, O wonder of wonders, O immensity of goodness, His first word and first prayer on the Cross is for His enemies, begging the Father to pardon them, in the very hour when they were blaspheming and crucifying Him.

The second bequest is to the Heavenly Father, the final gift of His holy soul with these words- "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit" (Luke 23, 46). These words were uttered not only with reference to His deified soul, but to my soul and the souls of all who belong to Him, which were present at that moment before His sight, and He looked upon them as His veritable possession, forming all together but one soul by virtue of their most intimate union with Himself. When our dying Saviour said to the Father: Pater, in manus tuas commendo spiritum meum, He spoke for Himself and for me; He didst commend my soul together with His into the hands of the Eternal Father, addressing this prayer to Him who is at once Thy Father and mine, in Thy Name and my own, against the hour when my soul shall leave my body. And He made the offering of my soul with the same love with which He said Pater or Father in general, not My Father in particular, to show that He regarded Him not only as His special Father, but as the common and universal Father of all His brethren and members. He prayed to Him not only for Himself in particular, but also in general for all who belong to Him, with filial confidence and love, as much for Himself as for them, for which may He be loved and blessed forever.

The third bequest in His will concerns the Blessed Mother, to whom He didst give the friend who was most dear to Him after herself, the beloved disciple, St. John the Evangelist. At the same time there were represented in the person of St. John all the other disciples and children until the end of Time. When He said to Mary the words, "Woman, behold thy son" (John 19, 26), He gave her not only St. John, but all other Christians to be her children. Reciprocally, in saying to St. John the words: "Behold thy Mother" (John 19, 27), He gave to him and also to all Christians, represented in his person, His most precious possession in the order of created beings, namely, His most Blessed Mother, He gave her to them to be their Mother just as she was His Mother, imparting to them His precious relationship and character with her. That was the reason He called her no longer His Mother, but Mulier, "woman" to show the transfer to us of His relationship to her as Son, and the gift to us, as Mother, of her who was to cease to be His Mother for a time by reason of her Son's death. And so, Jesus bequeathed me in His will to His Blessed Mother, not only as a servant and subject, but actually as a son: Mulier, ecce filius tuus. He gave her to me not only as my Queen and Lady, but in the most honorable and lovable character there is--that of a Mother. O love! O excess of goodness! May the whole world be transformed into love for so great a goodness!

THE PREPARATION FOR DEATH

185 -

SECOND POINT

THE LAST TWO BEQUESTS OF CHRIST'S WILL

The fourth bequest in His will is particularly ours and concerns us so diversely that it seems to have been made for us alone.

1. During His last days on earth, He expressed a surpassing and extraordinary love, assuring us that the Father loves us as He loves Him (John 17, 23), and that He does love us as the Father loves Him (John 17, 9). And He consequently urges us to love one another as He has loved us (John 13, 34)

2. He likewise commended us with most particular affection to the most exalted and powerful persons most dear to Him, by Whom He is most loved in heaven and on earth--that is, His Eternal Father and His divine Mother. Just before setting out on the road to Calvary, He addressed a beautiful prayer to the Father: "Holy Father, keep them in thy name whom thou hast given me.... Not for them only do I pray, but for them also who through their word shall believe in me" (John 17, 11-20). While hanging on the Cross, He placed our souls in His hands together with His own, as has been said. He also commended us to His divine Mother.

3. We share in His will because in His last, solemn and public prayer, He obtained from the Heavenly Father the greatest favors that we could ask for, or could obtain from God. Here are the prayers He addressed to Him for us: "Father, I will that where I am, they also whom thou hast given me may be with me" (John 17, 24), that is, that they should have their dwelling and take their rest with Him forever in the bosom and Heart of His Father. "Just Father .... that the love wherewith Thou hast loved me, may be in them" (John 17, 25-26), that is, to say: Love them as Thou lovest Him, love them with the greatest, the most burning and most divine love that could ever possibly exist. Look upon them as Thou dost regard Him; love them with the very heart with which Thou lovest Him; treat them as Thou dost treat Him; give them all that Thou givest Him. "That they may be one, as thou, Father, in me and I in thee; that they also may be one in us ... I in them, and thou in me; that they may be made perfect in one" (John 17, 21-23). What love! What more could He ask the Father for us?

186-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

4. We share in Thy will because He gave us the most rare and precious gift, His Eternal Father to be our Father, praying Him to love us as He loves Thee, as His children with sublime paternal love. He gave us His Blessed Mother to be our Mother. He gave us His most Holy Body in the Eucharist, His holy Soul on the Cross in death with the words: "I lay down my life for my sheep" (John 10, 15). He gave His Precious Blood to the very last drop, His life, merits, sufferings, humanity and divinity, as expressed in these words: "The glory which thou hast given me, I have given to them" (John 17, 22). He gave us all without reserve. How admirable is His goodness, poured forth for us in the very hour when we were causing Him to suffer so many evils! How can we love Him so little and think so seldom of Him? How can so great a love be held so cheap and be so despised by those whom He so loves?

The fifth and last bequest in His will was made on Mount Olivet when, departing from the apostles and ascending into heaven, He gave His holy blessing. We share in this bequest also, for in imparting His blessing to the holy apostles and disciples He blessed all of us, each one in particular, for we were all just as much present in His sight then as we are now. May heaven and earth bless the Author of all gifts, and may all things in heaven and earth be transformed into eternal blessings of Him!

Such are the five clauses of His admirable will, in honor of which I desire to draw up My own testament.

THIRD POINT

OUR SPIRITUAL W.U.L SHOULD BE MADE IN HONOR AND IMITATION OF THE WILL OF JESUS

1. O Most Kind Jesus, in honor of and in union with the love with which Thou didst shed Thy Precious Blood and die for Thine enemies and pray to the Eternal Father to pardon those who crucified Thee, with my whole heart I fully forgive all those who have ever offended or injured me, and I implore Thee to grant them full pardon. I offer myself to Thee to do and suffer whatever may please Thee for their sake, even to shed my blood and die for them, if necessary. So, too, in all the humility I can muster, I beg all whom I have ever offended or displeased in my whole life to forgive me, and I give myself to Thee to make whatever satisfaction to them Thou mayest desire.

2. In honor of and in union with the exceeding great love, the most perfect confidence and all the other dispositions with which Thou didst commend Thy soul and all the souls that belong to Thee into the hands of the Father, I surrender my soul, with the souls of all those for whom I am bound to have special concern, into the gentle hands and the most loving heart of the Divine Father, who is my God, my Creator and my Most Lovable Father, that He may dispose of them according to His good pleasure. I trust that His infinite goodness will place them with Thy soul, Good Jesus, in His fatherly bosom, there to love and bless Him eternally with Thee, according to the desire of Thy soul, expressed in the words: "Father, I will that where I am, they also whom thou hast given me may be with me" (John 17, 24).

3. In honor of and in union with Thy great charity in giving all Thy friends and children to Thy most Blessed Mother, I resign into her hands all those entrusted to my care, imploring Thee, good Jesus, to commend them Thyself to Thy Virgin Mother. I implore her with my whole heart, by Thy very great love for her and hers for Thee, and by the same love with which Thou didst give her Thy friends and children, to look upon them henceforth as her children in a more special way, and to be their Mother.

4. In honor of and in union with the exceedingly powerful love whereby Thou didst commend me to Thy Father on Thy last day, and didst beg Him, on my behalf, for such great favors, giving me all that was most dear to Thee, with such extraordinary tokens of that love, urging me also to love my neighbor as Thou didst love me: I commend to Thee all those whom Thou knowest I should commend particularly to Thee, and I beg Thee on their behalf for all that Thou didst ask for me on Good Friday from Thy Eternal Father. I abandon myself to Thee to love Thee as Thou lovest the Father and as the Father loves Thee. I give myself also to Thee to love my neighbor as Thou didst love me, and to shed my blood and give my life for him, if it is Thy holy will.

5. O Jesus, God of all blessings, I adore Thee in the last moment of Thy sojourn on earth, upon Mount Olivet, as Thou didst leave the earth to ascend into heaven. I adore Thee giving Thy most holy blessing to Thy Blessed Mother, Thy apostles and disciples; I adore the exceeding great love and all the other dispositions which filled Thy divine soul when Thou didst impart this supreme blessing as is related in the Holy Gospel (Luke, 24,50).

O Good Jesus, behold me prostrate at Thy feet, in union with the humility and the other holy dispositions of the Blessed Mother and the holy apostles and disciples as they received Thy blessing. I most humbly implore Thee, by all Thy love for them, and theirs for Thee, to give now to me and to all I have commended to Thee, Thy most holy blessing, so that by the power of that divine blessing all that displeases Thee in me may be destroyed and I may be altogether transformed into everlasting praise, love and benediction of Thee.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Father into thy hands I commend my spirit."
In manus tuas commendo spiritum meum (Luke, 23, 46).

SEVENTH MEDITATION

Our Last Agony and the Moment of Death

FIRST POINT

WE SHOULD LOOK UPON THIS DAY AS THE LAST OF OUR LIFE AND UNITE OURSELVES TO JESUS AND HIS HOLY MOTHER

WE SHALL consider this day as if it were to be our last. We must strive to spend it with as much care and devotion as if we had only this one day in which to love God. For this purpose, we should apply ourselves to the contemplation and adoration of Our Lord in the last day of His life on earth, and to do everything in union with the holy and divine dispositions of His last actions. With the last day of our life in view, we should implore Jesus to unite us to His Dispositions and foster them in our hearts, that we may be of the number of those of whom it is said: "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord" (Apoc. 14, 13), that is, who die in the dispositions of the death of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Similarly we should consider and honor the Blessed Virgin on the last day of her life, uniting ourselves to her dispositions, offering her the last day of our life. The prayers addressed to Jesus Christ and His Blessed Mother for the end of the year should also serve our purpose here.

SECOND POINT

WE SHOULD ADORE JESUS IN His AGONY AND OFFER Him
OUR AGONY AND DEATH IN HONOR OF His

I may also add at this point that it is a good thing on this day to adore Jesus and honor His most holy Mother in their agony and death, offering our agony and death in union with theirs, imploring them to bless and sanctify our death by their own. It is also most beneficial to adore the infinite power of the divine love that caused the death of Jesus and of His most holy Mother, for they both died of love and by love. We should implore that divine love to cause us to die with Jesus and His divine Mother, and to consume and sacrifice our life in its sacred flames.

We should also honor the holy martyrs and all saints in their agony and death. Let us offer them our agony and death, in union with their own, begging them to unite us with their holy dispositions as they prepared for death. Let us implore them specially to associate us with all the love and glory they gave to Our Lord on the last day of their life and at the moment they died for Him.

We should pray specially to St. John the Evangelist, St. Mary Mag. dalen and the good thief who died with Jesus, and all the other saints who were present at the death of the Son of God, that through the merits of their privilege in being near Him in death, they may give us special assistance at the hour of our own death.

On this same day it would be most advisable to read the Passion of Our Lord, the seventeenth chapter of St. John, containing His last words and prayers before setting forth to be crucified, as well as the prayers of Holy Mother Church for the agonizing soul, which are to be found at the end of the Breviary. We do not know whether we will be in a fit state on the last day of our life to complete these preparations for a holy death. Hence, it is a good thing to anticipate that day, and to read the Passion of Our Lord and the above-mentioned prayers with all the devotion we would wish to put into them at the hour of death, and all the devotion with which they have ever been read by the whole Church.

But above all, when we read the seventeenth chapter of St. John, which contains the last words and prayers of Jesus, let us give ourselves to Him in a sincere effort to pronounce these words and prayers in union with His love, dispositions and intentions when He spoke them, imploring Him to foster in our hearts these sublime dispositions in preparation for the last day of our life and to produce the effects of these holy words.

THE PREPARATION FOR DEATH

Finally, let us cast ourselves down at the feet of Jesus and His most holy Mother, to implore them to give us their blessing. "O Jesus, O Mother of Jesus, give me your blessing for the last moment of my life. By your great goodness, grant that the last moment of my life may be consecrated to the glory of the last moment of yours, and that my last breath may be an act of most pure love of you."

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."
Beati mortui qui in Domino moriuntur (Apoc. 14, 13)

EIGHTH MEDITATION

The Particular judgment

FIRST POINT

LET US ADORE JESUS IN THE JUDGMENT PRONOUNCED AGAINST HIM BY HIS HEAVENLY FATHER

O JESUS, Thou art the Saint of Saints and Sanctity Itself, infinitely above all sin and imperfection. Yet, I behold Thee prostrate with Thy face to the earth at the feet of the All-just Father in the Garden of Olives, and the following day at the feet of Pilate, where the Eternal Father contemplates Thee as the Victim who has taken upon Himself all the sins of the world, giving Himself without reserve for the ransom of mankind. Thou hast taken the place of all sinners and borne the heavy judgment of our sins by dying on the Cross for our salvation. Thou dost accept that judgment with most perfect submission, most profound humility and most ardent love for Thy Father and for us. O Jesus, I adore and glorify Thee in this judgment and in all holy dispositions of humiliation, contrition, submission and love with which Thou didst suffer to be judged and condemned to save us.

SECOND POINT

LET US SUBMIT OURSELVES IN ADVANCE TO THE SENTENCE
PRONOUNCED AGAINST US AT THE HOUR OF OUR DEATH

In honor of and in union with these dispositions, behold me prostrate at Thy feet, great Jesus, adoring Thee as my sovereign judge. I most willingly submit myself to Thy supreme power. I infinitely rejoice that Thou hast sovereign power over me and over all men and angels. A thousand times I praise the Eternal Father for having given Thee this power. I affirm sincerely that if, to imagine the impossible,

THE PREPARATION FOR DEATH

Thou didst not have this power, and I did have it, I would want to strip myself of it to give it to Thee; if I were not subject to Thy power to judge me, I should wish to subject myself voluntarily to that power, out of homage to Thy divine justice and to the condemnation Thou didst undergo from Thy Father during Thy holy Passion.

O Jesus, I adore Thee in Thy coming at the hour of my death and at the moment of Thy judgment of my soul. I adore now every aspect and detail of my particular judgment. May it please Thee to grant me now some measure of the divine light by which Thou wilt clearly show me every event of my whole life, compelling me to give an account of everything. Grant me a share in the zeal for justice with which Thou wilt be avenged for my offenses, so that I may from now on see my sins clearly and make reparation by perfect contrition, horror and detestation for these same sins.

O my God, how many sins I have committed against Thee all my life long, by thought, word and deed, in every way I can. They can not be numbered, I confess; and I accuse myself before Thee, before Thy Blessed Mother, before all the angels and saints, and, if it be Thy holy will, before the whole world. I accuse myself of my sins, just as they are in Thy sight, as Thou knowest them. If only I could see my offenses as Thou seest them! If only I knew myself as Thou knowest me, and as I shall see and know myself in Thy light at the moment of judgment! How I shall be confounded and humiliated then by the realization of what I am! What horror my crimes will awaken in me! What regret, what anguish at having so little loved and so greatly offended so transcendent a goodness as Thine I How quickly will I then accuse and condemn my own self I Indeed there will be no need of any other judge, for I shall be the first to pass sentence upon my own misdeeds and ignominy.

But why wait until that final hour? Lord, at this very moment I surrender myself to the zeal of Thy divine justice and to the spirit of Thy just hatred and righteous horror for sin. In honor of and in union with Thy extreme hatred of sin, I hate and detest all my sins; I hold them in abhorrence; I renounce them forever; I offer myself to Thee to suffer for them all the penance Thou shalt order. Casting myself down before Thy face, in the ultimate depths of abjection, to which,

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

O great God, I have deserved to be reduced by my sins, I pronounce against myself, in the presence of heaven and earth, that final sentence. Since I, who am nothing but a worm of the earth, a handful of ashes and mere nothingness, have in so many ways offended so exalted and great a majesty, there are no tortures, either on earth, in purgatory or in hell, capable of worthily expiating my sin, without the intervention of Thy mercy and the power of Thy Precious Blood. For all these torments are finite, while the offense of my sins is infinite, since they offend an infinite majesty, and consequently deserve an infinite punishment.

So, my sovereign judge, falling down once more at Thy feet, and in the lowest depths of the bottomless pit of my sins, I adore and bless and love Thee with my whole heart, as pronouncing the sentence that Thou shalt pronounce at the hour of my death, and I voluntarily, with all the love possible to me, submit to this sentence, whatever it may be, telling Thee with the Royal Prophet, with all the power of my will: "Thou art just, O Lord, and thy judgment is right" (Ps. 118, 137) And I most obediently accept anything it may please Thee to ordain in my regard, in time and eternity, giving myself to Thee to bear not only all the sufferings of Purgatory, in homage to Thy divine justice; but any other penalty Thou mayest impose upon me. I take no thought of what is to become of me nor what is to be done to me in time and eternity, provided only that the wrong and dishonor I have done Thee may be made good, no matter what the cost.

THIRD POINT

LET US BEG JESUS TO BE MERCIFUL

And yet, O God of mercy, do not permit that I should be numbered among those who will never love Thee. O most merciful Lord, what am I that Thou deignest to open Thy blessed eyes to look upon me, to summon me into Thy presence in judgment and to exercise Thy justice upon me? It is all too true that I deserve Thy mercy far less than Thy justice. But, O Thou Saviour of my soul, remember that Thou didst will to be judged for me~ and that Thou art most worthy that my sins should be forgiven in Thee, since Thou didst ask the All-merciful

Father to pardon them for me. And yet, Lord, enter not into judgment with Thy miserable and unworthy servant, but offer for me to Thy Father the judgment Thou didst sustain for my sins, and pray that His divine forgiveness be granted, not to me but to Thee.

O Father of mercy, I confess that I have deserved to bear the stern weight of Thy judgments, and that I am not worthy that Thou shouldst give me the least grace, nor that Thou shouldst pardon the very smallest of my sins. I offer Thee the terrible judgment Thy Son sustained for my faults, and I implore Thee to pardon them, not to me, but to Thy Beloved Son, Who begs Thy forgiveness on my behalf, and to give Him, also, all the graces I need for Thy service. All possible punishments in the world, visited upon me, are incapable of giving Thee fitting satisfaction for the very least of my crimes. Thy Son alone can make perfect reparation for the dishonor I have given Thee. And so I offer to Thee, and I implore Him to offer with me, all that He did and suffered in His whole life, and all the honor He ever rendered to Thee, whether by Himself or through His Blessed Mother, His angels and all His saints.

O Mother of Mercy, Mother of Jesus, O angels and saints of Jesus, offer to God all your merits and works on my behalf and all the glory you ever gave Him, in satisfaction for my offenses and implore Him to treat me not according to the rigor of His justice, but the multitude of His mercies, in order that I may love and bless Him with you forever.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"According to the multitude of thy tender mercies blot out my iniquity."

NINTH MEDITATION

Death and Burial

FIRST POINT

LET US OFFER OUR DEATH TO JESUS IN HONOR OF HIS

O JESUS, Thou art eternal life and the source of all life, yet I behold Thee cold in the darkness and shadow of death. I see Thee bid farewell, for a little while, to Thy most lovable Mother, to Thy dearly beloved apostles and disciples, and to all Thy friends left bathed in tears, in the greatest mourning and lamentation of all time. I contemplate Thy holy soul separated from Thy divine body, with which it had so holy, so close and so sublime a union. I see this same body, more holy and sacred than all the heavenly bodies-I mean than all heaven itself, - lying in a sepulchre, among the rocks in the dust.

O my Jesus, I adore, praise and glorify Thee thus. I offer Thee an the honor rendered to Thee in this state by Thy holy Mother, by St. Mary Magdalen, by the holy apostles and disciples, by the angels, by the holy souls Thou didst free from Limbo and by the whole Church, with all the glory Thy Father gave Thee, and which Thou now enjoyest in heaven, in recompense for that humiliation Thou didst bear on earth. I offer Thee the state of death which will one day be mine, in honor of that state of death in which Thou didst remain before the, Resurrection.

I offer Thee the separation from the company of my friends and relatives that I shall one day have to bear, in honor of the most bitter separation which Thou didst suffer, torn from the most sweet company of Thy dearest Mother, of Thy dearly beloved apostles and disciples. I offer Thee all the sorrow and the tears of my relatives and friends in honor of the sorrow and tears of Thy harrowed Mother and sorrowing apostles. I offer Thee the separation of my soul from Thy sacred body.

THE PREPARATION FOR DEATH

I offer Thee all the states of my soul, until its reunion with its body, whatever they may be, in homage to the state in which Thy holy soul existed during the time it was separated from Thy body. I offer Thee the burial of my body and all the actions that shall be done in performing this burial, in honor of the burial of Thy holy Body.

In honor of and in union with the same love with which Thou, O good Jesus, didst will that Thy sacred body should lie upon the dust within a hollow rock, and by which Thou hast so often given me this same body in Holy Communion, although I am nothing but a worm of the earth, I most willingly surrender my body to the ground, and to the worms. I consent to be reduced to ashes and dust, but only on condition, O crucified Saviour, that all the grains of dust into which my flesh and bones shall crumble, may be so many voices praising and glorifying without interruption the adorable mystery of Thy burial, and that I may thus sing with the holy psalmist: "All my bones shall say: Lord, who is like to thee?" (Ps. 34, 10).

SECOND POINT

LET US ADORE JESUS BURIED IN THE SEPULCHRE

O Divine Jesus, even though Thy body and soul were separated, nevertheless they are continually united to Thy divinity. Thus, they never ceased to be worthy of infinite honor and adoration. Therefore, I adore Thy holy soul in its descent into Limbo. I adore all that happened in Thy soul and all the effects produced in the souls of the Holy Patriarchs in Limbo. I also adore Thy body in the tomb, in all its members, for there is no part of it that is not infinitely adorable. I adore you, O most holy eyes of my Saviour's body. I adore you, O sacred ears of my God. I adore and praise you, O most blessed mouth and tongue of Him who is the Word and eternal utterance of the Father. I adore and bless you, O most divine hands and feet of my Lord. I adore and love you, O most amiable Heart of Jesus.

Alas, my Beloved! Thy perfect ~body is lifeless because of my sins! Those sacred eyes, that by their sweet aspect gave joy to all who came in contact with Thee, are now darkened by the shadow of death. Those holy ears, always open to hear the cries and prayers of all unhappy creatures, are now closed and hear no more. Those divine lips, which pronounced the words of life, have become mute and speak no words. Those blessed hands that wrought so many miracles are lifeless and still. Those holy feet, so often wearied for the salvation of the world, are no longer able to walk. But above all, the most loving Heart of my Jesus, the most exalted and noble throne of divine love, is without life or feeling. Ah! My dear Jesus, who has brought Thee to this pitiable state? My sins and Thy love! Cursed and detestable sin, how I abhor you! O love of my Saviour, may I love you, may I bless you without ceasing!

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

THIRD POINT

LET US GIVE OURSELVES TO JESUS, BEGGING HIM TO MAKE US DIE TO OURSELVES IN ORDER TO LEAD A HIDDEN LIFE WITH GOD

O Good Jesus, I surrender myself completely to the power of Thy holy love, I implore Thee by that love, to reduce me now into a state of death that may imitate and honor Thy state of death. Utterly extinguish in me the life of sin and of the old Adam. Cause me to die to the world, to myself and to all that is not Thee. Mortify my eyes, ears, tongue, hands, feet, heart and all the other powers of my body and soul, so that I may no longer be able to see, nor hear, speak, taste, act, walk, love, think, will, nor make any other use of all the parts of my body or the faculties of my soul, save in accordance with Thy good pleasure, led by the guidance of Thy divine spirit,

O my Well-beloved Jesus, I give myself to Thee to derive the benefits of these words of Thine apostle: "You are dead: and your life is hid with Christ in God" (Col, 3, 3). Hide me utterly with Thee in God. Bury my mind, my heart, my will and my being, so that I may no longer have any thoughts, desires, or affections, any sentiments and dispositions other than Thine own. And just as the earth changes and transforms into itself the bodies buried within it, do Thou change and transform me completely into Thyself. Bury my pride in Thy humility, my coldness and tepidity in the fervor of Thy divine love, and all my other vices and imperfections in Thy virtues so that, just as the earth consumes all the corruption of the body buried in it, so all the corruption of my soul may be consumed and annihilated in Thy divine perfections.

O Mother of Jesus, I honor and revere thee in the state of thy death and burial. I offer thee all the honor then given thee by the angels and holy apostles. I thank thee for all the glory thou didst give to the death and burial of Thy Son by thine own. I offer thee my own death and burial, imploring thee to obtain for me, by thy holy prayers, the grace that every aspect of my earthly end may pay everlasting homage to the death and burial of thy Spotless self and of thy beloved Son, our Saviour.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"For you are dead: and your life is hid with Christ in God."

TENTH MEDITATION

The Entrance of the Soul into Heaven

FIRST POINT

LET US OFFER JESUS CHRIST OUR ENTRANCE INTO HEAVEN IN HONOR OF HIS ASCENSION AND OF THE ASSUMPTION OF HIS HOLY MOTHER

O JESUS, I adore, praise and glorify Thee countless times at the moment of Thy triumphant entrance into heaven. I offer Thee all the glory, love and praises that were given to Thee in welcome by the Father, the Holy Spirit, Thy Blessed Mother and all the angels. I also honor Thy Blessed Mother in the moment of her assumption into Paradise. I offer her to the glory and praises that were bestowed upon her by the Omnipotent Father, by her Beloved Son, Thyself, Thy Holy Spirit, all the angels and all the saints. I offer to Thee and to Thy glorious Mother, my own entrance into Paradise, which, I hope, by Thy great mercy, to make one day, in honor of the glorious and triumphant entry of Thy ascension and her assumption. O my Most Adorable Jesus, I desire to consecrate everything that ever was, is, and shall be in me, in time and in eternity, to the honor and homage of Thee and Thy most holy Mother.

SECOND POINT

LET US OFFER PRAISE AND LOVE TO THE THREE DIVINE PERSONS, TO JESUS, MARY, THE ANGELS AND THE SAINTS

O Most Admirable and Most Adorable Trinity, I adore, bless and magnify Thee infinitely for all that Thou art in Thy manifold works of mercy and justice toward me and to all Thy creatures, in heaven, on earth and in hell. I offer Thee all the adoration, love, glory, praise and benediction accorded Thee forever. O my God, how I rejoice to behold Thee so full of greatness, of marvels, of glory and joy! It is enough. I desire no other glory, felicity or happiness in eternity save to behold the incomprehensible glory, felicity and happiness of Him whom I love more than myself. O my glory and my love, may all heaven and earth be transformed into glory and love for Thee! Finally, I sacrifice myself all to Thee to be sacredly annihilated and consumed forever in the most pure fire of Thy divine love.

O Jesus, Thou only object of my love, with what love, with what praises can I ever repay Thee for all that Thou art in Thyself, and for all the innumerable effects of Thy goodness towards all Thy creatures, myself in particular? Lord, may all Thy creatures, all Thy angels and saints, Thy Blessed Mother, and all the powers of Thy divinity and humanity be employed in blessing and loving Thee forever.

O Mother of God, O holy angels, O blessed saints, I hail, honor and thank you all in general, and each one in particular, especially those to whom I owe some special obligation and with whom I am to be most closely associated in eternity. In thanksgiving for all the favors I have received from you, and much more for all the glory and services you have rendered to my God, I offer to each one of you the most amiable Heart of my Jesus, source of all joy, all glory and all praise. I give you my mind and my heart; unite them with your minds and hearts and associate me in your constant chorus of praise to Him who created me, that I may praise and love Him eternally with you. Pray ardently that I may bless and love Him through you, while awaiting the day when it may please Him to unite me with you to love and glorify Him to perfection.

O blessed day, when I shall begin to love most purely and perfectly my Lord and Saviour who is infinitely amiable! O thousand times happy day in which I shall begin to be all love for Him who is all love for me! O Jesus, my sweet love, how consoled I am when I think that I shall love and bless Thee eternally! My eyes dissolve in tears and my heart melts with joy at the sweetness of the thought that some day I shall be completely transformed into praise and love for Thee. But, alas, when will it come, this day, so longed for and a thousand times desired? Will it yet delay for long? "Woe is me, that my sojourning is prolonged" (PS. 119, 5) - "How long, O Lord, wilt thou forget me unto the end? How long dost thou turn away thy face from me" (PS. 12, 1)?

No more the hunted stag desires,
Fleeing in woe and weariness,
Waters to quench his burning thirst,
Than my poor heart with sadness pressed
Sighs after Thee, O Lord, my rest.

My heart is driven nigh to death
By cruel desires, merciless,
And longs for Thee, Lord, Mighty God,
And in its longing, cries apace:
When shall my eyes behold Thy face?
When, ah, when will come that day
To take my earthly woes away
And bring me home at last to Thee?

THIRD POINT

LET US RESOLVE To LEAD A HEAVENLY LIFE HERE BELOW

While waiting for that day, I desire, O my Saviour, to realize in my self St. Paul's words: "Our conversation is in heaven" (Phil- 3, 20), as well as Thy words of reassurance and guidance: "The kingdom of heaven is within you" (Luke 17, 21). I desire to live on earth as though I were not here, but living by my heart and spirit in heaven. I desire to concentrate all my powers on -the establishment Of the kingdom of Thy glory and holy love within myself. But Thou knowest, Lord, that of myself I can do nothing; therefore, I give myself to Thee, that Thou mayest destroy every obstacle and perfectly establish the kingdom Of Thy pure love in my body, in my soul, and in all my thoughts, words and actions.

The Feast of the Most Holy Name of Mary

FIRST POINT

ORIGIN AND MEANING OF THE HOLY NAME OF MARY

THE most holy name of Mary was sent from heaven from the adorable Heart of the Most Holy Trinity, where it was cherished from all eternity. It was carried to earth by the Archangel Gabriel, who announced it to St. Joachim and St. Anne. This blessed name is a marvelous treasure containing within itself all riches.

It embraces the divine maternity, since Mary, according to St. Ambrose, signifies "God born of my race."

Mary signifies also "enlightened" and enlightening," which is most fitting. For the infant Mary was so replenished with the light of grace from the first moment of her life, that she knew the Creator and all creatures, and all things necessary to Almighty God. If she was so enlightened at the commencement of her life, judge what progress she

(1). At the end of his work, The Admirable Childhood of The Most Holy Mother of God, St. John Eudes added this series of meditations on the holy childhood of Mary. He recommended them for the days following September 8, the Feast of the Nativity of Our lady, and for the eighth day of each month, which he dedicated to the childhood of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

must have made during the years of her childhood, inasmuch as her light and grace continually grew and multiplied from moment to moment.

Return thanks to the Father of Light and supplicate Him to make you feel the effects of that precious name, Mary, which not only signifies "enlightened" but also "enlightener" and "enlightening." Pray Our Lady of Light to give you a share in that radiance that you may know the infinite goodness of God, in order to love Him; the frightful horror of sin, in order to hate it; the vanity of the things of this world, in order to despise them, and the abyss of your own nothingness, that you may humble yourself.

SECOND POINT

ANOTHER MEANING OF THE NAME OF MARY

The name, Mary, also signifies "Imitator of God." The most holy Virgin imitated God perfectly throughout her holy childhood, in the love God bears Himself, in His charity towards men, in His goodness, His liberality, His mercy, purity, sanctity and other perfections, appearing as a more perfect image of the Divinity than all the saints together.

St. Thomas calls Our Lady "a perfect image of the divine Goodness," Rejoice then with her; thank with her the most Holy Trinity, offering all the honor this holy maiden tendered the Blessed Trinity by her marvelous imitation. Weigh well the words of the Holy Ghost, speaking by the mouth of St. Paul: "Be ye therefore followers of God, as most dear children" (Eph. 5, 1). Humble yourself for having until now so inadequately practised His counsel. Resolve to do better, especially in imitating the Blessed Virgin in the virtues most necessary for you, and supplicate her constantly to assist you by her powerful prayers.

THIRD POINT

THIRD MEANING OF THE NAME OF MARY

Mary signifies Lady. From her infancy this holy maiden was Sovereign Lady of heaven and earth, of men, of angels and of all creatures.

THE CHILDHOOD OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN MARY

Her power is absolute in heaven, earth and hell, over the demons and in all things, spiritual and corporal. Her power is threefold: first by her title of eldest daughter, and, consequently, of heiress to all the estates of the Eternal Father; second, by title of Mother of God, having been chosen by the Son of God, from the first moment of her life, to be His Mother; third, by title of Spouse of the Holy Ghost, as endowed with all the rights of spouse of the omnipotent Sanctifier.

Mankind, Christians included, tends generally to rob this glorious lady in so far as possible, of the authority and power God has given her over them, and bestow their authority and power upon Satan, her enemy. This is what you have done every time and as often as you have been guilty of mortal sin.

Beg pardon of the Son and the Mother, and endeavor to establish their reign in your heart, removing every obstacle and imploring the Blessed Virgin Mary to employ in your behalf the power God has given her.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"O clement, O loyng, O sweet Virgin Mary."
O clemens, O pia, O dulcis Virgo Maria.

SECOND MEDITATION

Our Obligations to Honor and Imitate the Blessed Virgin Mary in Her Admirable Childhood

FIRST POINT

EXCELLENCE OF THE HOLY CHILDHOOD OF MARY

WE are obliged to honor the sacred Virgin in her childhood. First, because the twelve years of this sacred period contain in themselves almost an infinitude of greatness and holiness, which merits the highest honor, and will be for eternity the object of the praises of the denizens of heaven. Count the mysteries, the virtues, the thoughts, affections, words, actions and mortifications of this maiden. Reflect upon her holy use of the powers of her soul, and of her interior and exterior senses. You will find herein sufficient reasons for entertaining a singular devotion to her. For all that passed in the interior or exterior of this blessed child was filled with perfection and sanctity, worthy of most particular veneration.

Secondly, we should revere this admirable maiden because her infancy was a continual exercise of adoration, praise and love towards God. She was full of grace, therefore she gave more glory to God by the smallest action than the chief among the saints by the practice of most heroic virtue.

Thirdly, we should render all possible honor to her pure sanctity because all the virtues of her infancy were employed in preparing her to give us a Saviour and to cooperate with Him in our salvation. May all these reasons inspire in us a singular devotion and particular love for this inviolate and amiable maiden.

THE CHILDHOOD OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN MARY

SECOND POINT

ADVANTAGES DERIVED FROM THE HOLY CHILDHOOD OF MARY

Among other considerations, We Must remark that we are indebted to the holy childhood of Mary for three great favors. The Son of God when about to be born into the world could have created a virgin of perfect age and become incarnate in her. But His infinite goodness towards us obliged Him to choose for His Mother a daughter of Adam, thus to honor all the human race with three signal favors.

First, by this birth of the Infant Mary, divine Bounty gave us two treasures of sanctity, St. Joachim and St. Anne.

The second favor is that, by the birth of the holy Infant Mary, God bestowed upon the race of Adam another inestimable gift, an immense treasure of good, the holy and precious Mother of God, born of Adam's race, our sister and our Mother.

The third favor consists in the treasure our lady herself has given us, the God-man, our Brother.

Weigh well these three great favors God has given us in the birth of the most holy Infant Mary and let these considerations excite in us a great desire to honor our Blessed Lady in every possible way.

THIRD POINT

THE HOLY CHILDHOOD OF MARY IS A MODEL FOR ALL CHRISTIANS

The Son of God wished His admirable Mother to pass through the state of infancy that she might give an example and rule of life for all Christians to follow. For all men are obliged by the laws of the Gospel to be children in innocence, in simplicity, in humility, in obedience and in all virtues. "Amen, I say to you, unless you be converted, and become as little children, you shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 18, 3)

Render thanks to the Son of God for having given us an example so noble and so charming, and a rule so holy and so sweet. Venerate this divine example, love this amiable rule. See if you have followed it in the past. Humble yourself and ask pardon for the shortcomings of which you have been guilty. Begin carefully to imitate the virtues of the precious infancy of your most holy Mother. Beg her to assist you to eradicate in yourself any obstacle to your loving imitation of her virtue.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Unless you ... become as little children, you shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven."

THIRD MEDITATION

The Innocence and Simplicity of the Blessed Virgin in Her Admirable Childhood

FIRST POINT

INNOCENCE OF MARY DURING HER CHILDHOOD

AN INNOCENT person is an individual who does not know what it is to injure another, or, in different words, to commit sin, because sin alone dishonors God and injures men.

Consider that, among all pure creatures, the Immaculate Virgin alone was conceived, born and lived until her last breath in perfect innocence. She was not only preserved from all sin, but was in reality impeccable. The goodness of God endowed her will with this happy impossibility. First, by a singular favor of His divine Providence, God preserved her from all perils, and occasions of danger, as much by His immediate protection as by the ministry of millions of angels who accompanied her everywhere and guarded her most carefully. This privilege was most appropriate to the dignity of the Mother of the Saint of saints and Sovereign Monarch of the universe.

Secondly, the great and marvelous light within her soul revealed, with unerring clearness, the tiniest atom of imperfection, and the superabundance of the grace which filled her vanquished the very shadow of sin. St. Augustine says: "Ad vincendum omni ex parte peccatum."

Thirdly, the sacred fire of divine love so inflamed her heart that she lived in the continual exercise of most pure love, without fatigue or interruption. This held her will under a moral inability to choose any fault, even the slightest.

Thank God for the marvelous innocence with which He clothed this most holy Virgin from the first moment of her life. Ask the grace to imitate this shining innocence, carefully avoiding any offense against

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

God, against your neighbor, against your own soul. Endeavor to apply yourself as ardently as possible to the exercise of divine love, for the greater your love for God, the farther removed you are from sin. Offer your heart to this Mother of Fair Love, and beseech her to kindle therein one spark of the ardent fire of love with which her own heart is consumed.

SECOND POINT

SIMPLICITY OF MARY DURING HER CHILDHOOD

The virtue of Christian simplicity is most pleasing to God. The divine Word assures us that He takes His pleasure and delight in those who walk in simplicity before His Countenance: "His will is in them that walk sincerely" (Prov: 11, 20). This virtue shuns multiplicity in thoughts, desires, affections, words and actions, and employs all the exertions of the soul, mind and heart in pleasing God. It causes moderation in speech, it eliminates useless actions which serve to dissipate the mind and distract the heart from Him who should be the only object of its thoughts and affections.

Simplicity detests that curiosity which is eager to see, to hear and to know things that are not at all necessary to render it more pleasing to God. It is the sworn enemy of duplicity, artifice and disguise, of lying and deceit. It causes the soul to pursue the straight road of candor, frankness and dove-like sincerity, turning neither to the right nor the left. It chooses by preference simple and plain taste in eating, speaking, walking and dressing, and has a horror of the novel fashions of the world, which are vain and frivolous.

To what an eminent degree this holy simplicity adorned our amiable Mary! The Holy Spirit says of her. "Thy eyes are as those of doves" (Cant. 1, 14)

Give thanks to God for the glory tendered Him by this most Holy maiden in her practice of the virtue of shining simplicity.

THE CHILDHOOD OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN MARY

213-

THIRD POINT

OUR OBLIGATION TO IMITATE THE INNOCENCE AND SIMPLICITY OF MARY

Adore the designs of the Son of God towards you when He pronounced these words: "Be ye therefore as wise as serpents and simple as doves" (Matt. 10, 16). For you were present before His eyes, He bore you in His mind and in His heart, which was filled with ardent desire to behold you adorned with simplicity for the glory of His Father and the salvation of your soul.

Endeavor to acquire this virtue. Examine your failure to observe simplicity in your intentions, desires and affections; by excess in words; by curiosity of the eyes, ears and mind; by artifice, lying and deceit; by aversion to simple food, clothing, lodging or furniture; by your inclination to follow worldly vanities. All these vanities are opposed to the spirit of the Blessed Virgin

Ask pardon for all your faults and promise to eliminate all that is contrary to Christian simplicity. Imitate the simplicity of your heavenly Queen, that you may be of the number of those whom St. Paul calls the simple children of God, who are without reproach (Phil. 2, 15), in whom He delights. You may repeat: "For our glory is this, the testimony of our conscience, that in simplicity of heart and sincerity of God, and not in carnal wisdom, but in the grace of God, we have conversed in this world" (2 Cor. 1, 12).

Ejaculatory prayer:

"(Be) blameless, and sincere children of God."

Simplices filii Dei (Phil. 2, 15)

FOURTH MEDITATION

The Humility of the Blessed Virgin in Her Admirable Childhood

FIRST POINT

WHY GOD LOVES HUMILITY

THERE are three reasons why God loves humility and hates presumption, pride and ambition.

God, who is the essential Truth, loves truth. He hates lying because it is the enemy of truth. As truth and humility are one, so pride and falsehood are one.

Humility is simply a lowly opinion of ourselves and true consciousness of our own misery and nothingness. It is only the truth to assert that we are nothing but sin and misery. What is pride but a high esteem of ourselves in the belief that we are something, which belief is only falsehood and deceit? "For if any man think himself to be something, whereas he is nothing, he deceiveth himself," says St. Paul (Gal. 6, 3) -

God who is infinite Justice, hates injustice as the enemy of justice and, consequently, His own enemy. Humility is that justice which renders to God the honor and glory which are His due, and pride is that injustice which robs God of His glory to attribute it to self.

Idolatry is an abomination in the sight of God for it renders to creature the sovereign honor due to God alone; the virtue of religion is loved by God because it renders Him His due. Now, pride causes the sinner to make an idol of self, and put himself in God's place, since he prefers himself to God when his own interests, his satisfactions, his own will and desires are at stake. But, God loves humility, inasmuch as it is animated by the spirit of religion, which refers to God the honor and glory of all things.

Adore in the heart of the great God His infinite love for humility and His hatred of pride. Beg Him to enkindle in your heart some portion of His love for humility and His detestation of pride.

SECOND POINT

HUMILITY OF MARY DURING HER CHILDHOOD

God inspired in the heart of the pure Virgin Mary His own intense love for humility, and abhorrence of pride. She possessed, even from her infancy, a far greater horror of pride and ambition, and a far deeper love for humility than did all the saints together. It was the first virtue that she practised. She abased and humbled herself before all. She esteemed herself, and would have been happy to be treated by others, as the last of all creatures.

By the marvelous radiance of her Immaculate Conception, she beheld herself susceptible to the guilt of the children of Adam, except that God miraculously preserved her, and she considered that she might have been capable of all the sins in the world, whose source is original sin.

It was this humility which attracted to her the countless graces which rendered her worthy to be the Mother of God, Queen of heaven and earth. Give thanks to Almighty God who resists the proud and gives grace to the humble, and offer Him all the glory that this maiden accorded to His majesty by her practice of richest humility during her childhood and throughout the rest of her life.

THIRD POINT

OUR NEED OF HUMILITY

The practice of humility is not only a counsel of perfection but also a precept of obligation, since our Saviour Himself has declared that unless we become little and humble as children, we shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven (Matt. 18, 3)

Consider the frightful castigation the just anger of God has hurled upon the apostate angels, upon Core, Dathan and Abiron and many other proud persons. This realization should help us to hate pride, which is so detestable before God. On the other hand, consider the prodigious humility of our Saviour, of His Blessed Mother and of all the Saints.

216-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

Excite in yourself a true desire to practise this virtue and to shun its opposite. Examine well your thoughts, desires, affections, your words and actions, to see if they reveal anything contrary to humility. See what esteem you hold for yourself, what motives actuate you, how you bear humiliations and corrections, how you react to honor and praise. See if you love to speak about yourself and to your own advantage, if you obey without murmuring, if you prefer yourself to others or indulge in envy of them, if you perform your actions to gain applause and esteem, if you are vain and worldly in your choice of clothing and lodging.

Humble yourself profoundly before God at sight of all the faults of which you have been guilty. Beg Our Lord and His Holy Mother to repair them. Offer to the Eternal Father the glorious honor of their profound humility. Take a strong resolution for the future to guard yourself against pride and to practise this counsel of the Holy Ghost: "Humble thyself in all things: and thou shalt find grace before God: for ... he is honored by the humble" (Ecclus. 3, 20-20)

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Humble thyself in all things: and thou shalt find grace before God." Humilia te in omnibus, et coram Deo invenies gratiam (Ecclus. 3, 20).

FIFTH MEDITATION

The Obedience of the Blessed Virgin Mary in Her Admirable Childhood

FIRST POINT

SUBMISSION OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN TO GOD'S WILL

WE HAVE been placed in the world for one purpose only, to do God's will. This is our first beginning and our last end, and consequently our sovereign good. In His holy will as in our centre, we ought to find repose of mind, peace of heart, our perfect felicity and true paradise. As our own will is opposed to the will of God, we should regard and hate it as His sworn enemy and our own foe. We should treat self-will as a beast of prey, a ravening wolf, a ferocious lioness, the source of hell, for without it there would be no hell. It is the mother of all the abominations of the earth. Self-will is a venomous serpent, a detestable homicide that kills body and soul at the same time, an execrable deicide that kills God insofar as it is able.

Our blessed Lady, by the light of her incomparable grace, saw clearly this monster of self-will and renounced it utterly, although she was not corrupted nor depraved by sin as we are. She united herself inseparably to the divine will, seeking all her glory and contentment and joy in following it everywhere and in all things, with entire submission and perfect obedience.

Let us praise Almighty God for having given her this grace, and offer to His Divine Majesty all the glory she rendered Him by the practice of obedience, in reparation for our rebellion against God and our disobedience to the divine will.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

SECOND POINT

OBEDIENCE OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN TO HER PARENTS AND SUPERIORS

Let us consider that the Blessed Virgin was obedient, not only directly to God, but to His will as manifested by His commandments, by the law of Moses, by her parents and superiors, in whom she perceived and honored God, whose voice she obeyed as the voice of God. She followed literally the injunction of St. Peter: "Be ye subject therefore to every human creature for God's sake" (1 Peter 2, 13). Never was there obedience so simple because never was there humility so profound. Her obedience was unquestioning, prompt and joyous for this thrice holy maiden had no other delight than to follow the most adorable will of God, pointed out to her by those who held His place.

Give thanks to the divine majesty, and offer God the honor tendered Him by the obedience constantly practised by His little Handmaid in reparation for your faults against this virtue.

THIRD POINT

NEED TO RENOUNCE OUR OWN WILL TO Do THE WILL OF GOD

Let us consider that all our happiness consists in following the divine will of God, manifested to us by His commandments and those of His Church, by the obligations of our state of life and by those who represent God to us. Obedience is the mother of happiness.

To follow God's will we must renounce our own, for they are diametrically opposed, since man's will is perverted, corrupted and poisoned by sin.

Let us regard our own will as the sworn enemy of our salvation, and even of our happiness in this life. There is nothing on earth nor in hell we should fear more than self-will for it is the source of all the miseries and evils of earth and hell. It is a dragon which will strangle us if we do not crush it. Fear it more than all the demons for they are chained dogs that can bite only those who come within their reach, but self-will is a serpent which we bear in our very selves.

Let us work, then, to crush this reptile. Examine the faults we have committed through self-will, in thought, word, deed and omission. Let us ask God's pardon, pray to Him and to His most holy Mother for the grace of amendment.

Finally, let us engrave upon our heart these words: "The blessing of God follows the obedient everywhere, and His malediction is inseparable from disobedience." Follow the example of Jesus and Mary in their submission to the divine will, that you may become like Jesus Christ: "The man of my own will" (Isa. 46, it).

Ejaculatory prayer:

"An obedient man shall speak of victory."

Vir obediens loquetur victorias (PROV. 21, 28).

SIXTH MEDITATION

The Charity and Meekness of the Blessed Virgin Mary in Her Admirable Childhood

FIRST POINT

LOVE OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN FOR ALL MANKIND

CONSIDER that God chose the Blessed Virgin from the first moment of her life to establish her in the place of Eve, as Queen and Mother of all the living. He bestowed upon her at the same time a universal love for all mankind. Grace and charity are one and the same thing, therefore it follows that the charity of the infant Mary at the commencement of her life was far greater than that of all the saints. And as her grace multiplied from moment to moment, so did her charity, until it reached so high a degree that it was comprehensible only to that of God Himself.

Consider also that when the Eternal Father chose this glorious Mary, to communicate to her His divine Paternity, He made her at the same time a participant in His paternal love for His Well-beloved Son and for all His other children. Therefore, her heart burned with a love proportionate to her dignity of Mother of God, and of the children of God.

It was this charity which drew her, when yet an infant, to solicit with tears and prayers the advent of the Saviour, and by her ardor to advance the moment of the Incarnation. It was this charity, joined to her humility and virginal purity, that disposed her to become the Mother of the Redeemer.

Let us thank the God of charity, and offer Him the glory which accrued to Him from the love of the Immaculate maiden for Him and her charity towards mankind. Let us ask her to repair our deficits in the love of God and of our fellowmen.

SECOND POINT

MEEKNESS OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN

The holy Virgin, among all pure creatures, is the most powerful in heaven and on earth. She shares in the infinite omnipotence of God. She participates in the immense wisdom of the Son of God, and in the sweetness, benignity and gentleness of the Holy Ghost, the infusion of Whose potent and benign gifts has filled her virginal heart with incomprehensible sweetness. Except the Son of God, never has there been beheld upon earth, nor will there ever be again one so gentle, so gracious, so delectable, so merciful as this lovely maiden. Her benign charity extended itself even to her cruelest enemies, the enemies of the Saviour of the world, for she knew by divine revelation, and by reading the Prophets, that the Messiah was to be persecuted and crucified by the perfidious Jews, who would vent upon the Saviour all their hatred and cruelty. Instead of praying heaven to punish these murderers, the spirit of charity and benignity animated His most sweet handmaid to pray for these miserable wretches in the words which the all-merciful Redeemer would one day utter from His Cross: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do" (Luke 23, 34)

O all amiable maiden, I am not astonished that the divine Spouse exclaims: "Thy lips, my Spouse, are as a dropping honey-comb, honey and milk are under thy tongue" (Cant. 4, it). And He continues, "Thy spirit is sweet above honey" (ECCLUS. 2. 27). Holy Mother Church cries out in the same strain: "O clement, O loving, O sweet Virgin Mary." Immortal thanks be given to the Holy Spirit for having filled thee with the nectar of heavenly sweetness and transformed thee into His own divine gentleness. May the Eternal Father receive in satisfaction for my sins against meekness, the honor thou hast given Him by its perfect practice.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

THIRD POINT

WE SHOULD STRIVE TO IMITATE THE CHARITY AND MEEKNESS OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN

If we desire to be among the true children of the benign Jesus and the gentle Mary, let us strive to imitate them in these virtues. Let us weigh often these words of the Holy Ghost: "But before all things have a constant mutual charity among yourselves" (1 Peter 4, 8). "God is charity: and he that abideth in charity, abideth in God, and God in him" (1 John 4, 16). "Shewing all mildness towards all men" (Tit. 3, 2). "Charity is patient, is kind: charity envieth not, dealeth not perversely; is not puffed up; is not ambitious, seeketh not her own, is not provoked to anger, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth with the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things" (1 Cor. 13, 4-7)

Above all, let us listen to the Saviour, who says: "This is my commandment, that you love one another, as I have loved you" (John 15, 12). "Learn of me, because I am meek, and humble of heart" (Matt. 11, 29).

Let us make profitable use of these holy precepts. Examine the faults we have committed against them in any way. Pray the Son of God and His holy Mother to repair our defects, and to impart to us a share in their admirable charity and incomparable sweetness.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"For my spirit is sweet above honey."

Spiritus enim meus super mel dulcis (Ecclus. 24, 27)

SEVENTH MEDITATION

The Silence of the Blessed Virgin Mary in Her Admirable Childhood

FIRST POINT

SILENCE OF OUR LORD DURING HIS LIFE

THE virtue of silence is most agreeable to God. The Son of God, the Eternal Word of the Father, came into the world to converse with men. He had many great and important things to say to them, yet He was silent throughout the greater part of His life. His Infancy passed in silence, He was silent in His hidden life up to the age of thirty years, in the solitude of the desert and in the anguish of His bitter Passion, without ever dispensing Himself, although He had weighty reasons for so doing.

When the holy kings came from afar to adore Him, when cruel Herod sought to kill Him, He maintained His wonderful silence. And not content with observing it in His mortal and passible life, He yet continues it in His glorious life, in the holy Sacrament of the Altar, where He has resided in the continual silence of two thousand years.

Among the reasons for our Saviour's observation of silence there are three Principal ones.

By silence He wishes to teach us that He came upon earth principally and primarily to honor His Eternal Father. He knew perfectly well the means by which He could best accomplish this, and His choice of silence is an infallible proof that it is a most excellent means of honoring God and pleasing Him.

Again, He lived a silent life to repair the dishonor done to God by sins of the tongue.

Finally, by the practice of silence He merited and acquired for us the grace to make beneficial and worthy use of the gift of speech.

Let us thank the Son of God for the example He has given us of this virtue, and beg of Him the grace to profit thereby.

SECOND POINT

SILENCE OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN

The Blessed Virgin was animated by the same spirit as her Son in the practice of silence, as of every other virtue. She was eminently fitted to repeat those words of St. Paul: "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus" (Phil. 2, 5). This caused her to love silence, and to hate a multitude of words. We do not read anywhere that she ever broke the sacred silence of her holy childhood. And, we find in the Holy Gospel seven instances of her having spoken at any time of her life, and even then her words are few.

O most holy Virgin, I consecrate to thee my powers of speech. Grant that I may henceforth use them to speak only the language of my Most Adorable Father and my most amiable Mother.

THIRD POINT

IMPORTANCE OF SILENCE IN THE CHRISTIAN LIFE

Consider these words of St. James: "The tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity" (James 3, 6). It is the source of blasphemy, impiety, malediction, calumny, detraction, false testimony, perjury and lying; of deceit, murmuring, raillery, injurious and lascivious words. Silence preserves the soul from all these sins, and a multitude of others that follow in their train. Therefore: "If any man think himself to be religious, not bridling his tongue but deceiving his own heart, that man's religion is vain" (James 1, 26). And on the contrary: "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man" (James 3, 2).

God loves silence. For, it is a sacrifice we make of our constant inclination to talk. So eminently agreeable to Him is this silence, that He is pleased when we abstain sometimes even from good words. "I was dumb and was humbled and kept silence from good things," says the Prophet David. Thus, in their silence Our Saviour and His holy Mother abstained from speaking good and holy things for they could speak naught else. St. John the Baptist retired into the desert to avoid staining the purity of life by a single useless word.

Thousands of saints have spent their lives in silence and solitude for the same reason. This is why all the founders of religious Orders have recommended silence and mortification of the tongue in their established rules, for even the praises of our tongue to God are no better than hypocrisy when the tongue alone recites them and the heart is not united thereto (Matt. 15, 7-8). "The voice of the tongue is not heard by God if that of the heart is not present," says St. Augustine. This being so, we should cultivate a deep esteem and affection for the virtue of silence. What a desire to imitate our most holy Mary! What care to guard our tongue against the least injurious word! For we must remember that our Lord has declared that on judgment Day He will demand a severe account of every idle word.

Let us crave pardon for the sins we have committed by our tongue. Let us implore the Blessed Virgin to obtain for us the grace to imitate her and her Divine Son in the devout use of speech and in their singular love for holy silence.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"In silence and quiet the devout soul maketh progress."

In silentio et quiete proficit anima devota (Imitation of Christ, Ch. 20,6).

EIGHTH MEDITATION

The Modesty of the Blessed Virgin Mary in Her Admirable Childhood

FIRST POINT

EXCELLENCE OF MODESTY

Modesty is a virtue which regulates the exterior of the individual in a manner edifying to the beholder. It is one of the fruits of the Holy Ghost, and, where modesty is, there is the Holy Spirit.

Modesty, according to St. Paul, is a visible mark of predestination. It is one of the recognizable characteristics of the elect, the saints, and the well-beloved of God: "Put ye on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, the bowels of mercy, benignity, humility, modesty, patience" (Col. 3, 12).

in the early days of the Church when the Christians were very few, they were recognized by their great modesty, which converted many of the pagans.

Let these considerations fill your mind and heart with a high esteem and great love for this virtue, and with an ardent desire to acquire it.

SECOND POINT

ADMIRABLE MODESTY OF OUR LORD DURING His LIFE ON EARTH

Endeavor to picture the Son of God upon earth, conversing with men. Behold the marvelous modesty which appeared in His visage, His eyes, His speech, His gait, His gestures and His entire person. The Blessed Virgin declared to St. Bridget that her Divine Son was endowed with such beauty, sweetness and modesty that His aspect gave comfort and joy not only to the good, but even to the wicked and His enemies, and that the Jews, when they were in distress and affliction, would say to one another: "Let us go and gaze upon Mary's Son: the sight of Him will console us."

Let us adore the admirable modesty of the Saviour. Let us give thanks for the honor He rendered the Eternal Father by the practice of this virtue. Let us entreat Him to grant us grace to eradicate from ourself whatever is contrary to holy modesty.

THIRD POINT

ANGELIC MODESTY OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN

Picture the angelic modesty of Mary, the little Handmaid of God. Never was there anything comparable in any creature. Her carriage, her speech and gestures, her whole exterior, whether standing or seated, whether reposing or at work, whether conversing with her neighbor or praying to God in the Temple, her angelic visage, and simple dress and manner suggested a visible angel in whom modesty had become incarnate.

The modesty of this most holy maiden proceeded from three causes.

First, from the virginal chastity which enveloped her whole exterior. Second, from her constant dwelling in the presence of God and conversing with Him in her mind and heart. Third, from her complete possession of this gift of the Holy Ghost, who was the rule of all her actions, and imprinted in her being a living and perfect image of the adorable modesty befitting the Mother of God.

Let us give thanks to God for having clothed Mary with such incomparable modesty. Let us offer this peerless modesty in reparation for our faults against this virtue. Let us resolve to practice earnestly these words of the Apostle: "Let your modesty be known to all men; the Lord is nigh."

Let us examine our own behaviour in all the exterior acts of our life, and ask the grace to correct our faults against modesty. Let us beg the Blessed Virgin to obtain this grace for us for the sole glory of her Son.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Let your modesty be known to all men."

Modestia vestra nota sit omnibus hominibus (Phil. 4, 5)

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY ( 1 )*

Meditations for the Feast and Octave of the Holy Heart of Mary

FIRST MEDITATION

The Vigil of the Feast

Preparation for the Feast

FIRST POINT

THE FIRST DISPOSITION FOR THE FEAST OF THE HOLY HEART OF MARY IS HUMILITY

LET us bear in mind that all the feasts celebrated in the Church are fountains of grace, especially those of Our Lord and His Blessed Mother. But among the feasts of our Lady that of her admirable Heart is the essence and queen of all, for the heart is the seat of love and charity, the queen of all virtues and the source of every grace. This solemnity is a veritable ocean of graces and blessings which are most valued by Our Saviour, having been acquired at the cost of His Pre

(1). The two series of meditations on the Holy Heart of Mary are found in the eleventh book of St. John Eudes's work, The Admirable Heart of Mary. The first series is made up of nine meditations for the Feast of the Holy Heart of Mary and for the Octave of the Feast. The second series dealing with the perfections of the Heart of Mary may be used on any occasion for private devotion or community meditation. These beautiful meditations contain an excellent summary of St. John Eudes's doctrine of the devotion to the Holy Heart of Mary.

cious Blood and countless torments. For this reason Our Lord desires that we, too, should have a great esteem and singular veneration for these graces, and, consequently, that we should prepare, with much care and diligence, to receive the gifts He wishes to bestow on this great solemnity, to enable us to celebrate it worthily.

For this end there are three things to be done. First, we must humble ourselves profoundly, recognizing that we are most unworthy to participate in such a wonderful solemnity, which being the feast of a heart totally on fire with divine love, belongs rather to the Seraphim than to sinful souls such as we are, and in our position as sinners we cannot, humble ourselves too deeply.

Then, again, we are deeply unworthy to share in the graces and blessings of this feast an account of our inadequate and faulty use of the graces God has already showered upon us, and by the obstacles we have put in the way of those He would have given us, had we not prevented Him. Let us humble ourselves most profoundly before God at the sight of these defects, which are only too true.

SECOND POINT

THE SECOND DISPOSITION IS PURITY OF CONSCIENCE

The second thing to be done in preparation for the Feast of the Holy Heart of Mary is to excite a lively desire to celebrate it with appropriate devotion, divesting ourselves of all that is displeasing to Our Lord and His Blessed Mother. For this end, let us carefully and seriously examine our failings, in thought, word, deed and affection, also the misuse we have made of the powers of our soul, and our interior and exterior senses, in order to humble ourselves, beg God's pardon for our offenses, confess them faithfully and correct them in our lives.

THIRD POINT

THE THIRD DISPOSITION IS UNION WITH THE ANGELS, SAINTS AND THE THREE DIVINE PERSONS OF THE BLESSED TRINITY

In order to celebrate worthily the feast of the Heart of the Mother of Fair Love, it is little or rather, it is nothing, if we employ only the affections of our own hearts; so, as far as possible, we must make use of the complete treasures of love in heaven and on earth. The Holy Spirit, speaking by the lips of St. Paul, assures us that all things are ours (I Cor3, 22), our Heavenly Father having given us all in giving us His Son. "How hath he not also, with him, given us all things?" (Rom. 8, 32). We have the right to employ all hearts as our own in celebrating the praises of our heavenly Mother.

Very particularly should we ask our good angels and all the other choirs of heavenly spirits-- especially the Seraphim- also the holy patriarchs, prophets, apostles, martyrs, confessors, virgins, all holy priests and levites, and those saints who belong in a special way to the Heart of the Queen of Heaven, to unite our love with theirs, to make us sharers in their devotion to their glorious Queen, and do their utmost to help us to celebrate this rich solemnity worthily, as far as poor, weak human nature is capable of doing so.

Above all, let us offer our hearts, our bodies, our souls, our whole existence, to the infinite love of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost for the spotless Mother of our Saviour, begging Them to associate us in their divine love, and to prepare us to celebrate this feast in the way most pleasing to the Most Holy Trinity.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"My heart is ready, O God, my heart is ready."

Paratum cor meum, Deus, paratum cor meum (Ps. 107, 2).

SECOND MEDITATION

The Feast of the Holy Heart of Mary

The Holy Heart of Mary

FIRST POINT

EXCELLENCE OF THE HOLY HEART OF MARY

LET us concentrate on the subject of this feast. It is the Immaculate Heart of the Queen of Heaven and earth, the sovereign empress of the universe; it is the Heart of the only and beloved daughter of the Eternal Father, the Heart of the Mother of God, the Heart of the Spouse of the Holy Ghost; it is the Heart of the most dear Mother of all the faithful; a Heart the most worthy, noble, august, and generous, the most magnificent and charitable, the most lovable, most loved and most loving heart of all pure creatures; a heart on fire with love of God, inflamed with ardent charity towards us, deserving as many feasts as it has made acts of love and charity. Unite to it, also, the Divine Heart of Jesus~ whose heart was one with His dearest Mother, through unity of spirit, affection and will. Add to these the love of all the saints and angels, who are so closely united in thought and affection with Jesus and Mary.

Such is the subject of this great and admirable feast, which is worthy of boundless veneration and praise. Be eager to celebrate it with all possible devotion.

SECOND POINT

THE ETERNAL FATHER GAVE US THE HOLY HEART OF MARY

We should regard this feast as a day of extraordinary joy for ourselves, the Heart of our heavenly Mother being ours on four accounts,

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY

being given to us by the Eternal Father, by the Son of God, by the Holy Ghost, and by our Lady herself, therefore, the love of the Heart of Jesus and that of the saints and angels are ours also, being all united and one in the fire of charity.

What a treasure, and what happiness for us to possess such riches! How great should be our joy and delight! O, Dear Jesus, what return shall I make for the innumerable and tremendous favors I am constantly receiving from Thy holy Mother? I offer Thee my heart, which belongs to Thee~ but what is it to offer Thee the love of one so worthless? I offer Thee the hearts of all Thy angels and saints, but this again is inadequate in comparison with the immense treasure Thou hast given me in the Heart of Thy Blessed Mother.

I offer Thee her pure Heart, which is more pleasing to Thee than all the hearts in the universe; but even that offering is not enough to fulfill my obligations entirely. I offer Thee Thine own Adorable Heart, which is all on fire with infinite and boundless love for Thyself and Thy Eternal Father. O Mary, Queen of my heart, I offer thee likewise, the Sacred Heart of thy Divine Son, so lovable and overflowing with love, in thanksgiving for the inestimable treasures thou hast given me in thine own maternal Heart.

THIRD POINT

GRATITUDE TO JESUS AND MARY FOR THIS PRECIOUS GIFT

How would we feel if a great monarch opened his vaults, all filled with money and precious stones, giving us permission to take as much as we wanted?

This favor would be nothing in comparison with the indescribably rich gift the King of kings has bestowed in giving us the most lovable Heart of His glorious Mother.

If our Holy Father the Pope allowed us to have the choice of the most precious relics in the city of Rome, it would undoubtedly be a very great favor, but, again, it would be slight compared with the unspeakable favor of our Lord in granting to men the treasure of the Heart of the Queen of all Saints.

236-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

If Our Lord were to take from each one of us our own heart of flesh and blood and miraculously substitute the love of a seraph, it would be wonderful indeed, but the gift He has made of the Heart of His Blessed Mother is, in comparison, more magnificently noble and more precious.

O my Jesus, would that the hearts of all Thy creatures were employed to praise and love Thee for this incomprehensible favor! O Mother of my God, Mother of Fair Love, may all the creatures in the universe be changed into so many tongues and hearts blessing thee with constant love throughout eternity. Since thou hast given me thy most admirable Heart, do thou take complete possession of my poor heart, to sacrifice it without reserve to the undiluted love and pure glory of Thy Divine Son.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Infinite thanks to Jesus and Mary for their unspeakable gift."
Gratias infinitas Jesu et Mariae, pro inenarrabili dono ipsorum.

237-

THIRD MEDITATION Second Day of the Octave The Holy Heart of Mary Reflects the Adorable Love of the Eternal Father

FIRST POINT

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY IS WITH THE HEART OF THE ETERNAL FATHER THE PRINCIPLE OF THE MYSTERY OF THE INCARNATION

WE SHOULD look upon and honor the most pure Heart of the Blessed Virgin as a living portrait and perfect image of the infinite love of the Eternal Father. The divine love of the Father of Jesus was the first cause of the Incarnation and of His Son's birth on earth, and the most pure Heart of the Mother of Jesus is its second principle. For it was the love of the Father of Mercies that moved Him to send His Son into this world to become incarnate for the salvation of men, and it was the most pure and burning love of the virginal Heart of the Mother of Grace, inflamed with charity towards God and our souls, that drew down the Eternal Son from the bosom of His Father to be born of her and thus accomplish our salvation.

SECOND POINT

OTHER REASONS WHICH MAKE THE HOLY HEART OF MARY THE IMAGE OF THE HEART OF THE ETERNAL FATHER

The holy Heart of the Blessed Virgin is the living image of the adorable love of the Eternal Father, because as the Son of God has ever dwelt and will never cease to dwell in His Father's love, so, too, He has always lived and will ever live and dwell in the Heart of His Mother. His Father's divine felicity is a paradise of delight, love and glory for Him, and His Mother's Heart as a heaven, a heaven of heavens, in which He is, in a way, far more loved and glorified than in the empyrean sphere.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

Furthermore, the Father of Mercies and the God of all consolation, in His exceedingly great and Fatherly love, gave us His Well-beloved Son at the time of His Incarnation, and gives Him to us daily in the most Blessed Sacrament. So, too, the most Blessed Mother of Mercy and Consolation, in the boundless charity of her maternal Heart, gave us her dear Jesus at His birth, and does so continually in the Holy Eucharist, because being one with Him in spirit, in love and in will, she wills all that He wills and does all that He does.

Finally, the Eternal Father Himself accomplished in the holy Heart of His beloved daughter, the glorious Virgin Mary, that which He commands all faithful souls to do when He says: "Put me as a seal upon thy heart" (Cant. 8, 6). With His own hand He has impressed on her Heart a perfect semblance of the divine qualities of His love, which consequently is a perfect image of the sanctity, wisdom, goodness, mercy, benignity, charity and all the other perfections of the infinite love of our Heavenly Father.

O wondrous goodness of our eternal King, may all men and angels bless, love and praise Thee to all eternity, for having imprinted Thy likeness on the Heart of the Queen of my heart! O lovable Heart of my heavenly Mother, how I rejoice to see thee so noble, so royal, so holy, so perfect and so like unto the Creator and Sovereign Ruler of all hearts I

O holy Mother of God, art thou not my true Mother, and am not I thy poor child, although unutterably unworthy? And should not the heart of the child resemble that of the Mother? Thou seest, nevertheless, how unlike mine is to thine! O Mother of Mercy, take pity on my misery. I offer and give thee my wretched heart, whole and entire. I beseech thee by all the goodness of thy motherly Heart completely to destroy in thy unworthy child all that is displeasing to thee, and to imprint a perfect image of the holiness reigning in the Heart of its revered Mother.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Jesus, Fruit of the Heart of Mary, have mercy on us."
Jesu, fructus cordis Mariae, miserere nobis.

FOURTH MEDITATION
Third Day of the Octave
The Holy Heart of Mary Is One with the Eternal Father and Is the Mirror of the Sacred Heart of Jesus

FIRST POINT

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY IS BUT ONE HEART WITH THE HEART OF THE ETERNAL FATHER

THE Holy Heart of the glorious Virgin Mary is not only a vivid likeness of the infinite love of the Eternal Father, the Father of Virgins, but is one with it, one, not in unity of nature or essence, but in unity of spirit, with love and affection. For the Mother of Jesus never had any other spirit, will, or affections but those of the Father of Jesus, and attained that union, or rather that unity, by three means:

1. By entire separation from all sin.
2. By perfect detachment from the world, from self-love and from all created things.
3. By a most ardent love for the Divine Will, and by a prompt and cordial submission and abandonment to all its designs and orders.

O dearest Mother, I rejoice unspeakably to see thy blessed Heart thus united and conformed to the adorable will of our Heavenly Father, and render Him infinite thanks for this exalted union. To thee, my great and powerful Queen, I offer my heart. Cause it to share thy boundless hatred of sin; sever the bonds and break the chains that bind this poor slave; detach me entirely from the world, from self-will and from all that is displeasing to God. Consecrate me to His divine will, praying that it may be established in my heart, and reign there absolutely for ever more, so that in imitation of thee I may be one in mind, will and heart with my loving Heavenly Father.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

SECOND POINT

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY IS THE MIRROR OF THE HEART OF JESUS

The Heart of the Mother of our Divine Saviour is a beautiful mirror in which her Beloved Son has depicted, reflected and represented most excellently, all the virtues that reign in His Sacred Heart. They who see the Heart of the Queen of Angels, as the angels do, find therein a vivid and perfect reproduction of the love, charity, humility, obedience, patience, purity, contempt of the world, hatred of sin and all the other virtues of the most adorable Heart of Jesus. From the very depths of our own heart, then, let us return Him fitting thanks, and offer it to our Blessed Lady, earnestly begging her to obtain for us the grace that, as her Heart is a living portrait of the Sacred Heart of her Son Jesus, ours may be in like manner an image of hers.

Let us, on our part, cultivate a great desire to behold that virginal heart, on which, as on a beautiful mirror, we should often fix our eyes that we may see the stains on our soul, in order to efface them and engrave on our heart by earnest imitation all the virtues which shine forth in the peerless Heart of our heavenly Mother, especially humility, obedience and charity; for all the happiness, perfection and glory of our hearts consist in so living that we may be vivid reproductions of the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary.

THIRD POINT

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY IS BUT ONE HEART WITH THE HEART OF JESUS

Although the Heart of Jesus is distinct from that of Mary, and infinitely surpasses it in excellence and holiness, nevertheless, God has so closely united these two Hearts that we may say with truth that they are but one, because they have always been animated with the same spirit and filled with the same sentiments and affections. If St. Bernard could say he had but one heart with Jesus: "Bene mihi est, cor unum cum Jesu habeo," and if it was said of the first Christians that they had but one heart and one soul, so great was the union amongst them, how much more can we say that Jesus and Mary had but one heart and one soul, considering how closely they were bound together by the perfect conformity of mind, will and sentiment that existed between the Divine Son of God and His Immaculate Mother.

Add to this that Jesus so lives and reigns in Mary that He is the Soul of her soul, the Spirit of her spirit, the Heart of her heart; so much so that we might well say that Jesus is enshrined in the Heart of Mary so completely that in honoring and glorifying her Heart, we honor and glorify Jesus Christ Himself.

O Jesus, living in the Heart of Mary I be the life of my heart. Mary, Mother of Jesus, obtain by thy intercession, I beseech thee, that I may have but one heart with thy Beloved Son and thyself.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Who will grant me that my heart may be one for ever with the Heart of Jesus and Mary?"
Quis dabit mihi ut cor meum, cum Corde Jesu et Mariae cor unum fiat in aeternum?

FIFTH MEDITATION

Fourth Day of the Octave

Reasons Inspiring Us to Honor the Holy Heart of Mary

FIRST POINT

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY IS, AFTER THE HEART OF JESUS, THE MOST EXALTED THRONE OF DIVINE LOVE

LET us~recollect that God has given us the feast of the most pure Heart of the Blessed Virgin so that we may render on that day all the respect, honor and praise that we possibly can. To enkindle this spirit within us let us consider our motivating obligations.

The first is that we ought to love and honor whatever God loves and honors, and that by which He is loved and glorified. Now, after the adorable Heart of Jesus there has never been either in heaven or on earth, nor ever will be, a heart which has been so loved and honored by God, or which has given Him so much glory as that of Mary, the Mother of Jesus. Never has there been, nor will there ever be a more exalted throne of divine love. In that Heart divine love possesses its fullest empire, for it ever reigns without hindrance or interruption, and with it reign likewise all the laws of God, all the Gospel maxims and every Christian virtue.

This incomparable Heart of the Mother of our Redeemer is a glorious heaven, a Paradise of delights for the Most Holy Trinity. According to St. Paul, the hearts of the faithful are the dwelling-place of our Lord Jesus Christ, and Jesus Christ Himself assures us that the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost take up Their abode in the hearts of those who love God. Who, therefore, can doubt that the Most Holy Trinity has always made His home and established the reign of His glory in an admirable and ineffable manner in the virginal Heart of her who is the Daughter of the Father, the Mother of the Son, the Spouse of the Holy Ghost, who herself loves God more than all other creatures together?

How much then are we not obliged to love this exalted and most lovable Heart?

SECOND POINT

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY IS THE PRINCIPLE OF ALL THE GREATNESS OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN

There is another very special obligation embodied in these words of the Holy Ghost: "All the glory of the king's daughter is within" (Ps. 44, 14). All the glory, all the grace, all the sanctity, and all that is great and worthy of honor in the Queen of Heaven takes its origin from within, from her Heart, because it was by the profound humility, the peerless purity and burning love of her virginal Heart, that she, the Virgin of virgins, won the Well-beloved of the Eternal Father, that is His Only Son, whom she drew down to her heart and caused to dwell within her. In consequence she has been raised to the sublime dignity of eldest Daughter of the Father, the Mother of the Son, Spouse of the Holy Ghost, the Sanctuary of the Blessed Trinity, the Queen of the Universe, and has, moreover, been given to us as our Mother and our Sovereign. For this reason we ought not only to honor the most holy Virgin Mary in some of her mysteries or qualities, or in certain of her actions, nor even in her exalted person alone, but we ought first and chiefly to honor in her the source and origin of the dignity and sanctity of all these mysteries, qualities and actions, and even of her person; that is to say, her love and charity, for love and charity are the measure of merit and the principle of all sanctity.

It was the love and charity of her Heart, so full of both that sanctified all the thoughts, words, actions and sufferings of our Saviour's most holy Mother; sanctified also her memory, understanding, will and all the faculties of both the superior and inferior parts of her soul. This love adorned her whole interior and exterior life with such marvelous holiness; containing in itself, to a sovereign degree, all the virtues, gifts and fruits of the Holy Spirit, which rendered her worthy to bear and nourish Him who supports the whole world, and Who is the life of all living things. It was the love and charity of Mary's Heart that exalted her to a place in heaven above all the Seraphim and established her on a throne of incomparable glory, grandeur, happiness and power in proportion to her unsurpassable dignity as Mother of God.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

Add to this that our Lady's most gracious Heart is an inexhaustible source of gifts, graces, favors and blessings for all who love this Mother of Beautiful Love, and devoutly honor her most lovable Heart. In short, we have unspeakable obligations, both in number and quality, to the royal and maternal Heart of our great Queen and dearest Mother, on which account we can never sufficiently honor, praise and glorify her.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Infinite, boundless, eternal thanks be to the most loving Heart of Mary."
Gratias infinitas, immensas, aeternas, amantissimo Cordi Mariae.

SIXTH MEDITATION
Fifth Day of the Octave
Further Reasons for Honoring the Holy Heart of Mary

FIRST POINT

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY IS A LIVING GOSPEL

THE virginal Heart of the Mother of God is the faithful depository of all the mysteries and marvels of our Saviour's life, according to the testimony of St. Luke: "And his mother kept all these words in her heart" (Luke 2, 51). Her Heart is a living book, an eternal Gospel, in which the Holy Spirit has inscribed that wonderful life in letters of gold. It is this book of life we should incessantly study in order to understand perfectly and love ardently the beauty of all the Christian virtues, whose practice imparts true life. Above all, we ought to study the wondrous excellence of holy humility, as well as the way of practicing it and ridding our hearts entirely of the accursed canker-worm of pride and vanity which works such terrible havoc, not only in the souls of the children of perdition, but even in the hearts of the children of God.

O Mother of Goodness, what obligations we have to honor thy most lovable Heart in which thou hast preserved such precious treasures, for which be thou blessed for all eternity. Cause our names to be written in that book of life, we beseech thee, and help us to study deeply the beautiful truths and holy maxims inscribed therein.

SECOND POINT

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY CAREFULLY WATCHED OVER THE SAVIOUR OF THE WORLD

Who can describe the burning love for her Son Jesus, which filled the incomparable Heart of the Mother of God? How studiously watchful she was in caring for Him whom she nurtured, clothed and tended in order to give Him to us as our Saviour, for which we owe her a debt of gratitude beyond all power to conceive!

THIRD POINT

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY SUFFERED INTENSE PAINS FOR US

Who could enumerate the intense sorrow and cruel wounds that lacerated the maternal Heart of the Mother of Jesus throughout her whole life, especially at the time of her Son's Passion, and above all when, at the foot of the Cross, it was transpierced with a sword of sorrow? "In the Heart of the Blessed Virgin," says St. Lawrence Justinian, "was clearly mirrored the Passion of her Son Jesus, and a perfect representation of His death." "It was then," says Richard of St. Laurente, "that those inspired words were accomplished in this virginal Heart: 'The sadness of the heart is every plague'" (Ecclus. 25, 17), that is, there was no part of this afflicted Mother's Heart that was not pierced through and through with a thousand darts of anguish.

Now, it was we who brought upon her all these sorrows by our sins; therefore, we are obliged to render her all the honor and glory we possibly can, in order to repair in some measure the agony and grief we have caused her.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"O Jesus, by the most loving Heart of Thy holy Mother, transpierced with a sword of sorrow, have mercy on us."

Per Cor amantissimum sanctissimae Matris tuae doloris gladio transfixum, miserere nobis, Jesu.

SEVENTH MEDITATION

Sixth Day of the Octave

Other Reasons Which Bind Us to Have a Special Devotion to the Holy Heart of Mary

FIRST POINT

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY IS THE TRUE ALTAR OF HOLOCAUSTS

THE devout and learned Gerson likens the loving Heart of our Saviour's Mother to the bush seen by Moses, ever burning with the flames of most ardent charity but never consumed. Gerson says that it is the true altar of holocaust on which the sacred fire of divine love glows day and night. The sacrifice most pleasing to God and most beneficial to the human race, after the self-immolation of Our Lord on the Cross is the divine holocaust which the Blessed Virgin offered to the Eternal Father on the altar of her Heart, when she so frequently and with so much love offered to God in sacrifice that same Jesus, her Only Son so dearly beloved. We may add that He was sacrificed only once on the Cross, but was immolated a thousand upon a thousand times in the Heart of His holy Mother, that is, as many times as she offered Her Divine Son to the Eternal Father for us.

O holy Altar, what veneration is thy due, and what praises all creatures owe thee! Mother of Love, take our hearts and unite them with thy Well-beloved Son as a holocaust and sacrifice to Our Heavenly Father.

SECOND POINT

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY IS THE PRINCIPLE OF JESUS' LIFE

What veneration we owe to the august Heart of the Mother of God, which was the principle of the life humanly divine and divinely human .of the Infant Jesus while He dwelt within her! At that time, the Heart of the Mother is as much the source of her child's life as of her own, the one depending on it as much as the other.

What praise and respect are therefore due to the loving Heart of Mary on which the Infant Jesus chose that His life should depend, to that Heart which was the principle of two lives both so holy, so precious, to that Heart on which the adorable Babe so often reposed when in His Mother's arms! That Heart, most noble and revered organ of that virginal body gave a Body to the Eternal Word to be for all eternity the object of the adoration and praise of all celestial and blessed spirits. The Heart of our Lady being the principle of the life of our Head and consequently of His members, and being the principle of life to Jesus and Mary, is also that of the lives of their children. "Vitam datam per Virginem, Gentes redemptione laudite!"

O Mother of Goodness, may the hearts of all the faithful unceasingly bless and love thy maternal and devoted Heart May it be the heart of my heart, the soul of my soul and the life of my life.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"O Mary, my life, my sweetness and my dearest hope!"

O Maria, vita, dulcedo, et spes mea carissima.

EIGHTH MEDITATION

Seventh Day of the Octave

Three Additional Reasons for Honoring the Holy Heart of Our Blessed Mother

FIRST POINT

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY IS THE TEMPLE OF
THE HOLY TRINITY

THE admirable Heart of Mary is the august temple of the Divinity, a temple built by the hand of the Almighty, a temple consecrated by the continual indwelling of the Divine Spirit, a temple dedicated to eternal love, a temple never profaned either by the smallest sin, or taint of the spirit of the world, or by love of self or any other creature. Our Lady's Heart is the temple in which, after the Divine Heart of Jesus, the Most Holy Trinity is more perfectly adored, loved and glorified than in any other temple, material or spiritual, in heaven or on earth. Within this temple, O glorious Virgin, thy spirit ever dwelt in seclusion and recollection, offering to God a continual sacrifice of praise, honor and fervent love. It is there that I desire unceasingly to adore, bless and love the Creator of all hearts who made and sanctified it for His glory, wherein He will be eternally glorified in a higher degree than in all the empyrean heavens.

SECOND POINT

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY IS THE PARADISE OF DELIGHTS OF THE NEW ADAM

This wondrous Heart is to the new Adam, that is, to Jesus Christ Our Lord, a veritable Paradise of delights, of which He is the real 250-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

Tree of life, planted in the midst of this Paradise where neither the serpent nor sin have ever entered, whose gates have always been carefully guarded, not by a Seraph only, but by the very King of the Cherubim and Seraphim.

What delight the Divine Son of Mary found in that motherly Heart which loved Him more ardently than He had ever been loved, even by the purest spirits in the heavenly Paradise! What a joy it was to thy Divine Babe, O Blessed Mother, when He reposed on thy virginal breast, and thou wast wholly filled, penetrated and possessed by His holy spirit and His divine love, which utterly transported and absorbed thy whole soul, spirit and heart.

O Mother of Fair Love, obtain for me that I may have no other Paradise or pleasure in this world to love, serve and honor Jesus, the Son of Mary, and Mary, the Mother of Jesus.

THIRD POINT

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY IS THE KING OF HEARTS

After the adorable Heart of Jesus, the Sovereign Monarch of heaven and earth, the august Heart of Mary, the Queen of Angels and the Mother of the King of kings, is the eternal King of all hearts which were created to adore and love God. Therefore, all men are bound to pay homage to the holy Heart of Mary as to their Sovereign.

O royal Heart of my loving Queen, I wish to honor and revere thee as the true king of my heart. Exercise thy power over my most unworthy heart that thou mayest destroy everything that displeases thee and establish in it the reign of thy love and of all thy virtues.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"May the Heart of Jesus and of Mary live and reign in my heart for ever."
Vivat et regnet Cor Jesu et Mariae in corde meo in aeternum.

NINTH MEDITATION

Octave Day of the Feast

The Holy Heart of Mary Is the Heart of the Mother of Fair Love and Charity

FIRST POINT

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY IS A FURNACE OF THE LOVE OF GOD

WE should contemplate and honor the most lovable Heart of our Lord's Mother as a furnace of the love of God.

It is a furnace of love because sin, worldly affection, self-love have never had part therein, because it has always been replete and aflame with the fire of Divine love.

It is a furnace of love because it has never loved aught but God, and His holy will, which it sought in Him and for His sake.

It is a furnace of love because our Blessed Lady always loved God with her whole Heart, with her whole soul and with her whole strength. All her actions were done from the purest love of God, nor had she ever any other intention in all her thoughts, words and sufferings but to please Him, doing everything "Corde magno et animo volenti," with a great heart and all possible perfection, in order to give all possible pleasure to His divine majesty.

Mary's Heart is a furnace of love not only because it willed always exactly what God willed, and never deflected from His holy will, but because she ever placed all her happiness and joy in the most lovable Will of God.

It is a furnace of such burning love that not even the torrents and floods of bitter sorrows that deluged her soul were ever capable, I will not say of extinguishing, but of cooling in the smallest degree the glowing flames of that fire.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

It is a furnace of love in which the Holy Spirit, who is a consuming fire, enkindled His divine flame in her virginal Heart at the first moment of its existence, and never ceased to increase it more and more, from moment to moment, up to the last breath of her life.

O sacred fire and flame of this holy furnace, come and consume our hearts.

SECOND POINT

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY IS BURNING WITH LOVE FOR JESUS

The Heart of the Mother of Fair Love is a furnace of love in which the Only Son of God, who is also the only Son of Mary, ever dwelt and will continue to dwell eternally, He who is the essence of love, called in Holy Scripture, "a consuming fire" (Deut. 4, 24). Judge from this what burning flames, what glowing heat He generated in His holy Mother's Heart, where He found no obstacle to His designs. It is as if the Beloved Son of Mary existed in the Heart of His holy Mother as an immense furnace of divine love in the centre of another furnace all on fire with that same love, and from it the flames reached to the inmost being of the Seraphim to inflame them more and more and even to the subject of the Eternal Father's infinite felicity, His Well-beloved Son, who, inspired by the love of Mary, was drawn from His Father's bosom down to her virginal breast.

O holy furnace, blessed are they who approach thy sacred fire! Still more happy they who are enkindled by thy heavenly flames, and happiest of all those who cast themselves into that divine brazier to be wholly consumed therein.

O furnace of love, spread thy flames throughout the entire universe so that my Saviour's desire may be accomplished which He expressed, saying that He came to cast fire on the earth, and desired that it might be enkindled in the hearts of all men (Luke 12, 49)

Whoever wishes to burn with this holy fire must strive to extinguish within himself the flames of love of the world and self. He must study to love God alone, with his whole heart and to perform each and all his actions for love of Our Lord and to do them well, having no other intention, at any time, except to please Him, and for love of

Him to place all his joy in the fulfilment of His holy will and in the acceptance of all possible crosses.

O Mother of Love, obtain by thy prayers that this transformation may be accomplished in us.

THIRD POINT

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY IS A FURNACE OF CHARITY TOWARDS MEN

The pure Heart of the Mother of Jesus is a furnace of charity towards mankind; a furnace in which there has never been a single thought or sentiment contrary to virtue; a furnace of such burning charity for even the greatest enemies that she sacrificed for them her Only and Dearly Beloved Son at the very time they were cruelly putting Him to death, and piercing her maternal heart with a thousand darts of anguish.

It is a furnace of charity for her beloved children, whom she loves so ardently that if the love of all fathers and mothers past, present and future were united in one heart, it would be but a spark in comparison with the furnace of love burning in the Heart of our heavenly Mother.

It is a furnace on fire with such charity and zeal for souls, that she would have willingly suffered all the torments of hell to help to save a single soul. Moses, St. Paul, St. Catherine of Siena and several other saints have been ready and willing to do so, but how much more the Queen of all Saints, who was more filled with love for souls than all the saints together.

Return thanks, then, to the Divine Son of Mary for having so inflamed her Heart with that fire of divine charity for us, with which His own is burning. Thank her also for all she has accomplished in her charity for the human race. Desire earnestly to imitate your holy Mother in the practice of that virtue. Examine the faults you have committed against charity in the past, in order to humble yourself and beg pardon of God, offering Him the most lovable Heart of our Lady in reparation.

Also offer your own heart to the most holy Virgin, begging her to destroy in it all that is contrary to charity, and engrave instead a perfect image of her charity towards her enemies, her friends, and the souls of all mankind.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"O Heart of Jesus and of Mary, burning with love, may our heart be for ever immersed in you."

O Cor Jesu et Mariae, fornax amoris, in te cor nostrum demergatur in aeternum.

Eight Other Meditations on The Holy Heart of Mary

FIRST MEDITATION

The Holy Heart of Mary IS Our Sun, Our Treasure, and Our Refuge

FIRST POINT

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY IS OUR SUN

OUR loving Saviour has given us the very benign Heart of His Blessed Mother as a divine sun to clear the shadows of this earth, to warm us in the wintry cold of this mortal life, to gladden and to console us in earthly sadness and sorrows, and to vivify and fortify us in the lethargy and weakness of human fragility. Infinite thanksgiving be to the adorable Sun of eternity, Jesus Christ, for the gift of this sun!

O Mother of Fair Love, since your Well-beloved Son has given us your maternal heart to be our sun, enlighten our minds with your celestial radiance so that in knowing Jesus Christ, we may render the service, honor, and love that we owe Him. Illuminate our hearts so that in knowing the horror of sin we may have a hatred for it, in knowing the world we may detach ourselves from it, and in knowing ourselves we may have scorn for self. Make us participants in the celestial warmth of thy saintly charity so that we may love God above all things and our neighbor as ourself. Console us in our desolation, fortify us in our weakness. May thy shining Heart be the true sun of our hearts.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

SECOND POINT

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY IS OUR TREASURE

Our benign Saviour has given us the Sacred Heart of His beloved Mother as the inestimable treasure of an infinity of good. If St. Chrysostom calls the very charitable heart of St. Paul, "a fountain of innumerable blessings" for the Christians who invoke the help of this divine apostle, what words must one use in speaking of the incomparable heart of the Queen of Apostles?

It is a treasury in which immense riches are locked, because the most blessed Virgin, kept hidden in her Heart, while on this earth, and will continue to do so eternally in heaven, all the mysteries of the life of her Divine Son our Redeemer, mysteries which are the price of our redemption, the source of the sanctification of the Church Triumphant and the consolation of the Church Suffering.

Her Heart is a treasury which conserves in itself all the graces merited and acquired for us by our Saviour through His sufferings and death on earth. Therefore our Lady is called by all the saints, "the admirable treasure of the Church ... .. the treasury of God's graces," "the most holy treasure of all sanctity," and "the treasure of salvation." Our Lord has enclosed in her breast and Heart all the treasures of His graces, which are given to us through her mediation; therefore, St. Bernard said that all God's gifts to mankind pass first through the hands of the Mother of Divine Grace: Nihil nos Deus habere voluit, quod per Mariae manu non transiret.

O what joy it is to possess so rich a treasure! O what profound gratitude we owe to our very benign Redeemed But if we wish to enjoy the inconceivable blessings destined for us in this precious treasure, let us be careful to render to the Queen of heaven the honor and praise due her, and let us be careful to have respectful and confident recourse to her in all our needs. We shall find in this treasury the means to pay our spiritual debts, to satisfy all our obligations, to practise all Christian virtues, to live in a saintly manner, and to know and love God worthily.

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY IS OUR REFUGE

Our very loving Jesus has given us the divine Heart of His glorious Mary to be a tower of great strength, an impregnable fortress, an allpowerful refuge where we can take shelter against the enemies of our salvation. Have recourse to our Lady, tower of ivory, in all the temptations of the world, the flesh and the devil because her heart is so filled with goodness for all kinds of people that never has anyone in need implored her help in vain. Do not fear that her heart will fail you. retire with confidence into this most beautiful refuge, and you will feel the effects of its strong protection.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"O Heart of Mary, tower of strength, protect us."

SECOND MEDITATION

The Holy Heart of Mary IS Our Rule, Our Heart, A Fountain of Wine, Milk and Honey, and Our Oracle

FIRST POINT

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY IS OUR RULE

THE sovereign Legislator has given us the august Heart of His glorious Mother as a holy rule which, if faithfully kept, will make us saintly. The Heart of Mary is a rule of the celestial life which we must live, a rule with which we must be clothed. Her heart encloses all the maxims we must follow, the saintly dispositions with which we must perform all our actions. It is a rule for the sentiments and affections which must abide in our hearts, and a rule of all our thoughts, words and actions. In one word, it is a rule to guide both our interior and exterior life.

Let us render thanks to the adorable Legislator for having given us a rule so holy, amiable, sweet and easy, filled with love. Your joy and pleasure must be in keeping it since this rule is simply the all sweet and loving Heart of our adorable Mother, who will never cease to obtain for us from God the graces necessary to observe it faithfully. Therefore, you must often scrutinize this divine rule, studying it carefully so that you may follow it honestly and exactly.

SECOND POINT

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY WAS GIVEN TO US TO BE OUR HEART

The Son of God gave us the holy Heart of His most cherished Mother, which is none other than His own true Heart, so that His children have only one Heart with their Father and Mother, and all the members of His family have only the heart of their adorable chief.

Let us remember that we constantly serve, love and adore God with a heart worthy of its infinite grandeur: Corde magno et animo volenti; with a heart all pure and holy, singing His divine praises and performing all our actions with saintliness, love, humility and with all the other holy dispositions characteristic of this beautiful Heart of Mary.

To accomplish this, at the beginning of each action, we must completely renounce our own heart, which means our mind, self-love and will, and we give ourselves to our Lord, to be united with the love of His Heart and the Heart of His most Blessed Mother. Let us work, then, to become detached from our own earthly, wicked and depraved heart, so that we shall gain a Heart truly celestial, holy and divine.

THIRD POINT

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY IS A FOUNTAIN OF WINE, MILK AND HONEY

Our most sweet Jesus has given us the very benign Heart of His precious Mother as a fountain of wine, milk and honey, from which we draw the charity, gentleness and meekness which we must show to our neighbor. Our Lord has also given us her Heart as an oracle to be devoutly consulted in all our doubts and perplexities, so that we may know and follow faithfully His adorable will.

Oh Mother of Fair Love, bind our hearts so closely to yours that they may never be separated! Pray that the hearts of your children may have no other sentiments than those of the most Immaculate Heart of their all-perfect Mother.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Queen of our hearts, direct our hearts forever."

Regina cordis, dirige cor nostrum in aeternum.

THIRD MEDITATION

The Holy Heart of Mary Is the Sanctuary of the Human Passions

FIRST POINT

THE PASSIONS OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS ARE DEIFIED THROUGH THE HYPOSTATIC UNION

Eleven passions are implanted in the human heart, namely: love, hate, desire and aversion, joy, sadness, hope, despair, boldness, fear and anger. Adore all these emotions in the divine Heart of our Saviour, where, according to the theologians, they have been exalted to divinity through the hypostatic union, and by sanctifying grace which reigns perfectly in the Son of God made man. Thank Him for the glory that He has rendered to His Heavenly Father, by His most holy use of His human body. Offer to the Adorable Father all the honor thus rendered to Him by His divine Son. Give your heart to Jesus, together with all its passions. Beg Him to unite your emotions with His, to bless and sanctify them through His and to grant you all the graces necessary to imitate Him in the holy use of these passions.

SECOND POINT

THE PASSIONS OF THE HOLY HEART OF MARY ARE ENTIRELY SUBMISSIVE TO THE HOLY SPIRIT

These same passions existed in the amiable Heart of the Blessed Virgin, where they were so perfectly subjected to reason and to the spirit of God who possessed her entirely, that always her passions were under entire control. Her love was constantly for God above, and for the things God loves. She hated only the objects of God's hatred. She rejoiced in the things that were pleasing to His divine majesty. Nothing was capable of bringing sadness to her except those things which could sadden her Well-beloved Son.

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY

Her only fear was the filial fear of saying, thinking or doing anything displeasing to God. She had no other desire but to accomplish wholly and entirely His most adorable will. Her entire hope rested in God alone. It is a certainty that her Heart was filled with a saintly boldness and a marvelous generosity to undertake and to do the acts pertaining to the service of God no matter how difficult. She understood that she could do nothing of herself, and remained continually in a state of humiliation and in great scorn of herself, never having hoped or believed herself able to do anything through her own strength alone for the glory of His divine majesty.

That is why we must honor the very august Heart of the Mother of God, as the sanctuary of all passions, which human emotions were sanctified so excellently that they have been actuated only by the Holy Spirit, who possessed and animated them much more perfectly than human mind can conceive. Let us offer to God all the honor accorded to His majesty by the Holy Virgin in her perfect use of these same passions, and beg her to obtain for us all the necessary and suitable graces to enable us, through a faithful imitation, to govern our emotions according to the example of our divine Mother.

THIRD POINT

WE MUST MAKE A FITTING USE OF OUR PASSIONS

Let us make an exact and careful examination of all our passions, in order to perceive our mistakes and abuse of them; humiliate ourselves and ask pardon of God, begging Our Lord and His holy Mother to correct our errors and to take complete possession of our heart and all its passions. Beg them to teach you how to use your emotions for the love and glory of the Most Holy Trinity.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"My soul doth magnify the admirable Heart of Jesus and Mary."

Magnificat anima mea Cor admirabile Jesu et Mariae!

FOURTH MEDITATION

The Holy Heart of Mary Is the Kingdom and Throne of All Virtues

FIRST POINT

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY POSSESSED PERFECTLY ALL CHRISTIAN VIRTUES

THE Holy Spirit, having considered the most sacred Virgin from the moment of her Immaculate Conception as the one chosen from all eternity to be the Mother of God, infused in her Heart the three theological virtues: faith, hope, and charity; the four cardinal virtues: prudence, justice, temperance and fortitude, and all the other virtues: religion, humility, obedience, patience, meekness, purity, etc. The Holy Spirit bestowed the excellence of the virtues in her virginal Heart in a degree proportionate to the dignity and grace of the Mother of God. Therefore, this admirable Virgin possessed all these virtues from the first moment of her life, in such a high degree of perfection that the greatest saints never equalled her excellence even in the closing days of their heroic lives.

All these virtues flourished constantly in the Heart of the Mother of God, and from time to time during her life they were increased in merit. So much so that no mind can comprehend the degree of perfection attained when Mary left this world to be assumed into heaven.

O Queen of Virtue, what great joy my heart feels in beholding thee as Queen of all virtue, supreme over all the angels and saints of Paradise! Oh my Jesus, I render Thee infinite gratitude for having given to your holy Mother a Heart that is most saintly and wholly consecrated to Thy divine love.

SECOND POINT

THE REIGN OF CHRISTIAN VIRTUES IN THE HOLY HEART OF MARY

Not only did all virtue abide in the holy Heart of the Mother of our Saviour, but in addition it established its throne there from the earliest moment of her life and reigns in her Heart forever in a most special manner. It reigned in a sovereign degree over her thoughts, words, actions, and over all her most intimate feelings, both interior and exterior; consequently, these perfect virtues made God reign more perfectly and gloriously in her Heart than in the empyrean world.

The all-perfect power of the Eternal Father ruled there through the admirable effects continually produced in her Heart: "He hath done great things to me" (Luke 1, 49).

The infinite wisdom of the Son of God reigned in the Heart of Mary through the Christian virtues that communicated to her great knowledge and light. The love and goodness of the Holy Spirit reigned in the Heart of Mary through the Christian virtues that enkindled in her great love and enthusiasm.

Infinite glory be to the Father, Son and Holy Ghost for having established in the royal heart of the Queen of Heaven the throne of all the virtues and the sovereign kingdom of their incomprehensible glory! Oh how very fitting it is to render all possible honor and praise to this incomparable Heart, where the Most Holy Trinity is infinitely more glorified than in all the hearts of heaven and earth.

THIRD POINT

WE MUST PRACTICE ALL THE CHRISTIAN VIRTUES

The Blessed Virgin is our Mother; therefore, having the honor of being her children, although greatly unworthy, we must try to resemble her as closely as possible. Consequently we must imprint in our hearts a living image of the virtues that reign in her heart.

To accomplish this, let each one of us make a careful and honest examination of his heart, in order to know how far removed it is from

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

the virtues and sanctity of the Heart of our divine Mother, and to humiliate ourselves before God and her. We must make a strong resolution to begin in earnest to engrave on our hearts the semblance of the perfections of the divine heart of the Queen of the Angels.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"O Heart of Mary, throne of all virtues, reign in our hearts forever."

O Cor Mariae, thronus omnium virtutum, regna super cor nostrum in aeternum!

FIFTH MEDITATION

The Holy Heart of Mary Is the Centre of Humility

FIRST POINT

FOUNDATIONS OF HUMILITY IN THE HOLY HEART OF MARY

Reflect on the fact that humility is the centre of the Heart of the most holy Virgin. Being the foundation stone of all virtue, it has occupied the first position in her Heart since her Immaculate Conception. Humility has always found in her breast complete rest and satisfaction, never having been attacked by its enemies, because it is established there on four solid foundations. The first is the perfect knowledge of humility possessed by this humble Virgin, so much so that she understood completely that being created by God from nothing as other creatures, she was nothing, had nothing, and would never be anything by herself. She knew very well that being the daughter of Adam she would have been conceived in original sin if God had not preserved her and, consequently, she would have been capable of all sins whose source is original sin.

The second foundation of her humility is her profound knowledge of all the gifts, graces and innumerable privileges which God showered upon her, and the infinite dignity of the Mother of God, with which God honored her. She knew well the rule that the Holy Spirit gave to all mankind in these words: Quanto magnus est, humilia te in omnibus, which point out, as St. Augustine says, that the humility of the creature must be proportionate to the favors that it receives from its Creator. That is why the infinite grace of the Mother of God obliged that most blessed Virgin to humiliate herself most profoundly.

The third foundation is her understanding that the sovereign and infinite grandeur of God demands deep humility on the part of the creature: Summae celsitudini summa debetur humilitas. Her ardent zeal for the honor and glory of God carried her to the point of consummate humility before His divine majesty.

266-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

The fourth foundation is that, beholding her Beloved Son plunged into the abyss of scorn, ignominy and shame, for the love of men, but much more for love of her than for all other children of Adam, she longed to abase herself below Him, thus her self-annihilation knew no end. It is thus that her Heart was the centre of humility.

O very humble Virgin, thou wast chosen to crush the head of the serpent which is pride. Crush it completely then in my heart and enlighten me with thy divine wisdom so that I may imitate thee in thy vast humility!

SECOND POINT

EFFECTS OF HUMILITY IN THE HOLY HEART OF MARY

Consider the five prodigious effects of this humility in the Heart of the holy Virgin.

The first effect is that because God elevated her to the highest honor that a pure creature can attain, she never had any self-esteem, but always humiliated herself.

The second effect is that having stood constant and firm amid all the ignominies and insults she suffered in the passion of her Divine Son, her soul, remaining quiet even when it was pierced by a sword of sorrow, was greatly troubled by the praise of St. Gabriel, more insupportable than all her trials and sorrows.

The third effect is that the praise and benediction of St. Elizabeth at the time of the Visitation inspired her to disclaim all honor and give all the glory to God in her divine Canticle, the "Magnificat."

The fourth effect of her boundless humility is that she concealed the extraordinary favor of the Divine Goodness so that God had to send an angel to St. Joseph to expressly communicate to him the mystery that his holy spouse was too humble to reveal.

The fifth effect is that she continually sought the company of the poor, sinners and other miserable people, and that after the Ascension of her Divine Son, she sought the lowest place in the gatherings of the faithful.

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY

What immeasurable glory thou hast tendered to God, by thy very profound humility, O most humble Virgin! May eternal praise be thine! Oh how I long to imitate thee in this holy virtue! Obtain for me, I beseech thee, from thy Beloved Son, all the graces that I need for this purpose.

THIRD POINT

WAY TO ACQUIRE HUMILITY

Examine carefully all your faults against humility-in your thoughts, affections, words and actions. Ask pardon from God, make a strong resolution of amendment, and pray constantly to the most sacred Virgin to obtain the grace to practise humility.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"O Heart of Mary, centre of humility, intercede for us."

O Cor Mariae, centrum humilitatis, intercede pro nobis!

SIXTH MEDITATION

The Holy Heart of Mary b the Treasure of the Gifts of the Holy Spirit

FIRST POINT

THE EFFECT OF THE GIFTS OF WISDOM, INTELLIGENCE, COUNSEL, AND FORTITUDE IN THE HOLY HEART OF MARY

AFTER considering and revering the august Heart of the Queen of Heaven as the highest throne of all virtue, we must contemplate and honor her Heart as the richest treasure of the Holy Spirit, where He deposited immense and inestimable riches, among them seven incomparable graces which are commonly called the seven gifts of the Holy Ghost: the gifts of wisdom and understanding, counsel and fortitude, knowledge and piety and fear of the Lord.

There is this difference between the moral virtues and the gifts of the Holy Ghost: the moral virtues are given to make our souls stronger, to help them to be docile and obedient to the light and commands of reason predisposed through grace, while the gifts of the Holy Ghost are qualities and perfections infused with sanctifying grace which they accompany everywhere, in order to dispose us to correspond promptly with all the divine inspiration, all the interior actions of the Holy Ghost, and to follow His guidance wherever He may call us. The gifts of the Holy Ghost are the saintly habits bestowed by God to raise our souls to a state of perfection higher than that which ordinarily proceeds from virtue alone, and to fortify us more strongly even than virtue into meeting the difficulties of life.

All these gifts of the Holy Ghost existed, with their Author, in the Heart of the Blessed Virgin from the moment of her Immaculate Conception, and to a degree, conformable to her destined dignity of becoming the Mother of God.

THE HOLY HEART OF MARY

Let us consider the workings of these gifts in her virginal heart.

The gift of wisdom filled her Heart with such clear knowledge and engraved on it such a high esteem and love for God that all her contentment and joy were to contemplate His adorable perfection, to concern herself solely with divine and eternal things, whose contemplation gave her soul all possible delight. For this reason, she possessed a strong scorn for the foolish wisdom of the world and its terrestrial and temporal attributes.

Through the gift of understanding she gained the greatest knowledge of all the secrets and mysteries contained in the divine writings of the Old as well as of the New Testament; a greater knowledge than all the holy doctors of the Church ever had or ever will have.

The gift of counsel taught her to make fervent resolutions and to follow the inspiration of the Holy Ghost through His gifts of wisdom and understanding.

The gift of fortitude implanted in her heart great contempt of herself and attachment to God, in Whom she placed all her confidence and strength, in virtue of which she surmounted all the difficulties and obstacles she encountered and bore patiently all her many persecutions and trials.

Offer to God all the glory that this divine Virgin has tendered to Him, through her most saintly exercise of these four gifts and beg her to make you a participant in them.

SECOND POINT

THE RESULTS PRODUCED IN THE HOLY HEART OF MARY By THE GIFTS OF WISDOM, PIETY, AND FEAR

Let us consider the effects of the operation of the gifts of wisdom, piety, and fear of the Lord in the heart of the most Blessed Virgin.

The gift of wisdom endowed her with the knowledge of created things and inspired in her the correct use of them. Through this gift she realized the inestimable value of souls, created to the image and likeness of God, which made her most zealous for our salvation.

The gift of piety engraved in her Heart the love and tenderness of a real mother for her children and filled her with a compassion for all

270-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

our miseries and afflictions, so great that she offered to His divine majesty everything she could do and suffer to assuage and help mankind.

The gift of fear of the Lord filled her filial Heart with a great apprehension to do only what was agreeable to God and to accomplish His most holy will at all times, in all places, and for His glory and satisfaction alone.

O adorable Spirit, may eternal thanks be rendered to Thee for having thus enriched the very perfect Heart of Thy divine Spouse with all the treasures of Thy most infinite goodness.

THIRD POINT

MEANS OF PARTICIPATION IN THE GIFTS OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

The Holy Spirit desires ardently to engulf your heart with a share of all the gifts with which He filled the heart of your divine Mother. Humiliate yourself and ask pardon for all the impediments that you have placed there; make a strong resolution of amendment, and ask the Blessed Virgin to acquaint you with the holy dispositions of her heart towards the sublime gifts of the Holy Ghost.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"O Heart of Mary, treasure of holiness, intercede for us."

O Cor Mariae, thesaure sanctitatis, intercede pro nobis!

SEVENTH MEDITATION

The Holy Heart of Mary Is the Sanctified Garden of the Fruits of the Holy Spirit

FIRST POINT

THE SIX FIRST FRUITS IN THE HOLY HEART OF MARY

LET us consider that the amiable Heart of the Blessed Mother of God is the enclosed garden that is mentioned in the fourth chapter of the Canticle of Canticles, Hortus conclusus, a garden locked against the serpent and to everything displeasing to God, a garden open only to the Holy Ghost who produces in it innumerable fruits, among which are twelve principal fruits which differ from the gifts of the Holy Ghost. The seven gifts are holy and virtuous habits which dispose souls to follow promptly the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, while the fruits are actions produced by the gifts and by virtue which we practise happily and joyfully with true love of God, under the direction of the Holy Ghost. The twelve fruits of the Holy Ghost are: charity, joy, peace, patience, longanimity, goodness, benignity, meekness, faith, modesty, continence and chastity. Let us consider the effects of the first six fruits in the Heart of the glorious Virgin.

Her Heart, because of charity and love, was wholly detached from all that was not God and was intimately and uniquely bound up in His divine majesty. joy filled her with great happiness in all the things accomplished by the Mother of love in the service of God's glory. Peace maintained a profound tranquillity in her very generous heart in the midst of all the tempests and storms which so often assailed her. Patience sustained her in her many trials. Longanimity made her await courageously the great things she expected from divine liberality. The incomparable goodness with which her soul was filled made her in capable of the slightest unkind thought towards any man, even her cruelest enemies, and urged her continually to wish good for all.

Let us rejoice upon seeing so great and marvelous perfection in the heart of our inviolate Mother. Let us be deeply grateful to the Holy Ghost for lavishing these gifts upon her Heart and beg Him to make us a sharer in them.

SECOND POINT

THE SIX OTHER FRUITS OF THE HOLY SPIRIT IN THE HOLY HEART OF MARY

Let us consider the effects of the six other fruits of the Holy Spirit in the heart of the Queen of Angels. Benignity rendered her sweet, affable, capable of doing good to all. Meekness kept all thoughts of sharpness and impatience from her, to soften her being with milk and honey. Faith, or rather, fidelity, filled her with truth, naïveté, and frankness and made her scrupulous in accomplishing her promises. Modesty forbade anyone to see in her the slightest shadow of worldly vanity and pomp; this holy virtue was reflected in her countenance with such true perfection that she could have been taken for an angel and even a divine being according to St. Denys if the rules of faith were not opposed to it. Continence reigned in her heart and actions so that never did she experience any instinct other than the inspiration of the Holy Spirit. Chastity clothed her with a purity so admirable that it made her worthy to be the Mother of the Saint of saints and the Queen of Seraphim.

O Mother of my God, my heart is delighted to behold thy Heart filled with all perfection so that it is infinitely more worthy of honor and praise than the hearts of all angels and saints. Eternal praise to the King of all hearts!

THIRD POINT

WAYS TO ENJOY THE FRUITS OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

Let us adore the infinite desire of the Holy Spirit to imprint in our heart an image of all the fruits nurtured in the heart of His divine

Spouse. Let us ask pardon for all the obstacles we have interposed. Let us make a firm resolution to correspond to His great graces by a careful imitation of the adorable Heart of our amiable and loving Mother.

Ejaculatory prayer:

O Cor Jesu et Mariae, cordis fidelis regula, regna super cor nostrum in aeternum!

EIGHTH MEDITATION

The Holy Heart of Mary Is the Paradise of the Eight Beatitudes

FIRST POINT

THE FIRST FOUR BEATITUDES IN THE HOLY HEART OF MARY

LET us consider how the blessed heart of the Mother of our Saviour is the rich paradise of the eight evangelical beatitudes which are similar to the fruits of the Holy Spirit, in so much as both are acts springing from virtuous habits infused into our souls with sanctifying grace, but they differ in that the beatitudes are perfect and eminent acts of several virtues through which the Holy Spirit elevates souls to a state of perfection higher than that of the fruits.

The Holy Ghost infused all the beatitudes into the Heart of Mary from the moment of her Immaculate Conception, more perfectly than they ever existed in the hearts of even the greatest saints. Let us consider and honor in this marvelous Heart the beatitudes:

First, "Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 5, 3). This beatitude contains two things: humility and love of poverty, which were deeply implanted in Mary's Heart, the most humble of all hearts except the Heart of Jesus, the Heart that had made a vow of poverty because of great love, as the Blessed Virgin revealed to St. Bridget. Consequently, our Lady gave all to the poor; she earned her daily living by her hands; she only wore a colorless woolen cape, according to Nicephore and Cedrenus; the presents she received from the Magi were given away as alms, St. Bonaventure says. Our Lady told St. Bridget that often Jesus, her Son, St. Joseph, her spouse and she herself lacked the necessities of daily life. This is easy to believe when we recall the words of the Son of God: "The foxes have holes and the birds of the air nests, but the son of man hath not where to lay his head" (Matt. 8, 20); because He would not have said that if His holy Mother had enjoyed some comforts, no matter how small.

The second beatitude is "Blessed are the meek." Who could express the sweetness and gentleness of this meekest of Hearts?

The third beatitude is "Blessed are they that mourn." O blessed Virgin, who could count the many swords of sorrow that pierced thy loving heart? O what torrents of tears poured from thy sorrowful eyes, tears even, so say the Saints, of blood!

The fourth beatitude is "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after justice." justice here means all Christian virtues, all the holy acts by which God is honored and served. To know the insatiable hunger and thirst of the Blessed Mother, to know the ways and means of best serving and honoring God, would also require a comprehension of her all-consuming love and ardor for His divine majesty and glory.

O my all-good and sweet Mother, I give thee my heart; unite it, I beseech thee, to thine, even though it be most unworthy. Engrave on my heart a perfect picture of thy charity, humility, love for the poor and thy most intense yearning and thirst for all virtue

THE REMAINING BEATITUDES IN THE HOLY HEART OF MARY

Contemplate and honor the other beatitudes in the Heart of the Blessed Virgin. The fifth is "Blessed are the merciful." Two types of people are included in this beatitude. First, those who, for the love of God, readily forget the injuries done them. Secondly, those who, filled with compassion for the corporal and spiritual sorrows of their neighbor, try to give them all possible aid and help. O Mother of Mercy, throughout thy life thou didst show mercy more perfectly than ever will be shown on earth even by the greatest saints; it is what thou art constantly doing, because all creatures on this earth have experienced the help of thy mercy.

The sixth beatitude is "Blessed are the clean of heart." O what purity, Queen of Virgins, in thy Heart inviolate, undefiled by any trace of sin, either original or actual, thy Heart filled to overflowing from the moment of the Immaculate Conception with a purity greater than that of all the angels and saints in heaven.

The seventh beatitude is "Blessed are the peacemakers." It is through thee, O Queen of Peace, that the God of peace and love was given to us, the God who brought peace from heaven to the world. It is through thy help that the schisms and heresies which tear the holy robe of thy Divine Son are crushed. It is because of thy powerful intercession that true peace is imparted to men of goodwill, given to those who willingly renounce their own desires and seek only the things of God.

The eighth beatitude is "Blessed are they that suffer persecution for justice' sake." To know all the persecutions endured by the Mother of the Saviour, we would have to understand the innumerable and countless sufferings of her Well-beloved Son. Because of us, O incomparable Mother, thou and thy Dear Son Jesus Christ have become the target and butt of an infinity of insults, opprobrium, outrages, calumnies, scorn and unspeakable cruelties. Because of our great love for thee, we gladly embrace all the afflictions and persecutions that may ever beset us.

Infinite thanks to the Holy Ghost for having enshrined these beatitudes in thy pure heart. Let us ask the Holy Ghost, O sweet Virgin, to make us participants in thy grace, to teach us and give us the grace to find all our joy, our paradise, and our pleasure even as thou didst during life, that is, in serving, glorifying and loving the divine majesty.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"O Heart of Jesus and Mary, joy of our hearts."
O Cor Jesu et Mariae, cordis nostri gaudium!

Dispositions for the Worthy Celebrations of This Feast

FIRST POINT

THE FIRST DISPOSITION FOR THE FEAST OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS A BURNING DESIRE TO CELEBRATE IT DEVOUTLY

THE adorable Heart of Jesus is the principle and source of His Incarnation, Birth, Circumcision, Presentation in the Temple, and of all the other mysteries and states of His life, as well as of all His thoughts, words, deeds, and sufferings for our salvation. His Heart burning with (1). "Meditations on the Sacred Heart of Jesus" were first published in the twelfth book of The Admirable Heart of Mary. Like the "Meditations on The Holy Heart of Mary" they are divided into two series, one for the Feast of the Sacred Heart on the excellence of the Feast and our duties to the Sacred Heart, and the other for any occasion on the perfections of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. Historically, these meditations are most important because they are the first ever written on the subject. They contain the substance of St. John Eudes's doctrine of the devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. cf. The Sacred Heart of Jesus (New York 1946), pp. 85-135.

280-

love prompted Him to perform all these things for us. Thus it is that we owe honor and love to this most amiable Heart for countless reasons, and to show our affection we must celebrate this Feast with all possible devotion.

Let us offer our hearts to the Holy Ghost, and earnestly beg Him to enkindle us with a burning desire to celebrate the Feast of the Sacred Heart with as much devotion as though we were to celebrate it only once on earth. This great desire constitutes the first requisite in preparation for this solemn Feast.

SECOND POINT

THE SECOND DISPOSITION HIS HUMILITY

The second disposition is one of deep humility. We must acknowledge our infinite unworthiness to participate in the celebration of such a holy solemnity:

1. Because it belongs to heaven rather than to earth, for the Feast of the Sacred Heart of Jesus is a feast of the Seraphim rather than of sinful men.

2. Because, through our negligence, God's blessings have not borne adequate fruit in our soul, although we have celebrated this Feast many times.

The divine Heart is the source of every grace that we have received from heaven throughout our lives; yet our ingratitude and infidelity have rendered these precious gifts fruitless and ineffectual.

May these thoughts inspire us to profound humility. Let us enter again and again into a true spirit of penance, which will prompt us to detest our sins, to excite genuine contrition in our souls, and to make a good confession to purify our hearts so that we may become worthy recipients of the light and grace necessary for a holy celebration of this Feast.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

THIRD POINT

THE THIRD DISPOSITION IS UNION WITH THE THREE DIVINE PERSONS OF THE BLESSED TRINITY, THE BLESSED VIRGIN MARY, THE ANGELS AND THE SAINTS

To excite the third disposition, we must offer ourselves to the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, to the Blessed Virgin Mary, to all the angels and saints! especially to our guardian angels and our patron saints. We must implore them to prepare our hearts and to invite the heavenly court to celebrate this Feast with us. Let us ask them to make us associates and participants in their ardent love for the most adorable Heart of Jesus.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Thanks be to Thee, Lord Jesus, for the ineffable gift of Thy Sacred Heart."
Gratias tibi, Domine Jesu, super inenarrabili dono Cordis tui.

SECOND MEDITATION The Day of the Feast The Gift of the Sacred Heart of Jesus

FIRST POINT

JESUS HAS GIVEN US HIS SACRED HEART

ADORE and consider our most lovable Saviour in the excess of His goodness and in the generosity of His love towards us. Consider attentively His boundless beneficence. He has given us life and all the benefits that spring from the gift of life. He has given us His Eternal Father to be Our True Father, His most holy Mother to be our dear Mother, His angels to be our protectors and His saints to be our advocates and intercessors. He has given us His Church, our second Mother, together with all the sacraments of His Church for our salvation and sanctification. He has given us all His thoughts, words, actions and mysteries, all His sufferings and His very life which He spent and sacrificed for us, even to the last drop of His Precious Blood.

Moreover, He has given us His most lovable Heart, the principle and source of all other gifts. The charity of His divine Heart impelled Him to emanate from the adorable bosom of His Father, and come upon earth so that He might give us all these priceless favors. This Heart, humanly divine and divinely human, merited these graces by His sufferings, endured for us on earth.

SECOND POINT

WE SHOULD GIVE OUR HEARTS TO JESUS

How shall we repay our loving Redeemer for so much love? We must render love for love. In return for the gift of His Sacred Heart, we must give Him our hearts without reserve. To return Our Lord love for love, we must offer our love wholly and completely to Him. He has given us His Heart for all eternity; we must give Him ours forever. He has given us His Heart with infinite love; let us give Him ours in union with His infinite love. He is not satisfied with giving us His own Heart, He has also given us the Heart of His Eternal Father, the Heart of His most holy Mother and the hearts of all His angels and saints. He even gives the hearts of all mankind who are commanded under pain of eternal damnation to love us as He has loved us: "This is my commandment, that you love one another, as I have loved you" (John 15, 12).

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

Let us also offer Him in thanksgiving the Heart of His Eternal Father, the Heart of His holy Mother, the hearts of all the angels and saints and of all men; these are ours to give as though they belonged to us. St. Paul assures us that with the gift of His Son the Eternal Father has given us all things: "Hath he not also, with him, given us all things?" (Rom. 8, 32), and that all things are ours: "For all are yours" (1 Cor. 3, 22). Above all, let us offer Him His own Heart; He has given it to us; therefore, it is ours and is the most acceptable offering we could make to Him. It is His own Heart and at the same time the Heart of His Eternal Father, one by unity of essence. It is also the Heart of His most Holy Mother, whose heart is one with His by unity of will and affection.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Let us give thanks to the Sacred Heart of Jesus for His ineffable gifts."

Gratias infinitas super inenarrabilibus donis ejus.

THIRD MEDITATION

The Gift of This Feast Is a Great Favor Bestowed by Our Lord

FIRST POINT

EXCELLENCE OF THE FEAST OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

LET us adore the incomprehensible goodness of our most loving Redeemer in giving us this holy Feast. It is, indeed, most extraordinary grace.

To understand it at all adequately, we must remember that the feasts celebrated by Holy Church during the course of the year are fountains of sanctification and blessings, but this Feast is a veritable sea of grace and holiness. The Feast of the most Sacred Heart of Jesus constitutes an immense ocean of feasts because it commemorates the principle of all the other feasts celebrated by Holy Church. It also is the festival of the prime source of everything that is great, holy and venerable in each of the other feasts.

It is our duty, then, to render infinite thanks to our Saviour for His goodness, and to invite the Blessed Virgin, all the angels and saints and all creatures to unite with us to praise~ bless and glorify Him for this ineffable favor.

We should also dispose our souls to receive the graces Our Divine Lord wills to communicate to us during the solemnity of this wonderful Feast. We must make a strong resolution to do everything in our power and to employ all our affections and every means possible to continue to celebrate it appropriately and devoutly during the Octave.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

285 -

SECOND POINT

OUR DUTIES TO THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

Why has the King of all hearts given us this Feast of His most lovable Heart? Solely that we may discharge our obligations to Him. We have four principal duties to fulfil.

The first duty is adoration. Let us adore the Heart of Jesus with all our heart and all our strength. It is infinitely worthy of adoration because it is the Heart of God, the Heart of the Only-begotten Son of the Eternal Father and of God made man. Let us adore this precious Heart, offering It all the adoration ever accorded to It in heaven and on earth. O my Saviour, may the whole universe unite in adoration of Thy divine Heart! I willingly consent to be reduced to nothingness now and forever, by means of Thy grace, so that the Sacred Heart of Jesus may be incessantly adored by the whole universe.

Our second duty is to praise, bless, glorify and thank His infinitely generous Heart for Its tremendous love for the Eternal Father, His most holy Mother, all the angels, all the saints, and all creatures, especially ourselves. Let us also thank Him for all the gifts, favors and blessings poured out from this immense sea of graces upon all things created, particularly upon us. O most sublime Heart, I offer Thee all the praise, glory and thanksgiving rendered Thee in heaven and on earth, in time and eternity. May all hearts praise and bless Thee forever!

The third duty is to ask pardon of His kind Heart for all the sorrow and suffering endured for our sins, and to offer in reparation all the satisfaction and joys given to Our Lord by His Eternal Father, by His Blessed Mother and by all ardent and faithful hearts. Let us accept out of love for the Sacred Heart all the trials, sorrow and affliction which may come upon us.

The fourth duty is to love this divine Heart with all possible affection and fervor in the name of those who do not love It and to offer It the entire love of all hearts that belong to It. O Heart all-lovable and all-loving, when shall I begin to love Thee as I should? I am under countless obligations to love Thee; yet, alas, I realize that I have not even commenced. Grant me the grace to begin straightway to love Thee. Destroy in my heart whatever is displeasing to Thee and establish instead the reign of Thy holy love.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"O God of my heart, O Jesus, my portion forever:
Deus cordis mei, pars mea, Jesus in aeternum.

FOURTH MEDITATION

The Sacred Heart of Jesus Is Our Refuge, Our Oracle and Our Treasure

FIRST POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS OUR REFUGE

IN THE Feast we are celebrating, our most loving Saviour has given us His Heart not only as the object of our homage and adoration, but also as our refuge and our shelter. Let us have recourse to this haven in all our undertakings, and seek therein our consolation in our sorrows and afflictions. Let us place ourselves in the shadow of its protection against the malice of the world, against our own passions and the snares of the devil; let us retire to this shelter of goodness and mercy to shield ourselves from all the perils and miseries of life. Let us seek refuge in the Sacred Heart, in the tower of strength, where we may escape the vengeance of divine justice for our sins which caused the death of the very Author of life. May this most benign and generous Heart be our shelter and our refuge in all our necessities!

SECOND POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS OUR ORACLE

Our Divine Lord has given us His Heart also to be our oracle. How much more valuable is this gift than the first oracle which was placed in the tabernacle of Moses and afterwards in the temple of Solomon! The first oracle was confined to one place, but ours is to be found wherever our Saviour is present. The former remained in existence but a few centuries; ours will last until the end of time. The oracle of Old Law spoke by the voice of an angel, but the oracle of the New Law is the very voice of Christ Himself. O Jesus, Thou dost speak heart to heart, teaching us Thy will, resolving our doubts, smoothing our difficulties when we have recourse to Thy Sacred heart with faith, humility and confidence.

If we wish to know what God asks of us upon different occasions, if we have a difficult task to undertake, if we are in doubt or perplexity, let us have recourse to the Heart of Our Lord, celebrating Holy Mass in His honor or else receiving Holy Communion. Thus, we shall experience the consoling effects of His goodness.

THIRD POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS OUR TREASURE

Our most lovable Redeemer has also given us His most loving Heart to be our treasure. It is an immense and inexhaustible treasure which enriches heaven and earth with infinite blessings. Let us draw from this treasure whatever we need to pay our infinite debts to divine justice for our failings. Let us offer the Most Sacred Heart in satisfaction for our numberless sins, offenses and negligences.

If we lack a particular virtue, we must draw upon the treasure house of all virtues, the Sacred Heart of Jesus. If we need humility, let us beg Him to impart to us a share in His profound humility. If we need charity, let us implore Him by His most ardent charity to give us perfect charity. Likewise we may develop each virtue in turn.

When we need a special grace to meet certain circumstances, let us ask our Lord through His most benign Heart to grant it to us from His Sacred Heart, our treasure house.

If we desire to help the souls in purgatory, let us offer God our precious treasure that He Himself may take from it the price due His justice.

When the poor beg for alms, we should ask the Sacred Heart for the grace to respond to their appeal and give them a share in our heavenly treasure by saying this prayer: "O most benign and generous Heart of Jesus, have mercy upon all those who suffer."

When people ask to be remembered in our prayers, or make any request of us, we should lift up our hearts to Christ, our treasure, saying

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

with true confidence and with deep humility: "O loving Saviour, arouse in me the feelings of Thy charitable Heart toward all who come to me for help."

The heart of every man is attached to whatever is his treasure. Let us so direct our life that all the affections of our heart may be concentrated on the greatest of all treasures, the most amiable Heart of Jesus.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"O God of my heart, O Jesus, my love forever."
Deus cordis mei, amor meus, Jesus in aeternum.

FIFTH MEDITATION

The Sacred Heart of Jesus Is the Perfect Model and Rule of Our Lives

FIRST POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS OUR PERFECT MODEL

WE SHALL never be able to understand adequately and esteem at its full value the inconceivable grace our Lord has granted us through the gift of His Divine Heart. Let us picture a man who was such a favorite of a king that he could truthfully say: "The king's heart belongs to me." What happiness and joy to be so favored! But we have infinitely more than the heart of an earthly king. We have the Heart of the King of Kings, who loves us so ardently that each one of us can truly say: "The Heart of Jesus belongs to me."

Yes, this admirable Heart is mine. It is mine because the Eternal Father has given it to me; it is mine because the Blessed Virgin has given it to me; it is mine because He Himself has given it to me, not only to be my refuge and shelter in my needs, to be my oracle and my treasure, but also to be the model and rule of my life and of my actions. I wish to study this rule constantly so as to follow it faithfully.

I must consider what the Heart of Jesus hates and what it loves, in order to hate only what it hates and love only what it loves. The only thing it hates or ever shall hate is sin. Did the gentle Heart of Our Lord feel any hatred for the miserable Jews who persecuted Him so unjustly, or for the executioners who treated Him so cruelly? No, He never experienced the emotion of hatred. On the contrary, He besought His Eternal Father to pardon His executioners and even excused the most outrageous of all crimes.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

I wish to follow the Divine Rule for love of Thee, my Saviour. I will hate nothing but sin; I will love all that Thou lovest, even my enemies. With the help of Thy grace I will do all the good I can to those who seek to harm me.

SECOND POINT

SENTIMENTS THAT SHOULD FILL OUR HEARTS IN IMITATION OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

My rule tells me that I must have in my heart what is in the Heart of Our Lord: "For let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus" (Phil. 2, 5). These sentiments are:

1. His affection for the person and will of His Eternal Father. He so loves His Father that He has sacrificed Himself and is still prepared to sacrifice Himself a hundred thousand times for the glory of God the Father. His love for the divine will is so great that never once in the course of His life did He prefer His own will and found His entire satisfaction in doing His Father's will: "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me" (John 4, 34)

2. Another sentiment of His Heart is horror of sin. He hates evil to such a degree that He delivered Himself to the wrath of His enemies and to the torments of the Cross to crush the infernal monster.

3. A third sentiment is His esteem for the Cross and for suffering, which He loves so tenderly that the Holy Ghost, speaking of His Passion, called it the day of His Heart's joy: "In the day of the joy of his heart" (Can. 3, 11)

4. His love for His Mother is the fourth sentiment of His divine Heart. He loves her alone more than all His angels and saints together.

5. There is also a sentiment of charity for us. Our Saviour so devotedly loves us that "it seems," says St. Bonaventure, "that He hates Himself for us." In tantum me diligis, ut te pro me odisse videaris.

6. Lastly, there is the attitude of His Heart towards the world. He regards it as something accursed and outcast, openly declaring that it has no part in His prayers: "I pray not for the world" (John 17, 9), and that His children are not of the world: "They are not of the world, as I also am not of the world" (John 17, 16).

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

Such are the divine principles I wish to observe for love of Thee, my Saviour. I long to love God with all my heart, with all my soul and with all my strength. I long also to find my satisfaction in following in all things and everywhere His most adorable will. I long so to abominate all kinds of sin, that by means of Thy holy grace I may rather die than ever consent to it. O my Jesus, make me love crosses and afflictions that I may seek all my joy in them for the love of Thee, and that I may say with St. Paul: "I am filled with comfort: I exceedingly abound with joy in all our tribulation" (2 Cor- 7, 4)

Grant me a share in Thy very great love for Thy holy Mother that she after Thyself may be the centre of my veneration and fervent devotion. Impress upon my heart the hatred Thou hast for the world. Make me detest it as a veritable antichrist which is always opposed to Thee and has crucified Thee so relentlessly. Grant, I beseech Thee, O God of my heart, the grace, ~ that for the love of Thee I may always preserve in my soul an entire and perfect charity for my neighbor. This is the rule of rules: "And whosoever shall follow this rule, peace on them" (Gal. 6, 16).

Ejaculatory prayer:

"O Sacred Heart of Jesus, law and rule of our heart."
O Cor Jesu, lex et regula cordis nostri.

293-

SIXTH MEDITATION

Jesus Gave Us His Sacred Heart to Be Our Heart

FIRST POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS GIVEN TO US TO BE OUR HEART

THE Son of God gives us His Heart not only to be the model and rule of our life, but also to be our heart, so that by the gift of this Heart, immense, infinite and eternal, we may fulfil all our duties to God in a manner worthy of His infinite perfections. We have three obligations towards God:

1. To adore His divine grandeur.
2. To render Him thanks for His unspeakable gifts.
3. To implore Him to grant through His divine generosity all the necessities of soul and body.

How are we able to discharge these duties in a manner worthy of God? We are utterly unable to do so. Even if we had the mind, the heart and the strength of all angels and men united, and if we were to use them to adore, thank and love God and to satisfy His divine justice, we could accomplish absolutely nothing to discharge our obligations as creatures of God. We have, however, received from our divine Saviour the gift of His adorable Heart which is the perfect means of fulfilling all these duties. We should employ the Sacred Heart as if It were our own heart, to adore God fittingly, to love Him perfectly, and to satisfy all our obligations adequately so that our homage and love may be worthy of His supreme majesty. Eternal and infinite thanks be rendered Thee, O good Jesus, for the infinitely precious gift of Thy divine Heart. May all the angels, saints and all creatures bless Thee forever.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

SECOND POINT

How WE SHOULD MAKE USE OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

What happiness and what wealth to possess the divine Heart of Jesus! What a treasure to have at our disposal! How great is our obligation, O my Saviour, because of Thy incomprehensible goodness! Thou dost ask the Eternal Father to make us one with Him and with Thee, as Thou and He are but one. Consequently Thou dost wish to be one in heart with Thee and with Thy Adorable Father. Thou hast willed to be our Head, and hast willed us to be Thy members and to have but one heart and one spirit with Thee. Thou hast made us children of Thy Heavenly Father; Thou hast given us Thy divine Heart, so that we may love the Father with Thy very own heart.

Thou hast assured us that the Adorable Father loves us even as He loves Thee. "Thou hast loved them, as thou hast also loved me" (John 17, 23). Thou dost love us with the same Heart with which the Father loves Thee: "As the Father hath loved me, I also have loved you" (John 15, 9). Thus, Thou dost give us Thy Heart that we may love the Father and Thyself with the same heart and with the same love with which Thou lovest us. We should, therefore, employ Thy Sacred Heart to offer Thee our adoration, praise, thanksgiving and all our other duties with a reverence and a love worthy of Thy infinite greatness.

What must we do to employ the great Heart that God has given us? We must do two things. First, whenever we adore, praise, thank and love God, or practise acts of some virtue, or accomplish some deed in His service, we must renounce our own heart which is poisoned with the venom of sin and of self-love. Secondly, we must unite ourselves to the love, charity, humility and all the holy dispositions of His Sacred Heart, so that we may be worthy to adore, love, praise, serve and glorify God with the Heart of God.

O my Saviour, extend the power of Thy eternal arm to separate me from myself and unite me to Thee. Pluck out my miserable heart and replace it with Thine own, enabling me to say: I will give praise to thee, O Lord, with my whole heart" (PS. 9, 2). I will praise Thee and love Thee, my Lord, with my whole heart- with the great Heart of Jesus, which is my own heart.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

O all lovable and all loving Heart of my Saviour, be Thou the Heart of my heart, the soul of my soul, the spirit of my spirit, the life of my life and the sole principle of all my thoughts, words and actions, of all the faculties of my soul, and of all my senses, both interior and exterior.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"O Heart all mine, I possess all things in possessing Thee!"
O Cor meum, Cor unicum, in te mihi sunt omnia!

SEVENTH MEDITATION

Profound Humility, of the Sacred Heart of Jesus

FIRST POINT

SELF-ABASEMENT OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

Humility is a virtue including an infinity of degrees because there are innumerable sources of humiliation. There are, however, three fundamentals. The first is our nothingness, which is a bottomless abyss of abjection and humiliation. The second is the infinite grandeur of God for a greatness necessarily involves lowliness in those who are inferior to it, and the greater the elevation, the greater is the demand of humiliation on the part of the inferior. That is why the supreme greatness of the majesty of God should impress on created beings an abasement infinite in itself. The third principal humiliation is sin. The least of our sins is an infinite abyss of abasement, and God could justly annihilate us for our smallest fault.

Self-abasement is the first effect that humility should produce in our heart. It operated prodigiously in the Heart of our Divine Saviour because Jesus, as man, understood very clearly that He Himself was nothing and of Himself had only nothingness.

Secondly, His very clear perception of the immense grandeur of God held our Lord continually in a state of incomprehensible lowliness.

Thirdly, the God-Man realized that He was a son of Adam, and that original sin is an immense ocean of sin. It is the very fountainhead of all the sins past, present and future in the whole world, even if it should last for thousands of years more. Jesus understood that if He had been merely man and had been born of an ordinary mother, and if He had not been preserved at the moment of His conception, He would have been as capable as the other children of Adam of committing sin. This realization held Him in a state of profound humiliation. Beyond this,

He saw Himself charged with all the crimes of the world as if they had been His own. Peccata nostra sua esse voluit, says St. Augustine, and He saw Himself obliged to bear before God the humiliation of a number of sins as great as the drops of water and grains of sand in the sea.

O Jesus, who could understand all the humiliations Thou didst bear on earth to destroy my pride? How is it possible that, after all this, my heart can tolerate for one single instant this frightful monster?

SECOND POINT

HATRED OF THE HEART OF JESUS FOR THE GLORY AND ESTEEM OF THE WORLD

To know the second effect of humility in the Heart of our Redeemer, let us study His continual hatred for the esteem and glory of this world during the whole course of His life here below. He is the Only Son of God and is God equal to His Father. He is the King of glory, the sovereign Monarch of heaven and earth, who merits the homage and adoration of all creatures. If He were to display the palest ray of His majesty, the whole universe would fall prostrate at His feet to adore Him. But He permits none of His grandeur to appear, either at His birth or in the course of His life, not even after the Resurrection, nor in the most adorable Sacrament where He is glorious and immortal. He fled when the Jews wished to make Him king, and declared that His kingdom is not of this world, so much did He detest the glories and honors of the world.

O Jesus, impress these sentiments upon my heart and grant that I may learn ever to esteem the praises of the world as poison from hell.

THIRD POINT

LOVE OF THE HEART OF JESUS FOR HUMILIATION

Recall to your mind all the humiliations, all the confusion, contempt, abjection, opprobrium and ignominies that our most adorable Saviour bore in His Incarnation, in His Birth, in His Circumcision, in His Flight into Egypt, and in all the mysteries of His Passion. All these humiliations constitute a magnificent feast that His divine love has prepared and all the ignominies are as delicious viands, upon which He has feasted and satisfied His extreme hunger for abasement.

298-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

Whence did this insatiable hunger proceed if not from His infinite love for His Heavenly Father and for us? This love gave Him the incredible desire to be humiliated and considered as nothing, to atone for the infinite injury and the inconceivable dishonor the sinner had shown to God. The sinner tears God from His throne so that he may put himself in His Creator's place, preferring his own satisfactions to God's good pleasure, his own honor to that of God and his own will to the Divine Will. This injury only a God can perfectly repair by his own abasement.

That is why the incomprehensible love of the Son of God for His Father not only obliged Him to suffer so many humiliations, but also brought Him to the abyss of ignominies to seek his joys and delights, to repair more perfectly the dishonor shown to His Father. His love compelled Him also to deliver us from the eternal pains of hell, to acquire for us everlasting bliss in heaven, to destroy our pride, the source of all our sins, and to establish in our souls that humility which is the true foundation of all virtues.

Infinite thanks, O my Jesus, be to Thy holy humility! Everlasting praise to the Eternal Father who exalted Thee as highly as Thou hast been humiliated and has given Thee a name above all other names! May every knee in heaven, on earth and in hell bend to adore and glorify Jesus Christ, and may every tongue confess my Saviour, rejoicing in the immense and eternal glory of His Father!

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Jesus, meek and humble of Heart, have mercy on us." Jesu, mitis et humilis corde, miserere nobis.

EIGHTH MEDITATION

The Sacred Heart of Jesus Is the King of Martyrs

FIRST POINT

SUFFERINGS OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS BECAUSE OF OUR SINS

ALL the sufferings of the Holy Martyrs pale into insignificance in comparison with the infinite sufferings of the adorable Heart of the King of Martyrs. If we could number all the sins of the universe, we would count the myriad sharp arrows that pierced the divine Heart of our Saviour with so many wounds. These wounds caused the Sacred Heart to burn with love for His Eternal Father, whom He beheld outraged and dishonored by innumerable crimes. O my Saviour, I hate all my sins because they are the detestable executioners that brought Thy most gentle Heart to martyrdom.

Again, let us picture to ourselves a countless number of miserable souls for whom our Saviour had an incredible love. He foresaw that, notwithstanding all His sufferings for their salvation, they would by their own fault be lost forever. This vision of the damned inflicted unutterable sorrow on the most charitable Heart of Jesus. O unhappy souls, why have you not loved Him, who has loved you more than Himself, since He has given His very life and blood for your salvation! O dearest Jesus, give me all the hearts of these unfortunate souls, that I may love and praise Thee for them eternally.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

SECOND POINT

SUFFERINGS OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS BECAUSE OF THE TRIALS AND TORMENTS OF THE MARTYRS AND CHRISTIANS

Let us recall to our minds all the sufferings, the agony, the trials and the torments of so many thousands of martyrs and of all true Christians. All these afflictions are so many bleeding wounds for the most Sacred Heart of Jesus. His most benign Heart could suffer more than the tenderest of hearts because it was filled with an infinite charity for His beloved children. He retained before His eyes the sight of all their crosses and sufferings. In the hour of affliction each one sought consolation from His adorable Heart.

No human mind can understand the agonizing martyrdom suffered by the all-paternal heart of our Saviour in union with His heroic martyrs. This is expressed most remarkably in the words of the Prophet Isaias: "Surely he hath borne our infirmities and carried our sorrows" (Isa. 53, 4), and also in the words of St. Matthew: "He took our infirmities, and bore our diseases" (Matt. 8, 17). Truly we can call the Sacred Heart the King of Martyrs and the Glory of the Cross! How consoling it is for the afflicted to know that all their pain and sorrow have already been suffered by the most benign Heart of Jesus! He has borne all sufferings first out of love for His martyrs! Let us give ourselves also to Him to bear all our afflictions in union with immeasurable love with which He first suffered them.

THIRD POINT

SUFFERINGS OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS ON THE CROSS

All the other sufferings of our Saviour seem to diminish when compared to those endured by His divine Heart on the cross. The sufferings of Calvary were so excruciating that the perfect body of our Saviour was broken with pain and sorrow and His soul He commended into the hands of His Father. O my Saviour, what made Thee suffer so many torments if it was not Thine infinite love for Thy Father and for us? Indeed, we can say that Thou hast died of loving sorrow and that Thy Heart has been torn and broken by sorrowing love for the glory of Thy Father and for our redemption. O most adorable Heart of Jesus, how shall I thank Thee for the excess of Thy bounty? O that I could possess all the hearts of heaven and earth to sacrifice them in the flames of Thy love!

O Most Holy Father, how canst Thou refuse any petition asked of Thee through the amiable Heart of Thy Son, broken with sorrow for love of Thee and for love of us? No, it is impossible. Rather wouldst Thou allow heaven and earth to disappear. It is, then, through this divine Heart overcome by love and sorrow for me that I implore Thee, O Adorable Father, to take full and entire possession of my heart and to establish there perfectly and forever the reign of the holy love of Jesus and Mary.

Ejaculatory prayer:

Hail! Victim of all woes enthroned
Upon the Cross, the Martyrs' King!
Make Thou the Cross a joy intoned,
The crown and glory that we sing.
Ave, dolorum victima,
Centrum crucis, Rex Martyrum,
Fac nostra sit Crux gloria,
Amor, corona, gaudium.

NINTH MEDITATION

The Sacred Heart of Jesus Is the Heart of Mary

FIRST POINT

MUTUAL LOVE OF THE SACRED HEARTS OF JESUS AND MARY

THE virginal Heart of the Blessed Mother of Jesus contains more love for her Dear Son than all the angels and saints together; thus, the Sacred Heart of the Only Son of Mary is so full of love for His most loving Mother that He is more to her than all created things together.

Let us offer to Jesus the heart and love of His Blessed Mother in reparation for all our want of love and service towards Him. Let us offer to His most worthy Mother, who is also our Mother, the Heart and love of her Son in satisfaction for our ingratitude and infidelity towards her.

SECOND POINT

THE THREE DIVINE PERSONS GAVE THE HEART OF JESUS TO MARY, AND THROUGH HER TO US

Not only is the Blessed Virgin the first object, after God, of the ardent love of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, but the Sacred Heart is really the Heart of Mary for five principal reasons. The first three reasons are: 1. Because the Eternal Father has given her the Heart of His Only begotten Son as a Father gives the heart of a son to his mother; 2. because the Son has given His most loving Heart to the most admirable of mothers; 3. because the Holy Ghost has imparted to Mary the very spirit of love which unites the Blessed Trinity in the Sacred Heart of her Son. These Three Divine Persons continually and eternally give Mary the adorable Heart of the God-Man, so that she may give us her most precious gift, the Sacred Heart of her Divine Son.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

Incessant and everlasting praise be to the Father, to the Son and to the Holy Ghost for this infinitely precious gift that They have given to our Blessed Mother and through her to us. O Most Holy Trinity, I offer Thee the most adorable Heart of Jesus and the most loving Heart of His Mother in thanksgiving for Thy infinite goodness in my regard. I also offer Thee, in union with those two most ardent Hearts, my own unworthy heart, with the hearts of all my brethren, humbly beseeching Thee to take full possession of them forever.

THIRD POINT

OTHER REASONS WHY THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS THE HOLY HEART OF MARY

The fourth reason why the Sacred Heart is truly the Heart of Mary is that the Eternal Father, having considered the Blessed Virgin from the very instant of her conception as the one chosen to be the Mother of God, gave her from the first moment of her life a love similar to His love for His Divine Son. According to many theologians, Mary had more love for Jesus at that moment than all the Seraphim will ever have. Therefore., Mary's incomparable love for Jesus drew Him into her sacred womb and into her Heart to rest there eternally as the Heart of her Heart and as a divine Sun that sheds its celestial light into her soul and inflames it with divine fire.

The fifth reason why the Sacred Heart of Jesus is the Heart of Mary is that, at the moment of the Incarnation, she cooperated with the Blessed Trinity to form the human Heart of Jesus, which was formed of her virginal blood. The blood of her holy Heart passed into the Heart of Jesus and received the perfection that was needed to form the Heart of the God-Man. This divinely human and humanly divine Heart dwelt in the sacred womb of Mary as a furnace of divine love, a furnace which transformed the Heart of Mary into the Heart of Jesus and made these two Hearts but one and the same Heart in a unity of spirit, affection and will.

The holy Heart of Mary was, therefore, always closely united to the Sacred Heart of her Divine Son. She always willed what He willed and also consented to act and to suffer so that the work of our salvation

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

might be accomplished. Hence, the Fathers of the Church plainly assert that the Mother of the Saviour cooperated with Him in a very special way in the redemption of mankind. That is why our holy Redeemer told St. Bridget of Sweden, whose revelations have been approved by the Church, that He and His holy Mother worked in perfect harmony, uno corde, for our salvation.

Thus, the Sacred Heart of Jesus is the Heart of Mary. These two Hearts are actually only a single Heart, which was given to us by the Blessed Trinity and by our Blessed Mother, so that we, the children of Jesus and Mary, might have but one heart with our Heavenly Father and our holy Mother and that we might love and glorify God with the same heart, a heart worthy of the infinite grandeur of His divine majesty.

Ejaculatory prayer:

O Heart of Jesus and Mary, my most loving Heart!
O Cor Jesu et Mariae, Cor meum amantissimum!

Eight Other Meditations on The Sacred Heart of Jesus

FIRST MEDITATION

The Blessed Trinity Lives and Reigns in the Sacred Heart of Jesus

FIRST POINT

THE ETERNAL FATHER DWELLS IN THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

CONSIDER that the Eternal Father is in the Sacred Heart of Jesus, bringing to birth His Well-beloved Son and causing Him to dwell there the same all-holy and divine life that He lives in His own adorable bosom from all eternity. He imprints there a perfect image of His own divine fatherhood, so that this humanly divine and divinely human Heart shall be Father to all the hearts of the children of God. Therefore, we should look upon Him, love and honor Him as Our Loving Father, and endeavor to imprint upon our own hearts a perfect likeness of His life and virtues.

O good Jesus, engrave the image of Thy most holy Heart upon our hearts and make us live only by love for Thy Heavenly Father. Would that we might die of love for Thee, as Thou didst die of love for Thy Eternal Father!

SECOND POINT

THE DIVINE WORD LIVES AND REIGNS IN THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

Consider that the eternal Word exists in that royal Heart, united with it in the most intimate union imaginable, the hypostatic union, which causes that Heart to be worshipped with the adoration that is due to God. He is there with a life that is somehow more helpful, if one may so speak, than His life in the Heart and bosom of His Father. The Word lives, but does not rule in the Heart and bosom of the Heavenly Father; whereas He lives and rules in the Heart of the God-Man, ruling over all human passions which are centered in the heart so absolutely that they do not stir except by His order.

306-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

O Jesus, King of my heart, live and rule over my passions, uniting them with Thine, never allowing them to be used except under Thy guidance and for Thy glory alone.

THIRD POINT

THE HOLY GHOST LIVES AND REIGNS IN THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

Consider that the Holy Ghost lives and reigns ineffably in the Heart of Jesus, where He conceals the infinite treasures of the knowledge and the wisdom of God. He fills the Sacred Heart with all His gifts to a preeminent degree, according to His divine words:

"And the spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him: the spirit of wisdom, and of understanding, the spirit of counsel, and of fortitude, the spirit of knowledge, and of godliness. And he shall be filled with the spirit of the fear of the Lord" (Isa. 11, 2-3).

Consider, finally, that these Three Divine Persons live and reign in the Heart of the Saviour, as if they were seated on the most high~ throne of their love, in the primal heaven of their glory, in the paradise of their dearest delights. They there shed abroad, with inexplicable abundance and profusion, wonderful lights, and the burning fires and flames of their eternal love.

O Most Holy Trinity, infinite praise be to Thee forever for all the wonders of love that Thou dost work in the Heart of my Jesus! I offer Thee my heart, with the hearts of all my brethren, begging Thee most humbly to take entire possession of them, to destroy in them every thing displeasing to Thee, and to establish there the sovereign rule of Thy divine love.

Ejaculatory prayer:

O most Holy Trinity, Eternal Life of Hearts, reign in all hearts forever!

O sacrosancta Trinitas, aeterna vita cordium, in corde regnes omnium!

SECOND MEDITATION

The Sacred Heart of Jesus Is the Sanctuary and the Image of the Divine Perfections

FIRST POINT

THE DIVINE PERFECTIONS SUBSIST AND REIGN IN THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

LET us adore and contemplate all the perfections of the divine nature, subsisting and reigning in the Sacred Heart of Jesus: that is to say, the eternity of God, the infinity of God, His love, charity, justice, mercy, power, immortality, wisdom, goodness, glory, felicity, patience, holiness and all other perfections.

Let us adore these divine perfections in all the wonderful effects they produce in the divine

Heart of the Son of God. Let us give wholehearted thanks for these manifestations, and offer them all the worship, glory and love which have been and shall be rendered to them eternally by that same Heart.

SECOND POINT

THE DIVINE PERFECTIONS STAMP THEIR ETERNAL IMPRESS ON THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

Let us consider that those adorable perfections imprint their image and likeness on the divine Heart of Our Lord, in a manner infinitely more excellent than the most gifted human or angelic minds can conceive or express. The adorable Heart of Jesus bears within itself the image of eternity by its perfect detachment forever from things fleeting and temporal and by its exceeding great affection for things divine and eternal. The Sacred Heart bears the image of immortality by its infinite love for the Heavenly Father and for us, a love whose immensity reaches everywhere., in heaven, on earth and under the earth. If we consider the nature of that incomparable Heart, we shall see without difficulty that it bears within itself a living likeness of all the other perfections of the Godhead.

O wonderful Heart of Jesus, we offer Thee our hearts; impress upon them, we beseech Thee, some reflection of that divine likeness, so that in us may be accomplished the commandment of our divine Master: "Be you therefore perfect, as also your heavenly Father is perfect" (Matt. 5, 48).

THIRD POINT

THE DIVINE MERCY SHOULD BE THE OBJECT OF A VERY SPECIAL DEVOTION

Of all the divine perfections mirrored in the Sacred Heart of our Saviour we should have a very special devotion to divine mercy and we should endeavor to engrave its image on our heart. To this end three things may be done. The first is to pardon with all our heart and promptly forget the offenses done against us by our neighbor. The second is to have compassion on his bodily sufferings, and to relieve and succor him. The third is to compassionate the spiritual misfortunes of our brethren, which are much more deserving of sympathy than the corporal ills. For this reason, we ought to have great pity on the numbers of wretched souls who have no pity on themselves, using our prayers, our example and our teaching to safeguard them from the eternal torments of hell.

O most gracious and merciful Heart of Jesus, imprint on our hearts a perfect image of Thy great perfections, so that we may fulfil the commandment Thou hast given us: "Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful" (Luke 6, 36).

Ejaculatory prayer:

"O Holy God, O Strong God, O Immortal God, have mercy on us."

Sanctus, Deus, sanctus fortis, sanctus immortalis, miserere nobis!

THIRD MEDITATION

The Sacred Heart of Jesus Is the Temple, the Altar and the Censer of Divine Love

FIRST POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS THE TEMPLE OF DIVINE LOVE

THE Holy Ghost, love uncreated and eternal, built this magnificent temple and fashioned it of the virginal blood of the Mother of love. It is dedicated to eternal love. It is infinitely more sacred, more noble, and more venerable than all the temples material and spiritual in heaven and on earth. In this temple, God receives worship praise and glory worthy of His infinite greatness. In this temple, the supreme Preacher continually teaches us most eloquently. It is an everlasting temple that shall have no end. It is the centre of all holiness, incapable of any profanation. It is adorned with all the Christian virtues in the highest degree, and with all the perfections of the divine nature, as with so many living images of the Eternal Godhead.

Let us rejoice in the vision of all the splendors of this wonderful temple and all the glories there rendered to the divine majesty.

SECOND POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS THE ALTAR OF DIVINE LOVE

The Heart of Jesus is not only the temple, but it is also the altar of divine love. On this altar, the sacred flame of omnipotent love burns night and day. On this altar, the great High Priest Jesus continually offers to the Most Holy Trinity manifold sacrifices and supreme oblation.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

311-

First, He offers Himself as a sacrifice and victim of love, the most holy and precious victim that ever was or can be. He sacrifices utterly and entirely His body, His blood, His soul, His whole life, all His thoughts, all His words, all His actions and all that He suffered on earth. Moreover, He makes that sacrifice perpetually, with a love that is boundless and infinite.

Secondly, He sacrifices everything the Heavenly Father has given Him, namely, all rational and irrational creatures, animate and inanimate beings, which He immolates as so many victims in praise of His Father; but, above all, He sacrifices human beings, the good and the wicked, the blessed and the reprobate. The good He offers as victims of love to His divine goodness. The evil He immolates as victims of the wrath of God, to His awful justice: "Every victim shall be salted with salt" (Mark 9, 48). Thus, the great High Priest sacrifices all things to the glory of His Father on the altar of His Heart. Therefore, He alone may rightly say: "I have joyfully offered all these things" (I Par. 29, 17)

Let us offer ourselves to Him and beg Him to rank us with the victims of His love, to consume us as holocausts in the divine flames burning incessantly on the altar of His Sacred Heart.

THIRD POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS THE CENSER OF DIVINE LOVE,

The Sacred Heart of Jesus is not only the temple and the altar, but also the censer of divine love. It is the golden thurible described in the eighth chapter of the Apocalypse, which St. Augustine interprets as the loving Heart of Jesus. In that precious censer all the worship, praise, prayers, desires and affections of all the saints are placed, like so many grains of incense to be offered to God in the Heart of His Well beloved Son, ascending as a most pleasing odor to His divine majesty. There we also must place all our prayers, all our desires, all our devotions, and all the pious affections of our hearts, yes, our very hearts themselves, with all that we do and all that we are, beseeching the King of all hearts to purify and sanctify all these things, and to offer them to His Father as a heavenly incense of sweet fragrance.

Thus, the Sacred Heart of our divine Lord is the temple, the altar, the censer, the priest, the victim of divine love, all for our sake, performing on our behalf the functions of those divine offices. O love so abundant! O my Saviour, how wonderful are Thy loving kindnesses! Ah, what reverence and praise I should give to Thy loving Heart in return! O most blessed Heart of my Jesus, let me be naught but heart and love towards Thee and let all hearts on heaven and earth be immolated to Thy praise and glory!

Ejaculatory prayer:

Hail, priest of hearts and victim, hail!
Alone Thou equal art to God.
Most worthy Temple, Holy Grail,
And Altar, holiest to laud.
Ave, Sacerdos cordium,
Ave, Deo par Victima,
Templum Deo dignissimum,
Et Ara sacratissima.

FOURTH MEDITATION

The Sacred Heart of Jesus Loves Us with an Everlasting and a Boundless Love

FIRST POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS LOVES US WITH AN EVERLASTING LOVE

THE divine Heart of our Saviour is filled with eternal love for us. To realize this truth, one should understand two truths about eternity: first, that it has neither beginning nor end: secondly that it comprised in itself all ages, past, present and future; all the years, months, weeks, days, hours and moments of the past, present and future, and that it comprises them in a fixed and permanent manner, holding all those things united and joined together in one indivisible point. That is how eternity differs from time. Time runs on incessantly; as one moment arrives, another elapses and is left behind, and so one never sees two moments of time together. But in eternity everything is permanent; whatever is eternal always remains of the same extension.

That is why the eternal love of the Sacred Heart of Jesus for us comprises two elements. First, this incomparable Heart has loved us from all eternity, before we were and could have known and loved it, even in spite of the vision and knowledge that it had of all our offenses which were present to its vision as they are now. Secondly, the amiable Heart of Jesus loves us at every moment with all the love wherewith it has ever loved us and shall love us throughout all eternity. Thus, we can see the difference between God's love and ours. Our love is a passing act; the love of God is constant. The love that God has exercised towards us for a hundred thousand years remains in His Heart together with that which He will dispense a hundred thousand years from now. Eternity implies that in God there is nothing past nor future, but all is present, so that God loves us now with all the love wherewith He has loved us from all eternity and wherewith He will love us forever.

314-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

O eternity of love! O eternal love! If I had existed from all eternity, I should have been bound to love Thee from all eternity; and yet, my God, I have not begun to love Thee as I should. At least, let me begin now, O my Saviour, to love Thee as Thou wouldst be loved. O God of my heart, I give myself to Thee to be united to Thy ceaseless love for me from all eternity. I surrender myself to Thee to be united to the love wherewith Thou lovest Thy Father before all centuries, so as to love the Father and the Son with an eternal love.

SECOND POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS LOVES US WITH A BOUNDLESS LOVE

The loving Heart of Jesus loves us with a boundless love. The divine and uncreated love which possesses that adorable Heart, is nothing else but God Himself. Now, since God is unlimited, His love is also unlimited. Since God is everywhere, His love is everywhere, in all places and in all things. Therefore, the Sacred Heart of Jesus loves us not only in heaven, but He also loves us on earth. He loves us in the sun, in the stars and in all created things. He loves us in the hearts of all the denizens of heaven and in the hearts of all persons that have some measure of charity for us on earth. All love for ourselves existing in the hearts in heaven and on earth is a participation in the love of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. Moreover, He loves us even in the hearts of our enemies despite the hatred they bear us. I even make bold to say that He loves us in hell, in the hearts of the devils and the damned, in spite of all their wrath and hatred, since the divine love is everywhere, filling heaven and earth like the presence of God.

O boundless love, I plunge myself into thy fires and flames that fill all created beings, in order to love my God and my Saviour in all places and in all things. O Jesus, I offer Thee all the boundless love of Thy Heart, of the adorable Heart of Thy Divine Father, the lovable Heart of Thy holy Mother, and of all the hearts that love Thee in heaven and on earth. I ardently desire that all creatures of the universe be transformed into flaming fires of love towards Thee.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"How late have I loved Thee, O Goodness so ancient and yet so new, how late have I loved Thee."

Sero te amavi, bonitas tam antiqua et tam nova, sero te amavi.

FIFTH MEDITATION

The Sacred Heart of Jesus Is the Source of the Life of the God man, of the Mother of God and of the Children of God

FIRST POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS THE SOURCE OF THE LIFE OF THE GOD-MAN

THE adorable Heart of our Saviour is the source of the life of the Godman, and consequently is the source of all the thoughts and feelings of the Son of God on earth, of all the words He pronounced, of all the actions He performed, of all the sufferings He endured, and of the incomprehensible love wherewith He did and suffered all things for our salvation. Therefore, it is to Thy loving Heart, O my Jesus, that our obligation is due. What shall we do to thank Thee? We can do nothing more pleasing to Thee than to offer Thee Thy most divine Heart. I offer it then to Thee, my Saviour, in union with the infinite love wherewith it hath accomplished so many wonderful things for our Redemption.

SECOND POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS THE SOURCE OF THE LIFE OF THE MOTHER OF GOD

The Sacred Heart of Jesus is the source of the life of Mary, the Mother of God. When that admirable Mother was carrying her Beloved Son in her blessed womb, her virginal Heart was the source of the natural bodily life of her divine Child, but the Heart of that adorable Child was, at the same time, the source of the spiritual and supernatural life of His most worthy Mother. Hence the divine Heart of the Only Son of Mary was the source of all the pious thoughts and feelings of His Blessed Mother, of all the sacred words she spoke, of all the good deeds she performed, of all the virtues she practised, and of all the pains and sorrows she suffered in order to cooperate with her Beloved Son in the work of our salvation.

Praise eternal, O my Jesus, to Thy divine Heart O my Redeemer, I offer Thee also in thanksgiving for the great wonders of grace that Thy filial Heart hath wrought in Thy glorious Mother, I offer her maternal Heart flaming with love for Thee.

THIRD POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IS SOURCE OF LIFE OF THE CHILDREN OF GOD

The Sacred Heart of Jesus is the source of life of all the children of God. Since it is the source of the life of the Head, it is also the source of life of the members; and since it is the source of life of the Father and the Mother, it is the source of life of the children. That is why we should regard and honor that benign Heart as the source and origin of all the good thoughts in the minds of all Christians, of all the holy words that have issued from their lips, of all the virtues that they have practised, and of all the toil they have borne for their sanctification as Christians.

O my Saviour, may all these things be transmuted into immortal praise to Thy Most Sacred Heart O Jesus, since Thou hast given me that very Heart to be the source of my life, let it be, I beseech Thee, the sole source of all my feelings and affections, of all the faculties and functions of my soul, and of all the use I make of my interior and exterior senses. In fine, let it be the soul of my soul, the spirit of my spirit, and the Heart of my heart.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"O Heart of Jesus, source of all good, to Thee be praise and glory for ever.

O Cor Jesu, Principium omnium bonorum, tibi laus, tibi gloria in aeternum!

SIXTH MEDITATION

Three Hearts of Jesus Which Are But One Heart

FIRST POINT

THE DIVINE HEART OF: JESUS

WE HAVE three Hearts to adore in our Saviour which, nevertheless, are but one single Heart by virtue of the hypostatic union.

The first is His divine Heart existing from all eternity in the bosom of His Adorable Father, which is but one Heart and one love with the love and Heart of His Father, and which, with the Heart and love of His Father, is the source of the Holy Spirit. Therefore, when He gave us His Heart, He also gave us the Heart of His Father and of His adorable Spirit, hence His marvelous words: "As the Father hath loved me, I also have loved you" (John 15, 9).

He simply means: "I love you with the same Heart and the same love wherewith I love my Father. My Father loves Me with an eternal, boundless and infinite love; I love you also with a love that is eternal, boundless and infinite. My Father causes Me to be what I am, Godlike unto Himself and Only Son of God; and I make you to be by grace and participation what I am by nature and essence, that is to say, gods and children of God, seeing that you have but one and the same Father as I, a Father who loves you with the same Heart and the same love wherewith He loves Me: 'Thou hast loved them, as thou hast also loved me (John 17, 23)- My Eternal Father has constituted Me universal heir of all His goods: 'He hath appointed him heir of all things' (Heb. 1, 2); and I make you My co-heirs: 'Heirs indeed of God and joint heirs with Christ' (Rom. 8, 17); I promise to give you possession of all My treasures: 'He shall place him over all his goods'(Matt. 24, 47)- My Father finds all His pleasure and delight in Me; and I take My delight and pleasure in you: 'My delights were to be with the children of men'" (Prov. 8, 30

O goodness! O love! O God of love, how is it possible for the hearts of men to be so hard and cold towards Thee who art all aflame with the fire of love towards them? O, let all my joy and delight be in thinking of Thee, in speaking of Thee, in serving and loving Thee! O my All, let me be wholly Thine, and do Thou alone possess all that is in me.

SECOND POINT

THE SPIRITUAL HEART OF JESUS

The second Heart of Jesus is His spiritual Heart, which is the will of His holy soul, a purely spiritual faculty, whose function is to love what is lovable and to hate what is hateful. But the divine Saviour so perfectly sacrificed His human will to His Divine Father that He never exercised it while on earth and will never exercise it even in heaven, but He sought uniquely and solely His Father's will, according to those words of His: I seek not my own will, but the will of him that sent me" (John 5, 30). I came down from heaven, not to do my own will, but the will of him that sent me" (John 6, 38). Now, it is out of love for us that Our Lord renounced His own will, in order to perform the work of our salvation solely by the will of His Father, in particular when He prayed to Him in the Garden of Olives: "Father, not my will, but thine be done!" (Luke 22, 42).

O God of my heart, if for love of me Thou didst sacrifice Thy utterly holy and divine will, how much more should I renounce my own will for love of Thee, wholly depraved and corrupted as it is by sin! Ah, let me renounce it with all my heart forever, imploring Thee most humbly, O my adorable Redeemer, to crush it like a serpent full of venom and to establish in its place the rule of Thy divine will.

THIRD POINT

THE CORPOREAL HEART OF JESUS

The third Heart of Jesus is the Sacred Heart of His deified body, a furnace of love divine and of incomparable love for us. Since the corporeal Heart is hypostatically united to the Person of the Word, 320-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

It is enkindled with flames of infinite love for us. Its love is so intense that it constrains the Son of God to bear us continually in His Heart; to fix His eyes ever upon us; to take such a great interest in the smallest details concerning us that He verily numbers all the hairs of our head, allowing not one of them to perish; to ask His Father that we might make our eternal abode within His bosom: "Father, I will that where I am, they also whom thou hast given me may be with me" (John 17, 24); and to assure us that, if we vanquish the enemies of His glory and of our salvation, He will make us sit with Him on His own throne, and will let us enter into possession of the same kingdom and the same glory that His Eternal Father has given Him.

Oh, how abundant and rapturous is the love of Jesus for such faithless and ungrateful men as we! O Jesus, my love, either take away my life or let me live only to love Thee, to praise and glorify Thee unceasingly. Let me die a thousand deaths rather than willingly do anything to grieve Thee! Thou hast three Hearts which are but one and the same Heart, a Heart wholly devoted to loving me continually. Would that I possessed all the hearts in the universe that I might consume them in Thy holy love!

Ejaculatory prayer:

"I love Thee, O most loving Jesus, I love Thee, O infinite goodness, I love Thee with my whole heart and I wish to love Thee more and more."

Amo te, amantissime Jesu, amo te, bonitas infinita, amo te ex toto corde meo, et magis atque amare volo.

SEVENTH MEDITATION The Miracles of the Sacred Heart of Jesus

FIRST POINT

MIRACLES OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IN THE REALM OF NATURE

PICTURE to yourself the realm of nature, the great universe comprising so many wonderful things, namely, the heavens, the sun, the moon, the stars and comets, the four elements, of which the air is peopled by such a great variety of birds; the earth, replete with its marvelous abundance of animals, trees, plants, flowers, fruits, metals, stones; the sea, filled with such a prodigious multitude of fishes. Add to that the creatures of reason, men and angels; consider them in the natural state of their creation. What a miracle to have made this amazing universe out of nothing! It is not only a miracle, it is a world of miracles without number.

Count all the creatures made by God and you will count so many miracles that God has performed in drawing them from the abyss of nothingness. Number all the moments that have elapsed since the creation of the world and you will number so many miracles since preservation is a continuous creation. There are also innumerable other wonders perpetually wrought in the governance of this universe. Now, who is the author of those innumerable miracles? It is the inconceivable goodness and the incomprehensible love of the divine Heart of that adorable Word, mentioned by St. John the Evangelist in the first words of his Gospel: "All things were made by him" (John 1, 3)- It is because of His love for us that our divine Lord has made all things, even though He had always before His eyes the ingratitude, the offenses and the crimes without limit which He was obliged to suffer and still endures every day from us.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

That is why all those things which He created are so many tongues and voices preaching to us unceasingly the ineffable charity of His most gracious Heart, and exhorting us to adore Him, to love Him and to glorify Him in every possible manner.

Heaven and earth, says St. Augustine, and all things contained therein, cease not to tell me that I should love my God: Caelum et terra et omnia quae in eis sunt, non cessant mihi dicere ut amem Deum meum.

SECOND POINT

MIRACLES OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IN THE REALM OF GRACE

Picture the realm of grace, which comprises innumerable wonders incomparably surpassing those of the world of nature. It encompasses all the miracles of sanctity that have been wrought on the earth by the Holy of Holies; all the wonders that transpired in the Mother of grace; the entire Church Militant; all the Sacraments, with all the marvelous effects which they produce; all the wonderful things that divine grace has effected and will effect in the lives of all the saints that have been and that shall be in this world. What is the source of all those wonders? Is it not the inconceivable charity of the blessed Heart of our Redeemer, who has established and constantly preserves this amazing world of grace on earth, for love of us?

O my Jesus, let all these wonders of Thy most loving Heart and all the powers of Thy divinity and Thy humanity be employed to bless Thee and praise Thee unceasingly and eternally: "O all ye powers of the Lord, bless the Lord" (Dan. 3, 61).

THIRD POINT

MIRACLES OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS IN THE REALM OF GLORY

Let us raise our mind and our heart to heaven, to contemplate the realm of glory, the fair, great and glorious city of heaven, of which all the citizens are forever freed from tribulation and showered with countless blessings. Let us behold that innumerable army of the blessed: "Which no man could number" (Apoc7, 9), who are more dazzling than the sun, who possess incalculable riches, joys unspeakable and glories indescribable. Consider the inconceivable happiness which] you in that heavenly Jerusalem, since the Holy Ghost declares to us that never hath eye seen, nor ear heard, nor human heart understood nor can ever understand the infinite treasures that God has prepared there for them that love Him. Now, what has made heaven and who is the author of all the miracles contained therein? It is the intense love of the Sacred Heart of the Son of God, who has merited it by His blood, who has filled it with an ocean of unutterable delights, to give us the full and perfect possession of it eternally.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

O my Saviour, graciously let me offer Thee, I beg Thee, as an act of thanksgiving, all the glories and wonders of paradise! If I were possessed of a hundred thousand paradises, how gladly would I, by the help of Thy grace, divest myself of them so as to sacrifice them to Thy eternal praise!

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Let the mercies of the Lord give glory to him: and his wonderful works to the children of man."

Confiteantur Domino misericordiae ejus, et mirabilia ejus filiis hominum.

EIGHTH MEDITATION

The Sacred Heart of Jesus Is a Furnace of Love, Purifying, Illuminating, Sanctifying, Transforming and Deifying

FIRST POINT

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS A FURNACE OF LOVE FOR US

THE most loving Heart of our benign Saviour is a burning furnace of most pure love for us; a furnace of purifying love, of illuminating love, of sanctifying love, of transforming love and of deifying love. His love is a purifying love, in which the hearts of holy souls are purified more perfectly than gold in the furnace; an illuminating love, which scatters the darkness of hell with which the earth is covered and lets us into the wonderful brilliance of heaven: "Who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light" (1 Pet. 2, 9); a sanctifying love, which destroys sin in our souls in order to establish there the kingdom of grace; a transforming love, which transforms serpents into doves, wolves into lambs, beasts into angels, children of the devil into children of God, children of wrath and malediction into children of grace and blessing; a deifying love, which makes gods of men: "I have said: you are gods" (Ps. 81, 6), letting them share in the holiness of God, His mercy, His patience, His goodness, His love, His charity and His other divine perfections: "Partakers of the divine nature" (2 Pet. 1, 4)

O divine love of my Jesus, I give myself wholly to Thee; purify me, enlighten me, sanctify me, transform me into Thee, that I may be naught but love for my God.

THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

325 -

SECOND POINT

THE FURNACE OF THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS RADIATES LOVE To ALL BEINGS

The august Heart of Jesus is a furnace of love which spreads its fiery flames in all directions, in heaven, on earth and throughout the whole universe. Its fiery flames would have consumed the hearts of the Seraphim and would have enkindled all the hearts on earth if the terrible chill of sin had not set in. Those divine fires transform all the hearts of heavenly lovers into so many furnaces of love for Him who is all love for them.

All creatures on earth, even senseless, inanimate and irrational beings, feel the effects of the incredible goodness of that magnificent Heart since He loves all things that are and hates nothing that He has made, sin being the only thing that He did not make, the only object of His hatred: "For thou invest all things that are, and hatest none of the things which thou hast made" (Wisd. 11, 25)

Jesus Christ possesses an extraordinary love for men, as well for the good as the wicked, for His friends as for His enemies, for whom He has such intense charity that even the overwhelming torrents and floods of their innumerable sins are not able to extinguish it: "Many waters cannot quench charity" (Cant. 8, 7). Not a moment elapses that He does not grant to men manifold natural and supernatural favors, corporal and spiritual, even while they are offending Him and dishonoring Him by their misdeeds.

The divine fires of the precious Heart of the Son of God reach even into hell, to the devils and the damned, preserving their being, life and the natural perfections which He gave them at creation, and not punishing them as much as they have deserved for their sins, for which His divine justice might very justly chastise them much more severely than it does: "There is no one that can hide himself from his heat" (Ps. 18, 7)

O sacred fires and flames of the Heart of my Saviour, rush in upon my heart and the hearts of all my brethren, and kindle them into as many furnaces of love for my most loving Jesus!

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

THIRD POINT

Intensity of the Love of the SACRED

HEART OF JESUS

Imagine all the charity, all the affections, all the tender and intimate feelings of all the hearts that the omnipotent hand of God might fashion as being collected and united in one heart large enough to contain them. Would they not all be capable of forming one unimaginable furnace of love? But, realize that all the fires and flames of such a furnace would not make one tiny spark of the immense love with which the infinitely loving Heart of Jesus is inflamed towards you, O Christian soul.

O furnace infinitely to be desired! Who will grant me to be plunged into that burning fire? O Mother of Jesus, O all ye angels, O all ye holy saints of Jesus, I give myself to you all and to each in particular, and I give you also all my brothers and sisters, and all the inhabitants of earth, that you may plunge us all into the abyss of that sacred furnace! Attend and hear, O vast furnace of love! A tiny straw asks most humbly and earnestly to be plunged, buried, lost, devoured and consumed wholly in thy sacred flames and thy holy fires forever and ever!

Ejaculatory prayer:

"O fire which ever burnest and is never extinguished. O love which is ever fervent and never grows tepid, inflame me wholly that I may love Thee wholly."

O ignis qui semper ardes et nunquam extingueris. O amor qui semper ferves et nunquam tepescu, accende me totum, ut totus diligam te!

MEDITATIONS FOR SPECIAL DAYS OF THE YEAR'

Meditation for New Year's Day

FIRST POINT

LET US ADORE JESUS AT THE BEGINNING OF HIS LIFE ON EARTH

O JESUS, my Lord, I adore, bless and love Thee with all the powers of my soul at the first moment of Thy life of suffering on earth.

I adore all the holy thoughts, sentiments and dispositions of Thy divine soul, and all that took place within Thee in that first moment.

O Admirable Jesus, from the very first moment of Thy mortal life, Thou didst turn towards the Eternal Father to adore, love and glorify Him, to refer to His omnipotence Thy being, Thy life and all its consequences. Thou didst give Thyself to Him to do and suffer everything He pleased, for His glory and for love of us. I behold that, at the same instant, Thou didst turn Thy spirit and heart towards me, to think of me, to love me, to make great plans for my soul and to prepare very special graces for me.

Blessed be Thou, O Good Jesus, and may all the creatures of heaven and earth, and all the powers of Thy divinity and Thy humanity eternally bless Thee for these divine operations.

(1). The first and last of these meditations are taken from "Part Six" of The Kingdom of Jesus. The others are to be found in the Manual of Piety which St. John Eudes compiled for his order of priests, the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

SECOND POINT

LET US GIVE OURSELVES TO JESUS TO BEGIN THE YEAR
As HE BEGAN HIS LIFE UPON EARTH

O Jesus, I give myself to Thee, that I may commence this year as Thou didst begin Thy life on earth, and share in Thy most holy dispositions. I beg Thee, by Thy great mercy, to implant these dispositions in my heart.

O Most Adorable Jesus, in honor of and in union with the humility, love and other holy dispositions with which Thou didst adore and love the Eternal Father, giving Thyself to Him at the first moment of Thy life, I adore, love and glorify Thee, as my God and my Saviour, as the Creator of time, the King of years and of centuries, and as the divine Redeemer who purchased for me, at the cost of Thy Precious Blood, all the time that is allotted to me on earth.

O Jesus, I consecrate to Thee all my minutes, hours, days and years, my being and my life, and all that goes with them. I desire to employ everything for Thy pure glory alone. I desire all my thoughts and acts, every beat of my heart, every breath I draw, and all else that shall take place in me this year, and during my whole life, to become so many acts of praise and love for Thee. May it please Thee, my dear Jesus, to grant that this may be so, through Thy most great power And goodness.

I also offer Thee, O Jesus, all the love and glory that shall be given to Thy majesty. I unite myself with all the honor and praises that shall be given Thee this year and forever, by the Eternal Father, the Holy Spirit, Thy Blessed Mother, the angels and saints and all Thy creatures.

O Most Amiable Jesus, I adore all the designs Thou dost shape for me during this year. Do not permit me to put obstacles in their way. I give myself to Thee to do and suffer everything Thou dost please, for the accomplishment of these eternal designs. In honor Of, and in union with the love with which Thou didst accept, at the first moment of Thy Incarnation, all the sufferings Thou hadst to bear in life, I now accept and embrace, for Thy love, all the sufferings of body and spirit I shall have to undergo this year and during my whole life.

O my Saviour, a year will come that will be the last in my life. Perhaps this very year now unfolding is to be my last. If I knew with certainty that this was to be my last year on earth, with what care and fervor would I spend it in Thy service! Nevertheless, I wish to spend this year as if I had no more time to love and glorify Thee in this world, and to make up for the occasions in the past, when I have fallen away from my love of Thee. Grant me, O Good Jesus, all the graces that I need for this constancy.

THIRD POINT

LET US OFFER THE BEGINNING OF THE YEAR TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN IN HONOR OF THE FIRST MOMENT OF HER LIFE

O Blessed Virgin, Mother of my God and Saviour, I honor and reverence thee in the first moment of thy life. I honor and reverence the dispositions of thy holy soul, and all that took place in thee at that time.

Thou didst begin immediately, O holy Virgin, to love and glorify God most perfectly, and from that first moment to the last of thy life, thou didst ever love and glorify Him more and more. As for me, in spite of all the years I have been in this world, I have not yet begun to love and serve Him as I should.

O Mother of mercy, beg thy Divine Son to have mercy on me. Atone for my failings, offering Him on my behalf all the love and glory thou didst ever give Him, to satisfy for my neglect in loving and glorifying Him. Grant that I may share in thy surpassing love for Him, and in the fidelity of that great maternal love. Pray for me, that He may give me the grace to begin, at least now, to love Him perfectly, and that all that shall take place during this year, and all my life, may be consecrated to His glory and thy honor.

O angels, And saints of Jesus Christ, pray for me, that our loving Saviour may give me new grace and new love for Him, to devote

Meditation for Ash Wednesday

The Holy Season of Lent

FIRST POINT

LENT IS A SEASON OF GRACE AND BLESSING

O JESUS, King of ages and Sanctifier of time, I adore Thee as the Author of the holy season of Lent, and as the source of all its holiness. O my God, I adore Thy providential designs towards the Church, towards our own Community and myself in particular, during this penitential time of special grace and benediction, in which, O my Saviour, Thou dost indeed desire to grant me many very special graces if I interpose no obstacles. Do not permit any obstruction, but destroy in me whatever may be contrary to Thy benevolent designs, and grant me the dispositions to accomplish perfectly Thy most holy will. O my dearest Lord, I testify that with all my strength I detest my sins for love of Thee, I renounce my self-love, my own will and all that pertains to "the old man," and I give myself to Thy Providence to do and suffer all that Thou dost please on my behalf throughout my life, and especially during this holy season of Lent.

O my God, I wish to consider and spend this Lent, as it were to be the last Lent of my life. To that end, I dedicate and consecrate to Thee all my actions, promising that I wish to do or think nothing save for Thy supreme glory, and to fulfil my obligations with all the perfection possible to me, with the help of Thy bountiful grace, which I implore with my whole heart for this intention.

SECOND POINT

HOW TO SPEND THE SEASON OF LENT PROFITABLY

O my Jesus, I desire to spend this holy season in company with Thee and Thy most holy Mother and, so far as I can with the assistance of Thy grace, to keep it as Thou and she would have done. I see that Lent was spent by Thee in solitude, apart from the society of men, apart even from the sweet company of Thy most holy Mother, in unbroken silence, in ceaseless prayer, in extremely rigorous penance, fasting stretched on the ground, suffering in the desert a multitude of pains both bodily and mental.

334-

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

I adore Thee, O my God, in all these achievements and in all the interior dispositions of Thy holy soul. I give myself to Thee for the accomplishment and imitation of Thy Lent, inasmuch as Thou shalt desire of me. I wish to love with Thee, and for love of Thee, solitude, silence, prayer and penance. I beseech Thee to grant me the grace to dissociate myself from vain and useless conversations, to abstain from all wrong and idle words, to perform all my acts in spirit of prayer and recollection, and to practise, for love of Thee~ some measure of penance and mortification.

O my Saviour, I offer Thee the abstinence and fast of this Lenten season, together with all the fasts and other mortifications of Holy Church, of all the Saints, of Thy Blessed Mother, in honor of and in union with Thy most exemplary fast and penance, in atonement for my sins and in fulfilment of Thy divine designs for Holy Church, for our Community and for my own soul in particular.

O Mother of Jesus, I offer myself to thee. Make me, I beseech thee, a participant in the holy dispositions with which thou didst spend this penitential season.

O angels of Jesus Christ, O saints of God, pray for me. Obtain for me the grace to employ this Lent and the remainder of my life in faithful service of my God, according to His most holy will.

FIRST POINT

DUTIES TO OUR DYING SAVIOUR

THIS is the last hour of the temporal and passible life of our Lord Jesus Christ on earth. Our God, Our Saviour, Our Father is agonizing and dying on the Cross. Let us reader Him, with all possible devotion, our final homage and service.

Our first duty is to adore Jesus, and to invite all the angels and saints to adore Him with us, in the dreadful manifestation and awesome mysteries of His mortal life, especially of His last day, last hour, last moment, last thoughts, last words, actions and sufferings, in the last disposition of His holy soul and in His last breath.

The second duty is to bless and thank Him, begging all the angels, saints and His most holy Mother to help us to offer Him thanksgiving for everything He spoke, did and suffered for the glory of His Heavenly Father and for our salvation.

The third duty is to beg our Saviour's forgiveness and make reparation in the name of all men for the multiple offenses and outrages He suffered on earth on our account. We must offer Him, in atonement, all the love and honor which were, are and shall always be given Him in heaven and on earth by His Eternal Father, by the Holy Spirit, by His Blessed Mother, by all His angels and His saints, also to offer and yield ourselves to Him to do and suffer whatever shall please His holy will.

The fourth duty is to prostrate ourselves at the feet of Jesus, agonizing and dying on the Cross, beseeching Him to give us His benediction before leaving mortal life, and, by the virtue of this benediction, to destroy in us all kinds of malediction, that is, every trace of sin and inclination to evil, to bless our body and our soul, our eyes, our ears, our mouth, our tongue, our hands, our feet, our memory, our mind and our will, all our senses interior or exterior, so that henceforth we employ them only for His greater glory.

The fifth duty is to tell God the Son, dying for us on the Cross, that we wish to die with Him and for Him; to die to sin, to the world, to ourselves, to all that displeases Him. We should offer ourselves to Him for this purpose, begging Him very earnestly to impress on our minds a perfect image of His most holy death, and to make us die the precious and desirable death of the saints, that we may henceforth live only in Him and for Him.

SECOND POINT

DUTIES TO MARY, MOTHER OF JESUS

After having fulfilled our obligations towards the Son of God, we have still three duties to His holy Mother.

The first is to prostrate ourselves in heart and in spirit at her feet asking her pardon for the cruel death of her Son, and for the most bitter sufferings of her pure heart which we have caused. In reparation, we must offer her all the honor, glory and praise which have been, are and will be forever rendered to her in heaven as well as on earth by the Most Holy Trinity, by the sacred humanity of her Son, by all the angels and all the saints. We must also give ourselves to our Lady as her slaves, promising that we wish to serve and honor her all our lives in every way possible to us.

The second thing we must do for the Blessed Virgin is to remember that Our Lord Jesus Christ, dying on the Cross, gave her to us as our Mother, and gave us to her as her children, when, addressing her, He said: "Behold thy Son"; and speaking to each of us in the person of St. John: "Behold thy mother." We ought to thank Our Lord with our whole heart for having given us His Mother to be our Mother; we ought to give thanks to the most holy Virgin for having received us as her children, and to beg our Saviour that inasmuch as He has associated us with Him as the Beloved Son of Mary, He also make us share His perfect filial devotion to His admirable Mother.

Our third debt to the Mother of Jesus is to acknowledge and salute her as our Mother, declaring that we desire to serve, love and honor her as our Mother, obey her as a Mother and study to make ourselves like unto her as children should resemble their mother; and, consequently, to imitate her humility, her patience, her obedience, her purity, her mildness and docility, her charity and all her other virtues. We must beseech our Lady to look upon us, her unworthy children, to protect and to guide us in all things and to be a mother to us both in life and in death.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"He loved me and delivered himself for me."

Dilexit me et tradidit semetipsum pro me (Gal. 2, 20).

Meditation
The Vigil of the Ascension of Our Lord

FIRST POINT
 ADORATION AND THANKSGIVING

BEFORE Our Lord ascends to return to the bosom of His Heavenly Father we must render to Him four final tributes.

Our first duty is to adore our Saviour in all the states and mysteries of His life on earth, to ask His pardon for our failure to honor Him and for the little fruit we have derived from His all-meritorious life, and to offer Him in reparation the admirable glory which has been accorded our divine Redeemer by His Blessed Mother, the angels, the saints and by His whole Church.

Our second duty is to bless and thank Our Lord on the eve of His glorious ascension, begging the choirs of angels, the holy company of saints and His most holy Mother, to praise and glorify Him with us, in the name of the whole human race, for all that He thought, said, did and suffered while on earth out of love for us, affirming that we wish to do, say, think and suffer everything only for love of Him alone.

SECOND POINT

REPARATION

Our third duty is to prostrate ourselves at the feet of our Risen Saviour in a spirit of repentance and contrition and, in the name of all mankind, to make worthy reparation, begging His divine pardon for the countless injuries, offenses and outrages we have heaped upon Him which He endured on our behalf while He was on earth. In satisfaction we must offer Him all the honor and glory that He received, and that He will ever receive on earth and in heaven, as also to offer ourselves to Him to do and to suffer for this intention, whatever may be His august and holy will.

THIRD POINT

UNION IN SPIRIT AND HEART

Our fourth duty is to give ourselves to Him, begging Him to prepare us to leave this earth on the great feast of tomorrow, to ascend to heaven with Him in heart and spirit. We must implore Him to accomplish this by breaking all our bonds and detaching us entirely from everything in this world and in ourselves. We must beg our Saviour to tie and bind us so closely to Himself that He may transport upwards into heaven our minds, our thoughts, our hearts, our desires and our affections, that for the future we may be able to say with the first Christians: "Our conversation is in heaven" (Phil. 3, 20).

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Our conversation is in heaven."
 Conversatio nostra in caelo est (Phil. 3, 20).

Meditation

The Vigil of the Assumption of Our Lady

FIRST POINT

HOMAGE AND THANKSGIVING

BEFORE the Blessed Virgin Mary leaves this earth to enter heaven, let us fulfil our final obligations to her.

The first duty is to prostrate ourselves at her feet, in the name of the whole human race, asking the angels and the saints to prostrate themselves with us to salute and honor her in all the states and mysteries of her life; to beg her pardon for the inadequate honor we have rendered during the course of the year, and for the little fruit we have gathered from her shining example. We must offer her, in place of our ingratitude and negligence, all the honor and all the praise accorded to her by the choirs of angels and by the vast company of saints in heaven and on earth.

The second duty is to give our Lady thanks from ourselves and from all men, begging also all the citizens of heaven to bless and thank her with us, for all that she thought, said, did and suffered in this world to cooperate with her Divine Son in the salvation of mankind.

SECOND POINT

REPARATION

Our third duty is to implore her pardon in the name of the whole world, for the countless injuries and offenses that she has received, and for all the pain, sorrow and anguish she has borne on account of our sins, on our behalf offering her in satisfaction and reparation the Adorable Heart of her Divine Son, together with all the service,

SPECIAL DAYS OF THE YEAR

praise and honor which have been and will ever be tendered to her by the whole Church, Triumphant and Militant. We must also offer her ourselves to do and suffer anything she pleases, affirming that we wish to do all that is possible to us to serve and honor her throughout our lifetime, and to cause her to be served and honored by everyone else.

THIRD POINT

ACT OF OBLATION TO MARY

The fourth duty is to present her with a gift, before she leaves the earth to go to heaven, as she is our sovereign Lady and our Queen. What gift shall we offer her? What can we give her when everything is already hers? It is true that all creation belongs to her, but it is, nevertheless, very pleasing to her to receive from us what is already hers, provided we offer our gift with the same affection with which we would make our offering if we could give our Queen something that is not already hers. Let us give her our hearts. Our Lady wants most of all the gift of each human heart that she may give it to her Divine Son. Let us each give his heart to her entirely and irrevocably, beseeching her to destroy anything in it displeasing to her, to detach it completely from all creatures and to unite it closely to her own most admirable Heart in order to enrapture our hearts and bear them upward with her own into highest heaven.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"We offer thee our hearts."
Tibi cor nostrum offerimus.

Meditation
for
The Feast of the Holy RELICS (2)

FIRST POINT

OBLIGATION TO HONOR THE RELICS OF THE SAINTS

THERE are several reasons which oblige us to honor the precious relics of the saints, especially those enshrined in this place.

First, we should honor all that God honors. Almighty God honors to such a degree everything belonging to His saints that He counts the hairs of their heads and performs miracles by their bones and ashes, so that they become venerated by all men, even by kings and princes, who think themselves privileged to be allowed to touch and honor saintly relics.

Secondly, we should honor all creatures by which God is honored. Almighty God is greatly honored by the relics of the saints because the bodies of the saints have cooperated with their souls in the heroic virtue they performed for the glory of God; thus, all honor given to the saints and their relics proceeds to God, the Saint of saints and the fount of all sanctity.

Thirdly, we must venerate saintly relics because St. Paul testifies that the bodies of the faithful are the members of Jesus Christ, who is their Head, and members of the mystical body of Jesus, namely, His Church.

Fourthly, St. Paul also affirms that the bodies of true Christians are temples of the Holy Ghost, and that Jesus Christ will raise them up because the Holy Ghost has taken up His dwelling in them: "He shall quicken also your mortal bodies, because of his Spirit that dwelleth in you" (Rom. 8, 11). This is why the Church, in the funeral ceremonies of a Christian, blesses the grave and asks God that His Holy Spirit may descend into it with the body to be placed there, in order to raise it up on the day of General judgment.

(2). Some religious communities celebrate this feast on November 5, during the Octave of the Feast of All Saints.

SPECIAL DAYS OF THE YEAR

Finally, Holy Mother Church, animated and guided by the Holy Ghost, has always held the relics of the saints in such veneration that St. Gregory Nazianze, quoted by the great Cardinal Baronius in his Ecclesiastical Annals, says that the bodies of the holy martyrs have the same power as their souls if we touch or venerate them; and that drops of their blood and small tokens of their sufferings have the same power as their bodies. St. Gregory says, furthermore, that the veneration of the Saints was so widespread, that a little dust of the remains of a bone were honored as equivalent to the whole body, and that even the name of a saint, without the presence of any relics at all, was enshrined in the place of the martyr's body and possessed equal power. With good reason he exclaimed: "O prodigious thing! Their very memory alone gives life."

SECOND POINT

DISPOSITIONS WITH WHICH WE SHOULD HONOR HOLY RELICS

The first disposition is deep humility, acknowledging to ourselves that, as sinners, we are unworthy not only to touch but even to gaze upon the holy relics of the saints.

The second disposition is the purification of our souls from all sin and from all affection to sin by means of true contrition; because holy things should be-treated in a holy manner.

The third disposition is thanksgiving to our Lord Jesus Christ for all the glory He has rendered His Father by the saints whose relics are here present, for the countless favors He has bestowed upon them and for the rich graces He has given us through their intercession. We must also return thanks to the saints themselves for the wealth of honor they have rendered unto God and for the great assistance they have given us by their prayers and merits.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

The fourth disposition is to give ourselves to Jesus Christ, the Saint of saints, and to ask Him to make us sharers in the spirit, in the love, in the charity, humility and other virtues of His saints and to unite us to all the love and all the glory that they have rendered and will eternally render with Him to the Most Holy Trinity. We must likewise offer ourselves to the saints and implore them to give us to Jesus and His most holy Mother, and to employ the God-given power to destroy in us anything that is displeasing to them. We must beg the saints to make us sharers in their ardent love and in all their magnificent virtues, to make us their associates in the praise which they send up and will forever send up before the throne of the most High, and to obtain for us the grace to imitate the holy life they lived while on earth.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"God is wonderful in his saints."

Mirabilis Deus in sanctis suis (Ps. 67, 36).

Meditation for Christmas Day

Our Duties to the Child Jesus

FIRST POINT

ADORATION, PRAISE AND THANKSGIVING

O DIVINE and adorable Child Jesus, prostrate at Thy feet, I adore Thee, praise Thee and thank Thee with Thy Blessed Mother, with St. Joseph, with the whole Church and in the name of all creatures. I adore, praise and thank the Blessed Trinity through Thee and in Thee. May everything in me and in the universe offer adoration, praise and thanks to the Blessed Trinity that reigns so perfectly in Thee.

SECOND POINT

HUMILIATION AND SATISFACTION

O Divine Child Jesus, Thou art the joy of the angels in heaven. The glory and the happiness of Thy Eternal Father are Thine from the very first moment of Thy mortal existence. Nevertheless, I now behold Thee lying in a stable, suffering the humiliation and pains of childhood. O Infant Jesus, my sins are the cause of Thy suffering. I hate and detest them with all my heart and in satisfaction I offer Thee all the tears and pains of Thy Holy Childhood, and I give myself to Thee to suffer in union with Thee whatsoever suffering it may please Thee to send me.

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

THIRD POINT

LOVE AND OBLATION

O Loving Child Jesus, Thou art all love for me and I wish to be all love for Thee. I give Thee my heart with all my affection, in union with the Eternal Father, the Holy Spirit, Thy Blessed Mother, and all Thine angels and saints. Take full possession of my soul forever.

O Most Sweet Jesus, Thou dost give Thyself to me with infinite love. In union with the same love, I give, consecrate and sacrifice myself entirely to Thee with every created being. If I had an infinity of worlds, I would gladly sacrifice them an infinite number of times if it were possible. O Almighty Child, use Thine infinite power to take full possession of me, to annihilate in me everything that is contrary to the spirit of Thy Holy Childhood, and to sacrifice me wholly with Thee to the glory of Thy Father.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"We adore Thee, O dear Child Jesus."
Adoramus Te, Domine Jesu Infans.

347-

Meditation for The Last Day of the Year

FIRST POINT

LET US ADORE JESUS ON THE LAST DAY AND LAST MOMENT OF HIS LIFE ON EARTH

O JESUS, my Lord, I adore, love and glorify Thee in the last day, the last hour and last minute of Thy mortal life on earth. I adore and that happened both inwardly and outwardly on that last day, meaning Thy last thoughts, acts, words and sufferings, Thy final use of the senses of Thy sacred body, and the last dispositions of Thy holy soul, to which I desire to unite myself now, with a view to the closing moment of my own life.

O Divine Jesus, by the light of faith I behold Thee on that last day of Thy life, adoring and loving the Eternal Father infinitely. Thou dost give Him fitting thanks for all the graces imparted to Thee and, through Thee, to the whole world during the time of Thy sojourn on earth. Thou dost ask His pardon for all the sins of men, offering Thyself to Him to suffer the penance due to them. Thou dost think of me with love exceedingly great, with a most ardent desire to draw me to Thyself. Finally, Thou dost sacrifice Thy Precious Blood and Thy most noble life, for the glory of the Heavenly Father and for love of us. Blessed be Thou infinitely for all these inestimable graces.

O Good Jesus, in honor of and in union with the love, humility and other holy dispositions with which Thou didst perform all the last actions of Thy life, I give Thee thanks for all the glory Thou didst render to the Eternal Father during Thy life on earth, for all the graces Thou hast bestowed upon me and all men this year and always, as well as for the graces Thou wouldst have lavished on me if I had not stood in Thy way.'

MEDITATIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS

I most humbly beg Thy forgiveness for all the outrages and indignities Thou didst suffer on earth because of me, and for all the offenses I have committed against Thee this year. In satisfaction, I offer Thee all the honor and glory rendered to Thee, during Thy time on earth and during the past year, by Thy Eternal Father, the Holy Spirit, Thy Holy Mother, and by all the angels and saints. So, too, I offer myself to Thee to bear all the penance Thou mayest ordain for me in this world and in the next.

O Jesus, most worthy of love, I adore Thy infinite thoughts and designs for me on the last day of Thy most precious life; and I give myself to Thee to do and suffer all Thou dost desire of me, for the fulfilment of these unfathomable designs. Grant that I may die a thousand times rather than hinder the operation of Thy loving Providence.

SECOND POINT

LET US OFFER JESUS THE LAST DAY AND LAST MOMENT OF OUR LIFE

O Good Jesus, I offer to Thee the last day, the last hour and the last moment of my life and everything that may happen to me then outwardly and inwardly. I mean, my last thoughts, words, actions and sufferings, as well as the last use of my bodily senses and of the powers of my soul.

May it please Thee to grant that all these things may be consecrated to the honor of the last day, the last hour and last moment of Thy perfect life. May I die loving Thee with Thy holy love. May my being and my life be sacrificed and consumed for Thy glory, and may my last breath be an act of pure love of Thee. This is my intention, my desire, my expectation. O my Dear Jesus, relying as I do upon the excess of Thine infinite love, may it please Thee to grant, by Thy great mercy, that this may be so.

THIRD POINT

LET US OFFER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN THE LAST DAY OF OUR LIFE IN HONOR OF THE LAST DAY OF HER LIFE ON EARTH

O Mother of Jesus, Mother of the Eternal and Immortal Godmade Man, I honor and venerate thee in the last hour and moment of thy life. I honor thy last thoughts, words and acts, and the last use made of the senses of thine immaculate body and of the powers of thy glorious soul. Especially I wish to honor the last act of love made by thy mother's heart for thy Most Beloved Son.

With all my heart I bless and thank thee, O holy Virgin, for all the glory thou didst render to God during thy spotless life, and for all the graces thou didst ever obtain from His bounty for me and for all men, especially during this year.

I beg thy forgiveness, O Mother of Mercy, for all the offenses thou didst suffer on earth, as well as for those I have committed this year against thee. To make satisfaction for these, I offer thee all the honor that has ever been accorded thee in heaven and on earth.

O Mother of Fair Love, I offer thee the last day, the last hour and moment of my life, and all that shall take place in me at that last moment, in honor of the last moment, hour and day of thy life, and of all that occurred in thee on that day. Unite me, I beseech thee, with all the holy and divine dispositions of thy maternal heart and thy pure soul. Grant that, by thy merit and prayers, my last thoughts, words, acts and breaths may be consecrated to the honor of the last thought, words, acts and breaths, both of thy Son and of thyself. Grant that I may die loving Him with His holy love, and that I may be utterly consumed and sacrificed to His glory, and that my life may end with a last act of most pure love for Him.

O angels and saints of Christ, pray that He may consummate this final grace for me, by His exceedingly great mercy and for love of Him.

Ejaculatory prayer:

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

Beati mortui qui in Domino moriuntur (Apoc. 14, 13)

SAINT JEAN EUDES

Sa vie apostolique

Certes le siècle de Louis XIV fut grand. Il fut grand par ses auteurs, par ses poètes, par ses écrivains, par ses artistes, par ses généraux, par ses hommes d'État. Il fut plus grand peut-être encore par ses Saints. Il y a là, sans parler des femmes, de Mme de Chantal, de Mme Acarie, de Mlle Legras, etc., etc., toute une pléiade d'hommes de Dieu, vraiment extraordinaires: saint François de Sales, saint Vincent de Paul, saint Pierre Fourier, le cardinal de Bérulle, le Père de Condren, M. Olier, M. Bourdoise, Boudon, l'abbé de Rancé, Michel Le Nobletz, le Père Maunoir, M. de Renty, M. de Bernières.

Dans cette phalange, les plus illustres de ses contemporains avaient attribué à Jean Eudes une place d'honneur. Mgr de Maupas, évêque d'Évreux, n'hésitait point à écrire . « Il ne s'est point trouvé d'homme semblable dans notre France depuis bien des siècles. » C'est à son occasion et après les bénédictions admirables de la mission des Quinze-Vingts, que saint Vincent de Paul s'écriait: « Oh! qu'un bon missionnaire est un grand trésor, et qu'il y a peu de gens au monde qui veuillent servir Dieu, dans la pureté de la foi, dans le détachement des créatures et l'abnégation de soi-même! » C'est sous cet aspect que notre prêtre normand s'était montré. Monsieur Olier renchérit encore quand il appelle le P. Eudes « la merveille ou la rareté » de son siècle.

Les générations qui suivirent furent un peu oublieuses et ingrates. Sa mémoire n'était pas éteinte, mais elle restait voilée: c'était comme un feu caché dans la cendre. L'Église a rallumé ce foyer et rendu justice au grand serviteur de Dieu: elle vient de l'inscrire, par un jugement infaillible, au livre d'or des saints, à côté de ses vieux émules.

Des titres nombreux et variés recommandent Jean Eudes à notre vénération. Il réunit toutes les vertus théologiques et morales; il les a portées à un degré héroïque. Son action fut prodigieuse. Il a fondé deux familles religieuses: la Congrégation de Jésus et de Marie, appelée Congrégation des Eudistes, et l'Institut de Notre-Dame de Charité, dont sont sortis les bons pasteurs, aujourd'hui répandus dans les cinq parties du monde; il y adjoignit une sorte de Tiers-Ordre, dit du Sacré-Cœur. Il partage avec Monsieur Olier et saint Vincent de Paul l'honneur d'avoir établi en France les premiers grands séminaires. Il est le père, le docteur et le propagateur de la dévotion aux saints Coeurs de Jésus et de Marie. Il a composé des offices en leur honneur, des offices d'une beauté toute séraphique, des offices « de feu » et fait célébrer la fête du Cœur admirable de la sainte Vierge dès 1643 dans ses maisons de Caen, et celle du Cœur Sacré du divin Maître dès 1670 en sa chapelle de Rennes. Il est auteur de nombreux écrits ascétiques qui embrassent tous les aspects de la vie chrétienne, religieuse et sacerdotale.

SA VIE APOSTOLIQUE

Voilà large matière à études et à louanges. Mais il semble que sa note caractéristique soit l'esprit d'apostolat. À ses yeux, pour le prêtre c'est la grosse affaire: « Sachez, mon frère, dit-il, que quand vous entrez dans l'état du sacerdoce, votre salut doit être tout fait et que vous devez entrer pour travailler au salut des autres, Car l'affaire de notre salut doit être en si bon état, et vous devez être si saint que vous soyez capable avec la grâce de Dieu de sauver et de sanctifier les autres. »

C'est bien là le programme et le résumé de sa vie. «Après l'incomparable Xavier, dit le P. Hérambourg, il n'est peut-être personne, du moins au XVIIe siècle, qui ait porté plus le zèle pour la gloire de Dieu et le salut des âmes. » Ce sentiment est si fort et si profond dans son cœur, qu'il a arraché ce beau cri, digne des plus héroïques serviteurs de Dieu: « Je me sens une si forte inclination de travailler au salut des âmes que je renoncerais volontiers à toute la gloire du paradis des anges et des saints et même de la Très Sainte Vierge, et que je quitterais sans peine le ciel, si j'y étais, pour revenir sur la terre afin d'aider au salut d'une pauvre âme."

Quand il parle de l'apostolat, il ne se contient plus, il est soulevé au-dessus de lui-même, il chante avec enthousiasme, Il devient lyrique: « Travailler à sauver les âmes, est plus beau que de remporter des victoires, de conquérir des royaumes, de fonder des empires, plus beau que pratiquer les plus austères mortifications, que de vêtir de nourrir tous les pauvres de la terre, que de vaquer aux plus sublimes oraisons, que d'accomplir des miracles, créer des mondes et de ressusciter les morts, que d'endurer le martyre. C'est l'œuvre des œuvres. Les saints n'eurent rien de plus à cœur. L'Église s'y dévoue. Les

SAINT JEAN EUDES

anges y courent avec une impétueuse ardeur. La Vierge Marie y consacre sa vie et son Fils. Et le Verbe de Dieu, pour cette délivrance, est venu, a peiné, a souffert et est mort. Et les trois divines personnes, dans leurs créations et leurs œuvres, ne poursuivent jamais d'autre but. » Il faut lire ces pages de notre Saint. On n'en écrit jamais de plus brûlantes et de plus frémissantes. Il semble que sous ces lettres refroidies vit et palpite encore la grande âme qui les dicta.

Et surtout elles le peignent: c'est lui. Nous avons là l'âme de son âme et le secret de toute sa vie. S'il est entré à l'Oratoire, c'est parce qu'il croyait y trouver la plénitude de l'esprit apostolique, de l'esprit du Verbe incarné: « la parole éternelle et le premier de tous les prédicateurs ». S'il en sortit, c'est qu'il estima que l'Oratoire avait oublié le but suprême de son institution: réformer les prêtres, qui sont par état les sauveurs des peuples, les envoyés de Dieu pour former son fils Jésus dans les cœurs, des dieux chargés de produire des dieux et les rendre plus capables et plus dignes de remplir leur sublime et divine mission.

Quelle fin attribue-t-il à sa famille religieuse? « Je supplie, s'écrie-t-il à la fin de ses Constitutions, très humblement et les genoux en terre, tous les enfants de la Congrégation, mes très chers et très aimés Frères, de bien considérer ce que je vais dire: c'est que la Congrégation est établie dans l'Église pour lui donner des ministres dignes des saints autels, des ouvriers évangéliques irréprochables, des prêtres vraiment apostoliques, des pasteurs selon le cœur de Dieu, des ecclésiastiques qui soient des images vivantes de sa très éminente sainteté; en un mot, des hommes non plus hommes, mais dieux et pères de dieux. »

Et cela est l'œuvre apostolique par excellence; c'est sauver les sauveurs, diriger les directeurs, enseigner les Docteurs,

SA VIE APOSTOLIQUE 233 -

nourrir les pasteurs, éclairer ceux qui sont la lumière du monde, sanctifier ceux qui sont la sanctification de l'Église, faire dans la hiérarchie ecclésiastique ce que les séraphins et les chérubins font dans le ciel, avoir entre les mains ce que Jésus-Christ a de plus précieux, la plus illustre portion de son troupeau, ce qui lui est plus cher que la prunelle de ses yeux, le cœur de son corps mystique et de sa sainte famille.

Et il n'y a pas de travail qui puisse être mis en parallèle avec celui-là. Tout doit lui être subordonné; « et si, étant en mission, nous apprenions qu'on eût besoin de nous au séminaire nous devrions laisser là la mission et courir comme au feu. »

Et quel est le premier article des Constitutions de son ordre de la Charité? C'est que « sa fin propre et particulière qui distingue cette Congrégation d'avec les autres est d'imiter, autant qu'il est possible, moyennant la divine grâce, la très ardente charité dont le très aimable Cœur de Jésus, fils de Marie mère de Jésus, est embrasé au regard des âmes créées à l'image et semblance de Dieu et rachetées du précieux sang de son Fils, s'employant de tout cœur, par l'exemple d'une sainte vie, par la ferveur des prières, et l'efficace des instructions, à la conversion des filles et femmes qui sont tombées dans le désordre et qui, étant touchées de Dieu, veulent sortir de l'état du péché, pour faire pénitence, sous la conduite des religieuses, et pour apprendre plus facilement les moyens de servir la divine Majesté et de se sauver. »

Et il tient si fort à ce zèle pour les âmes que quand même une fille aurait toute sorte de beaux talents et de charmantes qualités pour servir dans la communauté, si elle n'a point d'amour pour l'observance du quatrième vœu, le dévouement aux pécheresses, il défend de la recevoir. Elle se perdrait et perdrait tout. Il n'y a rien de plus pernicieux aux communautés que d'accepter des sujets qui n'ont point l'esprit de leur vocation.

Il a écrit de nombreux ouvrages de piété: c'est toujours l'apôtre que l'on y rencontre puissant et irrésistible. Un saint religieux dira du Contrat de l'homme avec Dieu: « Il y a tel chapitre qui me semble tout étincelant de feux et de flammes pénétrantes jusqu'à l'intime du cœur, pour nous embraser à aimer Dieu de toutes nos forces, très fidèlement, liés cordialement et très constamment par des preuves de la sainte Écriture si fortes qu'aucun bon esprit n'y saurait résister: il faut se rendre tout à fait à notre amant infini, éternellement aimable. »

Et de ses méditations perdues, le P. Hérabourg a écrit: « On y lit le langage du ciel, et la simple lecture qu'on en fait détache presque imperceptiblement le cœur des choses de la terre pour l'attacher au souverain Bien. »

«Le zèle du salut et de la perfection des âmes le dévorait, continue le même auteur... Il ne pouvait passer de moment sans faire quelque chose à la gloire de son maître, et on sait que, marchant dans les rues de Paris pendant qu'il y demeura, il s'appliquait à la composition des hymnes de l'office du saint Cœur de Notre-Seigneur et de celui de sa très sainte Mère. C'est ainsi qu'il a dignement rempli ses jours. C'est ce qui le fera vivre éternellement dans l'esprit des bons chrétiens. Sa mémoire sera en bénédiction, sa gloire s'augmentera de jour en jour. La lecture de ses livres, qui procurent la conversion et l'avancement de tant d'âmes dans les voies de la grâce, sera pour lui un nouveau triomphe. »

Et quand il chante avec tant d'ardeur les saints Cœurs de Jésus et de Marie, quand il travaille si activement à la diffusion de leur culte, sans doute c'est à cause de leur beauté et de leur amour, mais aussi parce qu'ils sont l'origine du vrai zèle pour le salut des âmes perdues.

«Car encore que le divin Cœur de Jésus, qui ne fait qu'un avec celui de sa très sainte Mère, soit la source de tous les bons desseins, de tous les saints instituts et de tous les ouvrages de piété, néanmoins il l'est plus spécialement de ceux qui regardent directement le salut des âmes pécheresses, comme étant la chose du monde qu'il chérit et qu'il désire davantage puisque ce très bénin Sauveur nous assure qu'il est venu en ce monde, non pour les justes mais pour les pécheurs. »

Tout ce que le P. Eudes fait, dit, écrit, institue n'a qu'un but: sauver les âmes. Pour ce travail divin il voulait mobiliser tous les êtres, toutes les choses, toutes les puissances de la terre et du ciel.

Au début de la Fronde, il s'adresse à la reine Anne pour une sainte croisade contre ce débordement d'iniquité qui fait un étrange ravage dans la France: « C'est une chose déplorable, Madame, et à larmes de sang, de voir périr tant d'âmes et que ce mal va toujours croissant, et que si peu de personnes s'en mettent en peine. Lorsqu'il s'agit de quelque intérêt temporel des princes et des rois de ce monde, que ne fait-on point? Mais les intérêts du Souverain Monarque sont abandonnés. Nous nous tuons dans nos missions à force de crier contre quantité de désordres qui sont dans la France..., et Dieu nous fait grâce de remédier à quelques-uns. Mais je suis certain, Madame, que si Votre Majesté voulait employer le pouvoir que Dieu lui a donné, elle pourrait plus faire elle seule, pour la destruction de la tyrannie du diable et pour l'établissement du règne de Jésus-Christ, que tous les missionnaires et prédicateurs ensemble. »

Il demande au pouvoir chrétien de se souvenir de son devoir. Il est fait pour aider l'homme, dit saint Thomas, sa fin dernière comme sa fin prochaine. Sa fin est la béatitude céleste. Tout doit donc être ordonné dans la vie par le chef de l'État de la manière qui convient le mieux pour que la multitude obtienne le paradis. Il pourra commander tout ce qui peut y conduire, et interdire, dans la mesure du possible, tout ce qui y serait contraire.

Le P. Eudes essaiera d'enrôler les femmes du monde dans le même mouvement d'apostolat. Il écrit aux Dames de Rouen: « Quel bonheur pour vous d'être choisies de Dieu, pour être associées avec lui dans la plus grande de ses œuvres, qui est l'œuvre de la rédemption des âmes! Délivrer un homme qui est captif selon le corps des mains des barbares est chose grande; mais affranchir une âme de la Servitude de Satan est plus que si on délivrait tous ceux qui sont esclaves corporellement. » Et il leur chante son hymne de guerre comme il l'a chanté à ses prêtres, comme il l'a chanté à ses religieuses.

Il établit des confréries des Saints-Coeurs. Aux associées il sait souffler son esprit de conquête. Elles marchent avec ardeur et, aux heures mauvaises de la Revolution, elles ont accompli de véritables merveilles.

Il a besoin de collaborateurs supplémentaires. Il fait appel aux prêtres de bonne volonté. Il les réunit, les éclaire, les échauffe, les soulève et en fait de vaillants lutteurs comme lui, avides de se donner et de se dépenser. En se répandent de-ci de-là, et tous font des fruits qui ne se peuvent exprimer.

Et quand notre infatigable apôtre, devant des moissons jaunissantes, sent que les ouvriers nécessaires lui manquent pour les cueillir, et sait par ailleurs qu'à Paris de nombreux clercs, les intellectuels de ce temps-là, passent leurs jours dans des stériles spéculations et de vaines subtilités, il ne peut retenir un de ces cris de douleur où se peint sa grande âme: « Que font à Paris tant de docteurs et tant de bacheliers pendant que les âmes périssent par milliers, faute de personnes qui leur tendent la main pour les retirer de la perdition et les préserver du feu éternel? Certainement, si je me croyais, je m'en irais à Paris crier dans la Sorbonne et les autres collèges: Au feu! Au feu de l'enfer qui embrase tout l'univers! Venez, messieurs les docteurs; venez, messieurs les bacheliers; venez, messieurs les abbés: venez, messieurs les ecclésiastiques, nous aider à l'éteindre! »

237 -

Il ne voudrait laisser aucune âme en dehors de la grâce. Son zèle déborde les frontières de la France; il embrasse la Chine, tout l'univers; et pour coopérer au grand œuvre de leur salut, il sacrifierait volontiers, moyennant le secours divin, cent mille vies s'il les avait; et il adresse à l'un de ses Frères en religion, qui va partir pour ces rivages lointains, ce beau Proficiscere tout frémissant de ses ardeurs évangéliques: « Allez au nom de la sainte Trinité pour la faire connaître et adorer. Allez au nom de Jésus-Christ pour appliquer aux âmes le fruit de son précieux sang. Allez sous la protection et la sauvegarde de sa divine Mère, sous la conduite du bienheureux saint Joseph, de saint Gabriel, etc., etc. Allez, au nom et de la part de notre petite Congrégation... ».

L'âme apostolique de Jean Eudes s'est manifestée dans toutes ses œuvres et surtout dans la formation d'ouvriers irréprochables pour la vigne du Seigneur. Elle s'est révélée avec un éclat particulier dans ses très nombreuses missions. C'est là sûrement un des traits distinctifs de sa physionomie, c'est le premier titre que lui donne le décret de tuto.

Missionnaire apostolique, sur ce point comme sur les autres, il reproduira Jésus-Christ: il aura passé sa vie à former des apôtres et à évangéliser les foules.

Il donne son premier sermon en 1623, à l'âge de 21 ans, étant simple minoré. Et cet essai est un coup de maître,

SAINT JEAN EUDES

Il prêchait encore à Saint-Pierre de Caen, durant l'été de 1678, en faveur de l'hôpital général que l'on était en train de bâtir. Pendant plus de cinquante ans il va sans trêve ni repos à la recherche des brebis égarées de la maison d'Israël. Il parcourt la Normandie dans tous les sens. Il porte la parole de Dieu dans huit autres provinces de notre vieille France, Bretagne, Ile-de-France, Bourgogne, Champagne, etc.... dans quatorze diocèses au moins. Il a de la prédilection pour les paroisses de campagne. Il rechercherait volontiers les plus ignorantes et les plus dépravées. Mais, comme il le dit, la mission étant très nécessaire et très utile partout, il la fait aux villes comme aux champs. On le voit à Caen, à Lisieux, à Pont-l'Évêque, à Saint-Lô, à Coutances, à Évreux, à Rouen, à Autun, à Châlons, à Versailles, etc. Paris même l'entendit à plusieurs reprises, aux Quinze-Vingts, à Saint-Sulpice, à Saint-Germain-des-Prés.

Il s'est adressé à tous les genres d'auditoires: aux paysans, aux ouvriers et artisans, aux domestiques, aux bourgeois, aux soldats, aux nobles, aux magistrats, aux ecclésiastiques, aux moines. Il a prêché devant la Cour à Versailles et à Saint-Germain-en-Laye. Il avait été choisi comme étant l'homme du royaume le plus en état de donner avec fruit les exercices du Jubilé dans ce milieu raffiné. Et on ne doutait pas que, même après Bossuet, le grand missionnaire y fit bonne figure.

Les voyages étaient longs en ce temps-là. Le feu qui consume notre saint missionnaire est si ardent qu'il ne peut se contenir jusqu'au terme, et tout le long du chemin il prêche; il prêche tous les braves gens qu'il rencontre; il prêche les patrons et les domestiques des auberges où il descend. Il a sa petite clochette. Il la sonne en traversant les villages et, de quelque endroit élevé, il leur annonce les vérités du salut.

Tous avaient besoin de les rapprendre. Le monde d'alors ne ressemblait pas au monde d'aujourd'hui. Les catholiques remplissaient les principales obligations de la religion chrétienne: ils allaient à la messe le dimanche; ils se confessaient chaque année; ils communiaient à Pâques; ils respectaient les jours d'abstinence. Mais il semble que pour beaucoup ces saintes pratiques étaient devenues de simples formalités. On en observait la lettre, on en négligeait l'esprit: elles étaient vidées de leur âme.

L'ignorance religieuse était profonde. D'innombrables superstitions régnaient. La prière du matin et du soir était abandonnée. Les choses de Dieu étaient traitées avec un extrême dédain. Le laisser-aller était général. Le clergé donnait lui-même l'exemple de toutes les négligences, se raillant à l'occasion des dévotions dites superflues. Il s'était affadi, matérialisé. Très occupé à cultiver ses biens, il n'avait pas le temps de cultiver les âmes. De ce détachement des temples et du culte le P. Eudes nous fait le plus sombre tableau:

SAINT JEAN EUDES

« Le culte, en beaucoup d'endroits, est célébré avec tant d'immodestie, de précipitation et d'irrévérence, pour ne pas dire d'impiété, qu'on pourrait croire que les officiers du sanctuaire sont gagés non pour louer Dieu, mais pour se moquer de lui; non pour l'honorer, mais pour le déshonorer et le faire déshonorer aux autres. »

Le protestantisme a exercé ses ravages dans les âmes, et un trop grand nombre se sont laissés séduire par les nouvelles doctrines. Le libertinage de l'esprit en a conduit certains jusqu'à l'athéisme.

Privée de ses appuis, la morale a croulé. Ce sont les éternelles misères humaines; c'est la mise en train des sept péchés capitaux; c'est la vilaine et hideuse floraison de la triple concupiscence. On signale tout particulièrement des blasphèmes, des sacrilèges, des enchantements, des haines, des duels, des homicides secrets, des empoisonnements d'hommes et d'animaux, des parjures devant les juges, des injustices, des fraudes, toutes les formes de la luxure, même les plus contraires à la nature.

Un monde assujéti à de telles habitudes ne pouvait être porté à goûter les missions. Il devait fatalement leur faire opposition. Les contradictions se déchaînèrent. Il en vint des autres Ordres religieux, des dignitaires ecclésiastiques, des curés, des pêcheurs qui allaient être troublés dans la satisfaction de leurs passions, des personnes du monde même les plus dévouées aux intérêts de Dieu.

Et que ne dit-on pas des missionnaires? Ce sont des gens fort riches et fort austères, qui refusent l'absolution pour un rien et chargent de pénitences insupportables; ce sont des gens ignorants, timides, superstitieux, qui débitent des fables et ne s'appliquent qu'à l'extérieur de la religion, négligeant le fonds et l'essentiel, ce sont des gens intéressés qui, sous de beaux préceptes, soutirent l'argent des populations crédules pour en bâtir des églises et des séminaires.

SA VIE APOSTOLIQUE

Ce sont les plus grands hypocrites qui aient paru depuis plusieurs siècles. Ce sont des novateurs, des séditeux en rupture de ban avec l'autorité civile et l'autorité religieuse.

Des curés partent en voyage plutôt que de subir les missionnaires, même quand ils sont envoyés par l'évêque. Dans certaines paroisses personne ne veut les recevoir. On les tourne en dérision. Le Père Eudes est obligé de prendre sa clochette et de s'en aller par les places publiques et jusques dans les marchés recruter un auditoire.

La vertu du Saint vient à bout de tous les obstacles. La mission se donne. Elle est défrayée souvent par le seigneur du lieu. L'autorité comprenait qu'elle avait charge d'âmes. Elle dure un mois, deux mois, trois mois à Rennes en 1669, l'Octave de Pâques. C'est le principe du Père: une mission, pour être féconde, doit être longue: « Afin qu'une mission fasse quelques changements dans les cœurs et qu'elle détruise les vices et les mauvaises coutumes, il est nécessaire qu'elle dure pour le moins sept à huit semaines. Nous n'en faisons point dans les plus petites paroisses de la campagne qui ne dure six semaines; autrement on plâtre le mal, mais on ne le guérit pas; on rompt les mauvaises habitudes, mais on ne les déracine pas, on fait du bruit, mais peu de fruit. »

Pendant la mission aucune cérémonie extraordinaire et à grand tapage.

On prie beaucoup, et le Père Eudes attache une importance extrême à rétablir l'habitude des prières du matin et du soir. C'est un article du règlement des Missions.

On prêche souvent, jusqu'à trois fois par jour, et sous des formes différentes.

Il y avait le catéchisme. Le P. Eudes avait fait un Manuel d'Instruction religieuse, un des premiers qui ait été composé sous forme de demandes et de réponses. Il savait le commenter avec un art extrême, charmer et retenir l'attention de son turbulent petit auditoire. Il avait formé des catéchistes à son image. Cet enseignement simple était spécialement destiné aux enfants. On comptait bien que les grandes personnes arriveraient à s'y intéresser. C'est ce qui advint. Il eut le plus grand succès et fit un bien prodigieux.

Il avait aussi l'usage des conférences particulières: pour les missionnaires, afin d'entretenir en eux le feu sacré; pour les prêtres, afin de leur rappeler la sublimité de leur vocation et la grandeur de leurs devoirs; pour les gentilshommes et les seigneurs de paroisse, afin qu'il leur soit remontré « comme il doivent employer leur exemple et leur autorité, pour empêcher, autant qu'ils peuvent, parmi leurs vassaux, tout ce qui est contraire à l'honneur de Dieu et procurer l'avancement de sa gloire en ce qui dépend d'eux; pour les dames et mères de famille, afin qu'elles soient ramenées à observer exactement tous leurs devoirs envers leurs maris, leurs enfants et leurs serviteurs, à fuir la lecture des romans à la mode, toute nudité de la gorge ou du sein; pour les artisans, afin de les détourner de la détestable société du compagnonnage. Il faut reconnaître que l'idée de ces conférences spéciales était lumineuse, délicate et haute, et ne pouvait manquer d'être féconde.

Personne n'était oublié, ni les malheureux jetés en prison ni les malades dans les hôpitaux ou les maisons particulières, ni les religieuses dans leurs monastères. Tous étaient visités, enseignés, confessés, communies, mis en possession des grâces et des bénédictions divines.

Enfin un sermon général était adressé à la foule réunie, et il devait rouler sur quelqueune des grandes vérités dogmatiques ou morales de notre foi. Le P. Eudes avait pris soin de préciser dans ses Constitutions les matières à traiter.

SA VIE APOSTOLIQUE

Le troisième et dernier travail de la mission, le principal, le plus utile, le plus important, c'est la confession, parce que c'est là surtout que le prêtre est Jésus-Christ, c'est là surtout qu'il fait les fonctions de Jésus-Christ, qu'il arrache les âmes à Satan et qu'il les rend à Dieu. Le P. Eudes y aurait volontiers passé les journées entières, sans boire et sans manger, si la prudence l'avait pu souffrir. C'est là qu'il employait toutes ses heures libres jusque bien avant dans la nuit.

Cinq grandes cérémonies terminaient chaque mission:

La première communion solennelle des enfants; et le bon Père savait l'envelopper de tant de piété, trouver, pour exhorter les petits, des accents si pathétiques et si touchants, qu'ils fondaient en larmes et toute l'église avec eux et emportaient de cette cérémonie un ineffaçable souvenir qui embaumait leur vie tout entière;

Le pèlerinage, qui avait pour but d'apprendre au peuple à sanctifier ces sortes d'exercices de piété, où d'ordinaire il se commettait un grand nombre de péchés. Et naturellement, sous la conduite de notre Saint, tout se passait avec un recueillement monastique, et on se séparait sous cette pensée que la vie n'est qu'un pèlerinage très court qui pour tous sera vite fini.

Le service pour les défunts, afin d'illustrer cette vérité, en évoquant les disparus; les disparus depuis des années, les disparus d'hier que nous rejoindrons demain;

La procession générale, formée de 10, 15, 20 paroisses, avec ses adieux, ses félicitations aux âmes fidèles, ses suprêmes appels, ses menaces aux cœurs jusque-là rebelles, ses vivats, ses acclamations à Jésus-Eucharistie, exposé sur un splendide reposoir au milieu de la place

publique, souvent même à la main du missionnaire et semblant parler par sa bouche;

Et le fameux feu de joie dans lequel le prédicateur jetait successivement livres, tableaux, images obscènes, en les nommant à haute voix et en criant anathème à leurs auteurs et à ceux qui, en ayant de semblables, refusaient de s'en dessaisir. Et quand un orateur comme le P. Eudes, avec l'âme que nous lui connaissons, l'accent qu'il est facile de soupçonner, apostrophant les assistants, leur criait d'une voix véhémence: « Ainsi seront jetés au feu tous les jureurs, tous les blasphémateurs, tous les vindicatifs, tous les impudiques, tous ceux qui n'ont pas voulu profiter de la mission! À vous de choisir: ou la conversion, ou pour jamais les flammes de l'enfer », on conçoit que la foule fût profondément impressionnée, que les pécheurs obstinés fussent bouleversés, terrifiés, et, comme le dit le P. Martine, que souvent de cette cérémonie on ait vu arriver des effets extraordinaires.

Les missions du P. Eudes eurent un succès prodigieux. Les foules affluent. Elles accourent de sept ou huit lieues à la ronde. Rien ne les arrête, ni la rigueur des saisons, ni l'incommodité des routes, ni la longueur du chemin. Le travail cesse; les boutiques se ferment; les serviteurs et les servantes achètent à prix d'argent de leurs maîtres indévots la permission d'aller aux exercices, ou bien louent d'autres personnes pour les remplacer. A certains jours, il y a, pour entendre les envoyés de Dieu, dix mille, quinze mille, vingt mille, trente mille et même quarante mille hommes et femmes. Les églises les plus vastes ne peuvent contenir ces multitudes. Il faut sortir sur la place publique, s'établir dans les champs, sur les collines. La voix puissante du missionnaire réussit à parvenir jusqu'aux derniers rangs. Tous s'en étonnent, et avec raison.

Elle remue et soulève ces masses avec une force irrésistible.

SA VIE APOSTOLIQUE

On les voit maintes fois éclater en sanglots. On les voit, après un saisissant tableau des châtements divins, tomber à genoux d'un même mouvement et crier éperdument: « Miséricorde, mon Dieu! Miséricorde! » ou bien se dresser dans un saint enthousiasme et redire avec amour: Vive Jésus! Vive Jésus! La reine elle-même, présente, avait suivi l'élan de la foule et, tout en larmes, mêlé sa voix à la voix de ses sujets.

Mais le P. Eudes n'était pas de ces orateurs qui excitent les émotions passagères et qui font dire aux belles dames: « Il a parlé divinement, ma chère. » Et puis, après on ne songe plus au sermon et on passe à d'autres exercices toujours aussi futiles.

Lui, il secoue, renverse les âmes, il y provoque la haine l'horreur du mal, le remords, les saintes frayeurs, le soin de trouver les pardons divins. Aussi les confessionnaires sont assiégés. Ils sont quinze, vingt prêtres; il en faudrait cinquante, il en faudrait cent, dit M. de Renty. Ils ont beau prendre sur les nuits pour continuer le pieux travail; cela ne suffit pas. « Il fallait attendre quelquefois, dit le même témoin, deux, trois et quatre jours à pour se confesser, et au bout de quatre semaines, quantité ne l'ont pu. »

Les effets sont admirables: la rénovation de la vie chrétienne est complète.

Les athées et les libertins abjurent leurs erreurs; les huguenots reviennent à l'église; les sorciers abandonnent leurs infâmes pratiques; les plus grands pécheurs se convertissent; les cabaleurs violemment opposés à ces pieux exercices se frappent la poitrine et demandent pardon au ciel et à la terre d'avoir voulu mettre obstacle à un si grand bien.

Les blasphèmes se taisent; le trafic du dimanche est supprimé; les duels cessent, une ligue est organisée pour les empêcher de renaître; les haines s'apaisent; les réconciliations de familles cruellement divisées depuis de longues années s'accomplissent; les fraudes et les injustices se réparent; les restitutions se font; de grosses sommes sont rendues; les procès, les différends sont arrangés et terminés; les liaisons coupables se brisent; les mauvais livres sont livrés et détruits; les abus de pouvoirs diminuent; la police est mieux gardée; les édits sont plus exactement observés. Le mal est vaincu; le bien triomphe, il reflurit avec magnificence. C'est un nouveau printemps pour l'Église de France. Elle a vécu longtemps de cette renaissance.

En vérité Jean Eudes est bien l'émule des François Régis et des Vincent Ferrier.

Mais quel était le secret de son emprise sur les âmes? Par quels moyens exerçait-il sur elles une action si puissante?

D'abord par sa parole. Malheureusement nous n'avons de lui aucun sermon. Il n'aimait pas les discours complètement écrits et appris par cœur et mot à mot, estimant que c'était de grand travail et de peu de fruit, parce que quand l'esprit est ainsi lié aux paroles, il perd sa liberté, sa ferveur se diminue, et il ne parle pas avec la vigueur et la véhémence avec laquelle il fait éclater son zèle quand il n'est attaché qu'aux choses, pourvu d'ailleurs qu'elles soient bien conçues et digérées et qu'il les possède parfaitement. Il avait cependant trois volumes de sermons dont le P. Hérabourg a dit: « Le style en paraît simple, mais pourtant il est fort et nerveux, appuyant toujours les choses qu'il avance sur de solides preuves de l'Écriture et des Pères. C'est un arsenal où l'on trouve des armes toutes propres pour combattre le vice et faire triompher la vertu. » Ces trois volumes sont perdus. Et alors nous n'avons, pour apprécier l'orateur, que l'histoire et ses écrits, où sûrement se rencontrent des passages de ses discours, et en particulier son Prédicateur apostolique, fruit d'une expérience de plus de cinquante-cinq ans durant lesquels Dieu lui a fait la grâce d'annoncer sa divine parole dans une grande quantité de missions, avec d'abondantes bénédictions et des fruits extraordinaires. Et n'est-on pas en droit de dire que l'orateur s'est peint dans le Prédicateur apostolique comme le saint dans le Royaume de Jésus?

Il a dit, avec cette hauteur de pensée qui le caractérise, que le prédicateur est la bouche de Jésus-Christ et qu'il fait parler Dieu. Vous ne trouverez donc pas sur ses lèvres de citations de Platon, d'Aristote, de Sénèque, de Plutarque, de traits de mathématique, de médecine, de jurisprudence, d'antiquités païennes, de romans à la mode. Il ne connaît et ne veut connaître que la parole de Dieu. Son unique livre de chevet est la sainte Écriture avec ses commentateurs autorisés, les exégètes comme Cornille de La Pierre, les Conciles, les Pères, les pieux auteurs, comme Louis de Grenade et de Saint-Jure, les saints par leur vie, et la Somme de saint Thomas, la table de laquelle fournit toutes les choses dont on a besoin. Aussi il la possède, cette divine Écriture. Ses écrits en sont pleins. Elle fait la beauté de ses offices. Elle donne à ses Règles de Jésus et de Marie un caractère unique. Il y a là une mosaïque admirable de textes sacrés sur les devoirs et les vertus de la vie chrétienne et sacerdotale qui a étonné Rome elle-même.

Il ne traitera jamais de sujets mi-profanes mi-religieux, de questions subtiles, relevées et difficiles, qui sont plus propres pour contenter la curiosité humaine que pour édifier les âmes et toucher les cœurs. Il n'annoncera que les très simples et très solides vérités de la doctrine évangélique, toujours les mêmes, mais jamais assez connues, assez méditées.

S'il parle de vertus et de vices, ce ne sera jamais au simple 248-

SAINT JEAN EUDES

point de vue de l'honnêteté naturelle. Il se souviendra que le baptême a passé sur ces âmes qui l'entendent, qu'il en fait un autre peuple, un peuple de dieux et que de ce chef elles ont contracté tout un ordre d'obligations infiniment plus élevées. Et quand il retracera le programme des instructions à donner pendant les missions, un des premiers sujets indiqués sera: du Baptême, de la profession qu'on y a faite et des obligations qui la suivent. Et il estimait que « c'était une chose déplorable à larmes de sang de voir que d'un si grand nombre d'hommes dont la terre est peuplée, qui ont été baptisés et par conséquent admis au rang des enfants de Dieu, des membres de Jésus-Christ et des temples vivants du Saint-Esprit et obligés à mener une vie conforme à ces divines qualités, il y en a néanmoins beaucoup plus qui vivent en bêtes, en païens et même en démons, qu'il n'y en a qui se comportent en véritables chrétiens. Et une des principales raisons, c'est que la plus grande partie de ces mêmes chrétiens ne savent pas ce que c'est que d'avoir été baptisés. »

La parole du P. Eudes est tout apostolique, toute surnaturelle, toute divine: elle est forte aussi, véhémence, pleine de mouvement, toute de feu. C'était le programme que la très sainte Vierge, par un intermédiaire inconnu, avait tracé à notre Saint:

« Dites à votre Frère de ma part que, lorsqu'il monte en chaire, il faut qu'il porte avec lui les canons, les mousquets et les autres armes puissantes et terribles de la parole de Dieu, pour combattre le péché en général, et pour le foudroyer et écraser dans les âmes. Mais lorsqu'il va parler et communiquer en particulier avec quelque pécheur pour le convertir, il doit mener avec lui la douceur, la bénignité, la patience et la charité. » C'est bien ainsi que l'ont vu ses contemporains: « Il paraissait un lion en chaire, écrit une religieuse, mais au confessionnal c'était un agneau. »

SA VIE APOSTOLIQUE 249 -

« Ses sermons, disait de son côté M. de Renty, sont des foudres qui ne donnent point de repos, aux consciences qu'elles ne se soient ouvertes de leurs péchés recelés, en sorte que les confesseurs travaillent plus à consoler qu'à émouvoir. »

Il sait l'importance capitale de la crainte. Il sait qu'elle est le commencement nécessaire de la sagesse. Il voit en face de lui des âmes coupables; il veut les secouer, les terrifier pour les arracher au joug maudit de leurs passions. C'est d'ailleurs le mouvement logique spontané de son âme. Le mal ne peut que le mettre hors de lui; il outrage Dieu et perd ses frères.

Faut-il donner un ou deux exemples? Il s'agit de la tenue dans les églises. Il parle tout d'abord aux hommes: « Oui, les anges et les archanges, les puissances et les dominations, les chérubins et les séraphins plus purs que le soleil, qui n'ont jamais offensé Dieu et qui ne lui ont jamais rendu que tout honneur et toute obéissance, tremblent néanmoins devant sa force; et toi, criminel de mille crimes, qui es tout pourri des ordures de tes vices et qui mérites mille enfers, tu entres dans le sanctuaire du Dieu vivant la tête levée, les yeux égarés et sans aucune crainte? Tu te présentes devant le tribunal formidable de ton juge, par les mains duquel ton âme passera bientôt, et qui la fera rendre compte jusques à une parole oiseuse, avec aussi peu de retenue que s'il n'était rien! Tu es si osé que de paraître devant Dieu les mains toutes sanglantes du sang de son Fils unique et bien-aimé, que tu as crucifié et massacré autant de fois que tu l'as offensé mortellement, et tu ne pâlis point, tu ne rougis point, tu ne trembles point, mais tu causes, tu ris, tu prends des postures indécentes et même insolentes comme si tu venais là exprès afin de l'outrager et d'allumer le feu de sa colère contre toi! Il te voit, il te considère, il te souffre pour un temps; il t'attend à pénitence.

SAINT JEAN EUDES

Mais si tu méprises les richesses de sa bonté... sache que tu fais un amas de colère, de châtiments et de malédiction qui tout à coup viendront à fondre sur ta tête.»

Et passant aux femmes, il les apostrophe avec une énergie peut-être plus grande encore: « Et les femmes, lesquelles... doivent être en tout lieu et en tout temps ornées d'une telle pudeur, simplicité et modestie, que leur sainte conversation et l'exemple de leurs vertus et de leur piété soit capable de convertir les cœurs des hommes les plus endurcis,... en quel équipage viennent-elles dans les lieux saints? Quels y sont leurs comportements? Au lieu d'être voilées, comme Dieu le leur ordonne par saint Paul, elles s'y présentent, voire même elles entrent souvent dans le sanctuaire, comme si elles venaient à un bal et à une danse, avec des habits pompeux, des cheveux frisés, crépelés, annelés, avec la gorge et le sein découverts. Est-ce vouloir plaire à Dieu cela, ou au monde qui est son ennemi et par conséquent au prince du monde qui est Satan? Est-ce porter les marques d'une chrétienne ou d'une païenne? Est-ce être parée des livrées de Jésus-Christ, ou des livrées de l'Antéchrist? Est-ce porter l'image de la pureté, modestie et humilité de la plus noble de toutes les femmes, qui est la Reine du ciel, ou le portrait de la vanité et impiété de l'infâme Jézabel, laquelle, par un juste jugement de Dieu, a été écrasée sous les pieds des chevaux et mangée par les chiens? Dirait-on pas qu'elles viennent à l'église pour y désavouer publiquement, à la face de Dieu et des anges, les promesses qu'elles ont faites en leur baptême de renoncer aux pompes du diable, et pour protester hautement que, encore qu'elles confessent Jésus-Christ de bouche, elles le renient néanmoins par leurs œuvres pour adhérer à son ennemi? O effronterie! O impudence insupportable! Voir des chrétiennes paraître devant Jésus-Christ couronné d'épines, déchiré à coups de fouet, démembré, crucifié, tout couvert de plaies et de sang, revêtues des pompes de Satan, armées de pied en cap de vanité, de mondanité, d'afféterie, de mille flèches empoisonnées pour faire la guerre à la chasteté et pour tuer les âmes pour lesquelles il est mort, ou pour mieux dire, armées de fouets, d'épines et de clous, pour flageller, tourmenter et crucifier derechef celui qu'elles adorent en apparence comme leur Dieu et qu'elles renient en effet! Que vous a-t-il fait, misérables, ce très aimable Sauveur, pour que vous le traitiez si indignement dans sa propre maison? »

On pourrait dans les OEuvres du P. Eudes trouver vingt passages de cette ardente et vibrante allure, sur le faux honneur, sur le péché, sur le monde, sur la dignité du baptisé, sur ses graves obligations et responsabilités, sur la façon de servir la messe, sur la sublimité du sacerdoce et de tous ses ministères, sur le zèle, sur la douleur.

C'est l'énergie d'un saint Jean Chrysostome dénonçant les désordres de Constantinople, des prophètes d'Israël relevant les criminelles prévarications du peuple, de Jésus-Christ lui-même flagellant les vices et l'hypocrisie des Scribes et des Pharisiens.

Forte par son accent et son mouvement, la parole du P. Eudes l'est encore par sa doctrine. Ne cherchez pas chez lui un christianisme d'accommodement, qui n'ait que des sourires et des baisers et d'inépuisables indulgences pour toutes les erreurs et toutes les faiblesses, et qui ouvre à peu près indistinctement à tous, après quelques détours, les portes du Paradis. Non, la complaisance et la flatterie pour les désordres du monde l'exaspèrent. Il s'attache aux justes sévérités et condamnations de l'Évangile. Nous n'avons qu'à nous rappeler ses virulentes sorties, citées quelques lignes plus haut. Nous pourrions donner la liste de ceux auxquels, d'après lui, il faut refuser l'absolution; par exemple, parce qu'ils donnent occasion de péché aux autres, ceux qui sont auteurs de divertissements périlleux pour le salut, comme sont les danses, condamnées par les saints Pères; toutes les femmes et filles qui par leurs gorges, leurs épaules et leurs bras découverts, et par le luxe et la pompe de leurs habits, servent d'instruments aux démons pour traîner beaucoup d'âmes en enfer. A raison de quoi saint Jérôme les appelle les amazones et les guerrières du diable, qui font la guerre à la chasteté et qui la tuent en beaucoup de personnes. Ajoutez-y les mères qui permettent à leurs filles de s'enrôler avec ces amazones diaboliques, etc., etc.

Elle résume bien sa pensée, cette formule brève et saisissante: Il ne faut pas imiter « ces prédicateurs à la mode, qui font le chemin du paradis fort large et celui de l'enfer fort étroit, contre la parole expresse de la vérité éternelle ».

Enfin, la parole du Père Eudes est forte par ses saintes libertés, ses évangéliques audaces devant les grands de la terre. Il doit à tous la vérité; tous la recevront. Lui aussi frappe comme un sourd. On rappellera éternellement ses véhémentes apostrophes aux agents subalternes du fisc, ces sangsues, ces mangeurs du peuple avec leurs superbes maisons et leurs dorures, aux archers de la gabelle cassant les cruches des pauvres femmes voisines des côtes de la mer, qui y allaient puiser de l'eau.

Il osa s'attaquer aux courtisans devant Louis XIV: «Ce qui m'étonne, Sire, c'est que pendant que Votre Majesté s'acquitte si parfaitement des devoirs de la religion et qu'elle rend à Dieu avec humilité ses plus profonds hommages, je vois une multitude de vos sujets qui font tout le contraire. » L'historien du P. Eudes ajoute: « Le tonnerre eût éclaté dans le saint lieu, qu'il n'eût pas jeté plus d'épouvante parmi les gentilshommes. Tous, incontinent, de fléchir les genoux, mais pas assez prestement pour que le roi, en tournant la tête, n'en aperçût quelques-uns. De là, chez ceux-ci, une violente indignation contre l'audace du missionnaire, indignation d'ailleurs qu'il leur fallut dissimuler, pour célébrer avec les autres son zèle et son courage.

Notre Saint n'hésita pas davantage à dire tout « nuement » la vérité à la reine et au roi. C'était après l'incendie qui avait consumé une partie du Louvre. Et l'humble religieux de s'écrier devant la cour effrayée de tant d'audace: « Il est permis aux princes de bâtir des palais, mais il leur est bien plus impérieusement commandé par Dieu de soulager leurs sujets, d'avoir compassion de tant de veuves, de tant d'orphelins et de tant de peuples accablés de misère. Il est permis aux princes de prendre quelques honnêtes divertissements, mais y employer tous les jours n'est point le chemin du paradis. Si le feu temporel n'a pas pardonné à la maison royale, le feu éternel ne pardonnera ni à princes ni à princesses s'ils ne vivent en chrétiens et s'ils n'emploient leur autorité pour détruire la tyrannie du diable et du péché et pour établir le règne de Dieu. Je serais criminel si je tenais la vérité captive. Je ne suis qu'un chétif homme et un misérable pécheur, mais dans cette chaire je tiens la place de Dieu; je fais l'office d'ambassadeur de Jésus-Christ pour porter la parole du Roi des rois à une grande reine, et je la supplie de la prendre de cette façon. » Et la reine sut la prendre de cette façon.

« C'est ainsi, ajoute le P. Martine, que le P. Eudes faisait profession de dire la vérité à tout le monde et de reprendre le vice partout où il le trouvait. Quelque besoin qu'il eût de la protection des grands dans tant de fâcheuses affaires qu'on lui suscita, il n'accorda jamais rien à la flatterie, toujours prêt à sacrifier non seulement tous les intérêts humains, mais sa vie même s'il avait été nécessaire pour soutenir la vérité et combattre le vice. »

Nous ne donnerions qu'une idée incomplète de la parole

SAINT JEAN EUDES

du P. Eudes si nous n'ajoutions pas qu'elle était aussi chaude et aussi bonne que forte. C'était le programme qu'il avait tracé et il se fût bien gardé de le négliger sur un point essentiel. Oui, effrayons, mais ne décourageons pas; et après que nous avons jeté la terreur dans les âmes, efforçons-nous, comme les prophètes, de les ouvrir à la confiance et de les conduire à la charité. Il y a dans ses œuvres trop d'actes et de flammes d'amour, trop d'élans d'admiration, pour que ses sermons ne fussent pas également remplis de ces affectueux sentiments. Du reste, l'histoire nous le montre un jour sur une place publique arrachant à ses auditeurs des larmes d'amour après leur avoir dépeint les merveilles de l'Eucharistie, et une autre fois les faisant acclamer avec enthousiasme Jésus-Christ dont il avait dit les divines beautés.

« Il foudroyait les crimes, a dit le P. Hérabourg, mais il avait pitié des pécheurs... On voyait à l'oeil que ce qu'il disait procédait d'un cœur de père qui brûlait d'amour pour ses enfants et dont les entrailles étaient pleines de compassion pour leur misérable état, et de zèle pour leur salut. » Bref, sa parole était telle que les plus grands orateurs du XVIIe siècle disaient, après l'avoir entendu: « C'est ainsi que nous devrions prêcher! »

Par elle, il a remué le monde: il a achevé de le convertir au confessionnal. Là comme ailleurs, il fut incomparable. C'était pour lui l'oeuvre des œuvres, le centre, le but, le tout de la mission. Il y portait surtout deux vertus. D'abord une pitié profonde, un amour vrai et tout surnaturel pour les pauvres pécheurs. Il savait si bien remuer les âmes qu'on n'entendait que soupirs et gémissements sortir des confessionnaux. Mais à cette bonté compatissante il joignait toujours la justice, c'est-à-dire une fermeté inébranlable à sauvegarder les droits de Dieu, la sainteté du sacrement de pénitence, et les intérêts spirituels des âmes.

SA VIE APOSTOLIQUE

Il faut l'entendre dissenter sur ce point. Jamais d'absolution avant que les réparations nécessaires n'aient été faites, les restitutions accomplies, les réconciliations opérées, les scandales supprimés, les relations coupables rompues, les habitudes mauvaises vaincues. Les plus belles promesses ne suffisaient pas: il fallait le fait. On le savait si bien que, dès le début de la mission, tous s'empressaient de rentrer dans l'ordre, dans la crainte d'être privés des grâces de ces saints exercices.

À la prédication, au confessionnal, notre héros joignait la prière. On lui a rendu cet admirable hommage: « Jamais, jamais homme n'agit tant et ne pria tant; jamais personne n'accorda mieux l'action avec la contemplation; jamais prédicateur apostolique n'eut tant de commerce avec les hommes et avec Dieu tout ensemble. »

Et il imposait la prière à ses collaborateurs, même au plus fort du travail, même quand ils étaient débordés; il la demandait aux foules et s'efforçait de leur en faire contracter l'habitude. Il la réclamait des communautés religieuses avec lesquelles il était en relation. Il sommait les anges gardiens, les saints patrons et saintes patronnes des lieux et des personnes d'intercéder auprès de Dieu. Il réquisitionnait, mobilisait le ciel et la terre pour déchaîner la force de la prière dans toute sa puissance.

Avec la prière, la pénitence, les jeûnes, les macérations, les larmes, le sang, les contradictions, les croix. La souffrance ne l'effraie pas; au contraire, elle le remplit d'immenses espérances. Il sait qu'elle porte en elle toutes les grâces et toutes les rédempctions. Il dira: « Plus il y a de croix dans les affaires de Dieu, plus elles sont avantageuses. » Il chantera: « La croix, c'est l'unique trésor de la terre, le souverain bien des enfants de Jésus et de Marie, la source de toute bénédiction, la gloire, la couronne, l'amour et les délices des véritables chrétiens. Ah! que c'est un grand et riche trésor qu'une bonne affliction quand on en fait un saint usage. La grâce des grâces et la force des forces est la multitude des croix que mon très adorable Crucifié m'a données. Je souhaite qu'il en soit loué et glorifié éternellement. »

256-

SAINT JEAN EUDES

Et les faits viennent confirmer le principe: plus il a de peines, et plus il réussit.

Enfin, la grande raison de ses succès est sa sainteté. Elle donne aux autres causes toute leur efficacité; et sa vertu propre est incommensurable.

Tout prêche en lui. Il a dit: « Le prédicateur apostolique est obligé d'être tout voix, à l'imitation du grand saint Jean: Vox clamantis, c'est-à-dire qu'il doit vivre, agir et converser de telle sorte, et son extérieur doit être tellement composé que, soit qu'il soit assis ou debout, on ne voie rien en sa personne, en ses déportements, en sa démarche, en ses yeux, en ses mains, en ses pieds, en ses gestes, en ses habits, et en tout ce qui est en lui, non seulement dans la chaire et l'église, mais dans tous les lieux où il se trouve, qui ne parle et qui ne prêche la piété, la modestie, l'humilité, la simplicité, l'honnêteté et toutes sortes de vertus. »

Il s'est peint dans ces lignes sans y songer. Les foules ne s'y trompent pas. Pour elles il est visible qu'il a vécu, qu'il vit les saintes vérités qu'il prêche avec tant d'ardeur. Dans ses plus véhémentes invectives contre le péché et le monde, et dans ses plus chauds élans vers Jésus, vers Marie, vers la vertu, vers les choses saintes, il n'y a rien de factice, rien d'artificiel: c'est bien lui, tel que la grâce et ses efforts l'ont fait et tel qu'il voudrait faire les autres.

Il a réalisé l'idéal tracé par lui: La prédication évangélique étant une continuation de la prédication du Fils de Dieu, et le prédicateur chrétien tenant sa place et repré-sentant sa personne en cette position, doit l'imiter en ce qui est dit: Commencer par faire ce que l'on doit enseigner, et être puissant en œuvres pour devenir puissant en paroles.

SA VIE APOSTOLIQUE

« C'est pourquoi tous les prédicateurs doivent être des exemplaires de piété et de toutes sortes de vertus, spécialement de l'humilité, de l'obéissance et de la charité. » Et alors leur parole, comme celle de saint Basile, sera un tonnerre, parce que leur vie sera un éclair. On ne pouvait mieux dire.

Et s'il faut caractériser en deux traits la physionomie de notre Saint, je dirai qu'elle est surtout faite de force et de tendresse. Buffon avait raison: Le style c'est l'homme. On a écrit, et le mot me paraît juste: François de Sales est la force sous la douceur, et Jean Eudes la douceur sous la force.

La force, nous enseigne saint Thomas, se manifeste par deux aptitudes: aptitude à entreprendre, aptitude à souffrir.

Nulle vie ne fut plus remplie que la vie de notre saint fondateur et missionnaire. Il pourrait parler, lui aussi, de sa sollicitude de toutes les églises. On se demande comment il a pu mener de front tant de besognes sans que l'une nuise à l'autre. Eh bien! non, il a un tel empire sur lui-même qu'il est tout entier à chaque affaire pendant les heures qui lui sont consacrées. Et comme le dit le P. Martine, « si nombreuses et si variées que fussent ses occupations, il sut si bien les ajuster que ses missions ne nuisirent point à ses projets, ni ses négociations diverses à ses missions ». C'est un bel exemplaire d'énergie.

Jamais homme ne fut plus contredit. Il a rencontré de l'opposition dans tout ce qu'il a fait, dans sa sortie de l'Oratoire, dans l'établissement de sa Congrégation et de ses Charités, dans la fondation de ses séminaires, dans ses missions, dans sa dévotion aux saints Cœurs de Jésus et de Marie. Les attaques, les difficultés lui sont venues de tous côtés: de ses filles, des curés, des moines, des autres Ordres religieux, des chapitres, des grands vicaires de ses évêques, des jansénistes, des saintes gens de ce temps-là, de ses amis, des puissants de la terre, du Roi, de Rome qui ne lui a jamais donné la consolation de voir sa famille religieuse autorisée. La Providence même semble se joindre à ses adversaires, par des deuils en apparence inopportuns. Jamais un instant de découragement. Jamais une plainte. Toujours une belle allégresse. Toujours une inébranlable confiance. Il aurait peur si les croix manquaient. Toujours la tranquillité d'âme, la marche en avant, la persévérance invincible. Toujours l'action de grâces pour la souffrance reçue. Il a un mémorial des bienfaits divins à son égard, et ce mémorial est une longue énumération de ses croix.

SAINT JEAN RUDES

C'était un vaillant. Il affectionnait cette formule. Corde magno et anima volenti. Je le comprends. Elle l'exprime exactement.

Avec la vaillance, la tendresse, toutes les tendresses

Tendresses pour Jésus et sa Mère. Il a des cris qui l'égale aux amants les plus passionnés du Sauveur: « O amour! O amour! Ou mourir ou aimer! ou plutôt mourir et aimer! »

Tendresses pour les âmes: il resterait indéfiniment sur la terre pour les servir. Il abandonnerait le ciel pour accourir à leurs secours et pour travailler à les sauver.

Tendresses pour les pécheurs: elles éclatent dans ses missions et dans l'audacieuse invention de ses charités.

Tendresses pour les malades: son dévouement aux pestiférés d'Argentan et de Caen le couronna d'une auréole qui ne se voila jamais et aida puissamment au succès de sa prédication.

Tendresses pour les pauvres: ce sont ses seigneurs et maîtres, et il entend que sa Congrégation se regarde comme constituée pour les instruire, les assister et les consoler.

Tendresses pour les opprimés: on sait avec quel courage il savait élever la voix pour les défendre.

Tendresses pour les enfants: ils étaient l'objet principal de sa sollicitude et il affectionnait tout particulièrement ceux de ses Pères qui s'entendaient le mieux à les instruire et à les former. Et devant ces boutons de rose, son visage et sa plume, ordinairement si graves, s'éclairaient volontiers d'un sourire.

Ne reconnaissons-nous pas toutes les prédilections du Coeur de Jésus? Et alors ne sommes-nous pas en droit de conclure que le coeur de Jean Eudes c'était bien le coeur du Christ! Ne peut-on pas lui appliquer sa belle comparaison des deux lyres si bien harmonisées, que quand l'une chantait, l'autre aussi, sans avoir besoin d'être frappée, se mettait à chanter? Comme Marie, Jean Eudes aime ce que Jésus aime, haït ce qu'il haït, se réjouit de ce qui le console, s'afflige de ce qui le peine.

Mieux que cela, de Jean Eudes comme de son maître, le Père de Condren, on peut dire qu'il n'est plus qu'une apparence, et que sous cette apparence ce qui se cache, c'est Jésus-Christ. Il a écrit . « Le prêtre, le vrai prêtre est une image vive de Jésus-Christ en ce monde et de Jésus-Christ veillant, priant, prêchant, catéchisant, travaillant, suant, pleurant, allant de ville en ville et de village en village, souffrant, agonisant, mourant et se sacrifiant soi-même pour le salut de toutes les âmes créées à son image et semblance. »

Jean Eudes fut éminemment ce prêtre-là, et jamais n'a été réalisée avec plus de perfection la grande parole: « Le prêtre est un autre Christ. »

L'œuvre des Séminaires

Confiné, ou à peu près, dans le nord-ouest de la France, le rôle de saint Jean Eudes dans l'établissement des grands séminaires fut trop longtemps méconnu. Cependant il est comparable à celui de Monsieur Olier. L'illusion sur ce point risque d'être entretenue par la remarquable Histoire des Séminaires français, que publia, en 1912, M. Degert, professeur à l'Institut catholique de Toulouse, si loin de notre Normandie et des documents utiles pour une mise au point! Les lacunes, Dieu merci! furent vite comblées, en ce qui nous concerne, par le livre de M. le chanoine Bonnenfant, ancien directeur au grand séminaire d'Evreux, sur Les Séminaires normands du XVI<sup>e</sup> au XVIII<sup>e</sup> siècle (1). Du reste, la Vie du V. Jean Eudes, en quatre volumes parus de 1905 à 1908 et composés par le R. P. Boulay, C. J. M. elle fournit tous les renseignements.

Le séminaire de Vaugirard, qui fut remplacé par Saint-Sulpice à la mi-août 1642, date des derniers jours de 1641; et le séminaire des Bons-Enfants, dépendant de Saint-Lazare, fut lancé en février 1642. Ils ont donc précédé d'un an le premier séminaire eudiste, ouvert à Caen le 25 mars 1643 et dont les Lettres-patentes furent délivrées en décembre 1642. Cet écart de minime importance est bien compensé par le fait que saint Jean Eudes a personnellement organisé six grands séminaires; tandis que l'intervention de Monsieur Olier semble avoir été moins directe dans la fondation des cinq maisons sulpiciennes qui eut lieu de son vivant. A la veille de la Révolution, les Eudistes dirigeaient quinze séminaires, exactement le même nombre que Messieurs de Saint-Sulpice; il est vrai que ceux-ci occupaient des centres plus importants et beaucoup plus dispersés, ce qui a étendu et rendu plus notoire leur influence.

Il a manqué surtout à la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie de reprendre au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle son apostolat primordial dans les Séminaires français; mais elle l'exerce, depuis quarante ans, au Canada et en Colombie, d'autant plus fidèle à sa tradition primitive, qu'elle crée des établissements d'éducation cléricale dans les pays qui en manquent. En tout cas, si la renommée du saint Instituteur a pu en souffrir, son mérite n'est pas diminué parce que ses fils, victimes des persécutions, n'ont pu se maintenir dans les positions acquises.

Tout le monde sait que la situation sociale et religieuse de notre patrie empêcha, pendant trois quarts de siècle, l'application du décret Cum adolescentium Aetas, voté en 1566 par le Concile de Trente et publié l'année suivante par Pie IV. De timides essais, qui ne sont pas encore tous connus du grand public, ou bien avaient complètement échoué, ou bien étaient restés isolés, sans portée générale. Ce qu'en quatre-vingts ans des princes de l'Église ou des prélats n'avaient pu faire, trois simples prêtres, travaillant chacun de leur bord, dans l'intervalle d'une année, jetèrent avec succès les assises de cette grande œuvre, qui, dès lors, allait prospérer et mieux réussir en France que partout ailleurs peut-être. C'étaient trois zélés missionnaires, ayant particulièrement souffert du déplorable état d'un clergé qui entravait, au lieu de le faciliter, le labeur apostolique de la régénération des âmes. Ils furent également secondés par le grand homme d'Église et d'État qui gouvernait alors la France.

262-

Pour ce qui est du Père Eudes, dont il s'agit uniquement désormais, Richelieu l'aida non seulement de sa haute autorité, mais encore des subsides de sa nièce, la duchesse d'Aiguillon. Il se trouva en outre, au milieu du XVII<sup>e</sup> siècle, de bons évêques en Normandie, pour favoriser l'ouverture des séminaires que l'homme de Dieu était destiné à établir dans leurs diocèses. Cela ne veut pas dire que tout se fit aisément et qu'il n'y eut pas de fortes hostilités à vaincre. Les jansénistes, en particulier, ennemis de l'Apôtre des SS. Coeurs de Jésus et Marie, adversaires, du reste, de toute entreprise vraiment catholique, entravèrent rudement et longuement la brillante carrière qu'il nous reste à décrire.

Nous dirons comment saint Jean Eudes fut amené à fonder ses séminaires, comment il les conçut, dans quel ordre il les réalisa et quels résultats il obtint.

Le Père Eudes s'aperçut très vite que les magnifiques succès de ses missions n'étaient guère plus durables que des feux de paille, faute d'être maintenus par le ministère habituel de pasteurs instruits, vertueux et zélés. Les missionnaires une fois partis, les populations n'avaient point, pour les entretenir dans la ferveur, des prêtres à la hauteur de leur tâche et soucieux de la remplir. Au témoignage du P. Martine, son premier biographe, le saint apôtre disait à ses confrères, avec la mélancolique émotion du Maître contemplant la récolte mûre et sans moissonneurs: « Les voilà ces pauvres gens dans d'excellentes dispositions;

L'OEUVRE DES SÉMINAIRES 263 -

mais qu'en doit-on attendre sous la conduite de pasteurs tels qu'on les rencontre de tous côtés? N'est-ce pas une espèce de nécessité, qu'oubliant bientôt les grandes vérités dont ils ont été touchés durant la mission, ils retombent dans leurs premiers désordres? (1) »

Il s'agissait donc, avant tout, de convertir, de transformer le clergé, pour garantir la conversion des fidèles. Suivant absolument la même voie que les fondateurs de Saint-Lazare et de Saint-Sulpice, qui, avant d'aboutir au terme des séminaires proprement dits, avaient organisé des conférences hebdomadaires pour les ecclésiastiques, l'un à Paris en 1633, l'autre au Puy en 1636, le Père Eudes inaugura, en 1641, des entretiens spéciaux aux prêtres de la région pendant la mission de Rémilly (diocèse de Coutances). Le bienfait de cette initiative ne lui parut pas encore suffisant. C'est l'éducation pieuse et solide des clercs qu'il fallait assurer par des établissements propres à cette fin.

Ne convenait-il pas aux Oratoriens, constitués tout exprès pour être des modèles et des entraîneurs de conduite sacerdotale, de réaliser cette oeuvre capitale? Saint Jean Eudes le pensait; il espérait même qu'on lui permettrait d'ouvrir un séminaire dans la Maison de Caen dont il était supérieur depuis 1640. Il plane un mystère sur les raisons qui empêchèrent l'accomplissement de ce dessein et qui amenèrent, en conséquence, la fondation de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie. Ce n'est pas le lieu d'en discuter, ni d'écrire quoi que ce soit qui puisse éveiller de légitimes susceptibilités. A peine osons-nous invoquer le témoignage d'un oratorien distingué du XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle: « J'estime, disait en 1871 le P. de Valroger, que l'esprit du cardinal de Bérulle était passé dans le Père Eudes, quand il sortit de l'Oratoire pour fonder sa Congrégation », et déférer au vœu du Concile de Trente. Nous pouvons nous en tenir à l'avis du cardinal Perraud, sur le rôle de l'Institut dont il était l'éminent Supérieur, à propos de la réforme du clergé qui, au milieu du XVII<sup>e</sup> siècle, « s'accomplit dans un grand nombre de diocèses. L'Oratoire fut loin de demeurer étranger à ce mouvement. Tant qu'il resta fidèle à ses premières traditions, il fut un modèle vivant de la véritable discipline ecclésiastique. Mais, par la suite, trop absorbé par la direction des collèges, écueil fatal auquel il avait été se briser de trop bonne heure, malgré les précautions de son fondateur, il ne put que seconder de fort loin le mouvement de restauration si énergiquement entrepris par la Compagnie de Saint-Sulpice (et par les Eudistes, serait-il bon d'ajouter), et si visiblement béni de Dieu (1). »

264 SAINT JEAN EUDES

Le mystique Père de Condren contribua sûrement, pour une large part, à l'orientation des trois principaux instituteurs des séminaires français: Vincent de Paul, Jean-Jacques Olier, Jean Eudes: directeur très écouté de tous les trois, il fut, en outre, le supérieur du dernier, qu'il encourageait tant qu'il vécut.

Pour justifier la création des séminaires, il suffit de rappeler l'ordre du Concile de Trente: les décisions de l'Église ne se discutent pas, l'assistance du Saint-Esprit donnant la garantie de ses préceptes aussi bien que de ses dogmes. L'histoire d'ailleurs atteste que trop souvent, au début des temps modernes, les prêtres avaient « les âmes les moins ecclésiastiques du monde ». Les évêques, nous sommes réhabituaés à les vénérer; depuis longtemps, comme il convient à leur paternité spirituelle, à cause de l'héroïsme dont beaucoup firent preuve à la Révolution, de la dignité qu'ils ont généralement manifestée sous le Concordat, du désintéressement apostolique auquel ils s'élevèrent avec la Séparation, suivis de l'unanimité morale des clercs; nous avons peine à croire que par crainte « d'être reconnus parmi les gens de dévotion », au XVII<sup>e</sup> siècle, les évêques paraissent rarement en public vêtus de la soutane violette, tandis que de petits abbés la traînaient parfois dans les cabarets; ils avaient plus de tenue que les prêtres, mais se montraient oublieux de la résidence et des sollicitudes pastorales. Quant aux curés, bien souvent ils n'en méritaient pas le nom. Ce protestant exagérait sans doute, mais pourtant alléguait des faits navrants, qui disait à saint Vincent de Paul: « Vous m'avez affirmé, Monsieur, que l'Église de Rome est conduite du Saint-Esprit. Et comment puis-je le croire, en voyant d'un côté les catholiques de la campagne abandonnés à des pasteurs vicieux et ignorants, sans être instruits de leurs devoirs, sans que la plupart sachent seulement ce que c'est que la religion chrétienne; et, d'autre part, les villes pleines de prêtres et de moines qui ne font rien? » - Un changement radical s'opéra, Dieu merci, à mesure que les pasteurs d'âmes furent formés dans les séminaires.

11

Saint Jean Eudes a consacré toute une partie des Constitutions de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie (i), c'est-à-dire près de trente pages, aux règlements des séminaires, des séminaristes et de leurs maîtres. En voici le préambule:

« Comme il n'y a rien de plus nécessaire ni de plus désirable à l'Église de Dieu que d'avoir un bon nombre de saints prêtres, qui l'éclairent, la régissent et la sanctifient

(1) OEuvres complètes, tome IX, p. 340-367.

SAINT JEAN EUDES

par la lumière de leur doctrine, par la vertu de leurs prières et par l'exemple de leurs oeuvres: aussi il n'y a rien de plus important ni de plus utile que les Séminaires ecclésiastiques, qui sont des académies et des écoles saintes, dans lesquelles on s'emploie à former, instruire et exercer ceux qui tendent à l'état du sacerdoce ou qui y sont déjà arrivés, en la vie céleste qu'ils sont obligés de professer et en la manière de faire saintement et décentement toutes les fonctions cléricales. C'est ici la première et principale fin de la Congrégation. »

La raison de passer par le séminaire pour se préparer aux saints Ordres est ainsi marquée: « Car si on ne reçoit personne à la profession monastique et religieuse, même pour y être seulement en qualité de frère-lai ou convers, qu'après avoir passé par toutes les épreuves et exercices d'une et quelquefois de deux années de noviciat; et s'il n'y a point de profession ni de métier dans le siècle, pour vil et abject qu'il puisse être, qui ne soit précédé d'une année pour le moins d'apprentissage, quelle apparence d'entrer dans l'état si noble, si important, si saint et si divin comme est l'état ecclésiastique, sans préparation?» - Puis tous les prêtres, surtout ceux qui se livrent au ministère pastoral, ont besoin de faire chaque année une retraite de « huit ou dix jours pour le moins, dans le séminaire »

Veut-on savoir maintenant quel était le programme de ces Instituts? Les Constitutions nous répondent: « On enseignera six choses principales aux séminaristes, qui sont nécessaires à un ecclésiastique pour le rendre capable de servir Dieu et son Église, selon les obligations de sa profession. - Premièrement, on leur enseignera la piété, la vertu et la perfection dont tous les ecclésiastiques doivent être ornés... La seconde chose qu'on enseignera aux séminaristes sera ce qu'ils doivent savoir touchant les cérémonies avec lesquelles on exerce les fonctions cléricales...

L'OEUVRE DES SÉMINAIRES

La troisième chose sera le plain-chant... La quatrième chose sera la théologie morale ou les cas de conscience... La cinquième chose sera la manière de catéchiser et de prêcher utilement... La sixième chose sera l'intelligence de l'Écriture Sainte. » En outre, « lorsqu'il plaira à Dieu donner assez d'hommes à la Congrégation pour vaquer à tous ces emplois, on pourra encore faire des leçons et conférences des Controverses, des saints Conciles, de l'Histoire ecclésiastique et de la Théologie scolastique ».

On voit que le saint fondateur des séminaires normands envisageait dès l'origine une organisation complète et assez voisine de ce que nous avons maintenant. Toutefois les études spéculatives du Dogme et des branches annexes, se faisant dans les Facultés, n'étaient qu'un accessoire dans l'enseignement ordinaire des « Académies saintes ».

La formation spirituelle, par contre, est au premier plan: « Toutes les conférences et entretiens qu'on fera aux séminaristes, toutes les matières d'oraisons qu'on leur proposera, toutes les lectures spirituelles qu'on leur donnera et tous les autres exercices auxquels on les appliquera tendront à leur donner une grande haine de toute sorte de péché, à leur faire embrasser sérieusement la pratique de toutes les vertus, spécialement de l'humilité, de l'abnégation de soi-même et du monde, de la pureté, de la charité et du zèle du salut des âmes, à leur faire concevoir une haute estime de la dignité et sainteté de leur vocation, à leur en faire connaître et aimer les obligations et les devoirs et à leur enseigner des moyens propres pour s'en acquitter. »

« On s'étudiera spécialement à leur graver dans l'esprit un grand amour et respect pour l'Église et pour toutes les choses qui lui appartiennent, une singulière vénération, soumission et obéissance au regard de N. T. S. P. le Pape et de tous les prélats et pasteurs de la même Église, et nommément de leur Illustrissime et Révérendissime Évêque diocésain. - On prendra aussi un soin très particulier de leur imprimer dans le cœur une grande estime et une très cordiale affection pour tous les Ordres religieux qui sont dans l'Église... Surtout, comme la principale obligation des ecclésiastiques est de travailler au salut des âmes et que la dévotion spéciale à la Bienheureuse Vierge est un moyen très puissant pour les conduire dans le ciel, le Préfet de chaque séminaire s'efforcera de la graver bien avant dans les cœurs de tous les séminaristes. »

Suivent des recommandations précises sur l'importance d'apprendre à bien lire, à bien prononcer et accentuer le latin; sur la récitation de l'Office au chœur, sur la tenue et décence de la mise des clercs: « Enfin, il travailleront de tout leur cœur à graver en leur intérieur une image parfaite de la vie, des mœurs et des vertus souverain Prêtre N.-S. Jésus-Christ et spécialement de sa divine modestie, qui est une des principales vertus qui doit reluire dans un ecclésiastique, laquelle il est obligé de pratiquer en tout temps et en tout lieu, mais particulièrement dans l'église, principalement quand il y exerce quelque fonction cléricale et surtout quand il offre à Dieu le saint sacrifice de l'autel et le sacrifice de louanges qui se fait en célébrant l'Office divin. Car c'est dans ces occasions que les ecclésiastiques doivent être modestes et dévots comme des anges visibles..., comme des statues qui sont dans leurs niches, morts et insensibles à toutes les choses créées, pour n'avoir ni vie, ni sentiment, ni application que pour le Créateur et pour la grandeur des sacrés ministères qu'ils exercent. »

On reconnaît ici le souci prédominant de la vertu de religion, mis à la mode par Bérulle, et le principe du Concile de Trente devenu maxime courante à Saint-Sulpice: « Nihil nisi grave, moderatum ac religione plenum (clerici) prae se ferant! »

L'OEUVRE DES SÉMINAIRES

Après avoir indiqué qu'il devra y avoir deux confesseurs en chaque séminaire, saint Jean Eudes trace la voie que doivent suivre tous les maîtres qui y sont employés à quelque titre: « Ils s'efforceront tous, avec la grâce de Notre-Seigneur, d'être extrêmement humbles, doux, affables, modestes, patients, condescendants, soumis, obéissants, ponctuels en l'observance des règles, désintéressés, détachés du monde et d'eux-mêmes et pleins de respect et d'affection pour toutes les choses de l'Église... Ils s'étudieront de vivre dans une sincère et cordiale charité les uns vers les autres et dans un grand respect, soumission et liaison vers le Supérieur de la maison. »

Tout cela se termine par une tirade oratoire sur l'importance exceptionnelle de cette oeuvre, où perce l'éloquence coutumière du missionnaire: « Car on verra sortir des séminaires un grand nombre de saints ecclésiastiques de toutes sortes de conditions, qui seront désormais l'exemple et la lumière des fidèles; qui en rapporteront les instructions et les dispositions nécessaires pour vivre selon la discipline ecclésiastique, pour rendre à leurs Prélats les respects et les obéissances qui leur sont dus, pour célébrer l'Office divin avec la majesté et sainteté qui est requise, pour faire l'office de pasteur avec le zèle et la vigilance qu'il requiert, pour administrer les sacrements saintement et avec un grand fruit pour les âmes, spécialement celui de la Pénitence, pour annoncer apostoliquement la parole de Dieu, pour catéchiser utilement les peuples, pour consoler charitablement les affligés, pour assister chrétiennement les malades et pour les aider à bien mourir quand ils sortiront de cette vie, pour exercer décemment toutes les cérémonies de l'Église et pour faire dignement toutes les autres fonctions cléricales, à la plus grande gloire de Dieu, à l'exaltation et augmentation de la sainte Église, au contentement et au soulagement des Messieurs les Illustrissimes Prélats, à l'honneur et à la perfection de l'état du clergé et au salut et édification d'une infinité de personnes. »

Dans une lettre à ses confrères, en date du 2 décembre 1657, saint Jean Eudes revient sur les idées émises dans les Constitutions: « Vous devez vous souvenir que la Congrégation a été établie de Dieu en son Église et qu'il vous a fait la grâce de vous y appeler, pour cestrois fins: La première, pour vous donner des moyens d'arriver à la perfection et à la sainteté conforme à l'état ecclésiastique. La deuxième, pour travailler au salut des âmes par les missions et les autres fonctions du sacerdoce, qui est l'œuvre des apôtres, l'œuvre de Notre-Seigneur, qui est si grand et si divin qu'il semble qu'il ne peut y en avoir de plus grand ni de plus divin: divinorum divinissimum. - Néanmoins, il y en a un qui le surpasse: c'est celui de travailler au salut et à la sanctification des ecclésiastiques; ce qui est sauver les sauveurs, diriger les directeurs, enseigner les docteurs, paître les pasteurs, éclairer ceux qui sont la lumière du monde, sanctifier ceux qui sont la sanctification de l'Église et faire dans la hiérarchie de l'Église ce que les Séraphins et les Chérubins font dans la céleste patrie. Voilà la troisième fin pour laquelle Dieu a voulu établir notre petite Congrégation... Il veut mettre entre nos mains ce qui lui est plus cher que la prunelle de ses yeux, le cœur de son corps mystique, c'est-à-dire les ecclésiastiques: c'est la sainte famille dont il

veut que nous ayons le soin et la conduite.»

En 1642, au moment même où, pour entrer dans cette carrière, Jean Eudes s'apprêtait à quitter l'Oratoire de Caen, son nouveau supérieur général, le P. Bourgoing soumit les bruits contradictoires qui circulaient sur son compte à Mgr de Harlay, archevêque de Rouen, sous les yeux duquel il venait de faire, avec éclat, une grande mission de deux mois. Le Primat de Normandie rendit un magnifique hommage au P. Eudes, en souhaitant que ses adversaires fussent animés de son esprit surnaturel.

L'année suivante, Léonor de «Matignon, évêque de Coutances, qui l'avait tant vu à l'œuvre dans son diocèse et sa ville épiscopale, devait adresser au Pape un témoignage aussi net en sa faveur, avec une supplique pour sa Congrégation naissante. Troisième témoin qualifié, Mgr d'Angennes, évêque de Bayeux, notifia à Urbain VIII, le 22 octobre de la même année 1643, qu'après avoir constaté les fruits extraordinaires de grâce procurés dans les missions par un homme vénérable, Maître J. Eudes, prêtre du diocèse de Séez, « qui depuis quinze ans demeure dans celui-ci », remarquant que « ce sont surtout les prêtres et les aspirants à la prêtrise qui tirent profit » de ses enseignements, il lui a donné licence d'établir à Caen un séminaire. Et le prélat sollicite les encouragements du Saint-Siège en faveur d'établissements du même genre. Par ses lettres d'institution du 14 janvier suivant, il reconnaît, pour son compte, le P. Eudes comme supérieur du séminaire de Caen et de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, tout à la fois.

Le plus affectueux de tous, Philippe de Cospéan, évêque de Lisieux, épousait tous les intérêts de Jean Eudes, et, dans ses lettres fréquentes, l'appelait: « Mon cher Père, mon Fils et mon Frère. » Lorsque, dès l'origine de l'entreprise, les ennemis de notre saint apôtre, que sa longue vie ni sa mort ne devaient apaiser, partirent en guerre contre lui, Cospéan entrant pleinement dans ses vues, lui disait: « Je vous félicite de ce que la persécution qui vous attaque n'est armée que de peste et de poison,

2 7 2 -

SAINT JEAN EUDES

c'est-à-dire de mensonges et de calomnies; c'est la marque la plus évidente que vous appartenez à Celui qui a été traité de buveur et de démoniaque. Comme c'est Lui qu'on attaque en vous, ce sera Lui aussi qui vaincra par vous. »

Puis les deux évêques de Bayeux et de Lisieux soutinrent à l'Assemblée générale du Clergé de France, en 1645, la requête du P. Eudes (1), implorant l'approbation du séminaire de Caen et de ceux qu'il était disposé à fonder encore; demandant, en outre, qu'on obligeât les ordinands à se préparer dans ces solitudes bénies à leurs fonctions sacrées, et tous les curés ou vicaires à s'y retirer chaque année pendant une retraite de huit ou dix jours.

D'autres interventions avaient eu lieu près d'Anne d'Autriche, de Richelieu et de Mazarin.

Autant que les réponses flatteuses et trop platoniques de l'Assemblée plénière, de la cour de France et de Rome (interceptées longtemps par les jaloux), ce qui assura le succès des séminaires eudistes, c'est la bienveillance des prélats de Normandie, animés d'un vif amour de l'Église, éclairés par un grand esprit de foi et par la vue des premiers résultats.

Et pourquoi les bénédictions du ciel, ici comme à Saint-Lazare et à Saint-Sulpice, venaient-elles plus vite que l'approbation du Souverain Pontife et du Roi? alors qu'en tant d'autres endroits, depuis longtemps, on essayait vainement d'ériger des séminaires. Ah! parce que Vincent de Paul, Olier, Eudes, étaient des saints. Parce qu'aussi,

(1) Le mémoire relatif à l'organisation des séminaires, présenté au nom du P. Eudes en 1645, tout en différant sur plusieurs points, était, semble-t-il, inspiré du Collège des saints exercices, proposé à l'Assemblée du clergé de 1625, par CHARLES GODEFROY, curé de Quettreville (près Coutances).

L'OEUVRE DES SÉMINAIRES

sans se concerter, mais guidés par le bon sens et par l'Esprit de Dieu, les trois instituteurs des séminaires français ont séparé des écoliers de 12 à 18 ans les jeunes clercs susceptibles d'une formation plus ascétique, dégagés des légèretés et des études du premier âge: les coutumes des meilleurs collèges ne doivent point pénétrer dans nos « Académies du Ciel »!

D'autre part, les trois communautés ecclésiastiques des Lazaristes, Sulpiciens, Eudistes, laissaient, conformément au Concile de Trente, leurs sujets, avec leurs maisons, sous la juridiction immédiate des évêques; tout en leur donnant un lien spirituel, une préparation solide, qui les disposait à devenir les modèles en même temps que les maîtres du clergé.

Le séminaire ouvert à Caen le 25 mars 1643 était devenu pour ainsi dire provincial, par la décision de l'archevêque de Rouen, en date du 23 juillet 1647, qui autorisait à y recevoir des clercs de toute la Normandie et engageait ses suffragants à en favoriser le recrutement. Toutefois avec la mort de Jacques d'Angennes, survenue à cette époque-là, s'interrompent pour une période de dix ans les bonnes relations du P. Eudes et de l'évêché de Bayeux. Du reste, la ville de Caen, quoique centrale, ne pouvait attirer, - et rien ne l'imposait non plus, - les ordinands des sept diocèses que comptait alors notre vaste province.

Aussi, ce fut une grande joie pour le P. Eudes que l'invitation qu'il reçut en 1650 de fonder à Coutances le premier séminaire véritablement diocésain. Notre grand évêque de ce temps, Claude Auvry, digne d'une autre célébrité que celle que lui fit le Lutrin de Boileau, donna des lettres d'institution le 8 décembre, en la fête, chère à nos pères, de l'Immaculée-Conception. Toute latitude était laissée aux Prêtres de la Société de Jésus et Marie pour déterminer les exercices spirituels ou classiques, fixer le temps que les clercs devaient passer sous leur direction avant d'être admis aux ordres. L'année fut divisée en « quartiers » séparés par des congés, - ce que nous appelons actuellement des trimestres; - l'assiduité s'imposant à tous ceux qui aspireraient dans la suite au sacerdoce. - Le 3 juillet 1652, fut posée la première pierre de la chapelle du séminaire de Coutances, qui est la première église bâtie et dédiée en l'honneur du très saint Cœur de la Bienheureuse Vierge, qui n'a qu'un Cœur avec son Fils bien-aimé (1) ». -

Mgr Auvry, en quittant l'évêché de Coutances, nomma le P. Eudes grand vicaire et le recommanda chaleureusement à son successeur, M. de Lesseville. Tous nos évêques d'ailleurs affectionnèrent le saint homme. En 1684, Loménie de Brienne parlait avec une vive gratitude des maîtres du séminaire: «( C'est par leur moyen, concluait-il, que nous trouvons un si grand changement dans le clergé de notre diocèse (2). »

Le séminaire coutançais servit de modèle à tous les autres des Eudistes.

En 1653, Léonor de Matignon, qui avait été, à Coutances, prédécesseur de Cl. Auvry avant d'être transféré sur le siège de Lisieux, - à l'issue d'une mission prêchée par le P. Eudes dans sa ville épiscopale, - lui confia la réforme de son collège et l'ouverture de son séminaire. Ce dernier établissement fut copié sur celui de Coutances, avec l'obligation pour les ordinands de s'y présenter régulièrement. (1) Ce sanctuaire vénérable, désigné par Clément X sous le nom de Chapelle du Sacré-Cœur de Jésus et Marie, sert actuellement au lycée de Coutances, qui a pris la place du séminaire des Eudistes, (2) Ce diocèse, sillonné en outre par les missions des Eudistes, leur doit aussi l'origine de plusieurs communautés de religieuses éducatrices et hospitalières.

lièrement. Vingt ans plus tard, Léonor II faisait un magnifique éloge des Eudistes, en constatant les heureux fruits de l'éducation qu'ils donnaient à ses clercs.

Après la disgrâce qu'Édouard Molé, de Bayeux, avait fait subir au P. Eudes, François Servieu, qui le remplaça, revenait progressivement à de meilleures dispositions. En 1657, il reconnut officiellement le séminaire de Caen et décida que les ordinands s'y renfermeraient un mois pour préparer la réception des ordres sacrés (1). Bientôt allait se construire le bel édifice de la place Royale, avec la chapelle des Saints-Cœurs, dont les Caennais n'ont pas dédaigné de faire leur hôtel-de-ville et salle des fêtes.

Ce fut alors le tour de Rouen, où la question était posée depuis longtemps. Dès 1615, le cardinal de Joyeuse avait organisé une communauté de jeunes aspirants à la cléricature, confiée aux Pères Jésuites: les élèves ne devaient jamais dépasser la trentaine dans cette école, qui tenait autant des petits que des grands séminaires, et qui fournit très peu de prêtres dans la première partie du XVIIe siècle, au témoignage de saint Vincent de Paul. - François de Harlay, aussi zélé que plein de confiance dans le P. Eudes, n'osa pas le charger de constituer un séminaire proprement dit, parce qu'il redoutait les adversaires du saint homme, très puissants dans son entourage. Le prélat suppléait autant que possible, enseignant personnellement dans son Palais la théologie, la philosophie, voire les humanités. Enfin, son neveu, qui lui succéda à la tête de l'archidiocèse, M. de Champvallon, résolut de passer outre (1) Mgr de Nesmond ouvrit à Bayeux même, en 1669, un séminaire, qui fut confié aux Lazaristes en 1682. Il y eut aussi un séminaire lazariste à la Délivrande, sorte d'école pratique pour la formation des jeunes prêtres au ministère pastoral. Le séminaire eudiste de Caen se spécialisa comme centre de retraites pour les curés, puis séminaire universitaire, où l'on reçut même des élèves ordinaires de la Faculté des Arts.

aux menées des novateurs, comme on nommait les hérétiques d'alors, néfastes à l'égal de nos modernistes.

Dès le 30 mars 1656, l'archevêque signa des lettres d'institution, par lesquelles les Prêtres de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie étaient chargés d'ouvrir un séminaire dans sa ville métropolitaine. Le fameux Dufour, abbé d'Aulnay et curé de Saint-Maclou, à Rouen, agita tous les jansénistes de là-bas, pour empêcher la réalisation. Mais Harlay de Champvallon, qui, transféré plus tard à Paris, devait s'y faire une réputation de prélat trop galant et gallican, ne se départit pas à Rouen, du moins en l'occurrence, de l'attitude évangélique et romaine. Il condamna trente-sept traités où se manifestaient les sentiments de Jansénius et soutint si fortement les Eudistes, qu'ils purent inaugurer leurs cours en février 1659.

Chose exceptionnelle, le P. Eudes en personne présida l'ouverture et donna les exercices de la retraite pour les ordinations de décembre 1659 et mars 1660. Sans doute il attachait une importance spéciale au succès de cette maison et se croyait particulièrement obligé envers le métropolitain: ne se considérait-il pas comme relevant directement de son autorité, en qualité de chef des missions et des séminaires de Normandie, double titre qu'il tenait de la haute bienveillance de Mgr de Harlay? L'annaliste ajoute qu'il fut récompensé par une application incomparable des séminaristes de l'archidiocèse, qui « semblaient les plus fervents novices des maisons religieuses les plus réformées (1) ».

(1) Le chef-lieu de notre province reçut une seconde mission du P. Eudes en 1667; les prédications se firent à la cathédrale, et non plus à Saint-Ouen, comme à la mission de 1642, signalée plus haut. Le saint missionnaire aurait voulu accourir de nouveau en 1668, lors de la peste qui consterna la populeuse cité; ne le pouvant, il écrivit aux Pères du séminaire de s'offrir en victimes, pour conjurer le fléau, s'il plaisait à Dieu.

L'OEUVRE DES SÉMINAIRES 277 -

Qu'on me permette de mentionner, à la gloire des séminaires eudistes de Coutances et de Rouen, que leurs supérieurs en 1792, les PP. Lefranc et Potier, versèrent leur sang pour la foi avec le P. Hébert, supérieur général: l'honneur n'en rejaillit-il pas sur leur bienheureux Père?

A Évreux enfin, l'an 1667, sous l'épiscopat de Maupas du Tour, à l'issue d'une mission encore, le P. Eudes fut invité à organiser le dernier séminaire qu'il ait fondé en Normandie. Il serait intéressant d'insister sur les relations intimes qui s'établirent dès lors entre notre Saint et l'évêque de haute piété qui, sacrifiant en sa jeunesse les perspectives les plus brillantes du talent et de la noblesse à sa vocation ecclésiastique, entretenue sous la protection de la « très pure Mère de Dieu », se montra, en son âge mûr, sur le siège de saint Taurin, l'un des prélats les plus vénérables de l'Église de France à ce moment-là. Henri de Maupas voulut même monopoliser Jean Eudes pour son diocèse, en l'établissant son coadjuteur; l'échec de ce dessein fit le bonheur du principal intéressé et de tous ceux qui avaient besoin de ses services sur un plus vaste champ d'action (1).

En dernier lieu, le séminaire de Rennes s'ouvrit en 1670, après une grande mission préparatoire à la Pâque, que l'apôtre normand donna dans la capitale de la Bretagne, et au cours de laquelle il prêcha « tous les jours, durant douze semaines, à un très grand auditoire dans la cathédrale, avec autant de vigueur qu'à trente ans », alors qu'il en avait 69.

Le 8 mai 1670, donc, Mgr de la Vieuville lui octroya des lettres d'institution; et il signa lui-même l'acte de fondation avec les membres du personnel, en tête duquel se trouvait le P. Blouet de Camilly, son futur successeur comme supérieur de la Congrégation. - La population, enthousiasmée par les missionnaires, se montra très généreuse pour l'établissement et les États de Bretagne accordèrent, en 1671, un subside de 4000 livres. '

(1) La chapelle du séminaire d'Évreux fut consacrée, en 1714, par Mgr Lenormand, et dédiée au Très Saint Coeur de Marie, suivant la tradition eudistique.

Détail glorieux pour la maison de Rennes: c'est là que fut inaugurée la fête propre du Sacré-Coeur de Jésus, séparée désormais de celle du Très Pur Coeur de Marie, qui lui était précédemment conjointe.

IV

Les Eudistes furent appelés au séminaire d'Avranches, en 1693, par le savant prélat Daniel Huet, à celui de Domfront en 1727, à celui de Valognes en 1729, à Sées en 1744 seulement; il paraîtrait étrange que saint Jean Eudes ne se soit pas établi lui-même au centre de son diocèse d'origine, si l'Évangile n'attestait que « nul n'est prophète en son pays ». - En tout cas, ses fils instruisaient à la fin de l'Ancien Régime le clergé des sept diocèses de Normandie, celui de la haute Bretagne et, un peu plus loin, les clercs de Senlis et de Blois. A Paris même, leur maison des Tourettes, rue des Postes, était devenue une sorte de pension de famille pour ecclésiastiques, qui jouissaient là des avantages d'une vie régulière jusqu'au jour où vingt-deux de ces prêtres, eudistes ou séculiers, furent menés aux Carmes et à Saint-Firmin pour le grand holocauste de septembre 1792.

Nous voilà déjà renseignés un peu sur le fruit des séminaires fondés par l'émule de saint Vincent de Paul et d'Olier. Si nous remontions le cours de leur histoire, nous verrions la magnifique frondaison et floraison qui pendant un siècle et demi prépara l'éclosion de ces vertus héroïques.

L'OEUVRE DES SÉMINAIRES 279 -

Nous avons cité plus haut les témoignages très laudatifs des évêques de Coutances et de Lisieux; qu'on excuse encore cette citation du P. Costil, parlant de la pauvreté de notre séminaire coutançais à ses débuts: « Si le corps et les sens y étaient mortifiés, l'esprit et le cœur y étaient assurément bien au large par l'abondance des grâces reçues et par les pures délices de la vie intérieure qu'ils goûtaient. » - Et qui peut douter qu'il en était de même dans les maisons dont le passé nous est moins familier?

Voici, du moins, un exemple pris ailleurs. Le séminaire de Caen, tenu longtemps en disgrâce, avait recouvré le 2 décembre 1657, les faveurs avec le patronage de l'évêque de Bayeux. Or il s'y trouva, aux Quatre-Temps de septembre 1658 (neuf mois plus tard) TROIS CENT CINQUANTE ORDINANDS, originaires de toute la région normande. « Après une fervente retraite qui les transforma complètement », ils émurent toute la ville en se rendant de leur établissement à l'église Saint-Jean, où avait lieu l'ordination. « Les chants répétés par les jeunes clercs étaient si pieux, leur marche pleine de modestie, leur recueillement si édifiant, qu'ils firent couler les larmes de ceux qui les virent passer. Tous donnaient bénédiction aux missionnaires qui les avaient si bien préparés (1). »,

Ce récit du plus vieil historiographe de notre Saint montre que ses séminaires furent bien ce que celui-ci voulait, « des écoles de piété et académies de sainteté », et qu'il en sortait, pour une ample contrée du royaume, des « prêtres zélés, ouvriers irréprochables, dignes ministres des autels: apostolicos sacerdotes, operarios inconfusibiles, dignos altaris ministros ».

Ceux qui lisent les ouvrages rédigés par saint Jean Eudes pour l'instruction de ces clercs, auxquels il ouvrait des noviciats ecclésiastiques, n'en pourraient être surpris. Car quelle excellente doctrine pastorale, quelle touchante ascèse sacerdotale dans les Avertissements aux confesseurs, Le bon confesseur, Le Prédicateur apostolique, le Mémorial de la vie ecclésiastique! Et nous avons perdu les Traités de l'Office divin et du Saint-Sacrifice.

J'empiéteraï sur un article postérieur en insistant sur la spiritualité de ces bons livres. Mais ne me convient-il pas de signaler, pour finir, que les séminaristes élevés par le Père Eudes et ses confrères puisaient dans la dévotion au Divin Cœur de Jésus et au Très Pur Cœur de Marie la meilleure inspiration du zèle pour la gloire de Dieu, le salut des âmes et la sanctification personnelle? Et puis, dans la brillante et vibrante liturgie eudistique, à côté des offices, justement renommés, des Saints Coeurs et de tous les saints qui ont eu des relations particulières avec Notre-Seigneur et sa très sainte Mère, comme saint Gabriel, saint Joseph, saint Jean, etc., les clercs trouvaient la fête (avec octave) si particulièrement instructive pour eux, du divin sacerdoce de Jésus-Christ, qui, instituée dès la fondation du séminaire de Coutances, fut adoptée, non seulement par toutes les maisons de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, mais, après la mission du Père Eudes à Saint-Sulpice, par les séminaires de la vénérable Compagnie. Qu'il nous suffise, pour en faire soupçonner la portée, de citer la Collecte: « Deus tuorum gloria sacerdotum, qui Unigenitum tuum, nobis Summum Sacerdotem et animarum nostrarum, Pastorem vigilantissimum dedisti, quique ci ad sacrifleandam tibi hostiam, mundarn et ad promovendum humani generis salutem sanctos sacerdotes et levitas consortes tribuisti... studeamus amare quod amaverunt et opere exercere quod verbo et exemplo docuerunt ».

Bien comprendre que notre sacerdoce n'est pas autre que celui du Verbe incarné et que notre conduite, par conséquent, doit être conforme à la sienne (1), telle était la grande leçon que saint Jean Eudes avait retenue de Bérulle et Condren et qu'il s'efforça d'inculquer à l'immense légion cléricale qui a bénéficié de son influence salutare, par la discipline des séminaires, par l'enseignement de ses écrits et par les charmes séduisants de sa piété liturgique, opposant partout et toujours au jansénisme la barrière de la vérité catholique fixée par Rome.

(1) En voici un écho, entre cent autres: « Les prêtres, étant les Anges visibles de la terre et représentant la personne du Souverain Prêtre, qui est le Saint des saints, et qui leur dit: Soyez saints parce que je suis saint (Levit., XI, 44), sont obligés à une très grande perfection et sainteté et par conséquent à pratiquer toutes les vertus avec excellence. » (Œuvres, IX, p. 61.)

SAINT JEAN EUDES

auteur du culte liturgique des Sacrés Cœurs de Jésus et de Marie

A presque chacune des étapes du procès de béatification et de canonisation du Père Eudes, l'Église s'est visiblement complu à lui attribuer, comme à l'instrument dont s'est servie la Providence, l'institution du culte liturgique des Sacrés Cœurs de Jésus et de Marie. Le décret d'héroïcité des vertus le présente comme « l'auteur de ce culte ». Le bref de béatification développe la même idée de cette façon particulièrement significative: « Ce qui mit le comble aux services que Jean rendit à l'Église, c'est que, brûlant lui-même d'un amour extraordinaire pour les Sacrés Cœurs de Jésus et de Marie, il pensa le premier, non sans une inspiration divine, à leur rendre un culte liturgique. De cette religion si suave on doit donc le regarder comme le Père, car dès l'institution de sa Congrégation de prêtres il eut soin de faire célébrer par ses fils la solennité de ces Sacrés Cœurs; comme le Docteur, car il composa en leur honneur des offices et une messe propres; enfin comme l'apôtre, car il fit tous ses efforts pour répandre en tous lieux un culte si salutaire. » Le décret d'approbation des deux miracles proposés pour la canonisation du Père Eudes reprend exactement la même expression que le décret d'héroïcité des vertus. Enfin le décret de tuto, qui assurait au Bienheureux les honneurs de la glorification suprême, met en un beau relief le zèle avec lequel, « le premier de tous, Jean Eudes a institué et propagé le culte liturgique des Sacrés Cœurs de Jésus et de Marie ».

Aborder cette question, c'est donc toucher le point sur lequel l'Église se montre particulièrement reconnaissante à saint Jean Eudes; c'est aussi attirer l'attention sur le caractère propre de la physionomie spirituelle de ce grand saint, sur ce en quoi il a été auteur et le premier de tous. Quand on lit les Constitutions écrites par lui pour l'Ordre de Notre-Dame de Charité, il est aisé de constater qu'il s'inspire largement de saint François de Sales; il est assez facile, d'autre part, de démarquer, dans le Royaume de Jésus, les emprunts qu'il fait à la spiritualité de l'Oratoire; mais quant à l'idée d'un culte liturgique aux Sacrés Cœurs de Jésus et de Marie, il n'est tributaire que de Dieu, puisque, d'après l'Église elle-même, aucun autre n'y avait pensé avant lui.

Les affirmations que nous venons de lire dans les documents ecclésiastiques trouvent leur fondement et leur justification dans l'histoire.

Un Eudiste, M. Hébert, échappé à la Révolution, avait remis en mourant à un prêtre de Caen, M. l'abbé Lamoureux, un certain nombre de papiers en lui disant: « Gardez-les précieusement, ils serviront plus tard à la canonisation du Père Eudes (1). » Cette prophétie se vérifia à la lettre. Le Père Le Doré, Supérieur général des Eudistes, découvrit ces précieux manuscrits et, parmi eux, six lettres originales par lesquelles les évêques de Rennes, de Coutances, d'Évreux, de Rouen, de Bayeux et de Lisieux,

(1) Nous empruntons ces détails à la Vie du Père Le Doré par le Père Rovolt, Eudiste. A l'heure où nous écrivons, cet ouvrage si suggestif et si édifiant est sous presse.

permettaient au Père Eudes, dès 1670 et 1671, de célébrer avec la plus grande solennité la fête du Cœur adorable de Jésus. C'était la preuve aussi authentique qu'irréfutable que ce saint personnage avait institué le premier, en France et dans le monde, la fête du Sacré-Cœur (1). A propos de ces approbations épiscopales, le Père Bainvel a pu écrire: « C'est la première fois que l'Église enseignante parle du Sacré-Cœur (2). »

Toutefois, selon les expressions mêmes de saint Jean Eudes, « la divine Providence, qui conduit toutes choses avec une merveilleuse sagesse, avait voulu faire marcher la fête du Cœur de la Mère avant la fête du Cœur du Fils, pour préparer les voies dans les cœurs des fidèles à la vénération de ce Cœur adorable ». Le 8 février 1648, notre Saint, après avoir fait autoriser par MgrCl. deRagny, évêque d'Autun, la messe et l'office du Cœur de Marie, célébrait solennellement, dans la cathédrale de cette ville, la fête de ce très saint Cœur et constatait en termes enthousiastes que ce premier acte de culte public avait allumé « le feu de cette dévotion en beaucoup de cœurs ». En 1672, à propos de cette même fête ainsi instituée par lui, il pouvait écrire sans hésitation: « Aujourd'hui, elle est solennisée par toute la France, et en plusieurs Ordres et Congrégations, avec tant de bénédictions qu'il y a lieu d'espérer qu'elle se célébrera un jour très solennellement par tout l'univers (3). »

(1) Même après les décrets de saint Pie V et d'Urbain VIII qui réservaient au Souverain Pontife l'approbation des offices nouveaux, les évêques de France se croyaient en droit d'autoriser, dans leurs diocèses, la célébration de fêtes nouvelles avec messe et office propres. Les Souverains Pontifes toléraient cet état de choses. - Cf. Lebrun, La Dévotion au Cœur de Marie, p. 69.

Enfin, dans son grand ouvrage: Le Cœur admirable de la très sacrée Mère de Dieu, l'un des chapitres porte ce titre, où l'on sent tant de sainte fierté: « Quinze très illustres Archevêques et Évêques approuvent et autorisent la Dévotion, l'Office et la Fête du très digne Cœur de la Mère de Dieu. »

Les limites de cet article ne nous permettent pas de narrer par le menu tous les faits historiques, qui, s'ajoutant à ceux que nous venons de dire, démontrent jusqu'à l'évidence que saint Jean Eudes est bien l'auteur du culte liturgique des Sacrés Cœurs. Au reste, cette tâche a déjà été accomplie par le R. P. Bernadot dans cette revue même (1), comme aussi par le R. P. Lebrun dans ses deux livres intitulés, l'un: Le Bienheureux Jean Eudes et le Culte public du Cœur de Jésus, et l'autre - La Dévotion au Cœur de Marie. Nous voudrions simplement souligner l'importance et l'ampleur du mouvement suscité par le Père Eudes, sa sainte nouveauté toute basée sur l'Écriture et la Tradition, et enfin son immense portée pour la vie spirituelle des âmes.

Il y a, dans le culte public de l'Église, un acte essentiel et fondamental: le saint sacrifice de la messe. Sans lui, le sacerdoce n'aurait plus sa raison d'être, quelques-unes des plus magnifiques promesses de Notre-Seigneur resteraient vaines et sans objet, et les âmes, privées du Pain de vie, seraient condamnées à la langueur et à l'épuisement. En obtenant de l'Église, pour la première fois, l'autorisation de célébrer les saints mystères en l'honneur des Sacrés Cœurs de Jésus et de Marie, le Père Eudes contribuait donc efficacement à l'introduction de ceux-ci au centre même de la liturgie catholique, vers lequel tout converge et d'où tout découle. Pourrait-on jamais exagérer l'importance de cette initiative?

Et puis, en ce qui concerne le Cœur de Jésus, il faut bien reconnaître que le seul acte de notre religion dans lequel et par lequel ce divin Cœur se donne vraiment, réellement et substantiellement à nous, pour être, non seulement un objet extérieur d'adoration, mais le Cœur reposant sur notre cœur, c'est encore le saint sacrifice de la messe. N'était-il donc pas juste qu'à ce moment auguste, Il fût chanté et entouré d'honneurs tout spéciaux? Saint Jean Eudes comprit à merveille cette souveraine convenance. La première messe du Sacré Cœur de Jésus, nous aimons à le répéter, a été composée par lui. C'était du même coup - et cela vaut la peine d'être remarqué - l'ouverture de la série des grands triomphes extérieurs et publics de ce Cœur adorable.

Mais l'importance du mouvement suscité par saint Jean Eudes ne se borne pas là. A-t-on assez remarqué la netteté, la précision parfaites avec lesquelles les évêques de France, tandis qu'ils autorisent les offices composés par ce grand initiateur, parlent du Sacré Cœur de Jésus et du saint Cœur de Marie? Il suffirait presque de réunir ces approbations pour avoir un traité complet sur les raisons d'honorer les Sacrés Cœurs. En même temps que le culte et à son occasion, il y a tout un épanouissement doctrinal de premier ordre, et sur lequel il convient d'insister fortement. Que l'on nous permette de reproduire tout d'abord, à l'appui de cette assertion, une page de Mgr de Ségur:

En 1670, le vénérable évêque d'Évreux, approuvant pour son diocèse le culte du Sacré-Cœur et l'office composé à cet effet par le bon Père Eudes, s'exprimait ainsi: « Le Cœur adorable de Notre-Seigneur étant une fournaise « d'amour envers son Père et de charité envers nous, et la

« La même année, un autre évêque français, celui de Coutances, disait de son côté: « Le Cœur adorable de notre « Rédempteur étant le premier objet de la dilection et complaisance du Père des miséricordes, et étant réciproquement tout embrasé du saint amour envers ce Dieu de « consolation comme aussi étant tout enflammé de charité « envers nous, tout brûlant du zèle de notre salut, tout « plein de miséricorde envers les pécheurs, tout rempli de « compassion envers les misérables, et le principe de toutes les gloires et félicités du ciel, de toutes les grâces et « bénédictions de la terre, et une source inépuisable de toutes sortes de faveurs pour ceux qui l'honorent, tous « les chrétiens doivent. s'efforcer de lui rendre toutes les « vénération et adorations possibles (1). »

Il est vraiment frappant de constater que dès cette époque, c'est-à-dire deux ans avant les premières grandes révélations faites à sainte Marguerite-Marie, des évêques de France présentaient déjà, dans des documents officiels, le Sacré Cœur de Jésus comme le principe de toutes les gloires et félicités du ciel, de toutes les grâces et bénédictions de la terre, et que, par voie de conséquence, ils faisaient à tous les hommes, spécialement à tous les chrétiens, des « obligations infinies de l'honorer, louer et glorifier en toutes les manières possibles ». On croirait, en lisant les textes que nous venons de citer, entendre tel ou tel évêque du XXe siècle exposant à ses diocésains la légitimité de la consécration du genre humain au Sacré-Cœur.

La même précision et la même splendeur d'expressions se retrouvent dans les lettres par lesquelles les évêques français du XVIIe siècle approuvent la fête du Cœur de Marie instituée par saint Jean Eudes.

L'évêque de Toul, considérant ce très saint Cœur comme « le premier et principal organe que le Saint-Esprit a choisi pour « opérer notre Rédemption » et comme « le trésor de « ses dons et de ses grâces », en conclut qu'il est, « après celui de Jésus-Christ, le centre de notre bénédiction, « auquel partant nous devons avoir une dévotion très singulière ».

L'évêque du Puy met en lumière « cette sorte de souverain empire que le Cœur de Marie a sur le Cœur de Jésus quand il s'agit de l'intérêt des hommes », puis il s'écrie: « Approchez donc du Cœur de Marie pour approcher de celui de Jésus. »

Deux vicaires apostoliques de la Chine, contemplant dans le Cœur de Marie « le premier de tous les cœurs qui ait reçu en soi la foi chrétienne », espèrent de la divine Bonté, par son entremise, « des assistances » protections et bénédictions toutes spéciales » pour les conversions de leurs peuplades infidèles et approuvent « très volontiers » l'office et la messe composés par le Père Eudes.

Enfin et surtout François de Montmorency-Laval, vicaire apostolique du Canada, exprime le désir que « le très aimable Cœur de la Mère de Dieu, qui est tout embrasé d'amour vers Sa divine Majesté, et de charité au regard de tous les hommes, et son très auguste Nom, soient loués et honorés par tout le monde (1). »

Il faudrait citer encore, nous ne le pouvons pas. Mais, après ce que nous venons de dire, l'on comprend suffisamment l'importance immense du mouvement dont saint Jean Eudes a été l'instigateur. Alors qu'avant lui la dévotion aux Sacrés- Cœurs n'avait pas encore franchi les bornes des consciences individuelles, grâce à son apostolat elle est organisée en un culte public se traduisant par des formules bien précises. Et non seulement les évêques approuvent les offices et les messes composés par le Père Eudes, mais beaucoup d'entre eux exhortent les prêtres, les séminaristes et les fidèles à s'en servir, ordonnent pour les fêtes des Sacrés-Cœurs toute la solennité que l'Église accorde aux fêtes de première classe avec octave, permettent l'exposition du Saint-Sacrement et recommandent de faire un sermon de circonstance. Plusieurs vont même jusqu'à autoriser l'office du Sacré Cœur de Jésus « pour le premier jeudi de chaque mois non occupé d'un office de neuf leçons, hors l'Avent et le Carême (1) ». Comme il est doux de penser que grâce à notre Saint la dévotion au Sacré Cœur de Jésus et au Saint Cœur de Marie était entrée triomphalement, dès cette époque, dans bien des Ames d'évêques et de prêtres, et qu'elle s'exprimait sur leurs lèvres par des paroles claires et ardentes à la fois! Et le Père Eudes souffrait terriblement quand les portes d'un séminaire refusaient de s'ouvrir au Sacré-Cœur. Nous en avons une preuve dans ce passage d'une lettre qu'il écrivit à Mgr de Médavy, archevêque de Rouen: « Considérez, s'il vous plaît, que tous nos prélats nous ont donné leur approbation et permission là-dessus. C'est pourquoi je vous supplie très humblement, par ce très adorable Cœur, qui est la source de tout ce qu'il y a de saint et de vénérable dans toutes les fêtes que l'Église célèbre, par l'amour dont il est embrasé vers vous et par tous les effets de cet amour que vous avez ressentis, et que vous désirez ressentir à l'heure de votre mort, de n'empêcher pas que cette fête se fasse dans votre séminaire aussi bien que dans les autres. Si vous me refusez cette grâce, que je vous demande avec tout le respect et la soumission qui m'est possible, j'avoue que j'en recevrai un très grand déplaisir; et si vous me l'accordez, comme je l'espère de votre bonté, vous me donnerez une très grande joie et m'obligerez infiniment. Ne rejetez donc pas la très humble et très instante prière qui vous est faite par celui qui est en vérité de tout son cœur et dans tout le respect, etc. »

Mgr de Médavy ne put pas résister à d'aussi pressantes supplications. Saint Jean Eudes était souverainement conquérant quand il s'agissait du Sacré-Cœur!

* * *

De cette nouveauté inaugurée par le Père Eudes d'aucuns ne pouvaient manquer de s'effaroucher. Ce fut même la raison pour laquelle le prélat dont nous venons de parler se montra tout d'abord si hostile à l'introduction de la fête du Sacré-Cœur dans son séminaire. Le saint novateur lui répondit en ces termes: « Il est vrai, Monseigneur, que la nouveauté dans les choses de la foi est très pernicieuse et tout à fait damnable; mais je vous prie, Monseigneur, de considérer que ce n'est pas de même dans les choses de piété; car il y a grand nombre de fêtes dans l'Eglise qui n'ont pas été établies dès le commencement, et qui sont nouvelles. »

Puis il rapportait plusieurs exemples de ces fêtes suc-cessivement introduites dans la liturgie, et il ajoutait: « Certainement, si toutes ces nouveautés étaient mauvaises, l'Eglise ne les admettrait pas (1). »

Il faut croire que la nouveauté instituée par saint Jean Eudes n'était pas mauvaise, puisque l'Eglise l'accueillit avec la joie que nous avons décrite.

Du reste, ce nouveau culte était très ancien par ses origines et ses fondements, puisqu'il jaillissait des pures sources de l'Ecriture et de la Tradition. Telle était bien l'impression des évêques français du XVII<sup>e</sup> siècle qui lui accordèrent leur approbation. Ainsi l'évêque de Rennes regardait l'office et la messe du Cœur de Jésus comme « recueillis et composés des divines Écritures et des écrits des Saints Pères, et conformes à la foi et piété de la sainte Eglise catholique, apostolique et romaine ». L'évêque de Coutances, l'évêque d'Évreux et l'évêque de Lisieux se servaient de locutions toutes semblables. En parlant de l'office du Saint Cœur de Marie, l'évêque d'Évreux s'exprimait ainsi: « Tout y respire la foi orthodoxe, la sainte Écriture et l'esprit des Saints Pères. » L'évêque de Noyon écrivait dans le même sens: « Tout y est pieux et saint, tout y est tiré des Saintes Lettres et des Saints Pères. » L'évêque de Soissons employait exactement les mêmes termes.

De nos jours, S. Ém. le cardinal Billot, faisant écho à tous ces prélats, a pu écrire à propos du culte du Sacré Cœur de Jésus: « Le Père Eudes l'avait établi, et l'avait trouvé, ou dans une révélation privée faite à lui-même ou à d'autres, mais dans les plus belles pages de l'Évangile et les plus pures sources de la théologie (2) »

SAINT JEAN EUDES

Le culte institué par le Père Eudes était donc bien une sainte nouveauté: il avait la note essentielle de tout culte public, nous voulons dire une stricte dépendance vis-à-vis de l'Ecriture et de la Tradition. C'est là la raison de sa solidité et de sa beauté à la fois; car, dans cet ordre de choses, rien n'est résistant, rien n'est splendide, qui ne s'appuie sur le dépôt de la foi.

* * *

Le Père Eudes a écrit quelque part: «Le propre des âmes saintes est de procurer devant Dieu l'avancement spirituel de nos âmes. » Et précisément parce qu'il était un saint et un grand saint, il n'a pas échappé lui-même à cette règle. Même dans ses compositions liturgiques, il est missionnaire: ce qu'il veut, c'est attirer les âmes à Dieu. Pour lui les fêtes du Sacré Cœur de Jésus et du Saint Cœur de Marie sont avant tout deux mers de grâces et de sainteté. Citons ses propres paroles: elles sont magnifiques, et l'on se demande, en les lisant, si, quand il les écrivait, l'on était seulement à l'aurore du culte liturgique des Sacrés Cœurs ou bien plutôt à son plein midi:

« Admirons et adorons la bonté incompréhensible de notre très aimable Rédempteur de nous avoir donné cette sainte fête, car c'est une grâce extraordinaire qu'il nous a faite.

« Pour la bien connaître, il faut savoir que toutes les fêtes que la sainte Église célèbre durant le cours de l'année sont autant de fontaines de grâces et de bénédictions. Mais celle-ci est une mer de grâces et de sainteté, parce que c'est la fête du très Saint Cœur de Jésus, qui est un océan immense de grâces innombrables (1). »

LE CULTE LITURGIQUE DES SACRÉS CŒURS

Cet texte précise bien l'importance que revêtait, aux yeux de saint Jean Eudes, la fête du Sacré Cœur de Jésus pour notre vie spirituelle (1). À propos de la fête du Saint Cœur de Marie il se sert d'expressions analogues:

« Considérons que toutes les fêtes que l'on célèbre dans l'Église sont autant de fontaines de grâces, spécialement celles de Notre-Seigneur et de sa Bienheureuse Mère. Mais entre les fêtes de cette Mère admirable, celle de son très sacré Cœur est comme le cœur et la reine des autres; parce que le cœur est le siège de l'amour et de la charité, laquelle est la reine de toutes les autres vertus et la source de toutes les grâces. C'est pourquoi cette solennité est un océan de grâces et de bénédictions, non pas pour toutes sortes de personnes, mais pour ceux-là seulement qui se disposent à les recevoir. »

A côté de ces points de vue généraux, il en est un autre, très spécial, que nous voudrions examiner ici. L'un des spectacles les plus touchants de l'heure actuelle, c'est de voir, au-delà et au-dessus de tant de turpitudes, d'égoïsme, d'indifférence, l'enthousiasme avec lequel un grand nombre d'âmes, dans le monde et dans le cloître, désirent la vraie et solide union à Dieu, l'intimité avec lui. Or le culte des Sacrés Cœurs de Jésus et de Marie, tel que nous le présente saint Jean Eudes, a ceci de très particulier qu'il pousse les âmes dans ce sens et leur fournit plusieurs moyens de satisfaire cette noble et sainte aspiration.

Tout d'abord cette grande et belle vie d'union nous apparaît beaucoup plus facile à réaliser. C'est avec le Cœur de Jésus, devenu nôtre, que nous aimons Dieu, que nous entrons en relations intimes avec lui. Nous entendons, dans l'office composé par le Père Eudes, Jésus qui nous dit:

(1) Nous avons développé ces idées dans notre opuscule sur Le Sacré Cœur de Jésus principe de toute la vie spirituelle, d'après le B. J. Eudes, P. 111.

« Je vous donnerai un esprit et un cœur nouveau. Mon Esprit et mon Cœur, je les poserai au milieu de vous, afin que vous aimiez voire Dieu d'un grand cœur et d'une âme résolue. Parce que vous êtes les fils de Dieu et les membres du Christ, Dieu a posé son Esprit et le Cœur de son Fils au milieu de vous, afin qu'avec le Père et votre Chef vous n'ayez qu'un esprit et qu'un cœur » (21 répons du 1er nocturne).

D'autre part, cet office, dans plusieurs de ses parties, est un exercice, pour ainsi dire, d'union de l'âme au Sacré-Cœur, c'est un entretien d'amour, c'est, dirions-nous volontiers, une oraison. Nous trouvons, par exemple, des répons comme celui-ci:

« Donnez-moi votre cœur, mes petits enfants, et je vous donnerai le mien. -- Notre cœur est dans votre main, ô Seigneur Jésus: par la force de votre bras, possédez-le à jamais (1). »

Et encore: « Mes petits enfants, mettez le comble à ma joie: en sorte que tout en vous se fasse dans la charité de mon cœur. - Il est prêt, notre cœur, ô le Dieu de notre cœur; il est prêt, notre cœur (2). »

Les antiennes des premières vêpres sont toutes ou presque toutes consacrées à l'intime familiarité de l'âme avec le Sacré-Cœur par l'amour, et les âmes contemplatives seront heureuses de rencontrer, au second nocturne, cette antienne qui résume si bien l'un de leurs désirs les plus profonds: « Je n'ai demandé qu'une seule chose au Seigneur, et je la requerrai: c'est qu'au jour du malheur il me cache et me protège dans le secret de son Cœur. » Elles aimeront à exprimer la confiance aveugle qu'elles ont en la tendresse de Jésus par cette belle strophe de l'hymne des matines:

O Cor meum, Cor unicum,
Virtus, salus, fiducia,
Thesaurus, sol et jubilation,
n te mihi sunt omnia.

O mon Cœur, Cœur unique,
Vertu, salut, confiance,
Trésor, soleil et jubilation,
Pour moi tout est en toi.

Dans les épreuves particulièrement intimes et senties qui caractérisent plusieurs phases de la vie mystique, elles se sentiront encouragées et fortifiées par ce cri sorti des profondeurs de la sainte âme du Père Eudes:

Ave Dolorum Victima,
Centrum crucis,
Rex Martyrum.
Fac nostra sit crux gloria,
Amor, corona, gaudium.

Salut, Victime de douleurs,
Centre de la Croix, Roi des Martyrs.
Oh! fais que la croix soit notre gloire,
Notre amour, notre couronne, notre joie (1).

Mais à la vie d'intimité avec Dieu il fallait un modèle. Saint Jean Eudes nous le présente dans le Cœur de la très sainte Vierge. C'est à ce Cœur très pur qu'il applique, dans l'office et dans la messe, les plus beaux textes du Cantique des cantiques:

Te candidala lilia,
Nardus rosaequefulciunt,
Te mala coeli dulcia
Amore languens ambiunt.

C'est vous que les blancs lis,
Le nard et les roses soutiennent,
C'est vous que les doux fruits du ciel.
Environnent dans vos langueurs d'amour (2).

SAINT JEAN EUDES

Notre Saint se complaît à redire que toute la gloire de la Fille du Roi se tire de son intérieur, et il met sur les lèvres de Marie ces belles paroles: « La méditation de mon Cœur est toujours en présence de Dieu. »

Toutefois, si l'on veut comprendre plus pleinement tout ce que le Père Eudes a mis de poésie mystique et de science profonde de la vie intime de la très sainte Vierge dans ces deux compositions liturgiques, il faut chercher l'explication et le commentaire de celles-ci dans son grand ouvrage, déjà cité par nous, intitulé: Le Cœur admirable de la Mère de Dieu (1). L'étude mystique du Saint Cœur de Marie, pour reprendre l'expression d'un auteur contemporain (2), y est déjà faite et de main de maître. La sainte contemplation ayant son principe dans la charité et son terme dans l'accroissement et la perfection de cette vertu (3), il est bien permis de la rattacher, à ce point de vue du moins, au cœur. Saint Jean Eudes, dans son office et dans son livre, nous la montre pleinement épanouie dans le Cœur de la sainte Vierge. « C'est, dit-il, un Cœur plus élevé en contemplation que les cœurs de tous les saints (4). » Cette Mère du bel amour, comme il aimait à appeler Marie, nous apparaît désormais comme la patronne et le céleste guide de toutes les âmes qui se sentent appelées à la vie contemplative.

Dans le même ordre d'idées, ajoutons encore une remarque. Les chères âmes dont nous venons de parler comprennent parfaitement que leur Dieu, Vérité première et essentielle, est en même temps la Fin dernière de tous les désirs et de toutes les affections de l'homme: c'est pourquoi, quand on leur parle de lui, elles ne sont vraiment rassasiées que par un langage qui porte l'empreinte, non seulement des clartés de l'esprit, mais aussi des transports du cœur. A cet égard elles trouveront pleine satisfaction dans les offices et les messes des Sacrés Cœurs composés par le Père Eudes. Mgr Lemonnier, évêque de Bayeux et Lisieux, a pu écrire récemment que dans cette double composition il faut voir « comme le dernier effort et la suprême efflorescence de la vie intime (1) » de ce saint. Provoquées par la contemplation des deux grandes Fournaises d'amour, les effusions de cette belle âme y ont un accent encore plus ardent, plus passionné que celles dont il avait constellé le livre écrit par lui au temps de sa jeunesse sacerdotale: Vie et Royaume de Jésus dans les âmes chrétiennes.

Jean Eudes est bien «le Docteur du culte liturgique des Sacrés Coeurs », comme s'exprime le Bref de Béatification, mais un Docteur très aimant qui exprime ses vues dogmatiques en termes enflammés. Parlant de la messe du Sacré-Cœur, le Père de Curley a pu dire: « Si nous avions à lui donner un nom, nous l'appellerions la messe de feu, car dans toutes ses parties c'est l'éternel amour éclatant en notes suppliantes et attendries (2) »; et si, selon les expressions de Notre Saint-Père le pape Pie XI; la sainteté dans sa fin et dans sa substance n'est autre chose que l'amour de Dieu, il faut bien dire que les offices des Sacrés Coeurs composés par le Père Eudes sont singulièrement révélateurs de sa sainteté, car d'un bout à l'autre ce sont des chants d'amour. C'est avec bonheur que les âmes mystiques

SAINT JEAN EUDES

On retrouve, en un degré très élevé, cet effet de l'amour, dont elles ont parfois l'impression, et que saint Thomas d'Aquin appelle la liquéfaction (1), c'est-à-dire l'écoulement en l'objet aimé. Vraiment, saint Jean Eudes est tellement uni aux Sacrés Coeurs qu'il ne vit plus, pour ainsi dire, de sa vie à lui, mais qu'il s'écoule en eux par l'amour. Voici, par exemple, quelques strophes de ses hymnes de l'office du Saint Cœur de Marie

Eia, Parens, cor supplicum
Intra pium serva sinum;
Amore Nati langueat;
Amore matris ferveat.

O Mère, ces coeurs qui vous supplient,
Gardez-les dans votre Cœur si bon;
Qu'ils languissent d'amour pour le Fils
Et qu'ils brûlent d'amour pour la Mère.

O fax amanda cordium,
Flammis sacris nos devora;
Fac ut crementur omnium
Amore Jesu pectora.
O aimable flambeau des coeurs,
De vos flammes sacrées dévorez-nous;
Faites que tous les coeurs
Soient consumés de l'amour de Jésus.

Amor, sacri fons nectaris,
Mentes replens inebria;
Cordis sagitta Virginis,
Transfige cordis intima.

Amour, source d'un nectar sacré,
Emplissez et enivrez nos âmes.
De la flèche qui perça le Cœur de Marie
Transpercez le fond de notre coeur.

LE CULTE LITURGIQUE DES SAGRÉS COEURS

Mais c'est surtout dans l'office du Divin Cœur de Jésus que se manifeste le bienheureux écoulement dont nous venons de parler. Le Père Eudes s'écrie dans des transports de charité: « Voici qu'à mes yeux s'ouvre la fournaise embrasée de l'amour; je veux me livrer à ses flammes; que la mort me dévore dans ses feux. - Oh! je te veux, Cœur de flamme. Brûle à jamais au-dedans de moi... - O Cœur, Père des vivants, fais-nous vivre d'amour. Fais que dans ton sein pour toi nous mourions d'amour. - O Christ, fournaise des cœurs, plonge-nous dans tes flammes, nous t'en supplions! Amour, dévorant ceux qui t'aiment, fais-nous martyrs d'amour. »

Peut-on résister à de tels accents? et si, selon les paroles du Docteur Angélique, « la fin de la vie spirituelle, c'est l'union à Dieu par la charité (1) », ne voit-on pas immédiatement l'immense portée, pour la vie spirituelle des âmes, d'un culte liturgique qui les pousse si instamment vers les sommets les plus élevés de cette sainte vertu? On est ému en pensant à la magnifique floraison d'amour que saint Jean Eudes a suscitée dans les âmes de ses contemporains et l'on se prend à désirer d'alimenter soi-même sa vie intérieure à une source si pure et si abondante.

Au sujet du culte liturgique des Sacrés Cœurs de Jésus et de Marie, qu'il venait d'instituer, saint Jean Eudes avait de hautes et larges ambitions, et comme des intuitions secrètes.

L'on se rappelle les paroles triomphales qu'il écrivait en 1672 à ses chers fils à propos de la fête du Cœur de Marie - « Aujourd'hui elle est solennisée par toute la

France, et en plusieurs ordres et congrégations religieuses, avec tant de bénédictions qu'il y a sujet d'espérer qu'elle se célébrera anjour très solennellement par tout l'univers (i). »

En ce qui concerne le Sacré-Cœur de Jésus, il est plus explicite encore, et ses désirs revêtent une ardeur extrême qui fait clairement comprendre quelle place ce divin Cœur avait dans ses pensées.

« C'est ici la fête des fêtes », disait-il... « Si on célèbre, ajoutait-il, dans le cours de l'année, tant de fêtes en l'honneur des saints, quelle solennité mérite ce divin Cœur, qui est le principe de tout ce qu'il y a de noble et de glorieux dans tous les saints! (2) »

Et un peu plus loin:

« Si donc on célèbre une si grande fête dans l'Église en l'honneur de ce divin Sacrement (la sainte Eucharistie), quelle solennité doit-on faire en l'honneur de son très Sacré Cœur, qui est l'origine de tout ce qu'il y a de grand, de rare et de précieux dans cet auguste Sacrement! (3) »

Pour rendre efficaces ces désirs, saint Jean Eudes invitait les peuples à accourir au Sacré-Cœur, et le Sacré-Cœur à exercer sur eux sa royauté d'amour:

Venite, gentes, carrite
Ad Cor Patris mitissimum; Omnes amat, confidite,
Amoris est incendium.

Venez, peuples, accourez
Au Cœur si doux de votre Père;
Il vous aime tous, confiance,
C'est un incendie d'amour (4).

LE CULTE LITURGIQUE DES SACRÉS COEURS

O te volo, Cor flammeum,
Tu semper intus ardeas!
Fons omnium charismatum,
Totum per orbem diffluas.
O je te veux, Cœur de flamme,
Brûle à jamais au-dedans de moi,
Source de toutes les grâces,
Par tout l'univers épanche-toi (1).

C'était bien un embrasement d'amour qu'il appelait sur le monde. Voici comment il s'exprime à cet égard: « Une infinité de raisons nous obligent de rendre nos adorations et nos honneurs au divin Cœur de notre très aimable Sauveur, avec une dévotion et un respect extraordinaire. Toutes ces raisons sont comprises dans trois paroles du Bienheureux saint Bernardin de Sienne, qui appelle ce très aimable Cœur: « Fornax ardentissimae « caritatis ad inflammandum et incendendum orbem universam, : Fournaise d'une charité très ardente pour « enflammer et embraser tout l'univers (2). » Ce texte précise bien la place qu'occupait, dès le XVIIe siècle, dans l'esprit du Père Eudes, le règne social du Sacré-Cœur. L'une des fins du culte liturgique institué par lui, c'est, selon les belles expressions de Dom. Lambert Beaudouin, « le règne du Roi éternel des siècles restauré par l'ascendant d'un amour sans bornes, symbolisé dans son cœur de chair, et manifesté par toute l'œuvre de la Rédemption, sans en exclure les mystères joyeux et glorieux (3) ».

SAINT JEAN EUDES

Nous n'avons pas besoin d'ajouter combien, à ce point de vue encore, il a été initiateur. Les livres composés de nos jours sur la royauté, sociale du Sacré-Cœur n'ont pas, pour nous Eudistes, du moins en ce qui concerne leur substance et leurs idées fondamentales, le mérite et la saveur de l'originalité: nous avons déjà lu cela dans les oeuvres de notre saint Fondateur.

Sans doute l'Esprit de Dieu illuminait le Père Eudes sur l'extension que prendrait dans le cours des âges le culte du Sacré-Cœur. Cela semble ressortir assez clairement de la circulaire rédigée, en 1766, parla Mère Marie de Saint-Basile, supérieure du Monastère de Notre-Dame de Charité de Caen. Nous y lisons ces paroles:

« Quoique ce divin Cœur ait été longtemps le trésor particulier des Enfants de notre digne Instituteur, nous nous réjouissons de ce que bientôt il va être connu et honoré de toute la terre, selon que notre bon Père l'a prédit avant sa mort (1). »

Jean Eudes ne fit pas d'ailleurs qu'écrire et que chanter en faveur du règne social du Sacré-Cœur;

il était disposé à se sacrifier totalement, à être anéanti pour le procurer.

«O mon Sauveur, s'écriait-il dans un transport d'amour, que tout l'univers soit converti en adoration au regard de votre divin Cœur! Oh! que de bon cœur je consentirais, moyennant votre grâce, d'être anéanti tout maintenant et pour jamais, afin que le Cœur de mon Jésus fût adoré incessamment par tout l'univers! (2) »

Par une divine harmonie, ce sera à l'occasion des révélations faites par le Cœur de Jésus à une fille spirituelle de saint Jean Eudes, la Mère Marie du Divin-Cœur, que

Léon XIII consacrera solennellement le genre humain à ce Divin Cœur (1).

Le 8 février 1925, jour auquel les Eudistes célèbrent la fête du Cœur de Marie, Sa Sainteté le pape Pie XI, dans un discours prononcé à l'occasion de la lecture du décret d'approbation des deux miracles proposés pour la canonisation du Père Eudes, comparait celui-ci à l'un de ces immenses navires qui traversent les mers, chargés de richesses et laissant après eux un large et profond sillage. Ce sillage, saint Jean Eudes l'a tracé sans doute par la fondation de plusieurs instituts, par celle de nombreux séminaires, par son apostolat si original et si puissant; mais à notre sens il l'a tracé surtout par l'institution du culte liturgique des Sacrés Cœurs de Jésus et de Marie, puisqu'à ce point de vue - nous aimons à le répéter avec l'Église - il est « le premier de tous ».

Désormais tous ceux qui voudront étudier ce culte, non pas superficiellement et incomplètement, mais à fond et dans ses sources, devront jeter sur la vie et les œuvres de ce grand saint un long et attentif regard. Et pour notre France religieuse quelle gloire n'est-ce pas que d'avoir été, grâce à l'apostolat de l'un de ses enfants les plus illustres, l'instigatrice et la maîtresse d'une forme de dévotion extérieure et publique si bien faite pour sanctifier les âmes et pour les emporter vers les sommets de l'union à Dieu?

Sa Spiritualité

S'unir à Dieu par l'amour et dans l'amour, tel est le but visé par tous les vrais chrétiens. Les y diriger par des voies sûres et autorisées, telle est la prétention des maîtres qui s'offrent à leur servir de guides. Mais, si pour tous ceux-ci le terme est le même, les chemins qu'ils conseillent de prendre pour y atteindre sont variés; et cette variété tient à ce que, sur la terre, malgré les lumières de la foi, le même objet ne présente pas un aspect unique aux regards des observateurs. L'œil de l'homme est aussi impuissant à embrasser la totalité d'une vérité que sa volonté à réaliser la plénitude du bien.

Or, l'objet dont il s'agit, c'est la vie chrétienne; et cette vie, qui est la vie même du Christ, peut être envisagée et reproduite à des points de vue très divers. Substantiellement et foncièrement la même en tous les fidèles - en tous naissant et grandissant par la participation aux mêmes sacrements, exposée aux mêmes dangers et aux mêmes épreuves, réclamant les mêmes exercices fondamentaux, et s'épanouissant dans l'exercice des mêmes vertus, elle n'en revêt pas moins en chacun une forme particulière. Il en est d'elle comme de la nature humaine, dont chaque homme réalise en soi le type, mais avec sa physionomie propre et son caractère particulier.

SA SPIRITUALITÉ

De là vient que les saints se distinguent si nettement entre eux que l'Église peut dire de chacun: « Non est inventus similis illi: Il n'a pas eu son semblable. »

Cette divergence se retrouve dans la théorie.

Il y a certes une ascétique traditionnelle, et nul écrivain catholique ne voudrait s'en écarter. Mais, dans la manière de la présenter, que de différences! Les uns insistent sur certains motifs de pratiquer la vertu, que les autres laissent dans l'ombre. Ceux-ci préconisent certains exercices négligés par ceux-là. Bref, les voies que les uns et les autres indiquent pour aller à Dieu, pour s'unir à Dieu, ne sont pas tout à fait les mêmes (1).

C'est ainsi que - sans remonter aux solitaires de la Thébaïde, ou à saint Benoît, ou à saint François d'Assise, dont les voies pour aller à Dieu étaient bien différentes, - nous voyons, au XVI<sup>e</sup> siècle, sainte Thérèse faire de l'oraison le principal élément de sa spiritualité, tandis que, à la même époque, saint Ignace, dans un des ouvrages qui ont exercé l'action la plus puissante et la plus féconde sur la vie religieuse des temps modernes, les Exercices Spirituels, se plaisait à considérer la vie chrétienne dans sa fin dernière, qui est la gloire de Dieu et la béatitude de l'homme, et condensait toute sa doctrine dans la célèbre maxime: Ad maiorem Dei gloriam, adoptée par lui comme règle de vie et laissée comme devise à ses disciples.

De ces deux recommandations: « Vigilate et orate Veillez et priez », faites par Notre-Seigneur à ses disciples, la première, qui écrivait pour les âmes tendant à la perfection, appuyait davantage sur celle-ci: Orate; le second, qui visait surtout à l'action et à l'apostolat,

(1) Cf. l'Introduction au Royaume de Jésus par le P. Lebrun I. L'Idée fondamentale du Royaume de Jésus.

SAINT JEAN EUDES

insistait plus sur celle-là: Vigilate, l'examen lui semblant avoir plus d'importance.

Après eux, saint François de Sales suivit et enseigna une autre méthode. Il envisagea principalement la vie chrétienne dans ce qui la constitue, dans son principe interne, qui est la charité, ou plutôt dans son acte essentiel, qui est l'amour de Dieu. Ce qu'il veut apprendre aux chrétiens, c'est à conserver, à développer, à pratiquer la divine charité.

Au reste, et ces divers points de vue, et tous les autres auxquels on peut se placer, loin de s'exclure, se complètent, si bien qu'on ne peut, sans inconvénient, en négliger aucun. Seulement, la prédominance de l'un d'eux a pour conséquence de modifier sensiblement la vie intérieure et de lui imprimer une physionomie très distincte de toute autre.

Cela dit, venons à saint Jean Eudes.

A proprement parler, ce saint n'a pas fondé d'école, comme les éminents personnages que nous venons de citer. Formé à l'Oratoire de Jésus par le cardinal de Bérulle et le P. de Condren, il s'est nourri de leur doctrine, qu'il a traduite dans sa vie et développée dans ses Oeuvres, mais en la marquant d'un cachet très personnel. Sa conception de la vie spirituelle est bien à lui, et il énonce dans un choix de vérités catholiques, qu'ils en expriment, à ses yeux, les principes essentiels. De même, parmi les moyens que conseillent les docteurs de l'Église, il en accepte de préférence quelques-uns, avec lesquels il oriente et dirige, d'une façon qui lui est propre, les âmes vers la sainteté. Quel'on compare ses ouvrages avec les Exercices Spirituels, ou même avec l'Introduction à la vie dévote et le Traité de l'amour de Dieu, et l'on verra, au premier coup d'œil, que, s'il y prêche la même perfection, il l'y fait néanmoins envisager et pratiquer différemment.

SA SPIRITUALITÉ 307 -

Saint Jean Eudes, à la suite de ses illustres maîtres, fonde sa spiritualité sur les enseignements de saint Paul relatifs au corps mystique de Jésus-Christ. « Il voit sans cesse dans l'Église, écrit le P. Hérabourg, son premier biographe, le développement progressif de ce grand corps. Pour lui, chaque chrétien est avant tout un membre, qui, tout en venant prendre sa place dans l'ensemble, doit reproduire en soi les différents mystères qui s'accomplissent dans le corps entier, comme ils se sont accomplis dans la personne même de Jésus-Christ (1). » Cette idée ne paraît pas avoir beaucoup frappé saint Ignace; et saint François de Sales est loin de la placer au premier rang dans ses traités.

La doctrine spirituelle de notre nouveau saint se retrouve dans tous ses ouvrages, elle en est comme le cœur et l'âme (2); mais il en est un, la Vie et Royaume de Jésus dans les âmes chrétiennes, où elle est condensée avec une lumineuse précision. C'est là qu'il expose complètement et méthodiquement ses idées sur la vie chrétienne: sa nature, ses fondements, son complet épanouissement dans la pratique des vertus. C'est là aussi que, nous aidant de la « Regula Domini Jesu », qui en est comme un sommaire logiquement disposé, nous allons puiser les développements qui vont suivre et que nous groupons sous trois chefs:

(1). Base de sa spiritualité.

II. But idéal de sa spiritualité.

III. Méthode pour l'atteindre.

(2) Le P. Eudes, ses vertus. - (2) En dehors des deux que nous citons, voici les principaux ouvrages, ou opuscules, utiles à étudier pour bien connaître la spiritualité de saint Jean Eudes: le Contrat de l'homme avec Dieu par le saint Baptême, Méditations sur l'Humilité, Entretiens de l'âme chrétienne avec son Dieu, le Manuel de piété pour une communauté d'ecclésiastiques.

L'idée fondamentale de la spiritualité de saint Jean Eudes, c'est que la vie chrétienne n'est que la continuation et l'achèvement en chacun de nous de la vie de Jésus-Christ. Cette expression, cette formule revient souvent, comme un principe, sur ses lèvres et sous sa plume. Elle n'est du reste que la répétition, en d'autres termes, de cette parole de saint Paul: « Je vis, non, ce n'est pas moi qui vis, c'est Jésus-Christ qui vit en moi. »

Or, cette conception de la vie chrétienne découle de la doctrine du même Apôtre sur le corps mystique du Sauveur, qui est l'Église. On sait, en effet, que, d'après lui, les fidèles sont mystiquement, mais très étroitement unis à Jésus-Christ, comme les membres du corps humain le sont à la tête. C'est une allégorie qu'il aime à développer dans ses épîtres, et dont il fait, pour ainsi dire, le fond de son enseignement: elle n'exprime d'ailleurs qu'une vérité proclamée par Notre-Seigneur lui-même, quand il se compare à la vigne dont nous sommes les branches (1).

En fait, entre la vie du chrétien et la vie de Jésus, il est aisé de discerner les rapports de conformité et de dépendance que l'on constate, dans le corps humain, entre la vie des membres et la vie de la tête.

Dans le corps humain, la tête et les membres possèdent la même vie; c'est le même sang qui circule, pour l'alimenter, dans les artères et dans les veines de la tête et des membres. Ainsi en est-il de Jésus-Christ et de nous: une même vie circule en lui qui est notre chef, et en nous qui sommes ses membres; vie supé rieure, participation de la nature divine, qui nous met à même de connaître Dieu comme il se connaît, de l'aimer comme il s'aime, de le posséder comme il se possède dans l'infinie béatitude. Cette vie s'appelle la vie de la grâce.

Hypostatiquement unie à la personne du Verbe, la sainte Humanité de Jésus a été remplie de la grâce, dès le premier instant de son existence, elle l'a possédée dans sa plénitude, et c'est elle qui, par le Saint-Esprit, l'Esprit de Jésus, l'infuse en nous, avec ce magnifique cortège d'habitudes surnaturelles, vertus et dons, qui l'accompagne. Ainsi, à la différence de ce qui se passe dans le corps humain, où la tête, condition de vie, suppose la vie, mais ne la donne pas, Jésus, pour les membres de son corps mystique, est non seulement la condition de la vie, mais encore le principe de la vie, et d'une vie toute divine, qu'il leur a méritée par sa mort et qu'il leur dispense de diverses manières, spécialement par les sacrements.

Condition de la vie, la tête, dans le corps humain, influe sur les membres; c'est d'elle que part la force qui les meut et leur fait exercer leurs fonctions, en sorte que l'on peut dire que la vie de la tête se continue et s'achève dans les membres. De même en est-il dans le corps mystique du Christ, et pour chacun de ses membres, les fidèles. Reliés au Christ par la grâce sanctifiante, c'est lui qui les meut au bien par les impulsions de la grâce actuelle: « Comme la tête dans les membres », dit le concile de Trente, l'influence actuelle de Jésus « ne cesse de projeter dans les âmes justifiées une puissante vivifiante qui précède, accompagne et suit leurs actes de vertu. » D'où il suit que la vie chrétienne n'est pas seulement l'image de la vie personnelle de Jésus, mais qu'elle en est l'extension, le prolongement. La vie de Jésus se continue, s'achève en chaque âme qui lui est unie par la foi et la grâce; ce qui fait dire à saint Paul que l'Église est le complément de Jésus, plenitudo ejus (1), et que nous concourons tous à la plénitude de la vie de Jésus. In virum perfectum; in mensuram aetatis plenitudinis Christi (2).

SAINT JEAN EUDES

De ces enseignements de l'Apôtre qu'il expose sommairement mais avec une grande netteté, saint Jean Eudes tire des conclusions qu'il aime à répéter, et qui, comme des principes indiscutables, servent de base à sa spiritualité.

Écoutons-le, au § 1 de la partie IIe du Royaume de Jésus: « Jésus, Fils de Dieu et Fils de l'homme, Roi des hommes et des Anges », n'est « pas seulement, dit-il, notre Dieu, notre Sauveur et notre Souverain Seigneur », il est encore « notre Chef », et nous sommes « ses membres et son corps, comme parle saint Paul, os de ses os et chair de sa chair. » Par conséquent nous lui sommes « unis de l'union la plus étroite qui puisse être, telle qu'est celle des membres avec leur chef: spirituellement par la foi et par la grâce qu'il nous a données au saint Baptême; corporellement par l'union de son très saint corps avec le nôtre en la sainte Eucharistie. » Ce principe posé, il en conclut tout aussitôt. que, comme les membres sont animés de l'esprit de leur chef et vivants de sa vie, nous devons aussi être « animés de l'esprit de Jésus, vivre de sa vie, marcher dans ses voies, être revêtus de ses sentiments et inclinations, faire toutes nos actions avec les dispositions et intention dans lesquelles il. faisait les siennes; en un mot, continuer et accomplir la vie, la religion et la dévotion qu'il a exercée sur la terre.» On le voit, c'est

(1) Ephes., 1, 23.

(2) Ibid., iv, 13.

SA SPIRITUALITÉ 311

tout un programme, et celui-là même que nous allons développer dans les deux articles suivants.

Un peu plus loin, au § II de la même partie du même ouvrage, rappelant ces paroles de saint Paul: J'accomplis en moi ce qui manque aux souffrances de Jésus-Christ pour son corps qui est l'Église (1), il fait remarquer qu'on peut dire de chaque chrétien souffrant avec esprit de soumission et d'amour envers Dieu, ce que saint Paul dit de lui-même; et que l'on peut étendre à toutes les actions d'un chrétien ce que l'Apôtre affirme des souffrances:

« On peut dire, en vérité, qu'un vrai chrétien, qui est membre de Jésus-Christ et qui est uni avec lui par sa grâce, continue et accomplit, par toutes les actions qu'il fait en l'esprit de Jésus-Christ, les actions que le même Jésus-Christ a faites durant le temps de sa vie passible sur la terre. De sorte que, quand un chrétien fait oraison, il continue et accomplit l'oraison que Jésus-Christ a faite en la terre, lorsqu'il travaille, il continue et accomplit la vie laborieuse de Jésus-Christ; lorsqu'il converse avec le prochain en -esprit de charité, il continue et accomplit la vie conversante de Jésus-Christ; lorsqu'il prend son repas ou son repos chrétiennement, il continue et accomplit l'assujettissement que Jésus-Christ a voulu avoir à ces nécessités. Et ainsi de toutes les autres actions qui sont faites chrétiennement...

... « Vous voyez par là ce que c'est que la vie chrétienne: que c'est une continuation et accomplissement de la vie de Jésus; que toutes nos actions doivent être une continuation des actions de Jésus, que nous devons être comme autant de Jésus en la terre pour y continuer sa vie et ses oeuvres, et pour faire et souffrir tout ce que nous faisons et souffrons, saintement et divinement, dans l'esprit de Jésus, c'est-à-dire dans les dispositions saintes et divines, dans lesquelles ce même Jésus se comportait dans toutes ses actions et souffrances. »

Tout cela est fort net. Voici pourtant une page de son grand ouvrage, Le Cœur admirable de la très sacrée Mère de Dieu (1), qui met encore mieux en lumière, et notre union avec Jésus-Christ, notre chef, et les admirables conséquences qui en découlent:

1e « Notre-Seigneur est à vous, comme le chef est à ses membres; tout ce qui est à lui est à vous, son esprit, son Cœur, son corps, son âme et toutes les facultés de son corps et de son âme; et vous devez en faire usage comme de choses qui sont vôtres, pour servir, louer, aimer, et glorifier Dieu.

2e « Vous êtes à lui, comme les membres sont à leur chef. À raison de quoi il désire ardemment faire usage de tout ce qui est en vous pour le service et la gloire de son Père, comme de choses qui sont à lui.

3e « Non seulement il est à vous, mais il veut être en vous; il veut être vivant et régnant en vous, comme le chef est vivant et régnant dans ses membres, et il veut que tout ce qui est en lui soit vivant et régnant en vous - que son Esprit soit vivant et régnant dans votre esprit; que son Cœur soit vivant et régnant dans votre cœur; que toutes les puissances de son âme, tous ses sens, intérieurs et extérieurs, et toutes ses passions, soient vivantes et régnantes dans les facultés de votre âme, dans vos sens, intérieurs et extérieurs, et dans vos passions, afin que ces divines paroles s'accomplissent au regard de vous: Glorifiez et portez Dieu dans vos corps (1); et que la vie de Jésus paraisse visiblement même dans votre chair et dans votre extérieur (2).

4e « Non seulement vous êtes au Fils de Dieu, mais vous devez être en lui, comme les membres sont dans leur chef; tout ce qui est en vous doit être incorporé en lui et recevoir vie et conduite de lui: il n'y a point de véritable vie pour vous qu'en lui seul, qui est la très unique source de la vraie vie; hors de lui, il n'y a que mort et perdition pour vous; il doit être le seul principe de tous les mouvements, usages et fonctions de votre vie; enfin, vous ne devez vivre que de lui, en lui et pour lui, suivant ces divines paroles: Personne d'entre nous ne vit pour soi, et Personne ne meurt pour soi. Car, soit que nous vivions, nous vivons pour le Seigneur; soit que nous mourions, nous mourons pour le Seigneur; soit donc que nous vivions, soit que nous mourions, nous sommes au Seigneur. Car Jésus-Christ est mort et ressuscité, afin de régner sur les morts et les vivants (3).

5e « Vous n'êtes qu'un avec ce même Jésus, comme les membres ne sont qu'un avec leur chef; et, par conséquent, vous ne devez avoir qu'un même esprit, une même âme, une même vie, une même volonté, un même sentiment, un même cœur, tant corporel que spirituel avec lui, et lui-même doit être votre esprit, votre cœur, votre amour, votre vie et votre tout. »

Assurément, il était difficile d'exprimer avec une plus lumineuse concision, et l'essence de la vie chrétienne, et le principe intérieur qui préside à tous ses actes.

A noter, dans le 3e paragraphe, un membre de phrase bien digne de retenir notre attention; c'est qu'il faut que « la vie de Jésus paraisse visiblement même dans notre chair et dans notre extérieur », doctrine conforme à celle de l'Apôtre: Ut et vita Jesu manifestaretur in carne nostra mortali. Effectivement, cette vie de Jésus en nous et de nous en Jésus se manifeste au dehors par la perfection morale des actes et souvent par leur héroïsme; mais elle se traduit aussi, fréquemment sinon toujours, dans le corps même, par une sorte de rejaillissement, de rayonnement de l'âme sur la physionomie, dans l'attitude, dans la démarche. Alors se produit quelque chose d'analogue à ce qui se produisit en Jésus au jour de sa transfiguration: Et resplenduit facies ejus sicut sol; vestimenta autem ejus facta sunt alba sicut nix. Le regard s'illumine; le visage brille d'une beauté surhumaine, d'un éclat tout céleste; on sent dans toute la personne quelque chose de divin. Que de saints ont été ainsi transfigurés au lit de la mort, dans l'oraison au saint autel, après la communion! Mais, sans aller jusqu'à ces états extraordinaires, le vrai chrétien, uni à Jésus-Christ et -vivant de sa vie, respire dans son visage, dans sa parole, dans ses gestes, dans tout son extérieur, une paix, une modestie, une bonté miséricordieuse, une douceur, une humilité, charmante, une patience inaltérable, qui en fait un être tout céleste et une parfaite image du Christ. Christam induistis (1), vous devez revêtir, vous avez revêtu le Christ, aime à répéter saint Jean Eudes, à la suite de saint Paul; et lui-même n'était-il pas un portrait vivant de son divin Maître, tant il avait dépouillé le vieil homme et revêtu le nouveau, tant il marchait, sous la dépendance de Jésus, dans la justice et la sainteté véritable? (2)

SAINT JEAN EUDES

Il est évident d'ailleurs qu'une telle vie est admira blement féconde en fruits de vertu, en actes méritoires pour le ciel.

Elle l'est déjà du seul fait de notre union à Jésus par la grâce: Qui manet in me et ego in eo, hic fert fructum multum (1). « Tout de même, dit saint Jean Eudes (2), que les branches, les feuilles, les fleurs, les fruits et tout ce qui est dans un arbre, est à celui auquel le tronc de l'arbre appartient; ainsi, tant que vous appartiendrez à Jésus-Christ et que vous lui serez uni par la grâce, toute votre vie avec toutes ses dépendances, toutes les actions que vous ferez qui de soi ne seront pas mauvaises, lui appartiendront. »

Elle l'est bien davantage par l'oblation répétée, que nous faisons à Jésus, même de nos plus petites actions, et jusque de nos respirations et des battements de notre cœur, avec l'intention de les accomplir pour sa gloire et pour son amour. Mais nous reviendrons sur ces idées. Pour le moment, contemplons à loisir la vie idéale, à laquelle saint Jean Eudes veut conduire et conduit son disciple fidèle.

II. - BUT IDÉAL DE SA SPIRITUALITÉ

Saint Jean Eudes se propose, évidemment, le même but que tous les maîtres de la vie spirituelle, c'est-à-dire le règne de la grâce dans les âmes. Il veut que, dans ses disciples, non seulement elle vive, mais qu'elle règne et domine partout et toujours, à l'exclusion de toute faute grave ou légère, voire de toute négligence: « Semper in vobis et maneat et regnet... in gratia Dei conversemini in hoc mundo (3). » Et ce règne, il veut

- (1) Joan., xv, 5. - (2) Royaume de Jésus, P. 1, S in. - le réaliser par une entière et amoureuse soumission à la volonté de Dieu, la meilleure des mères, dans la voie royale de la croix, suivie avec humilité, patience et amour, au moyen d'une sincère et vraie dévotion aux Cœurs sacrés de Jésus et de Marie, laquelle ne consiste pas seulement à les honorer et à les prier, mais à imiter, à reproduire leurs vertus, à vivre de leur vie.

Voilà sa caractéristique.

Le disciple de saint Jean Eudes mènera donc la vie immortelle et triomphante du Christ ressuscité: «Christus, resurgens ex mortuis, jam non moritur (1). » Le Christ ressuscité ne meurt plus: lui, non plus, ne mourra plus. Le Christ est mort pour le péché une seule fois pour toutes; lui aussi mourra au péché pour jamais. Le Christ vit désormais pour Dieu; lui, de même, ne vivra que pour Dieu. Il n'obéira plus à ses convoitises; ses membres ne seront plus des instruments d'iniquité, mais des instruments de justice; il évoluera dans une sainteté toujours grandissante, - au milieu des clartés de la foi, - avec une agilité toute divine, - avec une souplesse qui passe au travers de tous les obstacles, - sans se souiller ni se corrompre, au contact de la perversion du monde.

Et cette admirable évolution s'accomplira sous la conduite du Saint-Esprit, qui est l'Esprit de Jésus, puisqu'il procède du Fils aussi bien que du Père et que, d'autre part, la sainte humanité du Sauveur, remplie de ce divin Esprit, suivit toujours sa conduite et ses inspirations. Le Saint-Esprit, voilà, Pour saint Eudes, le Maître des maîtres dans la vie spirituelle, le conducteur des âmes chrétiennes en même temps que leur force, dans l'ensemble et les détails de leur vie, celui dont elles ne doivent jamais gêner l'action. Aussi, chez lui, point de ces méthodes savantes, qui ont pour but d'utiliser toutes les ressources et de les faire concourir au succès d'un exercice. « La pratique des pratiques, le secret des secrets, la dévotion des dévotions, écrit-il, c'est de n'avoir point d'attache à aucune pratique ou exercice particulier de dévotion, mais d'avoir un grand soin, dans tous vos exercices, de vous donner au Saint-Esprit de Jésus, et de vous y donner avec humilité, confiance et détachement de toutes choses, afin que, vous trouvant sans attache à votre esprit propre, et à vos propres dévotions et dispositions, il ait plein pouvoir et liberté d'agir en vous selon ses désirs, de mettre en vous telles dispositions et tels sentiments de dévotion qu'il voudra, et de vous conduire par les voies qu'il lui plaira. »

Puis, après vous être ainsi donné à lui, « rendez-vous fidèle à recevoir les bons sentiments et dispositions qu'il mettra en vous, et à suivre son mouvement, son attrait et sa conduite (1) ».

Le disciple de saint Eudes sera donc en tout régi par l'Esprit-Saint; il fera par conséquent toutes ses actions dans l'Esprit de Jésus et dans les dispositions saintes et divines de Jésus; et cette docilité constante le conduira à la plus haute sainteté, parce que les dons du Saint-Esprit agiront pleinement en lui, pour développer et perfectionner les vertus morales de prudence, de justice, de force et de tempérance, et leurs annexes, et pour donner aux vertus théologiques de foi, d'espérance et de charité, principe de son union avec Dieu, leur plein épanouissement. De sorte que, transfiguré à l'image du Christ par les actes consommés, héroïques, de plusieurs vertus signalées dans l'Évangile, il se rapprochera excellemment de sa fin et de la souveraine béatitude qu'elle engendre; et, en raison de la perfection de ses actes vertueux et de l'amour de Dieu qui les anime, il sera rempli de délices ineffables, analogues à l'inexprimable saveur de fruits parvenus à leur maturité.

Dès lors, quelle vie toute céleste, vie ici-bas cachée en Dieu avec le Christ, mais qui, un jour, se révélera là-haut dans toute sa splendeur; vie où toutes les pensées et tous les désirs tendent vers le ciel, où c'est dans le ciel qu'est fixé le cœur!

Vie de louange et d'action de grâces, et d'oraison perpétuelle. Sans doute il y a, dans la journée, des moments, des heures même, où, dans une respectueuse et amoureuse élévation de son esprit et de son cœur, le disciple de saint Eudes s'entretient, converse avec Jésus, avec son Dieu, le considère et le contemple dans ses divines perfections, dans ses mystères et dans ses œuvres; l'adore, le bénit, l'aime, le glorifie, se donne à lui, s'humilie devant lui, implore sa miséricorde, apprend à imiter, à reproduire ses vertus, ses exemples ou ceux de ses saints, lui demande tout ce dont il a besoin pour le servir et l'aimer; tout cela, encore une fois, suivant le mouvement de l'Esprit-Saint. Ce sont là des moments, des heures délicieuses et fécondes, où, uni à Jésus, à son Dieu, qui est son centre, sa fin, son souverain bien, il le possède et est possédé par lui, il lui rend ses devoirs d'adoration, de louange et d'amour, il reçoit de lui lumières, bénédictions, mille témoignages de tendresse, il vit déjà très amplement de la vie du ciel. Mais sa journée entière doit s'écouler dans les mêmes sentiments, dans la même application, dans la même élévation d'esprit et de cœur, pour répondre à la volonté de Notre-Seigneur qui veut que nous priions toujours et sans interruption (1). Aussi fera-t-il toutes ses actions en esprit d'oraison, commençant par les offrir à Notre-Seigneur, et répétant, de temps à autre, cette oblation pendant leur accomplissement. Aussi lira-t-il de bons livres, sans hâte, sans précipitation, mais à loisir, s'arrêtant à considérer, à réfléchir, à goûter les vérités qui le touchent davantage, afin de les imprimer dans son esprit et de les traduire dans sa conduite. Aussi prendra-t-il plaisir à converser avec le prochain de Dieu et des choses de Dieu, puisant en Dieu tout ce qu'il dit, sans perdre la pensée de Dieu présent partout, dans les dispositions et intentions avec lesquelles Jésus-Christ conversait lui-même avec les hommes. Sicut ex Deo, coram Deo, in Christo (2).

Dès lors la pensée de Dieu présidera à toutes ses démarches; et, marchant en sa présence, il se tiendra dans la réserve et la modestie; pas d'éclats dans la voix, pas de rire bruyant; sa conversation sera marquée au coin de la grâce et de la sagesse; l'Esprit-Saint lui-même lui inspirera, lui dictera ses réponses. Bienveillant, reconnaissant à l'égard de tous, et surtout de ses bienfaiteurs, il se montrera miséricordieux et compatissant aux ignorances et aux faiblesses d'autrui.

Que dis-je? Il marchera dans la dilection, à l'exemple de son divin Maître, et pour accomplir le précepte qu'il lui en a donné autant que pour le payer de son amour; de là une charité continuelle envers les autres; de là le support des défauts, la recherche de la paix, le souci des intérêts, de l'édification, du bon plaisir du prochain, sincèrement chéri, respecté dans ses droits et entouré d'honneur; de là le pardon des injures, l'amour des ennemis, le bien même rendu pour le mal, les bons offices répondant aux mauvais procédés, le dévouement le plus absolu et poussé jusqu'à la mort.

Et toutes ces admirables choses s'accompliront dans l'humilité, la mansuétude, la patience, l'union des Cœurs.

Et les oeuvres salutaires se multiplieront, et tous les devoirs de la vie privée et de la vie sociale seront remplis dans leur perfection, grâce à la vigilance, à la prière, à la force puisée en Jésus-Christ.

Voilà, en peu de mots, l'idéal visé par saint Eudes voyons par quels chemins il y conduit.

III. - MÉTHODE POUR ATTEINDRE CET IDÉAL

Saint Jean Eudes demande deux actes fondamentaux à ses disciples: un acte de RENONCEMENT à soi-même, un acte de DONATION à Jésus. En cela se résume sa méthode. Écoutons-le:

« Vous devez, tous les jours une fois, reconnaître votre misère, telle que Dieu la voit, et renoncer... entièrement à vous-même, à votre propre esprit et à toute la puissance et capacité que vous pourriez penser et ressentir en vous. Car toute la puissance qu'Adam a laissée dans la nature de l'homme n'est qu'impuissance; le sentiment que nous en pourrions avoir n'est qu'illusion, présomption et fausse opinion de nous-mêmes; et nous n'aurons jamais une puissance véritable et une liberté parfaite au bien qu'en renonçant à nous-mêmes et en sortant de nous-mêmes, et de tout ce qui est nôtre pour vivre dans l'esprit et la vertu de Jésus.

SA SPIRITUALITÉ 321 -

« En suite de cette renonciation, adorez Jésus-Christ, donnez-vous à lui, et priez-le de prendre en vous les droits d'Adam et les vôtres aussi, puisqu'il a acquis les droits des pécheurs par son sang et par sa mort, et de vouloir vivre en vous au lieu d'Adam, et de vous déposséder de votre nature, et de s'approprier tout ce que vous êtes et d'en prendre l'usage. Protestez-lui que vous voulez vous démettre de tout ce que vous êtes entre ses mains, et que vous désirez sortir de votre esprit propre, qui est un esprit d'orgueil et de vanité, et de toutes vos intentions, inclinations et dispositions, pour ne plus vivre que dans son esprit, dans ses intentions, inclinations et dispositions divines et adorables (1). »

Tels sont les deux actes qu'il introduit dans chacun des exercices de piété qu'il recommande, et dans l'accomplissement de tout acte de vertu. Et la raison n'en est pas seulement le néant de la créature et le caractère surnaturel de la vie chrétienne, mais aussi la déchéance originelle de notre nature. En effet, le péché d'Adam n'a pas seulement dépouillé la nature humaine des dons surnaturels dont Dieu l'avait gratifiée, il l'a encore pervertie; elle a, par lui, perdu sa rectitude primitive, si bien que, désordonnées, ses inclinations se portent, désormais, sans frein ni mesure, vers les biens inférieurs. C'est cette dépravation de la nature que l'Écriture appelle la concupiscence, la chair, le vieil homme, dépravation qui constitue pour nous un obstacle, permanent au bien et un entraînement continu au mal. De là vient que nous trouvons en nous, dans notre sensualité, dans notre orgueil, dans notre esprit propre, dans notre volonté propre, dans notre amour-propre,

(1) Royaume de Jésus, P. II, § xxviii.

322 - SAINT JEAN EUDES

et généralement dans tout ce qui en nous vient de nous, le principe de tous les péchés, le germe de tous les vices, et, selon l'expression de notre saint, un véritable « antéchrist » (1).

« Si nous nous regardons, dit-il, en la lumière de Dieu, nous verrons que, de nous-mêmes, en tant que pécheurs, nous sommes autant de démons incarnés, autant de Lucifers, autant d'Antéchrists, n'ayant rien en nous de nous-mêmes, qui ne soit contraire à Jésus-Christ; que nous portons en nous un démon, un Lucifer, un Antéchrist, à savoir notre volonté propre, notre orgueil et notre amour-propre, qui sont pires que tous les démons, que Lucifer et que l'Antéchrist...; que, de nous-mêmes, nous ne sommes qu'un enfer plein d'horreur, de malédiction, de péché, d'abomination; que nous avons en nous, en principe et en semence, tous les péchés de la terre et de l'enfer, la corruption que le péché a mise en nous étant une racine et une source de toutes sortes de péchés... (2). »

Puisque telle est la corruption de la nature par le péché, nous n'avons évidemment d'autre voie de salut que de RENONCER A NOUS-MÊMES, et de NOUS DONNER A JÉSUS, pour agir sous son influence. Saint Eudes ne cesse de nous le répéter. Il nous demande, il nous presse de combattre constamment les instincts dépravés, qui sont le grand obstacle à la vie de Jésus en nous. Or, ces instincts font partie de nous-mêmes, ils sont nous-mêmes, tels que nous sommes déformés par le péché; il faut donc, et notre saint l'exige, que nous travaillions sans relâche à sortir de nous-mêmes, à nous dépouiller de nous-mêmes, et, comme il le dit dans son énergique langage, à « nous anéantir nous-mêmes ». « C'est ici, ajoute-t-il, le premier principe et le premier pas de la vie chrétienne. C'est ce qui s'appelle, dans la Parole sacrée et dans les livres des saints Pères, se perdre soi-même, mourir à soi-même, périr à soi-même, renoncer à soi-même. C'est un des principaux soins, que nous devons avoir, un des premiers exercices auquel nous devons nous employer, par les pratiques de l'abnégation, de l'humiliation et de la mortification intérieure et extérieure, et un des plus puissants moyens dont nous devons nous servir pour former et établir Jésus en nous (1).

Cet anéantissement de ce qu'il y a de vicié en nous n'est pas l'œuvre d'un jour, ni d'une année, c'est l'œuvre de toute la vie; il suppose des efforts incessants. Car la chair ne meurt que lentement; encore les saints sont-ils les seuls à la maîtriser complètement. Il ne suffit donc pas de renoncer de temps en temps à la nature corrompue: il faut la pratique habituelle du renoncement et de la mortification; seule elle conduit à des résultats durables.

D'ailleurs, quels que soient nos efforts, ils ne font, sachons-le bien, que seconder l'action de la grâce, sans laquelle ils demeureraient stériles. Dans l'ordre surnaturel, c'est de Jésus qu'il faut tout attendre, même la destruction des obstacles qui s'opposent à son action. Aussi, tout en nous demandant de faire tout ce qui dépend de nous pour dépouiller le vieil homme, saint Eudes insiste-t-il pour que nous priions Jésus de nous en délivrer:

« Anéantissons-nous souvent, écrit-il, aux pieds de Jésus et tout ce qui est de nous, et supplions-le, par ce

très grand amour par lequel il s'est anéanti lui-même, d'employer sa divine puissance, pour nous anéantir et pour s'établir en nous (1). »

D'autre part, s'agit-il d'accomplir des actes positifs de vertu, nécessité est également de recourir à Jésus, sans lequel nous ne pouvons rien. La pensée du bien vient de lui; c'est lui qui nous la donne, et de même la volonté de l'accomplir; c'est également lui qui, dans son accomplissement, soutient notre volonté. Il est donc, par ses inspirations, le principe du peu de bien que nous faisons, en même temps qu'il en est le consommateur par les secours de toute espèce qu'il nous prodigue pour le conduire à sa perfection. Il est clair, d'autre part, que l'action de Jésus doit être secondée par notre coopération. Aussi saint Jean Eudes, loin de nous dispenser du travail pénible qu'exige la pratique de la vertu, veut-il que nous ne reculions devant aucun effort pour nous y exercer, et que, de notre côté, nous y travaillions comme si nous n'attendions rien du côté de Dieu. Mais, ce qui importe le plus à ses yeux, c'est de nous OFFRIR et de nous DONNER à Jésus, en le priant de prendre possession de nos cœurs, d'y « imprimer » lui-même une image parfaite de ses vertus et de ses mystères, et d'y établir le règne de son saint amour.

'De là cette prière qu'il invite à adresser chaque jour aux Coeurs de Jésus et de Marie: Nous vous offrons notre cœur, nous vous le donnons, nous vous le consacrons, nous vous l'immolons, acceptez-le et possédez-le tout entier, purifiez-le, éclairez-le, et sanctifiez-le, afin qu'en lui vous viviez et régniez maintenant et toujours dans tous les siècles des siècles.

Toutefois cet aperçu général sur ces deux actes fondamentaux de la méthode spirituelle de notre Saint ne suffit pas à en donner une idée précise. Il est donc nécessaire que nous entrons dans plus de détails; afin de montrer clairement de quels éléments chacun se compose, à quels objets ils s'appliquent, à quels buts ils tendent.

A) La loi du Renoncement d'après saint Eudes son objet, son étendue, sa perfection.

Notre Saint rattache naturellement au baptême la loi du renoncement, comme toute sa théorie sur la vie chrétienne. En recevant le baptême, dit-il, « nous avons promis à Dieu de renoncer à Satan et à ses oeuvres, c'est-à-dire à toutes sortes de péchés, et à ses pompes, c'est-à-dire au monde (1) ».

Satan, le péché, le monde, trois objets qui, à certains égards, n'en font qu'un, car le péché est l'œuvre à laquelle pousse Satan, et le monde est l'instrument dont il se sert, l'auxiliaire qu'il emploie pour amener les hommes à l'accomplir; trois objets aussi auxquels chaque jour, et plusieurs fois le jour, le chrétien doit renoncer sérieusement, Joncièrement, de toute la force de sa volonté.

À ces trois objets du renoncement, Notre-Seigneur en a ajouté un quatrième: celui qui veut le suivre, c'est-à-dire marcher dans ses voies, guidé par ses maximes, animé de ses sentiments, pratiquant ses vertus, en un mot, vivant de sa vie, doit se renoncer lui-même. Et ce renoncement, saint Eudes le réclame de ses disciples avec une singulière perfection, comme nous le verrons.

SAINT JEAN EUDES

a) Satan. - Saint Eudes n'est point de ces prédicateurs ou de ces moralistes qui craignent de parler du diable et de lui attribuer une grande part dans les crimes et les iniquités qui se commettent par le monde; surtout il n'est point de ceux qui n'ont aucun souci de sa désastreuse activité, si même ils n'ont cessé d'y croire. Lui, il croit, lui, il sait, lui, il rappelle sans cesse au chrétien que Satan existe, que les démons existent, que ce ne sont point des êtres imaginaires, mais des êtres très réels, très actifs, répandus de toutes parts, in caelestibus, dans les airs, dit saint Paul; qu'ils rôdent autour de nous, selon l'affirmation de saint Pierre, pour dévorer les âmes, c'est-à-dire pour tuer en elles la vie de la grâce, la vie de Dieu; pour détruire en elles le règne de Jésus-Christ et y établir le leur, pour les arracher au ciel et à ses éternelles délices et les précipiter dans l'enfer et ses feux vengeurs.

Il sait et il répète fréquemment, avec saint Paul, que le démon, instigateur et père du péché, traite le pécheur comme un esclave, dont il dispose à son gré. Car, si, d'après la doctrine de l'Apôtre, l'âme juste, toute abandonnée aux mouvements de l'Esprit-Saint, obéit docilement au moindre souffle de la grâce, l'âme pécheresse, elle, livrée à la puissance de l'esprit malin, se prostitue à ses tyranniques volontés. Elle va où il veut; elle fait ce qu'il veut; démarches et paroles, il lui dicte tout, il l'emploie à l'extension de son empire; et, lorsqu'elle ose secouer ses chaînes, il lui en fait sentir tout le poids. Que l'esclave de Satan a donc de peine à recouvrer sa liberté!

Il sait cela, et il sait aussi que « le péché change les enfants de Dieu en enfants du diable »; que le démon devient le père de celui qui l'a fait: non qu'il lui coïncide munique sa nature, mais parce qu'il lui insuffle son esprit, ses moeurs, ses passions. Le pécheur agit à son exemple~ il l'imité avec une vraie sympathie: comme lui, il se meut dans le mensonge; comme lui, il se constitue dans la révolte et dans la haine.

En conséquence, nous dit saint Eudes, tandis que les Justes, fils de Dieu, ont droit à l'héritage du ciel, où la vue de Dieu les rendra semblables à Dieu, les pécheurs, fils du diable, n'attendant d'autre héritage que « les feux, les flammes, les tourments et les rages de l'enfer », partage de leur père, où leur ressemblance avec lui se consommera pour l'éternité.

Il sait encore, et il le rappelle sans cesse, que « le péché change les membres de Jésus-Christ en membres de Satan », c'est-à-dire qu'au lieu que le juste, membre du corps mystique de Jésus-Christ, est, sous la dépendance de Jésus, son chef, mû par les impulsions de la grâce actuelle, le pécheur, devenu membre de Satan, est, sous la dépendance de Satan, mû par les inspirations, par les impulsions de Satan. C'est par Satan que les actes criminels se multiplient, que les mauvaises inclinations se développent, que les habitudes perverses se contractent et se resserrent; c'est par Satan que l'imagination nourrit les appétits dépravés, que la pensée alimente les désirs désordonnés de la volonté; c'est Satan, enfin, qui, par la licence du regard, de la lecture, des spectacles, foment dans le pécheur la licence du rêve, de l'imagination, de la pensée. Bien plus, Satan fait le plus souvent de ses membres ses coadjuteurs et ses ministres.

Notre Saint sait tout cela, et il veut en convaincre ses disciples. Aussi leur demande-t-il de renoncer à Satan, au moins chaque matin et chaque soir, en disant: Abrenantio Satanae, Je renonce à Satan.' Aussi les exhorte-t-il à se mettre en garde contre ses embûches, à lui résister énergiquement, victorieusement, au moment de l'attaque, et il a toute une section de sa Regula Domini Jesu (1) pour les revêtir, à cet effet, d'armes à la fois défensives et offensives, empruntées à saint Paul. Ils doivent d'abord se tenir fermes, et prêts à la lutte, bien instruits de la vérité sur ce qu'ils sont, sur les ennemis qu'ils ont à combattre, sur les conditions et les conséquences du combat. Puis, qu'ils revêtent la cuirasse de sa justice, c'est-à-dire qu'ils recouvrent, s'il en est besoin, et qu'ils conservent et accroissent en eux l'état de grâce; car, pour se battre, il faut être vivant, pour vaincre, il faut entretenir et développer ses forces, ce qui se fait principalement par l'usage des sacrements. Qu'ils, prennent pour chaussure le zèle« à marcher dans les voies de l'Évangile et à y faire marcher les autres: l'apostolat n'est-il pas le grand moyen de se préserver des défaites et des chutes? Qu'ils emploient, pour éteindre les traits enflammés du méchant, le bouclier de la foi, c'est-à-dire la méditation des principales vérités de la religion. Que leur tête soit protégée contre les coups mortels par le casque du salut, qui n'est autre que la confiance en notre divin Sauveur. Que leur main s'arme du glaive de la parole de Dieu, car Satan, devant elle, perd son audace et s'enfuit. Mais aussi et surtout, que, dans le combat, ils prient, ils prient sans cesse oralement, mentalement, et qu'ils veillent assidûment, afin de ne point être surpris.

Voilà comment un disciple de saint Eude triomphera du démon, se délivrera de ses assauts, et méritera la couronne promise aux vainqueurs par Jésus-Christ.

b) Le péché. -- « Le chrétien, nous dit en second lieu saint Eudes, est tenu de renoncer aux œuvres de Satan, c'est-à-dire à toute sorte de vices et de péchés », et, ce disant, il s'appuie sur cette parole de saint Paul: « Qui autem sunt Christi, carnem suam crucifixerunt, cum vitis et concupiscentiis - Pour ceux qui appartiennent au Christ, ils ont crucifié leur chair avec ses vices et ses convoitises (1). » Et d'où dérive pour lui cette obligation? De ce que le chrétien, continuant sur la terre la vie sainte et divine de Jésus, doit par là même « revêtir les sentiments et les inclinations de Jésus, conformément à cet enseignement du même Apôtre:

« Hoc sentite in vobis quod et in Christo Jesu: Ayez en vous les sentiments de Jésus-Christ (2). »

Or, ajoute notre Saint, « Jésus-Christ a eu en soi deux sortes, de sentiments extrêmement contraires, à savoir - un sentiment d'amour infini au regard de son Père et de nous, et un sentiment de haine extrême au regard de ce qui est contraire à la gloire de son Père et à notre salut, c'est-à-dire au regard du péché; car comme il aime son Père et nous infiniment, il hait le péché infiniment (3). »

D'où il suit que c'est pour procurer la gloire de son Père et notre salut et, conséquemment, pour anéantir en nous le péché, que Jésus-Christ s'est incarné, qu'il a enduré mille tourments, qu'il a sacrifié sa vie: donc le chrétien, qui continue les sentiments de Jésus, doit, à son tour, poursuivre la guerre qu'il a faite au péché, et, de même qu'il est « obligé d'aimer Dieu souverainement et de toutes ses forces », il est « obligé de haïr le péché infiniment et de toutes ses forces ».

Pour cela, évidemment, il ne faut pas regarder le

SAINT JEAN EUDES

péché comme les hommes le regardent, « avec des yeux charnels et aveugles », en jugeant par ses effets sensibles, par l'influence qu'il exerce sur la santé, la fortune, la sécurité, les avantages sociaux, et, si ces différents biens n'ont pas trop à en souffrir, l'excusant, ou du moins disposés à l'excuser sur la faiblesse humaine, sur la force de l'habitude, ou en raison de sa généralité. Mais il faut le regarder comme Dieu, comme Jésus-Christ le regardent, avec des yeux éclairés par les lumières de la foi. Il faut considérer les châtements terribles dont Dieu l'a puni dans l'ange, dans l'homme, dans son Fils bien-aimé, chargé des péchés du monde, Il faut considérer notre divin Sauveur, l'innocence et la sainteté même, entrant dans les sentiments de son Père à l'égard du péché, et l'expiant par les plus cruelles souffrances et par la mort la plus ignominieuse et la plus horrible, tant il le trouve exécration, abominable. Or, d'où vient cette laideur, cette malice du péché? De ce qu'il introduit un désordre essentiel dans les rapports établis par le Créateur entre l'homme et lui; de ce que volontairement, délibérément, l'homme se détourne de son souverain Seigneur et Maître, de son Rédempteur, de son Père, son Ami, sa fin dernière, pour se tourner vers la créature et se donner à elle; en sorte que le péché est la négation pratique des perfections divines, le mépris pratique des droits divins. « Il porte donc en lui, conclut notre Saint, une malice, une folie, une laideur et une horreur aussi grandes en quelque manière que Dieu est infini en bonté, en sagesse, en beauté et en sainteté (1). »

Il faut, de plus, considérer en détail les funestes conséquences, les désastreux effets du péché: c'est

homicide, puisqu'il est la seule cause de la mort du corps et de la mort surnaturelle de l'âme. C'est un dèicide, puisque le pécheur a fait mourir Jésus-Christ sur la croix, et qu'il le crucifie encore tous les jours en lui-même. C'est l'anéantissement de l'ordre de la nature, puisque le pécheur se constitue son propre Dieu; qu'il préfère sa -volonté, son intérêt, son plaisir et sa gloire, à la volonté, à l'intérêt, au bon plaisir, à la gloire de Dieu; qu'il ne veut point avoir d'autre fin que soi, d'autre règle que sa passion, d'autres lois que ses inclinations; puisque, d'autre part, il se fait comme le centre et la fin de l'être et de la vie de ses semblables et des autres créatures, se les appropriant pour ainsi dire, et exigeant qu'ils se plient à ses volontés et à ses desseins. C'est l'anéantissement de l'ordre de la grâce, puisque, se séparant de Dieu, le pécheur se sépare de la source de la vie; et que, Dieu se retirant, la grâce sanctifiante se retire, et avec elle la charité, et tout le cortège des habitudes infuses, vertus et dons, sauf la foi et l'espérance qui subsistent, mais amoindries, sans force et sans fécondité surnaturelles. C'est, par suite, l'anéantissement de l'ordre de la gloire: puisque le pécheur, mort sans repentir et sans pardon, ne verra jamais Dieu, n'aimera jamais Dieu, ne possédera jamais Dieu; mais que, livré à la haine de Dieu et à la rage qu'elle engendre, sans paix, sans joie, il sera éternellement en proie à d'inexprimables souffrances, dans un lieu de ténèbres et d'horrible confusion; en sorte qu'au lieu de chanter les miséricordes de Dieu, il maudira sa justice.

Enfin il faut voir dans le péché le mal des maux et le malheur des malheurs; car, dit notre Saint, « il est la source de tous les maux et de tous les malheurs qui remplissent la terre et qui comblent l'enfer; voire il n'y a que ce seul mal au monde qui doive être appelé

3 3 2 -

SAINT JEAN EUDES

mal... il est plus effroyable que la mort, plus affreux que le diable et plus épouvantable que l'enfer, puisque tout ce qu'il y a d'horrible, d'affreux et d'effroyable dans la mort, dans le diable et dans l'enfer, procède du péché. »

Conclusion: tout chrétien animé, pénétré des sentiments de Jésus, doit, à ce spectacle, s'écrier avec notre Saint « O péché, que tu es détestable! Oh! si les hommes te connaissent! Oh! qu'il faut bien dire qu'il y a quelque chose en toi qui est infiniment plus horrible que tout ce qu'on en peut dire et penser, puisque l'âme qui est souillée de ta corruption ne peut être lavée et purifiée que dans le sang d'un Dieu, et que tu ne peux être détruit et anéanti que par la mort et l'anéantissement d'un Homme-Dieu! (1) »

Donc le disciple de saint Eudes aura le péché mortel en horreur: il le craindra plus que la peste, plus que la mort, plus que tous les maux imaginables; il conservera toujours une puissante résolution de souffrir plutôt mille morts avec toutes sortes de tourments que de se séparer de Dieu par un seul péché mortel.

Et comme le péché véniel achemine au péché mortel, en paralysant l'activité de la grâce, en détachant le cœur de Dieu pour l'attacher à la créature; comme il participe, d'ailleurs, dans une certaine mesure, aux désordres du péché mortel, puisque celui qui s'en rend coupable se recherche lui-même et non Dieu, qu'il abuse de la créature et la détourne de sa fin, qu'il s'oppose au progrès de la grâce en son âme, et que, son degré de grâce étant moindre, son degré de gloire sera moindre aussi; comme enfin, pour l'effacer, Notre-Seigneur a dû verser son sang et sacrifier sa vie; le vrai chrétien l'aura, lui aussi, en horreur, et il aimera mieux mourir et souffrir toutes sortes de mépris et de tourments plutôt que d'en commettre un seul, si léger soit-il. S'il ne sent pas en lui ces dispositions, il priera Jésus de les y établir, et il ne se donnera pas de repos qu'il ne l'ait obtenu. Quesi, par surprise ou par faiblesse, il lui échappe quelque faute légère, il tâchera de la réparer aussitôt par une fidélité plus généreuse, par un amour de Dieu plus pur, plus fort, voire même héroïque. Enfin si, par malheur, il tombait dans une faute grave, il se relèverait incontinent au moyen de la contrition et de la confession, et reprendrait ses premières résolutions.

c) Le monde et les choses du monde. - « Ce n'est pas assez pour un chrétien, enseigne notre Saint, d'être détaché du vice et d'avoir en horreur toute sorte de péché; il est encore nécessaire que vous travailliez soigneusement et fortement à vous établir dans un parfait dégagement du monde et des choses du monde (1). »

Renoncer au monde et aux choses du monde, se dégager du monde et des choses du monde, il n'est guère d'idées sur lesquelles notre Saint revienne plus souvent dans ses ouvrages, de dispositions qu'il réclame davantage de ceux qui se rangent sous sa conduite. Pour lui c'est une condition nécessaire de toute vie sincèrement chrétienne. Comment, en effet, être dégagé du vice, avoir en horreur tout péché, si l'on se complait, même légèrement, dans ce qui y conduit inévitablement? Aussi demande-t-il à ses disciples de travailler soigneusement, c'est-à-dire avec réflexion et discernement, en se rendant un compte exact et des choses et de leurs propres actes, fortement, c'est-à-dire de toute leur âme, sans discontinuité, à s'établir dans ce parfait dégagement.

Mais qu'entendre par le monde et les choses du monde? Il est nécessaire de le savoir, pour travailler à s'en dégager.

Le monde, saint Eudes nous le définit nettement un ensemble de vies et de mœurs, de sentiments et d'inclinations, de lois et de maximes, inspirés par un esprit radicalement opposé à celui de Jésus-Christ: vies et mœurs déréglées, puisqu'elles vont à l'encontre de la règle établie par Dieu; vies et mœurs corrompues, puisque ce dérèglement entraîne à toutes les faiblesses, à tous les abaissements, à toutes les dégradations, à tous les vices, inclinations et sentiments pervers, puisqu'ils portent et aboutissent au mal, qui est le renversement de l'ordre voulu par le Créateur; lois et maximes pernicieuses, puisqu'elles font, dans le temps et l'éternité, le malheur et la perte de ceux qui les suivent; esprit damnable enfin, car c'est l'esprit de Satan, qui travaille à damner.

Mais vies et mœurs, inclinations et sentiments, lois et maximes, esprit, ne sont pas des entités ayant une existence propre en dehors de l'humanité; elles n'existent réellement que dans les hommes soumis aux influences et à l'empire de Satan, et non de Jésus-Christ. En sorte que, en définitive, ces hommes constituent ce qu'on appelle le monde, et ils sont de trois sortes: en premier lieu, tous ceux qui, livrés à Satan, enchaînés à ses volontés, vendus à sa cause, travaillent à l'extension de son royaume et à la destruction du royaume de Jésus-Christ; en second lieu, tous ceux qui, sans être aussi pervers, vivent comme si Jésus-Christ n'existait pas, comme s'il n'était pas venu les sauver, comme s'il ne s'était pas fait leur maître, leur docteur, leur guide; en troisième lieu, tous les mauvais chrétiens qui veulent allier Satan et Jésus-Christ et servir deux maîtres à la fois: esprits pleins d'ombres et de lacunes, où s'opère un triste mélange des opinions du monde et des vues de la foi; pauvres gens qui ne voudraient pas se séparer de l'Église, mais qui ne se plient guère à ses lois. A cette catégorie peuvent se rattacher des chrétiens sincères, qui, momentanément, par inadvertance, ignorance, lâcheté, négligence, tiédeur, amour-propre, esprit propre, volonté propre, professent les maximes du monde, obéissent à ses lois, cèdent à ses sentiments, suivent ses inclinations, se plient à ses mœurs, adoptent sa vie.

Quant aux choses du monde, nous dit saint Eudes, c'est « tout ce que le monde estime, aime et recherche tant, à savoir: les honneurs et louanges des hommes, les vains plaisirs et contentements, les richesses et commodités temporelles, les amitiés et affections qui sont fondées sur la chair et le sang, sur l'amour-propre et le propre intérêt ».

Eh bien, à ce monde qui est l'ennemi de Jésus, qui lui a été et qui lui est toujours opposé, qui l'a toujours persécuté et qui le persécute encore, qui le persécutera et le crucifiera jusqu'à la consommation des siècles; à ce monde dont les sentiments et les inclinations, les lois et les maximes, la vie et l'esprit combattent sans cesse les sentiments et les inclinations, les lois et les maximes, la vie et l'esprit de Jésus; comme aux choses du monde, qui tendent à entraîner les âmes au péché et à la perdition; le vrai chrétien, le vrai disciple de saint Eudes, doit renoncer entièrement, dire un éternel adieu. Non que, pour cela, il quitte le monde et « se renferme entre quatre murailles », à Moins d'une vocation spéciale; mais il fera « une profession publique, généreuse et constante de ne point vivre de la vie du monde, de ne point se conduire par son esprit et par ses lois »; il se fera une « sainte gloire d'être chrétien, d'appartenir à Jésus-Christ, et de préférer les saintes maximes et vérités de l'Évangile aux pernicieuses et fausses maximes » du monde; il montrera « autant de courage et de fermeté pour se départir généreusement des lois, des sentiments et inclinations du monde, et pour mépriser vertueusement tous ses vains discours, toutes ses opinions trompeuses, que » le monde « fait paraître de témérité et d'impiété à mépriser méchamment les lois et les maximes chrétiennes, et à se moquer impertinemment de ceux qui les suivent ».

Il ira plus loin. Non content de se séparer du monde et des choses du monde, il les aura en horreur, comme Jésus-Christ, son divin Chef. Jésus-Christ a haï le monde, il le haïra; Jésus-Christ a condamné le monde, il le condamnera; Jésus-Christ a maudit, excommunié le monde, il le maudira, il l'excommuniera. Avec Jésus-Christ, il regardera les choses du monde, plaisirs, honneurs, richesses, amitiés et affections mondaines, comme néant et fumée, tromperie et illusion, vanité et affliction d'esprit. Et, comme il connaît sa faiblesse et la puissance de son ennemi, il demandera chaque jour à Jésus-Christ d'imprimer en tout son être la haine, l'horreur, l'abomination du monde et des choses du monde; il fuira plus que la peste les lieux, les personnes, les compagnies où l'on ne fait qu'en parler; car impossible en les fréquentant de goûter les délices de la conversation du Bien-Aimé; il n'aura d'amitié et de communication qu'avec les personnes qu'il peut aider ou qui peuvent l'aider, d'exemple ou de parole, à aimer Jésus, à vivre dans son esprit, à détester tout ce qui lui est contraire (1).

d) Le dégagement de soi. - Tout cela ne suffit point, selon saint Eudes, appuyé sur la parole de Jésus, pour être dans un parfait dégagement - il faut encore se renoncer soi-même, c'est-à-dire « renoncer à son propre esprit, à son propre sens, à sa propre volonté, à ses désirs et inclinations, à son amour-propre, qui porte à haïr et à éviter tout ce qui peut apporter quelque mortification à l'esprit et à la chair, à aimer et à rechercher tout ce qui peut leur donner quelque plaisir (2) ».

Et cela pour deux raisons: sans doute parce que la nature humaine est dépravée, mais surtout parce que Jésus-Christ, chef et exemplaire du chrétien, « a vécu dans un tel dégagement de soi, dans un tel anéantissement de son esprit humain, de sa propre volonté et de l'amour de soi-même, qu'il n'a jamais rien fait par son propre sens et esprit humain, mais par la conduite de son Père; qu'il n'a jamais suivi sa propre volonté, mais celle de son Père »;... qu'il s'est privé en ce monde d'une gloire infinie et de tous les plaisirs et contentements humains », et qu'il a « recherché et embrassé tout ce qui pouvait le faire souffrir en son corps et en son âme ».

Donc le disciple de saint Eudes, qui, en tant que membre du Christ, doit entrer dans les sentiments et les dispositions de son chef, prendra « une puissante résolution » de vivre dans une entière séparation de lui-même, bien plus, dans l'oubli et la haine de lui-même. Il adorera Jésus dans son parfait dégagement de soi; et il le suppliera de lui accorder cette même grâce, et, dans une intime et parfaite union, de « le régir en toutes choses selon son esprit, sa volonté, son pur amour », qu'il s'agisse de contestations, de désirs, d'affections sensibles, de louanges, de sujets de mortification ou de consolation.

Saint Eudes exige plus encore pour la perfection de l'abnégation chrétienne. Il veut qu'on se détache en quelque façon de Dieu même, ou, pour parler plus exactement, « des douceurs et consolations qui accompagnent, d'ordinaire la grâce et l'amour de Dieu; des pieux desseins que l'on forme pour la gloire de Dieu; des désirs d'une plus grande perfection, d'un plus grand amour de Dieu; et même de celui d'être délivré de la prison du corps pour voir Dieu, lui être uni parfaitement, l'aimer purement et continuellement ». En tout cela, ce que nous devons rechercher uniquement, c'est la seule volonté, le seul contentement de Dieu, dans lesquels se trouvent la paix et le repos de notre esprit.

On voit combien le cardinal Pitra avait raison de dire, parlant des Constitutions de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, qu'il ne connaissait pas de règle qui poussât à une plus grande abnégation, et, partant, à une plus éminente sainteté. L'âme, ainsi dégagée de tout et d'elle-même, est, en effet, toute préparée à recevoir les impulsions du Saint-Esprit, à coopérer docilement à son action, à réaliser cet idéal de vie spirituelle esquissé plus haut.

Saint Eudes le reconnaît et l'affirme: « Ah! mon Sauveur, écrit-il, quelle gloire vous avez, quelles délices vous prenez, et que de grandes choses vous opérez dans une âme qui marche courageusement dans ces voies, abandonnant ainsi tout et se détachant de tout, voire de vous-même en une certaine manière, pour se donner toute à vous plus parfaitement! Comme vous l'unissez fortement à vous! Comme vous vous l'appropriez saintement! Comme vous la plongez divinement dans l'abîme de votre saint amour! Comme vous la transformez admirablement en vous-même, la revêtant de vos qualités, de votre esprit et de votre amour Ah! quels contentements, quelles suavités a une âme qui peut dire avec vérité: Mon Dieu, me voilà! libre et détaché de tout! Qui pourra m'empêcher maintenant de vous aimer parfaitement? (1) »

Si cet absolu et saint dégagement est la condition nécessaire de la vie de grâce idéale que nous avons exposée, il ne l'est pas moins de l'oblation, de la donation totale à Jésus qui la réalise et dont nous avons maintenant à préciser les éléments.

B) Oblation, Donation à Jésus

On. s'offre, on se donne à Jésus, d'après saint Eudes: a) pour s'associer à sa vie et la reproduire: ViVERE cum CHRISTO; b) pour tout faire pour sa gloire et pour son amour: VIVERE CHRISTO; c) pour agir en tout dans ses intentions et dans ses dispositions: VIVERE IN CHRISTO - d) Et cette offrande, cette donation se scelle et se consomme par la manducation de son corps sacré, pain d'union en même temps que pain de vie: VIVERE DE CHRISTO.

Développons ces pensées.

a) Vivere cum Christo. Vivre avec le Christ, c'est tout d'abord penser et vouloir comme le Christ; c'est entrer dans ses pensées et dans ses affections. Dans ses peu

SAINT JEAN EUDES

sées, on entre par la Foi. Aussi notre Saint, comme tous les saints et les docteurs de l'Église, fait-il de la Foi le premier fondement de la vie chrétienne poussée à sa perfection; mais, plus que d'autres peut-être, il insiste sur cette obligation pour le chrétien de ne penser et de ne se conduire que par la Foi, qui est une communication et comme une extension de la lumière et de la science divine, infuse dans l'âme sainte de Jésus, au moment de son Incarnation, en sorte que son acquiescement aux vérités enseignées par Jésus est « une continuation et un accomplissement de la soumission, amoureuse et très parfaite que l'esprit humain de Jésus a eue aux vérités que son Père éternel lui a annoncées (1). »

Donc, « au commencement de ses actions, spécialement des plus importantes », afin d'agir et de marcher uniquement à cette divine clarté, le disciple de saint Eudes adorera Jésus « comme l'auteur et le consommateur de la foi, et la vraie lumière qui illumine tout homme venant en ce monde »; il renoncera « à la prudence de la chair et à la sagesse mondaine »; il priera Jésus « de les détruire en lui », et de « l'éclairer de sa céleste lumière », de le « conduire par sa divine sagesse », pour qu'il ne fasse que son bon plaisir, enfin de lui « donner grâce et force », pour qu'en tout il « préfère courageusement les vérités et les maximes de la foi... aux discours des hommes qui se conduisent selon les maximes du monde ».

Pour cela, il lira tous les jours à genoux un chapitre du Nouveau Testament qui contient la vie et les enseignements de Jésus.

Entrer dans les sentiments de Jésus, c'est entrer dans cette haine du péché et du monde dont nous avons amplement parlé; c'est surtout, car cette haine en découle, entrer dans l'amour immense dont Jésus brûle pour son Père et pour les âmes. Le vrai chrétien, tel que le veut saint Eudes, se propose en tout la glorification de Dieu, il a pour programme de vie les trois premières demandes du Pater: la sanctification du nom de Dieu, l'établissement du règne de Dieu, le parfait accomplissement en toutes choses de la sainte volonté de Dieu, qui, au fond, ne sont qu'une seule et même chose. Et comme cela ne peut se faire sans s'occuper des âmes, sans se dévouer aux âmes dont Dieu veut le salut et dont il tire sa gloire, il devient nécessairement un apôtre zélé, préparé à toutes sortes de bonnes œuvres.

SA SPIRITUALITÉ 341 -

Vivre avec Jésus, c'est, avec ces dispositions fondamentales, se revêtir des vertus de Jésus, dont les vertus chrétiennes ne sont que la continuation et l'extension en chaque chrétien. Le disciple de saint Eudes ne les considère pas en elles-mêmes, dans leur excellence intrinsèque, mais en Jésus, qui en est le principe et le modèle achevé; c'est en Jésus qu'il les étudie, c'est pour être semblable à Jésus, et pour glorifier le divin Père de Jésus comme lui-même l'a glorifié par elles, qu'il s'exerce à les pratiquer.

Vivre avec Jésus, c'est encore et surtout participer aux divers états et mystères de sa vie. Conformément à la doctrine que nous avons exposée dans la première partie de cet article: « Le Fils de Dieu, dit notre Saint, a dessein de consommer et accomplir en nous tous ses états et ses mystères (1). »

Et, donnant des exemples, il ajoute « Il a dessein de consommer en nous le mystère de son Incarnation, de sa naissance, de sa vie cachée en se formant et comme s'incarnant dedans nous et en prenant naissance dans nos âmes, par les saints sacrements du Baptême et de la divine Eucharistie, et en nous faisant vivre d'une vie spirituelle et intérieure, qui soit cachée avec lui en Dieu.

« Il a dessein de perfectionner en nous le mystère de sa Passion, de sa mort et de sa résurrection, en nous faisant souffrir, mourir et ressusciter avec lui et en lui, etc. »

D'après lui, « la vie que nous avons sur la terre ne nous est donnée que pour l'employer à l'accomplissement de ces grands desseins que Jésus a sur nous ». Si donc nous ne sommes en cette vie que pour connaître, aimer et honorer les états et mystères de Jésus, à tel point que ceux qui ne l'auront pas fait ici-bas par amour et volontairement, devront le faire en enfer par, contrainte et par les effets de la justice de Dieu sur eux, le disciple de saint Eudes emploiera tout son temps, toute sa vie à coopérer avec Jésus en ce divin ouvrage de la consommation de ses mystères en nous ». Il y coopérera par ses actions vertueuses et par ses prières, surtout par une application fréquente de son esprit et de son cœur à les contempler, adorer, honorer, se donnant à Jésus pour qu'il opère en lui, par ces mêmes mystères, tout ce qu'il désire. Et notre Saint indique en détail et l'ordre dans lequel il faut les honorer dans le cours de l'année, et les choses qu'il y faut contempler et honorer, et les manières dont on peut le faire.

Or, parmi ces mystères, il en est trois pour lesquels saint Eudes avait une affection particulière et qu'il recommandait instamment à la dévotion de ses enfants: le mystère de la sainte Enfance de Jésus, le mystère de, sa Passion et le mystère de l'Eucharistie, objet de sa prédilection. Tels seront aussi les mystères qu'honoreront avec plus d'affection ceux qui marcheront à sa suite.

SA SPIRITUALITÉ 3 4 3 -

D'autre part, Dieu se plaît à faire passer les âmes par des états intérieurs et extérieurs qui sont une participation aux mystères de Jésus. Telles, la faiblesse et l'impuissance où plonge la maladie, la pauvreté, volontaire ou forcée, les sécheresses et les aridités, les croix de toute sorte dont la vie est semée, qui nous associent à la faiblesse et impuissance de Jésus enfant, à son dénuement, aux angoisses de son agonie, aux douleurs de sa Passion. Ces états ont pour but de perfectionner en nous l'image de Jésus, et notre devoir est de nous soumettre amoureusement aux desseins de la Providence et d'entrer dans les sentiments de notre divin modèle.

Enfin vivre avec Jésus, c'est adhérer à tout ce que Jésus a fait en notre nom. En effet, dans chacun de ses états et mystères, étant notre chef, il a rendu à son Dieu tous les devoirs que nous, ses membres, nous devrions lui rendre; il y a pratiqué les actes et les exercices que nous y devrions pratiquer. Nous pouvons donc, en toute occasion, réparer nos défaillances et suppléer à la pauvreté de nos hommages, en offrant à Dieu et les œuvres extérieures et les exercices intérieurs de son Fils. C'est ainsi qu'en toutes circonstances Jésus deviendra notre divin supplément.

Et comme le chef ne se sépare point de ses membres, la vie des membres nous appartient aussi bien que celle du chef; nous pouvons donc employer, dans le même but desuppléer à notre misère, le coeur, l'âme et toutes les puissances des saints du ciel et de la terre, afin qu'ils réparent nos fautes et glorifient Dieu en notre nom. '

SAINT JEAN EUDES

Voilà ce que c'est que vivre avec Jésus. Quel puissant moyen de sanctification! Quelle source d'intime union avec Jésus, et, conséquemment, avec Dieu!

b) Vivere Christo. Vivre pour le Christ, c'est, d'après saint Eudes, n'avoir que lui en vue dans tout ce que nous proposons, dans tout ce que nous faisons: c'est mettre en lui « toutes nos complaisances », en faire « l'objet unique de nos pensées et de nos affections, la fin de toutes nos actions, notre centre, notre paradis, notre tout »; c'est ne penser qu'à Jésus, ne parler que de Jésus, n'aimer et ne glorifier que Jésus, ne tendre qu'à l'établir dans les âmes. Non que ce culte porte préjudice à celui que nous devons au Père et au Saint-Esprit, car Jésus ne peut être séparé ni du Père dont il procède, ni du Saint-Esprit, qui procède de lui; il n'est avec l'un et l'autre qu'un seul et même Dieu.

Vivant pour Jésus, le disciple de notre Saint ne sera, dans tout son être, que louange et amour pour Jésus, comme Jésus est lui-même tout amour pour lui; ou, du moins, il s'efforcera d'atteindre cet idéal, et, pour s'y exciter, il contempera souvent comment Jésus nous a aimés de toute éternité, comment il nous a comblés de bienfaits de toute sorte, comment il s'est donné lui-même à nous sans réserve, et comment il continue à le faire chaque jour dans l'Eucharistie. È levant souvent son coeur vers Jésus, A lui en consacrera toutes les affections, tous les battements, tâchant de ne pas laisser passer une heure sans lui payer ce tribut d'amour. Il arrivera même, par l'habitude, à multiplier sans fatigue les actes d'amour, tout en vaquant à ses occupations ordinaires, et ainsi il marchera dans la dilection, comme le veut saint Paul. Il trouvera d'ailleurs en tout le motif de glorifier et d'aimer Jésus: dans ses perfections infinies; dans les louanges qu'il reçoit des anges et des saints, des âmes justes, et, en un certain sens, des créatures sans raison; dans le triomphe de sa justice sur les damnés; dans les bienfaits et les grâces dont il nous a comblé; mais, par-dessus tout, dans la gloire et l'amour qu'il se donne lui-même et que lui donnent constamment son Père et son Saint-Esprit. Les épreuves de la vie spirituelle lui seront même un nouveau motif d'amour. Au lieu de se laisser emporter à la tristesse et au découragement, il se réjouira de ce que Jésus est toujours Jésus, c'est-à-dire toujours Dieu, toujours grand et admirable, toujours dans le même état de gloire, de jouissance et de contentement, sans que rien soit capable de diminuer sa félicité; il se réjouira aussi de ce qu'il lui est alors donné d'aimer plus purement Jésus, de l'aimer pour lui-même et non pour les consolations qu'il lui accordait auparavant.

Vivant pour Jésus, il ne s'en tiendra pas à ces affections, il traduira son amour par des actes: il se fera le fidèle observateur des préceptes et des conseils évangéliques ainsi que de ses devoirs d'état; il obéira à ceux qui ont charge de le conduire; il se soumettra entièrement aux dispositions de la divine Providence, manifestées par les événements de chaque jour; il mettra sa personne au service de son bon Maître, et se dépensera, corps et âme, dans l'intérêt de sa gloire et des âmes de ses frères, puisqu'au baptême « nous faisons, d'après saint Eudes, profession de serviteur au regard de Jésus-Christ et de tous ses membres ». Surtout, il s'efforcera de ne rien faire qu'en vue de plaire à Jésus, par pur amour pour lui, sans aucun motif d'intérêt personnel. Certes, il désirera le ciel avec ardeur, mais il l'at tendra de la bonté de Jésus, avec une inébranlable confiance, et quand Jésus voudra l'y appeler. Ce n'est pas même pour cette ineffable récompense qu'il servira son Jésus, mais seulement « pour son seul contentement, pour sa seule gloire et pour son très pur amour ». Enfin, il sera disposé à tout souffrir, et même à mourir pour Jésus-Christ, ce qui est un suprême témoignage d'amour: car, au baptême, dit saint Eudes, nous avons fait profession d'être avec Jésus-Christ des hosties et des victimes sacrifiées à la gloire de Dieu. D'autre part, puisque Jésus-Christ a bien voulu mourir pour nous de la mort la plus cruelle et la plus ignominieuse, et que, tous les jours, il renouvelle pour nous son sacrifice sur l'autel, il faudrait être bien ingrat pour ne pas être prêt à verser son sang pour un Dieu qui nous a aimés jusqu'à donner pour nous la dernière goutte du sien.

3 4 6 -

Vivant pour Jésus seul et pour son unique amour, c'est Jésus seul que le disciple de saint Eudes aimera dans tous les êtres, comme dans tous les événements. C'est moins en eux-mêmes que dans leurs rapports, avec Jésus, qu'il contempera et aimera le Père et le Saint-Esprit. C'est pour Jésus qu'il aimera Marie, c'est Jésus qu'il aimera en Marie, qu'il regardera et adorera en Marie, soit dans ce qu'il y opère de grâce et de gloire, soit dans les louanges et dans l'amour qu'il en reçoit incessamment. Et de même pour les anges et pour les saints. De même aussi pour le prochain, qu'il aimera non en lui-même et pour lui-même, mais pour l'amour de Jésus, pour obéir à la recommandation suprême de Jésus, pour le porter, l'unir à Jésus. De même enfin pour les créatures privées de raison, dont il se servira en action de grâces, pour la plus grande gloire de Celui qui les a mises à sa disposition.

Ainsi Jésus sera véritablement son « unique objet », puisqu'il ne verra que lui dans les personnes et dans les choses: Omnia in omnibus Christus ».

c) Vivere in Christo. - Vivre dans le Christ, c'est, selon saint Eudes, et conformément à la doctrine du

P. de Condren, se retirer en Jésus avant d'agir, pour l'adorer, s'humilier, s'anéantir, se donner à lui, afin qu'il détruise en nous tout ce qui lui déplaît, tout ce qui peut contrarier son action, pour le prier de nous conduire et aider de sa grâce et de sa force dans l'acte que nous allons accomplir, lui protestant que nous ne voulons rien faire que pour sa gloire et son amour. C'est, durant l'action, répéter de temps en temps les mêmes protestations, les mêmes prières. C'est, l'action achevée, remercier Jésus du concours qu'il nous y a prêté, s'humilier des fautes qu'on y a pu commettre, et le prier de suppléer aux imperfections qui en sont la conséquence et peuvent nuire à sa gloire et au bien des âmes.

Vivre en Jésus, c'est, dans cette sorte de retraite, entrer dans les intentions de Jésus, précédemment énoncées, et nous les proposer comme unique but de notre activité.

Vivre en Jésus, c'est enfin entrer dans les dispositions de Jésus, c'est-à-dire dans des sentiments d'humilité et de défiance de soi, de confiance en Dieu et de total abandon à sa Providence toujours si sage et si bonne, d'entière et pleine soumission à sa volonté sainte, de mortification intérieure et extérieure et de renoncement absolu, de patience, de douceur et de mansuétude, et, par-dessus tout, d'ardente charité: sentiments qui, d'après saint Eudes, doivent animer toutes nos actions, même les plus communes.

Vivre ainsi, c'est évidemment vivre dans le Christ, et le Christ en nous: c'est réaliser le désir de Jésus, disant à ses disciples: « Vos aulem videtis quia ego vivo et vos vivetis. In illo die vos cognoscetis quia ego sum in Patre, et vos in me, et ego in vobis: Vous voyez que je vis et -que vous vivrez. En ce jour, vous connaîtrez que je suis dans mon Père, et que vous êtes en moi, et que je suis en vous. » C'est la consommation de la vie d'union avec Jésus.

d) Vivere de Christo. -Vivre du Christ, c'est se nourrir de sa chair sacrée, viande divine qui a pour effet de réparer, sustenter et développer la vie chrétienne, et de lui donner cette splendeur que nous venons de décrire.

« La nouvelle vie dans laquelle vous êtes entré par la nouvelle naissance de votre baptême, dit notre saint, et que vous avez reçue de ce divin Chef, auquel vous avez été incorporé comme l'un de ses membres, cette vie, dis-je, étant toute céleste et divine, il faut qu'elle soit alimentée et soutenue par un pain tout céleste et une viande toute divine, selon ces belles paroles du grand saint Denis l'Aréopagite: « Ex Deo nati de Deo vivere debent: Ceux qui sont nés de Dieu doivent vivre de Dieu. » De là vient que Notre-Seigneur nous déclare qu'il est le pain de vie; que le pain qu'il donnera, c'est sa chair pour la vie du monde; que quiconque ne mangera pas sa chair et ne boira pas son sang, n'aura point de vie; que sa chair est vraiment une nourriture et que son sang est vraiment un breuvage, que celui qui mange sa chair et qui boit son sang, demeure en lui et le possède en soi-même; et que, comme il a employé toute sa vie pour son Père, ainsi celui qui mange ce pain divin, ne doit vivre que pour lui: c'est-à-dire que sa vie doit être si sainte qu'elle soit un vif portrait et une image parfaite de la sienne. De là vient aussi qu'en la primi tive Église on donnait le Saint-Sacrement à ceux que l'on baptisait, immédiatement après le baptême (1). »

Aussi saint Eudes pousse-t-il les âmes saintes, avides de perfection, à communier chaque jour, puisqu'elles sont revêtues de la grâce. C'est la conseil qu'il donnait, nous le savons, à Mme d6 Camilly:

« Toutes ces grandes choses (c'est-à-dire n'avoir qu'un esprit, une âme, une vie, une volonté, un coeur, etc., avec Jésus), dit-il 1, se commencent par le saint Baptême, et elles s'accroissent et se fortifient par le sacrement de la confirmation et par le bon usage que (l'on fait) des autres grâces que Dieu communique. Mais elles recevraient leur souveraine perfection par la très sainte Eucharistie, si nous apportions les saintes dispositions qui doivent précéder; accompagner et suivre la réception d'un si grand sacrement (2). »

La sainte Eucharistie développe, en effet, en notre âme la vie de la grâce dans toute son extension, dans tout son ensemble d'opérations multiples, telle que le Baptême l'y a mise en nous, et non pas seulement dans une direction déterminée, comme les autres sacrements; elle donne à la vie chrétienne et à tout son cortège de vertus et de dons leur plus magnifique épanouissement, en accroissant surtout et en excitant la ferveur de la charité qui répare les défaillances et imprime à l'activité surnaturelle une énergique impulsion. D'où l'admirable surabondance de vie de nous en Jésus et de Jésus en nous, qui nous transforme progressivement en son image et ressemblance, réalisant de plus en plus la parole de l'Apôtre que nous citons en commençant

SAINT JEAN EUDES

« Je vis; non, ce n'est plus moi qui vis, c'est Jésus-Christ qui vit en moi. »

A remarquer, en passant, cette recommandation adressée par notre Saint aux âmes « plus spirituelles et élevées », de recevoir Notre-Seigneur, non en elles-mêmes, comme étant trop indignes, mais en lui-même, avec l'amour qu'il se porte, et de s'anéantir à ses pieds pour qu'il s'établisse en elles et y établisse le règne de son divin amour. « C'est, nous dit-il, la vraie disposition... la préparation des

préparations (1). »

Vivre avec Jésus, vivre pour Jésus, vivre en Jésus, vivre de Jésus, ou mieux, pour parler avec saint Eudes, apôtre des Sacrés-Cœurs, vivre avec le Cœur de Jésus, dans ses états et mystères; vivre pour le Cœur de Jésus, pour sa seule gloire et son seul amour, vivre dans le Cœur de Jésus, en entrant dans ses intentions et ses dispositions; vivre du Cœur de Jésus en le recevant avec la chair sacrée du Sauveur, comme le principe de la vie d'union, voilà, en quelques mots, l'idéal auquel notre saint convie ses disciples...

Vie de splendeur, vie de vertu héroïque, au souffle de l'Esprit de Vérité et d'amour; où l'âme fuit le péché comme le serpent, d'un mouvement instinctif; où elle aime Dieu comme un bon père avec une respectueuse confiance et un filial abandon; où elle conçoit de hauts desseins pour sa gloire et les accomplit avec une patience et un courage invincibles; où elle est si vigilante et sait si bien ordonner ses actions qu'elle évite tous les pièges et triomphe de tous les efforts de ses ennemis; où, devant la grandeur de Dieu mieux connue, elle comprend sa misère et le néant des créatures, se référant et les référant toutes à lui comme à leur origine et leur fin; où, pénétrant toujours plus avant dans les choses divines et dans les mystères de la foi, elle en découvre l'admirable beauté, la parfaite harmonie; où enfin, dans une paix profonde, elle goûte, elle savoure les choses de Dieu, les vérités, les dons célestes, et, par ce goût expérimental du vrai, du bien, du beau, elle arrive à les mieux comprendre.

Vie de sérénité radieuse et continue, de joie très douce, intime, profonde, où l'âme amoureusement et entièrement soumise à Dieu, purifiée, éclairée, transfigurée par la croix acceptée, embrassée généreusement et de grand cœur, reçoit comme les prémices des lumières béatifiantes du ciel, un avant-goût du bonheur de la patrie.

Vie d'union parfaite en toutes choses aux Cœurs sacrés de Jésus et de Marie, tous les deux inséparablement honorés, aimés et servis - car du Fils notre saint ne veut pas qu'on sépare la Mère - et, dans ces deux fournaies d'amour, vie d'ardent amour, purifiant, illuminant, sanctifiant, transformant, déifiant, qui est comme l'aurore toujours croissante du grand jour de l'éternité.

Voilà l'admirable vie dont saint Jean Eudes a donné l'exemple au monde et que, du haut de la gloire, il conseille plus que jamais à ses enfants et à ses disciples.

La bibliographie de saint Jean Eudes est relativement abondante. Nous ne mentionnerons dans ces pages que les ouvrages les plus marquants et les plus propres à mettre en lumière sa personne et ses oeuvres. Nous les diviserons en trois catégories - les oeuvres du Saint, les biographies, et les divers écrits qui le concernent.

1. - OEUVRES DE SAINT JEAN EUDES

Un nombre trop considérable d'ouvrages de saint Eudes restés manuscrits ont été détruits ou perdus à la Révolution, notamment; un Recueil de méditations, trois volumes de Sermons, un traité de l'Office divin, un autre intitulé Le Sacrifice admirable de la Sainte Messe, et dont seul un chapitre a survécu, La manière de bien servir à la Sainte Messe, La divine Enfance de Jésus, La vie admirable de Marie des Vallées, en trois tomes, etc. Malgré ces pertes regrettables, ce qui reste, douze volumes in-8 écu, constitue un dépôt précieux où les enfants du Saint et toutes les âmes pieuses, religieuses et sacerdotales, peuvent trouver un aliment solide à leur vie intérieure, puisqu'au témoignage de S. S. Pie X, ses écrits « exhalent le parfum de la piété: insignem redolentia pietatem » (Bref de Béatification). Nous allons insister sur chacun d'eux, en les groupant par catégories.

A. - OUVRAGES POUR LES FIDELES.

Le premier ouvrage publié par saint Jean Eudes fut un Exercice de piété, contenant en abrégé les choses principales qui sont nécessaires pour vivre chrétiennement, petit in-32, Caen, 1636.

Remanié et développé, cet Exercice devenait un an plus tard La Vie et le Royaume de Jésus dans les âmes chrétiennes, in-12 de plus de 800 pages. De cet ouvrage, du vivant même de l'auteur, parurent au moins quinze éditions connues; après sa mort, et pendant tout le XVIII<sup>e</sup> siècle, il resta un livre de piété très goûté et recommandé. On fait pendant le dernier siècle plusieurs éditions, la dernière date de 1924; et, presque simultanément, une traduction italienne a été éditée à Rome. Des extraits en ont été publiés par le P. BOULAY, C. J. M., SOUS les titres de La Vie chrétienne et La Journée chrétienne, in-12 écu. - Toutes ces multiples éditions s'expliquent par la valeur même de l'ouvrage. On a dit qu'il était « un écoulement du ciel » (P. Hérabourg). Il est du moins bien certain qu'il a été vécu avant d'être écrit, et qu'il est comme le miroir de la vie intérieure de celui qui l'a composé. Du premier coup il y a « condensé ses idées essentielles sur la vie chrétienne, sa nature, ses fondements et son plein épanouissement dans la pratique des vertus ». Véritable « code de perfection », il a formé des générations d'âmes à la vie intérieure. Récemment encore, en 1907, il était indiqué par l'Alliance des séminaires de France comme livre de piété pour les séminaristes (Compte-rendu de l'Alliance).

Si Jean Eudes n'a jamais rien changé ni corrigé au Royaume de Jésus, dénomination courante de son livre, il y a fait cependant plusieurs additions. En 1648, il y inséra avant l'Exercice pour la Messe ce qu'on a appelé depuis Traité de l'honneur dû aux lieux saints; en 1662, il ajouta une huitième partie comprenant des Méditations sur l'humilité, et les Entretiens intérieurs de l'âme chrétienne avec son Dieu. Ces additions étaient en dehors de l'idée mère de l'ouvrage, aussi ont-elles été rééditées, à plusieurs reprises, séparément, les Méditations surtout. Sous le titre de Misère et Grandeur du chrétien, Méditations et Entretiens ont été réunis en un volume in-32 à l'occasion de la canonisation.

En 1642, saint Jean Eudes publia La Vie du Chrétien ou le Catéchisme de la mission, in-12, Caen, un des premiers ouvrages d'enseignement religieux, rédigé sous forme de demandes et de réponses. Il devint vite populaire, et de nombreuses éditions en parurent de divers côtés, souvent à l'insu de l'auteur. Toujours d'actualité, car on n'a guère mieux fait depuis, il a été publié en 1912 dans la Revue des Catéchismes.

Un dernier ouvrage pour les fidèles est le Contrat de l'homme avec Dieu par le Saint Baptême, in-32, Caen, 1654. Il valut au Saint une lettre très élogieuse du Père Ignace de Jésus-Maria, Carme déchaussé, où celui-ci lui déclarait que c'était « le livre le plus rempli de l'onction du Saint-Esprit qu'aucun de notre siècle ». Il s'en est fait de très nombreuses éditions, voire traductions; il en existe présentement une édition illustrée, petit in-12.

B. - OUVRAGES POUR LES PRETRES.

Les ouvrages du Saint à l'usage des prêtres sont de deux sortes: les uns destinés à leur sanctification personnelle, les autres à leur instruction pastorale.

De ceux-ci le premier en date est l'Avertissement aux confesseurs, in-32, 320 pages, Caen, 1644. Réédité à plusieurs reprises, puis considérablement augmenté, il devint en 1666 Le Bon Confesseur, in-12, Caen. Les éditions se succédèrent, plus de vingt, à notre connaissance, en vingt-cinq ans. Pendant tout le XVIIIe siècle, tenu à jour des décisions nouvelles, spécialement par le Père Cousin, un des successeurs du Saint, Le Bon Confesseur resta très en faveur dans le clergé. Traduit en plusieurs langues, il était encore en usage dans des séminaires d'Allemagne au cours du XIXe siècle.

Cinq ans après la mort de saint Jean Eudes, par les soins de son successeur, le Père Blouet de Camilly, parut Le Prédicateur apostolique, in-12, Véritable traité de prédication, et traité toujours d'actualité sur bien des points, malheureusement trop peu lu, étudié et suivi.

Pour la sanctification du clergé, le Saint a composé un vrai code de perfection sacerdotale, publié seulement un an après sa mort, et intitulé Le Mémorial de la vie ecclésiastique, in-12.

Sous le titre de Prêtre et Pasteur, la substance de ces divers ouvrages a été réunie en un volume in-12 de 550 pages par les soins du P. BOULAY, C. J. et M., et imprimée en 1912. L'Ami du Clergé a dit de ce travail qu'il était « un traité complet du Sacerdoce et de ses devoirs » (Ami, 1912).

BIBLIOGRAPHIE 355 -

C.- OUVRAGES DE DISCIPLINE RELIGIEUSE.

Sous ce titre sont groupés les ouvrages que saint Jean Eudes a composés pour ses familles religieuses.

Ce sont, pour la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie: d'abord les Regulae Congregationis Jesu et Marias, in-32, magnifique synthèse de vie chrétienne et sacerdotale, au moyen de textes scripturaires habilement enchaînés; puis les Constitutions de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, un des meilleurs ouvrages du Saint et dont le cardinal Pitra disait: « Je ne connais pas de règle qui pousse à une plus grande abnégation et à une vie plus sacerdotale »; enfin un Manuel pour l'usage d'une communauté religieuse, in-32, Caen, 1668. Ce Manuel pourrait être utile à toute âme désireuse d'union toujours plus parfaite avec Notre-Seigneur. D'autre part, certains aperçus et pratiques de la spiritualité du Saint ne se trouvent que là.

Pour son Institut de religieuses, saint Eudes a rédigé les Règles et Constitutions de N.-D. de Charité. Quoique empruntées, pour une grande part aux Constitutions de la Visitation, elles n'en constituent pas moins un ouvrage original, dont on a dit que c'est « un véritable chef-d'œuvre » (Vie de la Mère Pelletier par le chanoine Portais).

D. - OUVRAGES DE MARIOLOGIE.

En 1676, saint Eudes publia L'Enfance admirable de la Très Sainte Mère de Dieu, in-12 de 684 pages. Ouvrage peu connu, rempli de doctrine, ouvrage auquel, dit-il lui-même, il a « travaillé plus du coeur que de la main », et qui fait bien connaître « les épanchements d'un coeur tout dévoué à Marie et consumé du désir de la faire aimer » (W Le Goulx, dans son approbation).

Moins d'un mois avant sa mort, il mit la dernière main à son grand ouvrage sur la sainte Vierge, Le Coeur Admirable de la Très Sacrée Mère de Dieu, qui fut édité l'année suivante par son successeur le P. Blouet de Camilly en un bel in-4 de près de 800 pages. Trop ignoré, car il n'a eu que trois éditions, cet ouvrage est le premier qui ait été écrit sur les Sacrés-Coeurs de Jésus et de Marie, et cela avec une sûreté de doctrine, une précision telle que les théologiens n'y trouvent rien à reprendre ni à ajouter. On pourrait en extraire deux traités complets, et de quelle beauté: l'un sur le Coeur de Marie, et l'autre sur le Coeur de Jésus. Plein de piété et de science, il provoque, en dépit de quelques longueurs, l'admiration du lecteur qui ne peut que souscrire au jugement de M. H. joly . « Le Père Eudes a élevé au Coeur de la Vierge un monument portant sa marque et digne à lui seul de perpétuer son souvenir » (Vie du P. Eudes).

Ce grand ouvrage n'est que le développement d'un autre plus court, intitulé: La dévotion au Très Sainte Coeur et au Très Sacré Nom de Marie, où notre Saint se proposait d'exposer et répandre le culte public du Coeur de Marie qu'il avait inauguré Autun en 1648. Il s'en fit de son vivant, plusieurs éditions tant à Caen qu'à Paris.

B. - OUVRAGES DE LITURGIE.

Sous ce titre sont compris les divers Offices et Messes composés par saint Eudes pour le Propre de sa Congrégation, et spécialement les offices et Messes de la fête du Coeur de Marie, le 8 février, de la fête du Divin Coeur de Jésus, le 20 octobre (offices et messes approuvés en 1860 par usage dans la Sacrée Congrégation des Rites et toujours en Instituts eudistes), et de la fête du Divin Sacerdoce. Ceux qui les ont lus et étudiés en ont toujours fait le plus bel éloge, tant au point de vue de la piété et de la doctrine qu'au point de vue de la composition. « il est bien difficile de le lire sans se sentir le coeur saintement attendri », disait M. Boudon de l'office du Coeur de Marie. Et il y a quelques années, M. A. Gastoué écrivait, dans l'Eucharistie (juin 1912), de l'Office du Coeur de Jésus: « Le B. Eudes, réunissant la moelle la plus suave de tout ce qu'on avait écrit sur ce sujet, arrive à une élévation de pensée et de force rarement atteinte. »

F. - CORRESPONDANCE.

Il ne subsiste plus de la volumineuse correspondance du Saint que 241 lettres ou fragments. Ce modeste reliquat permet cependant de pénétrer à fond dans son âme pour y découvrir les qualités naturelles et morales de l'homme, l'esprit surnaturel du saint, la sagesse du supérieur, la prudence du directeur.

G. - Divers.

Sous cette appellation, peuvent se ranger son Memoriale Beneficiorum Dei, son Testament, son Vœu du martyre, son Contrat d'alliance avec la Sainte Vierge, une Lettre à la Sainte Vierge, une Protestation de haine contre le péché, divers autres pièces et documents précieux soit par les renseignements historiques qu'ils contiennent, soit par la haute idée qu'ils donnent de la sainteté du P. Eudes.

Enfin à tous ces ouvrages et divers, il faut ajouter La Vie admirable de Marie des Vallées et des choses prodigieuses qui se sont passées en elle, manuscrit in-4 qui n'a jamais été imprimé et dont on ne sait s'il est un abrégé ou le texte même de l'original qui est perdu. Le Saint y fait preuve d'une science consommée de la mystique la plus élevée, et d'une rare prudence, en même temps qu'il fait entrer dans l'intime d'une âme d'élite, émule de sainte Catherine de Gènes et de plusieurs autres, et appelée communément « la Sainte de Coutances ». ## II. - BIOGRAPHIE DE SAINT JEAN EUDES.

Aucune vie du Saint ne fut imprimée au cours des XVII<sup>e</sup> et XVIII<sup>e</sup> siècles; seuls quelques articles de dictionnaires le firent connaître du public, et pas toujours avec impartialité. Aussi sa figure allait-elle s'estompant de plus en plus dans les ombres de l'oubli. Les Eudistes tentèrent bien, à plusieurs reprises, de publier sa vie, trois fois même dans un quart de siècle. Mais, d'une part, la haine dont les jansénistes l'avaient poursuivi et qui ne désarmait pas, de l'autre, la trop grande réserve de ses fils, furent cause que ces tentatives n'aboutirent pas, et les divers manuscrits qui se succédèrent restèrent dans les archives de la Congrégation.

SAINT JEAN EUDES

de Dieu, Jean Eudes, Prêtre missionnaire, Instituteur et premier Supérieur de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, et des Religieuses de N.-D. de Charité, divisée en deux parties. Elle fut écrite à la demande du successeur du Saint, le P. Blouet de Camilly, auteur lui-même d'une petite Vie abrégée du P. Eudes. Homme d'une intelligence rare et d'une haute vertu, le P. Hérambourg (1661-1720) avait eu l'incalculable avantage pour un biographe de vivre dans la familiarité des compagnons les plus intimes de celui dont il avait à faire revivre la personne. Ayant eu en mains tous les documents et pièces nécessaires, il put composer « un ouvrage extrêmement précieux » à tous égards.

AU P. PIERRE COSTIL (1669-1749) revient l'honneur d'avoir écrit deux volumes sur saint Jean Eudes. D'abord dans les Annales de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, commencées en 1722, il a fait l'histoire du Père Eudes et de sa société religieuse, réunissant là des documents des plus importants pour les historiens futurs. Puis dans les Fleurs de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, succession de biographies d'Eudistes remarquables par leur sainteté et leur vertu, il a consacré le premier volume au P. Eudes, « la plus belle assurément des fleurs de ce jardin fermé ». Les travaux du P. Costil dénotent un esprit critique très averti, et, pour le fond, sont de première valeur.

Peu après le P. Costil, un autre eudiste, le P. JULIEN MARTINE, écrivit à son tour, en deux volumes, une biographie du Saint, intitulée: Vie du Révérend Père Eudes, Instituteur de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie. Les conditions dans lesquelles l'ouvrage fut composé, les réviseurs qui furent adjoints à l'auteur, les qualités personnelles de celui-ci enfin, permettent d'avoir toute confiance en son oeuvre.

Après 1750, d'autres tentatives devaient encore être faites sans plus de résultat que les précédentes. Un Prêtre du séminaire de Caen, le P. BESSELIÈVRE, selon toute apparence, rédigea une vie abrégée, mais précieuse par certaines pièces inédites, sous ce titre: Mémoires authentiques pour servir à l'histoire de Monsieur Eudes, Missionnaire apostolique, Instituteur de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie.

En 1765, un Père jésuite breton, le P. DE MONTIGNY, admirateur des vertus du P. Eudes, entreprit de les faire revivre plus pour lui que pour le public dans un travail intitulé: Vie du Père Enfin en 1780, à la demande de l'assemblée générale des Eudistes de 1779, le P. VINCENT LE BEURIER, prédicateur célèbre et prêtre de vertu, composa une nouvelle vie qui n'était guère qu'une réplique de celle du P. de Montigny et qui resta comme toutes les autres manuscrites.

Le XVIIIe siècle s'était terminé sans qu'il eût été possible de mettre en lumière la belle figure de saint Jean Eudes. Le XIXe, qui devait le voir sortir de l'oubli, n'a donné cependant que des vies populaires ou l'édition de plusieurs manuscrits du siècle précédent.

Parmi les vies populaires, il faut signaler Le Père Eudes, Missionnaire apostolique, in-12, par CHARLES DE MONTZEY, un parent du Saint; - une Notice sur les trois Frères: Jean Eudes, prêtre, fondateur des Eudistes, François Eudes de Mézeray, Académicien, historiographe de France, et Charles Eudes d'Houay, Échevin d'Argentan, par Gustave LE VAVASSEUR, in-8, 1855, à l'occasion d'un monument érigé, en leur honneur à Argentan; - une petite vie par le R. P. LE DORÉ, Le Vénérable Jean Eudes, premier apôtre des Sacrés-Cœurs de Jésus et Marie, in-12, 1870; - Le Vénérable Jean Eudes, par le P. AUGUSTE PINAS, C.J.M., vie éditée par Paillart, réimprimée en 1909 et 1925 à près de cent mille exemplaires, traduite en espagnol par le P. FRALEU, C. J. M., en 1890, pour la Colombie espagnole, et en anglais, en 1909, pour le Canada; - Le Père Eudes et ses œuvres, in-8, Paris, 1905, par le même.

En 1827, L'ABBÉ TRESVAUX imprima à Rennes le manuscrit du P. de Montigny, Vie du Père Eudes, in-12: c'était la première biographie du Saint qui paraissait, et il était mort en 1680!

En 1868, le R. P. LE DORÉ, C. J. M., au moment où il entreprenait le procès de béatification du futur Saint, publiait la seconde partie du manuscrit du P. Hérambourg, les Vertus, sous ce titre: Le R. Père Jean Eudes: ses vertus, in-12. L'année suivante, il en donnait une nouvelle édition, mais profondément remaniée et augmentée au point d'être plus son œuvre que celle du P. Hérambourg: Le P. Père Jean Eudes, apôtre des Sacrés-Cœurs de Jésus et de Marie, ses vertus, in-8.

En 1880, L'ABBÉ LE COINTE, prêtre du diocèse de Bayeux, éditait, à son tour, en deux volumes in-8, le manuscrit du P. Martine. Enrichie de notes abondantes et copieuses, de pièces justificatives riches et variées, cette édition a été pendant un quart de siècle l'ouvrage cher aux amis de saint Eudes.

Au début du XXe siècle, l'approche de la béatification du vénérable serviteur de Dieu fut l'occasion de plusieurs biographies.

Entre les années 1805 et 1908, le P. DENIS BOULAY, C. J. M., a fait paraître en 4 volumes grand in-8 la Vie du Vénérable Jean Eudes, Instituteur de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, et de l'Ordre de N.-D. de Charité, Auteur du culte liturgique des Sacrés-Cœurs. Avec ses notes nombreuses, ses Appendices si riches, cette vie est et restera la Somme à laquelle devront toujours se référer ceux qui voudront étudier à fond le P. Eudes. Un auteur récent, M. l'abbé Bremond, dans son Histoire littéraire du sentiment religieux, en a porté ce jugement, auquel personne ne contredira, qu'elle fait « honneur soit à la formation littéraire, soit à la critique des Eudistes contemporains », (tome III, p. 564).

Un abrégé de cette vie fut traduit en italien et édité à Rome pour les fêtes de la béatification, le 25 avril 1909.

Pour cette même circonstance, le P. Boulay a donné, en deux formats in-8 et in-8 écu, deux réductions de sa grande édition, sous le titre Le Bienheureux Jean Eudes, Instituteur de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, et de l'Ordre de N.-D. de Charité, Auteur du culte liturgique des Sacrés Cœurs; puis, sous le même titre, une petite vie illustrée, in-j 2. Cette dernière fut avec quelques modifications traduite en anglais par le P. O'REILLEY, C. J. M., et parut au Canada en 1909. Elle vient d'être traduite en espagnol, pour la Colombie.

Dans la collection « Les Saints », HENRI JOLY, membre de l'Institut, publia en 1907 Le Vénérable Père Eudes, ouvrage de vulgarisation, plein d'aperçus psychologiques dignes de l'auteur, et dont, après lecture, on comprend la vérité de cette parole du début: « un rude saint... dans une rude époque ».

Après la béatification, en 1909, un anglais, le P. RUSSELL, S. J., écrivit également, dans sa langue, une vie populaire, in-12 de 200 pages. Elle est particulièrement intéressante par la place qu'il donne au Bienheureux dans la dévotion au Sacré-Cœur de Jésus.

Pour la canonisation, une nouvelle vie vient de paraître: Saint Jean Eudes, Missionnaire apostolique, Instituteur de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, de l'Ordre de N.-D. de Charité du Refuge et du Bon Pasteur, et de la Société du Cœur de la Mère Admirable, Père, Docteur, et Apôtre du culte liturgique des Sacrés-Cœurs de Jésus et Marie, par le P. ÉMILE GEORGES, C. J. M., in-8. Écrite avec aisance et chaleur, présentée par tableaux d'ensemble plutôt que dans l'ordre chronologique, elle fait ardemment aimer la belle et grande figure du Saint dont elle veut propager le rayonnement d'éclatante sainteté. Elle vient d'être traduite en italien et de paraître à Rome pour les fêtes de la canonisation.

III. - OUVRAGES SUR SAINT JEAN EUDES

Peu d'hommes ont été aussi combattus que le Père Eudes. Les vingt volumes in-folio et in-quarto de la seule Bibliothèque Nationale, et qui, pour une bonne part, sont remplis de libelles, factums et pamphlets, montrent assez les haines et les oppositions qui s'étaient dressées contre sa personne et contre ses oeuvres. Il n'est pas jusqu'aux Archives Vaticanes qui ne contiennent de nombreuses pièces attestant la collusion d'adversaires à qui tout était bon pour empêcher le succès de ses démarches auprès du Saint-Siège. Les Mémoires domestiques pour servir à l'histoire de l'Oratoire, 2 Vol. in-8, du P. Louis BATTEREL, et réédités au début du siècle par le P. INGOLD, de l'Oratoire, peuvent aussi, à juste titre, être rangés parmi les écrits opposés à notre Saint. C'était un bel arsenal où le promoteur de la foi, lors du procès de béatification, put choisir des armes. Mais les réponses à toutes les Animadversiones échafaudées par lui n'ont fait que prouver définitivement la vertu du serviteur de Dieu et la malice de ses détracteurs.

Parmi les études générales sur saint Jean Eudes, il y a lieu de citer un article du Dictionnaire de théologie catholique, intitulé: Eudes (le B. Jean) de C. LEBRUN, C. J. M.

362 - SAINT JEAN EUDES

(tome V, col. 1466 à 1482). Il semble bien qu'il ait été le premier article de Dictionnaire écrit avec justesse et sans avoir subi des influences contraires, comme Moreri au XVIIIe siècle, Hélyot et d'autres.

Il faut rapprocher de cet article un opuscule des PP. DAUPHIN ET LEBRUN, C. J. M.: Le Bienheureux Jean Eudes, son Apostolat, sa Doctrine, ses Instituts, in-12 écu de 125 pages.

À la fin de 1922, un auteur très estimé, et reçu à l'Académie en 1924, M. L'ABBÉ BREMOND, a, dans le tome 111 de son Histoire littéraire du sentiment religieux, consacré plus de cent pages au B.

Jean Eudes. Cette étude semble quelque peu trahir la hâte; à côté d'excellentes remarques, certaines affirmations appelleraient plus d'une réserve.

La spiritualité de saint Jean Eudes a été longuement étudiée sous ses divers aspects par le P. CH. LEBRUN, C. J. M., dans les Introductions aux Oeuvres complètes. Réunies, elles formeraient un fort volume in-8. Qu'il s'agisse de la doctrine spirituelle du Saint en général, ou de ses vues sur le sacerdoce, sur la sainte Vierge, sur les Sacrés Cœurs, c'est à ces introductions qu'il faut recourir, si l'on veut avoir sur ces sujets des idées nettes et précises. M. l'abbé Bremond s'en est inspiré dans le tome 111 de son Histoire littéraire et les a souvent citées.

A des titres divers, mais mettant bien en lumière le rayonnement de l'influence spirituelle de saint Jean Eudes, sont à consulter: M. Souriau, Le mysticisme en Normandie, in-8, Paris 1913 ouvrage très documenté et de saine doctrine; - L'ABBÉ ADAM Le mysticisme à la renaissance ou Marie des Vallées, dite la Sainte de Coutances, in-8 écu, Paris, 1894, travail dans lequel l'auteur s'est largement inspiré du manuscrit du Père Eudes cité précédemment sur Marie des Vallées; - LE CHANOINE LELIEVRE: Madame de Bois-David, en religion Sœur Marie de l'Enfant-Jésus, de l'ordre de N.-D. de Charité, in-12, Coutances, 1925, une fille spirituelle du Saint, nouvelle sainte Chantal au XVIIe siècle.

Parmi les études traitant de l'établissement des séminaires en France, quelques-unes sont à lire si l'on veut connaître la part qui revient à saint Jean Eudes dans cette œuvre de rénovation du clergé. En dehors des Annales de la Congrégation gation de Jésus et Marie, il faut mentionner: L'ABBÉ DEGERT: Histoire des séminaires français jusqu'à la Révolution, 2 vol. in-12, Paris, 1910; - L'ABBÉ BONNENFANT: Les séminaires normands au XVII, et XVIII, siècle, in-8, Paris, 1913, ouvrage d'érudition locale et complétant heureusement le précédent en ce qui regarde le rôle du Père Eudes; - le P. DAUPHIN, C. J. M.: Les Eudistes dans le diocèse de Rennes, Histoire des séminaires de Rennes et de Dol, in-12, Paris, 1910; - enfin le P. LEBRUN, C. J. M.: Le Bienheureux Jean Eudes, les Eudistes et l'Oeuvre des retraites, in-8, Paris, 1916, brochure faisant partie de la Bibliothèque des Exercices de S. Ignace par le P. Watrigant, S. 3.

A ces ouvrages sur les séminaires, on peut rattacher un Directoire à l'usage des missionnaires de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, du P. MASSICOT, C. J. M., in-8, Abbeville, 1900, livre tout rempli de l'esprit et des méthodes du saint missionnaires et utile à quiconque se livre à l'œuvre des missions.

Il a été aussi publié deux ouvrages sur l'Ordre de N.-D. de Charité, institué par saint Jean Eudes: l'un, qui en fait l'histoire jusqu'à la Révolution, l'autre, tout récent, qui a pour but de faire connaître l'Ordre et son œuvre de rénovation morale des âmes pécheresses. Ce sont: Les Origines de N.-D. de Charité, ou son Histoire depuis la fondation jusqu'à la Révolution, par le P. J.-M. ORY, C. J. M., grand in-8, Abbeville, 1801, travail excessivement précieux par sa documentation; - Une oeuvre de Miséricorde et d'Apostolat par plusieurs Eudistes, in-8, 1922, Besançon.

Très propres à montrer la vitalité de cet Ordre de N.-D. de Charité, l'esprit qui l'anime, et en même temps fournissant une contribution précieuse à l'histoire du Saint qui eut l'idée d'une telle œuvre, sont les vies suivantes: La Vénérable Marie de Sainte-Euphrasie Pelletier, fondatrice du Bon-Pasteur d'Angers, 2 vol. in-8, Angers, par Mgr PASQUIER, ou 2 vol. in-8, Angers, 1893, par le chanoine PORTAIS; La Mère Marie de Sainte-Victorine Houette, in-8, par le chanoine POUAN; Sœur Marie du Divin-Coeur, in-8, 1905, Paris, par L'ABBÉ CHASLES.

364 SAINT JEAN EUDES

L'apostolat de saint Jean Eudes relativement au culte du Sacré-Coeur de Jésus a donné lieu à toute une bibliographie abondante. L'oubli dans lequel il était demeuré pendant près des trois quarts du XIX, siècle avait fait perdre de vue son rôle, et l'on s'était accoutumé à faire dépendre le culte et la dévotion des Révélations de Notre-Seigneur à sainte Maguerite-Marie. Quelques auteurs méconnaissant la part du Père Eudes, d'autres la passant sous silence ou tendant à la diminuer, il en est résulté une suite de brochures qui ont contribué à remettre les choses au point; puis Rome, dans plusieurs documents officiels, a définitivement tranché la discussion en donnant au Saint la place qui lui revient.

C'est vers 1870 que le B. P. LE DORÉ posa la question pour la première fois dans sa petite vie populaire: Le Vénérable Jean Eudes, premier apôtre des Sacrés Cœurs. Il devait y revenir bien des fois dans des brochures, articles de revues. En 1891 il publia son grand ouvrage: Les Sacrés Cœurs et le Vénérable Jean Eudes, 2 vol. in-8, Paris, où il étudiait à fond toute la question, au point de vue historique et doctrinal. C'est un des travaux les plus documentés qui aient été encore écrits sur les Sacrés Cœurs, et même, théologiquement, il est un de ceux qui ont le plus profondément étudié la dévotion. En 1908 il réunissait en une brochure: Le Sacré Cœur de Jésus, son Amour, in-8, toute une série d'articles écrits par lui en réponse à des attaques diverses contre le Vénérable Jean Eudes; puis en 1909, après la béatification, il la rééditait augmentée sous le même titre, en y ajoutant d'après la doctrine du B. Jean Eudes, in-i2, Paris. En 1916, il donnait La Naissance du culte liturgique des Sacrés Cœurs, in-i2, Paris, ouvrage de moindre importance, et enfin, en 1917, Le Message du Sacré-Cœur, petite plaquette de 120 pages, avec, en appendice, deux lettres inédites du Comte de Paris se rapportant au Message et au Voeu de Louis XVI.

La Vie du Très Révérend Père Ange Le Doré, par le P. Rovolt, 2 vol. in-8, Besançon, en cours de publication, sera consultée avantageusement sur toute cette question.

A la suite du P. Le Doré, un de ses fils, le P. CH. LEBRUN, a publié sur le même sujet, en plus des deux Introductions au livre du Cœur Admirable et au Propre de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie, deux ouvrages de première valeur: La Dévotion au Cœur de Marie, étude historique et doctrinale, - Le Bienheureux Jean Eudes et le Culte public du Cœur de Jésus, in-8. l'un et l'autre, Paris, 1918.

Antérieurement à tous ces derniers ouvrages, le chanoine GRANGER, missionnaire de N.-D. de la Délivrande, dans Les Archives de la Dévotion au Sacré Cœur de Jésus et au Saint Cœur de Marie, avait consacré son deuxième tome tout entier au rôle et à l'étude de saint Jean Eudes.

A côté de tous ces travaux sur les Sacrés Cœurs, où apparaît souvent une préoccupation historique, il en est d'autres qui sont de purs ouvrages de piété.

Pour propager ses dévotions dans le peuple, saint Jean Eudes avait établi une Confrérie du Sacré Cœur de Jésus et de Marie en faveur de laquelle, dès 1674, il avait obtenu des Bulles d'Indulgences. A l'usage des membres de cette confrérie, le P. BLOUET DE CAMILLY, C. J. M., selon toute apparence, rédigea L'Institution de la sainte Confrérie et Société du Sacré Cœur de Jésus et de Marie, in-18 de 178 pages, Coutances, 1688. Ce Manuel, tout rempli de l'esprit et des pratiques du Saint, a servi de modèle à d'autres du même genre, même en dehors de la Congrégation des Eudistes et de l'Ordre de N.-D. de Charité.

Le Saint avait aussi institué La Société du Cœur Admirable, sorte de Tiers-Ordre eudiste, n'acceptant dans ses rangs que des vierges ou des veuves, désireuses de mener dans le monde la vie religieuse. Pendant longtemps, cette pieuse Société, qui devait beaucoup se répandre au XVIII, siècle, n'eut pas d'autre Manuel que celui de la Confrérie. Le premier rédigé pour elle, fut celui d'Avranches en 1738 sous ce titre Devoirs et pratiques de la Société du Très Saint Cœur de Marie, in-18 de 124 p. Dans la suite plusieurs autres parurent à Caen, à Rennes, à Dol, toujours sans nom d'auteur, 1 mais par les soins cependant des Eudistes. En 1859, le chanoine SOUCHET, de Saint-Brieuc, donna une édition du Manuel publié à Rennes en 1750 édition enrichie d'un commentaire de chaque chapitre de la règle, sous le titre Livre des Vierges et de pieuses Veuves ou Règle de la Société des Enfants du Saint Cœur de la Mère Admirable, in- 18 de 438 p. Il a été réédité à plusieurs reprises par le P. MASSICOT, C. J. M., et dernièrement remontent par le P. LEBRUN, C. J. M., mais sans les commentaires. Au début du siècle, une traduction espagnole a été faite à l'usage de la Société, très prospère en Colombie.

La Revue Les Saints Coeurs de Jésus et Marie, organe de la famille eudiste et qui a près d'un demi-siècle d'existence, a donné à maintes reprises des séries d'articles pieux, à l'usage des tertiaires notamment. Plusieurs ont été réunis en volumes: Les Saints Coeurs de Jésus et de Marie, Règle et vie de nos coeurs d'après la doctrine du Vénérable Jean Eudes, in- 12, Paris, 1891, par le P. DAUPHIN, C. J. M., véritable commentaire de la salutation aux Saints Coeurs de saint Jean Eudes; - Le Cœur de Jésus d'après l'Évangile et les écrits des Saints, in-12, Paris, 1917, par le P. LEBRUN, C. J. M., recueil de méditations pour le mois du Sacré-Cœur; - Le Cœur de Jésus principe de toute vie chrétienne d'après le B. Jean Eudes, in- 12, Paris, 1922, par et Le Très Saint Cœur de Marie, son influence sur le salut et la sanctification des âmes d'après le B. Jean Eudes, in-12, Paris, 1923, par le P. GAUDERON, C. J. M., l'un et l'autre ouvrages aussi pleins de doctrine que de piété.

À l'intention de ceux qui désirent se pénétrer de l'esprit et des vertus de saint Jean Eudes, le P. Lebrun, C. J. M., a publié La Dévotion au Bienheureux Jean Eudes, in-18, Paris, 1919, Manuel de méditations et de prières.

Il n'a pas encore été fait d'histoire proprement dite de la Congrégation de Jésus et Marie. Mais les Annales, les Fleurs de la Congrégation, les vies de plusieurs Eudistes, les chroniques de la revue Les Saints Coeurs et de sa filiale espagnole Los Sagrados Corazones de Jesús y María seront des sources précieuses pour les historiens futurs.

Cette rapide nomenclature n'a pas la prétention d'être complète; elle laisse d'ailleurs de côté les brochures diverses, les articles de revues et de journaux, les panégyriques imprimés, les lettres pastorales dont quelques-unes sont de vrais monuments élevés à la gloire du Saint. Elle permet néanmoins de constater quelle grande place saint Jean Eudes occupe dans l'Église: « Quand on parle de Jean Eudes, disait

GENERAL PREFACE

ST. JOHN EUDES has been called "the wonder of his age." Missionary, founder, reformer of the clergy, he crowded into a life of seventy-nine years so many and such varied accomplishments that one marvels how a single man could achieve so much. In addition to the activities of an incessant and many-sided apostolate, he wrote a number of valuable books, which rank him among the most prolific ascetic writers of the seventeenth century.

For many years the devotional works of St. John Eudes were practically unknown.(1) Occasionally a volume was discovered in the library of some seminary or religious house. Many others preserved in manuscript form were lost in the chaos of the French Revolution(2) At the beginning of the present century the sons of St. John Eudes united in a tribute of filial piety to bring out a complete edition of the works of their spiritual father, seeking them in public and private libraries throughout the world(3) About twenty volumes were found and edited in 1905 by the late Fathers Charles Lebrun, C.J.M., and Joseph Dauphin,

(1).Before the French Revolution the works of St. John Eudes were popular in France. In 1792 the houses of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary were confiscated by the Government and its members were massacred or dispersed throughout Europe. With the suppression of the Eudists, their rich literary heritage was widely scattered and partially destroyed. It was not until the re-establishment of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary in 1826 that effort was made to recover the printed and manuscript works of St. John Eudes. The research was carried on until the latter part of the nineteenth century. In the "Preface Générale to the Oeuvres Complètes (Vannes, 1905), Father Charles Lebrun points out that one of the purposes of the edition was "to unearth these works buried too long in oblivion," exhumers ces ouvrages ensevelis depuis trop longtemps dans l'oubli...

(2)The following manuscripts were not found: The Christian Man, All Jesus, The Divine office, The Admirable Sacrifice of the Mass, Meditations, (2 vol.), Sermons of St. John Eudes (3 vols.), Favors obtained by the Diocese of Coutances through the Blessed Virgin, The Divine Childhood of Jesus, The Devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus, The Admirable Life of Mary des Vallées, (incomplete copy found at Laval University Library, Quebec) and Correspondence of St. John Eudes.

GENERAL PREFACE

C.J.M. The first edition in French, Oeuvres Complètes du Vénérable Jean Eudes, ran into twelve octavo volumes with introductions, explanatory notes, analytic and alphabetic indexes of great value. These writings constitute a complete summa of ascetic and pastoral theology. The list is as follows:

Volume 1 The Life and Kingdom of Jesus in Christian Souls. In this work the Saint develops his spiritual teaching on the Christian life, namely, that the Christian life is simply the life of Jesus extended and continued in each one of us.

Volume 11. This volume contains six short treatises on subjects relating to the Christian life:

1. A Treatise on the Respect Due to Holy Places, which is an echo of the fiery denunciations he pronounced during his missions against profaners of the temple of God.

2. Meditations on Humility, a series of meditations on the profession of humility as used daily in his order of Priests, the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

3. Interior Colloquies of the Soul with God, meditations on creation, the end of man and the grace of Baptism.

4. Man's Contract with God in Holy Baptism, a summary of the teachings of Sacred Scripture and Tradition on the Sacrament of Baptism.

5. The Practice of Piety, a brief explanation of what is necessary in order to live a Christian life.

6. Catechism of the Mission, an outline of the catechetical instructions given during a mission.

Volume III. Contains two important works on sacerdotal perfection:

1. The Memorial of the Ecclesiastical Life, an explanation of the dignity and duties of the priesthood.
2. A Manual of Piety for Use in an Ecclesiastical Community, in which the author explains how the means of sanctification he recommended to his priests should be practically applied in their daily lives.

Volume IV. Comprises significant works on the priestly ministry.

1. The Apostolic Preacher is one of the first treatises written on the ministry of the Word of God and is even yet one of the most practical.

GENERAL PREFACE

V 11 -

2. The Good Confessor explains the qualities, and obligations of the minister of the Sacrament of Penance.

3. Counsels for Mission Confessors suggests practical means of assisting penitents to make their examination of conscience and excite themselves to contrition.

4. The Manner of Serving Mass explains the dignity and holiness of this act and what one must do to perform it devoutly and worthily.

Volume V. The Admirable Childhood of the Most Holy Mother of God. This book treats of the holy childhood of Mary and the practical means of honoring the mysteries and virtues of her early life.

Volumes VI, VII, VIII contain the entire writings of the Saint on the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary. The work is entitled: The Admirable Heart of the Most Holy Mother of God. It comprises twelve books covering the complete theology of the devotion to the Sacred Hearts. Eleven books discuss the theory, history, and practice of the devotion to the Immaculate Heart of Mary. The last book deals with the devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. It is this work, together with the Offices of the Sacred Hearts, that merit for him the title of Father, Doctor and Apostle of the Devotion to the Sacred Hearts.

Volume IX. The Rules and Constitutions of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary.

Volume X. Contains The Rules and Constitutions of the Order of Our Lady of Charity, the Directory of the Order, and a collection of two hundred and forty letters.

Volumes XI and XII embrace the Saint's Liturgical Works, comprising twenty-five Offices and Masses for feasts to which he urged special devotion, the Memorial of God's Blessings and several other minor works.

The second French edition appeared in 1935, Oeuvres Choies de Saint Jean Eudes, prepared under the direction of Father Lebrun, the leading authority on Eudistic research. It comprises nine volumes: The Life and Kingdom of Jesus in Christian Souls, Meditations of Various Subjects, Regulae Vitae Christianae Sacerdotalis, Man's Contract with God in Holy Baptism, Letters and Minor Works, Writings on the Priesthood, The Sacred Heart of Jesus, The Admirable Heart of Mary, and The Admirable Childhood of the Mother of God. The format of these volumes is compact and more convenient than the 1905 edition, which is now out of print.

The publication of the works of St. John Eudes revealed the extent and depth of their spiritual doctrine. Cardinal Pitra, who was associated with the cause of Beatification, discovered in the writings of St. John Eudes a remarkable depth of thought and purity of doctrine. Cardinal Vives has more recently expressed his admiration:

I was acquainted with the Doctors of the Order of Saint Francis; I was acquainted with Saint Teresa and Saint John of the Cross, the mystical writers of my own country, Spain; but I was completely ignorant of the writings of Father Eudes. As a member of the Sacred Congregation of Rites it was my duty to study his life and his works, and I am in admiration. Blessed John Eudes must be ranked with the great lights of the Church. His spiritual doctrine is profound and of wonderful exactitude. He is one of the writers who has best propounded the doctrine of the Gospel.(4).

The late Father Ange Le Doré, for fifty years Superior General of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary, wrote:

The works of Blessed John Eudes, although they do not bear the scientific touch of the professional theologian, are nevertheless proof of his remarkable theological, ascetic and scriptural knowledge.... He is not a Doctor after the fashion of the scholastics of the thirteenth century or of the great theologians of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. As they, he might have built up theses and composed books didactic in form; but he was before all a savior of souls. For him the science of theology found its chief field of usefulness in the practice of virtue and in the acquisition of sanctity of which it is the principle.... He was a Doctor after the manner of the Apostles, the Fathers of the Church, St. Francis de Sales and St. Alphonsus de Liguori. The science which shines in his works not only emits light; it engenders piety and sanctity.(5)

The spiritual doctrine expounded by St John Eudes follows the teaching of Cardinal Pierre deBérulle and Father Charles de Condren, two prominent members of the seventeenth-century French School of Spirituality. St. John Eudes applies this doctrine to the devotion to the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary, developing and rendering it more precise and practical. He has the rare gift of expressing the most sublime truths in simple, familiar language. He also excels in condensing into a few pages a complete scheme of Christian life and perfection.

The wish was repeatedly expressed that these inspirational writings could be made available to English-speaking readers. Excellent abridged editions of certain books were published in England and in Canada, but they did not do justice to the literary value of the Saint. Consequently, the Eudist Fathers commemorating their tercentenary in 1943 resolved to publish a complete translation of the principal works of their founder. Competent translators were secured and much time and effort were expended to produce readable volumes in modern English, faithful to the spirit and style of the original.

The first English edition, Selected Works of Saint John Eudes, is the result. In presenting it to the public the Eudist Fathers and the Religious of Our Lady of Charity of the Refuge, and of the Good Shepherd, wish to thank all those who contributed to the success of this comprehensive undertaking. They are especially grateful to the distinguished churchmen who have so graciously accepted to introduce these volumes to Catholic readers, because they consider that the works of St. John Eudes should be more widely known. The Saint in his apostolic work and in his writings ranks with the eminent figures who belong not to one country and to one religious order but to the universal Church. Three centuries have passed since he wrote the works now being printed in the new world, a striking illustration that he wrote for all time. He still speaks in accents that penetrate the mind and heart of the reader to enlighten, purify and sanctify so that Jesus Christ may live and reign in the Christian soul.

FOREWORD

THIS LATEST WORK Of St. John Eudes to be presented to the public in the English language, The Priest, His Dignity and Obligations, will prove a valuable addition to ascetic theology, in the vernacular of most of this continent.

It is a treatise whose wording springs from a heart filled with zeal for God's house. To me, quite a number of its expressions and assertions seem extravagant and exaggerated, more so, doubtless, in their English dress than they do in the French version in which they were first set down, but we are dealing with the spiritual outpourings of a sainted soul and must take his presentation as it stands.

Surely, the glory of the priestly state can hardly seem overdrawn, until we think of the weakness and fickleness of ourselves who have dared to accept that exalted dignity. Habemus autem thesaurum istum in vasis fictilibus. Its very sublimity fills our souls with awe and trepidation. It is magna dignitas, mira potestas, sed excelsum et pavendum officium, and as such we dare embrace its lofty character and its tremendous obligations only because we feel not only privileged, but almost obliged to do so, by the beneficent call of God. "Neither doth any man take the honour to himself, but he that is called by God, as Aaron was" (Heb. 5, 4).

To follow the counsels outlined by our saint is by no means easy to our capricious souls. Their numberless repetitions in the volume under consideration may sometimes grate upon our patience, but salutary precepts and wholesome advice must be ceaselessly urged upon us priests, as we in turn do it in the guiding of others, in season and out of season, so as to imprint their effect upon our too mutable minds.

If we seek a proof of the value of this treatise on priestly obligations. we need only to look at the results so cogently portrayed to us in the congregation founded by this glorious saint, and in the work they accomplish in the formation of the clergy of God's holy Church. What we have experienced in dealing with the priests of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary, in their institutions in this diocese, has given ample proof of their loyal obedience to, and respect for, their superiors, both within and without their ranks; and of the eminently careful and intensive training, by word and example, of the young clerics entrusted to their system of sacerdotal formation.

For this we devoutly thank God and the unfailing protection of His sainted director of priestly perfection. Never did the world need more keenly than now the exalted example and the devoted zeal of holy and apostolic priests.

May this volume prove to countless numbers of them a precious guide and a sacred inspiration!

INTRODUCTION

One of the main ambitions of St. John Eudes was the sanctification of the clergy. In the early years of his career as an Oratorian missionary he began to deliver special lectures once or twice a week to the priests of the district in which the mission was being preached. With all the warmth and earnestness of his deep convictions he strove to impress upon his hearers the sublime dignity of the priestly state and the gravity of the obligations it entails. Later, in 1643, he left the French Oratory and founded the Congregation of Jesus and Mary for the establishment of seminaries and for the training of young aspirants for the priesthood.

But St. John Eudes did even more. He wrote a number of excellent works on the life and functions of the priest. The best-known are A Memorial of the Ecclesiastical Life, The Apostolic Preacher and The Good Confessor. These writings cover all the duties of the priestly life. They are not pretentiously learned works but simple practical handbooks, filled with beautiful thoughts on the dignity of the priesthood and with helpful suggestions for the carrying out of its weighty obligations. These three Works have been brought together in this volume of the Selected Works of St. John Eudes. A brief outline of each book with its salient characteristics will be of great benefit to the reader.

1. A Memorial of the Ecclesiastical Life

St. John Eudes began his Memorial of the Ecclesiastical Life in 1668, but did not complete it until a few days before his death in 1680. Father Blouet de Camilly, second superior general of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary, had it published at Lisieux the following year.

The Memorial is not a lengthy treatise on the priestly life nor is it a detailed exposition of the duties of a priest. The seventeenth century has left us several books of that nature, of which the best known is Father Olier's Treatise on Holy Orders, which was published in 1675. St. John Eudes certainly read and appreciated the Treatise because his ideas on the priesthood as well as on the Christian life fully corresponded with those of the venerable founder of Saint Sulpice.

While the Treatise and other seventeenth-century works on the priesthood were considered excellent, they were not, in the judgment of the Saint, sufficient for the clergy of the day. Priests needed shorter and more practical books which they could always have at hand and which would sum up their duties and how best to fulfil them. St. John Eudes's Memorial was intended to fill this need. It was to serve as a reminder of all the qualities and obligations of the priestly life as also of the manner of performing the sacerdotal functions. In other words, it was to be a manual to help priests to correspond to their exalted vocation and to carry out its duties in a saintly manner.

It is a well-established fact that so long as a priest has only commonplace ideas of his state and duties, he does not feel the necessity of aspiring to perfection and experiences none of the holy ardors of true zeal. St. John Eudes realized this better than anyone, and so he began his Memorial by reminding priests of the sublimity of their calling. This is the theme of the first two chapters of his work. In both, the Saint's style is highly colored and distinctly oratorical. Very possibly they are merely extracts from conferences given by him to the clergy. At all events, they are certainly faithful echoes of his lectures and enable us to have an idea of that ardent and devotional eloquence that so strongly impressed his hearers and communicated to them something of the apostolic zeal that filled his heart. One cannot read them without being struck by the admiration and the enthusiasm with which he writes on the sublimity of the priesthood.

It would be impossible to find more striking and more accurate ideas on the subject.

The third chapter of the Memorial is a summary of the duties that devolve on the priest. This part is called the "memorial" or reminder by St. John Eudes, but that word is now given to the whole book. It would seem that this chapter is the oldest part of the volume, the nucleus of the complete work. In any case, it is superb and supplies fresh evidence of the Saint's ability to condense a whole programme of life into a few pages. The thirty-four articles to be found in it contain everything essential for the practice of priestly perfection. St. John Eudes deals with the fundamental rules of the priest's life, the principal dangers to be guarded against, the care that must be exercised over souls and the devotional exercises suited to the clergy. In these few pages one finds no exaggeration or even hyperbole, so commonly used by orators. The exactness and moderation of his teaching is matched by the precision of his style so that together they make this memorial or reminder a model of its kind.

The fourth and fifth chapters contain a series of pious exercises for the spiritual and the apostolic life of the priest. The Saint dwells on the interior dispositions necessary for achieving personal sanctity and for sanctifying souls through the ministry.

The last chapter is called the Directory of Retreats. It is very short and contains the usual method followed by retreatants in the seminaries conducted by the Congregation of Jesus and Mary. It also has brief notes on the various exercises of the retreat. The chief interest is found in the "extraordinary examens" inserted by the author, which have valuable instructions on the priestly virtues and which find a fitting place in a reminder of the priestly dignity and duties.'

11 The Apostolic Preacher

One of the principal functions of the sacred ministry is the preaching of the Word of God. Jesus Christ, the model of the priest, spent His public life in prayer and in preaching. The first mission that the Saviour of the World gave His Apostles was to announce the Gospel to all creatures. Moreover, the supernatural life of the soul is grounded on faith, and faith is engendered and developed by preaching. Fides ex auditu (Rom. 10, 17).

St. John Eudes belonged to the century of great French preachers. He himself was a born missionary. God had endowed him with extraordinary talents and special aptitudes for the holy ministry of preach

' These examens are usually separated from the chapter and printed as 'Meditations for the Annual Retreat." In the present English edition they are the last series of meditations.

ing. Noble and majestic of bearing, with a strong, flexible and pleasing voice, a rich and vivid imagination, and an ardent and impetuous character, he was destined in the course of his fifty-five years as a missionary to sway multitudes and to move and convert souls. To these qualities were added a burning zeal for the glory of God and the salvation of souls, boundless compassion and sympathy for sinners and great personal sanctity which was universally recognized.

During his missions St. John Eudes invariably gave conferences to his young and inexperienced missionaries on the manner of preaching usefully. In order to conserve these rules in the Congregation of Jesus and Mary and to ensure their practice after his death he decided to bring them together into a volume with the significant title, The Apostolic Preacher. Though he labored at the work for a long time, he did not complete it until the end of his life and it was his successor, Father Blouet de Camilly, who published it in 1685.

In The Apostolic Preacher the Saint dwells upon the excellence and importance of preaching and elaborates some beautiful thoughts that are not usually found in books on the subject. He insists on the supernatural character of preaching and urges the preacher to raise himself above all thoughts of vanity and self-interest and to aim solely at instructing and touching his hearers. He goes into numerous details on the preparation and the composition of the sermon, gives many simple plans, adds some practical advice concerning delivery and points out the ordinary faults of preachers with countless other details that he drew from his own experience. What he desires, above all, is that the preacher be a man of prayer and that he be the first to practise what he preaches to the people.

III. The Good Confessor

In 1644 St. John Eudes published a small book called Advice to Missionary Confessors, which he wrote for his auxiliary priests on the missions that it might guide and help them to maintain uniformity of method in the tribunal of penance. In its contents as in its title, this book recalls Advice for Confessors by St. Francis de Sales. St. John Eudes took care, however, to add to the meekness of the Bishop of Geneva the firmness of St. Charles Borromeo, whose regulations he followed on the delaying and refusing of absolution. The Saint's booklet had a rapid success and appeared in a second edition.

But this volume was merely an essay, and the day came when St. John Eudes wished to complete it by adding the fruits of his long experience in the confessional. He quickly realized that the only way of doing this successfully was to revise the work completely. Thus he produced an entirely new book, The Good Confessor, which appeared in 1666. It was given a most cordial welcome by the clergy and became very popular. This explains why it was re-edited so often in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.'

The Good Confessor is an excellent handbook of pastoral theology, whose purpose is to teach priests how to administer the Sacrament of Penance. Gifted with a practical spirit, the Saint knew that the best means to inspire his fellow priests with a love of this office, so fruitful but often so fatiguing, was to point out first its greatness and sublimity. This he does in the opening chapters. Then he develops the necessary qualifications of the good confessor and offers some helpful advice on dealing with sinners in the confessional.

"Of all the books," says Martine, "given by Father Eudes to the public, The Good Confessor, brought him the most honor. He received from all sides the thanks and praises that he merited for publishing a work of such great utility." '

A little later Pierre Cousin wrote, "We might say that this little book, the first that has appeared in France since the reform of the confessional, has two advantages over most works on the same subject. The first is that the method it teaches is so easy that no one can fail to understand and to practise it faithfully. And the second is that the duties of confessors are there exposed not drily, but with a devotion that arouses that of the reader even as it instructs him."

2 Sixteen editions appeared from 1666 to 1733.

2 Martine, Vie du P. Eudes, Vol. II, p. 121.

"Father Pierre Cousin was appointed superior general of the Eudist Fathers in 1727. The quotation is taken from the introduction to the 1732 edition of The Good Confessor.

INTRODUCTION

1V. Meditations

The present volume includes three series of meditations for the use of the clergy. The first group have as their object the chief obligations of a priest: obligation to seek perfection, hatred of sin, self-denial, love of Christ, of the Blessed Virgin Mary, and of the Church. These meditations are remarkable for the conciseness of their style as well as for the loftiness and solidity of their doctrine. With a little development they would make an excellent clergy retreat.

The other meditations fall into two distinct groups. The first deals with tonsure and holy orders, the material being extracted for the most part from the Pontifical. It was obviously the Saint's intention that they should be used by those to be ordained and possibly they were written for them. The second group, Meditations for the Annual Retreat, were formerly found in the Directory of Retreats at the end of the Memorial. They are the extraordinary examinations of which we have previously spoken.'

The Priest: His Dignity and Obligations, like all the other works of St. John Eudes, was bound up with his apostolic labors, and its only object was to ensure the success of the latter. It is not a learned work but a practical book written to meet the needs of his own Congregation and to help all priests to lead a life conformable to their sublime vocation. Written simply and clearly, without any literary object, it is permeated with the Saint's penetrating unction and delicate piety. No priest can read it seriously without deriving great benefits from it for his personal sanctification and for his priestly work for the salvation of souls.

DEDICATION
TO
THE HOLY PRIESTS OF THE CHURCH TRIUMPHANT

O great saints, chosen from all eternity by Jesus Christ, the Saint of saints, to be clothed in an especial manner with His admirable sanctity; glorious priests selected from thousands of men by Jesus, the Supreme High Priest, to be His associates in the Divine Priesthood, prostrate at your feet with all respect and humility I salute you!

I honor you by every means in my power as my masters and spiritual fathers, as shining lights in the firmament of the Church, as true shepherds of the flock of Christ, as oracles of the Eternal Word, as prophets of His holy teaching, as chiefs in the celestial militia, as captains of the army of the Great King, as princes of His realm, as kings of His empire.

I revere you as members of the greatest and most dignified order in heaven and on earth, the Eternal Priesthood, founded and established by Jesus Christ, the Son of God.

I hail you as the solid pillars supporting Mother Church, as the unshakable foundation of the house of God. I respect you as custodians of the keys of heaven, as cherubim stationed with flaming swords at the gates of paradise to prevent the unworthy and profane from entering its portals. I see in you living and perfect images of the Sovereign Priest, Jesus Christ, the Only Son of God, with whom you are one, being clothed with the very Priesthood conferred upon Him by His Eternal Father, and one with Him as all members are one with their head.

With all my heart I thank God for having elevated you to the highest dignity in his heavenly kingdom and in the family of His

DEDICATION

Divine Son. I rejoice that you are now crowned with glory and happiness, commensurate with the loftiness of your priestly dignity.

From my innermost soul I thank you for the heroic service you have rendered here on earth to our Divine Master and to His Holy Church, by the faithful discharge of your sacerdotal duties, and for the glory you have rendered God in time and eternity.

Who can tell the ardor of the love for Holy Mother Church which consumed you? Who can ever express in words the vigilance and zeal with which you labored in her interests? You realize now more than ever her great need in our materialistic age for priests who will follow in your footsteps, imitating your virtue and holiness. You understand how true is the saying of the Eternal Truth Himself that the harvest is great but the laborers few.

Permit me to address to you the prayer that Our Lord and Saviour recommended to all His children: "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he send forth labourers into his harvest (Matt. 9, 38). But pray that He send workers "approved unto God" (2 Tim. 2, 15), workers seeking not their own interests, but having as their only goal the glory of the Master and the salvation of the souls which He purchased with the shedding of His Precious Blood. Pray that He may send to His Church priests after His own heart, who will walk the same road you trod while you were on earth.

O saintly priests, you know full well the importance and necessity of having holy priests in the Church of Christ. It is the most ardent longing of all true Christians who are animated with the love of God and the zeal for His Church. It is the sole desire that inflames my heart, and though I am the lowliest and most unworthy of all His priests, there is nothing that I would not undergo or suffer to further such a worthy consummation. This conviction constrained me to publish this work on the dignity and obligations of the priesthood. Those who take the trouble to use this book will find in its pages a compendium of their duties, and through its guidance they will exercise more worthily their priestly functions and be holy in all their actions.

Yet, because we labor in vain on earth unless our work be approved and blessed in heaven, deign, O holy priests of God, to accept this work and bless it, offering it in turn to the Sovereign Priest and to His

Ask them to make all priests worthy to share your happiness in heaven, that your brothers in the Sacred Ministry may one day be associated with you in paradise to chant forever the praises of the Most Blessed Trinity, whose glory and majesty fill heaven and earth.

CHAPTER 1( 2 )

THE DIGNITY OF THE PRIESTHOOD( 3 )

IN THE DEDICATION of this work I prostrated myself before the holy priests of the Church Triumphant to invoke their blessing. I now address myself to you, brother priests of the Church Militant, in the words that St. Peter, the Prince of the Apostles, addressed to all Christians: Vos autem genus electum, regale sacerdotium, gens sancta, populus acquisitionis ut virtutes annuntietis ejus . us qui de tenebris vos vocavit in admirabile lumen suum. "You are a chosen generation, a kingly priesthood, a holy nation, a purchased people; that you may declare his virtues, who bath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light" ( 1 Pet. 2, 9).

You are a chosen generation, for the Saint of saints has elected you to the holy office of the priesthood. To you particularly He addresses these words: "But according to him that bath called you, who is holy,

(1). Memorial: There is no exact equivalent in English for the French word "Memorial." We have decided to retain the word with the sense of reminder, which it sometimes has in English. St. John Eudes says himself: 'I wish to put this book in your hands as a reminder (memorial) of all the qualities and the merits, the obligations and the duties of your profession, as also of the method of exercising in a holy manner all the priestly functions." Cf. Oeuvres Complètes du Venerable Jean Eudes, Vol. III, p. 21.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

be you also in all manner of conversation holy; because it is written: "You shall be holy, for I am holy" ( 1 Pet. 1, 15-16).

You are clothed and adorned with a kingly priesthood. You are priests and kings as Jesus Christ Himself is the Supreme Priest and King.

You are a purchased people in a very special significance. It is true that Our Blessed Redeemer purchased all mankind at the price of His Blood and that Almighty God gave Him to all nations. Nevertheless Jesus acquired you in a particular manner and so His Heavenly Father manifests a unique love for you.

After the Blessed Virgin Mary you represent our Divine Saviour's most glorious conquest. You are the most precious of all gifts that the Eternal Father has bestowed upon His Only Son. You are the first and most excellent fruit of His work, the worthiest price of His blood, His principal portion. You embody His most noble heritage from which are derived fruits for the glory of God more acceptable than from all His other possessions.

The Son of God chose you, not only that you yourselves might serve and love Him, but also that you might make Him loved and served by others. He selected you that you might announce to the world the virtues, that is, the perfections and excellence, the mysteries and marvels of Him who "bath called you out of darkness," from the darkness of sin and hell, "into His marvellous light."

Jesus Christ, speaking of Himself, says, "I am the light of the world" (John 8, 12). He says also of priests, "You are the light of the world" (Matt. 5, 14), and "to you it is given to know the mystery of the kingdom of God" (Mark 4, 11) and to make it known to other men. To you has been opened the treasury of wisdom and grace that you may be dispensers of these gifts.

You are persons elevated by the infinite goodness of God to the highest dignity of heaven and earth, second only to the divine motherhood of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

You are the noblest personages in God's house. You are clothed with genuine nobility for, as Christians and certainly much more as priests, you may be called in the words of St. Paul "the offspring of God" (Act. 17, 29). You are children of God, His first-born sons. You are of the royal blood of Jesus, a part of His genealogy; you are His brethren and members in a degree much higher than any other Christians. You are clothed with the royal priesthood, and your priesthood is one with His. Since there is but one priesthood, unum est sacerdotium, (4) centered in Christ and extended to all other priests, so there is but one priest, Jesus Christ. All other priests are one with Him, united to Him according to His own prayer: "The glory which thou has given me, I have given to them: that they may be olle as we also are one: I in them, and thou in me; that they may be made perfect in one . . ." (John 17, 22-23).

You are governors, judges, princes and kings of the empire of the supreme Monarch of the World. You are governors, not tenebrarum harum (Eph. 6, 12), that is, of this world, which is darkness and nothingness, but of faithful souls purchased with the Precious Blood of Christ, one drop of which is worth more than a thousand worlds.

You are judges, not of bodies but of souls, not of earthly but of heavenly things. Your judgments are not transitory; they endure forever. They are written, not on paper nor on parchment with ink, but in eternity with the adorable Blood of the Son of God. Thus the most eminent persons in the land recognize you as judges of their souls, divinely appointed by Providence. Humbly they kneel before you and accept your judgment as the very judgment of God Himself.

You are princes of God. Your principality is not terrestrial; it is immortal and imperishable. You are kings of His empire, the Church. It is to you that He says: Ego dispono vobis sicut disposuit mihi Pater meus regnum. "And I dispose to you. as My Father bath disposed to me, a kingdom" (Luke 22, 29). Your royalty is not temporal but eternal, a participation in the royalty of Jesus Christ.

Since Christ is Priest and King, so, too, you are priests and kings. Since you share one priesthood, so, too, you participate in one kingship with Him. Since the Eternal Father has given His Divine Son a name and a power above every name and every power (Phil. 2, 9), so He has given you, His priests, a name and a power incomparably greater than all names and all Powers in this world and in the world to Come.

Did God say to any of the angels: "Thou art a priest for ever according to the order of Melchisedech?" (PS. 109, 4). Did He ever pronounce to the Arcitangels, the Principalities or the Powers what His Son said to you: "Whatsoever thou shalt bind upon earth, it shall be bound also in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, it shall be loosed also in heaven?" (Matt. 16, 19). To which of the Cherubim or Seraphim did He ever give the power to forgive sin, to bestow grace, to close hell and open the gates of heaven, to bring God into the hearts of men in the Blessed Sacrament? To whom in the universe did He grant the power of offering the Holy Sacrifice of the Altar, to immolate Him and give His Body and Soul to the faithful?

To which of the heavenly spirits did God ever speak the words He says to every priest, "As the Father hath sent me, I also send you?" (John 20, 21). In other words, I send you for the same purpose for which My Heavenly Father sent Me, to preach the gospel, to dispense grace, to administer the sacraments, to destroy the tyranny of Satan, to dispel the darkness of sin and to spread the divine light of grace throughout the world. I send you to establish the reign of God and to exercise on earth the very functions which I exercised, to continue My work of redemption, to lead the same life that I led and to practise the same virtues that I practised.

Thus, it is clear that you are not only the visible angels of the God of Armies; you are far greater than angels in power and authority. Hence, you must live a life more perfect in purity and sanctity than that of the angels.

It is not surprising that your power surpasses that of the angels, for, as the King of the Angels has made you participants in His kingship, so He has vested you with His own power. Consequently, you may say with Him, although in a different sense, "All power is given to me in heaven and on earth and in hell;" in heaven for you have the keys to open and close the gates of the kingdom; on earth for daily you exercise among men an infinite power which is God's alone by the remis sion of sins, the bestowal of grace, the formation of Christ in men's hearts and in the Blessed Eucharist; in hell for the Master has give& you the power to crush and destroy the dragons of hell and to drive demons from the bodies and souls of the faithful.

Furthermore, you have power over the Sovereign Lord Himself in heaven and on earth. Do you not envision Our Lord Jesus Christ, King of angels and men, Who was subject to His Mother and to St.' Joseph on earth, erat subditus illis (Luke 2, 51), actually subjected to the power of His priests? Does He not obey their commands and their words? Does He not hear their voice when they summon Him to come into their hands at the consecration of the bread and wine in the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass? Have they not power over His Mystical Body, which is the Church, over His Holy Spirit, over His grace and His mysteries? Is it not through priests and their ministry that the Holy Spirit is imparted to the faithful, that the treasures of grace are distributed and that the secrets of the eternal mysteries are made manifest? For that very reason Sacred Scripture attributed to them the function of "dispensers of the mysteries of God (1 Cor. 4, 1).

Above all else, how wonderful is the power of priests over the very Body and Blood of the Saviour! That power not only gives them the right to bring Our Lord down upon the altar whenever they wish or to transport Him from one place to another; it also extends to the point of sacrificing Him every day, and of annihilating Him so far as it is possible to annihilate Him, because sacrifice means the destruction of the object sacrificed. Whoever possesses sacrificial power likewise must have power to destroy what he sacrifices. This is indeed the greatest and most absolute power God Himself can exercise over His creatures, to destroy and annihilate them for His glory.

Thus, God has honored the sovereign Priest, His Divine Son, and all those whom He has called to this holy state of the priesthood. He who can make creatures more perfect, angels more beautiful and worlds far greater and lovelier, cannot institute a priesthood more worthy and more admirable than the Christian priesthood. The sacerdotal dignity and power are so exalted that even Our Lord Himself cannot make priests capable of exercising functions more marvelous than yours

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

when you form Christ in the Holy Eucharist, when you offer Him in sacrifice, or give Him to the faithful in Holy Communion or when you forgive sins in the Sacrament of Penance.

What more shall I say? You are the first officers in the court of the great Monarch of the universe. You are the chief ministers of His state, the treasurers of His mercy, His faithful stewards. Into your hands He has committed His riches, His entire glory, the treasures of His grace, the keys of His kingdom, the sacraments of His religion, the sanctity of His divine mysteries, the virtue of His word, His Mystical Body, His very flesh and His Precious Blood.

You are the most noble part of the Mystical Body of Christ. You are the eyes, the mouth, the tongue, the heart of the Church, in other words, of Jesus Christ Himself.

You are His eyes for through you the Good Shepherd watches over His flock. Through you He enlightens and guides His sheep. Through you He weeps over the transgressions of those who fall by the wayside, or become prey of the wolves. Through you He weeps over the death of His dear Lazarus, that is, of the souls of those who are dead through sin.

You are His mouth and His tongue. Through you He speaks to His people, continuing to preach the gospel that He Himself preached during His public life.

You are His heart. Through you He imparts true life, the life of grace on earth and the life of glory in heaven to all the members of His Mystical Body. What marvels, what favors, what greatness in the sacerdotal dignity! Yet there is still more!

You are the associates of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost, in most sublime and mysterious intimacy. I hear the great Apostle Paul announce to all Christians that they have been called by God to be members of the society of His Divine Son. Vocati estis in societatem Filii ejus Jesu Christi. "You are called unto the fellowship of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord" (1 Cor. i, 9). With truth I say that priests are called unto the fellowship of the Father, and the Son and the Holy Ghost. Vocati estis in societatem Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti.

God the Father associates you with Himself in the highest of all functions, the generation of His Divine Son. He embraces you in His divine paternity, making you fathers of that very Son since yours is the power to form and generate Him in the souls of the faithful. He has chosen you to be fathers of His people, real fathers in word and action. you bear within you the living image of the divine paternity. "O Priest," cries St. Augustine, "thou art the vicar and father of Christ»"

God the Son associates you with Himself in His noble perfections and His divine operations. He makes you participants in His role as mediator between God and man, in the dignity of judge of the universe, in His name and office as Saviour of the world. He gives you power to offer with Him to His Eternal Father the sacrifice of Redemption which He renews daily on the altars of the world, the most sublime action that He ever performed and ever will perform.

God, the Holy Ghost associates you with Him in His divine actions. Why did the Holy Spirit come into the world? Was it not to dispel the darkness of ignorance and sin? Was it not to enlighten men's minds with a celestial light, to fire their hearts with divine love, to reconcile sinners to God, to destroy sin, to communicate grace, to sanctify souls, and to establish the Church? Was it not to apply to mankind the fruits of the passion and death of the Redeemer, to destroy the old man and bring to life within us Jesus Christ Our Lord?

Is not your daily duty to concern yourselves with all these miraculous functions? Are you not sent by God to bring Christ into all hearts? Is it not true that all the offices of the priesthood are designed for the sole purpose of forming and causing God to live in the souls of His people?

Truly then, you have an intimate alliance with the Three Eternal Persons of the Blessed Trinity. You are their associates and their Coadjutors. You are cooperators with the Most High in all His works. Dei adjutores, cooperatores veritatis (1 Cor. 3, 9). You are co-laborers with the Almighty, sanctifiers of souls, mediators between God and man, judges of nations, saviours of the world. The Divine Redeemer has appointed you here on earth to serve in His place, to continue and complete His own work, the redemption of the universe.

In Sacred Scripture, Almighty God has given you the name of 8-

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

saviour, for of priests He says, by the mouth of the Prophet Abdias (Abdias 13, 21), Ascendent salvatores in montem Sion. Clement of Alexandria attributes to priests the role of redeemers.(5)

It may even be said of you that you are other Christs, living and walking among men for you bear the exalted name of the Son of God, the name of Jesus and Saviour. You represent His authority and His divine perfections. You act in His name, are employed in His service, continuing to live on earth the very life He led here below.

You are visible gods in this world, children of God, fathers of God. In his work, The Celestial Hierarchy, St. Dionysius invests you with these three attributes: You are gods because you take the place of God in this world and are clothed with His qualities, His prerogatives and powers. You are children of gods because you are the children of your bishops who in turn are gods in yet a higher degree than you. You are fathers of gods, because you are fathers of Christians who likewise are gods, though in a lower degree than you. Ego dixi dii estis (Ps. 81, 6). "A priest," says St. Gregory Nazianzen, "is a god who produces gods." Deus deos efficiens. (6)

O incomparable excellence! O incomprehensible dignity of the Priesthood of Jesus Christ, shared with all His priests! How indebted we should be to Him who has raised us to so elevated a state, and has showered upon us such extraordinary gifts! O noble vocation! What a grace, what a privilege, what an inestimable blessing to have been called to an order so divine and so exalted!

CHAPTER 11

QUALITIES OF A HOLY PRIEST

THE MOST EVIDENT MARK of God's anger and the most terrible castigation He can inflict upon the world are manifested when He permits His people to fall into the hands of clerics' who are priests more in name than in deed, priests who practice the cruelty of ravening wolves rather than the charity and affection of devoted shepherds. Instead of nourishing those committed to their care, they rend and devour them brutally. Instead of leading their people to God, they drag Christian souls into hell in their train. Instead of being the salt of the earth and the light of the world, they are its innocuous poison and its murky darkness.

St. Gregory the Great says that priests and pastors will stand condemned before God as the murderers of any souls lost through neglect or silence. Tot occidimus, quot ad mortem ire tepidi et tacentes videmus(1). Elsewhere St. Gregory asserts that nothing more angers God than to see those whom He set aside for the correction of others, give bad example by a wicked and depraved life.' Instead of preventing offenses against His Majesty, such priests become themselves the first to persecute Him, they lose their zeal for the salvation of souls and think only of following their own inclinations. Their affections go no farther than earthly things, they eagerly bask in the empty praises of men, using their sacred ministry to serve their ambitions, they abandon the things of God to devote themselves to the things of the world, and in their saintly calling of holiness, they spend their time in profane and worldly pursuits.

When God permits such things, it is a very positive proof that He is thoroughly angry with His people, and is visiting His most dreadful anger upon them. That is why He cries unceasingly to Christians, "Return, O ye revolting children . . . and I will give you pastors according to my own heart" (Jer. 3, 14-15). Thus, irregularities in the lives of priests constitute a scourge visited upon the people in consequence of sin.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

On the other hand, the greatest effect of God's mercy, the most precious grace He bestows upon mankind, is to send worthy priests, men after His own heart, seeking only His glory and the salvation of souls. The greatest blessing that God bestows upon a church, the most signal manifestation of divine grace, is to have a saintly shepherd, be he bishop or priest. This is indeed the grace of graces and the most priceless of all gifts for it includes within itself every other blessing and grace. What is a priest after God's heart? He is an inestimable treasure containing an immensity of good things.

The holy priest is one of the treasures of the Great King, having in his keeping the infinite abundance of God's mercy to enrich worthy souls. He is an inexhaustible fountain of living water, open and accessible to all those who long to come to drink the waters of salvation.

He is a tree of life planted by God in the paradise of the Church, bearing on its branches at all times fruits of everlasting life, freeing from sin and hell, giving grace and eternal bliss to those who will but eat. Those fruits are the words, instructions, exhortations, prayers, intercession and example of the life and work of the holy priest.

He is an ever burning and shining light set in the candelabra of Mother Church, burning before God and shining before men: burning in his own love for God, shining by his charity for his fellow man; burning with the perfection of his inner life, shining by the perfection of his exterior deportment; burning in fervent prayer for his people, shining by his preaching of the word of God.

The priest is a sun cheering the world by his presence and bearing. He brings heavenly blessings into every heart. He dispels the ignorance and darkness of error and radiates on every side bright beams of celestial light. He extinguishes sin and gives life and grace to the multitudes. He imparts new life to the weak, inflames the lukewarm, fires more ardently those who are aglow with the sacred flame of divine love.

He is an angel purifying, illuminating and perfecting the souls that God has entrusted to him. He is a seraph sent by God to teach men the science of salvation which is concerned only with knowing and loving Almighty God and His Divine Son, Jesus Christ.

The priest is an archangel and a prince of the heavenly militia, waging constant war against the devil who strives to drag countless souls into the depths of hell.

He is the real father of the children of God, with a heart filled with love which is truly paternal. That love urges him to work unceasingly to nourish his flock with the bread and the sacred word and of the sacraments, to clothe the faithful with Christ and the Holy Ghost, to enrich them with celestial blessings and to secure for them every possible assistance in the salvation of their souls.

Above all else, the priest is the father, the advocate, the protector and defender of the poor, widows, orphans and strangers. He is the refuge of the afflicted, of the desolate and the discouraged. He is happy to visit and console the sorrowful, to bring them what assistance he can, taking upon himself their burdens and defending them against their oppressors.

He is a captain in the mighty army of God, always ready to battle for the glory of God and the defense of Holy Mother Church. He is ever prepared to lay siege to the world, the flesh and the devil. For him the conquest of kingdoms means only the salvation of souls for each soul is a kingdom more precious than all the empires of the world.

The priest is a prince of the realm of God, one of the kings of Christ's empire, the Church. He is appointed to rule by the maxims and laws of the gospel as many kings and queens as there are Christians committed to his care. His duty is to make them worthy to possess in eternity the very kingdom of the Sovereign Monarch of the world.

The priest is an evangelist and an apostle whose chief work is to preach publicly and privately, by word and example, the Gospel of Jesus Christ; to continue and perpetuate the functions that the apostles were commissioned to perform, and to practise the virtues that they practised.

He is the sacred bridegroom of the divine spouse, the Church of Christ. He is so consumed with love that his thoughts are concerned only with seeking means to adorn and embellish the Church in the eyes of men, and to render her yet more worthy of the eternal love of the heavenly and immortal Bridegroom.

The priest is a mediator between God and man, causing the Eternal Father to be known, loved, adored and served, as well as feared, by men. His office is to make known the will of God to men, urging them to be faithful to their every duty. His concern is to be devoted unceasingly to "the things that appertain to God" (Heb. 5, 1).

The priest is one of the chief parts of the Mystical Body of Christ because he occupies the principal parts of that Body, namely, the head, the eyes, the mouth, the tongue and the heart. He is the head with the Chief Shepherd, sharing the right to rule and govern in His place. He is the eyes watching over the other members to enlighten and guide them, and to weep over them when they sin. The priest is the mouth and the tongue to speak the language of heaven, to utter on all occasions the words of eternity. He is the heart circulating the blood stream of Christ's Precious Blood to quicken and vivify the other members, that their works and functions may be ennobled and perfected.

A holy priest is a saviour and another Christ, taking the Master's place on earth, representing Him, clothed with His authority, acting in His name, adorned with His qualifications, exercising His judgment on earth in the tribunal of penance. He is consecrated to exercise the highest functions Christ ever performed on earth, to continue the work of salvation. In imitation of His Redeemer he gives himself, mind, heart, affections, strength, time, all for God. He is ever ready to sacrifice his very blood and even life itself to procure the salvation of souls, particularly those of his own flock.

He is a god, living and walking on earth; a god by grace and by participation, clothed with the perfections and attributes of God, namely, His divine authority, power, justice, mercy, charity, benignity, purity and holiness. He is a god delegated to carry on God's noblest works, the sacerdotal and pastoral duties, as great St. Dionysius says: Omnium divinorum divinissimum est cooperari Deo in salutem animarum. "The most divine of all divine things is to cooperate with God in the salvation of souls." (3) (3). De Coelesti Hierarchia, cap. 5.

St. Gregory Nazianzen asserts that the priest is a "God who makes gods," Deus deos efficiens, (4) that is, Christians who are given the name of gods in Sacred Scripture.

He is a shepherd bearing within himself the living image of the goodness and the vigilance of the Good Shepherd, a guardian who never deserts his flock lest the wolves devour it. He is a shepherd who knows his sheep, their needs, their maladies, their infirmities, that he may cure them. He is a shepherd who nourishes them by word and example.

What more shall I say? "Who speaks of the priesthood," says St. Dionysius, "speaks of an order which contains within itself all that is most sacred and most holy." (5) "Who speaks of the priesthood," avers St. Ignatius Martyr, "speaks of the fullness of the blessings of God." (6) "Who speaks of a priest," adds St. Dionysius, "speaks of a man who is divine." (7)

Whoever refers to a priest adorned with virtue and holiness becoming the dignity of his calling, bespeaks the greatest degree of sanctity found in Holy Church, a sanctity which is the source and wellspring of grace and love, for the priesthood is the fountain of all holiness.

Such a priest is a man called to the sacerdotal dignity not by men, not by the will of flesh and blood, not by his parents or by the spirit of ambition, not by avarice or human motives, but by vocation from God.

Such a priest is a man endowed with the marks and perfections outlined in the first Chapter of St. Paul's Epistle to Titus, and in the third Chapter of his First Epistle to Timothy: "a man without crime, as the steward of God; not proud, not subject to anger, not given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre; but given to hospitality, gentle, sober, just, holy, continent: of good behaviour, chaste, given to hospitality, a teacher; one that ruleth well his own house having his children in subjection. . . . But if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the church of God?" (Tit. 1, 7-8); (1 Tim. 12-5).

Such a priest employs his revenue and income not in vanities nor sinful excesses nor to enrich his relatives or his own estate, but to en hance the glory of God. He adorns altars, clothes the naked, feeds the hungry, refreshes the thirsty, frees prisoners, assists religious institutions, builds churches and hospitals, and carries out good works of every description.

Such a priest is seen frequently in the hospitals, prisons and the homes of the poor. He consoles, instructs and assists the people in their spiritual and corporal necessities. He applies himself diligently to the consideration of his duties; he studies the needs of his flock in order to exercise the utmost efficiency in supplying their wants. He ferrets out any disorders which may exist among his charges in order to eradicate them; he gives himself unselfishly to the advancement of the glory of God and the salvation of those souls under his direction.

The saintly priest employs his mind and heart, thoughts, affections, words and actions, his time, his life, all that he has, to destroy the tyranny of Satan and sin, and to establish the reign of Christ in the hearts of those whom God has entrusted to him.

The worthy priest is an angel of purity in mind and body, a cherub of light and knowledge, a seraph of love and charity, an apostle of zeal in work and sanctity, a little god on earth in power and authority, in patience and benignity. He is the living image of Christ in this world, of Christ watching, praying, preaching, catechizing, working, weeping, going from town to town, from village to village, suffering, agonizing, sacrificing Himself and dying for the souls created to His image and likeness.

He is the light of those who sit in darkness and in the shadow of death. He is the destroyer of error, schisms and heresies, the converter of sinners, the sanctifier of the just, the strength of the weak, the consolation of the afflicted, the treasure of the poor. He is the confusion of hell, the glory of heaven, the terror of demons, the joy of angels, the ruin of Satan's kingdom, the establishment of Christ's empire, the ornament of the Church, the crown of the Supreme Shepherd.

In a word, the holy priest embodies a world of grace and benediction for the entire Church, but especially for that portion which God has called him to govern and guide.

CHAPTER III

DUTIES OF THE PRIESTLY STATE

FROM ALL that has been written in the foregoing chapters, it is obvious that the priest is favored with far more graces than any other human being except the Blessed Virgin Mary. It follows, then, that no one on earth is held to a greater perfection and sanctity of life than the priest, especially if he is charged with the care of souls.

Thus, it is most important and necessary for you to consider often and seriously before God the dignity and excellence of your vocation, the obligation and duties which it involves and the manner in which you discharge them.

Consequently, it is profitable for you to have a summary of these duties, to read and reread, that thus you may engrave your responsibilities on your heart, and give expression to them in your life and conduct.

The compendium that I have drawn up with this intention in mind, formulates the principal sacerdotal duties under thirty-four headings, in honor and commemoration of the thirty-four years<sup>(1)</sup> of the life on earth of Jesus Christ, the great High Priest, who is the model of all priests. If you seek to follow a rule filled with love, sweetness and perfection you must do as follows:

(1). The exact duration of Christ's public life is uncertain. St. John Eudes follows the opinion of St. Jerome that the ministry of Jesus lasted three years and a half. Assuming as do many authoritative writers that Our Lord began His public life at the age of thirty, St. John Eudes concludes that the entire life of the Savior extended over a period of thirty three years and six months. Our Lord therefore died in His thirty-fourth year. This accounts for the fact that St. John Eudes asks us to honor the thirty-four years of our Lord's life on earth-For the chronology and duration of Christ's life, see Filion, Vie de N.S. Jesus Christ (Paris, 1925), vol. II, p. 11 and The Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. VIII, «Jesus,» P. 379.

16 - THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

1 Establish in your heart a firm resolution to live inwardly and outwardly in such a way that your life may be above reproach, following the words of St. Paul to Timothy which apply to priests as well as bishops, "It behoveth therefore a bishop to be blameless" (1 Tim. 3, 2). Make of your life a living gospel, a continual sermon, a perfect rule of life and morals for those whom you govern.

2 Make a lofty and generous profession to conduct your life always according to the maxims of faith and of the gospel, being assiduous in reading and studying them. Christ brought His divine maxims down from heaven and taught them to His apostles for this very purpose. Why else did He inspire the writings of Sacred Scripture except that they be followed? Who will follow them if not the priests who should learn these truths and preach them to the people? How shall they learn and preach these truths if they do not take the trouble to read the exhortations of Our Lord Jesus Christ, where they are to be found, especially in chapters five, six and seven of St. Matthew?

3 Be not concerned with the world. Rather renounce its maxims, its spirit and everything associated with it. True Christians are not of this world, even as the Master Himself is not, according to His own words: "Because they are not of the world, as I also am not of the world" (John 17, 14). If the Holy Ghost forbids the faithful to be concerned with the things of this world, even commanding them to hate them, how much more so do His words apply to priests? "Love not the world, nor the things which are in the world. If any man love the world, the charity of the Father is not in him" (1 John 2, 15).

4 Engrave on your heart the words of St. Paul and follow them faithfully: "Be not conformed to this world" (ROM. 12, 2). Renounce as much as lies in your power everything worldly in dress or habits. It surely demeans the priesthood when you who are supposed to be the salt of the earth, that is, the wise men of the world, follow the fashions of the day and the inane spirit of the times, manifested in thoughtlessness and perpetual changes. Stultus ut luna mutatur (Ecclus. 27, 12).

5 Avoid all familiarity with the laity, especially worldlings and women, except in charity and necessity. Even then, your aim should be to avoid being alone with them. At all times, whether your conversation be with women or other people of the world ' speak the language of the Heavenly Father, conversing chiefly of the things of God and eternal salvation: if any man speak, let him speak, as the words of God" (1 Pet. 4, 11). "For we are the good odour of Christ unto God; providing good things, not only in the sight of God but also in the sight of all men, that he, who is on the contrary part may be afraid, having no evil to say of us" (2 Cor. 2, 15; Rom. 12, 17; Tit. 2, 8).

6 Always dress in your clerical attire which is the ornament and glory of the priest. Be mindful that you should avoid anything which suggests foppishness or vanity. Likewise, you should be careful to be neat and tidy so that your appearance suggests order and cleanliness. Your h-caring at all times should denote humility, simplicity and modesty.

7 Deny to avarice any part in your life, and shut the door of your heart firmly against any inroad. Engrave upon it these words of the Holy Ghost, "Let your manners be without covetousness, contented with such things as you have. For He hath said, I will not leave thee: neither will I forsake thee" (Heb. 13, 5). "For they that will become rich fall into temptation and into the snare of the devil and into many unprofitable and hurtful desires, which drown men into destruction and perdition. For the desire of money is the root of all evils: which some coveting have erred from the faith and have entangled themselves in many sorrows. But thou, O man of God, fly these things: and pursue justice, godliness, faith, charity, patience, mildness" (1 Tim. 6, 9-11).

18 - THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

You should always remember that, when you embraced the clerical state, you made your profession in these words, Dominus pars haereditatis meae, meaning that you would seek no other portion, no other heritage than Jesus Christ Himself. Consequently, He is the only treasure to fill your heart, and you should seek no other treasures on earth. The Fathers of the Church tell us that the priest who enriches himself or his relatives at the expense of the Church will be condemned by God as guilty of theft and sacrilege. As St. Bernard puts it: Furtum est, rapina, sacrilegium. (2).

8 Hold in horror the spirit of the Pharisees, that is, the spirit of ambition and vanity which loves the point of honor, which preaches but does not practise, which seeks only the praise and tribute of man, and which is concerned only with appearances and the plaudits of humans. That spirit dares to ignore the frightful anathemas hurled by the Saviour Himself against the haughty Pharisees: "Woe to you when men shall bless you: for according to these things did their fathers do to the false prophets" (Luke 6, 26). To avoid such a tendency, consider well and practise the words of Sacred Scripture: "The greater thou art, the more humble thyself in all things: and thou shalt find grace before God" (Ecclus. 3, 20). And Christ Himself counsels us thus, "Go sit down in the lowest place" (Luke 14, 10). "Learn of me, because I am meek and humble of heart" (Matt. 11, 29).

9 Fear the sentence pronounced against the unworthy servant: "And the unprofitable servant cast ye out into the exterior darkness" (Matt. 25, 30). Have a wholesome dread lest this verdict be hurled against you. To safeguard particularly against this, avoid idleness, the mother of all vices. Regulate and occupy your time with prayer and study, and in the exercise of devotion, charity or other useful works. Remember that no group of men on earth is more obliged to make profitable use of time than priests for they are charged with the most important duties on earth—the glory of God and the salvation of souls.
Epist. ad Falconem.

DUTIES OF THE PRIESTLY STATE

10 Learn to hate intemperance in eating and drinking. Avoid every occasion in which sinful excesses may be committed. This vice is low and bestial and most definitely contrary to the sanctity and dignity of the priest, who should be an angel among men.

11 Abhor impurity. Avoid with the most scrupulous exactitude the places, persons or things which might constitute the slightest peril or suggest even the smallest shadow of that abominable vice. What could be more necessary and becoming to the life of the priest consecrated to God, the priest whose life is spent in the church near the altar, whose time is spent performing angelic functions amidst divine mysteries, what is more necessary and becoming than purity of mind and body? What can be more terrible than an impure priest? He is a monster, a Judas, an antichrist.

12 Consider the words of St. Paul: if any man have not care of his own, and especially of those of his house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel" (1 Tim. 5, 8). Lest, therefore, you be condemned by God as apostates, learn to rule and govern your household that it may be a shining example of virtue, modesty, charity and piety for all Christian families to behold and imitate.

13 Keep a constant eye on the needs of your flock, anticipating their every want. Be mindful that the slightest negligence on your part renders you culpable in the eyes of God for He will demand a rigorous account of all the souls committed to your care. I will require his blood at thy hand," says Sacred Scripture in Ezechiel (3, 18). Likewise, the Master will brand you as the murderers of those who perish because of your sloth, as witness the terrible words of St. Gregory: "Tot occidimus quot ad mortem ire tepidi et tacentes videmus."
(3). Homil. 17.

20 - THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

14 Eradicate those evils for which you can find a remedy. Seek to destroy as far as is possible, scandal, disorders and sin by prayer, example and preaching. Thus, you shall fulfil the words of St. Paul: "Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, entreat, rebuke in all patience and doctrine" (2 Tim. 4, 2). Banish blasphemies, swearing, injury and injustice, the oppression of the poor, the pomps of Satan. Crush the implements of the devil, immoral dancing, obscene plays, lascivious books and shows, immodest dress and lewd fashions. Abolish blasphemy, lying, fraud and every such type of sin. Above all else, Preach and wage incessant war against drunkenness, the source of so much evil.

15 Be the protector and defender, the consoler, the father and the refuge of the poor, widows and orphans. Be the strength of those who are helpless and oppressed. Be assiduous in catechizing and preaching the gospel. Visit prisoners and the afflicted, encouraging them to turn their trials to their spiritual advancement.

16 Cultivate a very special charity for the sick and visit them frequently. Administer the sacraments and try to be with them at the hour of death. Be exact in your devotion to the poor as well as to the rich, to the humble as well as to the great.

17 Strive your utmost to instruct those under your care in their Christian obligations. In this respect be faithful in preaching and exhorting, not only in the pulpit and in public, but even in private, in the home, on the street, everywhere, in imitation of the first Christian priests. "And every day they ceased not in the temple, and from house to house, to teach and preach Christ Jesus" (Acts 5, 42). Let it be said of you as of St. Paul, I am clear from the blood of all men. For I have not spared to declare unto you all the counsel of God. . . . For three years I ceased not, with tears to admonish every one of you night and day" (Acts 20, 26-31).

DUTIES OF THE PRIESTLY STATE

18 Watch over the school, being especially careful in the selection of teachers. Frequently visit the class rooms to teach catechism, and to hear the children say their morning and night prayers. Encourage them also in the practice of the utmost respect for the House of God.

19 Try to adjust differences which may arise between various members of your flock and strive to establish the reign of peacefulness and Christian charity among those committed to your charge by God.

20 Cultivate an ardent love for the Church which God has given to you as a spouse to Whom you must surrender your whole heart. Carefully protect her interests; seek unflaggingly to advance her mission; labor unceasingly for her growth and sanctification; be unailing in your zeal for the salvation of souls, burning into your very heart the words of St. Dionysius, Omnium divinatorum divinissimum est cooperari

Deo in salutem animarum .(4)

21 Let your chief glory and happiness consist in seeking to carry out holily and reverently the noble duties of the priestly life, especially the offering of the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass, the recitation of the Divine Office, the administration of the sacraments, preaching and instructing. Above all else, endeavor to form the saintly habit of doing everything not simply by routine, not in a slovenly, careless manner, but with devotion and exactitude worthy of God, as St. Paul counsels, digne Deo (Col. 1, 10), that is, worthy of His eternal majesty and infinite sanctity. To attain this goal, observe the dispositions and practices which will be suggested later on this point.

(4). De Coelesti Hierarchia, cap. 3.

22 - THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

22 Be most devoted to hearing confessions, regarding this function as one of the chief duties of the priest and as a most necessary most powerful and most effective means of cooperating with God in the salvation of souls.

23 Take great care not to violate the command of our Divine Master, namely: "Give not that which is holy to dogs; neither cast ye your pearls before swine" (Matt. 7, 6). Let no unworthy person, no public sinner approach the holy table; withhold absolution from those unworthy of it, particularly those who persist in living in the proximate occasion of sin or constitute themselves such occasions for others; those, too, who live at enmity with their fellow men, refusing all attempts at reconciliation; those who remain constantly in the state of mortal sin without purpose or desire of amendment.

Be solicitous for the sanctity of the Sacrament of Matrimony, being particularly careful that none shall enter that holy state unless they are free from all canonical impediments and are thoroughly familiar with the obligations of marriage as well as its rights.

Regarding the Sacrament of Baptism, likewise be on guard against permitting unworthy godparents to assume the duties of sponsors, for these spiritual fathers and mothers cannot discharge the duties of their high office unless they are properly instructed and fitted for the task.

24 Be diligent in your care of the church, the cemetery and all places set aside for the service of God. Let all appointments reflect the sanctity that must characterize a consecrated environment. Everything should be neat and clean and in good order, especially the objects inside the Sanctuary. There the Great King should be served and honored with a dignity and excellence befitting His exalted position; there above all else the sacraments should be administered with the most exacting care; there the Divine Office should be recited with gravity and devotion, and every ceremony carried out with grace and dignity. The

House of God should be a place where the worshipper conducts himself with modesty, respect and appreciation~ of the Real Presence.

Be insistent in your zeal for the observance of Sunday and Holy Days. Discourage their profanation by unseemly conduct or unbecoming amusements. Above all else, fulminate against such sinful practices as drunkenness and debauchery.

25 Cherish an ardent devotion to the Blessed Virgin Mary and her holy spouse, St. Joseph, and endeavor to implant it also in the lives of those under your charge. Likewise impress upon your congregation the necessity of honoring the patron saints of the diocese and of the parish. Have a special devotion to all holy Pontiffs, Priests and Levites. Let it be felt that the observance of their feast days is actually the celebration of the feasts of our own brothers and fathers: Filii sanctorum sumus (Tob. 2, 18).

26 Have a most profound devotion to the Blessed Sacrament, for it is the unspeakable treasure of the priest, who should have in his own heart a burning zeal towards so holy a possession. It should be his one and constant desire to honor the Blessed Sacrament and to make it honored by others and to see, that the abiding place of the Lord is clean, honorable and edifying. The priest should be unfailing in his efforts to teach the faithful to act reverently in the presence of Christ in the Tabernacle; he should spare no pains to encourage them to assist frequently and devoutly at Holy Mass.

27 Never spare yourself when it is a question of establishing the reign of the Master in the Holy Family of Christ, that is, in the intimate circle of priests and clerics consecrated to His service. Let the most important duty of your life be to implant virtue, piety and sanctity in the minds and souls of the chosen ones of God.

24 - THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

28 Read carefully the thirty-fourth Chapter of the Prophet Ezechiel, the tenth Chapter of St. John's Gospel, the sixth Chapter of the Second Epistle of St. Paul to the Corinthians and his Epistles to Timothy and Titus. In these texts you shall hear the voice of God speaking to priests, outlining their duties, which are summarized in the following words which you should engrave upon your hearts: In all things show thyself an example of good words, in doctrine, in integrity, in gravity. The sound word that cannot be blamed: that he who is on the contrary part may be afraid, having no evil to say of us" (Titus, 2, 7-8). "Be thou an example of the faithful in word, in conversation, in charity, in faith, in chastity ... Attend unto reading: to exhortation and to doctrine. Neglect not the grace that is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy, with imposition of the hands of the priesthood. Meditate upon these things: be wholly in these things: that thy profiting may be manifest to all. Take heed to thyself and to doctrine: be earnest in them. For in doing this thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee" (1 Tim. 4, 12-16).

29 Weigh deeply and ponder the following words:

1. "This is the will of God, your sanctification" (1 Thess. 4, 3). "But according to him that hath called you, who is holy, be you also in all manner of conversation holy: because it is written, You shall be holy, for I am holy" (1 Pet. 1, 15-16).

2. "Did you not know, that I must be about my Father's business?" (Luke 2, 49).

3. "For all seek the things that are their own: not the things that are Jesus Christ's" (Phil. 2, 21).

4. "He is . . . the shepherd of the sheep. To him the porter openeth: and the sheep hear his voice. And he calleth his own sheep by name and leadeth them out" (John 10, 2-3).

5. "Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking care of it, not by constraint, but willingly, according to God: not for filthy lucre's sake but voluntarily" (1 Pet. 5, 2).

6. "I lay down my life for my sheep" (John 10, 15).

DUTIES OF THE PRIESTLY STATE

30 Realizing your incompetence, cultivate a true love of prayer, having recourse to it at all hours and on every occasion. Never attempt anything till you have first prayed, being mindful that only thus may you hope to draw down upon yourself divine light and grace. You should constantly implore the aid of Our Lord, the Sovereign Priest, of His Blessed Mother, and of the angels and the saints.

3 1 Keep constantly before your eyes the life of the Great High Priest and Supreme Shepherd of souls, the life of the Blessed Virgin Mary, who is the mother of all Christians, but particularly of the priests and doctors of Holy Church. Study their actions and their virtues, and the excellence of all holy persons, making them the model of your life, the rule you should follow, according to which you shall be judged hereafter.

3 2 Be assiduous in spiritual reading, setting aside at least a quarter of an hour daily for this purpose. Let your reading be done attentively and let it be unhurried.

3 3 Take the time at least once a month to read these rules, or at least a portion of them, with great attention, in the presence of God. Examine yourself to see how you have transgressed. Ask God's pardon for your faults. Make a firm resolution to be more faithful in the future. As a means of finding strength, invoke the Divine mercy and the intercession of the Blessed Virgin Mary, the angels and the saints, particularly your heavenly patron.

3 4 Finally, make an eight-day or a ten-day retreat every year in imitation of Our Saviour, who spent forty days in the desert before beginning His public life, and even during His journeys through Galilee often retired into the mountains alone to pray. Imitate also the Apostles and disciples who spent ten days in prayer shut away from the world, preparing themselves for the coming of the Holy Ghost, Who was to animate their entire being for the great work of the salvation of souls.

Let your retreat be made in a seminary or in some secluded place where your soul may be alone in its communings with its Maker. Let every moment of that precious period be given to exercises of devotion and virtue, so that the words of the Holy Spirit may be fulfilled, as spoken by St. Paul in his Epistle to Timothy: "Take heed to thyself and to doctrine" (1 Tim. 4, 16). Take heed especially "to thyself," that is, apply yourself wholly to the considerations of the obligations of your state in life. Consider your lapses, humbling yourself before God, penitently resolving to amend your life, to fortify yourself against temptations, invoking for this purpose the light and help of heaven.

CHAPTER IV

THE SPIRITUAL LIFE OF THE PRIEST (1)

I. MORNING EXERCISE

ON AWAKENING in the morning, pronounce fervently the holy names of Jesus and Mary. Make the sign of the cross with great devotion, saying the words with the intention of adoring the Most Blessed Trinity and of consecrating yourself to the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost.

Renew the profession of faith made at baptism, saying with all your heart the words, Abrenuntio tibi, Satana, including therein sin, the world and the devil; and then add, Adhaereo tibi, Christe.

If you wish to make a longer renewal of your baptismal profession of faith, you may say the following prayer:

"O Jesus, for love of Thee I renounce sin, the evil spirit, the world, myself, all my inclinations and whatever is of the old man. I give myself entirely to Thee and consecrate to Thee my heart in honor of Thy Most Sacred Heart; my body With all its members in honor of Thy Sacred Body; my soul with all its faculties; my whole life in honor of Thy life; all my thoughts, actions, works and sufferings in honor of and in thanksgiving for all Thy thoughts, words, actions, works and sufferings.

"O Jesus, take complete possession of me so that I may be entirely consecrated to Thee and may be sacrificed with Thee for the honor and glory of the Eternal Father.

"O Mother of Jesus, to thee I give myself; give me in turn to thy Divine Son.

(1) In this translation we have separated into two chapters the part dealing with the dispositions to exercise the priestly functions in a holy manner.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

"Angels of God, saints of God, I give myself to you. Give me, I beseech you, to God for ever."

On arising, recall the infinite love with which Our Lord came forth from the bosom of His Heavenly Father to enter into this valley of tears and darkness. At the moment of His Incarnation He left behind the infinite glory and happiness of heaven to embrace the cross and its humiliating sufferings. In union with that great love of Jesus, arise saying: I will rise. . . . and seek Him whom my soul loveth" (Cant. 3, 2). As you say the words, "whom my soul loveth," have the desire to pronounce them as far as possible with all the love that is offered to Jesus Christ both in heaven and on earth.

While you are dressing, recite vocal prayers, such as the hymn, Veni Creator, or one of the psalms or recall some passages of Sacred Scripture. Fill your mind with holy thoughts, for example, the consideration of the fact that God has subjected you to the necessity of being decently clothed to protect your body; recall also that there are many who are more worthy than you in His sight and who dwell in poverty. Then raise your soul to God and say:

"O my Saviour, I acknowledge that I have deserved because of my sins the frightful punishment of being hurled unclothed into hell fire. I bless Thee with all my heart for having given me these garments. I give myself to Thee in this action of dressing which I now perform, with all the sentiments that animated Thee when Thou didst clothe Thyself with our humanity. O Dear Jesus, rid me of the old man, clothe me with the new, make me live the words of St. Paul: 'Put ye on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, the bowels of mercy, benignity, humility, modesty, patience, and charity' (COL. 3, 12).

When you are fully dressed, kneel and adore the Blessed Trinity.. Offer thanks for having been preserved during the hours of sleep; consecrate the day to God's glory, saying three times: "Glory be to the Father and to the Son and to the Holy Ghost."

Adore Jesus Christ, as the God-Man, thanking Him and consecrating yourself to His glory, saying at the same time, "We adore Thee, O Christ, and we bless Thee, because by Thy holy cross Thou hast redeemed the world. Thou didst suffer for us; O Lord Jesus, have mercy on us."

THE SPIRITUAL LIFE OF THE PRIEST

Invoke the assistance of the Blessed Virgin in the recitation of the Hail Mary.

Salute your guardian angel with this prayer: "O my holy Guardian Angel, I honor thee by every means at my disposal; I thank thee for all the favors which have come to me through thy special intercession; I offer myself to thee that thou mayst offer me to God and beseech Him to keep me from sin and grant me the grace of always doing His holy will!"

Salute all the other angels and saints of heaven in this way: "All hail, ye angels and saints of the heavenly courts. Deign to intercede for our salvation and for the salvation of all mankind."

2. MEDITATION

Before offering up the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass, devote at least half an hour to meditation or mental prayer, a habit as vitally necessary to the soul of every Christian and of every priest as bread is to the body.

Acts Before Meditation

Prepare yourself for this holy exercise by the following acts:

Contemplate with the eyes of faith the infinite majesty and the immensity of God, Who is omnipresent and fills all creation, and Who is more in you than you are in yourself, according to the words of St. Augustine, Intimo meo intimior. Adore Him with profound humility. Realize how unworthy you are even to appear before Him, even to think of Him or have Him think of you or to suffer you in His presence.

Assure your Divine Creator that you are desirous of performing this act solely for His glory. Renounce yourself, your mind and your own self-esteem, giving yourself completely to Christ Our Lord. Enter into the holy dispositions which animated His continual prayer before His Heavenly Father. Unite yourself to those prayers constantly offered to God, not only by the saints in heaven, but likewise by all holy souls here below. Unite your prayers to those of the Blessed Virgin, the angels and the saints to whom you have special devotion. Beseech them to make you share in their fervor.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Give your mind and heart to the Master. Beg Him to take full possession, and guide them in prayer according to His holy will, in thought and affection pleasing to Him.

Acts After Meditation

You should conclude this exercise by thanking God for all the graces He has bestowed upon you, asking pardon for any carelessness you have manifested, imploring our Saviour to supply any defects and to offer in your place a continual prayer before His Heavenly Father.

Then make a summary of the principal thoughts and inspirations given you by God so that you may think of them during the day. In order to refresh your memory, select a text of Scripture or some aspiration to recall the subject of your meditation. Repeat this ejaculatory prayer frequently during the day.

Beware of relying only on your own thoughts and resolutions. Rely wholly upon the infinite mercy of God, placing in His hands what He has bestowed upon you in prayer, that He may grant you the grace of putting your resolutions into practice.

Beg the Blessed Virgin Mary, your guardian angel, your patron saint and all the angels and saints in heaven to continue your prayer before the Almighty.

Foresee those faults into which you usually fall and the occasions of sin which are the most dangerous for you. Be vigilant in the observance of the virtues you are especially required to practise, asking God for the grace to avoid pitfalls and to have the strength to be loyal to duty. Keep constantly before your mind the obligations of your state in life, what good you can accomplish this day, what evil you must avoid, what benefits you can reap for the honor and glory of God and the salvation of souls.

3..THE HOLY SACRIFICE OF THE MASS

Preparation

Before celebrating Holy Mass. spend some time in recollection, considering the infinite importance of what you are about to do. The Mass is certainly the loftiest, the holiest and the most divine act ever accomplished in heaven and on earth. You should then endeavor to arouse within yourself lively sentiments of devotion and preparation that you may perform this noble action in the most worthy manner possible.

Humble yourself before God, recognizing your own incompetence and unworthiness, except through His mercy and favor.

Thank Him for the infinite goodness He displays towards you in permitting you to offer the Holy Sacrifice.

Protest to Him that you seek only His glory. Purify your soul by true contrition of sin, or even, if necessary, by the reception of the Sacrament of Penance.

Surrender yourself completely to the Eternal Father, to the Son and to the Holy Ghost. Pray that they may destroy within you whatever is displeasing to them and may adorn your soul with graces and virtues necessary for the offering of Holy Mass. Give yourself entirely to Jesus that you may enter with Him into His holy dispositions and intentions as He sacrificed Himself on Calvary and again sacrifices Himself daily on the altar. Offer yourself to the Blessed Virgin Mary, to all the holy priests and all the angels and saints in heaven that they may plead with God on your behalf, and make you share in their holy dispositions as they offer Jesus in perpetual sacrifice to His Eternal Father in heaven.

Offer Holy Mass for the following five reasons: 1. In honor of all that God is in His divine essence, in His divine perfections, in the Three Eternal Persons, in His Sacred Humanity and in all the mysteries; in His Blessed Mother, in the Church Triumphant, Militant and Suffering, in the visible and invisible world. 2. In thanksgiving for all the favors heaped upon His Son, Jesus Christ, upon His holy Mother, upon His Mystical Body, which is the Church, upon all creatures, even upon the demons in hell. 3. In satisfaction and reparation for any dishonor rendered Almighty God by the sins committed by sinners of the whole world, and particularly by yourself or your friends. 4. To obtain from God all the spiritual and temporal graces necessary to all creatures, especially to the Church, to its pastors and priests, to yourself and to all those for whom you are obliged to pray.

3 2 - THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

5. For the fulfilment of all the providential designs of God for you, for the Church and for the whole world.

Thanksgiving After Mass

After Mass prostrate yourself body and soul before our Lord truly present within you, adoring, thanking, loving and revering Him, and asking His pardon for all your ingratitude and offenses.

Consider that while He is within you, He performs the same function that He exercises in heaven, namely, He adores, praises, thanks and loves His Eternal Father, and sacrifices Himself to His greater honor and glory. Surrender yourself to Christ that you may be united with Him in His adoration, His love, His praise and His sacrifice, that therein you may glorify the ever Blessed Trinity, immolating yourself with Jesus, your Head and Master.

Even as Jesus Christ gives Himself all in all, with infinite love, so in union with the same love give yourself entirely to Him, imploring Him to possess you completely and thus destroy in you anything that is displeasing to Him. Ask Him to establish the reign of His glory and of His love in your heart and in your life.

4. THE DIVINE OFFICE

Preparation

Look upon this function as one of the greatest and most important in the life of a priest. Think of it as an action truly saintly, wholly angelic, completely divine. Through it you become one with the angels, with the saints, with the Blessed Virgin, with Christ our Lord, and with the Three Divine Persons of the ever Blessed Trinity, united in continual glorification and praise of one another. Consequently, let your resolution be to perform this duty well, with all respect and external modesty, and with the most perfect interior devotion.

Humiliate yourself before God, realizing that you are unworthy to undertake so holy a function and unable of yourself alone to discharge it becomingly. Try to make an act of contrition that your soul may be purified from every stain of sin. Offer to God your tribute of praise and Prayer, mindful of the words of Sacred Scripture: "Praise is not Seemly in the mouth of a sinner" (Ecclus. 15, 9).

Unite yourself to our Lord, reciting in unison with His praises your own poor efforts, joining in all that He offers or will ever offer to His Father in heaven and on earth. Thus, you will become associated with all those saintly souls on earth as well as those of the Church Triumphant and the Church Suffering. Endeavor to unite your soul with the holy dispositions of love, humility and devotion with which they offer their prayers to God. -

Beg the Blessed Virgin Mary, the angels and saints to perform this holy action with you and to make you share in the devotion with which they pray perpetually in heaven.

Acts After the Divine Office

At the end of the divine office thank God for all the graces He has imparted to you through the recitation of the breviary. Ask His pardon for any faults you may have committed during its reading. Beg Him to atone for your transgressions in this particular matter, reciting the following prayer:

O clementissime Jesu, gratias ago tibi ex toto corde meo. Propitius esto mihi vilissimo peccatori. Ego hanc actionem offero divino Cordi tuo emendandam atque perficiendam, ad laudem et gloriam Sanctissimi Nominis tui et beatissimae Matris tuae, ad salutem animae meae totiusque Ecclesiae tuae. Amen..

5. READING OF SACRED SCRIPTURE

Following the completion of the exercises suggested above, kneel and read with great devotion and attention a chapter of the New Testament with the following dispositions:

Adore Our Lord in this manner: "O Jesus, I adore Thee as the Eternal Word of the Father and as the Source of all holy words contained in this book. I adore Thee in all Thy providential designs for Thy Church and for myself in particular in pronouncing these blessed words and in inspiring Thy sacred writers."

Thank Our Lord for having given you so precious a treasure, so, holy a relic of Himself as His Divine Word, and for all the graces and light communicated to the Church through the instrumentality of Sacred Scripture.

34 - THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Make a fervent act of humility, realizing how unworthy you are to read or even to touch the holy books, asking God's pardon for any negligence you may have shown or any improper use you may have made of them in the past. You should revere Sacred Scripture as the very heart of God containing all the secrets and the principles of the life of His children, according to St. Augustine's interpretation of Psalm 21, 15: Factum est cor meum tanquam cera liquescens in medio ventris mei.(2)

Recall the incident in the Gospel of St. Luke (4, 16) when Our Lord in the synagogue at Nazareth took up the book of the Scriptures and, opening it publicly, read therefrom. Surrexit legere. In memory of this episode of Our Saviour's life, give yourself to Him to share the admirable dispositions and intentions with which He read the Holy Book. Unite yourself also with all the great saints of the Church who read with such devotion the works of Scripture and sanctified themselves greatly by their inspired reading.

Give yourself completely to the Divine Spirit who dictated the Sacred Writings. Pray that He may engrave them on your heart, and make your soul and body living gospels and books in which is inscribed the exterior and interior life of Jesus Himself.

After your reading of Sacred Scripture, thank God for the light given us through His inspired Word. Give yourself anew to Him and beseech Him to imprint upon your heart the truths you have just read so that you may express them in your life. Memorize a few passages for meditation during the day.

6. SPIRITUAL READING

Spend some time daily in pious reading that you may be instructed in spiritual things according to the words of St. Paul: Attende lectioni (1 Tim. 4, 13). The Following of Christ and the lives of the saints, especially the lives of holy bishops and priests, are recommended.

At the beginning of the reading period, elevate your mind to God,
(2). Enarr. 11 Ps. 21.

THE SPIRITUAL LIFE OF ME PRIEST

assuring Him that you undertake this exercise solely for His glory and begging Him to grant you the light and grace necessary to do it well.

While reading, let your mind be lifted constantly on high. Make various acts of faith, hope, charity, confidence, humility and hatred of sin.

In reading the life of a saint, bless God for the glory which accrued to His divine majesty through the life and works of the particular saint in question. Rejoice with the saint for the many favors which he received from Almighty God and the happiness he now possesses in heaven. Be humbled in realizing how remote you are from the holiness the saint practised. Cultivate a great desire to imitate his virtues, Praying for his intercession on your behalf that you may obtain that grace.

At the end of the spiritual reading, thank God for the light which He just gave you, as you perused this work of devotion. Then, pray that the fruits which have come to you may be used to His greater honor and glory.

7. STUDY

Adore God as the beginning and end of all science and learning, seeking nothing more than His glory, for Sacred Scripture says: "The Lord is a God of all knowledge and to Him are thoughts prepared" (1 Kings, 2, 3).

Avoid idle curiosity, and study only the subjects that are necessary for your state in life. Banish vanity, protesting to God that you wish to study and to learn not for any vain glory, not for worldly honor or praise, but simply that you may be enabled better to edify your neighbor and to glorify God by teaching men to save their souls. "Glorify ye the Lord in instruction" (Is. 24, 15). St. Bernard speaking on this subject says: Alii sciunt ut sciant, et est curiositas: alii sciunt ul sciantur, et est vanitas: alii sciunt ut aedificent, et est charitas. (3)

Humiliate yourself, recalling that of yourself you are nothing, as St Paul says, «Not that we are sufficient to think any thing of ourselves, as of ourselves: but our sufficiency is from God». (2 Cor. 3, 5). (3). Sermo. 36 sap. Cant.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Remember that you are unworthy that God should give you any further enlightenment because you have already abused what knowledge He has imparted to you, and you have turned your back upon Him through sin to follow the prince of hell; therefore, you certainly have merited to know only eternal darkness.

Adore Christ as the Eternal Wisdom given to us by Almighty God to be our teacher and guide, our light and director. "I am the light of the world" (John 8, 12).

Give yourself to Jesus Christ to be taught by Him according to these words, "And they shall all be taught of God" (John 6, 45), or again "Blessed is the man whom thou shalt instruct, O Lord: and shalt teach him out of thy law" (PS. 93, 12). Beg Him to grant you His divine light that you may be guided and directed in your studies; that you may be participators in that divine Spirit with which He made use of the knowledge given Him by His Eternal Father. Finally, throw yourself completely at His feet and beseech Him to be your director and sanctifier in your study, and ask Him for holy dispositions which prompted the words of St. Paul, "For I judged not myself to know any thing among you, but Jesus Christ, and him crucified" (1 Cor.2,2).

Pray to God unceasingly for deliverance from the three harmful effects often produced by learning.

The first is vanity, pride and arrogance. "Knowledge puffeth up," says Sacred Scripture (1 Cor. 8, 1). Consequently, you should constantly beg of God great humility and modesty of spirit that you may always remember that it is charity, not knowledge, which renders you acceptable to your Maker. Knowledge without piety leads to hell. The serpent used knowledge to tempt man to his downfall: Eritis scientes ~Gen.3, 5). Thirst for learning was to a great extent the cause of original sin and of all the other crimes that resulted from it. The necessity of study should make you remember that you are rebellious subjects of the Omniscient Creator. If our first parents had not sinned, you would have been endowed with all necessary knowledge without work and study. Consequently, the very fact that you must study to learn should remind you that the human race is still doing penance for the sin of Adam and Eve, who were condemned to earn their bread in the sweat of their brow. The word "bread" in this condemnation applies to knowledge, the bread of the mind, as well as to the material bread, which nourishes the body.

THE SPIRITUAL LIFE OF THE PRIEST

Thus, you should undertake study with the proper realization that it is part of your penance, and sanctify it in all humility, remembering that, when you become conceited about science learned the hard way, you are ridiculous. You are little better than the branded criminal who boasts of the prison stripes he wears. Finally, do not forget that the wisest man who ever lived recognized only too well that all knowledge, all science and learning are but vanity. For the creations of man, his arts and science will pass away. "Knowledge shall be destroyed" (1 Cor. 13, 8).

The second effect customarily produced by learning is that it kills devotion. "The letter killeth" (2 Cor. 3, 6). It makes man lukewarm and lazy in spiritual exercises and in works of charity and zeal. Consequently, you should not become too deeply absorbed in study, lest it cool your ardor for the service of God. During study periods, you should frequently detach yourself from the actual task before you, and lift up your soul to God, in order to fill your mind and heart with thoughts and affections of piety and devotion.

The third effect is the danger of becoming self-opinionated, or conceited, causing a tendency to belittle others, their views or expressions of opinion. From these faults there develops contention, against which St Paul warns, «Contend not in words, for it is to no profit, but to the subverting of the hearers» (2.Tim.14). "Fulfil ye my joy, that you be of one mind, having the same charity . . . let nothing be done through contention, neither by vain glory" (Phil. 2, 2-3). These arguments often offend against charity, creating bitterness which rankles and dispels charity which is indeed the worst loss one could sustain. For St. Paul says: If I should have prophecy and should know all mysteries, and all knowledge, and if I should have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothings' (1 Cor. 13,2).

It is obvious, therefore, that you should not sacrifice the slightest degree of charity even if in doing so you should become famous for learning. Likewise, your opinions are better sacrificed, for their reten

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

tion may become the cause of wounding the feelings of others. The prime obligation of the Christian is to love his neighbor as himself, and not to seek to get the better of him, but rather to master himself and to cultivate mutual understanding.

Prayer Before Study

*Mitte, Domine, sapientiam de caelis sanctis tuis et a sedemagnitudinis tuae, ut mecum sit et mecum laboret, ut sciam quid acceptum sit apud te. Sensum autem tuum quis sciet, nisi tu dederis sapientiam et miseris Spiritum sanctum tuum de altissimis? Da mihi intellectum, et scrutabor legem tuam. Da mihi, Domine, sedium tuarum assistricem sapientiam, et noli me reprobare a pueris tuis; quoniam servus tuus sum ego, homo infirmus, et minor ad intellectum iudicii et legum. *Da mihi intellectum ... * Gloria Patri ... * Da mihi intellectum ...*

8. THE SACRAMENT OF PENANCE

Preparation for Confession

Adore Jesus Christ in His spirit of penance. He was charged with the burden of your sins, and He undertook to make satisfaction to Divine Justice. Consequently, He practised a most rigorous penance.

Surrender yourself to Him to enter into the true dispositions of penance. Beg Him to make you worthy participators in the divine light which illuminates all your faults and failings, that you, too, may see them. Beseech your loving Saviour to help you to know and share His humiliation and contrition and His intense hatred for sin. Likewise, let it be your constant aim to study His love for His Heavenly Father, a love which constrained Him to choose His Father in preference to Himself, so that, being charged with your transgressions, He might bear them Himself and satisfy the divine wrath.

Examine your conscience seriously. Judge and condemn yourself without mercy, that God may judge you with justice and mercy.

Cry out to God and beg through the merits of His wounds and sufferings, by His Precious Blood and Death, that you may understand the real spirit of penance. Likewise invoke the assistance of the Blessed Virgin Mary and the saints, that you may detach yourself from sinful habits, from the world and from yourself, and give yourself completely to Our Lord.

THE SPIRITUAL LIFE OF THE PRIEST

Make frequent acts of contrition. Formulate resolutions to avoid sin and the occasions of sin and to follow Christ in accordance with your baptismal promises.

Approach the tribunal of penance as if you were about to face judgment. Think of the priest as taking the place of Jesus Christ Himself. Confess your sins as if you were speaking to the Master in person and as if you were about to die. Receive with humility and thankfulness the instruction given by your confessor. Accept and discharge as soon as possible the penance imposed upon you, uniting it with that penance undergone by Jesus when, scourged and crowned with thorns, He died on the cross to save your soul.

Thanksgiving After Confession

After confession, thank our Saviour for the grace of pardon you have received, realizing that the smallest transgression is a greater evil than the worst temporal injury or misfortune. Remember that the pardon extended to you by God is a greater favor than if He had cured you of the most grievous physical illness. Thus, it is well after confession to say the Gloria Patri several times, in special thanksgiving to the Blessed Trinity. Also recite the Qui natus est de virgine as a gesture of gratitude towards God the Son, and an Ave to thank the Blessed Mother through whom all graces flow to us.

Say your penance with the most perfect dispositions of Christ as He completed the divine task of redemption. Offer it up in union with the penances of all holy men and women on earth.

Give yourself anew to Our Lord with a fervent desire to keep the resolutions you have taken, placing your complete confidence in the mercy and goodness of Christ Himself and begging Him to be more faithful in the future.

Recommend yourself again and again to the Blessed Virgin Mary, to the angels and saints.

40 - THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

9. EVENING EXERCISE

Adore God as the beginning and the source of every good and thank Him for all the benefits which have come to you especially today. Thank Him, too, on behalf of the countless creatures who never think of giving thanks to Him for His infinite graces.

Adore Christ as your sovereign judge, and offer yourself in submission~ to His holy will. Bless Him in that judgment which one day He will pronounce upon you. Beg Him to infuse into your heart the celestial light you need to see your sins and transgressions.

Examine your conscience carefully; endeavor to discern every thought, word or deed by which you may have displeased God, especially in matters concerning the good resolutions taken at meditation in the morning.

Ask God for a true spirit of penance, and of humility, similar to His own. Beseech Our Blessed Saviour to make you hate sin as He does, to have the courage to confess your offenses and receive absolution after having made genuine acts of contrition and amendment.

Offer to the Eternal Father the life, virtues, Passion and Death of His Only-Begotten Son, with all the merits of His Holy Mother and of the Universal Church in expiation for your offenses.

Pray to the Blessed Virgin Mary, to St. Joseph and St. Gabriel, to all the angels and saints, begging them to obtain His forgiveness for you, and the grace of true conversion.

Offer to God the night's rest you are about to take, in union with the repose of Our Lord and His Blessed Virgin during their life on earth.

Unite yourself with the praise which will be offered to the Blessed Trinity this night, on earth and in heaven, and for all eternity. Lovingly protest to the Creator that you wish every breath and every heartbeat of your sleeping hours to be so many acts of praise for His divine majesty.

Try to fall asleep with the dispositions and in the state in which you would like to be at the hour of death. Give yourself to Our Lord that you may enter into the dispositions with which He, His Blessed Mother and the saints awaited the hour of death.

THE SPIRITUAL LIFE OF THE PRIEST

Ask the blessing of Christ and of His Holy Mother. Say with great devotion: Benedictum sit Cor amantissimum et dulcissimum nomen Domini nostri Christi et gloriosissimae Virginis Mariae Matris ejus, in aeternum et ultra. Nos cum Prole pia benedicat Virgo Maria.

While undressing, pray God that He may put away from you the old man and clothe you with the new, saying the words of the Psalmist, "Deliver me, O Lord, from the evil man: rescue me from the unjust man" (Ps. 139, 2). Make use of other ejaculations or meditate upon a text of Sacred Scripture.

Before getting into bed, bless yourself with holy water; make the sign of the cross with it upon your bed and renew your baptismal promise. Abrenuntio tibi, Satana. Adhaereo tibi, Christe.

Before falling asleep, listen to the voice of the Holy Ghost which says, "In all thy works remember thy last end, and thou shalt never sin" (Ecclus. 7, 40).

Repeat Christ's last words, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit" (Luke 23, 46). Try to say these blessed words as if they were your last. Give yourself to the Lord wholly that you may enter into the dispositions with which He and all the saints used these very words.

Try to fall asleep with these thoughts in your mind, and with the sweet names of Jesus and Mary upon your lips.

If you awake during the night, make use of some ejaculatory prayer such as, "Enlighten my eyes that I never sleep in death: lest at any time my enemy say: I have prevailed against him" (PS. 12, 4-5). Or say these words, "For though I should walk in the midst of the shadow of death, I will fear no evils, for thou art with me" (PS. 22, 4).

Bless and thank God for watching over you while you sleep. "Behold he shall neither slumber nor sleep, that keepeth Israel" (PS. 120, 4). I will fix my eyes upon thee" (PS. 31, 8).

Realize, too, that, while you have been resting so peacefully, there are many poor souls in misery; there are countless others in agony, in prison, in peril upon land and sea. Recommend all these persons to the mercy of God.

Think also of those countless souls which suffer torments in purgatory. Go down in spirit into hell where countless souls suffer eternal torments. Humiliate yourself with the thought that by your sins you, too, have merited to be their companion, and that only the goodness of God has saved you from this fate.

42-

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Adore the Trinity, with the angels and saints and all the heavenly court. Say the Gloria Patri. Beg Mary's intercession. Recite an Ave Maria. Repeat Avete omnes angeli et omnes sancti et sanctae Dei: benedicti sitis in aeternum et intercedere dignemini pro nostra omniumque salute. Ask Jesus and Mary to bless you with the words: Nos cum Prole pia benedicat Vi~go Maria.

CHAPTER V

THE APOSTOLIC LIFE OF THE PRIEST

1. GENERAL DISPOSITIONS FOR THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE SACRAMENTS

CULTIVATE a high esteem and respect for all the sacraments, looking upon them as the most efficacious means of God's infinite power, wisdom and goodness. Realize that the Heavenly Father employs them continually to give birth to Christ in the souls of His people. Realize also that through the sacraments He sanctifies the holy and restores to life the sinner whose soul is dead. Thus, St. Peter, the Prince of the Apostles, says: "Sanctify the Lord Christ in your hearts" (1 Peter 3, 15). Moreover, the Saviour uses the sacraments to multiply the numbers of His subjects on earth, to extend His Kingdom and consummate His love in each individual soul.

Think of the sacraments as the fountains of the Saviour in whose waters Christians find grace and strength to attain eternal salvation.

Know that the sacraments are the divine instruments of the Holy Spirit through which are applied to souls the fruits of the Life and Death of Jesus, supplying what is needed to complete the Passion of Our Lord, namely its application to those for whom it was offered.

Treat the sacraments as treasures of God's house which contains infinite riches hidden from the wise and prudent of this world, but manifested to the lowly and humble. Revere them as sacred vessels in which the Church preserves the Precious Blood, the Holy Spirit and the divine grace of her Spouse for the nourishment and sanctification of her children.

Seek to instil in the hearts and minds of Christians these sentiments of esteem and reverence for the sacraments.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Treat them with the utmost veneration, keeping particularly neat and clean all things used for their administration. When a sacrament is given, show the utmost respect, gravity, modesty and devotion.

Instruct the faithful fully regarding the sacraments. Point out that their origin depends on the goodness and mercy of God, and that their merits come from the Passion and Death of our Saviour. Explain their significance and their effects. Let it be understood that through the sacraments are accomplished the sanctification of the Church, the destruction of sin and the establishment of the reign of God on earth.

Impress upon your congregation that the sacraments are so noble and so lofty in themselves, that they should be shown the utmost reverence. Consequently, they should be received only with complete purity of body and soul. From them should be drawn fruits for spiritual advancement. All things that might profane them should be avoided. Worldliness and dangerous amusements should, therefore, be eradicated from one's life, particularly at the time of the reception of the Sacrament of Marriage. Certainly there are many who, entering into that holy state and receiving that sacrament, act as if they wished to disavow their baptismal promises and to contract marriage like pagans rather than Christians. Priests, therefore, must be on guard to preserve the sanctity of so great a sacrament as Matrimony: Sacramentum magnum in Christo et in Ecclesia (Eph. 5, 32).

Besides these general dispositions, teach your parishioners the meaning, the effects and the dispositions for each individual sacrament. Above all else, be sure that they understand Baptism and its obligations. Unfortunately in our day, many Catholics have forgotten the meaning of the solemn promises made at the time of the reception of that first and all-important sacrament.

When you are about to administer Baptism or any other sacrament, adore Our Lord Jesus Christ as the author who Instituted that particular sacrament. Thank Him for all the glory He has brought to His Eternal Father and for all the blessings granted to the Church through the sacrament. Ask Him to forgive all the sins committed against Him through its unworthy reception. Prostrate yourself humbly before God, realizing that being a sinner you are unworthy to administer this sacrament.

THE APOSTOLIC LIFE OF THE PRIEST

Give yourself wholly to our Lord to formulate within yourself the holy dispositions with which He was filled as He instituted the sacrament you are about to administer, so that you may capture the spirit of worthiness He would have you bring to the treatment of His sacraments and all holy things. Unite yourself also to the whole heavenly company of those saints who, like yourself, were entrusted with the administration of Christ's sacraments.

Offer to Our Lord, to His Blessed Mother, to the guardian angels and patron saints, the souls of those to whom you are about to give the sacraments, praying that they may receive them worthily and be preserved in grace through their merit.

After you have administered the sacrament, thank God for His goodness in permitting you to be His minister and pray that the recipients may persevere in His divine grace.

2. GENERAL DISPOSITION. FOR THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE SACRAMENT OF PENANCE

Consider the grandeur and the importance of the action you are about to perform. You are to take the place of Christ, representing Him, acting in His name, clothed with His authority, continuing His office as Saviour, exercising His power as judge, pronouncing judgments in His sacred name. Hence, the Holy Spirit cries: "Take heed what you do: for you exercise not the judgment of men, but of the Lord: and whatsoever you judge, it shall redound to you" (2 Par. 19, 6). Moreover, by this action you blot out sin, spread the grace of God and pour it into the hearts of the faithful. You apply to them the merits of the Precious Blood of Jesus Christ. This function is, therefore, so great and holy that it must be exercised with the utmost care.

Adore all the divine plans of Our Lord embodied in this holy sacrament and thank Him for the mercy He displays through it. Humiliate yourself at the remembrance of your unworthiness and the realization that you cannot perform so holy a function unless you are aided by God's grace and help. Purify your mind, your heart and your soul, protesting that you desire only the glory of God and the salvation of souls.

Give yourself completely to Christ as Supreme judge and Saviour

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

that you may enter fully into the holy dispositions with which He Himself exercises these sacred offices, praying for the light and graces necessary to discharge your responsibilities according to His holy will.

Invoke upon yourself and upon the souls to whom you will administer the sacrament the powerful assistance of the Blessed Virgin Mary and all the saints, especially the patron saint of the church in which you are receiving your penitents.

3. THE PRIEST IN THE CONFESSIONAL

Try to observe the spirit of piety and concentration of mind upon God and His works. Lift up your heart to Him especially as you begin to hear each individual confession, meditating on various pious thoughts connected with the liturgical season or feast day to be observed.

For example, the first confession you hear on entering the confessional should be sanctified by elevating your heart to the Eternal Father, offering Him what you are about to do in union with the great love which prompted Him to give His Only-Begotten Son to all mankind, but especially to the person whose confession you are about to hear. In union with that great love, you shall give your heart, your soul and your mind, as well as your time, to the soul before you, to cooperate in his salvation by every means at your disposal.

As you hear the second confession, give yourself to the Son of God to share the holy dispositions of love and charity which prompted him to shed His Precious Blood for the soul of the penitent entering the confessional. In union with our Saviour's love, you shall not spare yourself in giving your penitent whatever instructions you can to save his soul.

The third confession will impel you to give yourself to the infinite love of the Holy Ghost for all souls, but particularly for that of your penitent.

At the fourth, offer yourself to the Heavenly Father in honor of the Incarnation of His Divine Son and in union with the infinite love whereby God effected this mystery for souls. The realization of His great love will serve as an impelling motive to help you to accept with patience and meekness whatever crosses you may have to bear, what ever pains and hardships you may endure in your work of saving souls, and particularly this soul now before you.

At the fifth, let your soul be filled with the memory of Our Lord's Birth, His Circumcision, His Presentation in the Temple and the other mysteries of His life on earth.

Offer yourself likewise to the Blessed Virgin and pray thus:

"O my God, I offer Thee this confession I am about to hear in honor of and in union with the great charity the Blessed Virgin Mary cherishes for the soul before me. O Mother of Fair Love, make me share in thy charity. Virgin most merciful, show thy great mercy towards this sinner and to thy humble servant."

It is useful to have a crucifix in the confessional to show the hardened sinner when occasion demands. It is an invaluable help in leading the sinner to understand Christ's unbounded love for every soul, and likewise it serves as a most potent means of reminding yourself of the zeal you should have for souls.

Besides the above mentioned dispositions, the confessor should have three other qualities on entering the tribunal of penance:

1. He should be clothed with mercy and compassion that like his Divine Master he may have pity on those who come to him.

2. Cognizant of his own nothingness and sinfulness, he should humble himself profoundly with the realization of the fact that but for God's grace he, too, would be guilty of all the sins that are committed throughout the world. So, he should see in the penitent at his feet an image and reflection of himself as he would surely be if it were not for Christ's infinite mercy. The priest, like every man, has within himself the roots of sin and is saved from falling only because God became man for us and saved us by His grace. Therefore, he should say with St. Augustine: Domine, videam te in omnibus bonis, videam me in omnibus malis.

3. The priest should be adorned with justice that he may render to God His just due and to the penitent that which is appropriate, He should be fortified with zeal, inflamed with hatred against sin and fired with the determination to help the penitent to use the means to avoid sin.

On leaving the confessional; thank God for the favor of having heard the confessions you have listened to, and for the graces imparted to yourself and to your penitents.

Ask Our Lord's pardon on behalf of yourself and your penitents for the sins committed by each in the past, begging Him to act as mediator in satisfying the divine anger.

Offer to God all the souls that have had recourse to you in the sacred tribunal, beseeching the Master to turn their hearts and minds from sinful ways to the knowledge of Himself and the love of His holy grace so that they may seek to die rather than offend Him.

Offer them to the Blessed Virgin Mary, St. Joseph, St. Gabriel and all the saints, especially the guardian angels and patron saints of the penitents.

Do not be satisfied merely to pray for these souls at this time, but all through life cultivate a special place in your heart for your penitents, remembering them constantly at the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass.

4. ADMINISTERING THE BLESSED EUCHARIST

In addition to the general dispositions pertaining to the administration of all the sacraments, the Holy Ghost will inspire you with particular devotion and lofty sentiments concerning the Blessed Eucharist.

Enumerated here are certain dispositions suggested as being efficacious in your distribution of the Bread of Life to God's chosen ones.

To the first person you should give Holy Communion in honor of and in union with the infinite love of the Eternal Father in giving us His Divine Son.

The second communicant will personify the immense love of God the Son giving Himself to us as our spiritual food and drink.

The third communicant will represent the incomprehensible love of the Holy Spirit, forming the Flesh of the Son of Man within the womb of Mary Immaculate that we might be nourished thereby.

The fourth will symbolize the unutterable love which prompted the divine humanity of the Son of God to give Himself to us from the first moment of the Incarnation, continuing to give Himself daily to us in this Sacrament.

The fifth will recall the ardent love with which the Blessed Virgin Mary gave us Jesus, her beloved Son, at the moment of His birth, and still gives Him to us in Holy Communion.

To the sixth communicant, you shall give Christ's Body and Blood in union with the great devotion, the purity and the sanctity with which the holy Apostles Peter and Paul, John, James and the others administered this Holy Sacrament.

As the seventh communicant receives Our Lord from your hands, you shall unite your soul with the blessed dispositions of all the saintly pontiffs, priests and deacons of Holy Church who, like yourself, administered this Sacrament during their lifetime.

Finally, you should unite yourself to the love of the Eternal Father, of the Son and of the Holy Ghost.

You may also follow another method in administering the Blessed Eucharist. In giving the Precious Body and Blood to the first communicant at the altar railing, you may offer to Jesus the infinite love of the Eternal Father in satisfaction for the sins committed by the person before you, for any defects in his reception of the Blessed Eucharist, and for a more perfect preparation for the coming of Christ into his heart may be more perfect.

In giving Holy Communion to the second communicant, you may offer God His infinite love for His own All-perfect Self.

As you approach the third recipient, you may offer up to Jesus the all-consuming love of the Holy Ghost.

The fourth person will be a signal to offer Christ the love and holy dispositions with which the Blessed Mother received Him at the moment of the Incarnation and many times after His Ascension.

St. Joseph, St. Gabriel, St. Michael, the Seraphim and the Cherubim and all the orders of angels in heaven will join you as you offer their love when the fifth soul receives the Body and Blood of the Saviour.

The Patriarchs, the holy Prophets, St. John the Baptist, and all the saints of the Old Testament will walk beside you and offer their love to Jesus as you continue your priestly ministration at the holy table.

Then you shall offer up the devotion and holy dispositions with which Our Lord was received in Holy Communion by the Apostles, by the Martyrs, by saintly pontiffs and priests, confessors and virgins, as well as by the holy souls now in heaven, who received with so much love and piety when they were on earth.

5. VISITING THE SICK

Offer this priestly function to our Lord Jesus Christ, in honor of and in union with His abiding love for His children. Give yourself to Him that you may enter into that sublime spirit of love wherewith He bore in His Sacred Heart all our infirmities, our maladies and our afflictions. "He took our infirmities and bore our diseases," says St. Matthew (8, 17). Join yourself in spirit to the sentiments which filled the Heart of Christ as He visited the sick and the infirm. Join also with the saints in doing this act with the same holy dispositions and intentions with which they did this same act.

Greet the sick with charity, remembering that they are members of the Body of Christ and your brothers. Show them compassion and sympathy. Speak to them with discretion, cordiality and gentleness.

Try to make them understand the two causes of all mankind's afflictions.

The first is the Providence of God and His holy will, disposing and ordaining all things, for the best, if we will but accept them in the proper spirit, which we can do with the assistance of His holy grace.

The second cause of suffering is sin. In this regard, three things should be done in time of sickness. 1. We should humble ourselves in the presence of the offenses by which we have merited hell and the tribulations of this life. 2. We should give ourselves with confidence to the will of God. 3. We should suffer with patience for the love of our Saviour, who endured all for us, and offer ourselves and our sufferings in union with Him.

Having gently reminded the sufferer of these truths, teach him to put them into practice, thus:

"Try, my child, to follow my advice. Do you not wish really to humble yourself before your Maker? Do you not realize that even though you had never committed a single sin, God could send you sufferings and ills just the Same and you would have absolutely no cause to complain?

THE APOSTOLIC LIFE OF THE PRIEST

"Will you try to adore His divine will for sending this sickness and give yourself completely to Him, even blessing and thanking Him for this affliction?

"Surely, you are willing to suffer for Him, who suffered so much for you? Will you not try to offer to Him the pains you are undergoing in return for all the torments He endured for you, so that He may reward you in heaven?

"Will you not offer to the Blessed Virgin Mary all your sufferings, asking her to offer them in turn to her Son, supplying any defects, substituting them for the duties you would be performing if you had your health and strength? Will you not likewise lay your heart and will before her?

"Will you not offer yourself to your Guardian Angel, and to all the angels and saints for this same purpose?"

Endeavor to incite in the soul of the sick man the proper dispositions for the Sacrament of Penance, and, if necessary, recall to his mind the conditions necessary for a proper reception of this sacrament. Help him to make a worthy preparation, if necessary, questioning him regarding his past confessions, his relations with his neighbors; whether or not he has always been careful to make restitution, and if he be found wanting in these respects, urge upon him their necessity. Make careful inquiries regarding the occasions of sin with which he may have to contend, suggesting means of avoiding them. If he has fallen into the sad plight of living in continual mortal sin, seek to point out to him the hideousness of his state and encourage him to make a firm purpose of amendment, suggesting means to assist him.

Help him in his preparation for Holy Communion. After he has received the Body and Blood of Christ, encourage him to try in the future always to render to God a full meed of willing service. In this respect, recall to his mind that as a creature he is obliged to give to God complete adoration, praise, thanksgiving, love and penance. Likewise, he must stand ready to sacrifice himself, his life, his will and inclinations and everything the world offers for the glory of the Creator.

Teach the sick person, if necessary, how to elevate his soul to God,

5 2 - THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

to His Divine Son, to His Blessed Mother and to the saints through acts of faith, hope and charity, patience, humility and submission. Also instil in his heart a lively sense of contrition.

Open to his soul the significance of devout aspirations and recommend their frequent use. Suggest the following as most helpful:

"O my God, to Thee I give my heart and my soul."

"May Thy holy will be done."

"O Heavenly Father, not my will but Thine be done."

"O my God, I realize that by my sins I have deserved thousands of chastisements. Here cut, here burn, but spare me in eternity."

"O Jesus, I give myself gladly to Thee, and sacrifice my all for Thy sake."

"O Jesus, draw me to Thyself in Thy divine sacrifice that I may offer all with Thee for the glory of Thy Father."

"O Jesus, I wish to suffer for love of Thee, everything Thou mayest ask and in the degree that Thou mayest require of me."

"O good Jesus, I give myself to Thee that I may enter into those holy dispositions that marked Thy great suffering."

"O Jesus, be Thou my Saviour."

"O Jesus, be my strength and my patience."

"O my Saviour, render to the Eternal Father on my behalf a full measure of all that is required of me. I give Thee my will in all its entirety for this intention."

"O dear Jesus, I offer Thee all my sufferings which are so insignificant when compared to Thine. Unite them with the truly intense sufferings Thou didst endure for me. Bless and sanctify them; offer them with Thine own to the Heavenly Father."

"O Mother of God, be my mother, unworthy though I am. Unite my sufferings with thine. Offer them to thy Beloved Son. In my name do for me what I am unable to do; sanctify for me this sickness which I am undergoing."

"O my angel guardian, O St. Joseph, O all ye angels and saints, pray for me, help me, love and praise God for me, and in my stead offer up all that I owe to God."

When the sick person's illness is accompanied by great suffering and pain, suggest different episodes in Our Lord's Sacred Passion, that these may be honored at different times, in the following manner: "My child, try to consecrate this day or night, this morning or afternoon, this very hour to Our Lord in honor of the first mystery of the Passion, His Agony in the Garden. With the eyes of faith endeavor to know the depth of the sufferings He endured for you at that awful time. Thus, you will find strength to suffer with Him. Thus, too, you will be able to consecrate the day or night, the morning or evening, in honor of those sufferings He knew as Judas betrayed Him.

"Unite your own misery to that which He experienced as He was led as a criminal before Annas, Caiaphas, Pilate and Herod, or was subjected to unspeakable ignominies during His Sacred Passion. In this manner, hour by hour, day by day, from place to place, from mystery to mystery, from suffering to suffering, uniting your comparatively small pains with His overwhelming burden, forgetting your own in thinking of His, thanking Him for the privilege of sharing His agony, you will know perfect imitation of and conformity to His Divine Passion.'.

Urge the sick person to adopt the suggestions outlined above, not all at once, of course, but by degrees, using great discretion and care not to tire the patient, letting the tone of your voice reflect your sincere desire to assist him in bearing the sufferings of life.

Intersperse your recommendations with prayer, kneeling at his bedside, reciting with the family or friends who may be present such prayers as the Litany of the Passion, of the Holy Name, or of the Blessed Virgin Mary. The "Hail, Holy Queen" or a decade of the beads may also be said with much profit.

Enjoin upon the patient obedience to the doctor's orders and conformity with the instructions of the nurses, offering up this tribute in honor of the obedience of the Master, and accepting medicine or treatments in the spirit of humble surrender with which Jesus Christ drank the gall on Calvary.

6. ASSISTING THE DYING

Try to induce the dying person to give himself entirely to God, abandoning himself completely to His holy will. With great patience and gentleness prepare him to be ready to offer his life willingly to our

54 - THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Lord who sacrificed for us His whole life, one moment of which is worth infinitely more than the lives of all men and angels.

Tactfully direct his thoughts to the realization of the fact that this life is transitory and a vale of tears, and that real happiness will be found only in heaven. There all our pains will be turned into joy, all our troubles will disappear and we shall know at last that this world is but a prison and place of banishment whence we escape through the portals, opened by death. Point out again and again that heaven is our true home. There reside our Father and Mother, Jesus and Mary; there are our brothers and sisters, the angels and saints; there await us the blessed company of the elect.

Let the patient be filled with the understanding of the fact that by our sins we have deserved to die a thousand deaths, and, in consequence, he should be reconciled to accept whatever death Christ may send, wherever and whenever it may come.

Even if Eve had never lost our original innocence and we were not children of Adam, we would still be the property of God our Sovereign Lord, who could do with us what He would. Thus, we should understand the meaning of complete submission to Him in all things, and the offering of our life to Him.

Even though we were not subject to death at all, nevertheless, in imitation of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Eternal Life, who willingly suffered death for us, and His Blessed Mother, the Mother of life, who likewise died, we should willingly accept death as a tribute of our devotion and love to them.

When the sick man's mind has become reconciled to the will of God concerning death, suggest to him the duties of a Catholic about to close his eyes on this world and face God. These duties are: 1. To thank the Blessed Trinity with Christ and the Church for all the favors received from their infinite goodness. 2. To ask pardon for all the sins committed during life and to offer one's death in union with that of Christ. 3. To adore, praise, glorify and love God, admitting that we are in this world only for that purpose, and that we should terminate our life in the fulfilment of the end for which we were created. 4. To beseech Jesus Christ to accomplish these things in our name, and likewise ask the intercession of the Blessed Virgin Mary, St. Joseph and all the saints. 5. To adore, honor and praise our Saviour, asking His pardon and forgiveness, praying to the Blessed Mother and all the angels and saints also to offer in our place our tribute and praise.

Outline to the sick man the duties of a Catholic towards the Blessed Virgin Mary, St. Joseph, his Guardian Angel and all the angels of heaven, and the saints of the celestial court, especially those he should honor particularly, exhorting him to thank them, ask their pardon, offer them the loving Heart of Jesus in satisfaction, and invoke their prayers and assistance especially at the hour of death.

Recall the Catholic's duties towards his fellow man. He should ask pardon of those whom he has offended or disedified, and forgive those who have offended him, saying with Our Blessed Lord: "Father, forgive them" (Luke 23, 34). If the sick person be a father or mother, a master or mistress, or a superior of a religious community, let him enjoin upon his subjects or children a wholesome fear of God and give them his blessing. Rather, let him ask God to bless them for it is not the place of a sinner to bless, but to pray God to bestow His benediction.

Remind the sick person to dispose of his worldly goods in a spirit of Christian charity, not forgetting the poor, the Church and spiritual works. Especially, counsel him to make his will with all the necessary legal formalities so that his children and heirs may be spared the bitterness of litigation.

Dispose him to receive Holy Viaticum, forming his intention in union with that of the Blessed Virgin and the saints communicating for the last time.

Try to have him gain what indulgences he can, especially those applicable at the hour of death. To assist him in doing so, excite in him a great desire in this respect. Urge him to affirm that he desires only the glory of God; help him to acquire a true spirit of penitence, making acts of contrition and determination of amendment, after he has gone to confession. Place on his person blessed and indulgenced medals. Have him repeat again and again, Jesus, Mary, Jesus, Mary, always remembering that he should have the intention of pronouncing these holy names in union with the pure love which is and will always be evoked in heaven at the mere mention of these gracious names.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Early in his sickness dispose him to receive Extreme Unction, with the intention for which Christ instituted that sacrament, namely, to efface sin and destroy its effects, and to perfect in the Christian soul God's love and grace. Let him dwell upon the fact that this last of the sacraments is meant to strengthen the soul against the final onslaughts of the devil, and to help him to die a truly Christian death. Likewise, remind him that Extreme Unction can restore health if it be God's holy will to do so.

Help the patient achieve the proper dispositions for the reception of this Extreme Unction, of which the first is really to desire that the designs of Christ in its institution may be fulfilled. The second is to adore Him who instituted this consoling sacrament, thanking Him for all the glory our loving Saviour has rendered His Eternal Father, and all the graces communicated through its instrumentality to the souls of the faithful.

The third disposition is humbly to confess one's sins again. The fourth is to offer to God the Father all the honor His Son has brought Him through this efficacious means, in atonement for the dishonor heaped upon Him by its improper use by sinners. The fifth disposition is for the sick soul to unite himself to all the holy dispositions of the saints when they received Extreme Unction. The sixth is to give himself to Christ that He may prepare the soul to receive the sacrament worthily. The seventh is to pray to the Blessed Mother, the angels and saints to supply any defects within him and to take his place in the presence of God, interceding for him that he may receive all necessary graces and dispositions.

Help the sick person to renew his baptismal promises. For this purpose: 1. Encourage him to thank God for having been privileged to receive Baptism. 2. Urge him to ask God's pardon for any misuse of baptismal grace, offering in satisfaction the life and death of His Divine Son, with all the merits of Mary our Mother and of the saints. 3. Say with him these words, I renounce thee, O Satan; I renounce all your works and pomps; to Thee I cling, O Jesus, my Lord, my God, my King. I wish for Thee and nothing more. Be thou King of my heart now and forevermore."

7. CONSOLING THE AFFLICTED

Remember always that the Son of God has said that whatever is done to the least of His little ones is done to Him. Be assured that consolation offered to those who are afflicted is given likewise to Our Lord and His Blessed Mother for whosoever consoles the Son certainly consoles the Mother. Consequently, when God gives you the opportunity to assuage the misery of some troubled soul, He surely bestows a very special grace. Your approach to this duty therefore, should be serious, mindful that you should do unto others as you would have them do to you.

Thus, you should cast the eye of your faith upon that great love with which our Saviour came into this world to console the afflicted, remembering the inspired words: "He hath sent me ... to comfort all those that mourn" (Isa. 61, 1-2). Regard your neighbor who is in trouble as a child of God and as your brother, extending to him that charity which consumed the Merciful Heart of Jesus. Approaching him with great kindness and understanding, talk to him with compassion. Then endeavor to impress upon his mind the seven following truths, which are truths of faith founded upon divine infallibility. ,

1. Providence guides and governs the world. "But thy providence, O Father, governeth it" (Wisd. 14, 3). Nothing on earth happens by chance but by the divine will or by God's permission. Whether He permits or wills a thing to happen to us, it is always for our good, if we on our part make use of it. Consequently, we should accept whatever comes to us as having been sent by the hand of God and emanating from the loving Heart of our Creator.

2. God is our true Father, loving us far beyond the degree of our love for ourselves. He is a Father having only thoughts of love and peace, not of affliction and harshness. I know the thoughts that I think towards you, saith the Lord, thoughts of peace, and not of affliction, to give you an end and patience (Jer. 29, 11). He loves us with such devotion and takes such infinite care of us that He has assured us that even the hairs of our head are numbered. If then He has such regard for the simplest details of life, what must be

His devotion in the important matters, such as our reputation, our health or life? He is in deed a Father who is so powerful and wise and good that He knows how to take care of those who love and serve Him. We must always live in the fear of God, fulfilling the words of Sacred Scripture, "No evils shall happen to him that feareth the Lord" (Ecclus. 33, 1). "To them that love God, all things work together unto good" (Rom. 8, 28).

3. God bestows a signal grace upon us when, instead of treating us with the severity of an exacting judge, He accords us the kindness of a merciful father, punishing us not by the harshness due to an enemy, but with the paternal chastisement suitable to children. He often makes us suffer temporal punishment in expiation for our sins, thus ensuring for us the eternal rewards we have merited in heaven. The sufferings He sends us in this world should be looked upon as being permitted here below so that we may not have to undergo torments in purgatory, where their severity would be multiplied a thousand fold. Consequently, we have every reason to thank God for adversity as the least of the punishments He could visit upon us, as the most merciful means He could employ to chastise us for sins. We should be like the prisoner at the bar who thanks his judge for a commuted sentence.

4. One of the greatest favors Our Lord can grant us is to send an affliction which enables us to share His cross. Thus, we learn to drink His chalice of bitterness; we come to know the meaning of the cross which He chose as His instrument for the destruction of sin, the source of every evil. Through affliction He brings us closer to His Sorrowful Mother. Those who are dear to God have known the most suffering. "All that have pleased God, passed through many tribulations" (Judith 8, 23). "Because thou wast acceptable to God," said the Archangel Raphael to Tobias, "it was necessary that temptation should prove thee" (Tob. 12, 13).

5. Sacred Scripture proclaims the cross as the glory, the treasure, the supreme good of the Christian on earth. "But God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of Our Lord Jesus Christ," cries St. Paul (Gal. 6, 14). And again in his Epistle to the Romans he says, "We glory also in tribulations" (Rom. 5, 3). St. James reminds us to "count it all joy, when you shall fall into divers temptations" (James 1, 2).

Truly, it may be said that, when a great affliction comes upon us, we actually receive a treasure of priceless value. If we bear the cross pa tiently, it will pay unlimited dividends. The greatest consolations in this world, even the spiritual and divine consolations, are merely little flowers which bloom and die. A great affliction is like a golden treasure, solid and enduring. It may be compared even to a precious stone of inestimable value, or to a fertile field which, being carefully cultivated, will enrich its possessor with an infinity of spiritual and heavenly returns.

THE APOSTOLIC LIFE OF THE PRIEST

6. Nothing purifies the soul like suffering. Nothing embellishes it more, nothing renders it so pleasing to God. True Christian nobility which makes us like unto our Crucified King, is acquired only through suffering and affliction.

7. Finally, we must turn afflictions to holy advantage. First of all, he who bears them in a true Christian spirit renders supreme homage to God because the Son of Man, who came on earth to honor His Father and repay the ravages of sin, chose the cross and suffering as the most efficacious means at His disposal. Secondly, he acquires treasures of grace on earth and glory for eternity. On the other hand, the Christian who does not accept afflictions willingly deprives God of the glory He otherwise would have received, and inflicts on himself such a loss that if he could estimate its worth, he would be inconsolable.

Having outlined these principles to the person whom you wish to comfort, you must teach him how to derive real profit from adversity and recommend the following practices:

1. He should make an act of faith in all these truths because no true Christian can doubt them.

2. He should make his peace with God by a good confession. Remind him that a person who suffers while in the state of mortal sin loses all the merit he would otherwise gain. He becomes like the impenitent thief; he is miserable in the sight of God and man alike. He is miserable in this world and will be infinitely more miserable in the next, if he does not repent.

3. He must humiliate himself before God because of his sins, the cause of all his sufferings, realizing that he is worthy of hell and the eternal wrath of his Maker. He must strive to realize also that, even if God should send him the most awful afflictions and if all the forces of earth should rise up to crush him, he could not rightly complain, because a single mortal sin merits the most dreadful punishment, the everlasting torments of hell, one moment of which surpasses the most ghastly torture life can inflict. Consequently, the sufferer on earth should accept gladly whatever affliction comes to him in requital for his offenses; he should remember the words of Sacred Scripture, "Thou art just, O Lord: and thy judgment is right" (Ps. 118, 137). "For we have sinned, and committed iniquity, departing from thee . . . and we have not hearkened to thy commandments . . . Everything that thou hast done to us, thou hast done in true judgment (Daniel 3, 29-31). Humility inclines the heart of God towards His erring creatures. "Be you humbled therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in the time of visitation" (1 Pet. 5, 6).

4. The afflicted person should adore the holy will of God, making an act of submission, resignation and self-annihilation in all things, seeking only that the Kingdom of God be established in his own and in all hearts. Make him repeat the words of Christ in Gethsemani: "Not my will, but thine be done" (Luke 22, 42). Recall also St. Gertrude's prayer: "O Lord, I beg Thee and desire with all my heart that Thy adorable will be done in me and in all creatures."

5. Let him bless and thank God in affliction. "I will bless the Lord at all times" (Ps. 33, 2). Certainly, this should apply in time of suffering more than at any other time for it has been truly said that affliction is a proof of God's goodness. Should not he who owes a great debt and is forgiven by his creditor, make some gesture of his gratitude? How much does the sinner owe, who is indebted for the remission of eternal punishment and who is made to undergo temporal sufferings instead of these torments of hell which he has so justly deserved!

6. He ought to adore our crucified Lord covered with wounds from head to foot, called so aptly by the Prophet Isaiah, "A man of sorrows" (Isa. 53, 3). He ought to surrender himself to the boundless love that nailed his Redeemer to the cross, and in union with it accept with perfect love and resignation every cross sent to him.

7. If Divine Providence should employ certain individuals to become the cause of suffering, the person who is harassed or hurt should not seek vengeance nor let his heart be filled with bitterness towards them. He should rather exert towards them great charity and forgiveness, in imitation of the Master who said, "Father, forgive them" (Luke 23, 34).

8. If suffering be caused by the tragic illness or death of someone dear and cherished, the person thus afflicted should remember that Christ gave His own life for us, a life so precious that one moment of it was worth more than an infinite number of lives of men and angels. Consequently, in the hour of sorrow, let each one give himself to Jesus in union with the incomprehensible sacrifice made on Calvary, offering to Our Lord the life of our friends and even our own, in satisfaction for his offenses and in return for Our Lord's offering of His own life for us.

9. Though it is permitted and expected that a person should use every legitimate means to recover and restore his health, he must never make the mistake of placing all his faith in human expedients. Rather let him have supreme confidence in God and in prayer. As evidence of Our Lord's pleasure in the trust we show in Him, the sick person ought to ponder these words spoken to St. Gertrude by the Saviour: "When a soul torn by pain or affliction places himself firmly under my protection, that soul so touches my Heart, that to it the words of Sacred Scripture are applied: 'One is my dove, my perfect one is but one. ... the chosen of her that bore her' (Cant. 6, 8). It so transfixes my Heart that, if I were to know I could not succor the soul in its misery, my own Heart would suffer (were that possible), and its sufferings would be so great that not even the infinite delights of heaven could assuage its misery. The glance of my dove which transfixes my Heart like an arrow of love is the firm and unshakable confidence that I can and will assist it in all things. And so strong is that confidence in its impelling force that I could not disregard it" (Legatus Divinae Pietatis lib. 3. C. 7).

10. The afflicted person ought to picture the innumerable army of the saints and martyrs in heaven, who while they were on earth knew so many sufferings. He must remember that they, too, were once human beings like himself, beset with all human weaknesses. He should find encouragement in their example, and beg them to make him participate in their patience and their love for God.

11. He ought to think of all the thousands of people on earth who suffer in every conceivable way without the consolations he has or the spiritual helps and graces. This thought should urge him to bless God and to bear patiently the trials of life.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

12. He must have recourse to the Mother of God, the true consolation of the afflicted, whose heart is filled with compassionate mercy especially for those who suffer. "O clement, O loving, O sweet Virgin Mother," cries the Church. Never has the Blessed Virgin Mary been found wanting by those who have confidence in her. Her Divine Son gave her power in heaven and on earth over His creatures. She was given to us as our refuge, our help and our consolation in all our necessities.

In the recommendation of these acts of virtue remember three things:

1. Do not suggest their use all at once, but encourage the sick person to employ these spiritual helps on different occasions.

2. You should assist the patient to put them into practice, especially if he is unable to do so himself. Make the following suggestion: "Tell Almighty God that you renounce your own will and wholly accept His."

3. Kneel and pray with the patient from time to time. The prayers, "We fly to thy patronage," "Remember, O most Blessed Virgin" and others to Our Lady will be very helpful and consoling.

8. PREACHING AND CATECHIZING

Before undertaking the duty of preaching and catechizing, adore God as He is manifested in the mystery, the saint or the virtue which is to be the topic of the sermon or instruction. Thus, if you are to speak on a mystery of Our Lord's or Our Lady's life, or if you are to preach about a saint, you should adore God in the mystery or in the saint. When preaching on a virtue, you should adore Our Lord Jesus Christ in His perfect observance and practice of it while He walked on earth with men. When speaking against any vice, you should adore God in His great hatred for that particular sin.

Realizing your nothingness, prostrate yourself before God, begging His forgiveness for any negligence which may have crept into your preaching or catechizing.

THE APOSTOLIC LIFE OF THE PRIEST

Renounce all vanity or pride, making a renewed protestation of your undivided desire to please God alone.

Adore Jesus Christ as the light of the world, the sovereign Preacher, and beseech Him to infuse into your heart His inspiration, that your preaching may in some small measure reflect His divine teaching.

Pray to the Blessed Virgin Mary, to your Guardian Angel and the Saints, particularly those whose lives mirror the virtues you are explaining. Beg the holy preachers who are now in heaven to assist you in the worthy preparation of your subject matter.

Let no unsuitable or unbecoming topics enter into your sermons or instructions. "My speech and my preaching was not in the persuasive words of human wisdom, but in showing of the Spirit and power?" (1 Cor. 2, 4). Confine yourself to the necessary truths of the Gospel, the examples of Sacred Scripture and the works of the Fathers of the Church. Let it never be said of you that you preach your own thoughts, but rather the word of God.

When you have studied your subject and prepared your instruction thoroughly, thank God and place your knowledge in the Sacred Heart of Jesus and of His Blessed Mother.

Pattern yourself on the great Preacher Himself of whom it was written that He was "mighty in work and word before God and all the people" (Luke 24, 19), and that He "began to do and to teach" (Act. 1, 1). Implement the words of St. Paul: "Carefully study to present thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly handling the word of truth" (2 Tim. 2, 15). Endeavour to realize in yourself the words of Sacred Scripture, "As from God, before God, in Christ we speak" (2 Cor. 2, 17), that is, endeavor to draw your thoughts from God and to make Him your only desire and end, preaching in His name and solely for His honor and glory.

Before delivering a sermon or teaching a class in Christian doctrine, kneel down and pray humbly to Him in whose name you are about to speak.

Adore Christ the great Preacher and Teacher in the holy dispositions which He brought to this noble function. Try to cultivate similar dispositions, asking Him to make you participators with Him in this divine work, avoiding any suggestion of vanity.

64-

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Humble yourself at the Master's feet, protesting your unworthiness, begging Him to take up His abode within you, so that He will speak through your lips and mouth, since He alone is worthy of so lofty a task.

Give yourself to the Eternal Father, pleading with him to eradicate in you anything which is not of Himself, and to establish Christ within your heart.

Invoke the Holy Ghost, praying Him to take full possession of you, with His guidance and direction, that He may open wide the hearts of those to whom you are going to preach.

Offer yourself to the Blessed Virgin Mary, to your Angel Guardian and all the angels, as well as to the patron saints and protectors of those you are to address. Beseech them to obtain from God the grace required for your task, that it may be Christ Himself who will speak through you. Let it be your fervent prayer that He may open and dispose the hearts and minds of your hearers to a worthy reception of the divine Word.

After the sermon or catechetical instruction, thank Our Lord for the glory He has rendered the Eternal Father; for all the effects He has produced and the grace He has given mankind through His own preaching as well as by the mouths of His prophets, teachers and doctors through whom He truly spoke. Thank Him especially for the grace He has brought you through your own preaching and catechizing.

Ask pardon for the faults you may have committed while discharging this duty. Invoke the help of the Blessed Virgin Mary, the angels and saints, for this same purpose.

Do not make your sermon the topic of conversation after it has been delivered, lest in seeking to hear complimentary remarks, vanity may rob you of whatever merit you have gained. Fear, too, that, after you have taught and instructed others, it might well be said of you, "Lest perhaps, when I have preached to others, I myself should become a castaway" (1 Cor. 9, 27). Remember the rebuke of St. Paul to the Jews of his day: "Thou therefore that teachest another, teachest not thyself (Rom. 2, 21).

CHAPTER VI

THE ANNUAL RETREAT

NOTHING is more useful or necessary to a Christian, and especially to a priest, than the annual retreat. It represents the most powerful and efficacious means for the purification and sanctification of the soul. So, too, it is of paramount importance for our advancement in grace and our preparation for a happy death.

For your annual retreat to be well made, five things are required: 1. Purity of intention; 2. Dispositions; 3. Proper disposal of time; 4. Subjects of meditation; 5. Retreat books.

I. PURITY OF INTENTION

You should make the retreat for three principal reasons:

1. To please God and in memory of the sublime seclusion and retreats Our Blessed Lord observed, as well as those of His Holy Mother who was always united with Him. He observed a long retreat in the stable at Bethlehem, in Egypt and later at Nazareth. For forty days He lived in the silence of the desert; and now He hides Himself in the bosom of the Eternal Father as well as in the Blessed Sacrament. You should choose one of these periods of Christ's retreats to honor Him during your own annual retreat.

2. Offer the retreat as an atonement for the innumerable sins and offenses committed in the past.

3. Make it with the intention of disposing yourself for the worthy reception of new light and graces for the future.

2. DISPOSITIONS

To make your retreat with required dispositions, you should make seven preliminary acts.

First, humble yourself because of your great unworthiness. Secondly, enter into the spirit of true solitude, with utter renunciation of all worldly ties. Relinquish your study or any other kind of work. Do not leave the place of retreat unless it be absolutely necessary. Keep rigid silence except during recreation periods. Give yourself wholeheartedly to Our Blessed Lord with those sentiments which animated His own Sacred Heart, and the hearts of Mary and Joseph and of all the saints who practised mortification in solitude.

Thirdly, be faithful to every exercise of the retreat. Fourthly, make use of each moment of your time as if this retreat were to be your last and were given to you as a final opportunity of making reparation for all your unworthiness and sins. In every act of your retreat, or at least in the principal acts, have this thought in mind, "I wish to perform this particular act so well, with God's grace, that I may fully atone for my past sins, and I desire to perform it in the same manner that I would if this were my last day on earth, and if I knew this would be the last opportunity I should ever have of performing it."

Fifthly, follow the guidance of the retreat master and be docile to his injunctions. Sixthly, make a complete renunciation of your own desires, will and self-love, abandoning yourself entirely to the will of God. Let Him guide and direct you during the days you will spend in this holy duty. Seek no human consolation. Trust alone in God.

Seventhly, invoke the assistance of the Blessed Virgin Mary together with the prayers of St. Joseph, St. Gabriel, your Guardian Angel and all the angels and saints of heaven. On the day before you go to make your retreat, spend at least an hour in prayer, preferably in the presence of the Blessed Sacrament.

3. PROPER DISPOSAL OF TIME

A. Morning

Arise promptly at the sound of the bell, pronouncing the blessed names of Jesus and Mary. Make the sign of the cross and renew your baptismal promises in these words, Abrenuntio tibi Satana; adhaereo tibi, Domine Jesu. Then, say with great devotion: I will rise, and ... I will seek him whom my soul loveth" (Cant. 3, 2).

While dressing, recite some vocal prayers or recall passages from Sacred Scripture or from the previous day's spiritual reading or concentrate on the meditation which you are about to make.

Then, kneeling beside your bed, honor and salute the Blessed Trinity by reciting the Gloria Patri. Adore Christ Our Lord, saying, Adoramus te, Christe, et benedicimus. . tibi, quia per sanctam crucem tuam redemisti mundum. Qui passus es pro nobis, Domine Jesu, miserere nobis. Recite the Ave Maria to salute the Blessed Virgin Mary. Invoke your Guardian Angel saying, Ave, Sancte Angele, qui custos es mei: benedictus sis in aeternum, et intercedere digneris pro mea omniumque salute.

Address all the angels and saints in heaven thus: Avete, omnes Angeli, et omnes Sancti et Sanctae Dei: benedicti sitis in aeternum, et intercedere dignemini pro nostra omniumque salute. Ask Jesus and Mary to give you their blessing: Benedictum sit Cor amantissimum et dulcissimum nomen Domini nostri Jesu Christi, et gloriosissimae Virginis Matris ejus, in aeternum et ultra. Nos cum Prole pia benedicat Virgo Maria. Amen. At the Angelus bell, recite the words of that beautiful prayer; then, begin the meditation period.

If the retreat is to be made in common, the schedule will be followed as set forth by the director. But, if the exercise is to be private, it might be well at this point to recite the Little Hours. Then you may say Mass if it is convenient at this time. After Mass, a period of profound thanksgiving is a prime requisite.

After breakfast you should spend a half hour reading the New Testament. The rest of the morning should be devoted to the exercises as prescribed for a retreat in common, or if it be in private the beads and litany should be recited, followed by a period of spiritual reading and a thorough examination of conscience.

B. Afternoon

After noonday meal, some time will be assigned for recreation in which all the retreatants will participate. During the remainder of the afternoon, there will be various exercises, lectures, spiritual reading, visits to the Blessed Sacrament, recitation of the Divine Office and the rosary, until dinner or supper time.

C. Evening

The evening meal will be followed by recreation in silence, preparation of the points for next day's meditation and a sermon. The day will be brought to a close by night prayers and the reading of the points of meditation.

Sometime during the retreat, the retreatant will prepare his soul carefully and devoutly for the most important exercise of the retreat, namely, Confession.

4. SUBJECTS OF MEDITATION

Ordinarily these will be outlined by the Retreat Master.(1) They should be adopted wholeheartedly, with the fullest spirit of cooperation and with the help of God's grace and guidance. Before meditation, the Veni Sancte Spiritus should be said.

5. RETREAT Books

The only books you need for the retreat are the Bible, the Breviary, the Following of Christ, and the Lives of the Saints. There are, however, numerous excellent spiritual writings which might be read most profitably at your own discretion or upon the advice of the Retreat Master.

(1). See Part VI, for a series of excellent retreat meditations.

THE ANNUAL RETREAT

When it is a question of reading the Scripture, the parts which might be chosen with most profit are the Four Gospels, especially chapters five, six and seven of St. Matthew, and chapters eleven to seventeen of St. John. Then the Epistles of St. Paul and the other apostles may also be read with great benefit.

Part 11*THE APOSTOLIC PREACHER( 1 )*Part II*THE APOSTOLIC PREACHER'*CHAPTER I*EXCELLENCE AND IMPORTANCE OF
THE OFFICE OF PREACHING

THE PREACHER should keep constantly before him the realization of the importance and sublimity of his noble work, not as a matter of conceit or complacency, but rather as a humbling reminder of his unworthiness and incompetence. Consequently, it should be his constant aim to neglect nothing which can be of assistance in qualifying himself for his task.

Before undertaking to preach, the preacher should always remember the truly great excellence of his work, as well as its lofty origin and divine purpose.

He should never forget that his office is higher than that of the Prophets of the Old Law, for the teachers of the Old Testament taught only the letter and not the spirit, while the exponent of the Gospel of Christ breathes the very spirit of God if his hearers will open their minds and their hearts. "Who also hath made us fit ministers of the new testament, not in the letter, but in the spirit. For the letter killeth, but the spirit quickeneth" (2 Cor. 3, 6). The Apostle St. Paul also refers to the ministry of preaching as ministratio spiritus (Ibid. 3, 8). In the Acts of the Apostles, we read that "while Peter was yet speaking (1). Two chapters in the original French edition have been omitted in the English version and short chapters dealing with similar material have been combined into one chapter.

74 - THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them that heard the word" (Acts 10, 44).

The work of preaching is a labor shared with the great saints of the New Law, namely the apostles and disciples of Our Lord Jesus Christ.

The preacher should bear in mind that the office of preaching is so lofty in character and so pleasing to God that Our Blessed Lord promised that He would reward and love those who received His ministers, as though they had received Him personally. "He that receiveth you, receiveth me: and he that receiveth me, receiveth him that sent me" (Matt. 10, 40). On the other hand, on judgment Day God will condemn and punish those who refused to give ear to the exponents of His doctrine, in a manner more terrible than that experienced by the inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrha: "It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrha in the day of judgment" (Ibid. 15).

By preaching and exhortation were idolatry and the tyranny of Satan destroyed. Through this instrumentality, the Church was established in spite of the powers of hell.

Preaching is giving God's children the bread of life to nourish them in this vale of tears and to perfect in them the divine life they received at baptism. "Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life" (John 6, 69).

Preachers of the Gospel of Christ are incarnate angels of the Lord, messengers of heaven, seraphim of the Church, heralds of the Blessed Trinity. Consequently, the priest always begins his discourse with the words: In the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. Amen."

Priests are the veritable mouthpieces of the Eternal Father, the ambassadors of the Son of God. "For Christ therefore we are ambassadors, God as it were exhorting by us" (2Cor. 5, 20). They are active cooperators with God in the salvation of souls.

As precursors of the Lord, they exercise an office similar to that of St. John the Baptist, preparing the ways of the Lord. They are spiritual parents of Christ, forming Him in the lives and souls of their flock. They are saviours of the world. "And saviours shall come up into mount Sion," says Sacred Scripture (Abdias 21).

The mouth of the preacher is the mouth of Jesus Christ who came on earth to speak to men, to instruct and guide them. Through His ministers He wishes to continue till the end of time the divine work He founded. "Christ speaketh in me", (2 Cor. 13, 3). The tongue of the preacher is the instrument and the voice of the Holy Ghost used to announce to mankind the eternal verities spoken by the tongue of Christ Himself.

THE OFFICE OF PREACHING

Preaching is truly making God speak, who having of old spoken by His prophets, and in the New Law through His Divine Son, now wishes to speak to His children through the living members of that same Son.

Preaching had its origin in the bosom of God Himself, from which emanated the Word Divine, Christ, the First Preacher. Thence flowed, too, all those eternal truths still proclaimed on earth.

The end and purpose of this heavenly office is to form Christ in the hearts of the faithful that He may reign there; to dispel the darkness of hell and illumine the light of heaven in men's souls; to destroy sin and open the floodgates of grace; to destroy the tyranny of Satan on earth and reestablish the Kingdom of God. Preaching aims to reconcile men with their Maker, transforming them into His children, deifying them as it were, according to the words of Sacred Scripture: "He called them gods, to whom the word of God was spoken" (John 10, 35). In a word, it means perfecting here below that great work Christ came to effect for He says to all preachers, "As the Father hath sent me, I also send you" (John 20, 21).

So noble and great is this holy duty that it should be carried out with the greatest exactitude, inspired by the holiest of dispositions and intentions. Preachers should unite themselves to the prophets, the apostles and all the saints in heaven in order to learn to imitate them and practise their virtues.

Likewise, as God's heralds and ambassadors, preachers should be clothed with His qualities, possessed with a burning love, fired with the all-consuming zeal of the Holy Spirit. The lips of the preacher, being consecrated to the Gospel, should never utter anything save the words of God. If any man speak, let him speak, as the words of God" (1 Peter 4, 11).

Preaching emanated from the bosom of God and through it He speaks to mankind. Its only purpose is to establish His reign in men's hearts, and to lift them to the very throne of the Father that they may abide eternally with Him. Preachers, therefore, should always speak in a manner worthy of God's infinite majesty, making Him truly speak through them. They should study and practise what St. Paul says, "As from God, before God, in Christ we speak." Sicut ex Deo, coram Deo et in Christo loquimur (2 Cor. 2, 17).

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Sicut ex Deo means that the preacher should not depend upon his own thoughts or ideas, but his matter should be founded on Scripture, theology, prayer and the reading of devotional works. Coram Deo means that the preacher should have no other aim, no other thought or object in mind than God, His glory and the salvation of souls. For these things represent the sole purpose for which Christ established His Church and the office of preaching.

In Christo loquimur means that he should make a complete renunciation of self and become one with Christ absorbing those dispositions and intentions which animated the Saviour when He preached here on earth.

Finally, be assured that to undertake and carry out the office of preaching, according to the directions outlined, is more praiseworthy in God's sight than the most profound contemplation. Nothing pleases Him more than the salvation of souls, which is accomplished more efficiently by preaching than by contemplation. St. Bernard expresses this thought very strikingly in a beautiful metaphor: Noli nimis insistere osculo contemplationis, quia meliora sunt ubera praedicationis. (2)

CHAPTER 2

INTERIOR DISPOSITIONS FOR PREACHING

WHOSOEVER would preach the word of God in an apostolic spirit should endeavor to acquire the interior dispositions that filled the Divine Preacher and the apostles when they preached the Gospel to the world.

He should so live that he would rather die a thousand deaths than ever be guilty of a deliberate sin, no matter what its nature. Moreover, before daring to speak in the name of the Saviour, he should purify himself from every blemish either by going to confession or by making an act of contrition. He should dwell in constant fear that the words of the Psalmist might be applied to him: "To the sinner God hath said: Why dost thou declare my justices, and take my covenant in thy mouth? Seeing thou hast hated discipline; and hast cast my words behind thee" (PS. 49, 16-17).

Banish every shadow of self-love, pride, ambition or vanity. Have no other thought than to please God and to save souls. Satan was damned because he envied God's glory<sup>(1)</sup> and sought to become like unto Him. "How many great preachers have been lost eternally," exclaims St. Francis Xavier, "because they were consumed with vanity and self-esteem." (2)

(1). "Beware of vanity, you who go to preach missions or speak in public . . . Seek only the glory of God, for which end alone you should strive to work and labor. Yes, let His glory and the salvation of souls be your only aim. Otherwise, you will be preaching yourselves, not Jesus Christ. And what can be said of one who preaches solely that he may be applauded, praised and acclaimed? What is he doing but committing a sacrilege? Yes, a sacrilege. To use the word of God and divine things to enhance his own reputation and acquire honor for himself, is surely a sacrilege. O God, grant that no member of this little company may fall into such a terrible sin. Believe me, we shall never be able to do the work of God unless we have profound humility and learn to despise ourselves." Saint Vincent de Paul, quoted by the Abbé Maynard in Vie de Saint Vincent de Paul, VOL. 2, P. 393.

(2). Epist., lib. 4, cp. 16.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Avoid negligence and the seeking of easy ways, instead of embracing wholeheartedly the hard work entailed in preaching. Study with care and diligence. Prepare your sermon or instruction well in advance. Never go into the pulpit without being thoroughly familiar with the subject for otherwise you are merely tempting God.

Do not rest your entire dependence upon your own feeble efforts. Rather depend on grace and the bounty of Our Lord Jesus Christ. Before beginning even to outline a sermon, kneel down and beg God's help. Seek light and strength before the Blessed Sacrament, adoring there the incomprehensible love which prompted God to send His Only-begotten Son into the world to instruct and teach mankind. Adore the infinite goodness and the charity which moved the Holy Ghost to speak through Jesus, His apostles and saints.

Thank the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost for all these favors, and ask pardon for any misuse made of your talents, ability or opportunities. Be humbled before the divine majesty of God and mindful of your own insignificance.

Renounce self-love and self-esteem. Avoid vanity and pride under any guise. Surrender yourself to the love of the Father, the wisdom of the Son and the charity of the Holy Ghost. Beg them to put in your mind inspiring thoughts so that your sermon may produce abundant fruit in the soul of your listeners.

Adore Christ as the beginning and end of all everlasting verities. Unite your intentions to those which animated the God-man, thanking His bounty for all His manifestations of truth to mankind, and for the great privilege of being associated with Him in the holy work of preaching. Beg divine forgiveness for being unworthy of the great trust bestowed upon you.

Cultivate humility, learning to plumb the depth of your own nothingness, realizing that the preacher speaks only through the goodness of our Saviour, in His name and for His cause. Affirm vigorously that even if you did possess the ability of making the most eloquent human orations, you, nevertheless, would refrain from this display of learning and would choose to proclaim instead the undying truths of the Gospel.

Salute Mary Immaculate, Mother of the Eternal Light and Truth. Thank her and offer her your will, praying in return only for the great privilege of being able to continue doing the evangelical work of her Divine Son with merit and fruit. Salute your Angel Guardian and all the saints and protectors of the diocese and the parish where you are to preach. Invoke their prayers and assistance.

While studying, frequently elevate your heart to God. Before going into the pulpit, recall briefly the foregoing injunctions and then consider the importance of the action you are about to perform. Unite yourself with the holy dispositions which filled the mind and heart of Jesus as He preached to His disciples. Make an act of utter renunciation of self. Ask Our Lord to remove from your heart all that is not of Him, so that He alone will speak through your mouth since it is He alone who should speak the words of salvation. Tell Him that you are willing to accept any humiliation, nervousness or confusion which you may suffer while you are preaching. Offer to the Father your memory; to the Son your understanding; to the Holy Ghost your will.

Offer to God the hearts of your hearers, praying earnestly that they may be well disposed. Offer them to the Blessed Virgin Mary, the angels and the saints. Then, kneel humbly and say: Veni, Domine Jesu, veni, veni. "Come, Lord Jesus, come into my heart. Annihilate my own being that Thou alone mayest preach Thy divine word. Come into the hearts of all here present and dispose them to receive and practise whatsoever Thou dost desire them to do."

Standing before the congregation, raise your eyes to heaven and ask God to help you to seek His glory alone and to implore the saints to pray for you before the heavenly throne.

Make the Sign of the Cross with great devotion. Let its meaning penetrate the heart, mindful of St. Paul's words: "God ... hath spoken to us by his son" (Heb. 1; 1-2). Try to enter into the sentiments of love which prompted the Eternal Father to give us His Blessed Son. Pray to the Holy Spirit, that His zeal and piety may abound in you as it did in the holy apostles and doctors of the Church.

During the sermon proper, a great spirit of recollection and piety should be maintained. Remember that, in speaking to sinners, you really speak to men like yourself encompassed with every temptation and sin. Do not show impatience at interruptions caused by the congregation. Never display displeasure. Do not scold harshly or rant. Use kindly words. Speak modestly, not boastfully. Let authority and humility be intermingled.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

After the sermon, thank the Blessed Trinity, Our Lord and His holy Mother, the angels and saints, saying: Gloria Patri, Gloria tibi Domine, Ave Maria, Avete omnes Angeli et omnes Sancti et Sanctae Dei, benedicti sitis in aeternum, et intercedere dignemini pro nostra omniumque salute.

Likewise, ask pardon for any shortcomings and close your heart and ears against vanity or flattery. If your sermon has not measured up to standard or has been somewhat of a disappointment, offer this trial in a spirit of real faith.

Do not tolerate praise. When well-wishers congratulate or compliment you, humble yourself inwardly and direct to God all honor and glory: Soli Deo honor et gloria (1, Tim. 1, 17). Remember, too, that people who praise you to your face may despise you in their hearts, and that while you may enjoy the approval of a few, perhaps the great majority are indifferent to you, if not actually hostile. Yet, though you are openly acclaimed by all, you should still shun as poison the praises of men for flattery and adulation can kill Christ in your heart: "Woe to you when men shall bless you: for according to these things did their fathers to the false prophets" (Luke 6, 26).

When you are corrected, accept these admonitions in a spirit of humility and submission.

Learn to practise the sublime truths that you preach and apply them to yourself in actuality, lest it be said of you: "Thou therefore that teachest another, teachest not thyself" (Rom. 2, 21). Remember that the truths that you have expounded will be so many verdicts and condemnations against you at the hour of death unless you have tried to live up to them.

You must be mindful of these things, and in so doing you will be strengthened and fortified with a most potent weapon to protect you against conceit and false estimation of self. St. Prosper says: Bene loqui et male vivere, quid aliud est nisi se sua voce damnare? (3) (3). Praelat. in Job. cap. 7.

CHAPTER III

EDIFICATION AND EXAMPLE TO BE GIVEN BY PREACHERS

PREACHING the Gospel is simply a continuation of the divine mission of Christ. Preachers, therefore, should imitate the great Master whom they represent. "Jesus began to do and to teach" (Acts 1, 1). "He was mighty in work and word before God and all the people" (Luke 24, 19).

Consequently, preachers should be living examples of devotion and virtue, especially humility, obedience and charity. Likewise, they should avoid as a plague anything that savors of vanity and ambition, and they should never show any signs of seeking the pulpits of large churches. They should be willing to go to the poorest parishes and the smallest, as well as to the wealthiest and most isolated churches in order to walk in the footsteps of the Divine Master who said: "He hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor" (Luke 4, 18), and one of the proofs of the divinity of His mission was: "The poor have the gospel preached to them" (Matt. 11, 5).

Preachers, should always be careful not to put themselves forward, but should rather give place to other preachers, speaking of these latter always with esteem and affection. Each one should excuse and defend his confreres charitably whenever they are unjustly blamed, and guard at all times against jealousy. Nor should they excuse themselves from preaching when the congregation is very small, remembering always that even one soul created to the image and likeness of God and redeemed by Christ's Precious Blood is well worth the labor and effort of all the theologians, the preachers and even of all men and angels. Indeed, the salvation of a soul is of infinite value, as Christ Himself demonstrated when He took special care to instruct the poor Samaritan woman at the well, thus proving that He would gladly have come into the world if there had been only one soul to instruct and save.

Likewise, if your audience is not so attentive as it should be, you must not show displeasure, which would be a proof of vanity.

Nothing should be said in a sermon simply for effect or self-glorification, to show one's erudition or wisdom, nor should any personal touch be permitted to enter into the theme. The words of the Apostle St. Paul should be kept always in mind: "We preach not ourselves, but Jesus Christ our Lord" (2 Cor. 4, 5).

Make your life conform to your preaching, and let your actions speak as loudly as your words, so that like St. John the Baptist you may be lucerna ardens et lucens, "a burning and a shining light" (John 5, 35), burning before God, shining before men; burning in prayer, shining in action; burning from Within, shining from without; burning in words, shining in deeds.

Be particularly devoted to the virtues of temperance, frugality and abstinence. Give a true example of abstemiousness when visiting in another parish, so that this spirit of mortification may be a silent lesson to those about you. In visiting, too, you should be careful to give every evidence of sobriety.

Avoid familiarity with seculars, especially women, lest suspicions be engendered in the minds of others. Ut non vituperetur ministerium nostrum (2 Cor. 6, 3).

Your whole deportment should place you beyond the faintest or least suspicion of avarice or greed and show clearly your detachment from temporal things and your devotion only to the eternal. Consequently, you should ask no recompense for your services, but you should receive thankfully whatever the charity of the people will offer out of the goodness of their hearts.

Never discuss the faults and shortcomings of other priests or religious. Show a great respect for parish priests and never undertake any activity without their sanction. Incite the faithful to love and respect them.

Try to be kind and accessible to all. Be ever ready to do good to every person without exception, in imitation of the charity of the Master,

EDIFICATION AND EXAMPLE

"who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed by the devil" (Acts 10, 38). Be especially kind to the poor, pressed them rather than the rich, in their homes, in prison and in hospitals. Have a tender solicitude for the afflicted, consoling them and urging them to turn their sufferings to spiritual advantage.

Endeavor to reunite families and members of broken homes, being always careful not to take sides, showing to both factions that your only interest is the promotion of God's glory and the salvation of souls.

Let your conversation be modest, gentle and edifying, taking advantage of every opportunity to speak of things eternal. Bear the good odor of Christ everywhere, but especially in consecrated places where your Christian conduct should be an inspiration. This will apply especially to the church, where by silence and piety you will show the faithful the great respect due to the house of God.

Finally, you should be in imitation to St. John the Baptist, vox clamantis (Matt. 3, 3), that is, you should act and live in such manner that everything about you will be a continual proof that you are a man of God. Let the world see in your actions, your walk, your person, your gestures, your attire, your daily habits, the reflection of your interior life, which will prove beyond doubt that you are a priest, not only at the altar and in the pulpit, but in every place and in every thing you do and think and say. Thus, you will always preach piety, modesty, humility, simplicity and all the other virtues.

CHAPTER IV (*)

BOOKS FOR SERMON MATERIAL

THE FIRST and most important book for preachers is Sacred Scripture, especially the New Testament. In the Old Testament, the Book of Wisdom, of Job, and of the Prophets are especially recommended.

Some time should be devoted each day to the reading of Sacred Scripture and it is suggested that this be done kneeling, in imitation of St. Charles Borromeo. Parts of Scripture should be memorized, certainly the most impressive passages. Spiritual commentators, too, should be read with care, especially Cornelius a Lapide and Barradas.(1)

Next in importance after Holy Scripture come the writings of the Fathers of the Church, foremost among them St. Augustine, St. John Chrysostom, St. Gregory the Great and St. Bernard. The Summa Theologica of St. Thomas Aquinas is, of course, an indispensable reference book for any preacher of Catholic doctrine. '

There are also the works of Louis of Granada, a Spanish Dominican, renowned for his virtue and erudition. St. Charles Borromeo made extensive use of the writings of this learned man, using them as his sole manual of theology. Certainly Granada's Guide of Sinners should be studied and read with special care.

There are also Father Saint jure's Knowledge and Love of Our Lord Jesus Christ, William Peraldus's De Vitiis et Virtutibus(2) and the Catechism of St. Peter Canisius.

(*). This chapter has been considerably curtailed by the omission of several works no longer available and by the elimination of long footnotes included in the original French edition, Oeuvres Complètes, VOL. IV, P. 29 ff.

BOOKS FOR SERMON MATERIAL

The Lives of the Saints must be the handbooks of any preacher who wants to perform his duty with success and devotion. Other good books in the preacher's mother tongue must be read attentively and studied in order to perfect his style and to acquire clarity and fluency of speech.

Frivolous and worldly books should not be used nor should the mind of the priest be sullied with the contents of such useless works. Such volumes are often part of Satan's library, completely opposed to the maxims of the Gospel.

CHAPTER V

SERMON TOPICS

PREACHERS should remember that it is their duty to preach the word of God. They would be criminally guilty if they should distribute ordinary bread instead of the Sacred Host; so also they cannot be excused if their sermons are merely worldly dissertations instead of well digested discourses on the eternal verities.

Consequently, preachers must be on guard lest they preach their own thoughts rather than those of Sacred Scripture and tradition, lest they expound a human doctrine rather than the deep truths of Christ, so amply explored in the writings of the Fathers of the Church.

Likewise, preachers, especially the young and inexperienced, should beware of falling into the error of thinking that they must seek unusual topics, use new unconventional expressions and propound extraordinary ideas. By so doing, they make a great mistake because the common subjects are always the most useful and most appealing, not only because they convince listeners, but because God imparts a blessing and a particular efficacy to the words of those who preach the Catholic doctrine with simplicity and humility.

Subtle questions, which are better suited to gratify curiosity than to edify and touch hearts, should be omitted. The preacher should confine himself to a simple and lucid exposition of the Gospel and reject anything superfluous, useless or of little merit so that he will speak only thoughts that will help men to know and honor God and spur them on to work out their eternal salvation.

The principal sermon topics are the following:

SERMON TOPICS

The Epistles and Gospels read at Holy Mass, or any part of Sacred Scripture.

The perfections, mysteries, works and gifts of God.

The Ten Commandments of God and the Six Commandments of the Church.

The Life, Excellence and Mysteries of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

The Holy Sacrifice of the Mass, the Sacraments, Ceremonies and Liturgy of the Church.

The life and virtues of the Saints.

Sin and the particular vices.

Evil customs which are the causes of numberless sins, such as bad books, pictures, dancing, plays, fashions and harmful games.

Christian virtues, such as faith, hope, charity, humility and patience.

Good works, such as prayer, fasting, almsgiving, the corporal and the spiritual works of mercy.

The duties and obligations of one's state in life, whether one be rich or poor, a workman or an employer, a father or mother, married or single, master or servant.

The four last ends of man and purgatory.

These and similar topics are always most suitable for the preacher who is eager to preach the word of God with success.

In all his sermons and instructions the preacher should endeavor to make Almighty God better known in His mysteries, His works and His benefits. He must also strive to make divine goodness better loved and appreciated by the faithful. Likewise, he should exhort them to greater love for their Creator, make them sorry for sin and determined to amend their lives. He should urge them to fear God's justice and His punishment, to hope in His promises, to have confidence in His goodness, His grace and His help. So he should encourage his hearers to offer to God their entire being and their all. He should strive constantly to make the Saviour better known and loved by all men, inducing them to follow Him as true disciples of the great Leader. Into their hearts, too, he should infuse a profound and tender love and respect for the ever Blessed Mother.

88 - THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

The preacher should also make his people understand that they, as well as priests and religious, are called upon to live holily and follow in the footsteps of the saints. For this purpose, he should be assiduous in his efforts to make them love the Church and everything associated with it. This means that they should be taught reverence and veneration for consecrated places such as churches, chapels and cemeteries. Likewise, they should insist upon the sanctification of Sundays and holy days of obligation.

The importance of Baptism and its obligations should be impressed upon the faithful. The dignity and sanctity of Confirmation and the other sacraments should be thoroughly explained, their origin and purpose, their institution and the proper dispositions with which they should be received. Likewise, their efficacy should be made clear and their frequent reception urged, especially the Sacraments of Penance and of Holy Eucharist.

Marriage, being one of the most important events in the life of most Christians, should be held up to highest esteem and its sacramental character made thoroughly clear. Its far-reaching effects in time and eternity should be the topic of many sermons by the preacher who is devoted to his task.

Young people considering wedlock should be reminded of their duties, particularly that of consulting their parents. They should be encouraged to pray to Our Lord, to His Blessed Mother and to St. Joseph to guide them in the choice of a suitable partner, who will be a help and not a hindrance in the performance of their Christian and Catholic duties. Their preparation for this Sacrament of Matrimony should be such as to guarantee the graces and blessings of God. Like the young Tobias, they should resort to prayer and be firm in continence, and on their wedding day stand, in God's presence, purified by Confession and Holy Communion.

Enjoin upon parishioners and all Catholics a wholesome respect for Holy Matrimony and especially seek to banish from marriage celebrations any unseemly and unbecoming conduct. Fulminate against the pagan customs which sometimes accompany these wedding feasts, when sinful excesses of eating and drinking are committed and sinful dancing indulged. Also, urge parents to prevent as far as possible prolonged courtships which often lead to evil.

Let married persons learn that wedlock does not permit them to use the holy state as a cloak for sinful practices and immoral license. Let them remember, too, that their duties as parents are most serious; that their obligation of bringing up their children and educating them is binding before God.

Teach them to offer their children to Our Lord at the hour of birth, and to have them baptized as early as possible. Then, when the children come to the age of reason, the parents should instruct them faithfully in their Christian duties, watching over them at all times, helping them to decide their state in life when the moment comes for that important decision.

Preachers should point out the hideousness of sin in general and of particular vices, causing evil to be shunned and detested. They should urge the faithful to cultivate a great respect and love for our Holy Father, the Pope, the Bishops of the Church and for all priests. Likewise, too, preachers should remind Catholics of their duties towards the civil law and their obligations to obey its mandates. Those who are in high places of authority should be exhorted to remember the sacred trust they hold. They should be encouraged to govern with justice and wisdom, treating those under their jurisdiction with kindness and consideration. Their example should be a shining light for their subordinates.

The rich should be reminded that the things on earth are merely passing; therefore, they should not attach too much importance to them, seeking rather to lay up treasures for eternity. The poor should be helped to bear their lot with Submission, remembering that theirs was the lot of Jesus, of His Blessed Mother and of the great majority of the saints. The Master who possessed all riches became poor for us.

Teach masters and servants, employers and employees to have mutual respect, using every means at their disposal for the betterment of their spiritual condition. Guide mothers and fathers in their imitation of the Eternal Father, the perfect example of love, kindness, patience and zeal. Give the child Jesus as a model to the children, pointing out His loving obedience and devotion to Mary and Joseph.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Finally, there are four topics which can never be preached too often:

1. Veneration of holy places and of holy days of obligation.
2. Frequent use of the Sacraments of Penance and the Holy Eucharist.
3. Charity towards God and one's fellow men and reconciliation with one's enemies.
4. Restitution.

CHAPTER VI

FURTHER SUGGESTIONS ON SERMON TOPICS

IN ADDITION to the topics suggested in the preceding chapter, the following rules should be observed by those who are called to the divine ministry of preaching.

They should have a sufficient knowledge of the doctrines they preach, though it is not necessary for them to be outstanding theologians. They should be careful not to discuss or preach any subject with which they are insufficiently familiar. "A preacher knows enough," says St. Francis de Sales, "when he does not pretend to know more than he really does." (1)

Too many quotations from Scripture or from the Fathers of the Church should be avoided; likewise, lengthy scriptural texts which merely confuse the listener. Let quotations be short and to the point. Interpret the Scriptures faithfully according to the teachings of the Catholic Church, the Fathers and the Doctors of the Church. If there is diversity of opinion on any point, do not include this in your sermon because the pulpit is not the proper place for theological disputation.

Examples from the lives of the saints make excellent sermon material, for the deeds of the saints represent the Gospel in action. Short stories drawn from nature can be most helpful, for the world brought into being by the Creator's fiat proclaims the greatness of the word of God. This world of nature was St. Anthony's great book, from which he preached the glories and perfections of the Maker. Similes and other comparisons also can be very helpful if they are appropriate. Logical reasoning is an excellent adjunct. This can be found in abundance in the Summa Theologica of St. Thomas Aquinas. Profane (1). Letter to the Archbishop of Bourges.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

authors should be quoted sparingly if at all. So-called miracles and visions should never be mentioned unless officially accepted and ratified by the Church.

The truly humble preacher will not seek his own glory, nor will he hesitate to preach on subjects that have been treated time and time again by other preachers of the day.

A preacher should not indulge in idle descriptions and irrelevant details. If he is discussing the sacrifice of Abraham, for instance, it is useless to waste time describing Isaac's comeliness, Abraham's sword or the topography of the place of sacrifice. Similarly he should not introduce imaginary conversations between people involved in a Biblical narrative unless these be well-founded and to the point. It would be far-fetched, for instance, to describe Isaac weeping at the altar and plaintively imploring his father's compassion, or to picture Abraham arguing with himself in the act of doing God's will.

If ideas come suddenly to the preacher while he is preaching, ideas which he has not studied and digested beforehand, he must be wary of giving utterance to them. It is possible that the devil may be seeking to delude him through vanity and lead him into the trap of making statements that he may regret. If spontaneous thought suggests well-founded principles and truths which he had not included in his preparation but which are obviously apt, he should by all means make use of them.

When addressing an ordinary congregation, it is useless to discuss contemplation or other stages of exalted perfection which they seldom attain. On the contrary, such topics may serve only to discourage souls for, finding themselves so far from the suggested goal, they are tempted to cease to lead an ordinary Christian life.

A preacher, therefore, should select topics that the ordinary Christians can understand and practise; he should give utterance to principles and maxims that can be followed; he should make virtue loved and vice detested. He must always avoid extremes, saying neither too much nor too little. He must neither be too strict nor too lenient. He must never indulge in prophecies concerning the coming of the Anti Christ. He should not promulgate new indulgences unless they have been authorized by the Ordinary.

FURTHER SUGGESTIONS ON SERMON TOPICS

He should at all times encourage the faithful to pray for our Holy Father the Pope, for the Bishops and Priests, for the civil rulers and for all fellow Christians and Catholics.

Nothing provides a better ending for a sermon than a good story, provided it is not too long and has a definite bearing on the subject matter of the discourse. Biblical stories are excellent. A preacher who would draw the greatest fruit from his labors would be well advised to make frequent use of such stories.

The preacher should avoid making the sermon too long, lest he tire his congregation and render God's word fruitless.

CHAPTER VII

SERMON PLANS

1 The Mysteries of Religion

THERE ARE various ways of treating the mysteries of religion:

A. FIRST PLAN

i. Point out the effects of the power, wisdom, love, charity, justice and mercy of God towards men as made evident in the mystery under consideration.

2. Outline the duties owed to God because of this particular mystery, namely, adoration, praise, love, thanksgiving, reparation and satisfaction for offenses and the oblation of self to Him.

3. Explain the light and motives to be derived from this mystery, to lead man in the ways of God.

B. SECOND PLAN

1. Relate the Scriptural account of the mystery.

2. Show the reasons why this particular mystery should be honored, setting forth its dignity and excellence. Recall the glory given to God through its instrumentality together with its fruits and spiritual advantages.

3. Suggest the means to honor the mystery in their interior and exterior life.

C. THIRD PLAN

1. Show the external aspects of the mystery as made evident in the persons concerned, the words said and the virtues practised in connection with it.

SERMON PLANS

2. Explain the interior spirit of the mystery, that is, the interior virtues of the persons associated with it, their thoughts and affections.

3. Stress the fruits to be drawn for the instruction and edification of the congregation.

D. FOURTH PLAN

Choose two or three particular circumstances connected with the mystery and build your sermon around them.

E. FIFTH PLAN

Take one or more virtues which shine forth from the mystery of which you are to speak, or single out some Christian truth founded on it. Make this the topic of a sound thoughtful discourse,

F. SIXTH PLAN

In each mystery consider three aspects and make them the points of your sermon. Who? Why? How? Take, for example, the Nativity of Our Lord. Answer three questions. Who was born? Why was He born? How was He born? Then show how the Son of God came to save mankind and a poor, naked baby in a stable, was born of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

II. The Gospels and the Epistles

A. FIRST PLAN

Paraphrase and explain the particular passage of Scripture, point by point. At the conclusion of each point, draw a particular application. This is not, however, as useful as the other plans suggested, because little time can be given to any part of the discourse.

B. SECOND PLAN

Concentrate on two or three necessary or important topics. This is a better plan than the preceding one.

96 - THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

C. THIRD PLAN

Choose one point alone and develop it fully, drawing from it some particular truth or some practical application to certain virtues or vices. This plan is strongly recommended.

111. The Sacrifice of the Mass

There is such a wealth of material for use when preaching on this sublime mystery that many sermons may be delivered on this topic without repetition. I shall merely suggest the following plan:

1. Show what the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass is.
2. Point out the obligations owed Our Lord for having given this sublime proof of His love for the Church. Impress upon the faithful the great love, veneration, devotion and respect they should have for the Mass, wherein Christ immolates Himself anew daily for mankind.
3. Insist on the interior and exterior dispositions the Catholic should have when assisting at this august sacrifice.

IV. The Commandments of God and of the Church

1. Having explained what is enjoined by each particular commandment, merit under discussion, point out what it forbids, and give the reasons why one should conform to its dictates.
2. Make known the various sins committed against the commandment in question by word, thought and action. When treating of the Sixth Commandment, however, use great discretion and care.
3. Give the means whereby one may obey the Commandment and show how sins against it may be avoided.

V. The Blessed Virgin Mary

Since the Blessed Mother is in herself a veritable wellspring of virtue, grace and holiness, many plans could be given for sermons about our Lady. One very useful plan is included herewith, containing two points.

1. Show the reasons why she should be honored and served, dwelling upon her shining excellence in relation to God and to us.

SERMON PLANS

2. Teach the people how to honor and love her with devotion worthy of their most admirable Mother.

V1. The Saints

In a sermon for the feast day of a saint, or on any occasion when a saint is honored, the following plans are suggested.

A. FIRST PLAN

1. Show how the saint lived in relation to God.

2. Point out how he fulfilled his duties to himself.

3. Portray his dealings with his fellow men.

This plan might be based on St. Paul's words: Sobrie et juste et pie vivamus (Titus 2, 12). Sobrie towards himself; Juste towards his neighbor; pie towards God.

B. SECOND PLAN

i. Recount the remarkable periods and events of the saint's life: his childhood; his youth; middle age; old age, if he grew to advanced years; his death and the events following it.

2. Draw a salutary lesson from each period; the first for the children, the second for the young men and women, and the third for the older members of the congregation.

C. THIRD PLAN

Show how the saint overcame the three vices enumerated by St. John: "For all that is in the world is the concupiscence of the flesh, and the concupiscence of the eyes, and the pride of life" (1 John 2, 16). These vices are avarice, lust and pride. ,

D. FOURTH PLAN

1. Demonstrate why we should honor each particular saint, and what fruit should be gathered from his virtues.

2. Give practical suggestions as to how the saint should be honored on his Feast Day by devotion, good works, prayer and, above all, by imitation of his virtues.<sup>98</sup>

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

E. FIFTH PLAN

- i. Explain the graces that God bestowed upon the saint.
2. Mention the holy and practical use the saint made of these graces, and counsel imitation.
3. Select two or three particular virtues for emulation.

F. SIXTH PLAN

Take one virtue only and develop it, for example, by selecting a personal or intimate detail about his life.

G. SEVENTH PLAN

1. Give reasons why we should try to practise this virtue which the saint practised in so perfect a manner.
2. Give the marks by which this chosen virtue may be distinguished and the means by which it may be acquired. Then show how the saint made use of these particular means.

All the plans outlined are excellent and can be used to great advantage. Do not make comparisons between one saint and another. Render to each the respect, praise and honor due him for his particular merits.

V11. Controversial Matters

Public controversies with ministers of other creeds are often useless and must be avoided if at all possible. Usually these controversies are not actuated with the intention of learning about the Catholic Faith, but rather are used as an excuse for publicity.

Do not discuss controversial matters except in communities where Catholics come into contact with non- Catholics, or when heretics and lukewarm Catholics are present in the congregation.

If these topics must be discussed, use discretion and charity, avoiding any semblance of giving offense to anyone.

Explore thoroughly the subject to be explained. Point out the truth, then give the errors concerning it, explaining why they are errors. Answer the common objections usually advanced in support of these heresies. Leave no doubt in the minds of the faithful.

Use one of the following plans.

SERMON PLANS

A. FIRST PLAN

Show the truth of the Catholic religion as proved by Scripture, the Councils of the Church and the writings of the Fathers. falsity of the objections brought against Catholic doctrine by the enemies of the Church, using the very texts they quote to confound them.

For example, if it be a question of our using the Bible in the vernacular, explain the belief and teaching of the Church in this matter.

It is said that we deprive the faithful of the Word of God, which is the soul's daily bread. We may answer this falsehood by stating that while, indeed, the Scripture is our soul's daily bread, Mother Church proportions it to our needs. just as parents do not give the whole loaf to their children, or the knife with which to cut it lest they injure themselves, so it is the duty of the Church, of the priest or the preacher, to distribute the spiritual bread of the Word of God to his people in portions suited to their requirements.

It is said that the Word of God is the light of the world. Well indeed do we admit this truth. But, we do not place a lighted candle in a child's hands, lest he burn himself.

B. SECOND PLAN

Establish the unswerving certainty of the Catholic doctrine. Then, dovetail with it the mysteries being discussed, for example, how Our Lord is present in the Blessed Sacrament, or how the saints hear our prayers.

C. THIRD PLAN

Let the discourse be an explanation of Scriptural passages often questioned by those outside the Church, proving from these same passages the truth of the Catholic position..

VIII. The Maxims of the Christian Life

Sermons on these truths are most practical, since they concern the principles of religion, the virtues, vices and last ends of man. It might be well at this point to enumerate some of these Christian maxims.

"Without faith it is impossible to please God" (Heb. 11, 6).

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me" (Matt. 16, 24).

"Flee from sins as from the face of a serpent" (Ecclus. 21, 2).

"So likewise every one of you that doth not renounce all that he possesseth cannot be my disciple" (Luke 14, 33).

"Love not the world, nor the things which are in the world" (1 John 2, 15).

"He that saith he abideth in him, ought himself also to walk, even as he walked" (Ibid. 6).

"Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 5, 3).

"Blessed are the meek: for they shall possess the land" (Ibid. 4).

"Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted" (Ibid. 5).

"Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy" (Ibid. 7).

"Many are called, but few chosen" (Ibid. 20, A).

"Wide is the gate, and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction . . . narrow is the gate, and strait is the way that leadeth to life" (Ibid. 7, 13-114).

"Every one that exalteth himself, shall be humbled; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted" (Luke 14, 1').

"They that will become rich, fall into temptation, and into the snare of the devil, and into many unprofitable and hurtful desires, which drown men into destruction and perdition" (1 Tim. 6, g).

"No evils shall happen to him that feareth the Lord (Ecclus. 33, 1).

«To them that love God all things work together unto good (Rom. 8, 28).

Preaching on these and other Christian principles, you should: 1. Explain the words and their meaning; 2. Show why they should be followed, quoting examples from the life of Our Lord or of the saints; 3. Give practical suggestions for a rule of life founded upon these inspiring maxims.

SERMON PLANS

1X. Virtues

Here is a practical plan:

1. Give reasons and motives why we should love the virtue which forms the topic of the sermon.
2. Explain the virtue, pointing out the qualities whereby it may be known.

3. Show how virtue is acquired and how easy it is to practise when the proper means are used. Give examples of the lives of other persons who have succeeded in doing so. Chief among these should be the example of Our Lord, of His Blessed Mother and of the saints whose virtues exalted them to such high places in heaven.

X. Sin and Vice

1. Demonstrate the hideousness of sin in general; then particularize about various vices.

2. Arouse a great hatred of anything which is sinful and urge a real determination to eradicate anything which is displeasing to God in the lives of your hearers. Reasons suggested for this are: a) the injury and dishonor caused God; b) the hatred of God for sin as demonstrated by the terrible chastisements He has heaped upon malefactors, even hurling the fallen angels into hell; c) the punishments to be expected in time and eternity.

3. Suggest means to destroy evil in the soul and to avoid its occasions. For example, Christians should remember their own unworthiness and impotence to avoid evil; make a determined resolution to do all in their power to cooperate with God's grace, throwing themselves on His mercy and invoking His constant assistance; avoid occasions and everything that may lead to sin; pray always; make a good examination of conscience in the morning to foresee what pitfalls may await them and in the evening to review their transgressions; assist at daily Mass and pay frequent visits to the Blessed Sacrament; cultivate a lively devotion to the Blessed Virgin Mary, especially by saying the Rosary every day; read good books; listen attentively to the sermons; fast and practise mortification; give alms to the poor; go to confession and receive Holy Communion frequently.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

X1 The Four Last Ends and Purgatory

DEATH

A. FIRST PLAN

Show the difference between the death of the just man and the death of the unrepentant sinner.

B. SECOND PLAN

1. Show the motives and reasons which should impel us to pray for a happy death.
2. Give the signs of a happy death.
3. Point out the means of dying a Christian death.

C. THIRD PLAN

Preach on the preparation for death. To prepare for death one must:

1. Purify one's soul by a good confession and communion, making a firm purpose . of amendment.
2. Try to die to sin, the world and oneself.
3. Submit to the will of God.
4. Give oneself completely to Our Lord.
5. Fall asleep nightly in the same state that one would like to be at the hour of death.
6. Set aside a little time each year to make a preparation for death.(1)

JUDGMENT

A. FIRST PLAN

Paint for your hearers a picture of the awe-inspiring scene of the general judgment, and what will take place. Outline the various signs that will precede it, the qualities of the Judge, His coming, the resurrection of the dead, the separation of the good and evil, the opening and reading of the Book of Life, the account of each one's stewardship which must be made and the terrible sentence that may be pronounced.

(1). There is an excellent exercise for the preparation for death in St. John Eudes's work on Christian perfection, The Kingdom of Jesus (New York, 1946), P. 312- 344.

SERMON PLANS 103 -

B. SECOND PLAN

Give an instruction on each of these points and the lessons to be learned from them.

C. THIRD PLAN

Suggest various means whereby the dreadful consequences of the last judgment may be avoided.

HELL

1. Describe the pains of hell, particularly as they will affect the senses.
2. Show how eternal torment may be avoided.

HEAVEN

1. Describe the infinite good and happiness God has prepared for those who love Him.
2. Point out the means whereby we may reach heaven.

PURGATORY

1. Show that purgatory is founded on the justice and mercy of God.
2. Stress the reasons why we should have pity on the souls in purgatory, helping them by our prayers so that they may reach heaven and glorify the Eternal Father.
3. Explain the means of helping the holy souls.

CHAPTER VIII(*)

COMPOSITION OF THE SERMON

IF THE PREACHER has studied the subject thoroughly, the words will come easily. At all costs, he must endeavor to be clear and simple, avoiding learned words and abstruse expressions that may not be understood.

The truly devoted priest, who is actuated only by the desire of preaching in the simplicity and spirit of Our Lord and His Apostles, sicut ex Deo, coram Deo, in Christo (2 Cor. 2, 17), will sedulously follow St. Paul's admonition to Timothy: "Keep that which is committed to thy trust, avoiding the profane novelties of words, and oppositions of knowledge falsely so called" (1 Tim. 6, 20).

The preacher should never use vulgarisms and improprieties; on the contrary, his language should be correct and precise. The discourse should never be over the heads of the people. Rather the sermon should be such that it will appeal to the hearts of the faithful, persuading and touching them in its simplicity. St. Paul refers to those who are fastidious about the choice of words, while sacrificing the sermon itself, as "adulterating the word of God" (2 COR. 2, 17). The Fathers of the Church and the saints avoided that type of discourse as more appropriate to worldlings and profane orators. Their aim was to preach Jesus Christ Crucified. In the words of St. Francis de Sales, non sectamur lenocinia rhetorum, sed veritates piscatorum.<sup>1</sup>

The following rules will be helpful for the composition of the sermon:

(*). In this chapter we have transposed and combined chapters 21 and 22 of the French edition, Oeuvres Complètes, Vol. IV, p. 65 ff.

(1). Letter to the Archbishop of Bourges.

COMPOSITION OF THE SERMON

1. Choose with great care the subject to be treated, selecting a topic that will be useful and well-suited to the congregation.

2. Have in mind the aim of the particular sermon which is, of course, to make God loved, honored or feared, or to destroy some vice and establish a particular virtue in its place. So dispose the sermon material that your discourse will make your purpose clear and rightly dispose the congregation to the results you have in mind.

3. Study the subject matter in prayerful meditation.

4. Make a clear plan and follow it carefully. There is nothing which can be of greater assistance to a preacher than a well-thought-out and well-divided discourse, which the faithful can follow easily. It is well to state clearly the subject to be discussed and to enunciate the method which is to be used in treating it.

For example, if you choose humility for your subject, you will state that it is your intention to implant in the hearts of the faithful a great love for this virtue and an ardent desire of practising it. "It is my intention to make you love and embrace humility. Consequently, I shall suggest to you three points which will be helpful: a. What is humility? What are its marks and how do we recognize it? b. What are the motives which should induce us to practise it? c. What means should be used to acquire humility?"

5. Let the discourse be full of sound doctrine, short scriptural texts, natural comparisons and short anecdotes.

6. Do not quote too many passages of Scripture, or give too many expository reasons, for it is better to elucidate a few than to confuse the faithful with a bewildering number of illustrations.

7. Have the subject logically organized for what belongs to one part of the sermon may lose its value if introduced where it will be irrelevant.

8. Place striking passages from Sacred Scripture or comparisons at the end of the sermon. Reserve speculative or general motives for the beginning.

9. Do not pass from point to point without the proper transition or connective. Let there be smoothness and coherence in the composition, so that the whole discourse will hold the attention of the faithful.

106-

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

10. Avoid monotony in diction and structure. Use variety in words and expressions.

11. Make the introduction to the sermon fairly short, delving at once into the main body of the subject.

12. Draw a moral lesson from each point. Let the conclusion be striking and moving.

13. This conclusion may be a summary or recapitulation. A text from Scripture makes a very effective ending; a prayer or aspiration may also be very apt.

14. Having very carefully thought out the plan of the sermon, you should write it down. Some speakers write merely the principal points or headings. Some write the entire sermon and memorize it. Others again make a skeleton outline, memorizing some portions, and relying on the various headings which they develop as they go along. There is another method which is particularly good. It consists in composing, ordering and possessing in the mind every part of the discourse, namely, exordium, division, various points, proofs, texts, stories and conclusion. After having studied, meditated upon and considered these points, one could even preach without writing a word, and the subject would be so imprinted upon the mind that the sermon could be used at any time in the future.

CHAPTER IX(*)

DELIVERY OF THE SERMON

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL thoughts and the most carefully written discourse if poorly delivered may represent a waste of time, whereas a very ordinary sermon if delivered with fluency, sincerity and warmth may produce the most efficacious results. These qualities contribute in no small measure to the preacher's success.

Pronunciation and correct use of language constitute a most important part of the office of preaching. No priest can afford to be negligent in these matters,

One of the most efficacious means at the disposal of the preacher is to play on the listeners' hearts, affections and emotions by the use of the human voice. He should spare no trouble to learn to modulate and inflect his voice properly, suiting it to the subject, now speaking softly, now forcefully, as occasion demands, with affection when speaking of virtue and with animation when preaching on sin. Never let the sermon become sing-song nor monotonous, sounding like a school-boy reciting a lesson by rote. Let the words flow naturally and simply, without affectation or studied attempts at oratory.

The preacher should be careful not to speak too slowly for fear of boring the faithful, but, on the other hand, he must not speak too fast as if he were trying to rush through the sermon. Otherwise, the whole discourse will have failed in its purpose.

On going into the pulpit, he should pitch his voice according to the size of the church, speaking neither too loudly nor too softly but so as to be heard by all.

(*). This chapter includes the most practical suggestions as found in the French edition, Oeuvres Complètes, Vol. IV, P. 71 11.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

In order to speak with fluency and feeling, the speaker must carefully learn the sermon, especially the beginning of each successive topic; otherwise he will stumble or grope for words and will not hold the attention of his hearers.

Though inflections of the voice must be made as the sermon progresses, the speaker should never drop it so low as not to be heard nor reach such a pitch as to end in a scream.

When using such terms as O my God, O Mother of God and longer aspirations, let the warmth by the preacher's tone bespeak the fire of love in his heart.

Inexperienced preachers should give great attention to the matter of gestures and train themselves not to give the appearance of being wooden or stilted. On the other hand, the opposite extreme of affectation must be avoided. All gestures should be simple and natural as those used in ordinary conversation.

Do not use the same gestures throughout the sermon. Do not beat on the pulpit or play with a book that may happen to be there. Do not drop your head so low that the words are lost on your breast. Do not roll your eyes continually or raise them to heaven, but look at the congregation in general and at no individual in particular. Do not wave your arms or cross them on your bosom. Do not preach with your arms folded or with one hand holding the other. In a word, do nothing that is unbecoming to so holy and divine a function as the preaching of the word of God.

St. Francis de Sales says: "Let gestures be free, noble, generous, strong, holy, grave and measured. They should be free from restraint; noble as opposed to those of an uncultured person or a novice; generous as one who would speak to one's children; strong in the sense that they are convincing; holy, not seeking self- glorification; grave, not given to worldliness; measured and not used to cause ridicule or amusement."

1

FAULTS TO BE AVOIDED IN PREACHING

IN ADDITION to several faults already mentioned, the following should be carefully avoided:

1. Guard against affected eloquence which can tend only to corrupt the Word of God. Do not seek to parade a knowledge of worldly subjects, but be concerned only with the spiritual. Do not transform the pulpit into a theatrical rostrum.

2. Avoid long-drawn-out preambles to excuse one's incapacity or unworthiness. Do not expound the difficulty of the subject to be treated, but get to the point at once. Do not make excuses and say that one has not had time to prepare. These things are childish and destroy whatever impression the priest might make.

3. In discussing grave and important matters, use only expressions and phrases which have been carefully thought out. Be sure, too, that they would bear the scrutiny of the most rigid theologians. If by chance you let slip a remark which might be misinterpreted, correct or explain it at once, lest it engender doubt or misunderstanding among the faithful.

4. Do not exaggerate. Stick to the plain unvarnished truth.

5. Do not use humor. Christ never sought to amuse his audience.

6. Do not forget to bow the head when the name of Jesus is mentioned.

7. Do not recite or talk in a sing-song manner, but naturally, warmly and forcefully. In this connection, one can school himself to avoid this fault by teaching catechism for then one must speak in a natural tone, by listening to other pulpit orators, by practising alone, by preparing the material carefully, by watching the inflections, and by using questions often, such as, "How can you prove this truth?" "Do you recall what St. Paul says?" In this way you will acquire fluency and naturalness, and will avoid any semblance of sing-song and declamation.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

8. Do not discourage the faithful, but rather, after pointing out the horror of sin, lift them up to new heights of hope by showing how they may practise and acquire virtue by serious and continued efforts. Show them, too, that, if they are willing and cooperative, God will give them graces of conversion and perseverance, and that it is far easier to be saved than to be lost. Likewise, they should be inspired with the means to avoid evil and to put their trust in God. "Tribulation and anguish upon every soul of man that worketh evil . . . but glory, and honour, and peace to every one that worketh good" (ROM. 2, 9-10).

9. Do not imitate those false preachers who are steeped in worldliness, who inject into preaching the spirit of the flesh and motives of avarice and vanity, who preach themselves and not Christ Crucified, using eloquence only for their glory and gratification, who fill the holy office of preaching simply as a means of livelihood and seek only flattery. Never stoop to imitate those who preach not Christian virtues but the vanities of earth, making the road to heaven sound easy and attractive by permitting laxity while minimizing the dangers of hell. Do not imitate those who never use Scripture but depend upon profane authors, who refer to secular sciences rather than to the truth of the Gospel and utter honeyed words which contain no food for thought nor grace of conversion.

10. Finally, do not follow those whose sermons merely arouse expressions of opinion concerning the preacher himself, such as, "What a learned man! What an eloquent speaker!" If listeners who praise in these words were asked what the priest said, they would be at a loss to give the slightest idea of his sermon for it was empty and devoid of substance. Whosoever would work for the salvation of souls, and not be reproved for failing in his duty, should never fall into these faults of misguided preachers, who endanger their own and the faithful's salvation.

FAULTS TO BE AVOIDED IN PREACHING

11. Again I repeat, there is nothing against which a priest should guard himself more assiduously than vanity for through it many a preacher has fallen. If the great St. Paul avers that he feared he himself might become a castaway after he had preached to others, which of us should not tremble? Which of us should not be humbled? Should we not, indeed, employ every means at our disposal to banish vanity from our lives and preserve within our hearts a Christ-like humility? Should we not crush the slightest thought or feeling of self-love or complacency, mindful of our nothingness? Should we not shun the praises of men as a veritable poison, remembering that honor and glory are due God alone, begging Him to destroy pride within us, that our souls may know true humility?

CHAPTER XI (*)

FURTHER ADVICE TO PREACHERS

THE Exordium should be short. Then, enter into the discourse at once, telling the faithful very plainly what the subject of the sermon is. Do not waste time describing the plan, but get to the point immediately.

If there be present a distinguished personage, such as a Cardinal or a Bishop, let the mark of respect paid him be short and without flattery, as becoming one who preaches Christ Jesus.

In proving some truth, put the strongest proofs at the beginning and at the end; keep the less important ones for the body of the sermon. If you use the device of making God speak directly to the people, do not employ words or terms unworthy or unbecoming. Likewise, this applies to the Blessed Virgin Mary and the Saints. In apostrophes to Our Lord, His Blessed Mother or the Saints, speak with the utmost respect.

When hurling maledictions upon sinful practices or describing the horrors of evil or the punishment of sinners, do not forget to inject a note of mercy and forgiveness lest the faithful be discouraged. When preaching about a Saint, make the discourse truthful and simple, showing forth his wonderful virtues, his works and his claims to spiritual greatness.

Let funeral sermons be restrained and pious, not flattering discourses to please the relatives of the dead person. Use these occasions to give particular emphasis to the inevitability of death and the nothingness of earthly things.

Finally, have no other aim in preaching than to enlighten men's minds, touch their hearts and make them better Christians. Remember (*). This chapter has been slightly shortened.

FURTHER ADVICE TO PREACHERS

that, if God demands an account of every idle word that man shall speak, how strictly will He judge those who while preaching made use of the divine word to please their own vanity, tickle the ears of their hearers or as means of parading their own knowledge and erudition. There are many priests in hell because on earth they thus profaned the word of God while preaching.

No matter who offends you or hurts you, say nothing from the pulpit which might cause the faithful to notice that you harbor spite or bitterness. If you have been the victim of calumnies or lies and have suffered them sufficiently long, and fear that your work may be hindered thereby, then it might be well to justify yourself in the pulpit, calmly and modestly.

CHAPTER XII

TOUCHING THE HEARTS OF THE FAITHFUL

IN ORDER to impress your hearers, put into practice what has been written in "Chapter 11" concerning the interior and exterior dispositions required and the exemplary life that you should lead. The word of God is all the more effective when it is reflected in the life of the preacher.

Preach solid doctrine, using texts of Scripture and passages from the writings of the Fathers. Give good and convincing reasons in support of your theme and, since nothing moves more than the truth, your hearers will be won to Christ.

Observe faithfully the suggestions on pronunciation and gestures in Chapter IX.

Be assiduous in prayer and meditation. Therein you shall find food for sermons and light to understand the beauty of the Christian truths. If you are animated with the truth of what you preach, you cannot help animating others. When your heart and your mind are enlightened by the Eternal Father, you will be more able to give forth His doctrines than if you simply culled them or studied them from books. There will be almost the same difference between these doctrines as there is between raw food and well-cooked viands.

Hence St. Gregory the Great<sup>(1)</sup> and St. Thomas Aquinas<sup>(2)</sup> say that preaching should proceed from the fulness of contemplation, and that

(1). De perfectis viris post contemplationem suam redeuntibus, dicitur (Ps.44)' Memoriam suavitatis tuae eructabunt (Homil. 5 in Ezech).

(2). Unum quidem (opus vitae activae) ex plenitudine contemplationis derivatur, sicut doctrina et praedicatio (Sum. Theo. 1a 11ae, q. 188, art. 6).

TOUCHING THE HEARTS OF THE FAITHFUL

preachers should be as nearly as possible perfect men, filled with God's goodness, which they pour out from the fulness of their hearts.

The truly apostolic priest will need no other medium to touch the hearts of the faithful than to prepare, accompany and follow his sermon with prayer, asking God for the light to draw from the Divine Word the help he himself needs to move those to whom he speaks. Res quae in se ipsa non arserit, altum non accendit, says St. Gregory.<sup>(3)</sup> There is no heart that is so cold that it will not be inflamed by a good meditation: In meditatione mea exardescet ignis (Ps. 38, 4).

The priest being himself convinced and inflamed with the doctrine he is preaching, should pronounce with love and devotion the words of his discourse. He will not indulge in vehement language nor give vent to anger and indignation, but rather will make his sincerity and fervor manifest in his every word and gesture. Thus, his congregation will know that he speaks from a heart full of compassion and love for sinners, and that he is fired with zeal for God. His words will be like living coals which will inflame even the hardest hearts. Although the lips may speak to the ears, the heart always speaks to the heart.

He will dispose of his time so that he will be able to prepare for the divine office of preaching. Whenever he is to preach in the morning, he should allow himself enough time for the celebration of Holy Mass. St. John Chrysostom says that the tongue which has received the Sacred Body and Blood of Christ, is a terror to the devil and is consequently a most powerful instrument to touch the hearts of hardened sinners.<sup>(4)</sup>

Before going to the church to preach, the speaker should make one last rapid survey of his topic to make sure that he is fully prepared. Consequently, he should avoid other work or conversations which might distract him. There is nothing more unbecoming than to see a priest about to speak the word of God talking frivolously with others before mounting the pulpit. It is well to kneel before the Blessed Sacrament for a few moments before the sermon and to proceed to the pulpit with his eyes cast down and his whole being giving evidence of the seriousness of what is to be done.

(3). Moral. 91, cap. 28.

(4). St. John Eudes does not give the reference for this statement.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Use Sacred Scripture, especially the words of the Prophets and of Our Lord Jesus Christ, which are particularly effective.

Do not be too long or yet too short. Put vigor and force into every part of the discourse, but especially in the conclusion.

After the sermon, go down from the pulpit modestly with a devout and humble deportment.

Chap. CHAPTER XIII

TEACHING THE DISPOSITIONS REQUIRED
FOR RECEIVING THE WORD OF GOD

To MAKE the preaching of the Word of God effective and fruitful, the faithful, as well as the priest, must do their part; therefore, you must teach the people how to profit by sermons. When you are going to deliver a sermon in a parish, you might first point out to the people the best methods for profitable cooperation. These may be summed up in five points:

1. Dispositions regarding the Word of God;
2. Dispositions regarding God Himself;
3. Dispositions regarding the house of God;
4. Dispositions regarding the preacher;
5. Dispositions regarding the hearers themselves.

Explain these dispositions very clearly to the congregation.

1. They should have a great respect for the Word of God, and regard the assistance at a sermon, not as a commonplace act but as one of the most important and necessary for the preservation of their faith. "Faith then cometh by hearing; and hearing by the word of Christ," says St. Paul (Rom. 10, 17). The Sacred Scripture classifies those who know no God with those who lack preachers. "And many days shall pass in Israel, without the true God, and without a priest a teacher, and without the law" (2 Par. 15, 3). The law of God, which is the basis of our faith, comes to us through preaching.

Make the faithful understand that assistance at a sermon is of such importance that St. Augustine compares it to Holy Communion. He assures us that the person who listens carelessly to the Word of God is just as guilty as he who allows the Sacred Host to fall to the ground. Non minus reus erit qui verbum Dei negligenter audierit,

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

quem ille qui corpus Christi sua negligentia, in terram cadere permiserit. (1).

It follows, then, that even as the Christian should not approach the Holy Table without preparation, so he should not hear a sermon without the proper dispositions. There should be a desire to listen attentively and with profit, and a fixed determination to make use of the knowledge required. There should also be the realization that one is not listening to the harangue of an orator or demagogue, but rather to the exposition of the Word of God, which is to be preserved in one's heart and practised as a sure means of salvation.

2. The faithful should realize their great debt of gratitude to God for the grace bestowed upon them in the gift of the priest, Christ's representative, to show them the way to heaven. They should never leave the church without saying a prayer of gratitude to God for the sermon to which they have listened. If they fail to thank God for the spiritual nourishment, they are guilty, to say the least, of gross ingratitude.

3. The faithful must remember the sanctity of the church where the sermon is to be preached. They must respect and reverence it as the house of God, where noise and useless conversation are out of place. As the dwelling place of Him in whose presence the very angels tremble, nothing untoward or unseemly must be tolerated or countenanced.

4. For the preacher himself they must entertain much respect and charity. Respect for he is God's messenger and Christ's ambassador, taking the Master's place, clothed with His authority and speaking in

His name. Well, indeed, may we say that he is the instrument through which Christ Himself speaks: "For it is not you that speak, but the Spirit of your Father that speaketh in you" (Matt. 10, 20). "Christ . . . speaketh in me," says St. Paul (2 Cor. 13, 3), "God as it were exhorting by us" (Ibid. 5, 20).

Charity for the faithful must not censure or judge rashly him who is preaching, nor misinterpret his words or intentions. Charity in that they must not find fault because the preacher repeats and stresses the same truths others before him have taught. After all, there is no better food than wholesome bread taken frequently; good medicine used continually may effect a cure; music played often brings unalloyed pleasure. Charity, not despising those preachers who, because of their mediocrity of talents, are not so forceful or eloquent as their more gifted brethren. It should be borne in mind that it is not the preacher half so much as the preaching which counts. Should we receive a letter from the king, we would cherish and treasure it, without considering the talents or character of the messenger who delivered it.
(1). Lib. L. Homiliarum, Homil. 26.

TEACHING HOW TO RECEIVE THE WORD OF GOD

5. The faithful should have purity of intention, for which two things are necessary: the first is a complete renunciation of all that is not proper, for instance, to hear a sermon for amusement or pastime, out of curiosity or from some selfish motive. The second is an act of protestation to Jesus Christ that they wish to hear His word in order to learn the truths of eternity.

They should purify their conscience by an act of contrition so that nothing may hinder God's grace from operating in their souls.

The faithful must also practise humility and docility by a) dispelling any trace of vanity and feeling of superiority to the priest; b) remembering that no one is so learned that he does not need further instruction, as St. Ambrose(2) and St. Augustine(3) point out; c) recalling that the words of the priest are meant for each listener. If some vice is mentioned, let no one make the mistake of thinking the remarks are intended only for others. If perchance they have no application for particular individuals, let those favored souls thank God in a spirit of deepest humility.

The faithful should receive God's word with edification and piety. Teach them to read their prayer books while awaiting the sermon, thus using the time they are in church for their soul's advantage. When the priest has entered the pulpit, let them give all attention and respect, seeing in him the person of Christ the Saviour. They should make the sign of the cross with him, with devotion and reverence, and during the sermon proper, they should give their concentration to the priest,

(2). De Officiis, L. 1, cap. 1.

(3). Epist. ad Mercatorem.

120-

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

banishing every profane thought or distraction. They should be taught not to turn around or gape at their neighbor, but to keep their minds fixed on the subject being treated and their hearts united to God.

After the sermon, the faithful should not leave the church without thanking God for all the benefits received from the sermon and praying for the grace to cooperate with the truths exposed; meditating upon what the priest has said, singling out certain points or passages for further reflection; beseeching Our Lord's help for the preacher, that his work on this and all future occasions may be fruitful of good. Even as one thanks ordinary teachers who instruct in profane subjects, so, too, one should be grateful to him who nourishes with the words of life. In Christo Jesu per Evangelium ego vos genui (1 Cor. 4, 15). What ingratitude would the faithful show, indeed, if after the sermon they criticize the priest, or, instead of thanking God for the help given them, merely find faults with the efforts of the preacher?

These, then, are the dispositions required that the faithful may hear the Word of God with profit, which every priest must seek to instil into them. To which I would add that the priest should preach, not only by word and example but also by prayer. At Mass, during the Divine Office and at all times, his constant entreaty to God should be that his words will be efficacious for good. Dei voci suae vocem virtutis (Ps. 67, 34). He should pray that he may be able to destroy in the minds and hearts of his hearers all that is not in conformity with the divine will, or whatever may impede the fruitful reception of the Word of God.

CHAPTER XIV

THE TEACHING OF CATECHISM

CATECHISM is most useful and necessary, not only for children but also for adults who are often ignorant of the faith. Priests, therefore, should give as much attention as possible to this part of their sacerdotal duty and should see that their flock is properly instructed. Pastors especially should look upon the teaching of catechism as one of their most important tasks.

There is, however, a common fault which priests must avoid at all costs. which consists in thinking themselves so far above the simple teaching of catechism that they make of it a lecture in theology, which no one understands. This smacks of vanity and pride and destroys whatever spiritual good their work might accomplish.

The priest who would teach catechism well should make it a point to explain the simple matter of faith as set forth in the catechism, and employ his time, not in preaching nor in long instruction, but in questioning and instructing the children.

Naturally, teaching catechism will not demand the same type of gravity and seriousness as preaching; nevertheless the priest must preserve a certain dignity while at the same time trying to make himself one with the children. He must treat them with cordiality and gentleness, yet not give way to levity. Above all else, he must not tolerate any irreverence on their part in the church, but enjoin upon them due respect for the sanctity of the house of God.

If his youthful charges are inclined to be unruly or irreverent in any way, he should rebuke them gently at first, and then with becoming severity. Failing to see any improvement from this type of children, he should advise their parents.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Before beginning the catechism class, a short prayer should be said. The Veni Sancte Spiritus is recommended. Then, the children should be taught to pray aloud with the teacher, asking the blessing of Christ and His holy Mother. Before the first class, a short instruction may be given to show the necessity and excellence of learning about God and His holy law.

As the sign of the cross is most important, and yet so many persons persist in making it irreverently and carelessly, no catechism class could begin better than by insisting on the correct use of this blessed act of faith.

To make the children repeat either singly or in pairs the answers contained in the book being used, is an excellent manner of impressing upon their youthful minds the necessary truths of religion. A new subject may be broached by saying: "Today we shall take up such and such . . . ." It may be very helpful to have the children question one another. Make them speak distinctly, but do not let them talk in a babble of confusion. Do not give them too much to memorize at one time. A short instruction or moral lesson may be drawn from each one of these catechism classes.

When the Incarnation is discussed, do not use words and expressions to cause wonder or arouse curiosity, but simply explain that the little body of Jesus was formed in the Blessed Virgin Mary and His soul was made out of nothing like our own. The body and soul are united in the person of the Son of God.

Teach the children the excellence of serving Mass. See that the boys learn how to pronounce the Latin and serve at the altar in a becoming manner. Point out the holiness of this function and how privileged they are to be admitted within the sanctuary.

Little stories and anecdotes may be used with profit and serve as a fitting conclusion for any catechism class. They should, however, be prepared in advance.

Do not be content merely to teach catechism, but endeavor to make your children good sturdy Catholics. Teach them to have the love of God in their hearts and a salutary fear of breaking His commandments. Impress upon them a profound hatred of sin and a tender devotion towards Jesus Christ and His Blessed Mother, St. Joseph, their guardian angel and their patron saint. Urge them to go to confession and Holy Communion very often. Guide them in the ways of obedience to their parents and the civil law. Enjoin upon them charity, modesty and devotion. Infuse into their young hearts real respect for the church and the cemetery.

Preparation for First Communion is the most important event in their lives; therefore, the subject should be explained with special care. The Sacrament of Penance will have to be treated well lest their tender consciences be formed falsely. Everything which concerns Our Lord in the Blessed Sacrament should be outlined clearly.

Do not make exceptions in dealing with the children, singling out certain brighter ones, but treat all alike and even go out of your way to be kind to the backward ones. Prizes may be helpful to encourage them to learn their catechism.

After catechism class is finished, a hymn may be sung and a prayer said, perhaps the Our Father, the Hail Mary, or the Creed.

Do not keep the children too long for they tire easily and lose interest in coming again. It is good to spend a little time in recreation with the children after the class.

It need hardly be added that, since morning and evening prayers are so important, the teaching of them should occupy a considerable portion of every priest's time. If the pastor is not able to discharge these duties himself, he may select some devout Catholics to assist him.

A set hour for the classes is imperative, and one that will be convenient for all. Teach the children to come to the church and take their places at the hour fixed. Then, kneel down and say a little prayer. They must understand that the church is a holy place; hence, it must not be profaned by talking and misbehavior.

While the children are in class, nothing else must be considered or talked about except the lessons for the day. Do not let them whisper among themselves; do not permit them to play or act lightly. Teach them to regard one another as brothers and sisters, not shunning this one or that one or having hard feelings towards any other child.

Teach them obedience to parents, love for God and His holy Mother, devotion to the Rosary. They should say the beads daily to obtain the favor of living and dying in the state of grace.

Part III*THE GOOD CONFESSOR

Part 111

THE GOOD CONFESSOR(1)

CHAPTER I*EXCELLENCE AND IMPORTANCE OF THE OFFICE OF CONFESSOR

JESUS CHRIST has made every priest His associate in the infinite power of His Divinity. He has given the priest a power greater than any other in heaven and on earth except that of His Blessed Mother. He has bestowed upon His earthly representative a power unequalled by that of any human prince or king; a power denied even to the Prophets of old; a power strong enough to destroy Satan, erase sin and infuse divine grace. St. John Chrysostom rightly says: Omnis potestas caelorum sacerdotibus commissa est; quanam potestas major esse quaeat?" (2)

The Son of God has made the priest judge with Himself, giving him the power to pass sentence, to forgive or to condemn others. "The Father hath given all judgment to the Son" (John 5, 22). "The Son gave all powers of judgment to the priest," says St. John Chrysostom. Elsewhere the same saint adds that the throne of the priest is in heaven. Sacerdoti thronus in caelis collocatus est.(4) St. Clement, disciple of St. Peter, declares that the priest holds in his hands the keys of life and death, God having given him the power of condemning or delivering the sinner.(5)

Thus, O priests of God, you are one with the Sovereign Priest in a most intimate association. To you He communicates His own divine qualities. Guard carefully the talents He has bestowed upon you lest in neglecting them you be cast into exterior darkness. Use them for the glory of God and the salvation of souls.

Do you want to learn how to exercise these divine powers usefully and efficaciously? Then make proper use of the Tribunal of Penance. There you exercise the role of mediator, redeemer, physician and judge. There you continue the work of the redemption; there you should act with humility and patience like unto Christ's. Though the task be hard, remember how Our Lord Jesus Christ suffered for souls and for the destruction of sin. Recall the prolonged torments endured by our Saviour to redeem mankind, and so discharge your duty as confessors unhurriedly without display of irritability or weariness.

In the Tribunal of Penance you are the living image of the power and majesty of the Son of God. There you are as it were little gods, vested with the powers of God, doing what belongs by right to Him alone, blotting out sin, communicating the grace of the Holy Ghost to souls. Consequently, in the Sacred Tribunal you should serve the interests of God, thinking only of Him, desiring only to establish His kingdom in the hearts of men.

As a judge representing the Supreme Judge, yours is the power of bestowing or refusing absolution. God communicates to you His power of judge in a more excellent manner than He does to the judges of earthly courts. They judge bodies; you judge souls. They judge temporal affairs; you judge eternal ones. Their power is a passing one; yours reaches beyond to eternity. What you absolve or condemn on earth is absolved and condemned in heaven. Their judgments are recorded on paper; yours are written with the Blood of Christ in the eternal books of divine justice.

These reflections show you the importance of your duties as confessor. If you discharge them well, sin will be destroyed and grace will be infused into men's souls. The devil will be expelled and the Holy (5). In Constitutionibus apostolicis C. 37.

THE OFFICE OF CONFESSOR

Ghost will be imparted to souls, so that they will become a terrestrial paradise instead of an abode of Satan. Men will be reborn spiritually. The fruits of the Passion will be applied in their fulness. The Blood of the Lamb will wash and purify and the words applied by the Sacred Writers will be fulfilled in souls: Quam pulchra es, amica mea, quam pulchra es (Cant. 4, 1). Finally the children of Satan will become children of God; the members of the devil will become the members of Jesus Christ.

I say "if you discharge your duties well," for a confessor who does not act as he should, may be guilty of grave wrongdoing. Instead of destroying sin he merely establishes the soul more firmly in its grip. He ensnares the sinner in a net of evil and gives him a false sense of security. "Peace, peace, and there is no peace" (Jer. 6, 14). Instead of driving out the devil he merely strengthens Satan's hold on the unhappy penitent. Instead of raising the sinner to life he kills him; instead of giving life to Christ in souls, he crucifies the Redeemer anew. Instead of cleansing souls, he soils them; instead of beautifying souls, he renders them more hideous; instead of filling up what is wanting to Christ's Passion (Col. 1, 24), he renders the sufferings of the Saviour vain and useless.

These things are said for the priest's enlightenment in the administration of the Sacrament of Penance and to make him realize the importance of his holy office. The confessor, who is fired with zeal and filled with prudence, is a treasure in the Church of God. Following as he does the teachings of the Gospel and the guidance of the Church, he is a spiritual physician, an equitable judge, a charitable mediator, and a merciful saviour among men.

But the bad or careless confessor, who is ignorant, imprudent~ lazy and negligent, is a plague in Christ's holy Church. He is not an emissary of God, but an agent of the devil. He is not a doctor of heaven but of hell, for as God has his patriarchs so the devil has heresiarchs. As God has His prophets, apostles and martyrs, so, too, the devil has his prophets, apostles and martyrs.

The unworthy confessor is not a divine judge, but another Pilate pronouncing sentence upon Christ and the souls that the Son of God died to redeem. He is not a mediator for God, but for the devil, not a dispenser of heavenly blessings but a profaner of divine mysteries and sacraments. In a word, instead of being another Christ, he is a very devil.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

No tongue can tell the evil the bad confessor commits. He does great harm to the Church, persecuting it more cruelly than Nero, Diocletian and the tyrants of history. Would to God that all priests who administer the Sacrament of Penance might meditate seriously on these truths! Would to God that they might consider the inestimable good that they would accomplish if they were animated with the same spirit and if they followed the same maxims! They would completely overthrow the devil's tyranny and snatch souls from perdition. Would they might open their ears to the words of the Holy Spirit: "Take heed what you do: for you exercise not the judgment of man, but of the Lord" (2 Par. 19, 6). Take heed in very truth for what you do is not temporary, but eternal. What you perform does not concern an earthly kingdom, but the Kingdom of God. You handle the treasures of heaven; you are responsible for the salvation or the damnation of souls. Videte quid faciatis. Remember to bring to your task the care and application demanded; have the necessary qualifications. Otherwise, the absolutions you give may become so many damnations for you. Never forget that when you say the words, Ego te absolvo, the Eternal judge may reply, if you are unworthy, Ego te condemno.

If you were to ask what are these necessary qualifications, I would answer that they are six, namely: zeal for souls, science, charity, prudence, piety and fidelity to the secrecy of confession. To each of these qualifications an entire chapter will be devoted.

CHAPTER II

ZEAL FOR THE SALVATION OF SOULS

THE First and most important obligation of the priest is to labor for the salvation of souls. For that purpose Christ established the priesthood in the Church. For that end should a young man embrace holy orders. When he enters the priesthood, his soul should be so filled with grace that he is able to sanctify and save the souls of others.

Thus, priests are called "saviours" in Sacred Scripture (Abdias 1, 21). Christ came into this world to effect the salvation of souls, and for thirty-three years He devoted every thought, word, action, suffering, and even His very life for that purpose. Then, He returned to His Heavenly Father, but before departing He appointed successors to take His place. Who are these successors? They are His priests, who must seek always to imitate the ineffable love and ardent zeal of His Sacred Heart.

"He who is content with saving himself and neglects the salvation of others," says St. John Chrysostom, "cannot secure his own salvation." Qui sua contentus salute, negligit alienam, nec suam consequi potest.(1) If that is true of the ordinary Christian, how much more can it be said of priests and especially of confessors! Since the work of the confessional is difficult, they need special zeal for the honor of their Master and for the salvation of their brethren.

Thus to inflame your hearts with this holy zeal, it is well to ponder how pleasing it is to God to work with Him for the spiritual welfare of your neighbor. These considerations will apply to all priests as well as to confessors.

(1). In cap. 18 Matt. homilia 60.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

What, then, does it mean to save souls created to the image and likeness of God and redeemed by the Precious Blood of His Divine Son? It is the great work of God, the task of the God-Man and His Holy Mother. It is the mission of the Church, the desire of the angels and saints and of all chosen souls on earth. In a word, it is the supreme work of all works.

1. The Salvation of Souls is the Great Work of God

First of all, the salvation of souls is the great work of God. Domine, opus tuum (Hab. 3, 2). Herein God employs all His thoughts, actions, mysteries, power, wisdom, goodness, mercy, and all His other divine attributes. All that God accomplishes in Himself from all eternity and outside Himself in time is directed towards this very end.

What does God do in Himself from all eternity? He gives birth to His Son, and from the Father and the Son proceeds the Holy Ghost. It follows that even as God gave being to His Son, it was His eternal design also to send Him into the world to save man. Likewise, it is clear that the Son, born from all eternity, had that same intention. And the Holy Ghost proceeding from the Father and the Son shared that same design for man's salvation. If one could speak of moments of time when referring to timeless eternity, one might say that at the very moment that the Holy Ghost proceeds from all eternity, it is His will to come into the souls of men and to transport them from earth to heaven. Thus it is apparent that all that God accomplishes within Himself is associated with the salvation of souls.

So it is, too, with all that God accomplished outside of Himself. If He created the world, it was that He might people it with beings who would by their good works fit themselves to enjoy the beatific vision; that He might make a place where men would battle against the enemies of their souls, disposing themselves to merit heaven by practising faith, hope, charity, humility, patience and all the other virtues. If God made a heaven, it was to share it with those who conquered the enemies of salvation. If He established a Church on earth, it was to give men easy and efficacious means of saving their souls through the sacraments. If He made a hell with frightful torments, it was to impress those who are actuated more by fear than by love to work out their salvation in fear and trembling; to chastise those who are so far spent in sin as to be willing to yield their souls to sin and perdition and to drag others to ruin with them.

From the foregoing we learn that the salvation of souls is the end and purpose of all the works of the power, wisdom and goodness of God. It is, therefore, the great work of His divine majesty.

2. The Salvation, of Souls is the Great Work of the God-Man

Saving souls is likewise the great work of the God-Man. Listen to His very words: "As the Father knoweth me, and I know the Father: and I lay down my life for my sheep" (John 10, 15). St. Thomas Aquinas explains these words by saying that God the Son knows the inclinations of His Father; He knows what the Father loves most, namely the souls of men. Nothing is nearer to God's heart than their salvation; that is the reason why Christ gives His life for souls. A little later we read in the same chapter of St. John: "That which my Father hath given me is greater than all" (John 10, 29). According to the Angelic Doctor, this means that the God-Man holds in higher regard the souls His Father has given Him than anything else, even His own body and His own life, since He sacrifices them for the salvation of men(2)

Thus does Our Lord speak and behold what He does for souls! See Him coming forth from the bosom of the Father, putting aside His glory to become one of us. See Him annihilate Himself at the time of the Incarnation: Exinanivit semetipsum (Phil. 2, 7). See Him reduced to the helplessness of a child, born in a stable and dependent on others for every single thing. See Him suffering every type of hardship, shedding His blood eight days after His birth, fleeing into Egypt, separated from the Chosen People, living seven years among strangers. See Him laboring in the carpenter shop with Joseph and doing penance in the solitude of the desert. Behold Him conversing and dwelling with men, eating and drinking with sinners, going about preaching, suffering the indignities of His terrible Passion, even kneeling before a devil according to Sacred Scripture, "One of you is a devil" (John 6, 71). Behold Him in the Garden of Gethsemani, overwhelmed with anguish, sweating blood, His Heart oppressed with sorrow. Behold Him in the midst of His enemies, mocked as a common criminal before Annas, Caiaphas and Pilate, buffeted, spit upon and reviled, scourged and stripped of His garments. Behold Him crowned with thorns, placed on the same level as Barrabas, a notorious criminal, condemned to death, crucified and dying on the cross. Behold His Sacred Body laid in the sepulchre.

(2). Expositio aurea Sti. Thomae in Joannem 10, 15.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Seek to evaluate the all-consuming love with which He endured all these things for souls. You will find that His love was so perfect that He was ready to suffer still more if in doing so He might benefit individual souls. He loves them so much that He would be willing to suffer even eternally for them. That infinite love made Him willing not only to suffer in Jerusalem, but also in every place in the world, and even to accept atrocities much more humiliating and terrible than those of Calvary.

What does all this signify? Simply that all these things, these mysteries of the Incarnation, Birth, Circumcision, Passion and Death, are so many voices crying out to us: "Thus Jesus loved souls." Thus did He love and prefer them to anything else, even His own life. For that reason, He abandoned everything of His own, stripped Himself of all glory and happiness that He might insure their perpetual felicity in heaven. That was why He gave His most precious possessions, His Body and Blood, even His life, and was ready to endure an eternity of suffering, if such were the will of His eternal Father.

O my Saviour, who could conceive and express Thy love for men? O merciful Jesus, since Thou dost love souls so much, surely those persons, who cooperate with Thee in the work of redemption, must be very close to Thee. On Thy ministers surely Thou must lavish an abundance of grace and blessings.

3. The Salvation of Souls is the Great Work of the Mother of God

The salvation of immortal souls is also the great work of the Mother of God. Why did Almighty God choose the Blessed Virgin Mary to be the Mother of God? Why did He preserve her from original sin and make her holy from the very first moment of her life? Why did He shower upon her so many privileges, ornamenting her with grace and virtue? Why did He confer upon her so much wisdom, goodness, meekness and such great power in heaven, in hell and on earth? It was simply that she might be worthy to cooperate with her Divine Son in man's redemption. All the Fathers of the Church say clearly that she is co-redemptrix with Christ in the work of our salvation. I hear Our Lord and His Blessed Mother saying to St. Brigid, whose revelations are approved by the Church, that Adam and Eve lost the world by eating an apple, but that they saved it by a heart: quasi uno Corde mundum salvavimus (Revel. extravag. cap. 3), that is Our Lord and His Mother had but one heart, one love, one sentiment, one mind and one will with each other. As the Sacred Heart of Jesus was a furnace of love for men, so the heart of His loving Mother was inflamed with charity and zeal for souls., Christ immolated Himself upon the cross for the redemption of mankind, and Mary made a similar sacrifice in undergoing untold sufferings and sorrows.

What more shall I say? I would even go so far as to state that the Blessed Virgin Mary so loves souls that she was and is ready to undergo every torment of earth to save even a single soul. There have been many saints in history who have offered to do that very thing. How can we say less of the Queen of saints? Who can doubt that she would not willingly undergo a thousand hells, rather than behold her Son so afflicted? Yet she accepted this unspeakable sorrow in order to cooperate with her Divine Son in the redemption of the world. The salvation of souls is, therefore, the great work of the Blessed Virgin Mary, Mother of God.

4. The Salvation of Souls is the Great Work of the Church, of the Angels and Saints, of the Apostles

The salvation of souls is the great work of the Church, the reason for its establishment, the purpose of its sacraments and ceremonies. It is the object of the ministry of priests, bishops and supreme pontiffs. It is the aim of all the Councils, laws and functions of the Church.

It is also the work of the angels, for St. Paul says, "Are they not all ministering spirits, sent to minister for them who shall receive the inheritance of salvation?" (Heb. 1, 14).

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

It is likewise the great work of the Apostles and saints. Listen to St. Paul speaking to the Christians of his day: I most gladly will spend and be spent myself for your souls" (2 Cor. 12, 15). To the Jews who had persecuted him and conspired against his very life he speaks thus: I lie not, my conscience bearing me witness in the Holy Ghost; that I have great sadness, and continual sorrow in my heart. For I wished myself to be anathema from Christ, for my brethren, who are my kinsmen according to the flesh" (Rom. 9, 1-3). "These latter words suggest," says St. John Chrysostom, "that the great apostle was ready to sacrifice even the happiness of heaven on behalf of his brethren." (3) According to Cassianus St. Paul means that he would willingly suffer the everlasting punishment of hell to deliver the Jews from it, if that were possible and in accordance with God's will.(4)

Be not surprised at so great zeal in St. Paul for many great doctors say that Moses was inspired with the same thoughts and feelings when he prayed for the Chosen People: "Either forgive them this trespass, or if Thou do not, strike me out of the book that Thou hast written" (Exod. 32; 31-32)(5).

Speaking to his flock, St. John Chrysostom said: I would willingly be a thousand times anathema for your salvation."(6) St. Catherine of Siena and other holy persons offered to suffer the pains of the damned for souls. And have we not met a holy person(7) so actuated by God's love

(3). In cap. IX Epist. ad Rom.

(4). Collat. 32, cap. 6.

(5). In this paragraph and the preceding one St. John Eudes simply paraphrases a passage from Cornelius a Lapide, in Epist. ad Rom. 9, 3:

"Optat Paulus heroico quodam excessu quasi caesae caritatis, quae abstrahit, nec considerat an res sit possibilis, an secundum Dei ordinationem, necnon: vel si non abstrahit, optat sub tacita conditione, si Deus vellet et si fieri posset; optat, inquam, aeternam separationem, non a caritate, sed a beatitudine et gloria futura cum Christo, ut judaei salventur. Imo optat, ait Chrysostomus, in aeternum perire; et, ut Cassianus ait Collat. 32, Cap. 31, aeternis addici poenis, idque tum pro gloria Dei, ne scilicet Deus a Iudeis blasphemetur, sed in aeternum laudetur, tum pro salute ipsorum Iudaeorum. Optat ergo hic Paulus illud, idem quod in simili casu optavit Moyses (Exod. 32, 31), dicens: 'Aut dimitte eis hanc noxam, aut, si non facis, dele me de libro tuo quem scripsisti.'" that she was granted the privilege of suffering unlimited torments which others had merited, merely to save these souls from perdition? Have we not heard her protesting her willingness to undergo the torments of hell rather than to have a single soul commit a mortal sin?

With these realities before you, be not surprised at the explanation of St. John Chrysostom of the words of St. Paul, 'I wished myself to be an anathema from Christ, for my brethren' (Rom. 9, 3), for the zeal and love of the apostles transcended the charity and zeal of the saints and holy persons to whom reference has just been made.

This then is the great work of the apostles, of the saints whose only desire was to witness the fulfilment of the words of the Queen of saints in her Magnificat: "He hath filled the hungry with good things; and the rich he hath sent empty away" (Luke 1, 53). Who are the hungry? The saints who hungered and thirsted for souls. Who are the rich? The demons who have in their possession the treasure of countless Souls purchased by the Precious Blood of the Lamb.

O my Saviour, when will these sacred words of Thy holy Mother be at last fulfilled? O Mary, my Mother, when will thy great prophecy come true? When will the devils be deprived of their spoils? When will the zeal of thy loving children be satiated? May every creature of heaven and earth prostrate himself before the throne of God to implore this grace!

5. The Salvation of Souls is the Great Work of Priests

To all the foregoing considerations permit me to add that the salvation of souls is the great work of priests, whose holy office was founded simply for man's salvation. How weighty are the obligations of priests! What a burden is laid upon their shoulders! Listen to the words of the Prophet Ezechiel, I will seek that which was lost: and that which was driven away, I will bring again. And I will bind up that which was broken and I will strengthen that which was weak, and that which was fat and strong I will preserve: and I will feed them in judgment" (Ezech. 34, 16). Five things must be observed to discharge these sacerdotal obligations.

The first is for the priest to conduct himself so that his life may be a model of priestly devotion. "Be thou an example of the faithful in word, in conversation, in charity, in faith, in chastity" (1 Tim. 4, 12). "In all things shew thyself an example of good works, in doctrine, in integrity, in gravity" (Titus 2, 7). A priest should be such that he may say at all times, "For we are the good odour of Christ unto God" (2 Cor. 2, 15). Thus, he should be a living example of charity, purity, sobriety, humility and patience. He should be like John the Baptist, "A voice of one crying in the wilderness" (Luke 3, 4), that is, crying to sinners in the wilderness of the world: "Do penance."

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Do you not know that the robe of the Great High Priest was adorned with little bells to show, as St. Jerome explains, that the priest should be totus vocalis,<sup>(8)</sup> all voice, and that everything about him should be a tongue preaching and instructing those who come in contact with him. Universa vocalia sint: quidquid agit, quidquid loquitur, sit doctrina populorum. <sup>(9)</sup>

Nothing is so potent as the example given by the priest be it good or bad. Thus, St. Gregory says that priests deserve eternal damnation as often as they give bad example to those confided to their care. Pastores tot mortibus digni sunt, quot ad subditos suos perditionis exempla transmittunt.<sup>(10)</sup>

The priest should be "a burning and a shining light" (John 5, 35), burning before God, shining before men; burning in prayer, shining in action; burning by example, shining by doctrine. "Let your light shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven," says St. Matthew (5, 16). And St. Bernard says that "the light shed by a priest must be so strong and so bright that the wind of vanity will not extinguish it." <sup>(11)</sup>

The second thing that the priest must do is to instruct the faithful on their Christian obligations. He must teach them to know and love God, to fear and serve Him through obedience to His commandments. He must lead them to know their Saviour, His principal mysteries, Jesus and Mary, the Church and the Sacraments. They must be made to pray in gratitude and petition for pardon and help. They should learn to recite their daily prayers with utmost care, the Lord's Prayer, the Hail Mary, the Creed and the Confiteor. Through exhortations from the pulpit and in catechism classes, the priest should encourage the faithful to cooperate to the fullest extent in their own salvation.

Thirdly, he should eradicate spiritual disorders from the lives of the flock. To do this he must know his people and their conduct. He should be unsparing in his pains to track down and root out evils which may exist; he should frequently visit the schools to instruct and guide the young in the way of salvation. He should enjoin great respect for the church and all holy places, insisting on proper deportment there at all times. He should keep everything pertaining to the altar in good order and see that the liturgical functions are carried out with the dignity becoming the King of heaven and earth.

Fourthly, the priest should practise charity. He should be affable and kind to all without distinction. He should be assiduous in visiting the sick, especially those in danger of death. He should console the afflicted and the needy, and be ever kind to the poor. He should advise those who seek his fatherly counsel, correct those who are wayward and seek to put an end to any quarreling among his parishioners.

Fifthly, he must administer the Sacraments with holiness, for the glory of God and becomingly lest through carelessness he neglect any requisite. Above all else, he should apply himself heartily to the administration of the Sacrament of Penance, for through it he will know the state of his people, their spiritual needs and weaknesses. Through it he will find the means of curing the ailments of their souls. He will open to them unexplored avenues of grace, will spread before them in his instructions and encouragements a banquet of heavenly delicacies.

These are the chief obligations of the priest and he must be ever vigilant lest even one soul be neglected or lost for the Sovereign Pastor will hold him responsible, and the price of Christ's Blood will be visited upon him.---"I will require his blood at thy hand" (Ezech. 3, 20). I mention neglect for this makes him a murderer in God's eyes, a murderer of souls committed to his charge.

St. John Chrysostom observes that when priests allow themselves to fall into sin, the people quickly follow. Every soul will be held to a, strict accounting of his own misdeeds, but the priest will also be held responsible for those of his flock who fall because of his example. Sacerdotes non solum pro suis, sed etiam pro omnium peccatis reddituri sunt rationem. (12)

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

If each individual soul will find it difficult to render an account of his works on judgment Day," says St. Augustine, "what must be said of priests, who must give an accounting of the souls committed to their care?" Si pro se unusquisque vix poterit, in die iudicii, rationem reddere, quid de sacerdotibus futurum est, a quibus sunt omnium animae requirendae? (13)

6. The Salvation of Souls is the Work of Works

Since the salvation of souls is the great work of God, of the God made man, of the Church, of the angels, the apostles and the saints, it is readily seen that it is the work of works, surpassing all others in time or eternity.

What indeed would be considered great human endeavors? Constructing great palaces or public buildings, raising armies and marching at their head into battle, being acclaimed as a mighty ruler? These would be great, no doubt, but remember the words of Sacred Scripture, "Vanity of vanities and all is vanity" (Eccles. 1, 2). All these things vanish and pass away. "That which is high to men is an abomination before God" (Luke 16, 15). To teach even a child to make the sign of the cross or instruct one of God's little ones, is a nobler work in the eyes of God than all human and natural undertakings.

Among the supernatural works there are five of paramount importance: 1. Fasting and mortification; 2. Works of mercy; 3. Prayer and contemplation; 4. Miracles; 5. Martyrdom. Yet, the saving of a soul is greater even than these works.

St. Chrysostom says: "The salvation of one soul is far greater than fasts or vigils or the austerities of the hermits; it is greater than to give most generous alms to the poor!" (14)

Surely to ransom a soul from Purgatory is a marvelous act, but to snatch a soul from mortal sin is greater for theologians teach that the slightest sin is worse than all the evils of earth, purgatory and hell.

To spend one's time in prayer and contemplation is a very holy work, but St. Teresa says that while contemplation is pleasing to God, it is far more efficacious to leave prayer aside and go to the rescue of a soul in sin. (15)

Who shows the greatest love for God? St. Gregory answers this all important question. Ille in amore Dei major est qui ad ejus amorem plurimos trahit. (16) And it is written that Our Lord revealed to a great saint (17) that it is more pleasing to Him for His faithful servant to instruct and lead a soul to salvation than to spend a year in contemplation.

Si separaveris pretiosum a vili, quasi os meum eris (Jer. 15, 19). If thou wilt separate the precious from the vile, thou shalt be as my mouth," which means, according to St. Gregory, that, if you load souls from evil by exhortation and example, you will be like unto Jesus Christ Himself, who is the mouthpiece of His Almighty Father. (18) St. John Chrysostom explains this same text thus: If you use your words to convert and instruct others, you will be like the Master, who is the mouthpiece of His Father and who became Man and was crucified in order to redeem sinners." (19)

The greatest physical miracle is to bring a dead man back to life, but to raise a soul from sin is greater still. Majus est miraculum peccatorem convertere, quam carne suscitare. (20) The life of the soul is infinitely more precious than to raise up all the dead bodies of all men on earth. The resurrection of the dead is, therefore, but a shadow of the resurrection of the soul from sin.

If God gave a man power to create a new world, imagine how that man would be regarded by his fellow creatures. Yet, St. Augustine says that the conversion of a sinner is a work greater and more admirable than even such a deed for the soul is dearer to God than all created things.(21) And St. John Chrysostom remarks that "nothing, not even the whole world, is worth a single soul."(22) Did not Christ say, "That which my Father has given me, is greater than all"? (John 10, 29) St. Augustine prays thus: "Thou hast made all things, O God, in the visible world for man's body, the body for the soul, and the soul for Thyself." St. John Chrysostom avers that man is the noblest of God's creatures, for all else was created for the use of man, heaven and earth, the stars and all that exists (23).

What greater return could one make to God than to offer one's life for Him? Yet St. John Chrysostom says that to forego martyrdom in order to work for the salvation of souls is more acceptable to Almighty God. He states that this is not his own thought, but that of St. Paul. Writing to the Philippians, the great apostle says that though he desires to be with Christ, he feels it more advantageous to God's glory that he remain with them (Phil. 1, 23-24). St. Teresa envied those who worked for the salvation of souls, more than she did the martyrs. St. Catherine of Siena kissed the ground trodden by those engaged in apostolic ministry. Richard of St. Victor wonders whether it could be possible for heaven to grant a greater favor than to set men aside to work for the spiritual salvation of their fellow men.(24)

What more can I say? Omnium divinatorum divinissimum est cooperari Deo in salutem animarum, writes St. Dionysius.(25) And St. Gregory adds, Nullum omnipotenti Deo tale est sacrificium, quale est zelus animarum(26).

These things being so, who can measure the love of God for those who serve Him in ministering to souls? Who can plumb the depths of the graces that He pours upon them on earth? Who can envision the extent of the reward that He reserves for them in eternity? Who can conceive the horrors and punishments He has Prepared for those guilty of leading souls to ruin? I will meet them as a bear that is robbed of her whelps and I will rend the inner parts of their liver; and I will devour them there as a lion, the beast of the field shall tear them' (Osee 13, 8). Who does not tremble at such words; who does not shudder at the thought of causing the loss of a single soul; who will not give himself wholeheartedly to a work so dear to the heart of God?

O priests of God, what obligations are yours towards Him who called you to share His office of Saviour! How lofty is your calling, for you are the associates of God, of Jesus, of Mary, of the angels, of the apostles and the saints! Work unceasingly, courageously and constantly for Him! Let your only joy be to please Him! Accept whatever difficulties you encounter for His sweet sake!

Take pity on the souls created to His image and likeness, the souls of your brethren. Commiserate the sufferings of Our Lord, the agony He endured, the tears He shed, the blood He poured out, the miseries He bore. Compassionate the Blessed Virgin Mary in the grief she experienced for her Divine Son, and let no day go by without endeavoring to assuage that grief by laboring for souls. Obey the injunction of Sacred Scripture: "Deliver them that are led to death; and those that are drawn to death forbear not to deliver" (Prov. 24, 11).

Pray the Master of the heavenly harvest to send workmen into His vineyard. Imitate the apostles and the disciples, of whom it was said that they were occupied at all times, in public and in private, in preaching Jesus Christ. If your labors do not produce the results you hope for, do not be discouraged. Even if you should keep only one soul from falling into mortal sin, you would have done more good than if you had delivered the world from a universal pestilence.

If a great physician of antiquity<sup>(27)</sup> was given the title of divine for having rid his country of a physical plague, what term should be applied to the physicians of souls who cure men's spiritual ills? Think of a man afflicted with the worst human disease you can imagine, and then visualize the pains and torments of hell, the punishment of one mortal sin. Is there any comparison? Consequently, when by word or example or prayer, you prevent a soul from sinning, or rescue it from the grip of iniquity, you save it from punishment far exceeding the greatest torment possible on earth.

I can hear the Angel of the Apocalypse cry out: "Woe to the earth, and to the sea, because the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, knowing that he hath but a short time" (Apoc. 12, 12), to appease his hatred for souls. Should you not love your brethren more profoundly than their enemy hates them? Should you not be more actuated by the desire to save them than he is to destroy them? If he in his rage deems the time permitted to him to seek their ruin as a mere modicum tempus "a short time," how ardently should you use every minute of your definitely short life to work for good?

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Cease not, then, to work for so lofty a purpose, and the day will dawn when you will reap the rewards of your labors. "And in doing good let us not fail. For in due course we shall reap, not failing" (Gal. 6, 9), for even though you should not always succeed in drawing souls from evil, at least your earnest efforts will be rewarded.

Try, then, to save as many souls as possible and above all apply yourself with most fervent zeal to hearing confessions for in this way you can accomplish untold good. as I shall point out in the following section.

7. Further Considerations

All that has been said surely can inflame the heart of a priest, but I would repeat that, from all the duties of the priest, I would single out the hearing of confessions as the most useful and important. Nothing else even approaches it in its power for good and fruitful results.

Surely a good preacher can win souls, but so can a good confessor. Preaching is the soul of the priestly work, while confession is its heart. Preachers begin the work of salvation. confessors bring it to completion; preachers make known the will of heaven, confessors have it practised; preachers are doctors giving general principles, teaching the faithful to love and serve God, confessors are physicians imparting individual direction and treatment. Preachers pronounce what remedies will be effectual. confessors apply them. Preachers are the trumpets of God, confessors are the soldiers destroying sin; preachers direct the artillery of eternity from a distance and not always accurately., while confessors battle at close quarters.

Preachers are God's watchdogs, who drive away the ravening wolf;

ZEAL FOR THE SALVATION OF SOULS

confessors are His guardians who rescue souls about to be devoured. Preachers exhort, confessors reconcile; preachers are ambassadors of God, speaking in His name, confessors are like little gods, clothed with His power and doing God's work in men's souls. Preachers describe the terrors of His judgments, confessors apply those judgments; preachers are angels announcing the ire of the Creator, confessors are other Noalis saving men in the ark of penance.

Each preacher is an Aaron commissioned to address the Pharaohs of earth and soften their hearts with virtue; each confessor is a new Moses guiding the children of God to the Promised Land through the Red Sea of Christ's Blood.

The preacher is a faithful servant of Abraham, that is, of the heavenly Father, seeking another spouse for the only Son of God; the confessor is a wise Egeus of King Assuerus, adorning other Esthers, that is, immortal souls, with the ornament of divine grace to make them pleasing to the King of heaven and earth.

The preacher is a Saul mustering an army to battle against the Philistines, that is, the devils; the confessor is a David killing Goliath, that is, sin, with the sword of prayer when he gives absolution to the sinner.

The preacher is a prophet crying to those who enter the temple of the Lord: Audite verbum Domini; haec dicit Dominus; declaring to men the promises of the divine bounty and the threats of divine justice; predicting eternal reward for the good and an eternal punishment for the wicked. The confessor is a Levite slaying the victims of the sacrifice, that is, sinful souls; making them die to sin; washing them in the Precious Blood of the Lamb; placing them in the sacred hands of Jesus Christ. the Sovereign Priest, that He may offer them in sacrifice to His Heavenly Father.

The preacher is a forerunner of the Son of God, preparing the ways of the Lord; the confessor is a disciple cleansing, adorning, and making ready the upper rooms of men's hearts for the coming of Christ in Holy Communion.

Finally, the preacher announces the mysteries and sufferings of the Saviour, while the confessor applies them and their fruits to souls.

146-

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

The preacher denounces Satan publicly without fear; the confessor drives the devil from men's hearts, delivering them from tyranny and placing them in the bosom of the Father.

From these considerations learn the excellence and importance of this great function of your priestly life. Know, too, how useful and necessary it is and how pleasing to Him who loves souls so much. Your zeal for its careful discharge should be all-consuming. If the angels know the meaning of jealousy, they would envy the priest who is privileged to share a ministry so pleasing to God, and so efficacious for the souls for whom the Saviour shed His Blood.

If, then, you have a spark of love for God, be assiduous in carefully discharging this part of your sacerdotal office. Cherish it and consider yourself honored to have been chosen by God for this divine work. Be zealous in discharging your work in the confessional; seek to acquire the ultimate of those qualities which will fit you to be an excellent confessor.

CHAPTER III(*)

SCIENCE OF THE CONFESSOR

THE PRIEST who does not possess the science necessary to exercise the ministry of confession is culpable in the eyes of God and is incapable of discharging this great duty.

Imagine a doctor seeking to practise medicine without sufficient training. He would be a murderer, who, instead of healing his patients, would soon destroy them. Yet, the priest, who is in truth the physician of souls, can become their destroyer if he is not fitted for the work of the confessional.

As an ignorant judge would do irreparable harm in attempting to dispense the law, even more so the priest lacking a thorough familiarity with theology would be guilty of criminal negligence. He would cause innumerable sins, making false consciences, obliging people to make restitution when they are not bound, refusing absolution when it should be given, granting it when it should be withheld. Truly, the Scripture says: If the blind lead the blind, both fall into the pit" (Matt. 15, 14).

Science is, therefore, the second qualification for the confessor, and this science supposes eight requisites:

1. The priest must be thoroughly familiar with the extent of his jurisdiction. 2. He must understand the matter and form of the Sacrament and must know what makes it valid or invalid. 3. He should have a complete knowledge of sins against the commandments of God and the precepts of the Church. 4. He must be able to distinguish between sins, mortal and venial, and must know the circumstances that change

(*) The chapter dealing with the judiciary power of the priest, which appears in Oeuvres COMPLÈTES, Vol. IV, P. 203 ff., is omitted in this edition.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

the nature or increase the gravity of each sin. 5. He should know the ordinary censures and irregularities. 6. He should know the impediments of marriage. 7. He should be able to make sinners realize the horror of sin, and by his direction and guidance lead them to contrition and a firm purpose of amendment. 8. He must be able to suggest remedies for each soul; he must be able to point out the duties and obligations of every state in life and to give persons suitable penances.

To acquire this science, it is necessary that the priest study moral theology and that he be conversant with the best standard works(1) on the administration of the Sacrament of Penance.

(1). St. John Eudes recommends several works on confession that are not available today. Father Cousin, editor of the 1732 French edition of The Good Confessor, adds to the list of books given by the Saint "the second and third parts of the Summa Theologica." There is undoubtedly no better handbook on moral theology than these parts of the Summa.

CHAPTER IV(*)

CHARITY OF THE CONFESSOR

CHARITY is a most necessary qualification for any confessor. He should be consumed with love for sinners. He should be filled with kindness and mercy. He may thunder and fulminate in the pulpit, but in the Sacred Tribunal of Penance he must speak only words of gentleness and encouragement. One catches more flies with a spoonful of honey than with a cask of vinegar.

The priest should enter the confessional with a heart consumed only with the desire of assisting penitents, and should receive, in a spirit of graciousness and helpfulness those who present themselves. No exception should be made. Rich and poor, great and humble, adults and children, all alike should experience the same spirit of understanding.

Remember that in the confessional the penitent addresses you as "Father." Treat him, then, with paternal kindness, overlooking any shortcomings he may have, impressing upon him the seriousness of what he does, while at the same time refraining from harshness. Avoid familiarity under any guise, but seek to banish unwarranted fear lest it interfere with a frank and open confession. Be spiritually helpful. Point out that Christ died for the sinner and extends complete pardon for sin to the soul whose sorrow is sincere and whose purpose of amendment is firm.

If you observe that the penitent is in a state of perplexity and needs help in examining his conscience, be ready to assist him. Urge him to make a complete and accurate confession of his sins, see that he avoid long and meaningless explanations; assist him in making a succinct picture of his wrongdoing, glossing over nothing, omitting, minimizing or withholding nothing, but making a full and clear accusation of every mortal sin of which he believes himself guilty. Console the afflicted, showing them how to turn their trials and sorrows into merit.

(*). If the reader compares this chapter to that of the original French, he will find that it has been considerably shortened. Nothing important, however, has been omitted in the translation.

CHAPTER V

PRUDENCE OF THE CONFESSOR

Besides ZEAL, science and charity, prudence is also required, for without it you will encounter many pitfalls and cause grievous harm to your penitents. Study, therefore, the following rules that should carefully be observed in the confessional.

Examine the penitent according to age, sex and condition. Be careful not to arouse wrong thoughts or to suggest unknown sins. Do not interrupt him during his confession, but wait until he has finished. Treat each penitent individually. For example, if you notice that a person seems to be ashamed to confess his sins, encourage him by reminding him that priests are not angels but men who, being human themselves, understand the faults and frailties of others. Remind him, too, that although it is human to fall into sin, it would be positively diabolical to remain in that state; that whatever is revealed in the confessional becomes a really sacred trust because of the seal of confession. Recall to his mind the fact that God commands us to confess our sins to priests and that we should do so for love of Him and in honor of the shame which the God-man bore on the Cross because of our iniquities. It is far better to experience a little shame in confessing a sin to another man than to have it revealed before all the angels and men on the Day of judgment.

With a bold or flippant person, however, adopt the opposite course. Remind him that he is actually kneeling at the feet of Christ, the Supreme judge, as represented in the person of the priest; that he is not confessing his sins to a mere man, but to God whose place the priest occupies. Induce him to think of himself as a criminal who has merited punishment by his evil doing. With patience seek to have him understand that his soul's salvation is at stake, impressing upon him the gravity of making a bad confession. Point out to him that at the hour of death he will have to render a strict accounting to God for such a terrible sin.

Use great discretion regarding the Sixth Commandment. Pray to the Holy Ghost for wisdom so as not to ask too much or too little. Inquire cautiously concerning the sins confessed, but be careful not to destroy innocence or to disedify.

Likewise, approach the subject of restitution with great care, being mindful of the problems involved. This applies also to the breaking of sinful associations and the avoidance of the occasions of sin. If it is obvious that the penitent did certain things in good faith or invincible ignorance, use extreme tact in enlightening his mind.

Suggest remedies suitable to each particular soul. Give a penance which will be at once salutary and easy for the penitent. This requires prudence so that the penance imposed may not be an impossible task. Be lenient rather than harsh in this matter. In refusing or deferring absolution, be particularly careful to act in such a way that you will not attract the attention of persons near the confessional.

The confessor should imitate the wisdom of the serpent and safeguard his own soul lest in helping others he himself be lost. In this regard, four things are suggested.

First, learn to humble yourself by the knowledge of your own unworthiness and sinfulness, seeing your own image in the crime of your penitents, always being fearful that you, too, may fall unless sustained by divine grace.

Secondly, put into practice the injunction of Sacred Scripture: "Let your modesty be known to all men" (Phil. 4, 5), practising mortification of the eyes, giving an example of true priestly deportment at all times when administering the Sacrament of Penance. If you are careful to observe exterior modesty, God will protect you so that your interior life will not be destroyed and the beauty of your soul will not be contaminated. Yet, this can be done only by special grace from God, which will always be given to those who seek it with humility.

Thirdly, have a great horror of anything contrary to holy purity, observing the following seven recommendations: 1. In treating of the Sixth Commandment, renounce everything that is contrary to the spirit of purity, begging God for an increase of his virtue He loves so much. 2. Ask nothing out of mere curiosity. 3. Concerning sins against purity, question the penitent only when necessary. 4. In the confessional, avoid anything approaching familiarity with those of the opposite sex. 5. Keep the eyes modestly cast down. 6. Close the heart and mind against every human affection. 7. If you should transgress in any of these matters, make a profound act of humility, and, correcting the fault, beg God's grace for the future and implore the assistance of our Blessed Lady to obtain it.

Fourthly, to preserve your own soul while working for the salvation of others, cultivate constantly the spirit of piety. The following chapter will treat of this important qualification.

CHAPTER VI

PIETY OF THE CONFESSOR

IT IS NOT without reason that the great Apostle, St. Paul, urges his disciple, Timothy, to practise piety, declaring it to be a great treasure, useful in all things (i Tim. 4, 8). A priest animated by the spirit of piety is a worthy instrument in God's hands to accomplish marvels for the salvation of souls.

In the sacred tribunal the confessor frees souls from the misery of sin and forms the Son of God within them anew. He inspires penitents with sentiments of purest devotion, makes them taste the sweetness of God's love, teaches them to know the meaning of true piety, helps them in the practice of the other Christian virtues and at the same time sanctifies himself.

What is piety? Do you wish to know it and to possess it? Practise mental prayer. 1. assure you that if you do not practise mental prayer you will never grasp the meaning of true piety, and, consequently, you will not be truly fitted to hear confessions. It is not sufficient for a priest to drive sin out of souls by absolution; he must form in them the Christian virtues, whose foundation, says St. Ambrose, is piety. Pietas virtutum omnium fundamentum.(1)

How can you infuse piety into a soul unless you yourself possess it? How can you nourish if you have no food to give? The more pious the confessor is, the more effectively he will work for the salvation of souls. Truly then, he should strive unceasingly to acquire and practise this indispensable virtue. For this end, three things are suggested. The first concerns what the confessor should do before entering the confessional (1). In Psalm. 118.

PIETY OF THE CONFESSOR

fessional; the second what he should do while he is there; and the third, what he should do after leaving the confessional.

1. Before entering the confessional, he should spend some time in recollection before the Blessed Sacrament to recall the importance of what he is about to do. In the Sacrament of Penance he must be a saviour of souls, destroying sin and opening heaven by the infusion of grace. He must remember that he is about to apply to men the fruits of the Redemption, to fill up in souls those things that are wanting of the sufferings of Christ (Col. 1, 24), and to make Jesus live and reign in them. These considerations should arouse within him a great desire to discharge his duty in a fitting manner. He must make an act of humility in view of his unworthiness and incapacity, and must be filled with mistrust of self lest he become like the torch that consumes and destroys itself while bestowing light on others.

He must put his entire confidence in Our Lord, protesting that his only desire is to serve and to please His Master, begging for the light and graces he needs. If necessary, he must go to confession or at least make an act of contrition, so as to have his own soul pure and holy. He must pray to the Blessed Virgin Mary, the angels and saints for guidance. He must recall that many saints now in heaven heard confessions with holy dispositions and he must ask the Holy Ghost to grant him the same dispositions. Thus he will dispose his soul in such a way that he will not deprive God of the honor and glory that must be rendered to the Father of Eternal Mercy by the worthy administration of the Sacrament of Penance. Let him be resolved to place no obstacle in the path of the rich graces which God wishes to impart to those who come to confession.

2. While in the confessional, the priest must elevate his mind and heart to God and follow the suggestions enumerated herewith to maintain the spirit of his saintly work.

When the first penitent enters the confessional, the confessor must think of the incomparable love of God the Father who gave His Only begotten Son for this very person, and thus give himself to God to work with the same love for the salvation of the soul before him. As the second comes, he must consider the great love of God the Son for the penitent and unite himself to this divine love. As the third approaches, he must recall the infinite love of the Holy Ghost for this soul and cooperate with Him for the same purpose. When the fourth penitent kneels down, the priest must envision the ineffable love of the Son of God who became incarnate for the salvation of this very soul. The confessor then continues to recall the divine love manifested in the other mysteries of Holy Faith, imploring Almighty God to apply the fruits of each to the soul of each penitent.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Let the priest also dwell upon the incomparable charity of the maternal heart of Mary, begging her blessing and assistance upon the work in hand. He might also invoke the saints as well as the martyrs, confessors, patriarchs and apostles.

This method will help the confessor to maintain the spirit of recollection and to cultivate a great love of prayer. Likewise, it will render the task of hearing confessions less burdensome and fatiguing, for love and fervor will fill his heart.

It is well for the priest to keep a crucifix in the confessional to be a constant reminder of the ardent love of the Sacred Heart of Jesus for souls. So, too, in difficulties it will urge the confessor to seek light and strength from the Divine Saviour, especially when dealing with sins against the Sixth Commandment.

3. After confession, the priest should kneel humbly before the altar to beseech Christ's mercy on behalf of his penitents, and to ask forgiveness for any errors of judgment he may have unknowingly committed while engaged in his sacerdotal labor in the confessional. He should thank Our Lord Jesus Christ for the graces bestowed on the confessor and the penitents, and ask Him to compensate for any deficiency in himself or in the persons who have come to confession. He should beg the Blessed Virgin Mary, the angels and the saints to offer to the Son of God every one whom Divine Providence has directed to his ministry, with the earnest prayer that none of these souls may perish.

CHAPTER V11(1)

FIDELITY TO THE SECRECY OF CONFESSION

ONE OF the most important qualifications of the good confessor is fidelity to the secrecy of confession. This obligation is established on a foundation of divine law, natural law and ecclesiastical law. Consequently, a breach of this weighty trust can never be considered light or unimportant.

It is, therefore, always a grievous sin to reveal anything heard in confession. A priest may not refer, either directly or indirectly, during the lifetime or even after the death of the penitent, to matters revealed to him in the sacred tribunal. He may not mention anything that has been discussed with the penitent before confession with a view to receiving the Sacrament of Penance. Nor may he speak outside the confessional, even in conversation with the penitent himself, of anything revealed there unless express or tacit permission is given. Neither may the confessor mention the sin of an accomplice to his partner in crime, even as a means of urging him to confess his share of the guilt; nor may the priest speak of hearing the confession of one who has come to him secretly and has stated or implied that he wishes the fact to remain unknown. He may not discuss sins which are widely publicized, but are known sacramentally to the priest. The confessor is also forbidden to discuss with a fellow-priest the sins of a penitent who has been heard by both, nor may he refer in general terms to the sins confessed by people living in a small place or by the members of a religious community.

Penances must not be revealed, especially when they are such as are customarily associated with mortal sins. Peculiarities of penitents should not be discussed when they are known only through confession. Likewise, when a priest has heard only a few penitents in a certain locality, he should refrain from praising the virtues of any particular one or from saying that his sins were only venial, because this might result in making known indirectly the faults of the others and in insinuating that they confessed mortal sins.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

The confessor is not permitted to employ the knowledge obtained in the confessional to guide his actions, whether in doing or omitting anything, without the penitent's permission, if by so doing he runs the risk of revealing indirectly the sin confessed.

If a difficult case of conscience should arise, the confessor may consult another priest so long as he can do this without revealing in any way the identity of the penitent.

It is dangerous to mention any matter which the confessor has heard discussed outside the confessional as well as within its walls. It would be wiser not to mention the subject.

If a person should say to the priest, "I am telling you such and such a thing as if I were in the confessional," he is obliged by the natural law to respect the truth, but is not held by the secrecy of the confessional, even though the priest should believe so, because the seal of confession applies only to sacramental confession.

There are other persons held by the same secrecy as the confessor, namely the superior who has granted permission to absolve from a reserved sin, if the priest has inadvertently or imprudently revealed the person for whom the absolution is asked. Likewise the priest who is taken into consultation, when the identity of the penitent has been revealed involuntarily or with the consent of the person concerned. Those who through malicious curiosity or accident have overheard the confession of another person are bound strictly to the secrecy of confession. Interpreters used to translate confessions in foreign languages are also bound by the same obligation.

When giving a mission in a parish, a preacher should be careful not to speak, even in general terms, of sins that prevail in that parish, lest he be guilty of breaking the seal of confession.

Finally, every confessor should be most faithful to avoid the slightest mention of what he has heard in confession because such an indiscretion gives scandal to the laity, makes the Sacrament of Penance odious,

FIDELITY TO THE SECRECY OF THE CONFESSION

robs people of their liberty to confess their sins, and is the cause of many sacrileges with the consequent loss of souls. God will demand a strict account of confessors who are too free in speaking about things that should be wrapped in perpetual silence, and, so far as possible, banished from their thoughts.

CHAPTER VIII

SEVEN POINTS TO BE OBSERVED BY CONFESSORS

IT DOES NOT surprise me that the Holy Ghost, formulating the Apostles' Creed has placed among the great dogmas of faith the mystery expressed in the words, "I believe in the remission of sins." This indeed is the purpose and end of all the other mysteries. "This is all the fruit, that the sin thereof should be taken away" (Isa. 27, 9). This is a wonder surpassing all visible miracles performed by Christ on the bodies of men, excelling in the same degree as the soul excels the body and as truth is above the shadow. The miracles performed by the Master on men's bodies were but shadows of those He effects upon their souls in confession. There the blind are made to see, the lepers are cleansed, and the dead are brought back to life.

O God, what admirable changes are wrought in men's souls through the Sacrament of Penance! In a moment the soul passes from the depths of evil to the heights of grace, from death to life, from hell to paradise. He who was a slave of the devil becomes a child of God; he who belonged to the Prince of Darkness becomes the possession of the Prince of Light. He who was the abode of the demons passes from an abyss of misery into an ocean of beatitude. O loving Saviour, what graces Thou didst bestow upon us in instituting this Sacrament! How thankful we should be to Thee!

So great is this grace that even if venial sin alone were effaced by the reception of the Sacrament of Penance, that in itself would be more precious than deliverance from all human ills.

What renders this great favor of God so much more bountiful is that He does not content Himself with forgiving sin, but also gives to man this same power. Weak as we are, encompassed with frailty,

SEVEN POINTS TO BE OBSERVED BY CONFESSORS

we share the prerogative of God made Man. O admirable power of God, shared with His creatures! O power divine! Quis potest dimittere peccata nisi solus Deus? (Mark 2, 7).

But the greater the grace, the more rigorous will be the accounting demanded and the more culpable those who make improper use of the Sacrament of Penance. Not one single detail must ever be omitted that might help to exercise the holy ministry worthily. Seven recommendations are appended here.

1. Preparation

If zeal for souls has brought you to the confessional, you will leave nothing undone for the accomplishment of this work. You must see that the penitent begins his confession properly and say yourself the words: Dominus sit in corde tuo, et in labiis tuis, ut rite confitearis omnia peccata tua, in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti. Amen. Open your heart and show the fulness of your desire to help him. Urge him to make three acts: a) an act of renunciation; b) an act of oblation; c) an act of devotion to the Blessed Virgin Mary, to the angels and to the saints. These acts will serve to drive away the evil spirit and open the floodgates of grace.

2. Instruction

All theologians agree that a knowledge of the principal mysteries of religion is necessary to eternal salvation. "This is eternal life that they may know thee, the only true God and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent" (John 17, 3). Without this knowledge no one can properly receive the sacrament.

A confessor cannot, without incriminating himself before God, administer the Sacrament of Penance to a person who is ignorant of the fundamental mysteries of our holy faith. The priest must be satisfied therefore that his penitent has a sufficient knowledge of the Blessed Trinity, the Incarnation, Redemption and judgment. He is also obliged by necessity of precept to know and accept the Our Father, the Creed and the Commandments of God and of the Church and whatever is essential to the proper reception of Penance and Holy Eucharist.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

3. Interrogation or Examination

The confessor must not be satisfied merely to hear confessions. He must take the trouble to question his penitents, following the experience of so many priests who realize the necessity of such questioning. What excuse could a confessor make if, through his carelessness, certain souls did not fully accuse themselves of their transgressions?

Does not the judge in civil life question the culprit? Why should not the spiritual judge do likewise? Give careful attention to this subject, questioning those whom you believe to be insufficiently prepared.

4. Contrition and Attrition

Perfect contrition, or imperfect, which is attrition, is as essential to the Sacrament of Penance as confession. Consequently, the priest who wishes to apply the fruit of this Sacrament to souls is no less obliged to help them to conceive sorrow for their sins than he is to hear their confession well.

For this purpose, it is necessary to point out to the penitent his principal sins, especially those to which he is most attached or which are most dangerous. Make him see the ugliness of sin. Teach him to know that while in mortal sin he is in the grip of Satan, dead to grace and destined to be damned. Make him realize that there are many in hell who have not fallen so low as he; that he has delivered to Satan his soul that cost so much to the Son of God. For the satisfaction and passing pleasure of a moment, he has doomed himself to suffer hell forever. He has exchanged the eternal for the transitory.

You should also impress upon the penitent that in spite of having received so many graces he has wasted them all, giving his body and Soul to evil, using his faculties to serve Christ's enemies. Every time a sinner commits a mortal sin he crucifies anew the Son of God (Heb. 6,6).

In recalling these things to the sinner, you must be careful not to discourage him, lest he turn completely from God. Let kindness lead him to a realization of his sins. Tell the penitent that he mentions the true state of his soul only in order that he may make an act of perfect contrition or at least attrition, either of which must come from God; for it IS a divine gift, man being incapable of supernatural sorrow.

You should urge the sinner to make a firm purpose of amendment and to have a resolute intention of avoiding occasions which have hitherto led him into sin.

5. Remedies

The confessor is not only a teacher, a judge and a mediator; he is also the physician of souls. Consequently, he must not only banish sin from men's souls, but must also apply remedies to prevent its recurrence. He must bind up the wounds of their souls, assuage their spiritual ills and help sinners to recover completely. Likewise, he must suggest preventive methods to ensure their future safety from such hideous diseases of the soul. He must urge them to accept and use the remedies he suggests just as an ordinary doctor would insist that his medicine be taken; he must impress upon them that they are spiritually ill, and that they must use the remedies he is giving them. Otherwise, they will surely die for all eternity.

Six efficacious means are herewith suggested for spiritual patients.

1. Avoid evil companions and places which lead to sin.

2. Go to confession and Holy Communion, frequently. Choose a good confessor. Cultivate the Proper dispositions required to draw the fullest fruits from the Sacraments. Have a constant devotion to the Mass. Assist piously at Vespers and listen attentively to the preaching of the Word of God.

3. Before beginning your work in the morning kneel humbly at your bedside and adore God, renewing your good resolutions to avoid sin. At the close of the day, make an examination of conscience; recall your firm determination to overcome sin. Ask the assistance of the Blessed Virgin Mary and of all the saints.

4. Cultivate an ardent devotion to the Mother of God. Since this devotion is of such paramount importance, every confessor should endeavor to implant it firmly in the hearts of his penitents, recommending some particular acts in her honor daily, counselling them to take her as protectress and guide, saying the beads, wearing the scapular;

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

reciting the Litany of the Blessed Virgin Mary. He should also urge them to unite the devotion to St. Joseph to that of Our Lady.

5. Read good books of devotion and piety, such as The Imitation of Christ and the Lives of the Saints. Parents should be reminded of their duty in this respect and see that their children make use of good Catholic literature.

6. In addition to these five means suggested, another most fruitful and salutary practice may be added, the annual retreat. The making of a retreat in a monastery or convent among religious is an excellent aid to piety and a consoling help to persons who are really in earnest about their eternal salvation. The confessor should, therefore, urge his penitents to take advantage of the many closed retreats offered the faithful.

These general remedies being helpful to all are strongly recommended. Almsgiving should also be urged and works of mercy, both spiritual and corporal.

Since these things are all so necessary for conversion, it is obvious that a person who would object to carrying out the confessor's recommendations would lack the proper dispositions for a betterment of life and for the reception of the grace of absolution.

6. Penance and Absolution

The confessor should be mindful of three things in connection with penance and absolution.

First, the penance he gives should be made up of various prayers or acts, for example, five Our Fathers, the beads, a prayer or a psalm, alms deeds, fasting on a certain day or hearing Mass. He should not -confuse the penitent by giving him a penance made up of a number of these prayers and acts mixed together. Let him rather choose one or other of them.

Secondly, the Council of Trent recommends a penance in conformity with the sins committed and the persons involved, lest confessors, by giving penances which do not suit the gravity of the offence, become participators by connivance in the penitents' sins. St. Charles reminds priests of this same fact when he counsels them to give a penance commensurate with the sin committed, following the custom and practice of Sacred Scripture, where we find the guilty obliged to do penance in proportion to their crimes.

Thirdly, the penitent should be exhorted to perform his penance as soon as possible. The priest should encourage him to do the acts or say the prayers with a deep spirit of piety and with a firm resolution not to fall into sin again, and to make voluntary acts of virtue in order to draw greater graces upon himself.

Finally, everything should be done to arouse in his soul a lively sense of sorrow. The confessor must help him to make a fervent act of contrition, assuring him that if he has confessed his sins as well as possible, and has the requisite contrition, his soul will be purified by the absolution he is about to receive, just as truly as if he were to stand in the presence of Jesus Christ Himself and hear from His lips the words of pardon he craves.

The words of absolution must be pronounced with attention and devotion. The priest must be mindful that at the very moment he speaks these precious words, the forgiveness of heaven is granted, the Blood of the Lamb is applied to the penitent, and the life of grace is restored to his soul.

7. After Absolution

First, the confessor must tell the sinner what a great favor he has just received in having his sins forgiven and in being snatched from the jaws of hell. The priest should remind the sinner that a moment ago he was a child of the devil, and now is a son of God, and that the deliverance which has just come to him surpasses even the deliverance of an afflicted man freed from the most grievous sufferings.

Secondly, the priest should exhort the penitent earnestly not to waste the grace of God, but to conserve it with fidelity. Then the confessor should make him understand that he should prefer to lose even his most cherished possession rather than separate himself from God again by sin.

Thirdly, the priest should urge him to go to the altar and, kneeling before Our Lord in the blessed Sacrament, he should thank God for His infinite mercy and goodness in having freed him from the fetters of sin. Then, the confessor should have the penitent say a prayer to

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

the Blessed Virgin Mary to invoke her protection, to thank her for this grace, remembering that all blessings come to us through the hands of Mary.

Every confessor should pray daily for his penitents that they may receive the strength and help they need to live up to the instruction they have received.

The priest should send his penitents away with a wish and a blessing: "Go in peace," or "May God bless you."

CHAPTER IX

FURTHER ADVICE TO CONFESSORS

TO THE SUGGESTIONS already made in the preceding chapters, we add the following advice because its practical application is of great importance to the confessor.

All confessors should be extremely careful not to contradict or condemn one another. They should be closely united in a spirit of charity, following the same rule of conduct and the same maxims of the Gospel, so that the Holy Ghost may guide, bless and sanctify their harmonious work. Thus their penitents will be impressed and encouraged to follow their injunctions. Let confessors, then, sedulously observe all that has been recommended in this book, as well as what is to follow.

The priest, representing the Son of God as judge of mankind, should always give the appearance of understanding his great responsibility. He should wear his cassock and surplice when hearing confessions, occupying the confessional or some suitable place in the church where he may be seen by all. His very bearing and manner should give edification.

The confessor must radiate the good odor of Christ everywhere, and by word and example further the work of Our Divine Lord in humility, patience and charity.

The penitent must be taught to kneel in all humility in the confessional, with hands joined and eyes cast down or looking at the Crucified Saviour. The confessor should not speak in a loud tone nor permit the penitent to do so, lest their voices reach those waiting Outside.

If there arises a question of reconciliation or restitution, or of some proximate occasion of sin, the confessor should not wait until the end of the confession to dispose the penitent, but should do so at the moment of questioning, when he finds him guilty of one of these sins.

The confessor must not ask useless questions, but examine the penitent on necessary points. He must insist on important details, such as the number of times each mortal sin has been committed, and the length of time that has elapsed since his last confession.

If discord or enmity exists towards another, the priest should encourage the penitent to complete reconciliation, even offering to assist in this if necessary.

If one is engaged in court actions or litigation, the confessor must urge him to try to settle the dispute amicably, if it is possible.

If the penitent should accuse himself of having spoken against his neighbor's reputation, the priest should oblige him to repair the damage. If the statements are true but not generally known, he should be told to endeavor to undo the harm caused, by admitting that he was wrong in having spoken so, then to say whatever good things he can about the person he has sinned against. If the statement is false, he should strive to contradict it, in the presence of the persons who heard it, and in every place where it is possible any harm may have been done.

The confessor should advise the penitent to ask pardon of him who has suffered. Each private individual, being the master of his own reputation, may forgive in entirety the evil spoken against him, and consequently, the sinner is not held to any further reparation. I say "private individual" as distinct from a public man, who is not master of his own reputation which is necessary for the public good.

If the detraction be of long standing, and, perhaps, entirely forgotten by all, then it is better left unnoticed, lest in seeking to rectify the wrong done, greater trouble may be stirred up. In this case, it would be better to counsel the sinner to say everything he can in favor of the person involved and enhance his good standing in the community.

In dealing with a person held to restore another's goods, here is the course of action to be followed. The confessor should first find out whether the penitent is bound to make restitution. In cases where the person is about to discharge the obligation, and suggests that he would prefer to make restitution anonymously, the priest should assist him if it be deemed expedient.

Married couples living in dissension or actually separated should not be absolved if they cannot give a legitimate reason for their condition.

The confessor should make the penitent cognizant of the duties of his state. Parents, teachers, children and servants should be carefully instructed in their respective obligations.

If there is question of vows that the penitent cannot fulfil, the confessor may commute them for easier things, for example, instead of a pilgrimage or something similar that the penitent has promised to carry out, it would be well to oblige him to make several confessions and communions.

CHAPTER X (*)

AN EFFECTIVE WAY TO CONVERT SINNERS

IN CONCLUSION I shall set down an instruction imparted by the Most Blessed Mother of God,<sup>(1)</sup> concerning the manner in which one should deal with sinners, in public and private, in order to effect their conversion.

When you preach, go into the pulpit bearing with you the cannon, the fire and the terrible weapons of the Word of God, to combat sin and destroy it in the souls of men. When you must address a sinner to bring him back to God, treat him with gentleness, patience, kindness and charity. Deal with him as if he were a sick man covered with wounds and ulcers. Do not show anger towards him, but act like the wise physician who, treating a very sick patient, would display no impatience and anger but rather understanding and pity.

The first thing to be done to effect the cure of the sick soul, that is, the sinner, is to arouse him to the point where he will discover the seriousness of his condition. Help him as much as possible, showing him kindness and compassion.

When the penitent realizes his true condition, you must bathe his injuries with warm wine, that is, you must shower him with every affection, speak to him with patience and charity, and at the same time make him understand that you seek only the glory of God in bringing him back to his Maker. Impress upon his mind the great love and mercy which Christ cherishes for those sinners who return to Him.

(*). In the French edition a number of chapters are devoted to a very detailed examination of conscience. Cf. Oeuvres Complètes, Vol. IV, P. 294 ff. These chapters have been omitted in the present English edition.

(1). This effective way of converting sinners was given to St. John Eudes by the Blessed Virgin Mary through Marie des Vallées, a saintly woman of Coutances. See footnote, P. 136.

AN EFFECTIVE WAY TO CONVERT SINNERS

Recall the conversion of St. Peter, St. Paul, St. Mary Magdalen, St. Augustine, the good thief and countless others.

Anoint his wounds with oil, that is, with the words of Sacred Scripture and the living examples of Christ, His Mother and the Saints. For example, if there be question of inducing one to forgive an enemy, show him the charity of Christ forgiving His enemies even at the hour of death.

Above all else, banish bitterness from your own life. Never bring the vinegar of bitterness to a sinner, but show patience and kindness at all times, even if the one you are trying to help should become angry with you.

If all these expedients should fail, exhort him to pray to God for strength and grace to triumph over self and to be converted. At least, have him allow you to pray in his name. As an effective prayer the "Hail Mary, Daughter of God the Father" is suggested.<sup>(2)</sup>

(2). The prayer that St. John Eudes mentions here is a beautiful salutation to the Blessed Virgin Mary. It is recited daily in the two religious orders founded by him, the Congregation of Jesus and Mary and the Order of Our Lady of Charity. Priests and religious will find this prayer very helpful, especially when dealing with hardened sinners.

Ave, Maria, Filia Dei Patris,

Hail Mary, Daughter of God the Father,

Ave, Maria, Mater Dei Filii,
 Ave, Maria, Sponsa Spiritus sancti,
 Ave, Maria, templum totius Divinitatis,
 Ave, Maria, candidum liliū fulgidae semperque tranquillae Trinitatis,
 Ave, Maria, rosa praeifulgida caelicae amoenitatis,
 Ave, Maria, Virgo virginum, Virgo fidelis, de qua nasci, et de cujus lacte pasci Rex caelorum voluit,
 Ave, Maria, Regina Martyrum, cujus animam doloris gladius pertransivit, Ave, Maria, Domina mundi, cui data est omnis potestas in caelo, et in terra, Ave, Maria, Regina cordis mei, Mater vita, dulcedo, et spes mea carissima, Ave. Mada, Mater amabilis,
 Ave, Maria, Mater admirabilis,
 Ave, Maria, Mater misericordiae,

Hail Mary, Mother of God the Son,
 Hail Mary, Spouse of the Holy Ghost,
 Hail Mary, Temple of the Divinity,
 Hail Mary, Immaculate Lily of the resplendent and ever-peaceful Trinity,
 Hail Mary, Radiant Rose of Heavenly Fragrance,
 Hail Mary, Virgin of Virgins of whom the King of Kings did will to be born,
 Hail Mary, Queen of Martyrs, whose soul was pierced with a sword of sorrow,
 Hail Mary, Queen of the Universe, to whom all power has been given in heaven and on earth,
 Hail Mary, Queen of my Heart, My Mother, My life, My consolation, and my dearest hope, Hail Mary, Mother Most Amiable,
 Hail Mary, Mother Most Admirable,
 Hail Mary, Mother of Mercy,

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

If in spite of your efforts the sinner still remains hardened in heart, then be sure that God will reward your efforts and will repay you just as truly as if you had succeeded.

Ave, Maria, gratia plena, Dominus tecum;
 Benedicta tu in mulieribus;
 Et benedictus fructus ventris tui, Jesus;
 Et benedictus sponsus tuus Joseph;
 Et benedictus pater tuus Joachim;
 Et benedicta mater tua Anna;
 Et benedictus filius tuus Joannis;
 Et benedictus Angelus tuus Gabriel;
 Et benedictus Pater aeternus, qui te elegit;
 Et benedictus Filius, qui te amavit;
 Et benedictus Spiritus sanctus, qui te sponsavit;
 Et benedicti in aeternum omnes qui benedicunt tibi, et qui diligunt te. Amen.

Hail Mary, full of grace, the Lord is with thee;
 Blessed art thou amongst women;
 And blessed is the fruit of thy womb, Jesus;
 And blessed be thy spouse, St. Joseph;
 And blessed by thy father, St. Joachim;
 And blessed by thy mother, St. Anne;
 And blessed be thy adopted son, St. John;
 And blessed be thy angel, St. Gabriel;
 And blessed be the Eternal Father who chose thee;
 And blessed be the Divine Son who loved thee;
 And blessed be the Holy Ghost who espoused thee;
 And blessed be forever all those who bless and love thee. Amen.

Part IV

MEDITATIONS ON THE PRIESTLY OBLIGATIONS'

FIRST MEDITATION

General Obligations of the Priesthood

FIRST POINT

DIGNITY AND HOLINESS OF THE PRIESTHOOD

CONSIDER the dignity, the greatness and the holiness of the priestly state and what it means to be a priest.

To be a priest is to be an angel, for Sacred Scripture calls priests angels inasmuch as they perform on earth the duties of the angels in heaven. God wished to be surrounded and served by angels on earth as well as in heaven. These earthly angels are His priests who possess greater power than the angels, the cherubim or the seraphim in His heavenly kingdom. Priests therefore should be, if it were possible, purer than, angels, more luminous than the cherubim, more consumed with divine love than the seraphim. They must be lucernae ardentes et lucentes (John 5, 35), so that they may enlighten and inflame souls with the fire of eternity.

(1). These meditations were originally 'Part V' of A Memorial of the Ecclesiastical Life. They make up a very complete review of the obligations of the priesthood. The fact that some of them are lengthy should not deter the reader from using them. In this respect it might be well to recall the saint's advice in a short foreword to A Memorial of the Ecclesiastical Life: "If you find the meditations too long or too wide in scope, you may confine yourself to a single point or two, according to your requirements."

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

To be a priest is to be a visible god on earth. All Christians are called gods in Sacred Scripture: "I said you are gods" (John 10, 34), but priests enjoy this prerogative in a much more eminent degree than the rest of the faithful.

Priests are gods in power and dignity, since they are clothed with the infinite power of God. If it were not through this divine power, how could they bring God down upon the altar at the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass? How could they form Him in the hearts of the faithful and give the Holy Ghost to their souls? How could they forgive sin and communicate sanctifying grace?

God gives His divine power to priests in such an exalted degree that they may effectuate many marvels that He alone accomplishes.

He created this world and can create others. To his priests He gave the power to produce Christ in the Blessed Eucharist, which is indeed greater than to create an infinite number of physical worlds.

The supreme effect of the Father's power is to beget His Only Son from all eternity and to give Him to us by the Incarnation.

The greatest act that Christ ever performed on earth was to immolate Himself on the cross for us, and to give Himself in continual sacrifice for the glory of His Father.

The most sublime work of the Holy Ghost was to form the Sacred Body of Christ in the womb of the Virgin Mother, to form the Mystical Body of Christ, His Church, and to apply to men's souls the fruits of the Passion.

Yet, did not God entrust all these powers to His priests? Is it not their ordinary function to form the physical and Mystical Body of the Son of God, and to distribute to the faithful His Sacred Body and His Precious Blood, His Holy Spirit, His mysteries and His graces? Is it not their daily privilege to sacrifice Christ to the Eternal Father, and apply the fruits of His Passion and Death to souls?

O admirable power of God's priests! Certainly each one may say with Christ, the Sovereign Priest, "All power is given to me in heaven and in earth" (Matt. 28, 18). In heaven, for the priest opens and closes its gates; in earth, for he has power over the personal and Mystical Body of Christ, who is so subjected to His minister that it may be truly said: "And he was subject to them" (Luke 2, 50).

MEDITATIONS ON THE PRIESTLY OBLIGATIONS

Thus, priests are gods in power, authority and dignity. O power and dignity of the priesthood which surpasses all the powers and dignities of heaven and earth, second only to the ineffable dignity of the Mother of God!

Thank God for having elevated you to so lofty a state. Remember that even as priests are clothed with the power and authority of God, so too they should be filled with His holiness, love, charity and other divine perfections. To you especially are addressed the words of Sacred Scripture: "Put ye on therefore, as the elect of God, holy, and beloved. the bowels of mercy, benignity, humility, modesty, patience" (Col. 3,

SECOND POINT

THE PRIEST'S LIFE OUGHT TO BE A REFLECTION OF THE LIFE OF CHRIST

Consider how the priest is truly another Christ living and walking on earth: Nolite tangere christos meos (Ps. 104, 15). He takes Christ's place, represents His person, acts in His name and exercises His authority. Speaking to all priests in the person of His apostles, our Blessed Lord said: "As the Father hath sent me, I also send you" (John, 20, 21). By these words He meant that He sends His priests to dispel the darkness of hell which overspreads the face of the earth, and in its place to illumine the world with heavenly light. He sends them to work for the destruction of the tyranny of sin and the establishment of the kingdom of His Heavenly Father in this world. He sends them to perpetuate on earth the life He led and the virtues He practised. He sends them to continue His own office of mediator, judge and saviour.

The three last-mentioned functions are the principal qualities with which Christ has endowed His priests.

First of all, priests are mediators between God and men, making known His divine will. Theirs is the duty of drawing men to God and of reconciling them with the Creator; theirs is the obligation of rendering to Him the homage, adoration, praise and satisfaction due to Him.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

They, too, must deal with those important relations between God and man which have to do with His glory, the salvation of the world, and the application of the fruits of Christ's Passion to men's souls.

Secondly, priests are, with the Son of God, judges of the world, not in temporal things, which are merely transitory, but in things heavenly and eternal. They are judges not only of bodies but also of souls, rendering decisions which are not of passing moment, but which will live in eternity. To them must come the judges of this world. Kings and emperors must bend their knees and bow their heads in submission to priestly power and judgment.

Thirdly, with Christ priests are saviours of the world, favored with that very name in Sacred Scripture, "Saviours shall come up into Mount Sion" (Abdias 21). The Son of God shares with His priests the heavenly prerogative of Saviour, desiring that they should be associated with Himself in the salvation of souls. "We are God's coadjutors" (1 Cor. 3, 9). He desired that they should discharge the office of saviours and be employed in the continuation on earth of the greatest and most divine of all His works, the redemption of the world. "As the Father hath sent me, I also send you" (John 20, 21). Towards this one end, every duty and office of the priestly life is primarily directed.

In the work of saving souls Christ expended Himself completely, employing therein every moment of His time, His thoughts, words and actions, His works, sweat, tears, blood and His very life. Thus, too, priests must give to this work their heart, their thoughts and affections, their strength and their all, that truly they may say with St. Paul, "I most gladly will spend and be spent myself for your souls" (2 Cor. 12, 15). It follows, then, that, if souls are lost through the priest's negligence, the wounds of Christ, His sufferings and His blood will cry vengeance against him at the hour of death. I will require his blood at thy hand" (Ezech. 3, 18).

Truly the priest is another Christ living and walking on earth. Consequently, his life should be a perfect image of that of the Saviour, or rather a continuation of Our Lord's life. The priest is obliged, then, to study what the Master said while He was on earth, what He did, the virtues He practised, His horror for sin and His perfect detachment from the things of the world. The priest must imitate Christ's purity, sobriety, humility, modesty and all His other virtues that his own life may reflect them in practice.

MEDITATIONS ON THE PRIESTLY OBLIGATIONS

O my Saviour, I give myself entirely to Thee since Thou wast so kind as to make me a participant in Thy divine prerogatives. Fill me with Thy Divine Spirit, clothe me with Thy virtues that I may work for the salvation of souls and may say at the end of my life what Thou didst say at the end of Thine, "I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do" (John 17, 4).

THIRD POINT

DUTIES OF THE PRIEST TOWARDS GOD, To MEN AND TOWARDS HIMSELF

Christ associates you with Him in His eternal priesthood and in His divine prerogatives by which you are clothed with His powers and are bound to continue His life on earth. Consider then what Christ is and what He does. Consider Him first, with regard to His Father; secondly, with regard to men; and thirdly, with regard to Himself.

Our Blessed Lord, the Sovereign Priest, is all in all to His heavenly Father who in turn is all in all to His Divine Son. Christ loves only His Father and the Father loves only His beloved Son. Christ's only desire is to make His Father known and loved, and the sole thought of the Eternal Father is to manifest the glory of His Son and have Him adored and loved by men. The Son is the glory and treasure of the Father, and in turn the Son's supreme happiness is to glorify His Father and do His will. Towards this end, Christ directed every gesture and act of His priestly life, fulfilling them with divine dispositions and intentions.

The priest is also the Father's inheritance as His very title implies, and God is his portion as he freely promised when he received tonsure, Dominus pars hereditatis meae (Ps. 15, 5). He must therefore be all in all to God and God must be his all. He must look upon God as his only inheritance and treasure, eschewing the world's fortunes and pleasures. He must have no other possessions on earth than God, to whom he should give his whole heart and affections. Consequently, he must be always on his guard to discharge with the greatest care and holiness his priestly duties, such as the celebration of Mass, the recitation of the Divine Office, the administration of the sacraments and the preaching of the Word of God.

Since these offices are of such a divine and saintly character, they should be carried out digne Deo (Col. 1, 10), that is, both exteriorly and interiorly in a way befitting the majesty of God, worthy of the excellence of our ministry, of the holiness of the Sovereign Priest with whom we are co-ministers, and worthy of the price of His Precious Blood, in the shedding of which we were elevated to the dignity of the priesthood.

If you would know what Christ is and what He does with regard to mankind and especially with regard to His Church, you have but to look with the eyes of faith at HIS accomplishments while He was on earth, especially His intense sufferings. These deeds are so many tongues that cry aloud: "Thus God loved the world; thus Jesus loved His Church; thus Christ loved souls." With the same breath these voices will say to you: "Thus, too, you must love the Church; thus you must work for the salvation of souls; thus, you must do all things, suffer all things, sacrifice even life itself if thereby you may be instrumental in contributing to the salvation of one soul." Omnium divinorum divinissimum est cooperari Deo in salutem animarum. (2)

When you consider Christ in regard to Himself, you learn that being the Sovereign Priest He wished also to assume the character of a host, that thus regarding Himself as a host destined to death and sacrifice for the glory of His Father, "He humbled himself, becoming obedient unto death" (Phil. 2, 8). His whole life on earth was but a continual death so far as the things of this world were concerned. "I came down from heaven, not to do my own will but the will of him who sent me" (John 6, 38). His very life was truly an unending sacrifice of all that was in Him for the honor of His Father.

He who is called to participate in the priesthood should be one with Christ in the character of host. He should regard himself as a victim
(2). St. Dionysius, De Caelesti Hierarchia, cap. 3.

MEDITATIONS ON THE PRIESTLY OBLIGATIONS

to be perpetually immolated with the Saviour for the glory of God; he should be detached and separated from the things of the world. Dying to all he should live alone for the Master. He should humble himself constantly, and burn with divine love. His whole life should be a perpetual sacrifice of his inclinations, his interests, his happiness, his comforts, his strength, his health and his life for the glory of God and the salvation of souls.

O Jesus, Sovereign Priest and Pastor of souls, I adore Thee with all my heart and soul as my Captain, my Exemplar and my Guide. I ask Thy pardon for having neglected to follow Thy divine rule and for having committed so many transgressions in my sacerdotal life. I give myself to Thee that henceforth with the help of Thy grace I may follow Thee more perfectly in all that regards Thy heavenly Father, Thy holy Church and Thy divine Self. I am resolved to imitate those saintly dispositions with which Thou didst discharge the duties of the priesthood while Thou wast on earth. Destroy within me whatsoever may stand in the way of accomplishing my desire. Possess me entirely, and establish forever within me Thy life and reign for the glory of Thy holy Name.

Ejaculatory Prayer: "God so loved the world."

Sic Deus dilexit mundum (John 3, 16).

SECOND MEDITATION

Obligation of the Priest to Seek Perfection

FIRST POINT

THE PRIEST'S RELATIONS WITH GOD DEMAND EMINENT PERFECTION

Three principal reasons show that no one is more obligated to practise perfection and holiness than the priest. The first reason comes from what he represents with regard to God; the second from his state and condition; the third from his relations with the life of the faithful.

No one has received greater graces from God than has the priest; consequently, no one can have such great obligations. No man on earth approaches more closely to God or communes more familiarly with Him than does the priest. To no other does God come more closely. The Eternal Father shares His divine paternity with him; the Son shares His Priesthood with him; the Holy Ghost makes him His associate in erasing sin, infusing grace, illuminating men's minds and warming their hearts with charity in the reconciliation of sinners and the application of the fruits of the Passion.

Thus, the priest is God on earth, taking His place, representing His person, acting in His name and clothed with His authority. Necessarily then he must be filled with His holiness according to the recommendation of Sacred Scripture: "Be holy because I am holy" (Lev. 11, 44). The priest must honor and love God with the highest degree of fidelity and perfection possible, inasmuch as he is the recipient of God's greatest favors. Pray constantly to know and practise these truths.

MEDITATIONS ON THE PRIESTLY OBLIGATIONS

183 -

SECOND POINT

THE PRIESTHOOD IS THE HOLIEST OF ALL STATES

No other profession equals or excels the priestly state. Priests are the first officers of the Great King, the principal ministers in His realm, the treasurers and dispensers of His mysteries. Into their keeping Christ has entrusted the fruits of His life and death, His mysteries and His graces. St. Paul calls priests "dispensers of the mysteries of God" (1 Cor. 4, 1). Truly, they are charged with the keeping of His glory, His very Self, His Body and Blood, His Mystical Body and His most precious treasures. Naturally, therefore, theirs must be a holiness far exceeding that of ordinary Christians.

Priests occupy the most exalted position in the Mystical Body of Christ, which is the Church. They are, as it were, the heart and the head of that Body, for they are one with the Sovereign Priest who is the Head and the Heart of the Church. It follows, then, that they must discharge their duties more nobly and more perfectly than the other members of the Church.

Who could be pledged to a higher degree of holiness than he who is consecrated to God in body and soul by the august sacrament of Holy Orders, who spends his days in the sanctuary engaged in the sacred ministry, who frequently dispenses the sacraments to the faithful, who daily offers the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass and receives within his soul the adorable Flesh and the Precious Blood of the Son of God?

Ponder well these truths and beg God to engrave them on your mind and heart that you may derive from them the grace He wishes to give you.

184-

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

THIRD POINT

THE RELATIONS BETWEEN THE PRIEST AND THE FAITHFUL DEMAND THE HIGHEST DEGREE OF PERFECTION

The priest is called in Sacred Scripture, "The angel of the Lord" (Mal. 2, 7), "the light of the world" (Matt. 5, 14), "an example of the faithful" (1 Tim. 4, 12), for he must purify, illumine and perfect the other Christians. Hence, he must be a font of blessings, whose salutary waters flow abundantly in the house of the Lord. He must be adorned with a supereminence of Christian virtues that his life may be truly a rule and guide for all the faithful.

Be assured, then, that there is no one on earth more obliged to seek perfection than the priest. It is not sufficient for him to lead the life of an ordinary Christian, but he must live as a priest. In other words, he must live so holily that he may sanctify others. This is not merely a counsel but a commandment. The Christian must tend towards perfection because of his baptism, the religious because of his vows, and the priest because of the very holiness of his state.

Humble yourself, seeing yourself so far removed from this holiness. Ask God's pardon for your negligence and infidelity. Make the resolution henceforth to lead a truly priestly life. Adopt at once the means best suited to this end, namely, the renunciation of sin, the world and self; the imitation of Jesus, the Great High Priest, and the performance of all the clerical and priestly functions in His spirit and with His dispositions. Give yourself to Him for this purpose; beg the assistance of Mary, the Mother of priests, and invoke the help of all the saintly priests and levites.

Ejaculatory Prayer: I will serve Thee, O Lord, I will serve Thee in holiness and justice before Thee, all the days of my life."

Serviam tibi, Domine, serviam tibi in sanctitate et justitia coram Te, omnibus diebus vitae meae.

THIRD MEDITATION

Hatred for Sin

FIRST POINT

GRAVITY OF SIN IN ITSELF

Adore God in His infinite hatred of sin. Give yourself to Him that the Light Divine which knows the hideousness of sin, and His Spirit which hates the detestable monster, may make you also know and hate it.

Realize that sin is the cause of endless miseries, the source of all spiritual and temporal evils on earth, in purgatory and in hell. It has caused the damnation of countless souls. Sin is so great an evil that it would be better for a thousand worlds to be destroyed than for one soul to be lost. The Doctors of the Church all agree on this point.

Sin is so great an evil that even the attaining of some benefit or good could never justify it. Would it not indeed be a marvelous thing to save all the souls on earth and snatch them from the jaws of hell? Yet, if to obtain such an end it were necessary to commit even the slightest sin, it would not be permitted. It would be far better to allow all souls to perish rather than save them by sinning.

Even too, if such an impossibility could be conceived, that the humanity of the Son of God were to be destroyed, and could be saved only by committing a sin, again it would not be permitted.

Know then that sin is an evil of infinite magnitude, horrible and detestable beyond description. It draws down upon men the anger of God and earns for them eternal damnation. Only God can hate it as it deserves, only He can know its hideousness, only the blood of the

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Son of God can destroy its effects on men's souls. It can be destroyed only by the very destruction of a God-Man. You may judge for yourself, then, the extent of your guilt when you sin, and how you should detest even the slightest sin. Learn what confusion should cover you and what penance your heart should know at the realization of your guilt. Know, too, the depth and sincerity of the penance you should perform, and what trepidation you should experience at the very thought of ever falling again and what care you should exercise in avoiding the occasions of sin. Ask God to keep you from sinning in the future.

SECOND POINT

SPECIAL GRAVITY OF SINS COMMITTED BY PRIESTS

The sins of priests are greater than those of the faithful. Since the grace given priests is much greater than that given to the laity, it follows that their ingratitude renders them more criminal. Hence, St. John Chrysostom observes that in the Old Law the sacrifice ordered by God in retribution for the sin of a priest equalled that commanded to be offered for the sins of the entire chosen people.(1) It follows, therefore, that the sins of the priest in the Old Law were regarded as being equal in gravity to the crimes of the entire nation. Yet, the priests of the Old Testament were but shadows of the priests of the New, for to them God had given but a fragment of the graces He has bestowed upon the priests of the Christian Church. It is clear, then, that the sins of a priest of Christ are hideous in the eyes of God. The Council of Trent declares that sins which in others might be considered slight are grave when committed by priests. Levia etiam delicta, quac in ipsis maxima essent, effugiant. (2)

Ask God to open your eyes to the importance of these truths that you may excite true contrition in your soul and obtain the grace to avoid every sin and whatever is displeasing to Him who called you to the holiness of the priesthood.

THIRD POINT

HOLINESS REQUIRED IN THE PRIESTHOOD

St. Paul speaking of Jesus Christ, the Sovereign Priest, says: "It was fitting that we should have such a high priest, holy, innocent, undefiled, separated from sinners and made higher than the heavens" (Heb. 7, 26). It seems that the Apostle could hardly find adequate terms to describe the Master's separation from whatever was sinful, because He was a Priest. It would seem as though the word "holy" were sufficient to describe His Priesthood, for St. Dionysius says that holiness is spotless purity, unblemished by anything which would need expiation. Yet, St. Paul adds, "undefiled, innocent, separated from sinners," to make clear the incompatibility between sin and the priesthood. Christ's Priesthood was that very priesthood we share. Thus we, too, must be holy, innocent, undefiled and spiritually separated from sinners as He was.

judge how removed is your life from that ideal set by the Master. Endeavor to repair any faults of which you have been guilty. Resolve that in the future with God's grace you will avoid all sins, especially those opposed to clerical holiness, such as impurity, avarice, laziness, intemperance, pride and vanity.

Ejaculatory Prayer: "Have mercy on me, O God, according to Thy great mercy."
Miserere mei, Deus, secundum magnam misericordiam tuam (PS. 50, 1).

FOURTH MEDITATION

Renouncing the World

FIRST POINT

CHRIST'S SENTIMENTS REGARDING THE WORLD

Adore Christ, the Sovereign Priest, and consider the sentiments He felt and will ever feel towards the world. They number four.

First, there was His feeling of contempt, knowing as He did that the world is but futility and nothingness: "Vanity of vanities and all is vanity" (Eccles. 1, 2).

The second was a feeling of aversion, hate and indignation, springing from the knowledge that the world is the enemy of His Father and the object of the divine anger, as the Apostle explained, "If any man love the world, the charity of the Father is not in him" (1 John 2, 15).

The third was a spirit of patience towards the world, for though He has always had the desire to destroy it as He will do on the last day, yet with infinite patience He has suffered and will suffer it until the end of time.

The fourth was His disposition to make use of the things of the world while He lived here below, for the glory of His Heavenly Father. Guided by the Holy Spirit, He sought earthly goods only in so far as they were necessary. With a perfect detachment, He never desired any pleasure from the transitory things of this world.

Ask God to give you similar sentiments and dispositions.

MEDITATIONS ON THE PRIESTLY OBLIGATIONS

189 -

SECOND POINT

SENTIMENTS OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN MARY AND THE SAINTS REGARDING THE WORLD

Christ engraved His own sentiments upon the hearts of His Blessed Mother and of the saints, especially His sainted priests. The Apostles were the first priests, and on the eve of his death He cried to His Heavenly Father, "They are not of the world, as I also am not of the world" (John 17, 16), and St. Paul adds, "For whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and count them but as dung" (Phil. 3, 8). Whence it follows that the apostles, as well as all holy priests and saints have lived in a spirit of aversion towards the things of this world, regarding them as the enemy of God and with St. Ambrose as the body of Satan. They well realized that the things men esteem are but vanity and folly, or as the Inspired Writer says, "the bewitching of vanity" (Wis. 4, 12).

Offer your heart to the Mother of God and to all the saints that you may know and live their sentiments towards the things of the world. Beg them to destroy within your own soul by the power God has given them, any attachment you may have for the world and its pleasures.

THIRD POINT

REASONS FOR HATING THE WORLD

Two qualities render the world hateful. The first is its malice, the second its folly.

"The whole world is seated in wickedness," writes St. John (1 John 5, 19), and the Holy Spirit assures us that it is filled with folly, "for the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God" (1 Cor. 3, 19). Its malice is apparent in its vices which pose in the guise of virtues. Its folly is apparent in many things, but particularly in its changing fashions and styles. This changeableness is a true mark of worldly folly: "A fool is changed as the moon" (Ecclus. 27, 12).

190-

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Detest the world's malice and despise its folly, and to make doubly sure that you will not become contaminated, avoid worldlings and the places they frequent. Avoid worldly habits in your speech, your dress and your environment. Remember that Christ said: "You are the salt of the earth" (Matt. 5, 13), that is, you are to be the wisdom and the wise men of the earth. It would be ridiculous to watch a city's chief magistrate following a fool and going about clothed like him. It would likewise be ludicrous to witness the sad spectacle of a priest following the false maxims and customs of the world he is supposed to guide in divine wisdom. His action would be a direct denial of that beautiful quality Christ bestowed upon him in the words, "You are the salt of the earth." He would become a "salt which has lost its savour" which is fit only to be thrown out and trampled under foot.

If in the past you have followed the ways of the world, beg God to lead you aright in the future that your daily conduct may justify His words, "They are not of the world, as I also am not of the world" (John, 17, 16).

Ejaculatory Prayer: "Deliver me, O Lord, from the present wicked world."
Eripe me, Domine, de presenti saeculo nequam.

FIFTH MEDITATION

Self-denial

FIRST POINT

SELF-DENIAL OF OUR DIVINE SAVIOUR

Adore our Blessed Lord when He says, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself" (Luke 9, 23). Adore the thought, the love and the design that He had in your regard when He said these words. Ask His pardon for placing any obstacle in the way of its fulfilment. Give yourself to Him that you may effectuate what He meant by these words, and realize that He Himself first did what He asks of you, having given you the perfect example of self-abnegation. While He was on earth, He never acted according to His own desires, but rather He did the will of His Father. He never sought His own satisfaction nor His own interests, but those of His Father. "For Christ did not please himself" (Rom. 15, 3). He lived not for Himself, but for God. "I live by the Father" (John 6, 58). He shed His blood even to the last drop, gave His very life, "emptied Himself" (Phil. 2, 7), and concealed His very sacred humanity and divinity in the Blessed Sacrament to the end of time.

Thank Our Blessed Lord for all the glory He has ever given or will ever give to His Father, as well as for the manifold graces He has merited for us. Give yourself anew to Him that you may share His sentiments. "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: Who being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God; but emptied himself, taking the form of a servant (Phil. 2, 5-7).

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

SECOND POINT

ALL CHRISTIANS SHOULD DENY THEMSELVES

Jesus not only requires you as a Christian to renounce the world, Satan and sin, but He also binds you to renounce yourself. "If any man will come after Me let him deny himself" (Luke 9, 23). St. Paul says that you must strip yourself of "the old man" (COL. 3, 9) because "you are dead" (Ibid. 3, 3). Elsewhere He says, "He that shall lose his life for me, shall find it" (Matt. 10, 39). "If any man ... hate not ... his own life . . . , he cannot be my disciple" (Luke 14, 26).

This self-denial should be practised for the following reasons:

First, we do not belong to ourselves. "Know you not that you are . . . not your own" (1 Cor. 6, 19). We belong to God by an infinity of titles. We have no right to dispose of our life, no right even to exist, to live, to speak or act, nor even think for ourselves, but only for Him to Whom we belong. Hence, we must renounce ourselves entirely that we may be wholly God's.

Secondly, we must follow Christ if we would be united to Him. We cannot do that if we do not renounce ourselves, for we are but darkness and sin and death. Yet, darkness cannot imitate light, nor sin grace, nor death life.

Thirdly, nothing in this world is more opposed to our eternal salvation than we ourselves. We bear within ourselves four demons more dangerous than the devils who roam this world. The first demon is our own mind, filled with darkness and poisoned with the venoms of sin, whence spring error and heresy. The second is our own will, which St. Bernard calls "an untamed beast, a ravaging wolf, a cruel lion and the sole foundation of hell." The third is self-love, which is the source of untold disorders. The fourth is ambition, pride and arrogance, with which we are born and which cease only with death. From these latter spring a multitude of vices.

In addition, sin has perverted all that is in us, filled us with darkness and malice, unleashed all our dormant passions. It has corrupted our senses, weakened our will and made slaves of body and soul. Hence,

MEDITATIONS ON THE PRIESTLY OBLIGATIONS

St. Paul calls the body "sinful flesh" (Rom. 8, 3), and refers to it as sin (Rom. 6, 6), and as death (Rom. 7, 24). Sin has poisoned the blood in our veins and the very marrow of our bones, and caused us to be "by nature children of wrath" (Eph. 2, 3).

Self-renunciation, therefore, is not merely a counsel of perfection, but a commandment. If we would share in the redemption of Christ, in the grace and salvation of the new man, we must renounce the remnants of Adam, that is, the old man and self.

When we ponder these truths, we realize that we have no enemy more cruel than our own ego, that there is none we should fear more than our very selves. It is more necessary to renounce ourselves even than to renounce the demons who seek to destroy us. God's greatest chastisement would be to leave us to our own deserts. Let us pray constantly that He will protect us against ourselves, more even than against all the infernal powers.

THIRD POINT

PRIESTS ARE UNDER A SPECIAL OBLIGATION TO RENOUNCE THEMSELVES

All Christians are obliged to practise self-abnegation. As St. Luke points out, Christ said to all: "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself" (Luke 9, 23). We priests are held to this duty in an especial manner for three important reasons: first, because being the first and noblest members of the Mystical Body of Christ on earth, we must follow Christ more perfectly, which means, of course, complete self-denial; secondly, since we are consecrated to God and His Church by ordination, we no longer belong to ourselves; thirdly, since we must encourage others to denial of self, we should practise it ourselves.

Learn the necessity of self-abnegation and develop a great desire to practise it at all times. Cultivate the spirit, the love and desire which annihilated Christ, that you, too, may be annihilated for Him. Study St. Paul's words: "Mortify your members" (Col. 3, 5), and truly strive to mortify your eyes, your taste, your tongue, your passions, your mind, your self-love and your will. Be careful to renounce self when you begin any important action, and to surrender yourself to Jesus Christ, asking Him to purify your intentions so that you may do them with His spirit and virtue.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Ejaculatory Prayer: "Deliver me, O Lord, from the evil man: rescue me from the unjust man." Eripe me, Domine, ab homine malo: a viro iniquo eripe me (Ps. 139, 2).

SIXTH MEDITATION

The Love of God

FIRST POINT

REASONS WHY WE MUST LOVE GOD

We are in this world to love God. For that end we were created, and that alone is our center, our happiness and our sovereign good. God is worthy of our love because of His infinite goodness, His incomparable beauty and His incomprehensible perfections. Our obligations of loving Him are, therefore, infinite in scope because He is all heart and all love for us. From Him we have received an infinity of gifts and graces, both general and particular, as Christians and as priests. Yet, how often we have shown Him ingratitude instead of love, injuries and outrages instead of devotion, in our actions, our words and the improper use of our body and soul.

Be confounded with sorrow, weep tears of blood at the memory of your conduct. Yet, if you were to weep torrents you could never atone sufficiently for your ingratitude. Ask His pardon, crying, "Have mercy on me, O God, according to thy great mercy" (Ps. 50, 1).

Renounce your love for the world and its pomps. Renounce your own self and all creatures. Protest to God that you wish henceforth to follow His commandment: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy whole heart and with thy whole soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind" (Luke 10, 27). Offer to Him in consecration your heart, begging Him to destroy in it whatsoever is opposed to His sacred love. Beseech Him to take full possession of you that you may be consumed with the sacred fire of His love divine.

196-

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

SECOND POINT

THE FIRST WAY TO LOVE GOD IS TO AVOID SIN

The first thing you must do if you would love God is to hate whatever is opposed to Him, that is, every kind of sin. You must, therefore, purify your soul by perfect penance. Separate yourself forever from any occasion which may lead you astray. Work valiantly to destroy in your life any bad habits, thus eradicating the roots of sin, particularly inordinate self-love and pride.

Ask God's guidance to know the state of your own soul. Examine your conscience rigorously. After discovering your weaknesses, pray that God's divine mercy may give you true contrition and the grace to make amends. Ask also for the grace to remain aloof from dangerous occasions and temptations. Take the means necessary to attain these ends. Make the resolution to put them into practice daily. But, be on your guard against relying upon your own resources, seeking rather your strength in the grace and mercy of God, whom you must invoke unceasingly.

THIRD POINT

THE SECOND WAY TO LOVE GOD IS TO KEEP HIS COMMANDMENTS

In order to love God truly you must establish in your heart a firm resolution of keeping God's commandments and those of His Church, as well as following the rules and obligations of your calling. You must discharge every duty well, especially those directly concerned with your priestly functions and the practice of the virtue of religion. Seek in all things to please and serve the Master.

If you examine yourself carefully on these points, you will find much to humiliate you. Be not discouraged. Form a real desire to fulfil all your obligations out of love for Him. Invoke the help of heaven and the intercession of Mary and the angels and saints, particularly those whose lives were filled with divine love.

Ejaculatory Prayer: I love Thee, O my God; I love Thee, O infinite Goodness; and I wish to love Thee more and more."

Amo Te, Deus meus, amo te, bonitas infinita, amo te, et magis atque magis amare volo.

SEVENTH MEDITATION

Obligations and Duties Towards Christ

FIRST POINT

REASONS WHY WE MUST HONOR AND SERVE CHRIST

There are three principal reasons why as Christians we must honor, serve and love Christ.

First, we must honor all that belongs to Him, His divinity and His humanity, His body and soul, His thoughts, words, actions and sufferings because they are infinitely holy, divine, admirable and adorable and merit infinite love and praise.

Secondly, we should honor and love all that honors and loves God. Yet everything in Christ renders to God the Father homage and love worthy of His supreme grandeur. In fact, God receives no honor and glory but through His Son Jesus, as the words of Mother Church so clearly state: "Through Him and with Him and in Him is given Thee, O Father Omnipotent, in union with the Holy Ghost, all honor and glory." It is certain that not a single good act is done except through Jesus Christ. "Without me you can do nothing" (John 15, 5). It is He who thinks, speaks and suffers in the members of His Mystical Body all things which are pleasing to the Creator. It is through Him and with Him and in Him that the angels and saints glorify God: "through Whom the angels praise and the dominations adore Thy Majesty."

Thirdly, we are bound to love and serve Christ because of the privations, humiliations and sufferings He endured as well as the gifts He bestowed upon us. What has He not done for us? What has

MEDITATIONS ON THE PRIESTLY OBLIGATIONS

He not given up? What has He not suffered because of us? He gave all, suffered all, endured all.

O Jesus, what should I not endure and do for Thy sake? Even if Thou hadst done nought for me, I should do all for Thee because Thou didst render such great glory to the Eternal Father, and because Thou art so lovable and adorable! O Good Jesus, may I be all Thine, my body and my soul, my life, all that I have and all that I am!

SECOND POINT

SPECIAL REASONS WHY PRIESTS SHOULD HONOR AND SERVE CHRIST

Besides our obligations towards Christ as Christians, we as priests have a multitude of additional obligations. We are clothed with a dignity possessing the quality of the infinite. Through our priesthood we are associated with Him in His noblest prerogatives, in His role as Mediator between God and man, Sacrificer of the Eternal, Saviour of the world.

Likewise, we are made cooperators with Him in the salvation of souls, receiving from Him the right to continue His most lofty tasks on earth, such as illuminating men's minds, reconciling them with their Maker, washing away their sins and bringing sanctifying grace to their souls. We have received the power of offering the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass and of giving His Body and Blood to the faithful as well as to ourselves.

Within our keeping are placed His treasures, mysteries, merits and grace; He entrusts to us His Body and Blood, His Church and every precious gift which is His. We take His own place in the world, with full powers to continue the work of redemption, discharging His own priestly functions. We receive graces in keeping with the high state to which He has called us, for it is true that He always bestows graces in conformity with the office to which He calls a chosen soul. When He bestowed the priesthood upon us, its wealth of graces came to us, unless we put some hindrance in their way.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Thinking over these things, what mind could conceive or what tongue express the depth and breadth of the priest's obligation to be all in all to Jesus? How could he but employ all his time, his life, his mind, his heart and his will and all that he has or knows or is in His service and for love of Him? If he acts differently, what a dreadful death he must expect! What a judgment! What a hell!

THIRD POINT

MEANS TO SERVE CHRIST

We must seek the means best suited for serving Christ. We may do so by thoughts, words, actions, mortifications, vocal and mental prayer, by acts of adoration and love. The best method is to work unceasingly to imprint upon our hearts a living image of His life and His virtues. We must fulfil our priestly duties with His spirit and His dispositions. We must seek always to act in a way worthy of Him in Whose honor and for Whose glory the sacerdotal office is discharged.

This desire shall be our aim. We must give ourselves to Christ that we may thus act, begging Him who set us in His place, to engrave within our being His image, so that loving Him with all our hearts we may become partakers of His saintly virtues and divine dispositions.

Ejaculatory Prayer: "I live, now not I: but Christ liveth in me.
Vivo autem, jam non ego: vivit vero in me Christus (Gal. 2, 20).

201-

EIGHTH MEDITATION

Devotion to the Blessed Virgin Mary

FIRST POINT

EVERY CHRISTIAN SHOULD HONOR THE BLESSED VIRGIN MARY

Adore God in His infinite love for the Blessed Virgin Mary, in the great designs He had upon her from all eternity and in all the effects of grace and glory which He has worked and will work through her in heaven and on earth. Rejoice with her in all the favors conferred upon her by Almighty God. Thank the Blessed Trinity and associate yourself with the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost in their love for her, and in their zeal for her honor that you may thereby honor and love her becomingly.

Know that true devotion to the Mother of God is but a continuation of the love, respect and submission with which Christ honored her on earth. Adore these sentiments in the Divine Heart of Jesus and give yourself to Him that His sentiments may be yours. Since He associated you with Him in His relationship of Son of Mary, He desires you to partake of His own sentiments and dispositions towards her. Pray that He may engrave them upon your heart, that you may honor and venerate her as your mother.

Consider the multitude of reasons obligating you to honor Mary, because of the perfection and excellence with which He endowed her, because of the service and honor she rendered and renders continually to the majesty of God, and because of the immense and incomprehensible blessings you have received through her intercession. "All good things came to me together with her" (Wis. 7, 11). "We are filled with all good things through (her)" (Tobias 12, 3).

202-

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

O great and holy Mary, how admirable thou art! All worthy of praise and honor art thou! What obligations are mine to revere, serve and love thee and to be only thine! This I desire with all my heart; therefore, I offer thee and give thee my body and my soul, my heart, my mind, my life, my being with all its capabilities, my time and my eternity. To thee I protest that I wish that in all these things I may render thee homage now and hereafter. It is my earnest wish that I may lead others to praise, glorify and serve thee. Use on my behalf, I beg thee, the powers God hath given thee over men; possess me entirely so that thy Divine Son may establish the reign of his grace and love in my soul.

SECOND POINT

SPECIAL UNION OF MARY AND PRIESTS

There is a particular alliance between the Blessed Mother and priests. As the Eternal Father made her a partaker in His divine paternity, giving her the power of forming Christ within her womb, so, too, He communicates this same fatherhood to his priests in permitting them to form Christ in the Blessed Eucharist and in the hearts of the faithful. Christ made Mary a cooperator in the work of redemption; He also makes his priests coadjutors in the salvation of souls. The Holy Ghost associated Mary with Himself in the most divine of all His operations and in the mystery of the Incarnation; He associates priests with Him to continue this mystery in each Christian soul where Christ is reincarnated by Baptism and in the Blessed Eucharist. Since all graces coming from God pass through Mary's hands, so, too, they are given to you by the ministry of His priests. Mary is the treasury of the Blessed Trinity; priests also share this prerogative. Finally, as through Mary, Jesus was offered to His Eternal Father at the very first, as well as at the very last, moment of His life, so He is immolated and offered to God daily by His priests at Mass.

MEDITATIONS ON THE PRIESTLY OBLIGATIONS

203-

Because of this close alliance with Mary, priests owe her particular obligations of love, honor and service. They should be clothed with her virtues and dispositions. Humiliate yourself for neglecting your obligations to her. Form a great desire to fulfil them worthily. Offer yourself completely to Mary Immaculate and beg her to help you.

THIRD POINT

MEANS OF HONORING THE BLESSED VIRGIN MARY

If you have a true devotion to the Blessed Virgin Mary, seek the means of honoring and serving her. You may honor her by thought, applying yourself to the consideration of her mysteries, her virtues, her actions and her sufferings, as well as by interior acts of veneration and praise for her perfect cooperation with the grace of God. You may also honor her by words, in inciting others to love her, and by vocal prayer, principally the rosary. Lastly, you may serve by action, offering to her every deed you do, particularly almsgiving, fasts and mortification.

You may quite commendably enter any sodality or religious association established in her honor. Your devotion will also be strengthened by having her picture ever near you, and by observing her feasts with special affection.

Yet, the most efficacious of all means is the imitation of her virtues, especially her humility and submission to the divine will, her purity and hatred for sin, her love for God, her charity towards men, her patience, meekness and zeal for the salvation of souls.

With sorrow realize how far removed you are from this ideal; yet, you are amongst her chosen children. Pray to your heavenly Mother that she may obtain for you true repentance for your past transgressions, and the grace of God to be more faithful in the future.

Ejaculatory Prayer: "O Mother most amiable, show thyself a mother to me."
Mater amabilis, monstra te esse Matrem.

NINTH MEDITATION

Obligations Towards the Church

FIRST POINT

WHAT THE CHURCH IS WITH REGARD TO THE THREE DIVINE PERSONS AND TO PRIESTS

Adore the Three Divine Persons of the Blessed Trinity in all that They mean to the Church, Their incomprehensible love and lofty designs upon it from all eternity. Adore and bless all that They have effectuated through the Church or will ever accomplish. Study the love and zeal of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost that you may learn to love and serve the Church as the beloved daughter of the Eternal Father, who gave her His Son to be her Spouse, and His Holy Spirit to be her Soul and Heart.

The Church is the sister, the mother and the spouse of Christ, as well as His Body and His fulness, as St. Paul remarks: "Which is his body and the fulness of him who is filled all in all" (Eph. 1, 23). The Church is likewise Christ's accomplishment and His perfection, His inheritance, His kingdom, His house, His treasure and crown, His glory and delight.

Moreover, the Church is the mother who engendered you for God by baptism, bears you within her womb, is the nurse who nourishes you with the divine word, as well as with the Body and Blood of her Spouse. The Church is your queen, your governess and directress, guiding you on the road to eternity. She is your teacher who instructs you in the eternal truths of heaven. She has given you the Sacrament of 204

MEDITATIONS ON THE PRIESTLY OBLIGATIONS

Holy Orders, whereby you have been made a partaker of the priestly office with its privileges, graces and blessings.

How much then should you love and respect the Church! With what zeal you should serve her! How you should venerate her sacraments, ceremonies and customs! What sorrow you should know when she is made to suffer! What a duty is yours to thank God for having established her on earth! How you should pray that He may guide her always, sanctify and solidify her and give her priests according to His Heart!

SECOND POINT

CHRIST'S LOVE FOR HIS CHURCH

Adore Christ in all that He means to His Church, and remember that He is her Redeemer, Saviour, Founder, Brother, Spouse, Head, Doctor, Judge and Pastor; He is her Physician, Advocate and Mediator. Yet, at the same time He is her Servant for He said: "The Son of man is not come to be ministered unto, but to minister" (Matt. 20, 28). He is the Church's food, her life, her heart, her treasure, her reason for existence, her happiness and her God. He calls her His dove and well beloved, His spouse and His sister and His heart, "My heart hath forsaken me" (Ps. 39, 13). He speaks of her as His dear soul, "I have given my dear soul into the hand of her enemies" (Jer. 12, 7).

Behold in the Sacred Heart of Jesus, His sentiments of zeal, care, vigilance and love for His Church. His love is apparent in three principal ways: first, in all the marvelous things He did on her behalf; secondly, in all that He suffered for her; thirdly, in the infinitely precious gifts He bestowed upon her.

Thank Him for all these favors; unite your heart with all the honor and love which has ever been or ever will be rendered Him by His Church. Embrace the sentiments expressed in the words of the Apostle, "For let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus" (Phil. 2, 5). Beg Him to inflame your heart with those dispositions, that you may truly say, "The zeal of thy house hath eaten me up" (Ps. 68, 10).

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

THIRD POINT

OUR DUTIES TOWARDS THE CHURCH

When the Son of God called you to the priesthood, He made you a partaker with Him in those all important qualities and offices He exercised in the Church, namely saviour, chief, doctor, father, pastor, physician, mediator, servant and judge.

Weigh well the obligations attached to these lofty prerogatives. Seek to ascertain how you have discharged them, and you will be astonished to find that there is much for which to reproach yourself and implore His pardon. Make the resolution to be more assiduous and faithful in the future.

In order that you may truly appreciate and love these high qualities which you share, picture the burning love which animated the apostles and all holy priests in their devotion to the Church. Study their zeal, vigilance and affection in spreading the Gospel and sanctifying the Church. Learn how meticulous they were about the cleanliness and the appointments of God's temples; how carefully they carried out the liturgy; how faithfully they obeyed all Church laws and with what holiness they administered the sacraments. See how devoted they were to the preaching of the word of God, and how anxious they were at all times to insure the salvation of the faithful.

Consider the sacrifices and sufferings of the apostles and all holy priests on the Church's behalf; see how they lived, not for themselves but for the Church, using their thoughts, words, actions, their strength, minds, their all, for that one object alone, so that truly they could say, "I most gladly will spend and be spent myself for your souls" (2 Cor. 12, 15).

Let shame engulf your soul as you realize how far you have wandered from the noble example set you by the saints. Beg them to help

TENTH MEDITATION

The Cassock, the Surplice and the Biretta

FIRST POINT

MEANING OF THE CASSOCK AND SURPLICE

The black cassock signifies that the priest who wears it should at all times be in mourning for Christ, his Crucified Saviour. It means, too, that he should be dead to sin, to the world and to himself, doing penance for his own sins and for the sins of the world. It signifies finally that the priest's body should be at all times mortified in such manner that in him Christ's life is made evident to the faithful.

The surplice represents the "new man," our Lord Jesus Christ, as emphasized by the words used at ordination: "May the Lord clothe thee with the new man created in justice and holiness according to God." It follows that the priest must be like Christ, clothed with His perfection, humility, charity, modesty, purity and His other virtues.

The ordaining prelate when bestowing the surplice calls it the "habit of holy religion." Likewise, he prays that Almighty God may free the candidate from all the slavery of secular dress whose ignominy is put off. Since the Holy Ghost speaks through the Bishop, these words show us the purpose of the surplice in the mind of God.

How many careless or worldly priests there are who by their lives make a mockery of these words and ceremonies! The Church demands that the clerics who wear the surplice, lead a life in conformity with Christ's. Yet there are priests who live as worldlings, and look upon their clerical dress as a bar and a hindrance to pleasures which they renounced at ordination. The Church, through the person of the

Bishop, asks Almighty God to forgive the ordinands' sins, and to free them from the slavery of secular dress. Yet these same clerics cultivate an inordinate love for it, rather branding their own clerical attire as something of which to be ashamed.

O frightful blindness! O damnable profanation of sacred and holy things! Ask God to help you always to respect the attire of your calling, and to lead a life in conformity with the holiness of your clerical dress.

SECOND POINT

THE MEANING OF THE BIRETTA

The biretta is simply a cross which clerics wear on their head to show that the cross of Christ is their crown and their glory, whereby they re-echo St. Paul's words, "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ; by whom the world is crucified to me, and I to the world" (Gal. 6, 14).

Engrave these truths upon your heart. Thank God for having given you the privilege of wearing the robe of religion. Ask His pardon for any profanation you may have made of it. Begin to practise with renewed zeal all that it requires and demands of you. Take seriously the meaning of the cassock, the surplice and the biretta. Treat them with fitting reverence. Pray God to give you the strength to persevere in your good resolution.

Ejaculatory Prayer: "Let thy priests, O Lord God, put on salvation."
Sacerdotes tui, Domine Deus, induantur salutem (2 Par. 6, 40).

Part V

MEDITATIONS ON TONSURE AND HOLY ORDERS(1)

213-

FIRST MEDITATION

Tonsure

FIRST POINT

TONSURE BINDS US TO STRIP OURSELVES OF THE SPIRIT, WAYS AND MAXIMS OF THE WORLD

TONSURE is the door into the clerical state. If we would understand the dispositions necessary for its reception and the obligations it imposes, we must consider the ceremonies attached to its bestowal. These ceremonies are, as it were, oracles of the Holy Ghost explaining what it means to be a cleric and what is expected of such a one in his daily life.

When the candidate for tonsure has laid aside his secular dress, which the Pontifical calls ignominiam saecularis habitus, he presents himself before the ordaining bishop. He is clothed in a cassock, habitus sacrae religionis, and bears a lighted candle in his right hand. These externals are to remind the young man that henceforth he must be stripped of the spirit of the world, its ways and maxims, and be vested with the spirit of religion and holiness. His only aim in embracing the clerical life must be to seek the honor and glory of the Saviour, and so to spend his days before God and man that he will be truly "a burning and shining light" (John 5, 35).

(1). Meditations on Tonsure and Holy Orders, like the preceding series on the priestly obligations, are taken from 'Part V' of the original edition of A Memorial of the Ecclesiastical Life. They will furnish excellent material for meditation in preparation for the anniversary of one's ordination. Seminarians can find no better meditations for the ordination retreats.

214-

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Humble yourself before God because of your unworthiness. Realize that you cannot enter this holy state without the grace of God. Beg Him to grant you this grace. Pray to the Blessed Virgin Mary and to all the holy priests and levites to obtain it for you.

SECOND POINT

TONSURE OBLIGATES US TO DETACH OURSELVES FROM THE PLEASURES AND HONORS OF THE WORLD

The Bishop cuts, in the form of a cross, the hair of the candidate receiving tonsure. The hair is waste matter which grows from the flesh, often growing from flesh that is dead rather than alive. It signifies the pleasures, honors and vanities of the world. These things in turn are the products of a world which is itself dead and decaying. St. Paul says, Omnia arbitror ut stercora (Phil. 3, 8). Thus the true cleric must be detached entirely from worldly things, despising them ut stercora. He must crown himself with the cross of Christ, finding his treasure in poverty, his glory in ignominy, his delight in labor and mortification., his life in death to sin, to himself and to the world.

Realizing how remote we are from these holy dispositions, let us give ourselves wholeheartedly to the Son of God that we may acquire them. Let us work unceasingly that whatever within us is contrary to them may be destroyed. Let us beg the Blessed Virgin Mary, the angels and the saints to assist us.

MEDITATIONS ON TONSURE AND HOLY ORDERS

THIRD POINT

TONSURE OBLIGATES US TO SERVE CHRIST AND BE CLOTHED WITH His VIRTUES

Publicly and distinctly the aspirant for tonsure says, Dominus pars haereditatis meae et calicis meae, tu es qui . restitues haereditatem meam mihi (Ps. 15, 5). By these words he makes a solemn protestation that he chooses God for his portion, his inheritance and his treasure, despising all else. So, too, he makes evident his desire to belong entirely to God and to be in His absolute power and possession.

The ordaining prelate then clothes the young man with the surplice, saying: Induat te Dominus novum hominem, qui secundum Deum creatus est, in justitia et sanctitate veritatis (Eph. 4, 24). By these words the candidate is reminded that the surplice represents Christ, that he should be clothed with Him much more than an ordinary Christian. Thus, St. Paul writes, "For as many of you as have been baptized in Christ, have put on Christ (Gal. 3, 27), meaning that Christians must be adorned with the Master's innocence, holiness and virtues.

These briefly are the dispositions necessary for entrance into the clerical state; these are the obligations and duties of him who has been tonsured.

If this great honor has already come to you, thank God for the favor He has conferred upon you, asking His pardon if your dispositions were unworthy, or your manner of discharging your obligations unsatisfactory. Pray to Our Lord, to His Blessed Mother and to the saints to supply what is wanting in you. Beseech them to obtain for you the grace to be more faithful in the future.

If you are preparing to receive the tonsure, resolve to live henceforth in conformity with its requirements, invoking heaven's assistance the while. Always put on your suppliance with profound respect and devotion, saying, Induat me Dominus novum hominem, qui secundum Deum creatus est in justitia et sanctitate veritatis.

SECOND MEDITATION

The Four Minor Orders in General

FIRST POINT

DUTIES TO JESUS CHRIST FOR HAVING ESTABLISHED THE FOUR MINOR ORDERS

Adore our Divine Saviour as the Author and Founder of the four Minor Orders, porter, lector, exorcist and acolyte. Honor Him as the font and source of grace contained in these sacraments.(1) With subdeaconship, and the diaconship they represent degrees and participations in the priesthood, while together they constitute one perfect sacrament. Yet, this sacrament produces different graces flowing from its seven parts, just as a fountain with seven outlets diffuses its waters in seven separate channels. Revere the Divine Master in the holy plans He formulated for His Church, and the designs He had upon you in particular when He established Minor Orders.

Thank Him for all the effects of sanctifying grace produced in the Church by these orders. Offer Him all the glory they have ever effected or ever will effect in heaven and on earth, through their use by those upon whom they have been or are to be conferred. If you have already received them, renew your dispositions that you may make fruitful use of these orders. If you are about to receive them, give (1). It is an article of faith that Holy Orders is a sacrament. Whether or not each of the various divisions of Holy Orders constitutes a distinct sacrament is open to question. The Episcopate, the Priesthood and diaconship present no controversy, but the subdeaconship and minor orders are in a different category. St. John Eudes regards them as sacraments and many theologians agree with him. Other learned divines, however, hold the opposite opinion, basing their arguments on sound reasoning.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

yourself wholeheartedly to Him that you may know how He would have you receive them. Beg Him to destroy within you whatever is contrary to their fruition.

SECOND POINT

DUTIES TO OUR LORD FOR HAVING EXERCISED THE FUNCTIONS OF THESE ORDERS ON EARTH

Consider the infinite love of Jesus for His Heavenly Father and His unbounded charity towards you, His chosen ministers, which impelled Him not only to establish these four Orders, but also to exercise their functions Himself while He was on earth.

He discharged the office of porter when He drove the money changers from the Temple. And He still exercises the functions of this Office when He closes the doors of men's hearts, living temples of God ' against the evil spirit and sin. So, too, He opens them to the Holy Spirit and to divine grace.

He discharged the office of lector when, as St. Luke says, being in the city of Nazareth, He entered the synagogue and arose to read, "surrexit legere" (Luke 4, 16). In His hands were placed the prophecies of Isaias and from them He read to the assembled people.

He discharged the office of exorcist when He expelled demons from men's bodies and vice from their hearts.

He discharged the office of acolyte for He assures us He is the "light of the world" (John 8, 12).

Thank Him, then, for the great honor He rendered to His Eternal Father in all these offices, and offer to the Father this same honor in reparation for the many transgressions of which you are guilty, either in unworthily preparing for the reception of these Orders, or in the manner in which you have carried out the functions they impose. Thank Jesus, too, for the graces and merits you have acquired through the faithful discharge of the Minor Orders, and in future when you make use of them, offer yourself wholeheartedly to Him that He may infuse into your heart the dispositions and intentions with which He exercised them.

THIRD POINT

DUTIES TO OUR LORD FOR HAVING CALLED YOU TO MINOR ORDERS

Consider the incomprehensible goodness with which Christ chose you to receive Minor Orders, through which you have been or will be clothed with several offices in the kingdom of the Great King. These offices are so noble and lofty that they surpass all the dignities and powers of the world, in the same measure that the spiritual is above the temporal, heaven above the earth, grace above nature and eternity above time.

Reflect that through these orders the Son of God has made you or will make you a participant in His noblest and highest qualities. For the Order of Porter entitles the recipient to share in that quality of the Saviour described in the Apocalypse: "These things saith the Holy One and the true one, he that hath the key of David, he that openeth, and no man shutteth; shutteth and no man openeth" (Apoc. 3, 7). The Order of Lector bestows upon you the quality of doctor and teacher; the Order of Exorcist shares with you the divine quality of power over demons; the Order of Acolyte gives you the quality described in the words of Sacred Scripture: "I am the light of the world" (John 8, 12).

Thank Christ for all these favors, and beg that they may arouse within you a great love for Him and a keen desire to serve and honor Him with all fidelity.

If you have already received the four Minor Orders, ask His pardon for any negligence you may have displayed in their exercise. Make the resolution to be more faithful in the future. If you have not yet received them, promise that when they are conferred upon you, you will endeavor to discharge worthily the obligations they will impose and to make your life conformable to those high qualities of soul they demand. Ask the assistance and prayers of the Blessed Virgin Mary and of all holy priests and levites of the Church.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Ejaculatory Prayer: "Holy Priests and Levites, intercede for us."
Sancti Sacerdotes et Levitae, intercedite pro nobis.

THIRD MEDITATION

The Order of Porter

FIRST POINT

EXCELLENCE OF THE ORDER OF PORTER

The first of the four Minor Orders is that which establishes porters in God's house. Yet it is so noble and so exalted a position that it raises those invested with it to a dignity and greatness far excelling even the highest earth can bestow. The porter thus occupies a position more exalted than any judge or president or governor or prince or king or emperor. This is true, too, of the Orders of lector, exorcist and acolyte.

Four reasons prove this statement.

First, the highest dignity of the world does not demand a sacrament. Yet, one cannot become a porter, lector, exorcist or acolyte without the bestowal of a sacrament.<sup>(1)</sup>

Secondly, all these Orders imprint on the soul of the recipient a divine mark or character, which no earthly honor can effect.

Thirdly, these Orders bestow sanctifying grace, provided no obstacle impede its infusion. No earthly dignity can produce such an effect.

Fourthly, not even a king nor an emperor has the right to open or close the doors of the church. A ruler may banish a subject from his kingdom, but he may not eject him from the Temple of God, nor may he drive devils from the bodies of the possessed.

Know then that there is nothing small in the Church. Even what appears to be trivial or inconsequential is in fact great, noble and important and must be treated with the utmost respect and reverence.

(1). See footnote pp. 213.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

This is very evident, since it was necessary for Christ to institute a Sacrament in order to give to His chosen ones the power to open and close the doors of the church, ring the bells, read Sacred Scripture, exorcise the possessed, light the candles, present the wine and water for Mass, and finally to Infuse into souls the grace to discharge their duties.

Be mindful, then, of your profound obligations to the Sovereign Monarch of the universe. Be grateful for the grace He has given you or will give you in appointing you porter in His House. Thank Him with all your heart and beg of Him light to understand the full extent of the obligations of your office and a plenitude of grace to discharge them worthily.

SECOND POINT

EXTERIOR FUNCTIONS OF THE ORDER OF PORTER

The Order of Porter has two distinct types of function, exterior and interior.

The exterior functions are those named in the Roman Pontifical of Clement VIII and the Pontifical of the Apostolic Library. They consist in ringing the church bells, opening and closing the doors of the Temple of God to the faithful, of barring them to the unfaithful, of admitting those worthy of entering the sacred edifice, of expelling those who would profane it by impiety or sacrilege. Likewise, the porter is charged with the care of the Sanctuary. He opens the book for the preacher, watches over the appurtenances of the church, is careful always that nothing is defiled or lost through his negligence. He must keep the church clean and maintain good order there at all times.

Ponder well your conduct regarding these matters. If you have been guilty of any negligence or failure of duty, ask God's pardon. Make the resolution that henceforth you will be assiduous in the discharge of your holy functions, above all to see that the church and particularly the sanctuary is scrupulously neat and clean, that God may not be dishonored in His own house by neglect and disorder.

Give yourself entirely to the Son of God that you may experience

MEDITATIONS ON TONSURE AND HOLY ORDERS

the fire of His zeal for the Temple of God, as enunciated by the Psalmist: "For the zeal of thy house hath eaten me up" (Ps. 68, 10).

THIRD POINT

INTERIOR FUNCTIONS OF THE ORDER OF PORTER

The interior or spiritual functions of this office are, according to the Pontifical, "to close against the devil and open to God by word and example the invisible House of the Lord, that is, the hearts of the faithful." The porter is so to live that his conduct and behaviour will be as so many bells calling, inviting and impelling men to know God and serve Him with love. This idea is suggested by the Inspired Writer in Exodus, when speaking of the robe of the High Priest: "And beneath at the feet of the same tunic round about, thou shalt make as it were pomegranates, of violet, and purple, and scarlet twice dyed, with little bells set between" (Exod. 28, 33).

Be humbled at the realization of how far you fall short of this ideal. Examine yourself carefully that you may discover what exists in you that is contrary to it. Pray God that you may have the grace necessary to rectify whatever is wanting in you.

Ejaculatory Prayer: "May the Lord open your heart in his law."
Adaperiat cor vestrum in lege sua (2 March. 1, 4).

FOURTH MEDITATION

The Orders of Lector, Exorcist and Acolyte

FIRST POINT

FUNCTIONS OF LECTOR

There are two types of functions, exterior and interior, attached to the office of those ordained as lectors in the house of God.

The exterior functions are to dispense the word of God to the faithful by reading to them those holy doctrines befitting the Temple of the Lord. The lector should read clearly and distinctly with the intention of edifying and instructing. This part of the office of lector is so important that the Holy Ghost, speaking through the words of the Pontifical says that "those who discharge this function well will be associated with the apostles who from the beginning of Christianity, so worthily dispensed the word of God."

The lector also sings the lessons of the Church offices, and in addition blesses the bread and new fruits of the earth.

The interior functions are, according to the Pontifical, "to believe with his heart, and to effect in practice that which he reads, that he may teach the faithful by word and example." Thus, the ordaining prelate says to the young aspirant to the office of lector: "When you~ read in the church, you are assigned to an elevated position where you may be seen and heard by all. This signifies that you should possess all the virtues in an eminent degree that you may indeed be a guide and a model of the spiritual life to those who see and hear you."

Ask God's pardon for any faults you may have committed in the exercise of the office of lector. Make the resolution of being more faithful in the future and beg the assistance of His grace.

MEDITATIONS ON TONSURE AND HOLY ORDERS

SECOND POINT

FUNCTIONS OF EXORCIST

The exterior functions of the office of exorcist are to expel demons from the bodies of those possessed, to notify the faithful when it is time to receive Holy Communion, and to pour water on the hands of the priest at Mass.

The interior functions are to banish from the body and soul of the exorcist whatever is sinful and unbecoming lest he himself become the prey of those very devils he seeks to rout. Hence, the Holy Spirit speaking through the Pontifical calls exorcists "spiritual rulers for casting out devils, with all their multiform wickedness, from the bodies of the possessed," and "approved physicians of Thy Church, confirmed by the gift of healing and by heavenly virtue."

Thank God who has given you, or who is about to give you the privilege of sharing in these excellent prerogatives. Humbly ask His pardon for having abused them. Be resolved in the future to use them to the best possible advantage that they may produce their desired fruits in your own soul for the glory of His Holy Name.

THIRD POINT

FUNCTIONS OF ACOLYTE

The exterior duties of acolyte are to carry candles on certain occasions during ecclesiastical functions, to light the candles and present the wine and water for Mass.

The interior duties are outlined by the Holy Ghost speaking through the Bishop. "Strive worthily," he says, "to fulfil the office once you have received it. For you shall not be able to please God, if, carrying in your hands a light before Him, you serve the works of darkness, and thereby set an example of faithlessness to others. But as Truth says: 'Let your light shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father Who is in Heaven' (Matt. 5, 16). And as the Apostle Paul says: 'In the midst of a crooked and perverse generation shine as lights in the world, holding forth the word of life' (Phil. 2, 15) - 'Therefore let your loins be girt and lamps burning in your hands, that you may be children of the light' (Luke 12, 35). 'Cast off the works of darkness and put on the armor of light' (Rom. 13, 12). 'For you were heretofore darkness, but now light in the Lord. Walk then as children of the light' (Eph. 5, 8). What that light is upon which the Apostle so much insists, he himself points out adding: 'For the light is in all goodness, and justice, and truth' (Eph. 5, 9). Be, therefore, solicitous, in all justice and goodness and truth, to enlighten yourselves and others and the Church of God. For then will you worthily supply wine and water in the Divine Sacrifice, when, by a chaste life and good works, you shall have offered yourselves as a sacrifice to God."

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Weigh well these words and give yourself to Christ that you may possess the fruit He would have you enjoy. Offer Him thanksgiving for having been called to the office of acolyte, humiliation and contrition for past infidelities, and determination to be faithful in the future and a fervent prayer for heavenly grace.

Ejaculatory Prayer: O most blessed Light divine, Shine within these hearts of Thine, And our inmost beings fill.

O lux beatissima Reple cordis intima tuorum fidelium.

227-

FIFTH MEDITATION

The Order of Subdeaconship

FIRST POINT

DUTIES TO OUR LORD FOR HAVING INSTITUTED AND PERFORMED THE DUTIES OF SUBDEACONSHIP

Adore Christ as the author and Founder of subdeaconship. Honor Him in the designs upon His Church as well as upon you when He established it. Adore Him as the source of the graces contained in this Sacrament, graces earned at the price of His Precious Blood. Adore Him too as He carried out the functions of this Order. The office of Subdeaconship is to serve, that is, to serve God and the Church in the sacrifice of the altar and to assist the Deacon. For this purpose Christ came on earth. "The Son of man is not come to be ministered unto, but to minister," says Sacred Scripture (Matt. 20, 28). Thus, our Saviour spent His life serving God and men. "Behold my servant," said the Eternal Father referring to Him (Isa. 42, 1). And St. Paul says He took the form of a servant, formam servi accipiens (Phil. 2, 7). He brought His life to a close by the menial task of washing His apostles' feet.

Thank Him for the honor rendered His Father by the institution and exercise of this Order, as well as for the graces He merited for mankind through its operation. Offer to Him the glory rendered by those who have worthily discharged the functions of the subdeacon, offering yourself likewise to Him that you, too, may know the dispositions becoming to a servant of God and His Church.

228-

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

SECOND POINT

THE GOODNESS OF OUR LORD IN CALLING YOU TO SUBDEACONSHIP

Consider the goodness of Christ whereby He chose you from among thousands and honored you with the privilege of subdeaconship. Realize, too, that He thereby associated you with Himself in His mission of Servant of God and the Church.

Thus, before ordaining those who are to become subdeacons, the bishop reminds them to consider attentively and seriously the burden they are about to assume and the obligations they are contracting. He reminds them that they are still free to withdraw and engage in worldly pursuits, ad saecularia vota transire, but after having received subdeaconship they will belong to the Church as perpetual servants: In ecclesiae ministerio semper mancipatos. To serve her with purity and holiness, they will henceforth be obliged to live in perfect chastity and continence.

Consequently, when you have received or when you will receive this order, know that you will have given, consecrated and delivered yourself wholly to the Church and to God to live chastely in a degree of perfection not asked of others. Be mindful also that "to serve God is to reign. servire Deo regnare est, and that the service of Christ is more honorable than any man could envision. The chaste ecclesiastic is an angel of God on earth.

Thank God for the precious favors you have experienced through your admission to subdeaconship. Ask His pardon for any unfaithfulness of which you have been guilty. Renew your profession of service and chastity, begging Him for the grace to discharge worthily the functions of your Order.

MEDITATIONS ON TONSURE AND HOLY ORDERS

THIRD POINT

FUNCTIONS OF SUBDEACON

The external functions of subdeacon are as follows:

1. To prepare the water for the altar and for baptism.
2. To assist the deacon in the ministry of the altar.
3. To carry the sacred vessels to the altar for the Sacrifice of the Body and Blood of Christ.
4. To wash the corporals and purificators in a vessel especially reserved for the purpose, and afterwards disposing of the water so used, by emptying it into the baptistery. Likewise, he is to wash the other altar linens, always discharging his duties studiose, nitide et diligentissime.

The interior functions are to employ the water of divine doctrine to wash and purify the spiritual corporals and cloths of the true altar of the Church. That altar is Christ Himself and the corporals and cloths are the members of Christ, that is, God's faithful. The subdeacon must so regulate his own life and morals that they may render him able to discharge worthily the duties of an office which demands holiness and probity.

Thus, when the bishop consecrates a subdeacon, the Church speaking through the mouth of the ordaining prelate begs God to bless, sanctify and consecrate the ordinand. Holy Church implores Him to constitute the subdeacon a tireless and watchful sentinel of the heavenly army. She begs God to send down upon the ordinand the Spirit of wisdom and understanding, counsel and fortitude, knowledge and piety, and the Spirit of the fear of the Lord.

Then the bishop places the amice on the young man's head, saying: "Receive this amice by which is signified the curbing of the tongue." As he places the maniple on the aspirant's left arm, he says, "Receive the maniple by which is signified the fruit of goodworks." Then he clothes him with the tunic, saying, "May the Lord clothe thee with the tunic of sweetness and the garment of joy."

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

These things show clearly that the subdeacon should be filled with the gifts of the Holy Ghost; that he should know how to control his tongue, practise goodworks and have as his only joy the serving and honoring of God.

Consider these truths and give yourself completely to the Spirit of God that you may acquire gratitude, love and penance and a firm resolution to give yourself wholeheartedly to Jesus, invoking His grace and the assistance of His Mother, and of the holy priests and levites in heaven.

Ejaculatory Prayer: "O Lord, for I am thy servant: I am thy servant and the servant of thy Church."

O Domine, quia ego servus tuus: ego semus tuus et servus Ecclesiae tuae.

SIXTH MEDITATION

The Order of Deaconship

FIRST POINT

DUTIES TO CHRIST FOR HAVING INSTITUTED DEACONSHIP

Adore our Saviour as the Author and Founder of the Order of Deaconship, and the source of all the graces contained in this sacrament. Adore Him, too, in the designs He conceived for His Church and for you in particular when He instituted deaconship. Thank Him for the honor given His Father through its medium and for the manifold graces it has brought to mankind. Ask His pardon for not having discharged its obligations properly, giving yourself unreservedly to Him with the firm intention of working only for His honor and glory.

SECOND POINT

THE CHIEF DUTY OF THE DEACON IS TO PREACH THE GOSPEL

One of the most beautiful and saintly qualities with which the Eternal Father endowed His Son is enunciated in these words of Sacred Scripture: "I am appointed King by him over Sion his holy mountain preaching his commandment" (PS. 2, 6). Christ was the sovereign Preacher of the divine word. The principal office He discharged while on earth was to preach and He Himself stated that He had been sent from heaven for that purpose, «I must preach the Kingdom of God: for therefore am I sent » (Luke 4, 43).

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

The Master has associated you or will associate you with Himself in this noble and sublime office, for one of the principal duties of the deacon is to preach the word of God. "The deacon must minister at the altar, baptize and preach," says the bishop to the ordinand.

Thank God, then, for this favor He confers upon you. Realize your unworthiness, and give yourself to the Saviour that you may excite within your heart the proper dispositions to discharge your duties worthily. Seek to know the dispositions with which the Lord exercised these functions. Endeavor to put into practice the injunction already given or about to be given you by the bishop: "Take care that you may illustrate the gospel, by your living works, to those to whom you announce it with your lips, so that it may be said of you, Blessed are the feet of those who preach the gospel of peace, who bring glad tidings of good things." These words mean simply that you should so live that your every action may be as it were a tongue or a voice, vox clamantis (Matt. 3, 3), exhorting the faithful to serve and love God.

THIRD POINT

ADDITIONAL DUTIES OF THE DEACON

The remaining duties of the deacon are:

1. To serve the priest at the altar. Deacons are therefore the levites of the Gospel, carrying out in the New Law those duties devolving upon the levites of the Old Testament, who served the priests in the tabernacle.
2. To confer the Sacrament of Baptism.
3. To administer Holy Communion. Hence, the Pontifical calls them "co-ministers of the Body and Blood of Christ," inasmuch as they cooperate with the priest in the administration of the Body and Blood of Our Lord.

Christ fulfilled all these duties while He was on earth. He was the servant of His Father: Ecce servus meus (Is. 42, 1). He baptized the apostles: Hic est qui baptizat in Spiritu Sancto (John 1, 33). With His own hands He administered to them His Body and Blood.

MEDITATIONS ON TONSURE AND HOLY ORDERS

Thus, in elevating you to the dignity of the diaconship He has shared His own prerogatives with you. What admirable goodness! What heartfelt praise you should offer Him! What confusion should fill you at the realization of your failure to live up to His generosity and for the indignities and ingratitude you have offered Him! How saintly should be the life of a deacon! No wonder St. Paul says that a deacon must be proved before being received; they must be "chaste, not double-tongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre: holding the mystery of faith in a pure conscience" (1 Tim. 3, 8-9).

Finally, take well to heart the words of the bishop, "Be ye pure and chaste as becoming ministers of Christ and dispensers of the mysteries of God." Ask our Blessed Lord for these requisites.

Ejaculatory Prayer: "Grant, O Lord Jesus, that among Thy dispensers I may be found faithful."
Da mihi, Domine Jesu, ut inter dispensatores tuos fidelis inveniar.

SEVENTH MEDITATION

The Priesthood

FIRST POINT

DUTIES TO OUR LORD IN RETURN FOR THE INSTITUTION OF THE PRIESTHOOD

Adore Christ as the sovereign Priest, Author of the Order of the Priesthood and Source of all graces contained in this august sacrament. Adore Him in all His holy designs upon His Church and upon you when He founded it. Adore Him in His divine exercise of the functions of the priesthood while He was on earth, thanking Him for the glory He rendered His Father, and for the grace He bestowed upon the whole Church and upon you in particular. Ask His pardon for having impeded the operation of this grace within your own soul, and beg Him to help you to be more faithful in the future.

SECOND POINT

EXCELLENCE OF THE SACERDOTAL FUNCTIONS

Ponder what the bishop says to the young man presented as a candidate for the priesthood.

He reminds him that the ancients, whom God commanded Moses to appoint to govern the Chosen People, were but figures and shadows of the priests of the New Law; and that the priests of today are the successors of the seventy-two disciples selected by the Master. They are doctores fidei, comites Apostolorum, cooperatores ordinis episcopalis.

MEDITATIONS ON TONSURE AND HOLY ORDERS

The bishop then instructs the ordinand that the sacerdotal office comprises the following functions:

1. To change the bread and wine into the Body and Blood of Christ, to offer Him sacrifice and give Him the people.
2. To preach the word of God.
3. To baptize.
4. Praeesse, that is, to rule and guide souls towards eternity.
5. To forgive sins or withhold absolution.
6. To bless. Hence when the bishop anoints the hands of the ordinand with holy oil, he says: "Deign to consecrate and sanctify, we beseech Thee, O Lord, these hands by this holy anointing and our blessing; that whatsoever they may bless may be blessed; and that whatsoever they may consecrate may be consecrated and sanctified in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen."

Remember that all these qualities and functions belong only to the divine and infinite power of God. Consequently, when He admitted you to the priesthood, He elevated you to a divine and infinite dignity. Consequently, you incur obligations which are infinite in character and obligate you to thank God constantly, to love Him and to surrender yourself completely to Him that you may worthily discharge your duties. Let this be your resolution.

THIRD POINT

MEANS OF CONSERVING THE GRACE OF ORDINATION

Weigh well the words spoken by the Holy Ghost through St. Paul: "Neglect not the grace that is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy, with the imposition of the hands of the priesthood" (1 Tim. 4, 14).

I admonish thee that thou stir up the grace of God which is in thee. by imposition of my hands" (2 Tim. 1, 6).

If Timothy, to whom these words were addressed, himself a saint and martyr, needed this salutary admonition, how much more is it necessary for you!

To preserve and revivify the grace of ordination, or to dispose yourself to receive it, three things are necessary:

1. Destroy within you by penance whatsoever is opposed to it.
2. Cultivate a high esteem of the priesthood and its duties. Entertain an intense desire to discharge its obligations in holiness. Put into practice the beautiful words spoken by the bishop to the ordinand:

"As you, therefore, beloved children, have been chosen by the voice of our brethren to be consecrated as our coadjutors, preserve the purity of your lives in unspotted holiness. Reflect seriously on what you do. Let your conduct be in conformity with the action you perform, so that celebrating the mystery of the Lord's death, you take heed to mortify your members from all vices and lusts. Let your doctrine be spiritual medicine for the people of God; let the odor of your life be the delight of the Church of Christ; so that you may build up the house, that is the family of God . . ."

3. Be ever mindful of your need of God's grace for the fulfilment of your priestly duties. Beg of Him that He may assist you. Pray to the Blessed Virgin and all the holy priests and levites in heaven.

Ejaculatory Prayer: "O sweet Jesus, grant that the odor of our life may be the delight of thy Church."

O bone Jesu, fac ut bonus odor vitae nostrae sit delectamentum Ecclesiae tuae.

EIGHTH MEDITATION

The Feast of the Priesthood(1)

FIRST POINT

JESUS CHRIST IS THE SOVEREIGN PRIEST

Let us consider and adore our Lord Jesus Christ as the supreme High Priest, exercising with infinite sanctity the sacerdotal functions by which He procured unlimited glory for His Heavenly Father, destroyed sin, merited for us all the appropriate graces necessary to our salvation and placed before our eyes the living example and the perfect rule that we must follow if we would exercise worthily these same great functions.

Let us give profound thanks to Him for all these miracles, beseeching the angels, and the saints, especially all the holy priests and levites, and the Blessed Virgin Mary to help us to bless and thank our Sovereign Priest for His incomparable gifts.

SECOND POINT

INSTITUTION OF THE CATHOLIC PRIESTHOOD BY OUR LORD

Let us consider our good Saviour as the Founder, the Head and Superior of the Holy Order of the priesthood, as the Principle and the

(1). The Feast of the Priesthood was formerly celebrated by the Eudist Fathers, the Sulpicians and other religious congregations on November 13.

238-

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Fountain of the boundless wealth of graces and blessings contained in Holy Orders and as the Sanctifier of all holy priests and levites.

Let us thank Our Lord and summon all the angels and saints in heaven to thank Him with us, for the infinite favor conferred upon the Church in establishing the priesthood, and in raising up her Priests on whom He has bestowed such admirable powers, for the benefit of the faithful, enabling each chosen priest to offer the wonderful sacrifice of the altar, to administer on their behalf His Sacred Body and His Precious Blood, to wipe out the sins of the faithful and to reconcile them with God, in short, to close hell against them and to open heaven for them.

We shall also bless Our Lord, the High Priest, for the countless graces He has conferred on earth on all His holy priests and levites, and for all the glory and happiness which He communicates to them in heaven. We shall likewise thank the glorious company of priests for all the services they have rendered to the divine Majesty of God, and to His true Church. We shall offer to God all the honor that they accorded Him while on earth and will give Him forever in heaven. We shall ask them to unite us with their unceasing praise of God and to make us sharers in the virtues they practised here on earth as members of the priesthood.

THIRD POINT

INCOMPARABLE FAVOR WHICH OUR LORD HAS GRANTED US IN CALLING US TO THE PRIESTHOOD

Let us consider the incomparable favor which Our Lord has bestowed in having called each of us to a state so noble, so holy, so worthy of admiration as the priesthood. We must give Him deepest thanks for this inestimable privilege, and beg all the saints of heaven to bless and glorify Him for it on our behalf.

Then we shall make a careful examination of our innumerable sins, offences and negligences, in our sacerdotal functions, that we may humble ourselves most deeply at the feet of our Redeemer, asking His pardon with great contrition, and offering Him, in satisfaction all the honor rendered to His majesty by all the holy priests and levites, in the performance of these same functions. We must implore our Divine Master to repair our defects Himself, while we promise henceforth to begin with His help to live as veritable priests, and to discharge with fitting fervor and sanctity the functions of His divine Priesthood, beseeching Him to grant us all the graces we need for this end. We must also ask the Blessed Virgin Mary and all holy priests to aid us to obtain these graces from the infinite mercy of the omnipotent High Priest.

Ejaculatory Prayer: "Thou art a priest for ever."

THE ANNUAL RETREAT

Part VI

MEDITATIONS FOR THE ANNUAL RETREAT((1)

FIRST MEDITATION

The Holy Sacrifice of the Mass

FIRST POINT

THE DIGNITY AND HOLINESS OF THE MASS

REFLECT on the greatness, the holiness and infinite dignity of this august mystery.

It is the most marvelous action ever performed in heaven or on earth; it is a divine sacrifice with Christ as its victim, offered to God by God for intentions and ends which in themselves are infinite. It is the supreme sacrifice of Calvary by which Our Lord confers three ineffable favors upon you: He comes to you, He sacrifices Himself for you, and He gives Himself to you.

Cultivate a great love and appreciation of the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass, at which myriads of angels gather in holy awe. Thank the Son of God for having established it in His Church, and for having given you the privilege of offering it and of receiving His Sacred Body and Blood in Holy Communion.

(1). These short and practical meditations are taken from the original edition of A Memorial of the Ecclesiastical Life. See Oeuvres Complètes, Vol. III, p. 124 ff. They may be used for morning meditation or for daily examination during the annual retreat.

244-

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

SECOND POINT

FAULTS COMMITTED IN THE CELEBRATION OF MASS

Examine yourself carefully on the faults you have committed in offering the Holy Sacrifice. Examine both your interior and exterior deportment. Have you prepared worthily for Holy Mass? Have you made a proper thanksgiving afterwards?

What fruit have you reaped from the scores of Masses that you have offered and from the many Communion you have received? What advancement in virtue or what amendment of life have you gained?

Have you been assiduous in preventing profanations and irreverence in the churches where Mass is offered? Has your behaviour been in keeping with what is expected in reverence and devotion to the Mass?

Ask God's pardon for any faults of which you may have been guilty. Pray Our Lord to help you repair the evil your negligence or culpability may have caused. Make the resolution of being more careful in the future. Beg God's help to persevere.

Ejaculatory Prayer: "Bear in mind what you do. Let your conduct be in conformity with the action you perform."

Agnoscite quod agitis ; imitami quod tractatis.

SECOND MEDITATION

The Sacrament of Penance

FIRST POINT

CHRIST'S GOODNESS IN HAVING INSTITUTED THIS SACRAMENT

Let us consider the goodness and mercy of Christ in having established in His Church this great sacrament by which He confers three special favors upon us.

First, Our Blessed Lord pardons our sins through sacramental Penance, wipes away all our transgressions, no matter how enormous or numerous. Consequently, our indebtedness to Him is equal to His infinite kindness. Sin being infinite in malice, the Divine Son bestows an infinite good upon us when He pardons us. Even in the remission of one venial sin, He confers upon us a spiritual favor greater in value than He would give us if He were to cure the greatest physical sufferings we could conceive. It is obvious that even the smallest sin surpasses the greatest material ill.

Let us think, then, of our obligations to God because of the manifold sins He has forgiven us. Let us thank Him constantly.

Secondly, through the Sacrament of Penance, He applies His Precious Blood to our souls to cleanse and purify them from sin. The Sacrament of Penance is, as it were, a spiritual blood-bath wherein Christ washes us whenever we will. O unspeakable love! He could have wiped away our sins in a thousand other ways, but He chose this sacrament to show us His infinite love.

Thirdly, not only does Penance destroy our sins, but it fills our souls

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

with sanctifying grace, increasing the grace that is already within us, or reestablishing it if we have lost it through mortal sin. Instantly, our souls are adorned with His virtues, with the gifts of the Holy Ghost, with the beatitudes, and we become children of God, temples of the Divine Spirit, heirs of the Eternal Father, co-heirs with the Son. Let us thank Him unfailingly for His mercy.

SECOND POINT

DISPOSITIONS NECESSARY FOR THE WORTHY RECEPTION OF THE SACRAMENT OF PENANCE

In receiving the Sacrament of Penance, it is necessary to have the proper dispositions for its worthy reception. Otherwise, what was meant to be a remedy becomes a poison, what was intended to be a grace becomes a sin. Thus, salvation is endangered and a sacrament is received sacrilegiously. Moreover, the oftener we go to confession, so much the more should we be on our guard against carelessness, routine and the lack of true repentance.

The dispositions with which we should approach this great sacrament are as follows: 1. We should realize that of ourselves we cannot have true contrition; hence, we should constantly invoke God's assistance and the help of the Blessed Mother and of the saints; 2. We should examine our conscience very carefully; 3. We should have true sorrow for our sins and a firm purpose of amendment; 4. We should make our confession clearly and sincerely, concealing or minimizing nothing of a serious nature; 5. We should be very docile to the Admonitions of the confessor; 6. We should faithfully execute the penance as soon as it can conveniently be done; 7. We should range ourselves on God's side against ourselves, putting on His zeal that we may destroy within us the enemy of our souls, sin itself. In a word, we should make each confession as though it were our last, and as though we were about to face the Omnipotent judge from whom nothing will be hidden.

Let us examine ourselves on the manner of making our confessions in the past, invoking God's pardon for any negligence of which we may have been guilty. Let us make the resolution to repair our past faults by a genuine confession in which we shall have a fulness of His grace. Let us beg His help for the future.

Ejaculatory Prayer: "Have mercy on me, O God, according to thy great mercy."
Miserere mei, Deus, secundum magnam misericordiam tuam (Ps. 50, 3).

THIRD MEDITATION.

Mental and Vocal Prayer

FIRST POINT

EXCELLENCE OF PRAYER

Prayer, either mental or vocal, is a conversation with God. Therein you render Him homage, make known your wants and beg light and grace from Him.

It is, indeed, a high privilege that you, a miserable sinner, a mere nothing, should be able to commune with the Creator. Surely, He bestows upon you a tremendous favor in permitting you even to approach His august presence or to lift up your eyes to Him. "And dost thou think it meet to open thy eyes upon such an one, and to bring him into judgment with thee?" (Job, 14, 3).

Christ was not more insistent upon any point than that of prayer. Why? First of all, because He loves you so much that His chief happiness consists in conversing with you, unworthy though you are. Hence, Sacred Scripture says, "My delights were to be with the children of men" (Prov. 8, 31). Secondly, He realizes that you of yourself are nothing, and can do nothing. Thirdly, He wishes to enrich you with His gifts. You must ask Him continually for what you need, thus making manifest your utter dependence upon Him and your realization that He alone can help you since He is the source of all good.

MEDITATIONS FOR THE ANNUAL RETREAT

SECOND POINT

DISPOSITIONS NECESSARY FOR PRAYER

Reflect on the interior and exterior dispositions with which the creature should approach his Creator. Man is indeed a humble subject in the presence of his Sovereign, a sinner before the Saint of saints, a criminal before the Supreme judge.

Recall how Christ prayed to His Father during His years on earth. Think, too, how Mary and the saints prayed.

Examine yourself carefully for any faults you may have committed in vocal or in mental prayer.

Have you prepared yourself sufficiently? "Before prayer prepare thy soul," says Sacred Scripture (Ecclus. 18, 23). Have you neglected any obligatory prayers? Have you chosen unsuitable times or inappropriate places? Have you permitted yourself to become the prey of distractions? Have you been reverent and recollected? Have your prayers been fruitful for advancement in the ways of God? Have you taken advantage of the graces and gifts attached to the prayers you have said? Have you distracted others at prayer? Remember you must respect others who are communing with the Master and do nothing to hinder their devotions.

Ask God's pardon for any faults of which you may have been guilty. Beg His grace to be more faithful in the future. Seek the means best suited to help your prayers become meritorious. Avoid the occasions of distraction.

Ejaculatory Prayer: "We ought always to pray and not to faint."
Oportet semper orare, et non deficere (Luke 18, 1).

FOURTH MEDITATION

Submission to the Will of God

FIRST POINT

IMPORTANCE OF SUBMISSION TO THE DIVINE WILL

The divine will is the principle, the end and center of all things. It is infinitely powerful, wise and good. It ordains and disposes of whatever happens in this world and in eternity. In all its decrees it is infinitely adorable for it takes its origin in the most perfect justice, goodness and charity towards us. It does all things for the best in the most admirable manner conceivable.

The divine will is manifested in various happenings, by the Commandments, by the precepts of the Church, by our duty, our obligations and our state in life.

The Son of God did not choose His own will but the will of His Heavenly Father. He was entirely subjected to His Father's mandates, no matter how difficult they were.

The Blessed Virgin and the saints followed a similar path of conformity to the divine will.

Our salvation, our perfection, our happiness, our peace, our Wellbeing, and even our liberty, depend on our constant cooperation with the will of God, following the example of Jesus, Mary and the saints

MEDITATIONS FOR THE ANNUAL RETREAT

SECOND POINT

HOW HAVE YOU PRACTISED SUBMISSION To GOD'S WILL?

Examine yourself on your failures to submit to God's will shown in various events of your life, as well as in your observance of the commandments and in the precepts of the Church. Above all else, ask yourself how you have cooperated with that divine will insofar as it affects your state in life. Ask the Master's pardon and be resolved in the future to correct whatever is wanting in you.

Ejaculatory Prayer: "Behold I come that I should do thy will, O my God."
Ecce venio ut faciam voluntatem tuam, Deus.

FIFTH MEDITATION

Obedience

FIRST POINT

NECESSITY AND IMPORTANCE OF OBEDIENCE

The virtue of obedience is so necessary to eternal salvation that Our Lord came on earth to teach it to us by word and example. He practised it unceasingly during His life, doing nothing except by obedience. Not only did He obey His Heavenly Father, but likewise He was subject to Mary and Joseph. So, too, He bowed to Herod and Pilate and His executioners who represented the powers of darkness "This is your hour, and the power of darkness" (Luke 22, 53) He was obedient even unto death and unto the death of the cross.

The saints have always loved this holy virtue, preaching it incessantly and practising it scrupulously.

The Scripture, the Fathers and Doctors of the Church all agree that where there is not obedience there cannot be true virtue.

Thank Our Lord for the inspiring example He has given us.

IMITATIONS FOR THE ANNUAL RETREAT 253 -

SECOND POINT

HOW HAVE YOU PRACTISED OBEDIENCE?

Examine yourself on the many faults of which you are guilty in regard to the submission of mind and will to those who for you take God's place. Ask His pardon for your transgressions.

Ejaculatory Prayer: "Obey your prelates."
Obedite praepositis vestris (Heb. 13,17).

SIXTH MEDITATION

Charity

FIRST POINT

EXCELLENCE OF CHARITY

Charity is the queen and mother of all the other virtues, their grid, their soul, their very life. Consequently, where charity does not exist, there is no true virtue possible.

Charity brought Christ forth from the bosom of His Father that He might descend into the womb of the Virgin Mother. It prompted Him to come on earth and lead a life of suffering and misery for thirty-four years, finally dying on the cross. It impelled Him to give Himself to us continually in the Blessed Sacrament.

Charity is the dominant theme of the New Testament, the sole commandment Christ gave before His death. Weigh well His words: "This is my commandment, that you love one another, as I have loved you" (John 15, 12). Consider, too, the words of the Apostle Paul: "Charity is patient, is kind; charity envieth not, dealeth not perversely, is not puffed up; is not ambitious, seeketh not her own, is not provoked to anger, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth with the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things" (I Cor. 13, 47).

The flower and perfection of charity is the meekness which our Saviour recommended in His words, "Learn of me, because I am meek, and humble of heart" (Matt. 11, 29).

The greatest work of charity is to labor for the salvation of souls.

MEDITATIONS FOR THE ANNUAL RETREAT

This, indeed, surpasses all else that a Christian might ever accomplish on earth, or as St. Dionysius says, It is the most divine of all divine things."

SECOND POINT

HOW HAVE YOU PRACTISED CHARITY?

Examine yourself on the faults you have committed against charity in thoughts, words, actions or omissions against this virtue, in relation to those with whom you live.

Also consider what transgressions you have been guilty of in the matter of your zeal for the salvation of souls.

Ask God's pardon and make a firm purpose of amendment.

Ejaculatory Prayer: "This is my commandment, that you love one another."
Hoc est praeceptum meum, ut diligatis invicem (John 15, 12).

SEVENTH MEDITATION

Humility

FIRST POINT

NECESSITY OF HUMILITY

Humility consists in maintaining a very low degree of self-esteem, in despising, hating and avoiding honor and glory as well as the praises of men. It seeks abjection, ignominy and scorn.

Without humility it is impossible to please God or save one's soul, according to the words of our Saviour: "Amen I say to you, unless you be converted, and become as little children, you shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 18, 3).

Humility is the measure of perfection and holiness of souls on earth and of their glory in eternity, for the Son of God said when He was here on earth: "Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, he is the greater in the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 18, 4).

Since there is no virtue more necessary than humility, it follows that no vice is more to be avoided than vanity, especially by those who profess to be devout.

Think of the multitudes of angels damned by one defiant thought of pride; think of the number of souls who enjoyed a high degree of holiness, but were hurled into hell because of arrogance and pride.

Reflect upon the sublime examples of humility given by the Son of God, as well as by His Mother and the saints.

Consider in particular these matters regarding which you should practise humility.

MEDITATIONS FOR THE ANNUAL RETREAT 257 -

SECOND POINT

HOW HAVE YOU PRACTISED HUMILITY?

Make a serious and thorough examination of the faults you have committed against humility by thought, word and deed.

Ascertain your true sentiments towards yourself. Do you take pleasure in the esteem and praises of men? Do you seek to avoid whatever may be disparaging to you? Are you boastful? Do you receive with humility deserved corrections or warnings? Do you cling stubbornly to your own opinion in your discussions with others? Do you submit willingly to your superiors? Do you act and speak so as to draw to yourself the praises of those about you? Do you not really esteem yourself before all else? Do you covet dignity and advancement? Do you take a secret pride in your knowledge, experience, industry, ability or whatever talent you may have which you deem important?

Ask Christ to forgive the many sins you may have committed against humility. Beg Him to help you to repair the evil you have caused and take the good resolution to dispel by every means in your power whatever is opposed to this beautiful virtue, that you may acquire and practise humility in the future. That your success may be assured, have this intention at your Masses, Communion and in your prayers. Study your soul, that you may truly know yourself and learn well these three truths: 1. you are nothing, you have nothing, of yourself you can do nothing; 2. you are of yourself sinful, having within yourself the source of every evil; 3. you have richly merited God's anger and eternal punishment if you have committed a serious sin.

Never willingly accept the praises of creatures, but offer them to God to whom they belong rightly: "To the king of ages, immortal, invisible, the only God, be honor and glory" (1 Tim. 1, 17).

Humble yourself at the beginning and the end of every action, ever mindful of your unworthiness and following the injunction of Sacred Scripture, "The greater thou art, the more humble thyself in all things; and thou shalt find grace before God" (Ecclus. 3, 20).

Reject at once any thoughts or sensations of vanity which may come to you. Turn them into occasions of abasing yourself in the light of your own nothingness.

Close your eyes from faults of others, and see only your own. When you witness or learn of your neighbor's weaknesses, be humbled yourself, realizing that there is no crime which you yourself might not commit if it were *not for God's grace.

When others blame you, accept it that you may learn self-condemnation. Seek not to be regarded as a master, or a learned man or an outstanding personality.

Love and embrace the abjectness which comes from your faults. Willingly accept all humiliations, confusion, contradictions and afflictions which God sends you, not merely as trials to sanctify you, but as just deserts for your sins and as means by which to humble your pride.

Ejaculatory Prayer: "Humble thyself in all things: and thou shalt find grace before God."
Humilia te in omnibus et coram Deo invenies gratiam (Ecclus. 3, 20).

EIGHTH MEDITATION

Modesty, Simplicity and Truth

FIRST POINT

EXCELLENCE OF MODESTY, SIMPLICITY AND TRUTH

Consider the words of St. Paul, I ... beseech you, by the mildness and modesty of Christ" (2 Cor. 10, 1), "put ye on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, the bowels of mercy, benignity, humility, modesty, patience" (Col. 3, 12). "Let your modesty be known to all men. The Lord is nigh" (Phil. 4, 5).

Study the admirable modesty of Christ and His Blessed Mother who are the models and exemplars we as Christians must follow.

Ponder the words of the Son of God, "Be ye therefore wise as serpents and simple as doves" (Matt. 10, 16), and be reminded that simplicity is a virtue dear to the heart of God. It is the direct opposite of duplicity, worldly wisdom and prudence, as well as of useless thoughts, desires, words and actions.

Remember that Christians must cherish a great love of truth: 1. because Christ is the Eternal Truth and is called in Sacred Scripture "faithful and true" (Apoc. 19, 11); 2. because Christians are called in the Scripture "the faithful"; 3. because Christ Himself called liars and deceivers children of Satan, who in turn is the father of lies and the author of deceit.

SECOND POINT

HOW HAVE YOU PRACTISED MODESTY, SIMPLICITY AND TRUTH?

Make an examination of conscience regarding the faults you have committed against these virtues, paying particular attention to the modesty you should display when in church, in your own room, walking in public or talking with your neighbor. Are you guilty of duplicity or artifice?

Do you go to extremes in dress, in eating or in the furnishings of your home or room? Are you guided by the maxims of the world? Are you curious about secular events, given to following foolish fashions or inclined to listen to or read useless things?

Are you disposed to be singular or odd, thus causing a rift in that spirit of union which should exist between you and those with whom you live? Are you faithful to your word and your promise? Is your manner of speaking simple, sincere and candid? Do you exaggerate?

Ejaculatory Prayer: "Let your modesty be known to all men."
Modestia vestra nota sit omnibus hominibus (Phil. 4, 5).

NINTH MEDITATION

The Manner of Performing Our Actions

FIRST POINT

IMPORTANCE OF DOING ALL THINGS WELL

It is of the utmost importance that we perform all our actions, even the smallest, in the best possible manner. Several reasons demand this.

First of all, we are children of God, created to His image and likeness. Consequently, we must imitate Him, according to the words of > the Apostle, "Be ye therefore followers of God, as most dear children" (Eph. 5, 1). God performs His every work divinely, and so we too must endeavor to discharge every obligation and perform every action with a perfection becoming sons of God and in obedience to the Saviour's commandment, "Be you therefore perfect, as also your heavenly Father is perfect" (Matt. 5, 48).

Secondly, Christ, who is our exemplar and to whom we must conform our lives, rendered infinite glory to His Father, even in the smallest things, for He did all for love of Him.

Thirdly, God bestows even the smallest things upon us, such as every morsel of bread we eat or every drop of water we drink, with the same love that pours upon us His greatest blessings. Thus, He is as much concerned with those things which may appear trivial as He is with the significant, as we are reminded when Scripture tells us that even the hairs of our head are numbered. Consequently, we must show the same interest in our smallest actions as in the important ones.

Fourthly, when we act negligently and without proper dispositions,

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

we rob God of the glory due Him in time and eternity, purchased for us by the shedding of Christ's blood. In addition, we lose the treasures of grace that otherwise would be laid up for us in heaven, had our motives been holy. Finally, it IS much easier to do our duty with fervor and devotion than it is to act coldly and carelessly.

SECOND POINT

HOW HAVE YOU PERFORMED YOUR ACTIONS UP TO NOW?

The proper manner of acting is outlined by St. Paul when he says, "Whether you eat or drink, or whatsoever else you do, do all to the glory of God" (1 Cor. 10, 31). These words mean simply that you should act with His dispositions as He Himself would do in our place, as far as you possibly can with the help of His grace.

Weigh carefully the faults you have committed in this respect: 1. in those actions directly concerned with God, as in those things connected with the virtue of religion and with our priestly duties; 2. in those affecting your neighbor; 3. in those that have a bearing upon your state in life, your profession or the office which is yours.

Ask God's pardon for any offenses of which you are guilty. Offer Him in reparation the honor His Son rendered Him by His holy life, and resolve henceforth to do well all that is required of you.

For this purpose:

1. Avoid laziness, coldness, lukewarmness and negligence.

2. Always have a right and pure intention, protesting to God that you wish to do nothing to please the world, nor to gain the esteem of men, nor to pander to your own satisfaction, nor your own temporal or spiritual interests, nor for merit or reward. On the contrary, make open avowal that you do everything for His glory and the fulfilment of His will as well as in thanksgiving for all Christ did while He was on earth.

3. Perform every action according to its appointed time and place. "Let all things be done decently and according to order" (1 Cor. 14, 40).

MEDITATIONS FOR THE ANNUAL RETREAT

4. Let your smallest action include within it all possible perfection, remembering that whatever is done for God is great.

5. Perform all your actions with the dispositions becoming to them: for example, those of humility with a spirit of self-abasement; those of obedience, promptly and willingly; those of penance with mortification and hatred of self and of sin; those of charity towards your neighbor with an open heart filled with divine love; those of piety and religion with devotion.

6. Make an act of renouncement of self before each action, at least before the principal ones, thus giving yourself to Christ to enter into His spirit.

7. Upon the completion of the action, preserve these dispositions, uniting yourself to those which filled the Saviour as He performed similar ones, for He is and "worketh all in all" (1 Cor. 12, 6).

8. Do and suffer all for God. "Do his will with a great heart, and a willing mind" (2 Mach. 1, 3), that is, with the love and wish to please Him, thus putting into every action your sole desire of making His divine will your pleasure, your joy, your happiness and your paradise.

9. When you have performed the action, shut your heart against any self-satisfaction or vanity, remembering that even as you are nothing but sinfulness, so nothing could emanate from you of yourself but evil, God being the only source of good. Thus, too, you should remember that since you never really succeed in doing your best, your actions are usually full of faults which should be looked upon as useless.

TENTH MEDITATION

The Use We Should Make of the Faculties of Our Soul and Body

FIRST POINT

ALL THAT IS IN US BELONGS TO GOD

All that is in us belongs to God by three general titles which comprise an infinity of others: the title of creation, the title of conservation, and the title of redemption.

By creation and conservation all that is in our soul and body belongs to His Divine Majesty as many times as there are moments in our life on earth, because, after putting us in this world, God preserves us continually in being.

By redemption we belong to Him by as many titles as His Divine Son had thoughts, words and actions, bore sufferings and shed drops of His Blood. He employed these means, of which each is infinite in value, to snatch us from the captivity of sin and Satan. Thus, we have an infinity of obligations constraining us to use every faculty of our body and soul in His service and for the honor and glory of Him to whom we belong in entirety. "For you are bought with a great price. Glorify and bear God in your body" (1 Cor. 6, 20).

By Baptism we are made members of Christ. "Know you not that your bodies are the members of Christ?" (1 Cor. 6, 15) Hence, we are obliged to live His life, be animated by His spirit, make the same use of the powers of our soul and our senses that He did of His. Rather, we should say it is He who should use our faculties for the diffusion of His spirit.

MEDITATIONS FOR THE ANNUAL RETREAT

By Baptism, too, as well as by Confirmation, our body and soul were made temples of the Holy Ghost, consecrated to God more solemnly than are chalices, ciboria or altars. Now, as in a holy temple there is nothing which may be used for profane purposes, so there must be nothing in us but what is used for the service and honor of Him to whom they have been consecrated, not only by Baptism and Confirmation, but also through the Holy Eucharist.

Thank God for all these favors.

SECOND POINT

How HAVE YOU USED THE FACULTIES OF YOUR SOUL AND THE MEMBERS OF YOUR BODY?

What use have you made of the various faculties of your soul and body?

Humble yourself and be mindful that instead of having employed all your faculties in the service of Him who gave them to you, and to whom they belong, you have employed them to serve His enemies.

Ask His pardon with great sorrow in your heart. Offer Him in satisfaction all the honor His Son rendered Him, through the saintly use of His own all holy faculties.

Search your understanding, your memory and your will to see if there is anything there which displeases Him. Scrutinize the passions of your lower appetite, love, hatred, joy, sadness, fear, hope; examine all actions done with your eyes, your hearing, your taste, your tongue, your feet and your hands. Make a determined resolution to mortify and destroy whatever you discover to be at variance with His divine will, obeying the injunction of the Holy Ghost, "Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth" (Col. 3, 5).

Make a new oblation and consecration of your body and soul to God, supplicating Him to employ His all powerful goodness in taking full and absolute possession of you, that He may thus destroy within you whatsoever is contrary to Him, and establish within you His kingdom and His adorable will.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Be resolved to imitate and follow Christ in the holy use to which He subjected His every faculty. Give yourself completely to Him, that He may fill you with His spirit and possess and govern you in all things.

Ejaculatory Prayer: "You are not your own. For you are bought with a great price."
Non estis vestri: empti enim estis pretio magno (1 Cor. 6, 19-20).

Part VII

MASS AND OFFICE FOR THE FEAST OF THE PRIESTHOOD

INTRODUCTION

ST. JOHN EUDES labored for many years to revive the priestly spirit in the French clergy of the Seventeenth Century. He realized in the course of time that a solemn feast in honor of the priesthood of Jesus Christ and of all holy priests and levites would greatly help to develop the apostolic life in the members of his Institute and instil it into the seminarians of whom he had charge; and at an early date he decided to establish it. In 1649, he submitted to the approval of Doctors Basire and Le Moussu an Office of the Priesthood written by himself, and this he published in 1652 in the first edition of the Proper of his Congregation. On December 29th of the same year, His Lordship Claude Auvry, Bishop of Coutances, authorized all the faithful of his diocese, and especially the priests and clerics of his seminary, to make use of the Saint's Offices. At this time, the Feast of the Priesthood was allocated to November 15, and accordingly it is morally certain that it was celebrated in the seminary of Coutances on November 15, 1653.

Subsequently, the Saint continued to perfect his Office, as is shown by the editions of the Proper published by him in 1668 and in 1672. In these the hymns are more rhythmic, an octave is added to the Office, and in order to make it possible to celebrate the Feast and its octave before the Feast of the Presentation of the Blessed Virgin, the solemnity is advanced two days and so is kept on November 13. St. John Eudes wanted the renewal of the promises of the clergy in his Society to take place on the Feast of the Presentation, and thus the Feast of the Priesthood served as a preparation for that great act which, in those circumstances, could not fail to be carried out with the greatest possible fervor.

The Saint's Office in honor of the Priesthood of Jesus Christ and of all holy priests and levites is one of great beauty. It is at the same time a magnificent glorification of the heroes of the priesthood whose virtues and success it enthusiastically relates, a striking exposition of the dignity and the duties of a priest, and a fervent Prayer that God should grant that His ministers should participate in the spirit and the virtues of their predecessors. In it the Saint was happy in his choice and arrangement of texts from Scripture and the Fathers; and those parts of the Mass and Office that are entirely his own, such as the hymns and the prose, are remarkable for their vigor and their loftiness of thought. He succeeded in introducing the whole of his beautiful teaching on the relations between the priests and the Blessed Virgin Mary, his personal duties and his mission with regard to the laity. When chanted in a major seminary, it could not fail to make a profound impression on the clerics, and the same may be said of the Office as a whole.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

This Feast of the Priesthood Was also adopted by the Priests of St., Sulpice and by Benedictines of the Blessed Sacrament. At St. Sulpice, it was first fixed for October 30, but later, with the consent of the Ordinary, it was celebrated on July 17, or on another day towards the end of the scholastic year. We cannot say at what precise date the Feast was introduced at St. Sulpice, but apparently it was not established there by Father Olier, but by his disciples some years after his death, which occurred in 1657. According to Father Faillon, the Feast began to be kept there about 1660, and he attributes to Father de Bretonvilliers the compositions of the Office and Mass used in its celebration. We believe, on the contrary, that the Fathers of St. Sulpice, being in touch with St. John Eudes, adopted his Office and Mass, retouching, perhaps, certain parts of it, especially the hymns.

Similarly, the Benedictines of the Blessed Sacrament also adopted the Feast of the Priesthood, which admirably suited their devotion towards the Holy Eucharist. For there is a close connection between the priesthood and the Eucharist, and in some respects the Feast of the Priesthood seemed to be a happy complement of the Feast of the Blessed Sacrament. That is why, when the Benedictines adopted it, they fixed its celebration for the Thursday after the Octave of Corpus Christi. On May 30, 1668, Cardinal de Vendome, the Legate a latere of Pope Clement IX, authorized them to celebrate this Feast, using the Office written by St. John Eudes and accommodated to the Benedictine rite. This Feast did not remain restricted to the three Institutes that we have mentioned; it was adopted in several dioceses, amongst others in that of Rouen, in which it is said to have been kept until the middle of the Nineteenth Century.

The Eudists were very attached to the Feast of the Priesthood, and St. John Eudes' immediate successor, Father Blouet de Camilly, "had it inserted in the letters of institution of several houses of the Congregation;" while the General Assembly of 1742 recommended that it be faithfully celebrated in all houses of the Institute. Nor did it cease to be celebrated till towards the middle of the Nineteenth Century, when its abandonment was doubtless due to the return to the Roman Liturgy. The Priests of St. Sulpice preserved it until the liturgy was reformed by Pope Pius X, when they had to give it up; but neither the Eudists nor the Sulpicians have relinquished hope of reviving some day a Feast that so happily harmonizes with their spirit and their works.

Lesson from the Epistle of St. Paul the Apostle to the Hebrews. Chap 7. Brethren, others were made priests without an oath: but this with an oath, by him that said unto him: The Lord hath sworn and he will not repent: Thou art a priest for ever. By so much is Jesus made a surety of a better testament. And the others indeed were made many priests, because by reason of death they were not suffered to continue: but this, for that he continueth for ever, hath an everlasting priesthood: whereby

V. Inter vestibulum et altare plorabunt Sacerdotes, ministri Domini, et dicent: Parce, Domine, parce populo tuo, et ne des hereditatem tuam in opprobrium, ut dominentur eis nationes. V. Hi sunt boni milites Christi Jesu, qui bonum certamen certaverunt; ideo beatificavit eos in gloria, et dedit illis coronas perpetuas.

Tempore Paschali, loco Gradualis, dicitur:

he is able also to save for ever them that come to God by him; always living to make intercession for us. For it was fitting that we should have such a high priest, holy, innocent, undefiled, separated from sinners, and made higher than the heavens: who needeth not daily (as the other priests) to offer sacrifices, first for his own sins, and then for the people's: for this he did once, in offering himself, Jesus Christ, Our Lord.

Gradual. I will clothe his priests with salvation, and his saints shall rejoice with exceeding great joy. V. These are they that show themselves an example of good works, in humility, in modesty, in charity. Alleluia, alleluia. V. These are good and faithful servants, who have honored their ministry: therefore the Lord made them masters over all his possessions.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

V. Between the porch and the altar, the priests, the Lord's ministers, shall weep and shall say: Spare, O Lord, spare thy people; and give not thy inheritance to reproach, that the heathen should rule over them. V. These are good soldiers of Christ Jesus, who have fought the good fight; and therefore he made them blessed in glory, and gave them everlasting crowns. In Paschaltide, instead of the Gradual, the following is said: Alleluia, alleluia. V. It was fitting that we should have such a high priest, holy, innocent, undefiled, separated from sinners, and made

Baneful habits they expel,
Mastering the flesh as well,
World and devil they exceed.
Sinful lusts they hold in horror,
Foolish vanities in terror,
Stamping out the world's vain dreams.
They laugh at earthly vanity,
They spurn with holy sanity,
Each thing that transitory seems.
Watchmen of the House of God,
Pillars sound, unmoved, unawed,
Joy to those by sorrow swayed,
Graces for the just they win,
Pardon give for guilt of sin,
Comfort unto all dismayed.
Let us then rejoice, protected
By the constant help effected
By such holy guardians strong.
May we generously follow,
Helped by saints, whose way we hal

Capitulum, Heb. 7, 24

Little Chapter, Heb. 7, 24

Christus Jesus, eo quod maneat in aeternum, sempiternum habet Sacerdotium: unde et salvare in perpetuum potest accendentes per semetipsum ad Deum, semper vivens ad interpellandum pro nobis.

Christ Jesus, for that he continueth for ever, hath an everlasting priesthood: whereby he is able also to save for ever them that come to God by him; always living to make intercession for us.

Apostolatus Ordinis
Rex et Pater sanctissime,
Nostris adesto canticis.
Aaron genus clarissimum,

Jesus, our great High Priest we sing.
Herald of Holy Ordination,
Father all-holy, holy king,
Accept our chant of exultation.
We praise the line of Aaron famed,

Divinitati proximum, Melchisedech regalia Vox intonat magnalia. Laudamus orbis Lampades, Duces Dei certaminum,	Nigh unto God, by Godhead named. Our voices sing the holy things Melchisedech in offering brings. We laud these beacons of earth's ball,
Caelestis aulae Praesides, Christi Columnas militum.	God's champions in His cause divine, The provosts of the heavenly hall, The columns of Christ's fighting line.
Vos Agnus agnos convocans, Pugnam lupis denuntiat: Res mira! per vos militaris Agnus lupos exterminat. Ex ore vestro, Numinis Romphaea sacra fulgurat: Quae saevientis daemonis	Ile Lamb assembling you His flock, Forthwith the wolf abandons flight. A Miracle! the wolf to mock God's Lamb doth conquer bestial might! The sacred glaive of spirit fire From out your unctuous lips doth flash
Truces catervas dissipat.	And put to flight the threatening dire ,
Contra cohortes Tartari, Agni sequamur praelia: Ut donet agnos subsequi . Agni decoros gloria.	Of hostile cohorts' baneful clash. Gehenna's hosts their stand oppose, We see the Lamb disperse their ranks, That He would grant us lambs like those As worthy of His praise and thanks.

Every high priest taken from among men, is ordained for men in the things that appertain to God, that he may offer up gifts and sacrifices for sins: who can have compassion on them that are ignorant and that err: because he himself also is compassed with infirmity. And therefore he ought, as for the people, so also for himself, to oil for sins. Neither doth any man take the honour to himself, but he that is called by God, as Aaron was. So Christ also did not glorify himself, that he might be made a high priest: but he that said unto, him: Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee. As he saith also in another place: Thou art a priest for ever, according to the order of Melchisedech. Lectio V

Non desisto, Fratres, laudare et glorificare illius dignitatis profunditatem, quam nobis, nobis inquam, Adae fillis, sancta elargita est Trinitas. Per hanc mandus salvatus est, et creatura illuminata. Per hanc et mortis potentia destructa est, et inferni vires deperditae ipsaque Adae maledictio exterminata est atque soluta, et ccelestis thalamus apertus est et adornatus. Quid dicam? quid eloquar? aut quid laudibus efferam? Excedit quippe intellectum et orationem, omnemque cogitationem, donum altitudinis dignitatis sacerdotalis. Et, sicut arbitror, hoc est quod Paulus, quasi in stuporem. mentis actus, innuit exclamans: O altitudo divitiarum sa-of Priesthood; a treasure, I say, to those who guard it with fitting holiness. For it is indeed a matchless bright shield, a strong tower, a wall unbreakable, a firm and stable foundation, reaching from earth to highest heaven. What am I saying, brethren?

ren? It even attaineth those supernal regions, ascending without let or labor from the depths to the very heavens, and there with incorporeal spirits, surrounded by angels, holdeth free and familiar intercourse. But why do I say surrounded by the Heavenly Powers except it be that it treateth-familiarly with the very Lord and Creator of angels Himself, the Giver of Light, asking forthwith whatsoever it will, making petition as it were with certain seemly ease and right?

R. These are Princes of Priests, who living in the flesh have planted the Church with their blood: they have drunk the chalice of the Lord, and were made the friends of God.

V. Their sound hath gone forth into all the earth: and their words unto the ends of the world. The chalice . . .

Lesson V

Nor do I desist, brethren, from giving praise and glory to that profundity of dignity which the Holy Trinity hath liberally bestowed upon us, the sons of Adam. Thereby the world hath been saved and the creature enlightened. Thereby both the power of death hath been destroyed and the forces of hell spoiled; both the curse of Adam destroyed and broken, and the heavenly bridal chamber adorned and thrown open. What shall I say and declare? what in the way of praise? Forsooth, this gift of the lofty dignity of the Priesthood hath outrun mind and speech and all thought. And this I think is what St. Paul indicates when, pientiae et scientiae Dei, quarn incomprehensibilia sunt iudicia ejus, et investigabiles divinae viae ejus! Altivolans e terra in ccelum, nostra postulata Deo celerrime defert, et Dominum pro servis suis deprecatur.

R. Hi sunt vere Sacerdotes et Martyres, qui pro Christi nomine sanguinem suum fuderunt: * Et traderunt corpora sua ad supplicia, hostiam viventem, sanctam, Deo placentem. V. Isti sunt qui venerunt ex magna tribulatione, et laverunt stolas suas in sanguine Agni. Et tradiderunt.

O potestas ineffabilis, quae in nobis dignata est habitare, per impositionem manuum sacrorum Sacerdotum! O quam magnam in se continet profunditatem formidabile et admirabile Sacerdotium! Felix ille, qui in hac ipsa dignitate administrat pure et irreprehensibiliter! Discamus igitur, Fratres, quoniam magna est et multa, immensa ac infinita ipsius Sacerdotii dignitas. Gloria Unigenito, gloria et soli bono, illud suis praebenti discipulis per sanctum novum Testamentum: ut et ipsi nobis, per impositionem manuum suarum super dignos, exemplum demonstrent. R. These are truly priests * and martyrs, who shed their blood for the name of Christ: and they delivered up their bodies to torments, a living victim, holy, pleasing to God. V. These are they who are come out of great tribulation and have washed their robes in the blood of the Lamb. And they have delivered up

Lesson V1

O power unutterable, which hath deigned to dwell in us through the laying on of hands of holy priests!

What great depths lie within this awful and wonderful Priesthood! Happy the man who purely and blamelessly ministers in this dignity! So let us know, brethren, that great and manifold, vast and boundless is the dignity of the Priestly Office it self. Glory be to the Sole-Begotten, glory also to the Only Good, who offers this through the new and holy covenant to His disciples, that these in turn, by the laying of their hands upon worthy men, may furnish an example unto us. Therefore, let us all give honor to Priests and all pronounce those to be happy who have been adorned by this sublime and admirable office of Priesthood, knowing for sure that he will be loved much more by the King, who is a lover of the King's friend. Wherefore, let us love the Priests of God, seeing that they His friends are good and intercede for us and the world.

R. Vidi in circuitu sedis Seniores, sedentes super thronos, amictos stolis albis, et in capite eorum coronae aureae. Et audiui vocem de throno dicentem: * Isti ambulabunt mecum in albis, quia digni sunt, et florebunt sicut lilium in aeternum. V. Hi sunt Sacerdotes sancti, qui Virgines permanserunt, et sequuntur Agnum quocumque ierit. Isti. Gloria Patri. Isti.

R. I saw round about the throne the ancients, sitting on thrones, clothed in white garments, and on their heads were crowns of gold. And I heard a voice from the throne, saying: These will walk with me in white garments, because they are worthy and have flowered like lilies forever. V. These are holy priests, who have remained Virgins, and follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth.

Sed qui mundo corde est atque pacificus, et persecutionem pro veritate patitur, nihilominus in commune commodum vitam instituit. Ne igitur putetis, inquit, ad levias vos ducendos esse certamina, neque exiguarum rerum vobis ineundam esse rationem. Vos estis sal terrae. Quid igitur? Ipsae putrefactae medicatae sunt? Nequaquam. Neque enim fieri potest ut ea quae jam corrupta sunt, salis perfricatione reparentur. Non enim hoc fecerunt, sed ante renovata, sibi tradita, atque ab illa jam putredine liberata aspergebant sale, et in ea novitate conservabant quam a Domino susceperant. Liberare quippe a putredine peccatorum, Christi virtutis est. Ut autem ad illa iterum non revertantur, Apostolorum curae est ac laboris.

earth, He shows that the nature of all mankind hath been subjected to foolishness and corrupted by the power of sin: and hence He requires of them those virtues in especial which will be necessary and profitable to all. For he who is gentle and modest, merciful and just, rightly concludes that these were wrought not within himself only, but he will proceed to put forth these fair fountains for the good of others as well.

R. These are the Saints who make the sheep of the Lord fear by word and example, because they love him with their whole heart. * May they intercede for us before the Lord, that

Lesson VIII

But he who is clean of heart and a peace-maker and suffers persecution for truth's sake, sets forth a life for the common benefit as well. Think not, therefore, he saith, that you shall be led forth to trivial contests or that you will be esteemed for mediocre deeds. Ye are the salt of the earth. What then? Hath that which was putrefied been healed? By no means! Nor is it possible that things already corrupt should be made whole by the application of salt. This they did not accomplish, but things previously renewed and committed to them and already divested of their rottenness these they purified by salt and preserved in that estate which they had received from the Lord. For it belongs to Christ's power to deliver from the rottenness of sin, but it is the concern and task of the Apostles that these should not again revert to that state.

Lesson IX

Vides quemadmodum paulatim Prophetis hos meliores esse patefecerit. Non enim illos filios veteris Testamenti, neque mediocres ponit magistros, sed severos quosdam atque terribiles. Hoc est enim omnino mirabile, quia non adulantes, neque palpantes, sed e diverso salis instar urentes, fere omnibus se tam desiderabiles reddiderunt. Nolite ergo, inquit, mirari si, alios omittens, vos potissimum doceo, atque ad pericula tanta succingo. Considerate quippe quantis urbibus, quantisque populis vos sim missurus magistros. Propterea, non vos tantummodo volo esse sapientes, sed ut tales faciatis et ceteros. Hujusmodi autem Magistros, in quibus certe tantorum periclitatur salus, maxima debet polleere prudentia, tantasque illis virtutum adesse divitias, ut aliis quoque utilitatem aedificationis impertiant.

THE PRIEST, HIS DIGNITY AND OBLIGATIONS

Now thou seest how He hath revealed these to be better, in a Measure, than even the Prophets. For He regards those sons of the Old Covenant not as mild teachers but rather as stern and terrible. For this is altogether wonderful that not as flattering or coaxing, but rather as burning like salt they ingratiated themselves to such an extent with all men. Be not amazed therefore, He says, if passing over others I teach you in particular and gird you up for such dangers. Indeed, consider to what cities and peoples I am about to send you as teachers. Wherefore, I wish you to be not only wise, but to act even as they and others. But teachers such as these in whom the salvation of so many is certainly involved in peril, must shine with the greatest prudence, and they must possess such a wealth of virtues that they may impart also to others a useful edification.
